Hofmann (Josef), Piano Playing, 2/ net. A little book of simple suggestions, illustrated.
Puget (Paul), Ulysses and the Sirens, 2/6 net. Dramatic cantata for soli, chorus, and orchestra. Words by F. E. Weatherly, translated from the French of Paul Collin. Also in Chappell's Choral Library.

Bibliography.

Jaggard (W.), Index to 'Book-Prices Current' for the Second Decade, 1897-1906, 42/ net. A key to the ten volumes, and incidentally to anonymous, pseudonymous, and suppressed literature, with a supplement of bibliophiles and bibliopoles.
Margoliouth (Rev. G.), Catalogue of the Hebrew and Samaritan Manuscripts in the British Museum: Part III. Section I. Kabbalah, 24/

Philosophy.

Urban (W. M.), Valuation: its Nature and Laws, 10/6 net. An introduction to the general theory of value.

Political Economy.

Beanland (W.), The Case against Socialism, 1/. A plain statement for the man in the street.
Price (L. L.), Money and its Relations to Prices, 2/6. In the Social Science Series.
Steele (F. E.), Present-Day Banking: its Methods, Tendencies, and Characteristics, 5/ net.

History and Biography.

Avery (Elroy M.), A History of the United States and its People, from their Earliest Records to the Present Time, Vol. V., 28/ net.
Calendar of Inquisitions Post Mortem and other Analogous Documents preserved in the Public Record Office: Vol. VII. Edward III., 15/
Colonial Office List, 1909, 12/6
Denison (Col. G. T.), The Struggle for Imperial Unity: Recollections and Experiences, 8/6 net. A political volume ranking with the author's military recollections, 'Soldiering in Canada.'
Flete (J.), The History of Westminster Abbey, 5/ net. Edited by Dean Armitage Robinson.
Grant (Mrs. C.), Brittany to Whitehall, 12/6 net. Life of Louise Renée de Kéroualle, Duchess of Portsmouth, with photographic portrait and other illustrations.
Irshād al-Arīb Ilā Ma'rifat al-Adīb, or Dictionary of Learned Men of Yāqūt, Vol. II. Edited by D. S. Margoliouth. Part of the E. J. W. Gibb Memorial.
Lucy (H. W.), Sixty Years in the Wilderness, 10/6 net. Reminiscences, with a portrait of J. S. Sargent.
Maxwell (Sir Herbert), The Story of the Tweed, 6/ net. Illustrated.
Parkin (G. R.), Sir J. A. Macdonald, 12/6 net. Makers of Canada.
Robertson (J. G.), Milton's Fame on the Continent, 1/ net. From the Proceedings of the British Academy, Vol. III.
Robinson (J. A.) and James (M. R.), The Manuscripts of Westminster Abbey, 5/ net. First of a series on Westminster Abbey.
Tajārīb al-Umam, or History of Ibn Miskawayh (Abu 'Ali Ahmad B. Muhammad), Vol. I. To A.H. 37 (Tabari I. 3300). Reproduced in facsimile from the manuscript at Constantinople, with a preface and summary by Leone Caetani, Principe di Teano. Another Part of the E. J. W. Gibb Memorial.
Ten Years After: a Sequel to the Autobiography of George Müller, 3/6 net. An account of the work at the Ashley Down Orphanage, Bristol, for the ten years following the death of Müller.
Wagner: Richard to Minna Wagner, 2 vols., 24/ net. Letters to his first wife, translated by W. A. Ellis.
Williams (Bransby), An Actor's Story, 6/. The author's reminiscences, with numerous portraits and other illustrations.

Geography and Travel.

Goodliffe (W.), Littlehampton, Arundel, and Amberley, with their Surroundings, 1/. One of the Homeland Handbooks.
Gwynn (S.), A Holiday in Connemara, 10/6 net. With 16 illustrations.
Harper (C. G.), The Somerset Coast, 15/ net. Illustrated.
Imperial Gazetteer of India: Vol. XXV., Index; Vol. XXVI., Atlas, 26 vols., 100/ net. New Edition.
Natal Directory, 1909, 10/6 net.
'Queen' Newspaper Book of Travel, compiled by the Travel Editor, 2/6 net.
Voyages of Drake and Gilbert, 2/6. Select narratives from the 'Principal Navigations' of Hakluyt. Edited by Edward John Payne, with additional notes, maps, &c., by C. Raymond Beazley.

Sports and Pastimes.

Dudley (G.) and Kellor (F. A.), Athletic Games in the Education of Women, 5/ net.
Gould (Nat), The Magic of Sport, 12/6 net. Mainly autobiographical, with photographic portrait and 50 illustrations.
White (Eustace E.), The Complete Hockey Player, 5/ net.

Education.

Gould (F. J.), Stories for Moral Instruction, 2/. Supplementary volume containing stories illustrative of the topics treated in the four volumes of 'The Children's Book of Moral Lessons.'

Philology.

Classical Association Proceedings, 1908, Vol. VI., 2/6 net. With rules and list of members.
Evenkel (A.), A New Dictionary of the English and Italian Languages, 6/. Revised by J. McLaughlin.
Fursdon (F. R. M.), French and English Parallels, 3/6 net. Treats of idioms, metaphors, and maxims and proverbs.
New English Dictionary: Ribaldric—Romanite, 5/. Edited by Dr. W. A. Craigie.
Redhouse (J. W.), The Turkish Vade-Mecum of Ottoman Colloquial Language, 6/

School-Books.

Balzac (H. de), César Birotteau, 2/6. Edited by W. E. Delp. One of the Oxford Modern French Series.
Hugo (Victor), Préface du 'Cromwell', 2/6 net. Edited by Edmond Wahl. One of the Oxford Higher French Series.
Sismondi (J. C. I. Simonde de), Pavie et le Sac de Rome, 2/. Edited by A. Wilson-Green. One of the Oxford Modern French Series.
Somerville (A. A.), Grammaire française élémentaire, 1/6. One of the Modern French Series.
Stories from Keating's History of Ireland, 2/6 net. Edited with notes and glossary by Osborn Bergin.
Webster (A. W.), Simple Eye Teaching for Class and Platform, 1/6 net. With diagrams and illustrations.

Science.

Barton (Frank Townend), The Stock-Owner's Manual, 10/6 net. Illustrated.
Berkeley (Comyns), A Handbook for Midwives and Maternity Nurses, 5/. Illustrated.
Bölsche (Prof. Wilhelm), Haeckel: his Life and Work, 6d. With introduction and supplementary chapter by the translator, Joseph McCabe, and has 4 illustrations. New Edition.
Book of Nature Study, Vol. III. Edited by J. Bretland Farmer, assisted by a staff of specialists. Fully illustrated. For notice of Vol. I. see Athen., Dec. 12, 1908, p. 765.
Buckland (F.), Notes and Jottings from Animal Life, 3/6. New Edition, with illustrations. In the Waterloo Library.
Groom (P.), Trees and their Life Histories, Part I., 1/ net. Illustrated from photographs by Henry Irving.
Hedge I Know, 8d. Edited by W. P. Westell and H. E. Turner, with 13 coloured and many black-and-white illustrations. One of Dent's Open-Air Nature Books.
Hulme (F. E.), Familiar Wild Flowers, Part I., 6d. net. New Edition, with coloured illustrations.
Keane (C. A.), Modern Organic Chemistry, 6/. With 29 figures in the text.
Manual of Electrical Undertakings and Directory of Officials, 1909, compiled under the direction of Emile Garcke, 21/ net.
Muir (R.) and others, Studies on Immunity, 7/6 net. In the Oxford Medical Publications.
Munby (A. E.), Introduction to the Chemistry and Physics of Building Materials, 6/ net. The author's aim is to enable any one with no knowledge of natural science to appreciate something of the chemical and physical principles which underlie the use of building materials.
Owen (J. A.) and Boulger (G. S.), The Country Month by Month, 6/ net. Illustrated.
Railway Year-Book, 1909, 2/6 net.
Reinheimer (Hermann), Nutrition and Evolution, 6/ net.
Renwick (W. G.), Marble and Marble Working, 15/. Illustrated.
Salter (M.), The Physical History of the Universe: Christ in Chaos, Part I.
Seaton (A. E.), The Screw Propeller, and other Competing Instruments for Marine Propulsion, 12/6 net.
Self-Instruction for Students in Gas-Supply: Advanced, by "Mentor," 3/6 net.
Somerscales (A. N.), Mechanical and Marine Engineering Science: Essays, Problems, and Demonstrations, 12/6 net.
Stitt (E. R.), Practical Bacteriology, Blood Work, and Animal Parasitology, 6/6 net.

Juvenile Books.

Rowell (M. C.), France, 1/6 net. Part of the Children's Study.

Fiction.

Brémont (Anna, Comtesse de), Mrs. Evelyn's Husbands, 6d. A problem in marriage. Cheap Edition.
Brooke (Emma), The Story of Hawksgarth Farm, 6/. A story of Cambrian fell-folk, and life and character on a moorland farm.
Clouston (J. Storer), The Lunatic at Large, 1/ net. Cheap Edition.
Danby (F.), An Incomplete Etonian, 6/. A story of incident and characterization.
Everett-Green (E.), The Cossart Cousins. A story for girls.
Garvie (C.), Queen Kate, 6/. A present-day romance.
Graham (W.), Mayfair, 1/ net.
Gould (Nat), The Chance of a Lifetime, 6d. New Edition.
Hamilton (Cosmo), Keepers of the House, 1/ net. Cheap Edition.
Inchbold (A. C.), The Road of No Return, 6/. The story opens with some dramatic incidents of the Russian Revolution woven round a young couple who are united in a "Nihilistic marriage."
Isham (F. S.), The Lady of the Mennt, 6/. A tale of Northern France at the beginning of the Revolution, with illustrations by Lester Ralph.
Layard (G. S.), Wax, 6/. A novel in which the heroine is left alone at Madame Tussaud's, cut off from the rest of the world by a London fog.
Le Feuvre (Amy), The Making of a Woman, 3/6
MacGrath (H.), The Lure of the Mask, 6/. Tells of the pursuit of a disguised singer, with illustrations by Harrison Fisher and Karl Anderson.
Methley (A. A.), The Key of Life, 6/. A lover given up as dead returns ten years later, blind after imprisonment in an Arab village.
Miller (Elizabeth), Saul of Tarsus, 6/. A tale of the early Christians, with illustrations by André Castaigne.
Munro (Neil), The Daft Days, 1/ net. Cheap Edition.

Orczy (Baroness), The Old Man in the Corner, 6/. Tales of crime and criminals told in an A.B.C. shop, illustrated by H. M. Brock.

Sims (G. E.), The Social Kaleidoscope, 6d. Cheap reissue.

General Literature.

De Quincey's Literary Criticism, 2/6 net. Edited with an introduction by H. Darbishire.
Dudley Book of Cookery and Household Recipes, collected and arranged by Georgina, Countess of Dudley, 7/6 net.
Haldane (R. B.), Army Reform, and other Addresses, 2/6 net.
Kutze (E.), The Humours of a Bohemian Sketching Club. Recollections of a club "born and reared at Athenaeon-Forth."
O'Donnell (C. J.), The Failure of Lord Curzon, 1/ net. A study in "Imperialism," and an open letter to the Earl of Rosebery. New Edition.
Schreiner (Olive), Closer Union, 1/ net. A letter on the South African Union and the principles of government.
Statistics of the Dominion of New Zealand for the Year 1907, Vol. I.
Wilkinson (W. C.), Some New Literary Valuations, 1 dol. 50 net. Deals with Matthew Arnold, Tennyson, and others.

Pamphlets.

Alexander (J.), Ecclesiastical Finance Reform and City Churches, 2d. Second Edition. Illustrated.
Neligan (Right Rev. M. R.), Bible Teaching Church Teaching, 1d. One of the Churchman's Penny Library.
Rogers (Rev. E.), The Puzzle of Prayer, 1d. A talk to boys. One of the Churchman's Penny Library.

FOREIGN.Fine Art and Archaeology.

Aubert (M.), La Cathédrale Notre-Dame de Paris, 2fr. 50.

History and Biography.

Dahlgren (E. W.), Les Relations commerciales et maritimes entre la France et les Côtes de l'Océan Pacifique: Vol. I. Le Commerce de la Mer du sud jusqu'à la Paix d'Utrecht.
Gailly (E. G.), Bussy-Rabutin: sa Vie, ses Œuvres, et ses Amies, 6fr.

Geography and Travel.

Sautter (E.), Ziggags asiatiques: cinq Mois en Extrême-Orient, 3fr. 50.

Education.

Witt-Guizot (F. de), Les Réflexions de Monsieur Houlette: Notes sur l'Education, 3fr. 50.

Philology.

Cauer (P.), Grundfragen der Homerkritik, Second Edition, 12m.

Gonser (P.), Das angelsächsische Prosa-Leben des hl. Guthlac, 6m. With 9 full-page illustrations, Part of the Anglistische Forschungen.

Fiction.

Margueritte (V.), Le Talion, 3fr. 50.

* * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

MESSRS. DENT & Co. are publishing in about a fortnight an edition of Marlowe's 'Hero and Leander,' which is to be printed in a new fount of type, and form the first volume of their "Renaissance Library." The design of the publishers is to print in a worthy style the rarer pieces of verse and prose, which lovers of the by-ways of literature alone know and care for. The Jenson type has been taken as the basis for the new "Library."

AMONG the April books published by Mr. Murray will be 'Six Oxford Thinkers,' by Mr. Algernon Cecil. It is an attempt to trace, somewhat in the manner recommended by Acton, the origin and development of certain ideas of history bearing upon the Christian religion by means of studies of representative men. The six are Gibbon, Newman, Church, Froude, Pater, and Lord Morley.

A VOLUME of poems by the late J. M. Synge will shortly be published by the Dun Emer Press. Many of these poems are written in a spirit of tragic irony, and are in the nature of a farewell to the world. The late author's 'Deirdre,' a prose play in three acts, which was almost completed at his death, will probably before long be produced by the Abbey Theatre Company.

MR. EVELEIGH NASH will publish in September a book on Jane Austen by Mr. W. H. Helm, the author of 'Aspects of Balzac.'

'GERMAN LYRISTS OF TO-DAY,' a selection of lyrics from contemporary German poetry done into English verse by Daisy Broicher, is a forthcoming addition to the "Vigo Cabinet" Series. The poets represented are Stefan George, Hugo von Hofmannsthal, Karl Gustav Vollmoeller, Karl Wolfskehl, Ernst Hardt, Leopold zu Andrian-Werburg, Friedrich Gundolf, Richard Perls, and Georg Edward. Mr. Elkin Mathews will be the publisher.

THE same publisher will issue shortly Mr. Maurice Hewlett's forthcoming volume 'Artemision: Idylls and Songs,' and Miss Laurence Alma Tadema's 'The Meaning of Happiness: a Discourse,' and 'A Few Lyrics' by the same writer.

FROM Notes and Queries, which will reach its sixtieth birthday in November next, a volume of gleanings by its veteran publisher, Mr. John C. Francis, is to appear shortly. The title will be 'Notes by the Way,' and it will be issued jointly from the Notes and Queries office and that of Mr. Fisher Unwin. The book, which will have several illustrations, opens with a sketch of Joseph Knight, for many years editor of Notes and Queries, and closes with a memoir of the Rev. Joseph Woodfall Ebsworth, well known for his untiring labours on the ballad history of Great Britain. In addition, a variety of information will be given on the history of English publishing and journalism, centenaries of famous authors, literary recipients of Civil List pensions, &c.

AMONG the spring list of books to be issued by the Walter Scott Publishing Company are 'The Life and Works of Ruskin,' in the "Great Writers" Series, by Mr. Ashmore Wingate, and a new and illustrated pocket edition of Wilson's 'Tales of the Borders.'

MR. JOHN LONG's spring announcements include 'The Real Francis Joseph: the Private Life of the Austrian Emperor,' by Henri de Weindel, translated by Mr. Philip W. Sergeant; and 'The Secret History of the Court of Spain, 1802-1906,' by Miss Rachel Challice, with numerous portraits by Juan Comba.

THE Index to the second ten volumes of 'Book-Prices Current,' forming a key to the contents of the volumes for 1897-1906, by Mr. W. Jaggard, is announced by Mr. Elliot Stock for immediate publication. The volume contains over 1,000 pages, embodying 100,000 distinct entries. An exceptionally long sub-alphabet of books on Americana is included.

THE 'Historical Catalogue of Printed Editions of Holy Scripture,' which Messrs. T. H. Darlow and H. F. Moule have been engaged for nearly ten years in compiling for the Bible Society, is now approaching completion. Vol. I., containing the English section, was published at the close of 1903. Vol. II. will embrace (a) polyglots, and (b) editions in all languages other than English, arranged in alphabetical order. The languages and dialects included in this second volume exceed 500. It will contain over 1,400 pages, and may be expected at the beginning of next year. Only 450 sets of the Catalogue are printed for sale in England and America. 250 have already been subscribed for, and the price of the remainder has been raised.

IN The Scottish Historical Review for April Mr. W. B. Laikie edits a series of letters from Macclesfield during the Jacobite army's advance and retreat through the town in December, 1745, and Prof. Firth an anti-Covenanter ballad of 1684. Other papers are a baronial sketch of the Hays of Delgaty by Mr. J. Ferguson; a life of Maolrubha by the Rev. A. B. Scott; and a portion of the 'Lanercost Chronicle,' englished by Sir H. Maxwell. There is also a skirmish of correspondence about the contribution of the Highlands to the victories of Bruce.

THE April number of The Journal of the African Society will contain, among others, the following articles: 'The Oil Palm and its Uses,' by Mr. J. M. Sarbah of Cape Coast Castle (author of 'Fanti Constitutional Law'); 'Some Notes on the Baoulé Tribe,' by Mr. T. H. G. Brisley of Grand Lahou (Ivory Coast); 'The Konnoh People,' by Major Willans (Sierra Leone Protectorate); 'The Prevention of Malaria,' by Prof. Minchin; and a paper based on General Gallieni's 'Neuf Ans à Madagascar,' by the Rev. J. Sibree, author of 'The Great African Island.'

AT a sale of autograph letters and books which took place on Wednesday of this week at Messrs. Christie's there was an interesting crumb for Shelley students—a tattered letter, or portion of a letter, from Shelley to his friend Graham, embodying a fresh and fuller text of the fourth poem in 'St. Irvyne, or the Rosicrucian' (Eloise's Song, "How swiftly through heaven's wide expanse," &c.). This is the piece to which Mr. Rossetti gave the name of 'St. Irvyne's Tower.' The autograph does not yield either a complete letter or a complete poem; but there are some new readings—for what readings are worth in so boyish a composition—and also some poor stanzas not apparently known to Shelley's editors.

THE LONDON LIBRARY has had the good fortune to receive a presentation copy of the fine English edition of 'The Wartburg,' recently issued by the Historischer Verlag Baumgärtel of Berlin. It is probably the most sumptuous book ever issued, in English, on the Continent, and contains 54 special plates, some of which are in colour, and 706 original illustrations in the text. The English translation is by Dr. G. A. Greene, through whose influence and that of Herr Max Baumgärtel, one of the few copies in this country has been given to the London Library.

THE death of Mrs. R. A. M. Stevenson on Thursday week last, after long and painful illness, will be deeply regretted by many friends. Her fortitude and the brightness which endeared her to all who knew her never left her. Mr. D. S.

MacColl in the address he delivered at her funeral did not overrate her powers when he said:—

"We are all going over separate memories of her, of meetings cheered, interests made more vivid, of burdens lightened by her wonderful spirit. Like her husband, she seemed to hold a clue to life, to have a genius for its enjoyment; she was able to help blunders and the depressed. Like him, she despised a great deal that most people prize, such as money and social rank, and with these the formal habits, the mean ambitions, that paralyze and waste. She shared his passion for the arts, but also his chief delight in free and ardent speculation, in the stream of talk with congenial and intimate companions." Such rare and admirably diffusive spirits do more than many makers of books, though the "world's coarse thumb" smears them with no recognition of their work.

IT was announced at the end of last week that Mr. James Fitzmaurice-Kelly had been appointed to the Gilmour Chair of Spanish at Liverpool. The choice will cause general satisfaction, for the new Professor combines extensive learning with the power of literary expression.

A NEW firm of publishers, Messrs. E. Woodhouse & Co., are starting their career at 133, Salisbury Square, Fleet Street, with 'Inez, the King's Page,' a novel by Mr. Arthur Maltby. It deals, like his 'Queen, but no Queen,' with the time of Philip and Mary.

DR. RALPH LEFTWICH writes regarding a Shakespeare Memorial in Southwark Cathedral:—

"A recumbent figure of the poet in alabaster, with Tudor Gothic canopy and screen, is to be erected in a recess in the south aisle, where it will form a pendant to the beautiful tomb of Gower opposite. Shakespeare was a parishioner of St. Saviour's for several years at a time when regular attendance at church was absolutely compulsory, and Southwark Cathedral, as St. Saviour's is now called, is the one building remaining in London with which he was intimately connected. The total cost will be about 650*l.*, and the Chapter appeal for this comparatively small sum before the commemoration service is held on April 23rd. Cheques should be made payable to the Shakespeare (Southwark) Memorial, crossed London and Westminster Bank, addressed to Canon Thompson or to me, and sent to the Cathedral, London Bridge, S.E."

WE are sorry to notice the death of Mr. Charles John Whittingham, second son of the late Charles Whittingham of the Chiswick Press. He died at Tunbridge Wells on March 19th, aged sixty-eight.

RECENT Government Publications of interest are: Charity Commissioners for England and Wales, Report, (3*d.*); Friendly Societies, Reports by Chief Registrar, Part C. Trade Unions (4½*d.*); Calendar of Inquisitions, Vol. VII. Edward III. (15*s.*); Durham University, Draft Proposed Statutes (1*s.*); and Aberdeen University, Statistical Report (1½*d.*).

NEXT week The Athenæum will be published on Wednesday.

SCIENCE

Life of Admiral Sir Leopold McClintock, K.C.B. By Sir Clements Markham. With an Introductory Note by the Archbishop of Armagh. (John Murray.)

SIR CLEMENTS MARKHAM, whose services to Polar exploration have been great, is an ideal biographer of the discoverer of the fate of Franklin and the creator of Arctic sledge-travelling. That he should regard the writing of his friend's life as a "grateful task" is natural; and his modest description of himself in the Preface as "a midshipman who served under Sir Leopold McClintock" foreshadows the many touches of dry humour which abound throughout the volume.

McClintock entered the Navy at twelve years old, in the first year of William IV., when steam-power was in its infancy; and he had completed his training before the screw-propeller was introduced. The account of those early days is short, but most interesting, and could scarcely have been written by a sailor of this generation. It is as the foremost of the Paladins in the romantic search for Franklin that Sir Leopold will be remembered; and here his biographer is on still more familiar ground, for he was himself a member of the second Government expedition (from the Greenland side) in 1850-51. He is one of only six surviving officers of the principal search-parties, and treats the whole subject with a wealth of knowledge and an enthusiasm that fire the reader to-day as the memorable quest fired the hearts of Englishmen half a century ago. To Sir Clements the crews of the relief ships—the humblest seamen as well as the officers—are not mere names, but distinct characters, who are vividly described, and whose exploits are remembered and cherished. Of all the Government expeditions, he considers that Capt. Austin's, with which he served, was "the happiest, the healthiest, the best administered, and the most successful." McClintock was first lieutenant of the Assistance under that commander, and in the spring of 1851 he made his great sledge-journey to Melville Island, on which he was absent 80 days. His next journey, from Capt. Kellett's ship Resolute in 1853, was even longer, for he was out 105 days, travelled 1,408 statute miles, and discovered 768 miles of new country. In these famous journeys, of which the second stood unrivalled till Lieut. Shackleton's recent exploit, his sledges were drawn by sailors, and not by dogs; and the skill and care needed to provide for everything and avoid a break-down amounted to genius. Sir Clements tells us how much the Nares Expedition of 1875-6 was indebted to McClintock's preparation of the sledging outfit; but he does not relate how other explorers received help from the same generous source—how Payer attributed his success in Franz Josef Land to following the Admiral's advice, and how Mr. Jackson constructed sledges from a model supplied by him. In his 'Farthest North' Dr. Nansen says:

"Reading the various English stories of the search for Franklin, I am filled with admiration for these men and the amount of labour they expended....Most of what I prided myself upon and what I thought to be new I find they had anticipated; McClintock used the same thing forty years ago....No one has surpassed, and scarcely any one approached them."

With the help of McClintock's journal and notebooks, which have never been published, Sir Clements is able to give a far more complete account of these journeys than has yet appeared, at least in any popular work. The delightful volume in which the Admiral relates the voyage of the Fox (1857-9), when the Franklin record was discovered, is well known, having run through seven editions. Yet even here Sir Clements is able to relate two noteworthy facts which McClintock's remarkable modesty impelled him to suppress. He jumped overboard to rescue a sailor who had fallen into the icy "sludge" of Lancaster Sound; and when he had lost by death the only two men who understood the engines, he took off his coat and added the duties of engineer to his responsibilities as commander. In all the chief expeditions from the east between 1848 and 1859 he took a leading part, and he spent six winters within the Arctic Circle. Sir Clements explains, as few other men could, the enormous addition to geographical knowledge which was the result of the search; and his map of the coast-lines known before Franklin sailed illustrates admirably the large area covered by the relief ships, and the consequent difficulty of their task. In his 'Voyage of the Fox' Sir Leopold prophesied that if the North-West Passage were ever accomplished by a ship, it would be through the narrow channels to the east and south of King William Land; and he lived long enough to know that the Norwegian Amundsen, by following this hint, fulfilled his forecast to the letter.

The highest aim of a biography is not merely to relate the famous deeds of its subject, but to give a clear and convincing presentation of his character. In this Sir Clements, by his personal intimacy and the help of others who knew McClintock well, has succeeded to admiration. The Irish Primate, who is a kinsman, has contributed a foreword, in which he finely says of him:—

"The approach of an emergency, possibly not without indications of danger, seemed to inspire him with the lofty touch of exhilaration which is the peculiar gift of the bravest alone."

Another witness, who worked with him in a specially arduous, but later service, writes:—

"I could not have conceived so much calmness to have been the property of any one man....No one could have passed the same time with him [as myself], on similar occasions, without gaining confidence in him week by week, until the pinnacle of confidence that man can place in man was reached."

The source of this moral strength is indicated in some closing words of his biographer's testimony:—

"Every act of his life was governed and inspired by an abiding sense of the presence and providence of God, and his work was always done as for God, and not for man."

In claiming for the Admiral that the length both of his general and active service was unique, Sir Clements has forgotten the late Sir Provo Wallis, who exceeded him in both respects. He has also committed a slight error in attributing to him the discovery of "the strait between Boothia and King William Island," which was really made by Dr. Rae in 1854. This channel has always been called "Rae Strait," and it so appears in McClintock's own map. Sir Clements makes just complaint of the many errors committed during the relief expeditions; but on one point his strictures are unjust, and may cause pain (which we are sure he would regret) to the widow of one of the leaders. He says that Mr. Kennedy of the Prince Albert, by turning north instead of south, disobeyed his orders, and so missed the chance of discovering Franklin's fate. But Lady Franklin directed him expressly to be guided by circumstances when he reached the sea west of Boothia, and the circumstances were adverse. The weather was so misty as to deceive him into thinking that there was no passage southwards from Cape Walker. Besides this, his compass, being close to the Magnetic Pole, would not act; and an instrument for ascertaining the longitude had been accidentally broken. It is evident from Bellot's charming journal that at this juncture the party did not know where they were, or even sometimes whether they were on sea or land.

With this reservation, we think this book by far the best ever written on the Franklin Search. The story groups itself naturally round the discoverer of the record; the style is lucid and vigorous; and the illustrations and maps are well chosen.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

The Fijians. By Basil Thomson. (Heinemann.)—Nobody could be better qualified than Mr. Thomson for the writing of such a study of the Fijians. His book must long remain an indispensable storehouse of materials for students of the subject. His position as magistrate and administrator has given him unusual opportunities, and forced him to master an intricate system of law and custom which hardly any one else would have had the patience to investigate in detail. His book is very readable moreover, and abounds in common sense; and with discreet candour he imparts the more intimate minutiae, but veils them in Latin. He need not have taken Fornander quite so seriously with his "Cushites," his Ark-myth, and all the rest of the old-fashioned paraphernalia. There is an error of editing in the repetition of medical details on p. 26 and in chap. xvi.

He underlines the important truth that the decay of native races in presence of the whites is only temporary. We have reached and passed the turning-point. The blacks and the browns have recovered from the destruction of their customs, adapted themselves to new conditions, and established durable systems of life, half-European, half-native.

The anthropological cream of the book is the chapter on cousin-marriage, in which Mr. Thomson publishes statistics of great value. The children of two brothers and of two sisters are forbidden to marry in Fiji; but the children of a brother and a sister are not only not forbidden to marry, but are actually compelled to do so. They are "born married," as Mr. Thomson says. And the statistics which he gives at pp. 196-7 show not only that this apparent inbreeding has no bad results, but also that these cousin-marriages have a higher birthrate and a lower infant mortality than any other marriages. The whole chapter acquires an overwhelming interest when we compare it with Mr. Rivers's chapter on the same institution among a very different people, namely, the Todas of Southern India (W. H. R. Rivers, 'The Todas,' 1906) with which Mr. Thomson is apparently unacquainted. Not only does the same custom of cousin-marriage exist among the Todas, but the spontaneous reasoning of two primitive peoples has arrived at the same details with extraordinary unanimity, because both are founded on the same biological theories. In both nations the cousins are regarded as bride and bridegroom from their birth; a maternal uncle is always called "father-in-law," a paternal aunt "mother-in-law," and the ceremony of marriage is commonly performed in infancy; while in both nations the children of two brothers or of two sisters use the words "brother" and "sister" to designate each other.

Waterloo Museum, Liverpool: History of the Echalaz Collection. By Lieut.-Col. Echalaz. (Croydon, Roffey & Clark.)—When the late Mr. E. T. Booth compiled the descriptive catalogue for his famous collection of birds at Brighton, he remarked in the brief Introduction:—

"The few notes and facts I have recorded are solely the result of personal observation, and with two or three exceptions (all noted) not a book of reference has been opened."

Almost the exact converse of this is presented by Col. Echalaz in the methods he has adopted. He has the merit, at any rate, of not pretending to knowledge which he lacks, and is probably well advised in the circumstances in relying implicitly on Howard Saunders or some other trustworthy cicerone on almost every occasion. The assistance, too, of Mr. Henry Scherren in preparing his manuscript for the press was a sound precaution against accidents. In this respect there is not much fault to be found, though on p. 266 we think that for "sanderlings" should be read "ringed plovers." Throughout his book Col. Echalaz ranges himself "on the side of the angels." His veneration for the whole race of gamekeepers is, indeed, overdone. Every now and then on some safe point he ventures to endorse the opinion of his authorities. Thus of the pld wagtail he writes:—

"From my own observations, and from ornithological books, I should say that this is a much more common and widely distributed species than either the grey, or even the yellow wagtail, for I have come across it almost everywhere."

On the opposite page we find the frank admission that he has "little or no knowledge" of the yellow wagtail. "I am sure," he says, "I have met with it, but generally when I have been merely on a walk without a gun." Col. Echalaz is surely unconscious of the satire underlying his explanation, betraying, as it does, the mental attitude of the collector whose outlook on bird-life is along the barrels of his gun. The song of the willow-warbler he knows nothing about, but gathers from the "books" that it is far superior to that of the chiffchaff. He dubs the buzzard a "contemptible coward" for long declining to return to a trap at its nest: the bold peregrine, however, does not disappoint him, earning his warm commendation by coming promptly to be killed. A collector whose cherished specimens find their way eventually to a public museum may, perhaps, plead that the end has justified the means, but a harrowing description of the killing (and wounding) of some of our finest birds at their breeding quarters is never particularly edifying. As to the manner of the telling, Col. Echalaz has cultivated a style which he would, perhaps, call conversational. He is often sadly ungrammatical. No detail is too trivial, no digression too irrelevant, when once he is launched on a story. For his facts he has apparently relied upon his memory. Several specimens are described as having been shot "either in Surrey or Radnorshire." One interesting piece of information he records about the oyster-catcher, giving fairly strong evidence that this bird will on occasion borrow the device of certain gulls and crows, and drop mussels from a height upon a hard surface to break their shells.

As to the collection itself, judging from the illustrations prepared from photographs of some of the cases, we may accord unstinted praise to the majority, especially to the beautiful series of divers. The appearance of the family of coots possibly belies the original, for it is rather ludicrous. It is curious to note how many easily obtainable species are unrepresented.

Sylva; or, A Discourse of Forest Trees. By John Evelyn, F.R.S. A Reprint of the Fourth Edition. With an Essay by John Nisbet. 2 vols. (Doubleday & Co.)—We hear a great deal nowadays about the need for afforestation, and in some villages Arbor Days have been recently instituted. The reissue of Evelyn's 'Sylva' takes us back to the time when the need for tree-planting in England was first adequately brought to public notice. For hundreds of years before the sixteenth century, man's energies had been devoted to the subjugation of the primæval forest, and tree-felling to provide land for the cultivation of agricultural crops had been practised in much the same way as it is in unopened districts in the Colonies at the present time. But the balance had been reached long before Evelyn was born; sufficient land was enclosed for agricultural purposes, and the tree-felling then carried on was solely for economic reasons, one of the chief being the shipbuilding trade. The number of oaks by this time was continually and seriously decreasing, and there is every reason to suppose that this fact exercised the minds of the Navy Commissioners some time before Evelyn wrote in 1662; indeed, treatises on the subject had been published many years earlier—for instance, one by Arthur Standish in 1615. In 1662 the Royal Society was in its infancy, but, notwithstanding considerable opposition, it had already attracted the sympathetic attention of responsible people, and it was to this Society that the Commissioners of his Majesty's Navy addressed their inquiries in regard to maintaining a sufficient supply of oak and other trees for timber. It was on October 6th, 1662, that Evelyn read an essay on the subject before the Fellows of the Society, which he describes in his 'Diary' as a "Discourse concerning Forest trees."

The first public appearance of 'Sylva' occurred in 1664; the fourth edition, which is now reissued, appeared in 1706, the year of Evelyn's death; and a fifth was published in 1729. Four more editions appeared between 1776 and 1812, and these included notes by Dr. Hunter of York. The last of these editions, as Dr. Nisbet points out, served as the text for a celebrated article on forestry which appeared in The Quarterly Review for March, 1813, and exercised an influence in favour of planting trees almost equal to that of 'Sylva' itself. A later issue of Hunter's edition appeared in 1825, and the only one which has been published since that date until the present was issued by James Mitchell in 1827. In this Evelyn's classic was "revised, corrected, and abridged."

The practical man of the twentieth century, after a careful study of the elaborate directions given in 'Sylva' for planting and propagating the various species, is impressed by the author's power of observation and love of experiment. The 'Sylva' was perfectly fitted for serving in its day the purposes of a forester's manual, and although its value now depends mainly upon its literary character, the reader with an intimate knowledge of present-day practice will find in its pages an infinite amount of suggestion.

Dr. Nisbet contributes a long introductory essay. This contains an interesting biographical sketch of Evelyn's career and a review of his literary productions.

This new edition is printed in large, bold type and on excellent paper. It is likely to meet with considerable appreciation.

Holly, Yew, and Box, with Notes on other Evergreens. By W. Dallimore. With 175 Illustrations. (John Lane.)—The value of this book centres chiefly on the reproduction of a unique series of illustrations of holly leaves published by the late Thomas Moore in The Gardeners' Chronicle in the years 1874-6. Moore wrote on the varieties of Ilex aquifolium at great length, and produced full and carefully drawn descriptions of each variety. These descriptions, together with the excellent illustrations of single leaves, furnish the best means available, now as then, for the identification of particular kinds. In Mr. Dallimore's work we not only find Moore's illustrations, but also the descriptions of the varieties of the common holly are based on his monograph. Mr. Dallimore has further got together a large number of original illustrations, most of them being photographs of specimens now growing at Kew. The chapters on the propagation, general cultivation, and uses of hollies, also upon hollies as specimen plants, as town trees, and for hedges, contain trustworthy information, for Mr. Dallimore's experience at Kew, and other places, gives him the right to speak with authority.

The holly is one of the most hardy of evergreen trees, succeeding in conditions of very varied nature. At the same time, certain soils and localities are remarkable for the fine hollies they produce, and the author refers to some of the famous instances, including those of Bagshot, but no mention is made of the holly hedge in Keele Hall gardens, Staffordshire. This hedge is formed of a double line of hollies which meet at about 8 ft. high, producing a dense screen. A few years ago the hedge was 27 ft. high, 33 ft. wide at the base, and something like 200 yards in length.

The holly occupies 149 pages in the present work; then follow 53 upon the yew, and 20 on the box. There are further chapters upon heaths, ivies, and other plants; but they are too concise to be of much value, and it almost looks as if they had been added as an afterthought.

Scottish Gardens, by the Right Hon. Sir Herbert Maxwell (Arnold), is packed with interest throughout its 250 pages. But the interest is not strictly, or even mainly, of a horticultural character. Many fine houses in Scotland have associations worth recalling; and Sir Herbert has adopted the style of the historian, although it is veiled somewhat by his well-known enthusiasm for gardening. In one instance, Dunrobin, the description of the garden occupies scarcely more than a twentieth of the space awarded to historic associations. He appears to have thought that Miss Wilson's drawings sufficiently illustrate the horticultural side, and that it chiefly remained for him to tell the reader all about the noble families and estates which have given rise to the gardens.

In an introductory chapter the author explains the climatic conditions in Scotland. He rightly states that, for horticultural purposes, these islands should be divided into East and West, rather than North and South. He shows that it is possible to cultivate successfully in some Scottish counties on the western side a large number of plants that cannot be grown out of doors in the North Midlands of England. This is perfectly true, and well known to most experts. The fact is that in Scottish gardens there is greater diversity than in English, for the conditions represent greater extremes.

We wish that this had been adequately shown in Miss Wilson's coloured drawings: some of them are charming pictures, such, for instance, as that representing the rhododendrons and azaleas at "The Hirsell," the rockery borders at Barberton, and the snowdrop mound at Ardgowan; but they depict isolated features in these gardens rather than convey an idea of their general character. The picture of the rock gardening at Corrour, with its surroundings, fulfils the latter object best, for it is almost the only one in which the environment can be studied. An exception may be made in favour of the Princes Street gardens, Edinburgh, which include the Scott Memorial. The authorities are to be congratulated on their management of these gardens.

Those who consult this book for gardening hints will be thankful for the Appendix containing lists of rhododendrons and other plants suitable for cultivation in Scotland, for in this matter Sir Herbert Maxwell may be taken as a trustworthy guide. The whole is well got up, the paper and printing being excellent. Misprints are few in the body of the book, but there are some errors in the plant-names that need revision, and there is no index.

Systematic Anatomy of the Dicotyledons. By Dr. Hans Solereder. Translated by L. A. Boodle and F. E. Fritsch. Revised by D. H. Scott. Vol. II. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—The first volume of this important work contained the sections Polypetalæ and Gamopetalæ. The second volume begins, therefore, with the natural Order Nyctagineæ, the first of the Monochlamydeæ. Under each natural Order is given a review of the general anatomical features, followed by a description of the structure of the leaf and axis, and concluding with a citation of the literature dealing with the subject so far as it refers to the particular Order. This portion of the book occupies 158 pages. Then follow Addenda which fill 266 pages. Here the natural Orders are brought again under review, beginning with the Ranunculaceæ. Information is given that was not available at the earlier stage; therefore, whilst there is not much to add in the case of some Orders, in others the later information recorded is more valuable than that in the earlier part of the work. The Addenda are followed by 'Concluding Remarks,' which occupy 98 pages. The Remarks are devoted to the anatomical characters which have proved to be valuable for classification, and attention is drawn to their occurrence in particular Orders, genera, and species. They are intended to serve both as an aid in the determination of a plant by means of its anatomical characters, and, in conjunction with the Introduction at the beginning of the first volume, as a guide to the anatomical method. The Remarks are divided into seven chapters, as follows: I. Structure of the Lamina of the Leaf; II. Structure of the Petiole; III. Secretory and Excretory Receptacles; IV. Hairy Covering; V. Normal Structure of the Axis; VI. Anomalous Structure of the Axis; VII. Structure of the Root. Under each heading the ordinary structure is described, and afterwards the modifications characteristic of particular Orders, genera, and occasionally species.

The work is essentially one for use in the laboratory, and for advanced students generally. For such it is well fitted and instructive.

There are 36 valuable figures in the text, some of them original, whilst others are after those of various authors whose investigations have been the means of gaining original information on the subject.

THE INDIAN SANITARY REPORT.

THE Annual Report of the Sanitary Commissioner with the Government of India for the year 1907 has just been received from Calcutta. In addition to the history of the chief diseases among the general population, it gives appendixes and returns of sickness and mortality among European troops, native troops, and prisoners in India. We notice several improvements in the form of the Report, notably a tabular statement showing at a glance the mortality from the five most deadly diseases. Among these, "fevers" come first with a total number of deaths of 4,464,881, which is more than half the grand total. The saddest and most striking return is that relating to plague, which swept away 1,315,707 human beings, the highest number on the record. This total is so appalling that the reporter takes an anticipatory peep into his figures for 1908, and gives the assurance that that year has proved comparatively mild, and that the figures of his next report will show a marked decrease. The fever mortality appears to be a permanent factor in the situation, upon which medical science and improved sanitation make little or no impression. The death-rate was higher than in the two previous years, working out at the high ratio of 37.18 per thousand. Many special investigations have been instituted into the causes of the most fatal diseases, but the results are shown in special reports upon which the Sanitary Commissioner does not conceive it proper to trespass.

The health of the European troops shows an improvement, there being a considerable decline also in the invalids sent home. The returns for the native army are rather misleading, owing to the number of deaths which occur while the men are on furlough, or absent through sickness in their own homes. It is, however, admitted that diseases are far less virulent among native than European troops; and another circumstance which is made clear by the statistics is that suicide is less rife among the Indian troops than our own. For the first time the total death-rate is apportioned among the religions, and it is curious to note that in all parts of India the Mohammedans furnish the highest rate in the bill of mortality.

SOCIETIES.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—March 18.—Sir Richard Holmes, V.P., in the chair.—Reference was made to the loss which the Society had sustained by the sudden death of the Director, and the following resolution was unanimously adopted: "The Fellows of the Society of Antiquaries of London have heard with great regret the unexpected announcement of the death of Mr. Frederick George Hilton Price, who had for fifteen years filled the important office of Director, to the great advantage of the Society. His devotion to its interests, the courtesy and geniality of his character, and the leading part taken by him in the promotion of many branches of antiquarian research endear his memory to the Fellows: The Society desires to convey to Mrs. Hilton Price and the family of the deceased an expression of deep sorrow and sincere condolence with them in their irreparable loss."

A letter was read from Mr. A. T. Martin, Local Secretary for Somerset, calling attention to a proposal to destroy part of the north side of Bath Street, Bath, in order to enlarge the Grand Pump Room Hotel. Protests had been made to the Corporation, who had replied that the matter was settled a year and a half ago, and could not now be reopened. It was suggested, however, that, in view of the general interest taken in the preservation of old Bath, a resolution of the Society might be of service in preventing further destruction. The following resolution was accordingly adopted: "The Society of Antiquaries of London, feeling that the eighteenth-century architecture of the city of Bath is of a special character, and therefore well worthy of preservation where possible, hears with regret that there is danger of the destruction of the colonnade on one side of Bath Street, and expresses the hope that it may be preserved."

Mr. C. R. Peers, Secretary, read a paper on Basing House, Hampshire, the ruins of which have been most carefully and methodically excavated during a series of seasons by the owner, Lord Bolton. The remains of buildings belong almost entirely to the house built about 1530 by the first Marquess of Winchester, with a few later additions, and some slight remains of earlier work; but the main earthworks are doubtless those of the castle of Hugh de Port, the first Norman owner of Basing. They consist of a great circular citadel with a ditch and rampart, belonging to a type which must be considered a development of the normal earthen mount of late eleventh-century date, and two courts or baileys, to the north and north-east of the citadel. The circular earthworks of Old Sarum and Castle Rising are of the same class as that of Basing. Mention in a twelfth-century grant, and again in the fourteenth century, of the "old castle" of Basing seems to imply the existence of a "new castle"; but there is no evidence of more than one fortified site. The ditches which surrounded the citadel and both courts are still intact for the most part, and have always been dry: there is, however, a good supply of water some 40 ft. below the general ground level, and three wells have been cleared in the castle.

The house built by the first Marquess was very magnificent, according to contemporary witness, and was in two parts—one called the Old House, occupying the circular citadel, and the other the New House, which seems to have been a later work, and occupied the north-east court. The north court contained no buildings except a gatehouse by which it was entered on the west; and other gatehouses stood at the entrance to the Old and New Houses, all three being defended by ditches. The principal buildings—those of the Old House—follow no conventional plan, owing to the exigencies of the site; but a certain degree of symmetry is yet apparent. A fan-shaped court opens from the gatehouse at the north-east, having the great hall on the west, and turrets for staircases at intervals round the court. Behind the hall is a hexagonal kitchen with three fireplaces, and two more large fireplaces are in a room adjoining; while at the south end of the hall is a block, belonging in part to the earlier mediæval work, which must have contained a great chamber; and perhaps the chapel of St. Michael was in this part of the house. The plans of several other courts are to be seen, and the buildings near the gatehouse are all provided with cellars, and were probably bakehouses, brewhouses, provision stores, and the like. A large masonry-lined pit near the south end of the hall, looking like that of a large garderobe, contained none of the black soil found in such places, and may perhaps have been for cold storage, like similar pits still in use in Holland and elsewhere on the Continent. There was a second entrance to the citadel—over the earthen rampart, and not through it—by a drawbridge crossing the ditch on the south-west.

Though the Old House was a strong place and easily defensible, it is probable that the site alone is responsible for this; and the other buildings, and the walled terraces and gardens, were certainly laid out for beauty and pleasure, and not for strength. The New House, which eventually proved the weakest point in the sieges of the seventeenth century, was built round two courts, and had tall turrets with domed pinnacles and two fine gatehouses, and seems to have been the most splendid part of the buildings.

Evidences of the hasty strengthening of the buildings by earthworks and additional masonry are to be seen in several places, as recorded in the contemporary accounts of the siege; and considerable remains of the outer lines of earthworks thrown up at this time exist. The well-known view by Hollar gives a good idea of the appearance of Basing House after the two sieges of 1643 and 1644; and another drawing, of which several fanciful copies exist, seems to show the New House after a breach had been made in it, before the final assault of 1645. The different accounts of the siege are very useful in determining the topography of the site.

Mr. H. J. L. J. Massé exhibited two early pewter plates lately found in Kennington, one bearing a crowned R characteristic of the reign of Richard II., the other a similar device but probably temp. Richard III.—Mr. J. E. Pritchard exhibited a silver-gilt and enamelled badge of the end of the sixteenth century, with the armorial ensigns of the Bakers' Company of Exeter.

BRITISH NUMISMATIC.—March 24.—Mr. Bernard Roth, V.P., in the chair.—The following were elected to membership: the Library of Congress, Washington, Harvard University, Brooklyn Public Library, and Messrs. E. H. Adams, J. W. Haarer, H. H. King, A. T. Nation, H. Niklewicz, S. F. Simons, F. B. Vrooman, and W. H. Wells. Two papers were read: 'Some Medals and Tokens connected with the London Stock Exchange,' by Mr. J. B. Caldecott; and 'On a Parcel of Stycas from the York Find of 1842,' by Mr. Nathan Heywood.

Mr. Caldecott touched upon the history of the stockbrokers of London in the seventeenth century and the early part of the eighteenth, and exhibited a facsimile of a certificate of freedom of the City of London granted seventy years ago to a broker of the time, upon being sworn. The medals issued to sworn brokers by the City Corporation from the reign of Anne were described, and specimens and photographs exhibited by the lecturer and Mr. Lionel Fletcher. From 1814 to 1834 the medals issued to London brokers bore upon the obverse the figure of a bull, and on the reverse that of a bear, equipped, in the first case, with the head of N. M. Rothschild, and in the second with that of M. Mocatta. The Stock Exchange at Bristol temp. William III. also received a share of attention.

Mr. Nathan Heywood's paper dealt with the Stonyhurst College collection of stycas, 376 in number, comprising 47 of Eanred, 229 of Ethelred II., 49 of Wigmund, and smaller lots of Eardwulf, Hoaurh, Elfwald II., Redwulf, Osbercht, and Wulfhere. The question of leaden stycas was considered by the lecturer, and their exclusion from the cabinets of collectors was deprecated.

In addition to the medals already referred to, there were exhibited: By Mr. Carlyon-Britton, the only penny of Ethelbert of East Anglia known besides the specimen in the British Museum; by Mr. O. S. Horn, four coins of independent kings of Bengal ruling in and between 1493 and 1532; and by Major Freer, a photograph of a gold wire ring attached to a gold bangle found on West Beacon Hill, Leicestershire, in 1838, and supposed to be representative of the earliest form of money used in Britain, and two private medals of the 38th Regiment and the 43rd Regiment.

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—March 17.—Dr. F. A. Dixey, President, in the chair.—Capt. E. Bagnell-Purefoy, Mr. S. A. Blenkarn, Mr. L. Box, Mr. H. Britten, and Mr. W. A. Rollason were elected Fellows.—Mr. H. Rowland-Brown exhibited two extreme forms of Rumicia (Chrysophanus) phlaeas from Alten, Norwegian Finnmark, and the Mediterranean region. He drew attention to the apparent identity of the form from Arctic Europe—hypophlaeas—with the species described as americanus from North America. He also showed series of Plbeius argyrognomon, Brgrstr., taken by him in Northern Scandinavia; P. argus, L., var. corsica, from Corsica; and P. argus, approaching var. bella, H. S., from the Besses-Alpes. Mr. H. Hamilton Druce also brought for exhibition examples of P. argus, L., taken by him in various localities in Russia.—Mr. G. Meade, Waldo exhibited a gynandromorphous example of Euchloe cardamines, bred from a larva found at Hever, Kent.—Mr. H. M. Edelsten brought for exhibition a stereoscopic photograph of the anal segments of a female Canobia rufa, showing the spines used for ovipositing, and driven into the dead stems of Juncus lamprocarpus.—Mr. W. Schmassman showed a curiously marked female of Chrysophanus hippothoe, caught on July 22nd, 1908, at Goeschenen, Switzerland.—Mr. C. O. Waterhouse sent for exhibition living males and immature females of the mammoth scale insect which infests the M'sasa tree in Rhodesia.—Mr. E. A. Butler exhibited one species of Coleoptera, and five of Hemiptera, recently added to the British fauna.—Mr. E. J. Arrow exhibited examples of a Cetoniid beetle, Dicronorrhina (subg. Neptunides) manovensis, Moser, to show injuries of a remarkable character which he was at a loss to explain. In all, the marks were perfectly symmetrical and occupied exactly the same position.—Dr. K. Jordan exhibited the polymorphic Papilio lysithous and P. hectorides from Brazil, and the models which they imitate. The exhibit illustrated a phenomenon observed in various groups of butterflies; that a mimetic species is broken up into a number of very different-looking individual varieties, which are all specifically the same, while the imitated models are specifically distinct from one another. He also exhibited both sexes of the peculiar Peruvian butterfly Styx infernalis, described by Staudinger as a Pierid. The insect is, however, decidedly an Encyminid in the structure of the antenna, thorax, legs, neuration, and the egg. Dr. Jordan also showed, on behalf of the Hon. N. C. Rothschild an Aerotylus which Mr. Rothschild observed in some numbers in the desert on the Upper Nile. The colour of these small locusts so closely agrees with that of the sand and the pebbles (also exhibited) that, when settled, the insects disappear entirely from view.

Mr. J. W. Tutt then opened a discussion on the affinities of the two Palearctic butterflies Plbeius argus, L. (= agon, Schiff.; argyrotoxis, Brgrstr.), and P. argyrognomon, Brgrstr. (argus, auctorum). After explaining the great confusion which exists in the nomenclature of the respective species, he drew attention to the remarkable distribution and local races of our British Plbeius argus (agon), pointing out that in Britain we have three distinct forms—a chalk-hill, a heath, and a moss or moorland form. Both species appeared to show a parallel range of variation in the mountain, plain, and southern forms respectively; but structurally and superficially considered the two species presented several marked differences. Dr. T. A. Chapman then gave a demonstration with the lantern, illustrated by many slides, of these structural differences of the two species in the larval and imaginal stages, and criticized the opinion expressed by Staudinger that argus and argyrognomon have not yet entirely developed into separate species.

At this point the discussion was adjourned, owing to the lateness of the hour.

MICROSCOPICAL.—March 17.—Mr. E. J. Spitta, V.P., in the chair.—The Chairman said that Mr. Leitz had sent him one of the new $\frac{1}{2}$ -inch objectives for examination, and he had subjected it to some very severe tests, and found it to be an excellent lens.—Mr. C. Lees Curties exhibited C. Baker's New Model D.P.H. Microscope, two forms of which were shown: one having the mechanical stage built on to the instrument, and the other with plane square stage.—Dr. J. W. Evans gave a lecture on 'The Optical Examination of a Crystal Section in a Rock Slice.'—Mr. C. F. Rousselet read a paper 'On Synchaeta jennica, sp. n., and on the Resting-egg of S. pectinata.'—The following were elected Ordinary Fellows:—Messrs. A. H. Wyld Cleave, F. H. Dodd, A. P. Porter, and D. L. Zook.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—March 23.—Mr. J. C. Inglis, President, in the chair.—The paper read was 'Construction and Wear of Roads,' by Mr. H. A. R. Mallock.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- Mon. Royal Institution, 5.—General Monthly.
— Society of Engineers, 7.30.—'The Corrosion of Steel-Reinforcement in Concrete,' Mr. E. R. Matthews.
— Aristotelian, 8.—'The Mutual Symbolism of Intelligence and Activity,' Dr. H. Foston.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'Steam Turbines,' Lecture III., Mr. G. G. Stoney. (Cantor Lecture.)
— Geographical, 8.30.—'The Scenery of Cuba, Haiti, and Jamaica,' Sir Harry Johnston.
Tues. Society of Arts, 4.30.—'Ceylon: its Industries and Material Progress,' Hon. John Ferguson. (Colonial Section.)
— Colonial Institute, 8.—'Greater South Africa,' Sir L. L. Michell.
— Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'Construction and Wear of Roads'; Paper on 'The "New York Times" Building,' Mr. C. T. Purdy.
— Zoological, 8.30.—'Notes on an Ichthyosporidian causing a Fatal Disease in Sea-Trout,' Miss Muriel Robertson; 'A Collection of Fishes made by Dr. C. W. Andrews at Christmas Island,' Mr. C. Tate Regan; 'Description of a New Form of Ratel (Mellivora) from Sierra Leone,' Mr. R. I. Pocock; 'On some New and Little-Known Hesperidae from Tropical West Africa,' Mr. Hamilton H. Druce.
Wed. Archaeological Institute, 4.30.—'On Excavations at Haughmond Abbey in 1906,' Messrs. W. H. St. John Hope and H. Brakspear.
— Astronomical, 5.
— Entomological, 8.—'On Reciprocal Mimicry,' Mr. G. A. K. Marshall.
— Geological, 8.

Science Gossip.

EASTER DAY falls this year on the same actual day in the Eastern and Western Churches, though the former reckons it as March 29th, and the latter as April 11th. This coincidence between the cycles formed from the Julian and Gregorian calendars occurred also in 1906.

THE moon will be full on the 5th inst. at 8h. 28m. (Greenwich time) in the evening, and new on the 20th at 4h. 51m. in the morning. She will be in perigee on the evening of the 18th. An occultation of ν Virginis will take place this evening: disappearance at 9h. 55m., and reappearance at 11h. 5m. Mercury will be at superior conjunction with the sun on the 21st, and will scarcely be visible this month. Venus may be seen about sunrise at the beginning of the month, but she also will be at superior conjunction with the sun on the 28th inst. Mars rises earlier each morning, passing from Sagittarius into Capricornus; he will be near the moon on the 14th. Jupiter is still bright the greater part of the night, situated near the star ρ Leonis, and almost stationary. Saturn was in conjunction with the sun this morning, and will not be visible this month.

ONE of the bodies announced as a new small planet photographically discovered by Prof. Max Wolf at the Astrophysical Institute, Königstuhl, Heidelberg, on January 28th, turns out to be the seventh satellite of Jupiter, which was discovered by Prof. Perrine at the Lick Observatory little more than four years ago.

HERREN H. LAU AND C. LUPLAU-JANSSEN publish in No. 4315 of the Astronomische Nachrichten the results of a large number of observations of double stars obtained last year at the Urania Observatory, Copenhagen.

PROF. H. G. VAN DE SANDE BAKHUYZEN has retired from the directorship of the observatory at Leyden, which he had held since 1872. He is to be succeeded by Herr E. F. van de Sande Bakhuyzen; and there are to be two professors of Astronomy at the University, of whom the latter is one, the other being Dr. W. de Sitter of Groningen, who will devote himself specially to theoretical astronomy.

THE second number of Vol. XXXVIII. of the Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani has been received. The principal contents are a second paper by Prof. Bemporad on the results of the photometric observations of variable stars obtained at the Royal Astrophysical Observatory at Catania in 1907; a note by Father Chevalier, giving an account of the solar protuberances (one of which gave a continuous spectrum) seen on the 30th and 31st of July; and a series of images of the solar limb as observed at Catania, Kalocsa, Madrid, Odessa, Rome, Zö-sö (China), and Zurich from February to April, 1906.

FINE ARTS

Notes on the Science of Picture-Making.

By Prof. C. J. Holmes. (Chatto & Windus.)

PROF. HOLMES has done a remarkable and original thing: he has applied common sense to the arts of design in an appropriate way. The dealings of common sense with the art of painting have not, as a rule, been of much value. Its logic may have been impeccable; it has nearly always started from incorrect premises. Common sense of the Herbert Spencerian type has taken it to be axiomatic that the art of painting aimed at imitation, and has deduced therefrom disastrous conclusions. In short, the Philistine has hitherto felt confident that common sense was on his side. He can do so no longer. Prof. Holmes shows that, so far from being the result of incalculable caprice, a good picture is a reasonable and logical performance, in which the artist is at the utmost pains to reject any means which do not conduce to a perfectly definite end.

Prof. Holmes starts with a preliminary definition of the art of painting as "Personal experience emphasized by Emotion in flat decoration," which, if it is not fundamental, is at least serviceable. "Experience" is here made to do duty both for the knowledge of some aspect of life of the same kind (though differently directed) as that possessed by the man of science, and for the technical knowledge which enables the artist to record his experience. This record is constantly controlled and modified by the emotion which accompanied it in the artist's mind:

"When a painter has adequate technical equipment, the mental images which he forms will insensibly be refined and made emphatic by the keenness of feeling with which he treats them, and this process of refinement and emphasis will continue so long as the feeling lasts."

That is well said, but we should like to learn rather more about the nature of this emotion. Prof. Holmes tells us that it is an "artistic emotion," and is "a very different thing from the emotions of everyday life, from joy, sorrow, anger, and the like." It would seem, then, that if this is so the definition of the painter's art from which we started ought to be emended: it should be "personal experience emphasized by artistic emotion," and then we have the terrible word "art," the x of the whole problem, turning up on both sides of the equation.

The problem of these "artistic emotions" is one of the greatest difficulty, and perhaps scarcely affects the practical ends Prof. Holmes has in view. At any rate, the question is irrelevant to the succeeding portion of the book, in which the author shows how the "artistic emotion," whatever its true nature may be, controls the artist's expression by giving emphasis. The emphasis of emotion is divided into headings: Emphasis of symbol, of plan, of recession, spacing, shadow, colour, and material. Each of these modes of emphasis is subject to four necessary conditions—unity, vitality, infinity, and repose. By multiplying the modes by the conditions we get a rather formidable schedule of no fewer than twenty-eight qualities which a picture should possess.

Here, again, we feel that the system is rather of practical use than of absolute philosophical value. To the young artist who has been in the habit of thinking of his picture-making in a helpless sort of way, as mainly imitation of what he sees modified by something which he never clearly understands, it should be a most valuable training thus to disengage the various qualities which his design ought to possess. And Prof. Holmes gives here and there hints as to the mode of application of his scheme which show how thoroughly he himself understands the practical business of design.

We can best give an idea of the masterly treatment of this part of the work by a quotation:—

"Lastly, the perfect pictorial symbol will suggest life and vigour by the seeming ease and swiftness of its execution. I say seeming ease, because an appearance of facility may often have to be attained with great labour, and is generally obtained only by long practice. The fluent sweep of Rubens's brush, the caressing touch of Gainsborough, and the slashing strokes of Sargent, convey alike to the spectator an impression of power and liveliness which enhances immensely the effect of their work....Is it always recognized that this swiftness is admissible only in treating essentials, that if these essentials are not grasped by the artist the result is an advertisement of unessentials—in other words a shallow mannerism that has nothing solid behind it?"

In the final section of this part of his book Prof. Holmes boldly attacks the question of colour. We say boldly because hitherto hardly any one has ventured to investigate colour in a methodical way—we refer, of course, to colour as a means of expression, not colour as it appears in nature, to which ample attention has been devoted.

We doubt whether, in spite of much that is pertinent and suggestive, the author has yet established a philosophy of colour. In the first place, he talks of the psychological effect of various colours, finding red irritating, yellow fresh and exhilarating, blue fresh and tranquil, and so forth. Now Dr. Denman Ross, whose colour-scales are, we think, the only serious attempt yet made to induce method into the practical study of colour, has already seen that it is no use to talk of colour unless at the same time we define both the degree of its intensity and the tone-value that accompanies it—how light or dark it is. Red, for instance, has infinitely diverse effects, not only in proportion as it verges towards blue or yellow, but according to its intensity and tone. In certain circumstances it is so far from being "irritating and unsuitable to be the dominant hue," that it forms the basis of the colour-schemes of many of the primitive Flemish paintings—paintings which have a sober and suavely dignified effect.

Prof. Holmes has, however, recognized one truth of the greatest importance with regard to colour, which we do not remember to have seen stated before, namely, that fine or subtle colour is never associated with strong relief or great roundness of modelling.

Having discussed twenty-four out of the twenty-eight possible qualities of a picture our author proceeds, under the heading of 'Emphasis of Material,' to discuss in brief all the possible mediums of graphic design. Here again he shows the width of his practical knowledge of the arts and his extreme sanity of judgment, no less than the clearness of his exposition and the pregnancy of his hints to the student. It is impossible in a review to discuss the innumerable interesting questions which his all too brief survey raises. We might perhaps question whether any artists, with the exception of our own Pre-Raphaelites, ever used oil paint quite in the way described as the transparent method; but the general idea underlying his account of it, the use of the light transmitted from the white of the ground, is undoubtedly correct.

Finally, under 'Emphasis of Character' we come to a discussion of the painter's aims and ideals. Here Prof. Holmes investigates the different kinds of emotion which are to be conveyed by means of all those different kinds of emphasis which he has set out. His classification is based rather on the social and political conditions under which different kinds of art have been produced than on the fundamental modes of the human imagination. Thus the heroic and hieratic styles are called by him "Despotic art," and are explained as due to the desire of tyrants and priests to impose themselves on their subjects by impressing the popular imagination. Such a theory savours too much of early nineteenth-century methods of conceiving history. It assumes conditions altogether too simple and a psychology too schematic.

The rest of art is the art of the free citizen, or individual art, and is divided into Dramatic, Lyrical, Narrative, and Satiric. Prof. Holmes discusses very briefly the kinds of emphasis proper to each of these modes of imagination. An example of his acute observation is seen in his discussion of the relative position of chiaroscuro and colour in producing dramatic effect:—

"In Constable's sketches, as the engravings by Lucas prove, a dramatic scheme of chiaroscuro underlies colouring which is frequently the reverse of dramatic."

Once more, by analyzing the different aims which artists have proposed to themselves, and confronting them with an analysis of the means of expression, he has furnished a whole new series of criteria for the judgment of works of art, and one which seems capable of indefinite extension and refinement.

Prof. Holmes then discourses on the painter's training, which enables him to speak of tradition, which he defines (in the Preface) as "the body of principles which secure conformity between art and its contemporary environment"—a definition which seems to us illuminating. It allows him, methodical and precise as he is, to find a logical justification for the revolutionary and rebellious artists of modern times. This serves to show how wide are his sympathies, and how seriously he has endeavoured to make his system no merely arbitrary code of academic rules, but one that admits the freest expression of individual feeling, while excluding what is merely capricious or the result of pretentious unreason.

Our author keeps constantly before him the painter's actual problem; almost all that he says is for use in the studio, and we may fairly add that since Reynolds's discourses the student has never had put before him such a fruitful and suggestive guide to his endeavours. Prof. Holmes has done well to publish, in the form of a book, lectures given at Oxford, where the practical problem is not, perhaps, so pressing as elsewhere. Certainly no student of painting can afford to neglect the opportunity for improvement here offered.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

The Loeb Collection of Arretine Pottery. Catalogued, with Introduction and Descriptive Notes, by G. H. Chase. (New York, Laurentian Press.)—A class of antique ceramic art, of which the remains may still be found buried beneath the soil throughout the territories once included in the Roman world, must have possessed merits of no common order to obtain such extended appreciation; for it was certainly not to mere chance or luck that the red Arretine pottery (once termed Samian ware) was indebted for its widespread popularity in the first century of our era. Its success was entirely legitimate and well deserved, resulting from its sound manufacture, its adaptability—it was intended for daily use—and the delightful character of its ornamentation. As for its fabrication, the potting was first-rate; the body was close and compact, hard, light, and extremely durable. A fragment which may have lain in the earth for some nineteen centuries or so will show a fracture sharp and clean as that of a piece of Chinese porcelain, and the thin, fine glaze will have retained its original lustrous brilliancy. The shapes of the vases, drinking-cups, plates, &c., have evidently been the subject of careful consideration in every particular. Precisely fitted for their purposes, they are yet, withal, comely and even elegant. The decoration of the vessels is especially agreeable, and the favour with which the ware is regarded by the connoisseur of to-day is, doubtless, mainly due to the charm of its dainty Hellenistic ornamentation. The motives of this refined ornament, whether naturalistic or conventional in treatment, reproduce the style of design which is best known in the stucco reliefs discovered in excavations at Rome, in the wall-paintings at Pompeii, and in the relief decoration on the metal bowls and cups exemplified in the Bosco Reale and Hildersheim finds, and these also in the Naples Museum. So likewise the prototypes of the figure motives are found in the marble reliefs of the same Alexandrian art of the ripe Augustan age. Sometimes single figures in the compositions are so plainly reminiscent of well-known statues of the period, and even occasionally, but more rarely, of those belonging to an earlier time, as to leave no question as to their derivation.

The favourite subjects of the figure decoration on the Arretine cups are inspired by the same joyous themes treated in the other forms of the facile, though polished Hellenistic art in its brightest moods. There are scenes of symposia, Bacchic festivals, dancing satyrs and mænads, Kalathiskos dances, and the like, whereof all find admirable illustration in the scholarly volume before us. Especially characteristic of the art is a vintage scene in which the grapes are being gathered and trodden out by sprightly figures of satyrs, redolent of "jest and youthful jollity," the whole composition being full of life and movement. Another interesting example is composed of several distinct scenes pointing to the subject of the Dionysiac mysteries. They include a sacrifice; Silenus carrying a veiled child, a bearded satyr bearing a wine-skin, and a woman with a basket of fruit on her head and holding an oinochoe; and a third group showing a seated satyr playing a double flute, a woman offering a garland, and a woman partially hidden behind a curtain. The scenes are described in detail by Mr. Chase, and thus discussed by him:—

"Dragendorff calls the subject 'Dionysisches Opfer.' The recovery of a complete mould seems to show that the subject is rather a scene connected with the mysteries of Dionysus. Many of the details are such as regularly appear in representations of mystic ceremonies—the veiling of the child, the figure behind the curtain, the torch in the hands of the satyr behind Silenus. The sacrifice of a pig as a means of purification is a familiar feature of scenes of initiation. Above all, the liknon, or winnowing basket, on the head of the woman suggests a connection with mystic rites. As a symbol of purification, the liknon frequently appears in scenes of initiation, and often, as here, it contains fruits and other symbols of fertility. It has a special connection with Dionysus, since it was in a liknon that the infant Dionysus, whose annual rebirth symbolized the coming of spring, was believed to have been cradled. At Delphi Dionysus was called Liknites, with reference to this phase of his worship, and Plutarch records that 'the Hosioi make a secret sacrifice in the sacred precinct of Apollo when the Thyiades raise up Liknites.' All this suggests that we have here some scenes from mysteries of Dionysus."

The author proceeds to suggest that the subject may possibly be a representation of the birth of Dionysus itself.

Selecting its decorative motives from subjects like the above, the art of the Arretine potter can scarcely be charged with frivolity. Even when the element of dramatic action is absent, the simple representation of figures moving in rhythmic measure is not necessarily trivial. And, after all, the execution, the craftsmanship of the work of art, enters largely into our estimate of its intrinsic quality. In the present case, taking the best examples of the ware, we find in their execution the clear definition and masterly design one is accustomed to admire in a fine antique cameo. Hence we should hardly be inclined to subscribe to a classification of the art proposed by a French writer, who would bracket it with that of the mythologie galante. The epithet may be appropriate when applied to much of the Pompeian art, as it certainly is in relation to many eighteenth-century classical compositions.

A more serious indictment of the pottery, however, is one affecting its status from the point of view of sound ceramic art. This refers to the well-known canon that the vase decoration shall not be a mechanical copy of some other form of art. In the present instance the decoration reproduces that on contemporary vessels in gold and silver—in some cases the entire vase, in others casts of single figures have been pressed into the moulds. Therefore it follows that the decoration of the Arretine vases is based on the goldsmith's art, and not that of the potter. As the materials of the two forms of art are different, the one plastic clay and the other solid metal, the manipulation is of necessity different in method, with a corresponding diversity of aim and quality. That the Arretine potters found means to reconcile the two technical processes says much for their native skill and dexterity. The result may not have been the production of a great ceramic art—no one would compare it with that of the Athenian potters of four centuries earlier—yet that work of such sterling excellence should be forthcoming at a period of decline is in itself a striking testimony to the greatness of the traditions it inherited.

Mr. Chase states that the Loeb Collection, which is included in the Fogg Museum of Art at Harvard University, is a fairly representative series of moulds and fragments of Arretine pottery. The more important specimens are reproduced by photogravure in the present volume. The objects have been catalogued in a workmanlike manner by the author, and are preceded by an intelligently written history of the art, compiled from the writings of Gamurrini, Fabroni, and other authorities. Nothing but praise is due to all connected with the publication of the book. The illustrations are admirable, the typography is good, and the paper especially grateful to the eyes, a fact which is accounted for when one finds that it bears the watermark of "Fabriano."

Sir Christopher Wren. By Lena Milman. (Duckworth & Co.)—In many ways this is, we think, the best popular account of the life and work of the great architect that has yet been written. Miss Milman has brought together all that is known of his childhood and youth, and furnishes an excellent account of his multifarious scientific interests and the leading part he played in the foundation of the Royal Society. The portrait that emerges is that of a man gentle yet strong, and of a singularly attractive nature.

There is nothing to prove that Wren had given any consideration to architecture before his appointment by the King to the post of Assistant to the Surveyor-General. It must therefore be accounted a piece of political favouritism, as Webb certainly, and perhaps others, had a prior claim, even though Wren eventually more than justified his selection. The author, who throughout writes frankly as a partisan of King and Church, does not refer to this; but it is well to bear it in mind when we consider the injustice of Wren's supersession by Benson in 1718. His only foreign tour was a visit to Paris in the year of the Great Plague, the whole of which he spent in studying architecture, having, apparently, by then decided to devote himself to its practice. Before this he had completed little except Pembroke College Chapel at Cambridge, though the author states that a doorway in Ely Cathedral was actually his first work, and he had made a start with the Sheldonian Theatre. It was, however, as the "astronomy professor" that he was still generally known, and the author, rightly attaching great importance to this visit, is justified in saying: "If Wren went to Paris an astronomer, he may be said to have returned an architect," even though he retained the Savilian chair until 1673. His work for some time afterwards exhibited traces of French influence, but this eventually disappeared, and in his maturity he reached the most distinctively English type achieved during the Renaissance.

In dealing with buildings the author tempers her enthusiasm with a sense of proportion, and the descriptions are generally satisfactory. The illustrations, mostly from photographs, are fairly numerous, and it would have been worth while to include more. For instance, in the well-written account of Wren's experiments in dome design, as exemplified in the five existing City churches roofed in this way, only two are illustrated. This makes the description difficult to follow, and the majority of readers will probably not make the attempt, which is unfortunate, as this somewhat technical subject is treated very skilfully. We also regret that there are no illustrations of Wren's plan for rebuilding London, and his rejected design for St. Paul's, or St. Vedast's spire, in our view the most beautiful of the whole series.

Miss Milman, though critically sound as a rule, does not write exactly from an architect's point of view, such terms as "cantilever cornice" and "banisters," each recurring several times in place of "modillion cornice" and "balusters," are proof of this, as is the use of "architrave" for "entablature," and "sloping" for "curved." Mansard is a term applied to a particular form of roof, not to the windows in it. The late Mr. Garner's name is misspelt "Garnier." We noticed, too, some uncertainty as to dates and numbers: the date of Wren's commission to design the Sheldonian is given alternately as 1662 and 1663 on pp. 56 and 126; the number of churches destroyed by the Great Fire as 86 and 90, on pp. 222 and 240 respectively; while 6 churches are said to be domed; and in the same paragraph 7 are named.

The Index is so incomplete as to be virtually useless, while from the chronological list of Wren's works the Honywood Library, Lincoln, is omitted, as are Wolvesey Palace and Groombridge Place, both sometimes attributed to him, and with as good reason, we think, as others here included. In the absence of documentary evidence it is difficult to decide such questions. His influence on contemporary work was great, and in addition it is probable that he was consulted as to a large number of buildings for which he either prepared preliminary drawings, taking no further part in their erection, or was asked to advise upon and correct the work of others.

The volume is throughout well written and full of interest, and especially good in its presentment of the central figure in relation to the contemporary social and religious conditions.

'THE ART TREASURES OF LONDON: PAINTING.'

49, Upper Baker Street, N.W., March 17, 1909.

I AM very sensible of the compliment your reviewer pays my book by devoting to it such a long and detailed notice, and I must thank him for his admission that much of the information given is exceedingly useful. At the same time I think I may be reasonably pardoned if a few errors have crept into a volume cataloguing about 4,735 pictures, quoting some 2,981 dates, and including over 10,000 references.

The name of the book can hardly be called "misleading" for the title-page explicitly states that it is "a chronological guide to the schools of painting as represented in the public galleries." Windsor Castle, the Foundling Hospital, and Lincoln's Inn Hall are private or semi-private collections. Bethnal Green Museum is omitted for reasons given on p. xv, which your reviewer has overlooked.

If the reference to Cimabue is read with its context, no "wrong impression" can be conveyed. The dates of Duccio are given by me "? 1260—? 1339," and it might have been juster to refer to the qualification which applies equally well to the suggested correction. During the last few years the death of Duccio has been given by various authorities as 1313, 1319, 1320, and 1340. (See the 1903 edition of Bryan, and Messrs. Douglas and Strong's edition of Crowe and Cavalcaselle).

With regard to the birth of Titian, my error is a transposition of two figures. I have passed "1498" instead of 1489, but in this case too I have queried the date. I have not been misled by the reference in the National Gallery Catalogue, as I had Mr. Cook's article and the series in The Athenæum by me when I wrote. As for the birth of Botticelli, Mr. Horne, in the magnificent biography which was published after my early sheets had passed through the press, gives good reasons for 1444 instead of 1446. But he is not dogmatic, and, if I remember correctly, your own review published last August did not fully accept the date. Nearly all Italian dates form subjects for virulent controversy.

Piero di Cosimo's 'Death of Proteus' is, I admit, an odd blunder—more curious because I have had its photograph on my walls for years. Procris is given correctly on other pages. My authority for the suggestion (against which I place a query) that No. 222 in the National Gallery is perhaps a portrait of the painter is given in Mr. Weale's recent biography of the brothers Van Eyck. He refers to a statement made by Durand (is it Jean?) in 1905 in 'Les Arts Anciens.'

That Hoppner was born in 1768 can hardly be correct. Hoppner died in 1810 in his fifty-first year, and his birthday could only have been in 1758 or 1759. I do not think the date I give, 1759, can be altered for that proposed by your reviewer. Surely he was more than seven when he entered the Academy Schools in 1775, and he married in 1782.

If 1814 be correct with regard to Richard Wilson, that fine painter was born thirty-two years after his death. As for the so-called "misprints," of the seven cited in the review two at least must stand.

The "wrong title" under the illustration of Crome's 'Windmill' can be explained by a reference to the frame of the picture; and the birth-year of Alfred Stevens follows the usually trustworthy Catalogue of the Tate Gallery.

The sentence, "The reader might have been warned against accepting as absolutely authentic some pictures that pass under the names of Fra Bartolommeo, Botticelli, Titian, Albrecht Dürer, Vigée Le Brun, Richard Wilson, Gainsborough, and J. S. Cotman," cannot (in two instances certainly) be justified. I suggest doubts as to five out of nine Botticellis and twenty-one out of thirty Titians. The remaining names in the list have not been seriously assailed.

I am further charged with the "notable omissions" of Lawrence's portrait of Mrs. Siddons, and Downman's 'Lady Clarges,' both in the National Gallery. The 'Lady Clarges' I have no present knowledge of, unless it is in one of the Octagon Rooms. It is not in the Catalogue. As for the 'Mrs. Siddons,' reference to p. 118 proves that I have not only included the portrait in the National Gallery, but also one in the National Portrait Gallery. The remaining "notable omissions" belong to semi-private collections not covered by the scheme of my volume.

Your reviewer complains that "the parentheses denoting the room in which a particular picture is to be found are often left empty." At the head of the explanatory list of abbreviations on p. vi the explanation is given that when "the bracket is empty the picture was not on exhibition at the time this work was compiled, or is only shown by request."

There are other corrections I should like to refer to, but my letter is already long.
HUGH STOKES.

* * We are not concerned with the fact that in past years various critics have incorrectly dated the death of Duccio; and the wrong date given in the current edition of Bryan is inexcusable, as it was conclusively shown in 1900, in Repertorium für Kunstwissenschaft, xxiii. fasc. iii. 314, that Duccio died on August 3rd, 1319. The date was also correctly given in The Athenæum as recently as April 25th of last year. Mr. Langton Douglas certainly does not countenance the wrong date in his 1908 edition of Crowe and Cavalcaselle as in vol. iii. p. 16 he discards Della Valle's date, 1339, and endorses that of the Repertorium. In fact, the correct date has repeatedly been used by Mr. Douglas, notably in his 'History of Siena,' 1902, p. 337, and in the catalogue of Sienese pictures compiled by him for the Burlington Club in 1904.

Mr. Stokes is also at fault in regard to the birthdate of Botticelli. His having passed the early sheets of his book before Mr. Horne's 'Botticelli' was published a year ago does not affect the question, as Mr. Horne had indicated nearly eight years ago (Revue Archéologique, 3^e Série, xxxix. July, 1901, p. 13) that, according to the "Denunzia" of 1457, Botticelli was then thirteen years of age. This date has ever since been generally accepted, and Mrs. Ady in her 'Life and Art of Botticelli,' 1904, p. 9, referred to Mr. Horne's discovery. It is not Mr. Horne's habit to be "dogmatic," but in his book (p. 6) he shows that in all human probability the artist was born "in the twelve months which began on the 18th February, 1444," and not in 1446, as Mr. Stokes still maintains. Moreover in our review of Mr. Horne's book on August 15th last, if we did not fully accept the year 1444, we expressed the opinion that that year, although "not certainly established," had "every probability in its favour."

With regard to the 'Man's Portrait' by Jan van Eyck in the National Gallery (No. 222), Mr. Weale himself does not support the contention. He has never, in the sixty years that he has been studying Van Eyck, made the untenable suggestion that the picture represents the painter himself. Mr. Weale in his 'Hubert and John van Eyck,' p. 69, in the short bibliography he appends to the 'Man's Portrait,' merely points out that "Durand" (which should be M. Durand-Gréville) in an article in 'Les Arts anciens' (really 'Les Arts anciens de Flandre': see Athenæum, No. 4199, p. 485) "takes this to be a portrait of John van Eyck by himself when about forty-seven years of age." If Mr. Stokes had tested the reference on p. 69 to Mr. Weale's own article in The Burlington Magazine, vi., 1904, p. 249, he would have seen what that eminent critic's opinion really is, viz., that the portrait "apparently represents a well-to-do merchant of about sixty-five years of age." In last month's Burlington Magazine Mr. Weale wrote a note volunteering the suggestion that the portrait represents Margaret van Eyck's father. If the portrait was painted in 1433, it could not possibly represent Jan van Eyck as Mr. Stokes still suggests, because he was at the time between forty-two and forty-eight years of age.

We are still of the opinion that Hoppner was born in 1758 (not 1759, as Mr. Stokes's book states), and our reviewer regrets that he allowed the obvious mistake of 1768 to pass, as well as the still more obvious error which placed the year of Wilson's birth in 1814.

The birth of Alfred Stevens used to be given in the official Catalogue of the National Gallery of British Art as 1817, but we long ago (Athenæum, No. 4222) drew attention to its having been corrected in the current edition of the Catalogue to 1818.

We are aware that Mr. Stokes has inserted in his book the generally accepted re-attributions of certain "Botticellis" and "Titians," but we had others in mind, notably the 'Smeralda Bandinelli' in the Ionides Collection and the 'Death of Lucretia' (No. 77, not No. 777) at Hampton Court; they generally pass under the name of Botticelli and Titian. We cannot here point out which are the doubtful pictures by the other artists we named, but, to give only one instance, no responsible critic now accepts the 'Galiot in the Gale' which was purchased by the National Gallery (No. 1458) as a Cotman in 1895 for a large sum.

We are a little surprised that Mr. Stokes is evidently not aware of the fact that there are two portraits of Mrs. Siddons by Lawrence in the National Gallery: the one to which he refers (No. 785) on p. 118, and the one (No. 2222) which, together with Downman's 'Lady Clarges' (No. 2233), has long hung in the West Octagon Room. Neither of these pictures is, however, included in the official Catalogue. It is always as well to supplement the perusal of an official catalogue with a little personal knowledge of the collection in question.

Mr. Stokes's suggested explanation of the empty brackets is not very convincing; we could fill at least a score of these brackets placed opposite to pictures which have never left the Gallery, and must therefore have been on exhibition when Mr. Stokes's book was compiled.

THE ROYAL SOCIETY OF BRITISH ARTISTS.

MORE careful hanging in the large room gives to the present exhibition an appearance of better quality than some of its predecessors. As a matter of fact, however, its average merit is about as usual, and interest centres in the work of three or four painters. Of these Mr. Joseph Simpson is the most noticeable, a portrait called Reska (32) being his best work, a painting of considerable charm, if somewhat slight in structure for its scale. This slightness is clearly intentional, but is as doubtful in policy as was Whistler's handling of similar themes. The painter selects a subject in which the contrasts of broad light and shade are very discreet—the contrasts of local colour very trenchant. Except for a few incisive spots of dark (admirably selected), the picture thus resolves itself into a number of broad surfaces of colour brilliantly contrasting one with the other, and possessing only the slightest of internal modelling—that flutter of surface variety which depends on actual handling, on the modulated pressure of the brush into fluid paint. The unity of illumination which bridges the obvious gulfs that divide these sharply separated tones has to be inferred from the nicely regulated degree with which each is modelled by the light, and by the manner of its emergence from the gloom. But here Mr. Simpson has somewhat less than perfect control in this rather slippery sort of painting. Whistler's example has shown us that unity, even when so gained, is still precarious from the tendency, in the process of drying of the picture (a process which continues for years), for the variety of tone which comes of handling to flatten out, while that which depends on differences of pigment remains. Mr. Simpson's picture, charming as it is, suggests that already something of this sort has happened. Probably when he had just painted it the superficial modelling of the planes of the face seemed a little stronger, and the dark chiselling of the features (the holes, so to speak, tucked away from the light) was thus better supported. The parti pris of the painter makes for brilliant colour, but not for solidity. Playing in slender modulations in the highest registers with a setting of black monotone, his painting has affinities with the music of a drum-and-fife band, and wants ease and fullness and substance. His little still life, The White Lady (3), shows the same want of some stable, preconcerted middle tones, which Mr. Simpson seems to avoid lest they should arrest the continuity and suddenness of his plunge from light to dark; yet had he permitted himself one or two such connexions, he would have avoided painting his figurine (which from its general aspect we take to be of porcelain) with an edge to her skirt suggestive of muslin.

Mr. J. D. Fergusson, whose work is unavoidably recalled by the picture just mentioned, is unfortunately not represented in the present show, and Mr. William Wells, another of the pillars of the Society, fails on this occasion. In the absence of the latter the best landscapes are by Mr. Alfred East, Mr. Gardner Symons, and Mr. A. Streeton. Mr. East's Valley of the Wye (56) is an excellent example of his work, the interest being distributed with considerable adroitness, and (except for a slight want of subtlety in the drawing of the descending slopes as they vanish behind the foreground ridge) with not a little feeling for the plastic possibilities of the theme—and this in a narrow range of pale colour very pleasantly handled. Gainsborough might have been the inspiration of a picture which at a near view is undeniably attractive. At longer range, however, it lacks the pictorial consistency necessary for effectiveness, and we become conscious of repetitions in the design. In his desire to insist on the openness of his foliage throughout, the painter has pierced his masses too frequently, breaking up characteristic forms with smaller detail, more mechanical though introduced at the call of naturalism. Thus broken up, the number of tones at his disposal seems too few, and the picture lacking in depth, because, the forms parallel to the picture plane being elaborately modelled, we naturally ask for a similar elaboration of projection. This fundamental weakness is very cleverly masked, the lightness and confidence of the handling seeming to guarantee for the picture a structure more homogeneous than it actually possesses.

The work of Mr. Symons (35, 139) argues sounder training, but less individual ability. It reflects the better side of current Continental landscape painting, such as, for instance, that of the late Fritz Thaulow. Actually competent within the measure of his ambitions, Mr. Symons will have to introduce additional elements into his art if he is to be differentiated from many others, and of this original research he shows no signs. He is thus a less hopeful phenomenon than Mr. East, whose work, without being very deep, shows a restless activity of mind which still keeps the future to some extent open for him. He has climbed out of such deep ruts that his picture provokes curiosity.

Mr. Arthur Streeton is a new-comer, and the smaller of his contributions, Midday, Grand Canal (21), is a compact and luminous work, nicely related in colour, and pleasantly suggestive in form. His picture of the Salute (19) pretends to greater realization, and shows his deficiencies as a draughtsman. 'The Salute' may belong to a decadent period of architecture, but it is a highly successful and imposing piece of rhetoric, and Mr. Streeton's version of it is wooden and unsympathetic. Of the other landscapes, Mists and Dews of the Morning (8), by Mr. T. F. M. Sheard, achieves actuality at the expense of very unpleasant paint.

The water-colours alternate between a thin and papery particularization of detail which has no relation to art, and the slipshod repetition of current generalization which is only at many removes founded on nature. Amongst such the comparatively logical technique of Mr. Fox Pitt's rough sketch Battersea (275) or Mr. Geoffrey Birkbeck's equally slight Harvest (199) is distinctly refreshing. Mr. Arthur Ellis's Sussex Fold (180) shows some observation of sheep, but is marred by a passage of gaudy colour out of key with the rest of the picture.

PAINTINGS BY MR. ARTHUR STREETON.

NOTHING in this collection at the Alpine Club Gallery is noticeably superior to the better of Mr. Streeton's works already noticed; but the large view of The Rialto (41), if less perfectly balanced, strikes a fresher and stronger note of colour, and displays more forcible handling. Abundant confidence is apparent throughout the exhibition, which shows a painter who is master of an obvious and as yet slightly "painty" brilliance casting on his canvas great surfaces of somewhat monotonously gleaming light, with which his few rich-coloured passages of darker tones contrast harshly, lacking intermediate tones to give variety and subtlety. These dark passages, as in No. 7 or the foreground of No. 14, offer the best fragments of painting on the walls. Venice is shown through the eyes of a sort of modernized Ziem (No. 34 may be mentioned as a typical example). In a sense the result is like the city, but not in the aspect by which we should prefer to remember her. For many tourists, however, the undoubted brightness and confident execution of these sketches may offer the very illusion of Southern sunlight.

JAPANESE COLOUR-PRINTS AND SIR CHARLES HOLROYD'S ETCHINGS.

AT the galleries of the publishing house of Messrs. Goupil & Co. in Bedford Street (not to be confounded with the Goupil Gallery) is a collection of eighteenth-century Japanese prints of great charm and variety. By the enlargement of our European outlook these prints are becoming gradually less exotic, less the affair of specialists. British colour-printing is, alas! untouched by their influence, but the better class of painter is by degrees attaining to a wider conception of pictorial vision, which may in a few years permit us to criticize them as we should contemporary European work, by the nature of their artistic merits, not by their rarity or as curious representations of an alien civilization.

The fact is that for the ordinary visitor of exhibitions the time for detailed analysis is hardly come. The absorbing superiority, in certain directions, of the whole of such a collection as this over anything our own artists accustom us to prevents our distinguishing clearly the internal differences of rank and variety of intention. It is only after some study that there emerges from the mass a type of print of unusually inventive colour, by a designer who treats groups of figures with the fine sense of rhythmic form common to the earlier artists of his race, but with something in his colour of the allusiveness of French impressionism (witness the brilliant rendering of a lamplit balcony against a sunset of the sea in No. 8); and we are thus taught to recognize Harunobu. Certain pictures (14, 16, 19) of extraordinary fairness, like that of spring blossom, in which, as against Harunobu's large feeling for proportion, we are offered surfaces stiff with embroidery, furnish the most characteristic note of Shunchō; while Utamarō—more promptly recognizable with his usually narrow range of subject, his severe restrictions of colour, and a line as generalized as any one's, but of extraordinary swiftness—claims kinship more definitely than the rest with the finest Greek vase painters, whose work has only of recent years been properly appreciated. Toyokuni handled similar themes in less hierarchical fashion—his portraits are more chargés, more things of the theatre; while in some of the work of Yeishi shown in this on the whole excellently selected exhibition we may notice the difference between the virtues of the school and its greater masters. Yeishi displays a line fluent as ever, but a little slippery and merely stylistic, wanting in the tense, momentous quality which the best Japanese work has, and which bespeaks a close and particular study of nature, if different in kind from that to which Europeans are accustomed. In the case of two masters we have no hesitation at all; we can appreciate without any special study of Oriental standards the variety and lavish picturesqueness of the genial Hokusai, and the landscape charm of Hiroshigé, both copiously and splendidly represented in the present exhibition.

But while we establish these elementary distinctions, the work of each master is so various that we are perpetually modifying them, and there is much in Japanese art that is undeniably obscure to us—passages of draughtsmanship (hands above all) which appear freakish, and contrary even to Oriental standards of beauty or expressiveness as we conceive them. If this were not the case, our artists would rival these on their own ground, for after all a man cannot be said to understand the nature of an art if it is beyond his powers to practise it. We therefore welcome such exhibitions as this as offering a much-needed opportunity for studying an art which has long been exploited and catalogued, but as yet hardly understood.

In the gallery adjoining a collection of Sir Charles Holroyd's etchings surprises us by the extent and variety of his work in this medium. It is probable that his best work is still to come, as his development seems to have been delayed by a constant strife between his instincts and his education. The latter has been perhaps as severe and favourable for style as any education obtainable in this country in our day. Sir Charles has benefited by it, but it has, we think, been strongly at variance with a native impulse not, in its raw state, particularly distinguished. This breaks out even now occasionally in a taste for obvious prettiness oddly dissonant with the ecclesiastical subjects, and sometimes wooden heaviness of drawing, imposed upon him by his duty and admiration. Such are the extremes between which he seems to have oscillated throughout his career, with nevertheless a fair proportion of happier intervals when natural powers and training reinforced instead of combating one another. A Secret Society (13) is an early example; the Torre dei Schiavi (48), Adam and his Wife Hid Themselves (63), Dr. Daniel (143), The Gesuati, Venice (91), and The Campanile of S. Pietro in Castello (95), along with sundry studies of trees, may be mentioned as later examples of the fine things which have rewarded an artist to whom the path of well-doing was not always easy. Had he given free rein to his temperament, successes would doubtless have been more frequent; but it is questionable if they would have reached the same level, and certainly by now the artist would have been in full decadence instead of in his prime.

THE RIDLEY ART CLUB.

At the Grafton Galleries an accomplished piece of still life, Roses in Bowl (15), by Mr. E. H. MacAndrew, is the first work that attracts us. Mr. Anning Bell's water-colours (230 and 231), the pastel portraits of Mrs. Helen Bedford (151 and 152), and a dainty invention by Mr. F. Newton Shepard, The Harvest (164), are among the best works. Mr. Dacres Adams draws animals cleverly (186 and 187), but would be better for leaning less heavily on an outline too imitative to bear such conventional stress; and Mr. Norman Garstin sends a picture, The Day after the Dance (49), of some delicacy as to tone values, which we suspect to date from a day when such matters were studied with the fine enthusiasm which attends a new gospel.

SALE.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE sold on March 27th the following pictures. R. Ansdell, The Rescue from the Coming Storm, 115*l.* Vicat Cole, Pangbourne on the Thames, 141*l.* T. S. Cooper, Cattle, Evening, 299*l.*; Approaching Storm, Canterbury meadows, two cows and six sheep by a stream, 152*l.* H. W. B. Davis, Evening Light, 236*l.*; Spring-Time, 157*l.* W. P. Frith and R. Ansdell, The Gamekeeper's Daughter, 189*l.* P. Graham, A Summer's Day in the Highlands, 210*l.*; The Spate, 110*l.* J. F. Herring, The Interior of a Stable, with a white horse, a goat, a dog, a cat and ducks, 189*l.* J. C. Hook, Stand Clear, 141*l.* J. Macwhirter, A Highland Harvest, 147*l.* P. Nasmyth, A Woody Road, near Epping, with a house on the left, peasant and donkey in the foreground, 105*l.* S. E. Waller, Flown, 141*l.* H. Woods, A Venetian Chair-Mender under the Loggia, 120*l.* P. J. Clays, Dutch Fishing Craft, 110*l.* Birket Foster, Crossing the Brook, a view in Surrey, 126*l.* Erskine Nicol, Donnybrook Fair, 399*l.* Sir A. W. Calcott, A View in Holland, with peasants and white horse on a road by the side of a river, 110*l.* W. Collins, Blackberry Gatherers, 126*l.* Constable, Hampstead Heath, 378*l.* J. Holland, The Piazzetta of St. Mark's, Venice, looking across to Santa Maria della Salute, 178*l.* Lawrence, Portrait of a Lady, in red velvet dress trimmed with fur, lace head-dress, 252*l.* E. Blair Leighton, The Foreign Bride, 147*l.* J. Linnell, Returning to the Homestead, 262*l.*; A View in Sussex with a woodman and his family, 336*l.* W. Müller, Carrying the Hay, Showery Weather, valley of Gillingham in the distance, 336*l.*; A River Scene, with a cottage, punt, and figures, 178*l.* Romney, Portrait of a Lady, in white dress and cap, with blue sash, 105*l.*

Among the water-colours sold were Birket Foster, St. Andrews, 131*l.* Copley Fielding, A Coast Scene, with fishing-boats off a harbour, a shrimp in the foreground, 100*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

THE art of Charles Conder receives a double appreciation in The Burlington Magazine for April—first in an illustrated tribute by Mr. Charles Ricketts, and then in the course of a notice of the "Fair Women" Exhibition by Mr. Roger E. Fry. Two fine Persian portraits by Behzad, one of which forms the photogravure frontispiece, are described by Dr. F. R. Martin; Mr. R. L. Hobson begins an elaborate study of the porcelain of the Sung and Yuan dynasties; and Mr. G. F. Hill discusses the wax models for medals in the Rosenheim and Oppenheimer collections. 'Engravings and their States,' by Mr. A. M. Hind; 'The Golden Fleece,' by Mr. A. Van de Put; 'Trecento Pictures in American Collections,' by Mr. Osvald Siren; 'A "Concert at Asolo" after Giorgione,' by Mr. Herbert Cook; and 'A High German Painting at Richmond,' by Mr. Hermann Voss, are other papers of some length; while the contributors of shorter articles and letters include Mr. Weale, Mr. Leveson Gower, Mr. Chamberlain, M. Henry Hymans, and Mr. Andrew Lang (the last replying to the strictures of M. Salomon Reinach in the March number).

A 'CLASSICAL LANDSCAPE' (No. 2287) by George Smith (of Chichester), which has been bequeathed to the National Gallery by Mr. George Derwent Radclyffe, has recently been hung in the West Octagon Room.

GAINSBOROUGH'S 'Portrait of David Middleton,' Surgeon-General to the Army and Surgeon to the Household of George III., has been lent to the Edinburgh Gallery. Another addition to the same Gallery is the 'Albrecht Dürer of Nürnberg' by W. Bell Scott.

THE FINE-ART SOCIETY proposes to hold in July next in New Bond Street an exhibition in connexion with the centenary of Tennyson. It will consist of portraits, MSS., books, relics, views of places connected with Tennyson, and illustrations of his poems. The Society is receiving the support of Lord Tennyson and many others, and will be glad to hear of any of the above objects which owners or artists would be ready to lend.

WE regret to learn that Prof. Aloys Hauser, the well-known picture restorer, died at Munich on March 7th at the age of seventy-eight.

PROF. FRANZ VON REBER, for many years Director of the Munich Gallery, is retiring from that post. It is rumoured that Dr. von Tschudi, Director of the National Gallery at Berlin, is likely to succeed him, though no official announcement on the subject has as yet been made.

A WRITER in the Cicerone (Heft 6) draws attention to the increasing importance of some of the smaller museums in the Rhenish provinces, and reproduces an interesting 'Crucifixion' in the Gallery at München-Gladbach, near Düsseldorf, formerly in the Kramer Collection at Kempen, and ascribed to a Cologne painter of about 1480. The composition certainly recalls the Meister des Marienlebens, but in other respects the writer shows that it is more closely connected with painters of the Netherlands. He dates it about 1500, but points out that in part it appears to have been inspired by the compositions of Rogier van der Weyden, and in part by a group of works which pass under the collective name of Hendrik Bles.

THE sudden death, at the age of fifty-six, of the distinguished architect Prof. Alfred Messel, which is announced from Berlin, inflicts a serious loss on that city. He had been entrusted with the building of the Berlin Museum on the so-called Museumsinsel, and his plans were complete as far as the chief features of the building are concerned.

THE Corporation of Newcastle-on-Tyne has purchased the picture 'Winter Twilight,' by Mr. A. K. Brown. This is the third of his works purchased by English corporations within a year.

A REPLICA of the portrait of Mr. Robert Stewart, Lord Provost of Glasgow 1851-4, by Sir Daniel Macnee, is to be placed in the Glasgow Corporation Art Gallery.

THE death at Meulan is announced of the well-known French landscape painter Victor Vignon, at the age of sixty-one. A conscientious artist of considerable talent, he was at one time popular, but had of late years fallen out of public notice. He was an exhibitor at the Salon of the Société Nationale des Beaux-Arts, and last year sent 'Portraits des trois Demoiselles V.'

DR. DAVID MURRAY delivered yesterday at Edinburgh the first of the Rhind Lectures in Archæology, his subject being 'The Occupation and Use of the Land in Scotland in Early Times.'

THE STOKES MEMORIAL LECTURES delivered last week in Alexandra College, Dublin, by Prof. William Ridgeway, dealt with the early history and archæology of Ireland down to the year 900 A.D. Prof. Ridgeway expressed his belief that in the manufacture of implements Ireland at no time during the Bronze or Iron Age had been dependent upon Britain. All the evidence went to show that the Irish had always had direct relations with the Continent, particularly with Spain and France.

THE CONNOISSEUR PUBLISHING COMPANY will shortly issue a book on 'British Military Prints,' by Mr. Ralph Nevill, author of 'Old Sporting Prints,' and 'French Prints of the Eighteenth Century.'

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

QUEEN'S HALL. — Symphony Concerts.
Queen's Hall Choral Society.

LAST Saturday afternoon M. Vincent d'Indy conducted his Trilogy for Orchestra (after Schiller's 'Wallenstein') at the Symphony Concert at Queen's Hall. The work we noticed a fortnight ago was composed recently, the greater part of the one now in question in 1880, and the earlier tone-poem is the easier to grasp. Each section has a brief superscription: 'Wallenstein's Camp,' 'Max and Thekla,' and 'The Death of Wallenstein.' The first part gives a graphic tone-picture of the general's camp, especially of the bustle and excitement, though little is made of the theme presenting the sermon of the Capuchin friar. In the second section there is some clever and effective writing, though lacking in strong feeling. There are, too, many impressive moments in the final section, which, however, is not entirely convincing. The composer, an excellent conductor, gave, with the help of the Queen's Hall Orchestra, a most successful interpretation of his clever work.

Madame Schumann-Heink sang with skill the recitative and rondo "Non più di fiori" from Mozart's 'La Clemenza di

Tito,' the obbligato part for corno di bassetto being well played by Mr. F. Gomez. She was also afterwards heard in Schubert's 'Die junge Nonne,' 'Der Tod und das Mädchen,' and 'Der Erlkönig,' the accompaniments of which were scored by Liszt, Mottl, and Berlioz respectively. The colouring in all three was good, especially in the first; but, after all, the original pianoforte accompaniments are more effective.

A first concert was given by the new Queen's Hall Choral Society on Tuesday evening. This choir, 250 in number, has been formed and trained by Mr. Franco Leoni, and the voices are of good quality and well balanced. The programme included three novelties: a cantata 'Ulysses and the Sirens,' for soli, chorus, and orchestra, by the French composer M. Paul Puget; a 'Scottish Rhapsody,' for chorus, soli, and orchestra, by Mr. Hubert Bath; and a smoothly written 'Forest Song,' for chorus and soprano solo, by Mr. Erik Meyer-Helmund. In the first the music, though for the most part conventional, is gratefully written for the voices, and reflects the spirit of the poem by M. Paul Collin, of which an English version by Mr. F. E. Weatherly was used. Mr. Bath's setting of Robert Buchanan's humorous poem 'The Wedding of Shon Maclean' proved extremely clever. In the opening symphony, in the delicate poetical treatment of Shon's theme, and in other passages, a fine contrast is obtained to the humorous music, in which there is plenty of Scotch colour. An admirable rendering was given of the work under the composer's direction. The soloists were Miss Agnes Nicholls and Mr. Peter Dawson.

Laurent de Rillé's unaccompanied male quartet 'The Retreat' was most effectively sung. In the Puget work both choir and Mr. Leoni as conductor seemed over-anxious, but this was only natural. We hope that this new choir will revive many neglected choral works, and also introduce judiciously selected novelties.

ALBERT HALL.—Bach's Mass in B minor. THE programme of the final concert of the Royal Albert Choral Society last Thursday week was devoted to Bach's Mass in B minor, and in many respects an impressive performance was given of that wonderful work, under the direction of Sir Frederick Bridge. The high notes of the sopranos were somewhat thin, also in passages to be sung softly there was not always sufficient delicacy; on the whole, however, the choral singing was very fine. The "Sanctus" (not taken at a rate robbing it of its grandeur) and the choruses which follow were admirably rendered. Praise, too, must be given to the soloists, Misses Gleeson-White and Maria Yelland, and Messrs. Lloyd Chandos and Charles Knowles, although—partly owing to the huge building, partly to insufficient rehearsal—most of the solos did not produce their full effect. The same minute attention to phrasing, expression, and balance of tone between voice and instruments ought to be paid to these solos as is given to those in modern works; but for that there cannot be sufficient time at ordinary rehearsals. As matters now stand—and we are speaking not only of the performance in question, but also of the general style of interpreting Bach's solos—one feels that a conductor is largely occupied in preventing a misunderstanding between the singer and the frequently complex accompaniment.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Reminiscences of my Life. By Charles Santley. (Pitman & Sons.)—Sir Charles Santley in the course of a long life must have seen and heard much well worth recording, yet we confess that his reminiscences are somewhat disappointing. They are lively, and often amusing; but for the most part not quite what one would expect from so distinguished an artist. His remarks about the Pyne and Harrison English Opera Company, and some of his references to musicians who are mere names to the present generation, have a certain quaint interest; but we find no references to Verdi, Brahms, or Liszt, to name three important men of the second half of the nineteenth century. Then, as Santley sang in the first London performance of 'The Flying Dutchman,' he was bound to say something about Wagner's operas; but one would have liked something more serious than he supplies. His impression of Wagner is that "his evil genius led him down to the musical Styx instead of up to the region of Celestial harmony."

Our author possesses a notebook which belonged to Mendelssohn, containing water-colour and pencil drawings, sketches of songs, &c. Of a song, and a pencil drawing of Ludgate Hill from that book, facsimiles are given among the numerous illustrations in these 'Reminiscences.'

Musical Gossip.

THE first performance of a new amateur operatic society took place in Dublin on Monday, under the conductorship of Dr. Esposito, when Verdi's 'Ernani' was given with great success. The orchestral music was finely rendered by the band of the Dublin Orchestral Society.

JOSEPH JOACHIM's letters are to be published next year under the editorship of his son, Dr. Johannes Joachim, and his old friend Prof. Andreas Moser. All who possess letters written by Joachim are requested to communicate with the firm of Julius Bard at Berlin.

IN connexion with the Mendelssohn Centenary, the correspondence between the composer and his friend Karl Klingemann has been published by the G. D. Baedeker firm at Essen. We may also mention the humorous 'Musikantenprugelei' for two choirs of male voices, and the 'Diogenes' Canon, which Prof. Dr. Albert Kopfermann found in one of the fifty volumes in the Berlin Library which contain Mendelssohn's compositions, nearly all in his handwriting. The above-mentioned musical jokes were published in the February "Mendelssohn" number of Die Musik.

ON March 19th, 1859, Gounod's 'Faust' was produced at the Paris Théâtre Lyrique. The work has since been performed at Paris, 1,336 times. The jubilee of the production was celebrated at the Opéra on March 12th, the work being given with the following cast: Mlles. Brozia, Courbières, and Goulan-court, and MM. Muratore, Journet, Rigaux, and Chappelon.

MR. ROBERT ARTHUR will begin a four weeks' season of Italian opera at the Coronet Theatre on April 26th.

THE Dresden String Quartet (MM. Emil Steglich, Bruno Eichhorn, Arthur Eller, and J. Fleischer) will give two chamber concerts at Bechstein Hall on April 30th and May 3rd, at which works by Prof. Felix Draeseke and Mr. A. M. Barton will be produced.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

Sen.	Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
—	Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
—	Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
Wed.	London Symphony Orchestra, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	New Symphony Orchestra, 9, Queen's Hall.
Fri.	Queen's Hall Orchestra, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Concert, 3.30, Crystal Palace.
—	Royal Choral Society, 7, Royal Albert Hall.
—	Sacred Concert, 7.30, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

KING'S, HAMMERSMITH. — Ibsen's 'Master-Builder.'

It needs the crispest acting to prevent 'The Master-Builder' from depressing the spirits or provoking the ridicule of an English audience. We as a people are not fond of symbols in the theatre, or, if we are to have them, they must be at once transparent and sublime, and in this particular piece Ibsen has employed symbolism of a crude and exasperating sort. Yet there is a curiously impressive quality about the drama which can scarcely be defined except by detail. 'The Master-Builder' is the oddest mixture of fantasy and parochialism, of consummate characterization and violent melodrama, of sound thought and pretentious cant. This is the play which contains the fine phrase about "the younger generation knocking at the door," and embodies the idea expressed by that phrase. In this play also is to be discovered one of the most vital of Ibsen's feminine creations—Hilda Wangel, of the restless energy and "robust conscience," who is so ardent in her youthfulness, so exacting in her idealism. Nowhere else does the playwright contrast more forcibly the confidence and cruelty of the young and the disillusionment and timidity of their elders. Yet at the same time it is in this drama that a heroine finds the misfortunes of others "frightfully thrilling," and raises a pæan of joy over the death of a man whom she has goaded into undertaking a task beyond his powers; it is here that a mother can refer philosophically to her loss of two children in a fire, and be inconsolable over the simultaneous destruction of "nine lovely dolls."

A play so full of naïveté requires not only vigour, but also inspiration, from its interpreters, if it is to make a strong appeal. Hilda must be presented as a magnetic personality; Solness, the master-builder, must take himself with infinite seriousness. When Miss Elizabeth Robins and Mr. Herbert Waring assumed these parts years ago, they were able to secure such an effect. It cannot be said that their success was repeated by Miss Jessica Solomon and her colleagues in the revival given last Tuesday afternoon at the King's, Hammersmith. Here we had good intentions and moderate achievement, acting that never created illusion. Miss Solomon's performance was intelligent, Mr. Rathmell Wilson's diction evinced a feeling for rhythm; but neither player carried us out of ourselves, or could make us forget that we were inside a theatre. So Ibsen did not get his due.

Dramatic Gossip.

THE only licensed version of 'Salome' will be seen at the Coronet next Monday. Written by the Hon. Eleanor Norton, with music by Mr. Robert Hilton and Mr. Granville Bantock, it will be played by the same company that appeared in it for a six months' run in Berlin. It will follow a revival of Lytton's 'Richelieu,' with Mr. Robert Hilton as the Cardinal.

FOR their six weeks' Shakespearean season at the Court Theatre (which opens on Easter Monday with two performances of 'As You Like It') Mr. Gerald Lawrence and Miss Fay Davis have engaged a strong company. Mr. William Haviland will play Touchstone, Shylock, Mercutio, Malvolio, and Don Pedro; and Mrs. E. H. Brooke the Nurse in 'Romeo and Juliet.' The company also includes Miss Esmé Hubbard, Miss Viola Holland, and Miss Esmé Beringer. Sixteenth-century Flemish tapestries will enclose the stage, while the incidental music will be under the direction of Mr. W. Bell-Porter, late musical director at the Shakespeare Memorial Theatre, Stratford.

R. C. CARTON'S new play, which is to be produced by Mr. Weedon Grossmith at the Criterion Theatre on the 13th inst., is to be called 'Mr. Preedy and the Countess.' Mr. Grossmith will represent a partner in an emporium, Miss Compton a countess, and Mr. Vane-Tempest her second husband. The scene is laid throughout in a flat at South Kensington.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—B. M.—C. J.—W. L. M.—W. J.—W. T. L.—Received.

G. M. P.—See notice above.

WE cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

WE do not undertake to give the value of books, china, pictures, &c.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
AUTHORS' AGENTS	394
BELL & SONS	420
BISHOP'S VARALETES	422
CATALOGUES	394
CHATTO & WINDUS	424
DUCKWORTH & CO.	397
EDUCATIONAL	393
ESSEX HOUSE PRESS	398
EXHIBITIONS	393
GREVEL & CO.	422
HEINEMANN	396
INSURANCE COMPANIES	422
LANE	423
LONGMANS & CO.	397
MACLEHOSE & SONS	423
MACMILLAN & CO.	397, 398
MAGAZINES, &c.	423
MISCELLANEOUS	393
PAUL, TRENCH & CO.	395
PICARD	396
PRINTERS	394
PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS	393
SALES BY AUCTION	394
SHIPPING	422
SITUATIONS VACANT	393
SITUATIONS WANTED	393
SONNENSCHN & CO.	396
TYPE-WRITERS, &c.	393
WARD & LOCK	421
WITHERBY & CO.	398

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

JUST PUBLISHED. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

ATHLETIC GAMES IN THE EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

By GERTRUDE DUDLEY.

Director of the Women's Department of Physical Education, Chicago University, and FRANCES A. KELLOR.

TWO NEW DRAMAS IN VERSE.

Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net each.

LANCELOT AND ELAINE.

A Play in Five Acts.

By MORLEY STEYNOR.

LANCELOT and GUENEVERE.

A Play in a Prologue and Four Acts.

By MORLEY STEYNOR.

THE CHILDREN'S BOOK FOR EASTER.

NOW READY, crown 4to, 2s. 6d. net.

EASTER EGGS. An Easter Idyll for Children by CHRISTOPH VON SCHMID, with many Illustrations in Colour and Black and White by Miss M. V. WHEELHOUSE, and special Binding and End-Papers.

"An ideal Easter gift for the children."

MR. CLEMENT SHORTER in the Sphere.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY.

Post 8vo, with 48 Illustrations and a Map. 7s. 6d. net.

ALASKA, THE GREAT COUNTRY.

By ELLA HIGGINSON.

In this volume Miss Higginson, whose writings are well known in America, tells the story of the growth of Alaska, for which at present little-known country she predicts a great future. The numerous illustrations are a special feature of the book.

ROME AT EASTER.

Fcap. 8vo, 2s. net.

ROMAN PICTURE GALLERIES.

A Guide and Handbook to all the Picture Galleries in the Eternal City.

THE

ART GALLERIES OF EUROPE.

Each in one volume, cloth, gilt tops, with numerous Full-Page Illustrations and a Plan, crown 8vo, 6s. net.

THE ART OF THE NATIONAL GALLERY.

By JULIA DE WOLF ADDISON.

THE ART OF THE LOUVRE.

By MARY KNIGHT POTTER.

THE ART OF THE VATICAN.

By MARY KNIGHT POTTER.

THE ART OF THE PITTI PALACE.

By JULIA DE WOLF ADDISON.

THE ART OF THE VENICE ACADEMY.

By MARY KNIGHT POTTER.

THE ART OF THE DRESDEN GALLERY.

By JULIA DE WOLF ADDISON.

THE ART OF THE NETHERLAND GALLERIES.

By DAVID C. PREYER.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

WARD, LOCK & CO.'S

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NEW SIX-SHILLING FICTION.

SARAH TULDON'S LOVERS Orme Agnus

"Sarah Tuldon is a splendid central figure round whom are grouped many others, mostly simple country folk, but each one distinct and interesting and perfectly natural. Around them spreads the Dorset landscape, fresh and fragrant, a charming setting of a story full of grace and charm."

Westminster Gazette.

THE LONG ARM E. Phillips Oppenheim

"There is no story-teller living who can be more surely relied upon than Mr. Oppenheim for conceiving a daring plot and then working it out with such ingenuity. 'The Long Arm' is a clever story, which no one will lay down till every line is read."—World.

A CRIME ON CANVAS Fred M. White

"There is sufficient of mystery in this story to stock half a dozen ordinary romances."—Sheffield Independent.

THE SIN OF ALISON DERING L. G. Moberly

"The plot of this story is cleverly conceived and well carried out. Miss Moberly writes with great charm and skill, and the reader is not likely to put down the book until the tangle is finally cleared up. As a character-study, the figure of Alison Dering is drawn with considerable insight."

Financial Times.

THE DUKE IN THE SUBURBS Edgar Wallace

"Mr. Wallace is at his best in the broad spirit of comedy, and his humour is always infectious."—Yorkshire Post.

PURPLE AND HOMESPUN Austin Fryers

"A most entertaining and readable story."—Aberdeen Free Press.

MONEY Marie Connor Leighton

"Marie Connor Leighton's 'Money' will provide all that can be expected—and more. The amazing fertility of invention is undeniable."

Daily Express.

A POACHED PEERAGE Sir William Magnay

"The book is written in a style delightfully fresh and natural, and does not contain a dull page. It is rich in striking situations, strong dramatic power, and a keen sense of humour, and is one the reader would fain finish at a single sitting."—Irish Independent.

THE SOCIALIST Guy Thorne

"Mr. Thorne does nothing by halves. He thrilled us by showing us the possibilities of the extinction of the Christian religion. He now shows us what a force Christian Socialism might be if only it were inspired. Accordingly he packs 'The Socialist' with rousing incident."

Liverpool Post.

HIS FATHER'S HONOUR David Christie Murray

"As we know from 'Rainbow Gold' the late Mr. Christie Murray was capable of really fine work, and in 'His Father's Honour' we have the work of a skilled writer."—Morning Leader.

SIR MORECAMBE'S MARRIAGE Florence Warden

"Miss Warden has a task quite to her talent and to her liking, the book being without a dull page and well up to the standard of 'The House on the Marsh.'"—Newcastle Journal.

A BID FOR LOYALTY James Blyth

"Mr. Blyth is to be congratulated on this powerful and original work. It is one of the best novels of the season."—Manchester Courier.

PRINCE KARL A. C. Gunter

"Amusing—almost every line of it."—Sportsman.

SHILLING GUIDE-BOOKS.

Fcap. 8vo, cloth, round corners.

WITH MAPS AND PLANS AND MANY ILLUSTRATIONS.

ENGLAND AND WALES.

Aldeburgh and the Suffolk Coast.
Bangor and North Wales.
Bath, Wells, Glastonbury.
Bexhill and District.
Bideford, Barnstaple, &c.
Bognor, Chichester, Selsey.
Bournemouth and District.
Bridlington and Filey.
Brighton and Hove.
Bristol and Environs.
Broadstairs and N.E. Kent.
Buxton and District.
Canterbury and N.E. Kent.
Channel Islands.
Clevedon.
Clifton, Bristol, and District.
Colwyn Bay and North Wales.
Cromer, Sheringham, &c.
Dartmoor.
Dawlish and S.E. Devon.
Deal, Walmer, &c.
Dover, St. Margaret's Bay, &c.
Dovercourt, Harwich, &c.
Eastbourne, Seaford, &c.
English Lake District.
Exeter and S.E. Devon.
Exmouth and District.
Falmouth and S. Cornwall.
Felixstowe and District.
Folkestone, Hythe, &c.
Harrogate, Ripon, &c.
Hastings, St. Leonards, &c.
Herne Bay, Whitstable, &c.
Ilfracombe and N. Devon.
Isle of Man.
Isle of Wight.
Leamington, Warwick, &c.
Littlehampton.

Liverpool, Birkenhead, &c.
Llandrindod Wells and District.
Llandudno and N. Wales.
London and Environs.
Lowestoft and District.
Lyme Regis.
Lynton and Lynmouth.
Malvern and District.
Margate.
Matlock and District.
Minehead, Exmoor, &c.
Newquay and N. Cornwall.
Nottingham and District.
Penzance and W. Cornwall.
Plymouth and S.W. Devon.
Portsmouth and District.
Ramsgate, Sandwich, &c.
Rhyl and North Wales.
Scarborough and District.
Sherwood Forest, Nottingham, &c.
Sidmouth, Seaton, &c.
Southsea and District.
Southwold.
Stratford-upon-Avon.
Swanage.
Teignmouth.
Tenby and South Wales.
Thames, The, from Putney to Cricklade.
Torquay, Paignton, &c.
Wales, North (Northern Section).
Wales, North (Southern Section).
Wales, South.
Weston-super-Mare.
Weymouth and District.
Whitby and District.
Worthing and S.W. Sussex.
Wye Valley.
Yarmouth and the Broads.

SCOTLAND.

Aberdeen and District.
Edinburgh and District.
Glasgow and the Clyde.

Highlands and Islands.
Inverness and District.
Oban and the Western Highlands.

IRELAND.

Antrim, Portrush, Giant's Causeway, &c.
Belfast and District.
Cork, Glengariff, Bantry Bay, &c.

Donegal Highlands.
Dublin and County Wicklow.
Killarney and South-West Ireland.

HALF-CROWN SERIES.

These Volumes are issued in superior Cloth Binding, with many Maps, and Street Plans of the principal Cities.

Belgium.
Holland.
London and Environs, with complete
The London Guide is also issued in uniform
1s. edition.

Paris and Environs.
The Paris Guide is also issued in the uniform 1s. edition, with Plan of the City only.
Switzerland.

OTHERS IN PREPARATION.

Shipping.

P. & O.

PLEASURE CRUISES FROM MARSEILLES.

(Rail and Steamship connexions from London.)

No. 3.—April 22 to May 20.
VENICE, DALMATIA,
CORFU, NAPLES,
SICILY, VILLEFRANCHE, &c.
Fares from 30 Guineas.

No. 4.—May 21 to June 12.
NAPLES, ALGIERS, LISBON, AND LONDON.
Fares from 20 Guineas.

Special Terms for Cruises 3 & 4 in conjunction.
From London and Leith.

No. 5.—July 1 to July 27.
SPITZBERGEN, NORWAY, &c.
Fares from 30 Guineas.

No. 6.—July 29 to August 11.

No. 7.—August 13 to August 26.
THE NORWEGIAN FJORDS.
Fares from 12 Guineas.

BY

P. & O. CRUISING YACHT VECTIS,
6,000 tons, 6,000 h.p.
For Passage, Illustrated Handbooks, and all information,
apply Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, Northumberland Avenue, W.C., or 122, Leadenhall
Street, E.C., London.

Insurance Companies.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS, SICKNESS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY, BURGLARY, AND
FIDELITY GUARANTEE RISKS

INSURED AGAINST BY THE

RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE CO.

Capital (fully subscribed), £1,000,000. Claims paid, £5,600,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

A. VIAN, Secretary.

NATIONAL PROVIDENT
INSTITUTION
FOR MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.
Established 1835.
ASSURANCE AND INVESTMENT.

Write for Leaflet on net cost of Endowment Assurances,
48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C.
Applications for Agencies invited.

NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE
SOCIETY, LTD.
Founded 1797. HEAD OFFICE: NORWICH.

LONDON OFFICES:
50, Fleet Street, E.C.
71 and 72, King William Street, E.C.
Norwich Union Chambers (Entrance, St. James's Street), Piccadilly, W.
1, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.
26, Charles Street, St. James's, S.W.
81, Edgware Road, W.

Claims Paid £22,000,000.
Applications for Agencies invited.

Situations Vacant—continued.
UNIVERSITY OF BIRMINGHAM.
(FACULTY OF ARTS.)
PROFESSORSHIP OF HISTORY.
The COUNCIL invites applications for the CHAIR OF HISTORY.
Stipend 600l. per annum. The successful Candidate will be required to enter on his duties on OCTOBER 1, 1909.
Applications, with full particulars of Academic distinctions and appointments, and published work, together with the names of not less than three References, should be sent to the undersigned on or before MAY 8. Sixty-five copies should be sent.
Testimonials are not required.
Further particulars may be obtained from
GEO. H. MORLEY, Secretary.

BIBLIOGRAPHY OF
THE RIGHT HON. W. E. GLADSTONE.
NOTES AND QUERIES
for DECEMBER 10 and 24, 1892, and JANUARY 7 and 21, 1893
CONTAINS A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF MR. GLADSTONE.
Price of the Four Numbers, 1s. 4d.; or free by post, 1s. 6d.
JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS
Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

DO YOUR FEET ACHE? If so, use Marshall's
Foot Tonic "PEDESTRIAN." For all relaxed, swollen, tender conditions its action is simply magical; it cools, comforts, and enables the foot to resist boot pressure. A trial will convince. 1s. 3d. and
2s. 6d. per bottle, post free.—MARSHALL & CO., 70A, Basinghall
Street, E.C.

HIGHEST AWARDS.

CORK, 1883. LIVERPOOL, 1886. PARIS, 1886. ADELAIDE, 1887.
PARIS, 1889. CHICAGO, 1893. PARIS, 1900. ST. LOUIS, 1904.
FRANCO-BRITISH, 1903.

OLD BUSHMILLS.

Have you tried this—the Prize-Winning Whisky?

From all Wine Merchants.

Address of nearest Agent sent on application.

"OLD BUSHMILLS" DISTILLERY CO., LTD.,
20, Mark Lane, E.C.

THE GOUTY AGE.

HOW URIC ACID AFFECTS THE MAN OR WOMAN OF FORTY.

Some of the worst cases of gout and its allied complaints begin about the age of forty. In such cases the signs of incipient gout have not been recognized and properly treated during the earlier years; the gouty habit has become fixed and the uric acid now asserts itself in full force as the result of diminished vitality and the less active habits of life which begin to be indulged in at this age.

During the early years when the uric acid is impregnating all parts of the system it may set up no other symptoms than those which are commonly associated with ordinary dyspepsia. In many cases, however, these dyspeptic symptoms are attended or followed by occasional attacks of dull aches or pains in various parts of the body, but these do not remain for very long, as a rule, and being usually in evidence during wet or changeable weather, or when the gouty subject has been exposed to damp or cold for any length of time, or subjected to over-exertion, they are rarely attributed to a growing goutiness of the system.

In some cases small nodules appear under the skin during the comparatively early stages of the gouty habit, these being generally present on the outer rim of the ear or upon the eyelids, while attendant symptoms are irritation between the fingers and in the palms.

TO CORRECT THE GOUTY HABIT.

What is required in every case of gouty origin—whether for the earliest gouty signs or the most advanced case of gout—is an eliminant which has the power not only to penetrate to the furthest extremities of the system and eliminate therefrom all the excess uric acid and the deposits of urate of soda which are the result of the presence of the uric acid, but which also has the power to check the gouty habit itself without having any deleterious influence upon the system. Bishop's Varalettes fulfil these important requirements perfectly.

It cannot be too strongly urged upon gouty subjects that Bishop's Varalettes are positively essential to their well-being, to the avoiding of all the minor symptoms in the earlier years of the gouty habit, and to the prevention and relief of any of the severe ailments which in later years the gouty tendency entails if wrongly treated or neglected.

Gout, rheumatism, and rheumatic gout—with their acute pain, swollen and inflamed joints and stiff muscles—always demand the use of Bishop's Varalettes, as also do the allied ailments of gouty eczema (affecting the skin), lumbago (persistent and intense pain in the loins), sciatica (acute pain extending from hips down thigh to knee, often causing lameness), stone and gravel (crystalline uratic deposits causing agonizing pains and prostrating illness), neuritis (numbness or tingling in the muscles of the arm, developing into very severe pain), and suppressed gout (general discomfort, lowness of spirits, poor appetite, and nervous irritability).

IF YOU ARE A GOUTY SUBJECT write to-day to Alfred Bishop, Limited, manufacturing chemists (established 1857), of 48, Spelman Street, London, N.E., for a copy of their booklet describing gouty ailments. It clearly explains how Bishop's Varalettes act as a preventive and remedy for this very prevalent series of complaints. An authoritative dietary for all gouty people is included. When writing please ask for Booklet V., and a copy will be forwarded post free.

Bishop's Varalettes are effervescent, tasteless, and dissolve immediately. They may be taken in any beverage, but preferably in plain or aerated water. They are sold by all chemists, in 1s. vials, 2s. bottles, and 5s. cases, the latter being the twenty-five days' treatment. They may also be had direct from the Makers, whose address is given above.

Bishop's Varalettes may be had of the leading chemists in every country. Our principal general agents abroad are:—
AUSTRALIA.—Potter & Birks, 1½, Macquarie Place, Sydney, N.S.W.
INDIA.—Mr. W. Moore, c/o Grindlay Groom & Co., Bombay.
UNITED STATES.—Lehn & Fink, 120, William Street, New York.
SPAIN.—Foye y Gimenez, Calle Gerona, 4 pral, Barcelona.
FRANCE.—Roberts et Cie, 5, Rue de la Paix, Paris.
RUSSIA.—Mr. F. Bremel, Serpoukhovskaya Street, 17, St. Petersburg.

H. GREVEL & CO.'S PUBLICATIONS

JUST PUBLISHED.

RICHARD TO MINNA WAGNER

270 LETTERS TO HIS FIRST WIFE

Translated by WM. ASHTON ELLIS. With 2 Portraits.

2 vols. demy 8vo, cloth, 1l. 4s. net.

'Wagner's Letters to Minna,' have created a profound sensation in Germany, and will be welcomed throughout the whole world as a human document of the first magnitude.

These remarkable letters far surpass in interest even the 'Letters to Mathilde Wesendonck,' and generally tend to correct the fallacies current concerning the relations which prevailed between the master and his first wife.

33, KING STREET, COVENT GARDEN, LONDON, W.C.

Magazines, &c.THE NINETEENTH CENTURY AND AFTER.
APRIL.

THE NAVAL SITUATION. By Sir William H. White, K.C.B., late Director of Naval Construction.
A RUDE AWAKENING. By Col. The Earl of Erroll, K.T.
GERMAN ARMAMENTS AND THE LIBERAL GOVERNMENT. By J. Ellis Barker.
THE UNIONIST PARTY AND ITS FISCAL SORE. By Lord Hugh Cecil.
FORTY-FOUR YEARS AT THE COLONIAL OFFICE. By Sir William Baillie Hamilton, K.C.M.G. C.B.
THE GREAT INQUEST. By J. A. R. Marriott.
THE DEFAMERS OF SHAKESPEARE. Concluded. By Sir Edward Sullivan, Bart.
NATIONAL AFFORESTATION. By the Right Hon. Sir Herbert Maxwell, Bart.
SOME PERSONAL EXPERIENCES OF THE GREAT EARTH-QUAKE. By the Hon. Alexander Nelson Hood (Duke of Bronte).
THE NEW ERA IN ECONOMIC HISTORY. By Moreton Frewen.
SLEDGING AS A METHOD OF EXPLORING THE ARCTIC OCEAN. By Alfred H. Harrison.
THE TAXATION OF LAND VALUES: a Reply to Mr. Harold Cox. By John Orr.
QUO VADIS? A Prospect in Indian Politics. By Sir Bampfylde Fuller, K.C.S.I. C.I.E., first Lieutenant-Governor of Eastern Bengal.
London: SPOTTISWOODE & CO., Ltd., 5, New Street Square.

CONTEMPORARY REVIEW.

Edited by Sir PERCY BUNTING.

No. 520. APRIL. 2s. 6d.

THE BUDGET AND THE SITUATION. By Harold Spender.
THE GERMAN NAVAL CASE. By Michel.
THE POOR LAW REPORT. By The Rev. Canon Barnett.
AN EARLY CHRISTIAN HYMN-BOOK. By Dr. J. Rendel Harris.
SIGNOR TITTONI AND THE FOREIGN POLICY OF ITALY. By Romanus.
WEISMANN'S THEORY OF HEREDITY. By F. Palmer Bennell.
MILTON'S GOD AND MILTON'S SATAN. By P. T. Forsyth, D.D.
KISSING THE BOOK. By Judge Parry.
FROM RUSTCHUK TO BELGRADE. By Isabel Armstrong.
THE OLD STORY. By R. Barry O'Brien.
FOREIGN AFFAIRS. By Dr. E. J. Dillon.
POEM: WIND. By Geoffrey Winthrop Young.
London: HORACE MARSHALL & SON.

APRIL NUMBER READY, 2s. 6d. net; 2s. 9d. post free.

THE HIBBERT JOURNAL.

Principal Contents.

CREDO.
IS THERE A COMMON CHRISTIANITY? Prof. J. H. Muirhead.
CHRISTIANITY AMONG THE RELIGIONS. John Wright Buckham, D.D.
ISLAM, THE RELIGION OF COMMON SENSE. Ibn Ishak.
THE MESSAGE OF MR. G. K. CHESTERTON. Rev. John A. Hutton, M.A.
THE PHILOSOPHY OF BERGSON. Prof. William James.
THE SOCIAL CONSCIENCE OF THE FUTURE. II. The New Righteousness. Miss Vida Scudder.
THE INSUFFICIENCY OF SOCIAL RIGHTEOUSNESS AS A MORAL IDEAL. Rev. P. T. Forsyth, D.D.
THE OVER-EMPHASIS OF SIN. Rev. Alexander Brown.
THE MESSAGE OF MODERN MATHEMATICS TO THEOLOGY. Prof. Cassius J. Keyser, Ph.D.
CHRISTIANITY AND THE EMPIRE IN CHINA. Rev. P. J. MacLagan, M.A. D.Phil.
VARIATIONS BETWEEN MATTHEW AND MARK. Rev. B. H. Alford, M.A.
ON TWO DISLOCATIONS IN JOHN'S GOSPEL. Rev. F. J. Paul.
With a number of Discussions, Signed Reviews, and Bibliography of Recent Theological and Philosophical Literature.
WILLIAMS & NORGATE, 14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842) 4, Catherine Street, London, W.C., APRIL 3, contains:—
A PLEBISCITE ON THE REGISTRATION OF ARCHITECTS.

THE GENERAL POST OFFICE BUILDINGS (with numerous diagrams).
MODERN BRITISH SCULPTURE (Institute of Architects).
THE ARCHITECTURAL ASSOCIATION.
THE CONCRETE INSTITUTE.
ASSOCIATION OF MUNICIPAL AND COUNTY ENGINEERS.

ILLUSTRATIONS:
THE VICTORIA MEMORIAL HALL, Calcutta (extra large illustration);
MESSRS. SELFRIDGE'S PREMISES, OXFORD STREET;
APSE, S. STEFANO, BOLOGNA;
FOUNTAIN IN A COURTYARD, BOLOGNA.

From Offices as above (4d. by post 4½d.), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all News-agents.

IN THE PRESS.

SANGIMIGNANO DI VAL D'ELSA,
IN TUSCANY.

An Art-Historical Monograph.

JEAN CARLYLE GRAHAM and ELIZABETH M. DERBISHIRE.
With 27 Pen-and-Ink Drawings, many hitherto Unpublished Documents from Tuscan State Archives, a Bibliography, and numerous Copyright Photographs of Frescoes.
ERMANNO LOESCHER & CO. (W. Regenbergl), Rome.

SECOND EDITION. Price 2s. 6d. net.

CATHOLICISM ON A PHILOSOPHICAL BASIS.

By B. C. NIXON, M. E. UNDERDOWN, and H. CUNLIFFE.
SWAN SONNENSCHNEIN, London; and of all Booksellers.

Messrs.

James MacLehose & Sons.LIFE OF ROBERT HERBERT STORY, D.D. LL.D.,

Late Principal and Vice-Chancellor of the University of Glasgow

By his DAUGHTERS.

With Portraits and Illustrations.

1 vol. demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. [This day.]

"This memoir will be read by many with glad surprise. The record is told in this attractive memoir, in a bright and interesting way, every page almost being lightened up by a witty letter, a pointed utterance, or a humorous story."—Glasgow Herald.

THE RIVER CLYDE AND THE CLYDE BURGHS

The City of Glasgow and its old relations with Rutherglen, Renfrew, Paisley, Dumbarton, Port Glasgow, Greenock, Rothesay, and Irvine.

By the late Sir JAMES D. MARWICK, LL.D., Town Clerk of Glasgow.

With a Portrait of the Author and many Illustrations of the Clyde and its Neighbourhood from Early Engravings and Maps.

1 vol. crown 4to, 28s. net. [This day.]

"This is a remarkable volume. It is a rich mine of information both in respect to the special subjects with which it deals and in connexion with the industrial and commercial history of the country."—Glasgow Herald.

ESSAYS ON LITERATURE

By the late EDWARD CAIRD, LL.D. D.C.L., formerly Master of Balliol.

New Edition. Post 8vo, 5s. net.

REGINALD PECOCK'S BOOK OF FAITH

A Fifteenth-Century Theological Tractate.

Edited from the MS. in the Library of Trinity College, Cambridge, with an Introductory Essay by J. L. MORISON, M.A., Professor of History in Queen's University, Kingston, Canada.

Post 8vo, 5s. net.

ON THE PHILOSOPHY OF HISTORY

An Address delivered to the Historical Society, University of Glasgow, Jan. 8, 1909.

By WILLIAM PATON KER, LL.D., Professor of English Literature, University College, London.

Demy 8vo, 1s. net.

THE REFORM OF THE HOUSE OF LORDS

With a Criticism of the Report of the Select Committee of December 2, 1908

By WILLIAM SHARP McKECHNIE, M.A. LL.B. D.Phil.,

Lecturer on Constitutional Law and History in Glasgow University.

Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

"This is a remarkable little book, and merits reading by any one—that is, or ought to be, every one—who follows the discussion upon the position of the House of Lords in the Constitution."—Morning Post.

Glasgow: JAMES MACLEHOSE & SONS, Publishers to the University.

London, New York, and Toronto: MACMILLAN & CO., LTD.

MR. JOHN LANE'S NEW BOOKS

NOW READY.

THE LOVE LETTERS
OF
THOMAS CARLYLE
AND JANE WELSH

2 vols., 25s. net.

Edited by ALEXANDER CARLYLE, Nephew of Thomas Carlyle, Editor of 'New Letters and Memorials of Jane Welsh Carlyle.'

LADIES FAIR AND FRAIL

Sketches of the Demi-Monde during the Eighteenth Century.

By HORACE BLEACKLEY. With numerous Portraits reproduced from contemporary sources. Demy 8vo 12s. 6d. net.

Taller.—"An interesting and most fascinating chronicle of the lighter side of the Eighteenth Century."

UNDER PETRAIA:

With Some Saunterings.

By the Author of 'In a Tuscan Garden.' With Illustrations. Crown 8vo. 5s. net.

Academy.—"We can imagine no pleasanter preparation for a leisurely holiday in Northern Italy than the perusal of this volume."

IN RE SHAKESPEARE:

Beeching v. Greenwood. Rejoinder on behalf of Defendant.

By G. G. GREENWOOD, Author of 'The Shakespeare Problem Re-stated.' Crown 8vo. 2s. 6d. net.

ROYAL PALACES OF SPAIN

An Historical and Descriptive Account of the Seven Principal Palaces of the Spanish Kings.

Profusely illustrated. [The Spanish Series.] By A. F. CALVERT. 2s. 6d. net.

LATEST NOVELSCHIP

By F. E. MILLS-YOUNG, Author of 'A Mistaken Marriage.' 6s.

THAIS

ANATOLE FRANCE. 6s.

SOMEONE PAYS

NOEL BARWELL. 6s.
Academy.—"Mr. Barwell has carried his task through excellently."

THE PRINCE'S PRANKS

CHARLES LOWE. 6s.
Daily Chronicle.—"Always bright and often brilliant."

The MEASURE OF OUR YOUTH

ALICE HERBERT. 6s.
Evening Standard.—"A fine and a real novel, executed with finish and distinction. Quick, unforced humour. Passionate sincerity and feeling. Exceedingly clever. A notable novel. It will stand."

THE BODLEIAN NUMBER TWO NOW READY.

JOHN LANE, The Bodley Head, W.

FROM CHATTO & WINDUS'S LIST

Professor Holmes's New Book NOTES ON THE SCIENCE OF PICTURE MAKING

By C. J. HOLMES, M.A.,

Slade Professor of Fine Arts in the University of Oxford.

With a Photogravure Frontispiece. Demy 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 7s. 6d. net.

"Though eminently enlightening on matters of technique—design, materials, character—and full of words of wisdom, it is Professor Holmes's broad, practical philosophy which is the most striking part of the book."

Truth.

A SHORT HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES

From the Accession of Queen Victoria to that of King Edward VII.

By JUSTIN MCCARTHY,

Author of the larger 'History of Our Own Times.'

A NEW EDITION, ENLARGED, crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Also a SCHOOL EDITION, post 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.

DEVON :

Its Moorlands, Streams, and Coasts

By LADY ROSALIND NORTHCOTE.

Fully illustrated in Colours by FREDERICK J. WIDGERY.

Large fcap. 4to, cloth, gilt top, 20s. net.

"Both the letterpress and the illustrations of this book merit the very highest praise."—Morning Post.

"Authoress, artist, and publisher are alike to be congratulated on the result of their labours—a volume full of charm and delight in every respect."—Western Morning News.

LETTERS FROM AN AMERICAN FARMER

By J. H. ST. JOHN CRÈVECŒUR.

Reprinted from the Original Edition of 1782, with a Prefatory Note by W. P. TRENT, and an Introduction by LUDWIG LEWISOHN.

Small demy 8vo, buckram, 6s. net.

"Hazlitt's lifelong praise of Crèveœur's book is a valid countervail to three generations of neglect; and is likely now, we believe, to receive the vindication of a wide concurrence. The 'American Farmer' will not again disappear, but will make its way continuously among discerning readers till it has its unquestioned place assigned it as one of the assets—not among the greatest, but with individual and undoubted value—of English literature."

Athenæum.

THE COLOUR OF PARIS

By MM. LES ACADEMICIENS GONCOURT.

Fully illustrated after Water-Colour and Sepia Drawings by the Japanese Artist YOSHIO MARKINO.

Large fcap. 4to, cloth, gilt top, 20s. net.

Limited Edition of Large-Paper Numbered Copies, 42s. net.

"This account of Paris, its institutions, its history, its women, its artists, the army, industry, journalism, and politics, is pure delight. There could be no better introduction to a knowledge of Paris as she is."—Westminster Gazette.

AN INLAND VOYAGE

By ROBERT LOUIS STEVENSON.

Newly set in special large type, with 12 Full-Page Illustrations after Water-Colours, and 12 Facsimile Drawings, also Designed Title, End-Papers, and Maps, and Cover Design by NOEL ROOKE.

Extra crown 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d. net; parchment, 10s. 6d. net. Also Numbered Large-Paper Copies on pure rag paper, the Plates mounted, and bound in whole parchment, 21s. net.

"Both typographically and pictorially the volume is exceedingly pleasing. We know of no prettier edition of an ever delightful book."—Guardian.

THE ROAD OF NO RETURN

By A. C. INCHBOLD,

Author of 'Under the Syrian Sun,' 'Lisbon and Cintra,' &c. 6s.

The story of 'The Road of No Return' opens with some dramatic incidents of the Russian Revolution, woven round a young couple who are united in a "Nihilistic marriage." A strong love interest is maintained throughout, culminating in a surprising climax when the divided characters meet unexpectedly in the Holy Land.

A CASTLE OF DREAMS

By NETTA SYRETT,

Author of 'The Child of Promise,' 'Anne Page,' &c. 6s.

"Not only do the Irish scenes and the pleasant Irish characters depicted in Miss Syrett's new novel give it a peculiar charm, but there is a clever touch of Irish fancy in the invention which gives a new turn to an old device of the makers of plots for love stories. Interesting in its character painting, and seriously sentimental without ever being heavy, the book cannot but enhance the author's reputation."—Scotsman.

THE JUNE PRINCESS

By CONSTANCE SMEDLEY, Author of 'An April Princess.' 6s.

"The dominant note of the book is one of fantasy, and a very pleasing note it is. 'The June Princess' is the delightful work of a poet turned novelist for the nonce. It is one of those rare books which exhale fragrance."—Sunday Times.

THE PAINTED MOUNTAIN

By PETER LAURISTOUN. 6s.

"It is a stirring tale of revolution in the Principality of the Lebanon. excitement sufficient to satisfy the most vivacious, tempered, however, by a solid determination on the part of the author to examine and expose the why and wherefore of the disastrous clashing of East and West."

Manchester Guardian.

THE MERRY HEART

By FRANK A. SWINNERTON. 6s.

"Many readers will be charmed with the gaiety and the frankness of Mr. Frank A. Swinnerton's book. It is a laughable story. leaves one with a better opinion of human nature."—Yorkshire Post.

IDOLATRY. By ALICE PERRIN. 6s.

[3rd Impression.

"'Idolatry' is a real triumph."—Times.

JULIAN REVELSTONE

By JUSTIN MCCARTHY. 6s.

[2nd Impression.

"A charming tale, pleasantly told."—Daily Chronicle.

A QUESTION OF MEANS

By MARGARET B. CROSS. 6s.

[2nd Impression.

"This is a quite admirable novel."—Daily Telegraph.

THE ROGUE OF RYE

By W. WILLMOTT DIXON. 6s.

"Here is an excellent tale."—Daily Telegraph.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4250.

SATURDAY, APRIL 10, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

Lectures.

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN,
Albemarle Street, Piccadilly, W.
LECTURES AFTER EASTER, 1909.
TUESDAYS.

Prof. F. W. MOTT, M.D. F.R.S., Fullerian Professor of Physiology, R.I.—TWO LECTURES on 'The Brain in Relation to Right-Handedness and Speech.' On TUESDAYS, April 20, 27, at Three o'clock.

Prof. SVANTE ARRHENIUS, D.Sc. (of Stockholm).—TWO LECTURES on 'Cosmogonical Questions.' (The Tyndall Lectures.) On TUESDAYS, May 4, 11, at Three o'clock.

Prof. JOHN GARSTANG, M.A.—TWO LECTURES on 'The Hittites: 1. Monuments of Egypt and Asia Minor; 2. Recent Discoveries in Asia Minor and Northern Syria.' On TUESDAYS, May 18, 25, at Three o'clock.

F. GOWLAND HOPKINS, Esq., D.Sc. F.R.S.—TWO LECTURES on 'Biological Chemistry.' On TUESDAYS, June 1, 8, at Three o'clock.

THURSDAYS.

JAMES PATERSON, Esq., A.R.S.A. R.W.S.—THREE LECTURES on 'Aspects of Applied Aesthetics.' On THURSDAYS, April 22, 29, May 6, at Three o'clock.

JOHN G. MILLAIS, Esq., F.Z.S.—'Newfoundland.' THREE LECTURES, on THURSDAYS, May 13, 20, 27, at Three o'clock.

Prof. W. E. DALBY, M.A. M.Inst.C.E.—TWO LECTURES on 'A Modern Railway Problem: Steam v. Electricity.' On THURSDAYS, June 3, 10, at Three o'clock.

SATURDAYS.

ROBERT T. GÜNTHER, Esq., M.A. F.R.G.S.—TWO LECTURES on 'The Earth Movements of the Italian Coast, and their Effects.' On SATURDAYS, April 24, May 1, at Three o'clock.

Prof. WALTER RALEIGH, M.A.—TWO LECTURES on 1. 'Edmund Burke'; 2. 'Burke's Prose.' On SATURDAYS, May 8, 15, at Three o'clock.

W. H. R. RIVERS, Esq., M.D. F.R.S.—TWO LECTURES on 'The Secret Societies of the Banks Islands.' On SATURDAYS, May 22, 29, at Three o'clock.

FREDERICK FROST BLACKMAN, Esq., D.Sc. F.R.S.—TWO LECTURES on 'The Vitality of Seeds and Plants.' On SATURDAYS, June 5, 12, at Three o'clock.

Subscription (to Non-Members) to all Courses of Lectures (extending from Christmas to Midsummer), Two Guineas. Subscription to a single Course of Lectures, One Guinea, or Half-a-Guinea, according to the length of the Course. Tickets issued daily at the Institution, or sent by post on receipt of Cheque or Post-Office Order.

Members may purchase not less than Three Single Lecture Tickets, available for any Afternoon Lecture, for Half-a-Guinea.

The FRIDAY EVENING MEETINGS will be resumed on APRIL 23, at 9 p.m., when Mr. ALEXANDER SIEMENS will give a Discourse on 'Tantalum and its Industrial Applications.' Succeeding Discourses will probably be given by Dr. EDMUND GOSSE, Major RONALD ROSS, C.B., Prof. G. E. HALE, Hon. IVOR GUEST, M.P., Dr. J. EMERSON REYNOLDS, Prof. J. A. FLEMING, Prof. Sir JAMES DEWAR, and other gentlemen. To these Meetings Members and their Friends only are admitted.

Persons desirous of becoming Members are requested to apply to the SECRETARY. When proposed they are immediately admitted to all the Lectures, to the Friday Evening Meetings, and to the Library and Reading Rooms, and their Families are admitted to the Lectures at a reduced charge. Payment: First Year, Ten Guineas; afterwards, Five Guineas a Year; or a composition of Sixty Guineas.

Provident Institutions.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1839.

Funds exceed 27,000l.

Office: 15 and 16, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.

Patron:

The Right Hon. THE EARL OF ROSEBURY, K.G. K.T.

President:

The LORD GLENESK.

Treasurer:

THE LONDON AND WESTMINSTER BANK, LIMITED.

OBJECTS.—This Institution was established in 1839 in the City of London, under the Presidency of the late Alderman Harmer, for granting Pensions and Temporary Assistance to principals and assistants engaged as vendors of Newspapers.

MEMBERSHIP.—Every Man or Woman throughout the United Kingdom, whether Publisher, Wholesaler, Retailer, Employer, or Employed, is entitled to become a Member of this Institution, and enjoy its benefits upon payment of Five Shillings annually, or Three Guineas for life, provided that he or she is engaged in the sale of Newspapers, and such Members who thus contribute secure priority of consideration in the event of their needing aid from the Institution.

PENSIONS.—The Annuitants now number Thirty-six, the Men receiving 25l. and the Women 20l. per annum each.

The "Royal Victoria Pension Fund," commemorating the great advantages the News Trade enjoyed under the rule of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, provides 20l. a year each for Six Widows of News-vendors.

The "Francis Fund" provides Pensions for One Man, 25l., and One Woman 20l., and was specially subscribed in memory of the late John Francis, who died on April 6, 1882, and was for more than fifty years Publisher of the Athenæum. He took an active and leading part throughout the whole period of the agitation for the repeal of the various then existing "Taxes on Knowledge," and was for very many years a staunch supporter of this Institution.

The "Horace Marshall Pension Fund" is the gift of the late Mr. Horace Brooks Marshall. The employees of that firm have primary right of election to its benefits.

The "Herbert Lloyd Pension Fund" provides 25l. per annum for one man, in perpetual and grateful memory of Mr. Herbert Lloyd, who died May 12, 1899.

The principal features of the Rules governing election to all Pensions are, that each Candidate shall have been (1) a Member of the Institution for not less than ten years preceding application; (2) not less than fifty-five years of age; (3) engaged in the sale of Newspapers for at least ten years.

RELIEF.—Temporary relief is given in cases of distress, not only to Members of the Institution, but to News-vendors or their servants who may be recommended for assistance by Members of the Institution. Inquiry is made in such cases by Visiting Committees, and relief is awarded in accordance with the merits and requirements of each case.

W. WILKIE JONES Secretary.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Invested Capital, 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT

Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—
FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical Advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row E.C.

Exhibitions.

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S SPRING EXHIBITION OF PORTRAITS AND LANDSCAPES by EARLY BRITISH and FOREIGN MASTERS is NOW OPEN. SHEPHERD'S GALLERY, 27, King Street, St. James's.

Educational.

BEDFORD COLLEGE FOR WOMEN
(UNIVERSITY OF LONDON).

YORK PLACE, BAKER STREET, LONDON, W.

Principal—Miss M. J. TUKE, M.A.

The EASTER TERM BEGINS on THURSDAY, April 22, 1909. Lectures are given in preparation for all Examinations of the University of London in Arts, Science, and Preliminary Medicine for the Teachers' Diploma, London, the Teachers' Certificate, Cambridge, and for the Cambridge Higher Local Examination.

Six Laboratories are open to Students for practical work. There is a Special Course of SCIENTIFIC INSTRUCTION in HYGIENE, designed to furnish Training for Women, Factory and Sanitary Inspectors, and Teachers of Hygiene.

The ART SCHOOL (which is conducted at South Villa, Regent's Park), may be attended by Students who are not taking other Subjects at the College.

A Single Course in any Subject may be attended. Regular Physical Instruction is given free of cost to Students who desire it, by a fully qualified Woman Teacher.

ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.

ONE REID SCHOLARSHIP in Arts, value 31l. 10s. First Year, 28l. 7s. Second and Third Years.

ONE OLD PUPIL SCHOLARSHIP in ARTS, value 20l. for Two Years.

ONE PFEIFFER SCHOLARSHIP in SCIENCE, annual value 48l., tenable for Three Years: will be awarded on the results of the Examination to be held in June.

RESIDENCE.

Accommodation for about 40 resident Students is provided in the College. At Easter the College will open as an additional Residence. South Villa, Regent's Park, where further accommodation for 15 Students will be provided. The New House is about five minutes' walk from York Place, and has large Gardens available for Students of the College.

Full particulars on application to the Principal at the College.

DEPARTMENT FOR PROFESSIONAL TRAINING IN TEACHING.

Head of the Department—Miss MARY MORTON, M.A.

The Course includes full preparation for the Examinations for the Teaching Diplomas granted by the Universities of London and Cambridge.

Students are admitted to the Training Course in October and in January.

One Free Place (value 25l. 5s.), one Scholarship of the value of 20l., and a limited number of Grants of 10l. are offered for the Course beginning in October 1909.

They will be awarded to the best Candidates holding a Degree or its equivalent in Arts or Science.

Applications should be sent to the Head of the Department.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH, S.E.

F. W. AVELING, M.A. B.Sc.

Preparation for Universities and Professions.

Stress on Modern Languages and Science.

THE DOWNS SCHOOL, SEAFORD, SUSSEX.

Head Mistress—Miss LUCY ROBINSON, M.A. (late Second Mistress, St. Felix School, Southwold). References: The Principal of Bedford College, London; The Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE OF SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTOR in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to

MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO.,

who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

BIRMINGHAM AND MIDLAND INSTITUTE.

SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor—Sir EDWARD ELGAR, Mus.Doc. LL.D.

Visiting Examiner—W. G. McNAUGHT, Mus.Doc.

Principal—GRANVILLE BANTOCK.

SESSION 1908-1909.

The SESSION consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 31 to December 19), WINTER TERM (January 15 to April 3), SUMMER TERM (April 19 to June 26).

Instruction in all Branches of Music. Students' Choir and Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, Concerts, and Opera.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from ALFRED HAYES, Secretary.

SOMERVILLE COLLEGE, OXFORD.—RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP.—An ELECTION will be held THIS SUMMER to a RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP of the annual value of 120l. for Three Years. Candidates must send their Names, Three References and a statement of their proposed Research before MAY 15, to Miss H. DARBISHIRE, Somerville College. The Fellowship is open to all Women who (i), have resided two years in Oxford and obtained Honours in some University Examination by October 1 next, or (ii), have taken Honours at Cambridge or Trinity College, Dublin.—Further conditions can be learnt on application to Miss DARBISHIRE.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CIRENCESTER. (Founded 1845. Reorganized 1908.) Patron—H.M. KING EDWARD VII.

Chairman—LORD MORETON.

For Landowners, Land Agents, Surveyors, Agriculturists,

Intending Colonists, &c.

FARMING AND COLONIAL BRANCH.

ESTATE MANAGEMENT AND FORESTRY BRANCH.

For Prospectus of Curriculum, Fees, Entrance Examinations, Scholarships, Diplomas, &c., apply to THE PRINCIPAL.

NEXT TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, May 18.

Situations Vacant.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD.

PROFESSORSHIP OF ECONOMICS.

The COUNCIL will shortly proceed to the ELECTION of a PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS in the UNIVERSITY.—Applications must reach the Registrar, from whom further particulars may be obtained, not later than MAY 12, 1909.

W. M. GIBBONS, Registrar.

UNIVERSITY OF BIRMINGHAM.
(FACULTY OF ARTS.)

PROFESSORSHIP OF FRENCH LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE.

The COUNCIL invites applications for the CHAIR OF FRENCH LANGUAGE AND LITERATURE. Stipend 500l. per annum. The successful Candidate will be required to enter on his duties on OCTOBER 1, 1909.

Applications, accompanied by not less than three References, should be sent to the undersigned on or before MAY 8. Sixty-five copies should be sent.

Testimonials are not required.

Further particulars may be obtained from GEO. H. MORLEY, Secretary.

UNIVERSITY OF BIRMINGHAM.
(FACULTY OF ARTS.)

PROFESSORSHIP OF HISTORY.

The COUNCIL invites applications for the CHAIR OF HISTORY. Stipend 600l. per annum. The successful Candidate will be required to enter on his duties on OCTOBER 1, 1909.

Applications, with full particulars of Academic distinctions and appointments, and published work, together with the names of not less than three References, should be sent to the undersigned on or before MAY 8. Sixty-five copies should be sent.

Testimonials are not required.

Further particulars may be obtained from GEO. H. MORLEY, Secretary.

UNIVERSITY OF MANCHESTER.

PROFESSORSHIP OF FRENCH.

The COUNCIL is about to appoint a PROFESSOR OF FRENCH. Salary, 600l. per annum.

Applications should be sent not later than MAY 22 to the REGISTRAR, from whom further particulars may be obtained.

APPLICATIONS are invited for the post of PROFESSOR of ENGLISH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE in the MAHARAJA'S COLLEGE, MYSORE, SOUTHERN INDIA. The Candidate selected for the post will be on probation for two years, at the end of which period the Government of H.H. the Maharaja of Mysore will be at liberty to terminate the contract. Candidates should be distinguished University men who have taken first-class honours in Classics and made a special study of English Language and Literature, or taken the M.A. Degree with first-class Honours in English Language and Literature in a Scottish or British University. Those who have in addition received training in the Theory and Practice of Teaching, or have had experience of professorial teaching in a University College will be preferred. The terms of pay, leave, and pension will be the same as those allowed to members of the Indian Educational Service. The initial salary will be Rs. 500 a month, the salary for the second year Rs. 550, and thereafter, if the selected Candidate is confirmed in his post, his salary will be Rs. 600 at the end of the second year of service, rising by annual increments of Rs. 50 to Rs. 1,000 a month. Free first-class passage to India, also back to England if the contract is terminated at the end of the second year of service. Candidates should love educational work among natives of India, and be fond of outdoor games. Applications will be received by the INSPECTOR GENERAL OF EDUCATION IN MYSORE, Bangalore, South India, up to JUNE 10, 1909. The selected Candidate will be expected to join duty as early as possible.

VICTORIA UNIVERSITY OF MANCHESTER

FACULTY OF TECHNOLOGY.

DEPARTMENT OF PURE AND APPLIED CHEMISTRY.

The MANCHESTER EDUCATION COMMITTEE and the UNIVERSITY invite applications for the position of PROFESSOR OF PURE AND APPLIED CHEMISTRY in the SCHOOL OF TECHNOLOGY. Applications, addressed to the Dean of the Faculty of Technology (Mr. J. H. REYNOLDS), should be sent in on or before MAY 1, 1909. The salary is 550*l.* per annum. The successful Candidate will be required to take up his duties about the MIDDLE OF SEPTEMBER NEXT. Further particulars may be had on application to the Municipal School of Technology, Sackville Street, Manchester.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF DUDLEY.

DAY TRAINING COLLEGE.

A VICE-PRINCIPAL (Woman) will be REQUIRED in SEPTEMBER NEXT. She must possess University Degree or equivalent, and Practical and Theoretical knowledge of Educational Method.

Salary 200*l.* to 250*l.*
Forms of Application may be obtained from the undersigned on receipt of a stamped addressed foolscap envelope, and must be returned, with envelope endorsed "Training College," not later than APRIL 24, 1909.

J. M. WYNNE, Secretary to the College Council.
Education Offices, Dudley.

BATLEY (BOYS) GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

Head Master—N. L. FRAZER, M.A.

ASSISTANT MASTER REQUIRED for SEPTEMBER. Graduate preferably, with experience in teaching Young Boys. Strong qualifications in English; Class Singing and Nature Study recommendations. Games. Salary 140*l.* per annum.—Application Forms, which must be returned to me not later than MAY 15, 1909, may be obtained from

G. R. H. DANBY, M.A. Oxon., Secretary to the Governors.
Education Offices, Batley.

ART MASTER.—The COUNCIL of the REDRUTH SCHOOL OF ART invite applications for the position of ART MASTER.

Candidates are desired to forward particulars of their qualifications, together with copies of recent Testimonials, to the Secretary, from whom further information may be obtained, not later than APRIL 14.

JAMES A. WINN, Secretary.

March 26, 1909.

The COUNCIL of the TEACHERS' GUILD are about to add to their Staff a GENTLEMAN as OFFICE SECRETARY, to enter on his duties in June if possible. Moderate salary. Attendance daily except Saturdays.—Particulars (List of Duties and Form of Application) can be obtained (after Easter Monday) from the ORGANIZING SECRETARY, 74, Gower Street, W.C.

EDITOR WANTED for a well-known PERIODICAL WORK of REFERENCE on all Questions of the Day. Journalistic experience of the same kind essential. Reply, giving full particulars, to Box 1584, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Miscellaneous.

UNIONIST M.P.s, JOURNALISTS, AUTHORS.—Competent STENOGRAPHER, with literary ability. SEEKS WORK. Useful knowledge matters Journalistic. German and French Languages. Own Remington.—Letters to SIGNET, 55, Chancery Lane.

PUBLIC-HOUSE REFORM.—The People's Refreshment House Association, Ltd., founded by the Bishop of Chester, manages 68 licensed Inns. Ask for List and Report. APPLY FOR 1*l.* SHARES. 5 per cent paid since 1899.
P.R.H.A., Broadway Chambers, Westminster.

TRAINING FOR PRIVATE SECRETARIAL WORK AND INDEXING.

THE SECRETARIAL BUREAU,

52A, CONDUIT STREET, BOND STREET, LONDON, W.
Founded 1895. Telephone: 2426 GERRARD.

MISS PETHERBRIDGE (Nat. Sci. Tripos).

EMPLOYED BY THE INDIA OFFICE as—Indexer of the East India Company's Records, the new edition of the Imperial Gazetteer of India; Dutch and Portuguese Translator.

The Drapers' Company's Records Catalogued and Arranged.
The Library of the Rt. Hon. W. H. Long M.P., Catalogued and Arranged.

INDEXER OF—The Records of the County Borough of Cardiff; The Warrington Town Records; The Blue Books of the Royal Commissions on: London Traffic, The Supply of Food in Time of War, Motor Cars, Canals and Waterways, Coast Erosion, Shipping Rings; and of the Committees on International Exhibitions, National Guarantee for War Risks of Shipping, Oriental Studies; The Minutes of the Education Committee of the Somerset County Council.

MISS PETHERBRIDGE trains from Three to Six Pupils every year for Private Secretarial and Special Indexing Work. The training is one of Apprenticeship, Pupils starting as Junior Members of the Staff and working up through all the Branches. It is practical, on actual work, each Pupil being individually coached. The training consists of Indexing—which includes Research Work and Précis Writing—Shorthand, Type-Writing, Stenotypy, and Business Training. THE TECHNIQUE OF INDEXING. By MARY PETHERBRIDGE. 2*l.* 9*d.* post free.

RESEARCH WORK at the British Museum and Translations UNDERTAKEN. Experienced.—Miss KENNEDY, 54, Grove End Road, London, N.W.

ACCURATE RESEARCH and GENEALOGICAL WORK undertaken by R. M. GLENCROSS, M.A., LL.B. Advice also supplied to Persons drawing up their own Pedigree. Excellent Testimonials.—2, Challenger Street, West Kensington.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Type-Writers, &c.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9*d.* per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING, 9*d.* per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3*d.* per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272, Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING OF ALL KINDS done promptly and intelligently. Special care taken with Technical MSS. Fiction 10*d.* per 1,000 words.—Price List and Specimens from Miss ROUTH, 43, Harwood Road, Walham Green, S.W.

Catalogues.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON, Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

CATALOGUE No. 50.—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

GLAISHER'S REMAINDER BOOK CATALOGUE

For MARCH (No. 363).

NOW READY, and will be forwarded on application.

It comprises a specially attractive Selection of Publishers' Remainders, including many Good Bargains

WILLIAM GLAISHER, LTD.,

Booksellers, 265, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.—Yellow Book, 13 vols. 2*l.* 10*s.*; Trigg's Art Garden Design, Italy, 3*l.* guineas for 2*l.*s.; E. Fitzgerald's Works, 7 vols. 3*l.* 3*s.*

CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY. DRAMA. MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS. VI. GEOGRAPHY. VII. MILITARY. VIII. FICTION. IX. GENERAL LITERATURE.

DULAU & CO. 37, Soho Square, London, W.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. CATALOGUES issued and sent post free on application. Books Bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879.

The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, 24, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Lerner's personal supervision.—23, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

Printers.

IF YOU WRITE THE MEMORIALS OF YOUR FAMILY, we will PRINT and PUBLISH them for you, under Expert Supervision, at the very Lowest Rates. Searches made where MS. is incomplete.—GERRARDS, Ltd. (The Westminster Press), 411A, Harrow Road, London, W.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Sales by Auction.

Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 16, at 1 o'clock, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS in Various Branches of Literature.

To be viewed, and Catalogues had.

Miscellaneous Books, including the Modern Library of a Gentleman, removed from Teddington.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, on THURSDAY, April 22, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, including the MODERN LIBRARY of a GENTLEMAN, and other Properties, comprising Morant's History of Essex, 2 vols.—Oxford Almanacks—Oxford Historical Society's Publications, 46 vols.—Hakluyt's Voyages, 12 vols.—a few Old Bindings—Issues from the Baskerville Press—First Editions of Thackeray, Dickens, Lever, Stevenson, Swinburne, and others—Standard Works in History and Travel, &c.

Catalogues on application.

A Collection of Books relating to America—also a Selection from the Library of a Nobleman.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 22, at 1 o'clock, a COLLECTION OF BOOKS RELATING TO AMERICA, comprising Early Voyages and Books on Navigation—Works relating to the First Settlements of the Colonies and to the American Indians—Tracts and Pamphlets on the Revolution—Histories of the States and Counties—Travels in Canada and Hudson's Bay—Books on Central and South America, and the West Indies—American Printed Books, &c., mostly in old calf bindings or in the original boards, also an Early Mezzotint Portrait of George Washington—to which is added a SELECTION FROM THE LIBRARY OF A NOBLEMAN, comprising Buck's Views in Great Britain, 4 vols.—the Works of Piranesi (Early Impressions), and other Architectural Books—Early Works on Gardening—Folio Volumes with Engravings—Old Atlases—Tracts relating to the Popish Plot—Le Sacre de Louis XV. in morocco by Padeloup—La Galerie du Palais Royal, in old French—moreover—Albums of Original Water-Colour Drawings, &c.

Catalogues on application.

Valuable Books and Original Drawings from the Collection of the late T. C. BLOFELD, Esq., formerly Chancellor of the Diocese of Norwich (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 30th, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE BOOKS from the above LIBRARY, comprising Topographical and Antiquarian Works—Early Printed and Black-Letter Books—an Illuminated Horse on Vellum—Rare Books in Seventeenth-Century Literature—MSS. &c.; also ORIGINAL WATER-COLOUR DRAWINGS AND ENGRAVINGS FROM THE SAME COLLECTION.

Catalogues are preparing.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES BY AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On FRIDAY, April 16, PORCELAIN, OBJECTS of ART, and DECORATIVE FURNITURE from various sources.

On SATURDAY, April 17, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS.

Works of Art.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, April 19, at 1 o'clock precisely, WORKS of ART, comprising the COLLECTION of W. CAREW HAZLITT, Esq., of Barnes Common, including fine Specimens of Oriental, Continental, and English Porcelain; other Properties, including Silver Plate—old Furniture—Oriental and Continental Porcelain—a few Pieces of old English Pottery, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A valuable Collection of Greek Coins and the Numismatic Library of an American Collector.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 20, at 1 o'clock precisely, a valuable Collection of GREEK COINS in Gold, Electrum, Silver, and Copper, chiefly selected for their artistic merit, and the NUMISMATIC LIBRARY of an AMERICAN COLLECTOR. Among the most noteworthy examples of ancient Greek monetary art represented in this Collection are the following Coins:—Lot 8, Litra of Aetna—13, Electrum of Assos—20, Archaic Stater of Corinth—28, Stater of Elis, with eagle's head (the finest known specimen of this artistic type)—30, Stater of Elis, with noble head of Hera—48, Stater of Rhodes, of very fine style—49, Litra of Segesta—50, Tetradrachm of Selinus—53—70, a fine Series of Syracusan Tetradrachms of the transitional and best art periods, some with Artists' Signatures—71, Dekadrachm of Syracuse, by Euainetos—85—97, a beautiful Series of Thurian Distaters and Staters—and a choice Selection of Copper Coins, chiefly with fine Patina, including an excellent Portrait Coin of the famous Cleopatra, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Selection of Greek Coins in Gold, Silver, and Copper from a well-known Cabinet.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 21, at 1 o'clock precisely, a selection of GREEK COINS in Gold, Silver, and Copper, from a well-known Cabinet. Among the noteworthy Coins in this Collection are:—Lot 13, Tetradrachm of Mausolus—19, Tetradrachm of Cnossus—32, Stater of Elis—53, Dekadrachm of Syracuse, with Artist's Signature, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Collection of Greek Coins the Property of Prof. L. WHITE-KING, C.S.I. LL.D. F.S.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 22, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of GREEK COINS in Gold, Electrum, Silver, and Copper, the Property of Prof. L. WHITE-KING, C.S.I. LL.D. F.S.A.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Collection of Japanese Colour Prints, Illustrated Books, and a few Kakemono, the Property of JOHN STEWART HAPPER, Esq., of New York City, U.S.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, April 26, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS, ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, and a few KAKEMONO, the Property of JOHN STEWART HAPPER, Esq., of New York City, U.S.A.

May be viewed on April 22, 23, and 24. Catalogues may be had, price 1s. each, or, with Illustrations, 5s. each.

Japanese Colour Prints and Surimono, comprising the Collections of LAWRENCE T. W. SALT, Esq., A. G. WEBSTER, Esq., and Capt. V. J. SCANTLEBURY.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 30, at 1 o'clock precisely, JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS and SURIMONO, comprising the COLLECTIONS of LAWRENCE T. W. SALT, Esq., of Egerton Terrace, S.W., A. G. WEBSTER, Esq., of Lincoln, and Capt. V. J. SCANTLEBURY.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Magazines, &c.

NOW READY.

JOURNAL OF THE ROYAL STATISTICAL SOCIETY.

Vol. LXXII. Part I. MARCH 31, 1909.

Contents.

THE COST, CONDITIONS, AND RESULTS OF HOSPITAL RELIEF IN LONDON. By Percy E. Braun, B.Sc.(Econ.). With Discussion.

FORESTRY IN SOME OF ITS ECONOMIC ASPECTS. By Prof. William Somerville, M.A. D.Sc. With Discussion.

MISCELLANEA:—

I. ARTHUR WILSON FOX, C.B.

II. COL. CARROLL D. WRIGHT.

III. PRICES OF COMMODITIES IN 1908. By A. Sauerbeck.

IV. ADDENDUM ON 'PROBABLE ERRORS OF FREQUENCY-CONSTANTS.' By Prof. F. Y. Edgeworth, F.R.S.

V. REAL WAGES AND THE STANDARD OF COMFORT SINCE 1850. By George H. Wood.

Price 5s.

London: ROYAL STATISTICAL SOCIETY, 9, Adelphi Terrace, W.C.

JOURNAL OF THE INSTITUTE OF ACTUARIES.

No. 236. APRIL, 1909. Price 3s.

Contents.

On a New Method of Constructing and of Grading Mortality and other Tables. By George King, F.I.A., F.F.A., Consulting Actuary; with Abstract of the Discussion, and Addendum.

On an Approximate Method of Valuation of Whole-Life Assurances, grouped according to attained Ages, with Allowance for Selection, on the basis of O[M] Mortality. By E. H. Brown, F.I.A., of the Prudential Assurance Company, Limited; with Abstract of the Discussion.

Note on the Application of Mr. E. H. Brown's Method to Select Valuations by the British Offices' Whole-Life Non-Participating O[NM] Table.

Legal Notes. By Arthur Rhys Barrand, F.I.A., Barrister-at-Law.

Review.

Actuarial Notes:

I. On the Graphic Delineation of Interpolation Formulæ. By Duncan C. Fraser, M.A. F.I.A., Actuary to the Royal Insurance Company, Limited.

II. On Premiums payable by Instalments for Whole-Life Assurances. By S. T. Shovelton, M.A. A.I.A., Fellow of Merton College, Oxford.

Institute of Actuaries.

London: C. & E. LAYTON, Farringdon Street.

NOTICE.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

THE VOLUME

JULY to DECEMBER, 1908,

WITH THE

I N D E X,

Price 10s. 6d.,

IS NOW READY.

, The INDEX separately, price 6d.; by post, 6½d.

Also Cases for Binding, price 1s.; by post, 1s. 2d.

JOHN C. FRANCIS & J. EDWARD FRANCIS,

Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

Insurance Companies.

NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY, LTD.

Founded 1797. HEAD OFFICE: NORWICH.

50, Fleet Street, E.C.
71 and 72, King William Street, E.C.
Norwich Union Chambers (Entrance, St. James's Street), Piccadilly, W.
1, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.
26, Charles Street, St. James's, S.W.
81, Edgware Road, W.

Claims Paid £22,000,000.

Applications for Agencies invited.

TO BE PUBLISHED ON MAY 1, 1909, royal 4to, 350 pages, 42s. net.

PRICE TO SUBSCRIBERS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION. ONE GUINEA.

AN ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF THE MUSIC LOAN EXHIBITION.

Held under the Patronage of

HIS MAJESTY THE KING, HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN,

AND

THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES

BY THE WORSHIPFUL COMPANY OF MUSICIANS

AT FISHMONGERS' HALL JUNE AND JULY, 1904.

The Illustrations consist of 9 Photogravure Plates, 9 Full-Page Illustrations, and many Facsimiles, &c., incorporated in the Text.

This handsome Volume is divided into six main Sections:—

MUSIC-PRINTING
PRINTED MUSIC

INSTRUMENTS
PORTRAITS, &c.

MANUSCRIPTS (Music and Letters)
MISCELLANEOUS.

Every exhibit is not only fully and carefully described, but the copious notes freely scattered throughout the volume add to the interest of its subject-matter and increase the value of the book both as a treasured library possession and as a useful book of reference.

Illustrations—title-pages, instruments, portraits, &c.—and facsimiles form a most important and attractive feature of this Edition de Luxe Catalogue. The portraits include a photogravure reproduction of Hudson's full-length oil-painting of Handel, preserved at Gopsall and belonging to The Earl Howe; and among the well-executed facsimiles are autographs of Bach, Handel (a characteristic letter, of three quarto pages, written to Charles Jennens), Mendelssohn, Orlando Gibbons (the only known autograph of the composer), Henry Purcell, and others.

London: NOVELLO & COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED, royal 8vo, pp. xii-524, cloth gilt, price 12s. 6d. net.

THE KING'S MUSICK.

A Transcript of Records relating to Music and Musicians (1460-1700).

Edited by HENRY CART DE LAFONTAINE, M.A.,

Formerly Incumbent of Berkeley Chapel, Mayfair.

This interesting and informing volume has been compiled from the inexhaustible store of documents preserved at the Record Office. From that vast, untitled field has been literally dug out a mass of information concerning the maintenance and ordering of musicians attached to the English Court between the years 1460 and 1700, an eventful period covering the reigns of the Tudor and Stuart kings. Moreover, the transcripts herein set forth in chronological order furnish many details of the lives of old-time musicians. Thus 'The King's Musick' is not only of interest to students of music, but throws fresh light upon an era of the art which is of great value to the historian of English music.

London: NOVELLO & COMPANY, LIMITED.

EVERY SATURDAY, TWENTY-FOUR PAGES, PRICE FOURPENCE, OF ALL BOOKSELLERS.

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A MEDIUM OF INTERCOMMUNICATION FOR LITERARY MEN, ARTISTS, ANTIQUARIES, GENEALOGISTS, &c.

"When found, make a note of."—CAPTAIN CUTTLE.

Containing every Week interesting Articles on some of the following Subjects:

ENGLISH, IRISH, and SCOTTISH HISTORY, Illustrated by Original Communications and Inedited Documents.

BIOGRAPHY, including unpublished Correspondence of Eminent Men, and Unrecorded Facts connected with them.

BIBLIOGRAPHY, more especially of English Authors, with Notices of Rare and Unknown Editions of their Works, and Notes on Authorship of Anonymous Books.

POPULAR ANTIQUITIES and FOLK-LORE, preserving the fast-fading relics of the old Mythologies.

BALLADS and OLD POETRY, with Historical and Philological Illustrations.

POPULAR and PROVERBIAL SAYINGS, their Origin, Meaning, and Application.

PHILOLOGY, including Local Dialects, Archaisms, and Notes on our Old Poets.

GENEALOGY and HERALDRY, including Histories of Old Families, Completion of Pedigrees, &c.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES, QUERIES, and REPLIES, on Points of Ecclesiastical History, Topography, Fine Arts, Natural History, Miscellaneous Antiquities, Numismatics, Photography, &c.

GENERAL INDEX for the NINTH SERIES, price 10s. 6d., is NOW READY.

COVERS for BINDING any Volume may be had, price 1s.; by post, 1s. 3d.

SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLERS WILL FIND SPECIAL ATTENTION PAID TO THEIR BUSINESS.

JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS,

Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.; and of all Newsagents.

MACMILLAN'S NEW BOOKS.

VOL. II. READY APRIL 16.

A Catalogue Raisonné of the Works of the Most Eminent Dutch Painters of the Seven- teenth Century.

Based on the Work of John Smith, by C. Hofstede de Groot (with the assistance of Dr. W. R. Valentiner). Translated and Edited by EDWARD G. HAWKE. In 10 vols. 8vo, 25s. net each.

Vol. II. THE WORKS OF AELBERT CUYP and PHILIPS WOUWERMAN.

Previously published.

Vol. I. JAN STEEN, GABRIEL METSU, GERARD DOU, PIETER DE HOOCH, CAREL FABRITIUS, JOHANNES VERMEER. 25s. net.

Social Life at Rome in the Age of Cicero.

By W. WARDE FOWLER, M.A., Author of 'The Roman Festivals of the Period of the Republic,' &c. With Map and Plans. 8vo, 10s. net.

Monuments of Christian Rome

from Constantine to the Renaissance. By Prof. ARTHUR L. FROTHINGHAM, Ph.D. Illustrated. Extra crown 8vo, 10s. 6d. [Handbooks of Archaeology and Antiquities.]

The Ancient Greek Historians

(Harvard Lectures). By J. B. BURY, Litt.D. LL.D., Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Cambridge. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

Dante's Inferno, Purgatorio, and Paradiso.

Translated by EDWARD WILBERFORCE. 3 vols. Globe 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

St. Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians

An Exposition, by J. ARMITAGE ROBINSON, D.D., Dean of Westminster. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. [April 16.]

Studies in Mystical Religion.

By RUFUS M. JONES, M.A. D.Litt., Haverford College, U.S.A. 8vo, 12s. net. [April 16.]

This work deals with the mystics from the days of primitive Christianity to the period of the English Commonwealth. The book is written without sectarian cast or bias.

Mars as the Abode of Life.

By PERCIVAL LOWELL, A.B. LL.D., Author of 'Mars and its Canals,' &c. Illustrated. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

JIMBO. A Fantasy.

By ALGERNON BLACKWOOD, Author of 'John Silence,' &c. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

Tono-Bungay. By H. G. WELLS.

One Immortality. By H. FIELDING HALL.

A First Book of Botany.

By ELIZABETH HEALEY, A.R.C.S. Illustrated. Globe 8vo, 1s. 6d. [First Books of Science.]

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

Messrs. Longmans & Co.'s LIST.

The FIELD says that 'POLLY WINFORD' is "One of the best sporting novels which has been published for some time."

Polly Winford. By EYRE HUSSEY, Author of 'Miss Badsworth, M.F.H.' Crown 8vo, 6s. (Inland postage 4d.)

"Polly Winford is a delightful girl."—Daily Telegraph.

"The tale is thoroughly entertaining."—Country Life.

Stalks Abroad: being some Record of the Sport obtained during a Two Years' Tour round the World.

By H. FRANK WALLACE. With numerous Illustrations. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

"This is one of the most pleasant books of sport published during recent years, full of the joy of the outdoor life, yet with many shrewd observations and criticisms of lasting value."—Country Life.

SECOND IMPRESSION.

Historical and Political Essays.

By WILLIAM EDWARD HARTPOLE LECKY. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

Sir George Mackenzie, King's

Advocate, of Rosehaugh: His Life and Times, 1636(?)–1691.

By ANDREW LANG. 8vo, 15s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"The book is a fascinating blend of history and biography. Mr. Lang handles his material like a magician, and his style is as fresh as ever."—Birmingham Post.

Industrial Efficiency: a Comparative Study of Industrial Life in England, Germany, and America.

By ARTHUR SHADWELL, M.A. M.D. NEW and CHEAPER EDITION in ONE VOLUME, with a SUPPLEMENTARY CHAPTER. Crown 8vo, 6s. net. [In a few days.]

The Springs of Helicon: a Study in the Progress of English Poetry from Chaucer to Milton.

By J. W. MACKAIL, M.A. LL.D., Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

Pastor Ovium: the Day-Book of

a Country Parson. By JOHN HUNTLEY SKRINE, M.A., Author of 'Pastor Agnorum,' &c. Crown 8vo, 5s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

Ecclesia Discens: the Church's

Lesson from the Age. By the Rev. JAMES H. F. PEILE, M.A. Crown 8vo, 5s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"No one can lay down this book without admiration for the literary gifts of the author and his manliness in facing hard questions."—Church of Ireland Gazette.

The Spirit of Christ in Common

Life. Addresses and Sermons by CHARLES BIGG, D.D., sometime Canon of Christ Church. Selected and Edited by the Dean of Christ Church. With an Introduction by the Bishop of Oxford. 8vo, 6s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

Memoir of George Howard Wilkinson, Bishop of St. Andrews, formerly Vicar of St. Peter's, Eaton Square. By ARTHUR JAMES MASON, D.D. With Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo, 28s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

Studies in the Teaching of Religion. By WILLIAM SCOTT PALMER. Crown 8vo, 1s. net. (Inland postage 2d.)

Rosemary: a Volume of Poems.

By FREDERICK ARTHUR. Crown 8vo, 4s. net. (Inland postage 3d.)

The Curious Case of Lady Pur-beck: a Scandal of the XVIIth Century.

By the Author of 'The Life of Sir Kenelm Digby,' 'The Life of a Prig,' &c. 8vo, 6s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"A racy account of the scandal and trial of the daughter of Sir Edward Coke, who married Sir John Villiers, created Lord Purbeck."—Times.

Odds and Ends.

By R. MONTAGU TABOR. Fcap. 8vo, 5s. (Inland postage 3d.)

"The book is full of interest for a reader who can appreciate comic culture."—Scotsman.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.

39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

BAEDEKER'S GUIDES

ARE NOW PUBLISHED BY MR. T. FISHER UNWIN.

A Complete List of the Volumes and Prices will be sent post free to any address on application.

1, Adelphi Terrace.

TURKEY IN REVOLUTION.

By CHARLES RODEN BUXTON. With a Map and 33 Illustrations, 7s. 6d. net.

"Mr. Buxton has made telling use of the splendid opportunity which he enjoyed. He was a friend of the Young Turks in the days before the triumph, and he was on the scene when the revolution came. It is a graphic story he tells of the change."—Westminster Gazette.

THE PANAMA CANAL AND ITS MAKERS.

By VAUGHAN CORNISH, D.Sc. F.R.G.S. With a Map and 63 Illustrations. Large crown 8vo, 5s.

"The most authoritative book that exists on the subject."—Globe.

"We have nothing but praise for Dr. Cornish's remarkably interesting and impartial book."—Academy.

INDUSTRIAL INSURANCE.

By CHARLES RICHMOND HENDERSON. 9s. net.

SIX - SHILLING NOVELS FOR HOLIDAY READING.

OLIVE IN ITALY.

A New Volume in the "First Novel" Library. By MORAY DALTON.

THE KEY OF LIFE.

A Powerful Novel of Egypt. By A. A. METHLEY.

THE CANON'S DILEMMA.

By VICTOR L. WHITECHURCH, Author of 'The Canon in Residence.'

CHEAP EDITIONS.

THE BRAHMANS, THEISTS, AND MUSLIMS OF INDIA.

By JOHN CAMPBELL OMAN, D.Lit. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

THE ECONOMIC INTERPRETATION OF HISTORY.

By Prof. J. E. THOROLD ROGERS. Large crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

Uniform with Lord Morley's 'Life of Richard Cobden.'

ARMY REFORM AND OTHER ADDRESSES.

By the Rt. Hon. R. B. HALDANE, M.P. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

COILLARD OF THE ZAMBESI.

The Lives of François and Christina Coillard of the Paris Missionary Society. By C. W. MACKINTOSH. With a Photogravure Frontispiece, a Map, and 64 other Illustrations. Large crown 8vo, 6s.

UNWIN'S SOCIOLOGY SERIES.

Crown 8vo, paper covers, 1s. net each.

INVASION AND CONSCRIPTION.

By J. A. FARRER.

MY MEMORY OF GLADSTONE.

By GOLDWIN SMITH.

PAPERS FOR THINKING WELSHMEN.

By A. W. WADE-EVANS.

A Complete List of the Volumes in this Series will be sent post free on application.

FOR HOLIDAY READING.

THE BLUE LAGOON.

H. DE VERE STACPOOLE'S Masterpiece. In paper covers, 1s. net.

M. A. B. (Mainly About Books).

A Copy of the APRIL issue, containing an Account of the Ordnance Survey and its Work and the History of Baedeker's Guide-Books, will be sent post free to any address on application.

T. FISHER UNWIN, 1, Adelphi Terrace, London.

SATURDAY, APRIL 10, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
GEORGE SELWYN AND THE WITS	429
PROF. BURY ON THE ANCIENT GREEK HISTORIANS ..	430
SIX MASTERS IN DISILLUSION	431
MADAME HAMELIN	431
NEW NOVELS (Noblesse Oblige; A Castle of Dreams; Syrinx; Ione Chaloner; The Dream—and the Woman; The Last Persecution; The Dukedom of Portsea; L'une et l'autre)	433—434
ANATOLE FRANCE IN ENGLISH	434
SCANDINAVIAN LANGUAGES AND LITERATURE ..	434
HOLIDAY READING	435
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (Turkey in Revolution; The Right Hon. H. H. Asquith; The Nobilities of Europe; The Authorized Version; Registrum Ade de Orleton; Poe's Complete Poetical Works; La Littérature féminine d'aujourd'hui; Raleigh's Shakespeare; Engelsch Woordenboek; In Search of a Polar Continent)	436—439
OMNIA SOMNIA, BY MRS. R. MARRIOTT WATSON; HOW LEIGH HUNT TREATED SHELLEY'S LETTERS; OMAR AND THE FITZGERALD CENTENARY; "BIBLIOTHECA LINDESIANA"	439—441
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	441
LITERARY GOSSIP	442
SCIENCE—PSYCHE'S TASK; ASTRONOMICAL LITERATURE; ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; GOSSIP	443—444
FINE ARTS—ORIGINAL PRINTS AT MESSRS. OBACH'S; A NEW REMBRANDT; THE BRITISH SCHOOL AT ATHENS; SOME CHURCHES OF SOUTH-EAST DEVON; GOSSIP	444—446
MUSIC—WAGNER'S LETTERS TO HIS FIRST WIFE; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	446—447
DRAMA—BEVIS; PLAYS OF OUR FOREFATHERS ..	447—447
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	448

LITERATURE

George Selwyn and the Wits. By S. Parnell Kerr. Illustrated. (Methuen & Co.)

MR. PARNELL KERR'S new book on George Selwyn is by no means a mere réchauffé of preceding works. He acknowledges his obligations to Jesse, "our principal authority upon the friendships of Selwyn," and has not neglected the Carlisle correspondence brought to light by the Historical Manuscripts Commission; but he has also had the good fortune to obtain access to new material in the form of letters written to Charles and Mary Townshend, relatives of his subject. These letters fill a gap in existing sources, whilst they increase our opportunities for gauging Selwyn's character. The book shows, we are glad to note, an adequate knowledge of the period, and is written in an easy, though not a careless style.

After a well-informed sketch of eighteenth-century England, and the usual "Birth and Parentage" chapter, we are given a full account of Selwyn's school and university career. The latter terminated in a solemn decree of expulsion, provoked by a piece of childish blasphemy. The author, though indulging in some comments upon the evidence, admits that no sentence less severe could, in the circumstances, have been expected from the Oxford authorities, and proceeds forthwith to launch Selwyn "on the Town." Reynolds's portrait of him at this early stage moves him to some caustic observations upon readers of physiognomy, leading to a preliminary statement of the case against the traditional view of Selwyn.

But before developing this in detail in the chapters 'Mr. Selwyn the Wit' and 'The Morbid Selwyn,' he lets his readers into the secret of the material foundations of the pleasant life of a man of fashion without hereditary wealth or fixed occupation, and describes 'The First Selwyn Circle,' consisting of "Gilly" Williams, Dick Edgecumbe, and Lord March. Walpole, Selwyn's lifelong friend, naturally gets a chapter to himself, in which he is said to stand to Selwyn in the relation of a Boswell. It is admitted that the analogy must not be pushed far; but it may be allowed that no little portion of "George's" reputation for wit rests upon his friend "Horry's" letters. The conjecture that the owner of "Strawberry" may have elaborated the crude jest into a literary mot seems, however, both destructive of the analogy and inconsistent with the author's position.

This brings us to the main thesis—did "Mr. Selwyn the Wit" deserve his name? Mr. Kerr is surely right in coming to a negative conclusion, though he is not the first to have done so. He says all the right things about the lack of "fundamental brainwork," the rare revelation of any large sense of humour, and the effect produced by a languid, almost torpid manner and a slightly saturnine cast of countenance. Not, however, that we can always agree as to examples. Bad taste, rather than "wit almost of a Thackerayan kind," seems to us to characterize the surprise of Lady Townshend in "Caraccioli's Chapel," though Walpole's comment is piquant enough. Nor does there appear much to choose between the "good" and "bad" House of Commons jokes cited. Selwyn's last recorded mot, taken from the new letters, is said to have been indited to his niece: "I am sorry to put you to this expense, but I hope at the Resurrection to repay you in franks." It is not brilliant. Nor can we allow, with the author, that he was even "the last of the wits." If Sydney Smith and Hook are excluded, as well as Lamb, Hood, and the rest, as not belonging exclusively or at all to the fashionable world, what can be urged against Henry Luttrell? Here was "a perfect type of the aristocratic amateur" who "cultivated the art of witty conversation."

We come next to 'The Morbid Selwyn.' This person, according to the author, is a creation of club jesters, such as Chesterfield and Hanbury Williams, whom lazy biographers have accepted mainly upon Walpole's written testimony. In this matter Mr. Kerr is plausible, if not entirely convincing. Certain correspondents of The Gentleman's Magazine (whom the author identifies with Dr. John Warner, an intimate of Selwyn's) certainly denied his supposed fondness for executions; and it may be true that, as Mr. Kerr contends, we have on actual record only two attendances of his hero on such occasions. Again, the similarity between the circumstances of Selwyn's supposed witnessing of Damiens's execution and those related of M. de la Condamine by Grimm is certainly striking, if not, as the author holds, conclusive as to the identity of "the amateur." But admitting the force of such negative criticism, how are we to explain so widespread a legend? In company with "the various solemn owls of editors" alluded to in the text, we should like to ask, Had the constant stream of chaff (which no doubt wearied its victim at times) no source but a melancholy countenance and the fact that a man had seen (in common with his contemporaries) the death on Tower Hill of the Jacobites of the Forty-Five? One need not, of course, controvert the position that, even if this individual were an amateur of death-scenes, he was, on the whole, essentially human and healthy.

'Selwyn as M.P.' is the heading of an entertaining chapter, in which George appears as "the perfect placeman," who supported every Administration from the "Broad Bottom" which followed Walpole to the first of the younger Pitt—even the second Rockingham Cabinet, which deprived him of 400*l.* a year. He lost his seat at Gloucester in 1780, and was burnt in effigy, leaving behind him "a dying speech" at his country seat, Matson, when setting out thence for London after the election. One of the Townshend letters tells how during the contest the health of the candidate suffered:—

"There are but two apothecaries, and they are both in opposition to me. One is so violent that I cannot trust him to make up the medicine which Dr. Robinson has prescribed, and the other is afraid of coming to my home lest he should give umbrage to his party."

The defeated placeman fell back upon his own borough of Ludgershall, where he had the first Lord Melbourne and afterwards Sir Nathaniel Wraxall as a colleague. He once acted as chairman of a Private Bill Committee, but was for the most part a silent and undistinguished member throughout his forty-four years of Parliamentary life. He got in his later years the lucrative sinecure of Surveyor of Crown Lands from Pitt.

Selwyn was much in Paris. He cherished a respectful admiration for Louis XV.'s queen, and attended the salons of Mesdames Geoffrin and du Deffand. To the latter he introduced Horace Walpole. She called Selwyn "Lindor," and has left on record her opinion of him—an opinion which came under his own eyes. This is the portrait, which was probably just enough:—

"I am very far from thinking Mr. Selwyn stupid, but he is often in the clouds. Nothing strikes him or wakens him save ridicule; though he catches even that on the wing. His words are graceful and delicate, but he cannot carry on a conversation. He is distract. He would often be bored, but for an excellent recipe against boredom which he possesses: that of going to sleep whenever he wishes.... He is sarcastic without being spiteful, formal, but polite; he loves nothing and nobody but his Lord March; one would never think of forming a close relationship with him, but one is very glad to meet him, and to be in the same room with him, although one has nothing to say to him."

Selwyn was no man of letters, yet he had an enthusiasm for Madame de Sévigné, and on his way back from Italy (whither he had been to conduct his darling Mie-Mie to her relatives) he made a pilgrimage to Grignan. He relates to his niece Mary Townshend how he found the château "in the greatest repair and perfectly well furnished," and tells her how he slept in the room in which Madame de Sévigné "expired," and saw in it a half-length of her, but did not like it so well as a picture in his own possession. He thought the visit "had paid me very well for the trouble which I gave myself in going so far out of my way" (to Paris, of course), and was gratified at receiving as a present "a little black cabinet," which was supposed to have belonged to the charming letter-writer. With all this, the fine gentleman's letters support his latest biographer's description of him as "this most unliterary wit," whose one idea of style was a crude simplicity.

We do not feel called upon to dispute the dictum that Selwyn was never a "deep" gambler, or to go into the question of the paternity of 'Mie-Mie.' Mlle. Fagnani (this seems to be the correct spelling) may, as likely as not, have had the right to call herself by her putative father's name; but the assiduity of Selwyn and his friend Lord March about her welfare may well have seemed suspicious to their contemporaries. There can be no doubt that the affection which the former felt for the child was a deep and sincere feeling, and on a higher plane than his friendships with men. Of these Frederick, fifth Earl of Carlisle (Byron's guardian), was the chief object among Selwyn's younger contemporaries. He was a link between "George" and Fox; and the estrangement between these two is traced by the author to "Charles's" conduct in a certain bill transaction with Carlisle. Mr. Kerr is inclined to take up the cudgels for Fox; he also affects a tolerant view as to the character of "Old Q," with whom, however, Selwyn never had a breach, though these gamesters occasionally drew upon each other's bank balances.

Mr. Kerr's defence of the eighteenth century against the somewhat censorious comparisons of Hayward commands our sympathy, especially as it is devoid of anything like snobbishness. Company-promoting and the tyranny of wealth are the present-day analogues of the old abuses of aristocratic society, and the latter were balanced, even in their own time, by a grace and colour which we look for in vain. It is as a good representative of this dignified, easygoing society rather than as a wit that George Selwyn has been deservedly treated in the present volume.

Some misprints are to be found in the book, particularly in French words; but we have noticed only one error. General Fox (p. 124) was the son, not of Charles James, but of the third Lord Holland and his celebrated wife. The name of the sprightly Oxford wit who wrote as "Terræ Filius" is generally spelt Amhurst, not as in the text. Among misprints of names are the "duchesse d'Aiguillen" (p. 101), "Shelbourne" (p. 173), and "Bison" for Biron (p. 199). The Index is marred by some notable omissions, and the entries included might have been fuller with advantage.

The Ancient Greek Historians (Harvard Lectures). By J. B. Bury. (Macmillan & Co.)

IN this series of lectures Prof. Bury gives a sketch, in six chapters, of the development of Greek historiography from its beginnings in the epic to its last great master, Polybius, and devotes his concluding two chapters to the consideration of the influence of Greek on Roman historians, and of the views held in antiquity concerning the use of history. The subject-matter is thus of great extent, and the treatment of it, having to be adapted to the needs of an American audience, is popular in character. In thoroughness, therefore, the book of necessity contrasts strikingly and unfavourably with H. Peter's elaborate work on the cognate subject of Roman historiography in Imperial times, and it cannot serve any purpose as a work of reference. The author's great learning, however, is manifest notwithstanding the popular character of the lectures, and this, combined as it is with a felicity of expression which is all his own, makes the book very welcome. In particular, the sagacity and sanity of the two chapters devoted to Thucydides form a remarkable contrast to the recent treatment which that historian has suffered at the hands of writers both in England and Germany. Prof. Bury, at least, does not "fall into the error of overrating economic causes"; and his handling alike of the "speeches" in Thucydides, and the historian's explanation of the cause of the Peloponnesian war, reveals a lucid conservatism which makes these two lectures perhaps the most valuable portion of an interesting book.

Hecataeus figures prominently in the story of the rise of Greek historiography. Not only was he the first of the "rationalizing mythographers." This method of historical investigation "could not advance positive knowledge. It led beyond Herodorus to Palæphatus and Euemerus; it led ultimately nowhere." But with Hecataeus we find also the beginnings of "modern," i.e. of "contemporary," history, and in this lay the value of his contribution to historiographical science. "Hecataeus' originality lay in responding to the stimulus from the non-Greek world," and the early historians, "credulous and uncritical" though they were, followed in his footsteps. In this way "the Persian conquests led to the investigation of 'modern' history."

Herodotus's three "maxims of historical criticism" are well expounded; but within the limits of a short chapter "the Homer of the Persian war," as Prof. Bury calls him, who "was in certain ways so lacking in common sense that parts of his work might seem to have been written by a precocious child," can hardly receive adequate treatment. Hellanicus had "laid the slippery foundations" of chronology for him, but to it he manifested entire indifference, and so, it seems, slipped all the worse. He was "taken in" by anecdotes and "persiflage," and failed to realize the universal character of some of his stories, which, indeed, "have been explained only in quite recent times." Thus, in the famous story of Polycrates,

"the casting of the ring into the sea was symbolic of thalassocracy; it was the same mythical ring as that of Minos, which, in the poem of Bacchylides, Theseus sought in the halls of Amphitrite."

So Herodotus is now to share our thralldom to the grim Cretan! Surely he might have been allowed to escape it.

Rhetoric and philosophy in the fourth century combined to ruin historiography. Isocrates was guilty of drawing it first under rhetoric's "pernicious influence," and there for the most part it stayed, serving alike the purpose of the romance and the symphony of to-day. Even "the Blue Books of Alexander's generals" were unable to amend the vicious popular taste for excitement; while Aristotle failed for his part to save truth for history:—

"His critical faculty did not resist the spell of the polemical literature of the extraordinarily clever publicists who invented their own version of Attic history."

Greek historiography then, after Thucydides, rapidly degenerated. But Polybius receives a very fitting meed of praise, and the question of his impartiality as an historian is treated judiciously, although sufficient justice is hardly done to Phylarchus, of whom he was unfairly contemptuous. The merits of Polybius, indeed, lie on the surface, as do most of his failings. His gravest defect—that of misunderstanding Roman policy east of the Adriatic between 215 and 146 B.C.—also escapes Prof. Bury's notice, or perhaps could not receive consideration owing to exigencies of space. Neither can we accept as probable the writer's view that the fluctuations of Polybius's belief concerning τύχη are the result of a development of thought. Surely Polybius's view is exactly that of the average man, who also is untroubled by any vain striving after consistency. Herodotus held that men believe in divine interference in human concerns because the gods do interfere; Thucydides, that the gods interfere only because and in so far as men believe in their interference. But Polybius, as we read him, held that the gods do interfere, but men ought not to believe in their interference if they can possibly help it. No more practical view could be held at any time, but it is bound to lead to at least apparent inconsistencies.

The last two chapters are slight, and, with the exception of a passage which is too long for quotation, upon the cry of "History for its own sake," add little to the value of the book. Cæsar and Tacitus cannot be treated convincingly in a couple of pages, and we fail to see why they should make their appearance at all in a book on the ancient Greek historians.

Too much stress is laid on the importance of Dionysius of Miletus. His 'Sequel to the Reign of Darius' becomes, in Prof. Bury's conjecture, "an Ionian logos of the Persian war," "a challenge to unreserved admirers of Athens," &c. It would scarcely be inferred from the writer's insistence on Dionysius's place in the roll of Greek historians that little remains beyond the title of his book, Tà μετὰ Δαρείου, in Suidas, and that Müller either believes the Darius not to be the son of Hystaspes at all, or would amend the title to Tà μέχρι Δαρείου. No notice is taken of Müller-Strübing's explanation of the difficulty in Thuc. iv. 60, or of Mr. Andrew Lang's onslaught on the theory of "conscious archaism," which is blandly accepted by Prof. Bury without question. "Mylasa" (p. 24) and "Mylasæ" (p. 69) should be reconciled in a second edition, and the misprint on p. 221, "c. 235-151 B.C.," corrected to "c. 135-51 B.C."

There is a Bibliography at the end which might well be made more complete, e.g., by a reference to very valuable papers by Prof. H. Smith on Polybius (Nat. Review, Oct., 1863), and by Mr. J. Wells on Herodotus in a recent number of The Journal of Hellenic Studies—papers far more suggestive than are some of the many German writings which the Bibliography includes.

Six Masters in Disillusion. By Algar Thorold. (Constable & Co.)

THERE are some books which are so good that one regrets they are not better. Such is Mr. Thorold's 'Six Masters in Disillusion.' Mr. Thorold is a critic of considerable ability. He possesses two faculties seldom found together: the faculty for discussing in a sound and agreeable way works of foreign literature, and the faculty for canvassing in an entertaining manner new ideas in philosophy. Unhappily, in the present book these two faculties are not displayed in co-operation. The result is that the work falls into two pieces which have no connexion with each other. If Mr. Thorold's six masters in disillusion were really Fabre, Huysmans, and Maeterlinck on the one hand, and Fontenelle, Mérimée, and Anatole France on the other—as by his title he pretends they are—his point of view would hardly be worth noticing; for it is surely incontestable that the grounds of thought of the former three writers are entirely different from those of the latter three. Mr. Thorold himself tells us that Maeterlinck "has the divine gift of mysticism" combined with an "optimism which is but faintly tempered with the delays and incertitudes of science," and that Huysmans is a sincere Christian who "resuscitates for us in his vibrant pages that old world" of the ages of faith, "and makes it live once more with its fantastic hopes and fears, its heaven and hell, its angels and saints and demons." How, then, can these messengers of hope be "masters in disillusion"? The fact is that there is nothing in the papers on Fabre, Huysmans, and Maeterlinck bearing on the subject-matter of the rest of the work. They are merely pleasant, desultory essays in appreciation which have been included presumably to fill out a volume of 160 pages. This is regrettable; for Mr. Thorold goes into a matter of importance in his Preface, Epilogue, and the articles on Fontenelle, Mérimée, and Anatole France: he might have pursued his inquiry in three more studies on Chateaubriand, Sainte-Beuve, and Renan. Then we might have had a little, but good book on a subject of high interest.

When the dust and clamour of the nineteenth century are laid and stilled, two great fabrics of philosophic thought will, we think, be clearly distinguishable, the French and the German. To the present reviewer the French seems the more durable, for it has been cast in a lasting and attractive form, the form of literary art. Moreover, it is related to the great traditions of European culture. Much as the metaphysicians of the German and English schools disagree among themselves, they have one main defect in common: they break away from the traditions of historic Christianity. Some of them resort to Oriental sources of wisdom; others go back to the early Greek thinkers; the more conservative return to Plato or Aristotle; the more progressive try, rather vainly, to find some new basis for speculation in the theories of modern science. Neither in their essays in Gnosticism nor in their essays in scepticism do they penetrate into the arcana of Christian mysticism, or sound the abysses of Christian despair. The sceptics among them know what doubt is: they do not know, in full measure, what disillusion is. A cultivated Catholic nowadays reads the works of ordinary sceptics with mere impatience: they seem to him to speak about his religion as men who had never been moved by a fine melody might speak about music. The veritable masters of the philosophy of disillusion are Chateaubriand, Sainte-Beuve, and Renan.

Sainte-Beuve, as Anatole France has said, was the St. Thomas Aquinas of the modern era. Literary criticism was to him only a means of approaching, in a subtle, yet direct way, the fundamental problems in philosophy—the problems of temperament, conduct, and character. He was one of the very few students of the human spirit with an experimental method of investigation. His own vast store of living knowledge was amassed in a long course of spiritual adventures. His nimble, vagrant, impressionable soul went through almost every variety of religious experience before it settled wearily down in a mood of despair, compared with which the confident, busy scepticism of men like Huxley seems to be merely the distemper of a half-educated mind. What makes Sainte-Beuve and his disciple Renan so impressive is that they combine a profound sense of universal disillusion with a fine, true insight into the power, the secret, and beauty of religion. They are writers of the stamp of Pascal and Newman, though fallen from grace; and when they go down into the abyss they still keep about them a certain air of spiritual grandeur. Beside them, Mr. Thorold's "masters in disillusion"—Fontenelle, Mérimée, and Anatole France—appear rather insignificant. The disillusion of these three writers is not founded on the ruin of aspirations as high as those of the disciples of Lamennais and Dupanloup. They have never hoped. How, then, can they have tasted all the bitterness of regret and despair?

Une Merveilleuse (Madame Hamelin), 1776-1851. By Alfred Marquiset. (Paris, Honoré Champion.)

WHY should Barras and Madame Tallien be remembered, while Montrond and Madame Hamelin have been till recently forgotten? Readers of the Comtesse de Boigne, of Princess Lieven, and of the Duchesse de Dino will recall allusions to Montrond and to Madame Hamelin, explained, indeed, in the former case, but hardly in the latter. The first and most important volume of the 'Lettres et Documents pour servir à l'Histoire de Joachim Murat' contain allusions to the interest of which has not been sufficient to lead Prince Murat's editor, the learned M. Paul le Brethon of the Bibliothèque Nationale, to include the name of Hamelin in his otherwise excellent index. The very last letter in the first instalment of that book is, however, one worth naming. It was addressed in 1801 by the wife of the First Consul to the Commander-in-Chief in Italy, Murat, then at Florence. It begins with the words "Le Citoyen Hamelin." The future empress, signing at length "Josephine Bonaparte," asks her "cher petit frère" to pay her debt for many commissions done for her by the great army contractor. With her usual impecuniosity and lack of order, she is full of "confidence" that the "dear little brother," the future King of Naples, will "arrange all this with the Citizen Hamelin." When Murat is allowed to make that "return to Paris (soon I hope)" for which he was alternately beseeching and blackmailing the First Consul, "I will arrange it with you, and you will not be a very wicked creditor." In this belief the virtual queen of France ends her letter thus: "Adieu, mon cher petit frère, je vous embrasse et vous aime de tout cœur." Hamelin had already financed Bonaparte's armies, upon a plan which Bonaparte himself called swindling, and had been prosecuted, but was again the chief contractor. He continued to help financially Joséphine and prominent members of Napoleon's family who were not on speaking terms with her.

The bare facts of the lives of Hamelin and his wife are in themselves amazing. Hamelin's father, ennobled in 1767, was one of the two powerful financiers of the ancien régime who escaped the guillotine—Delahante being the other. Young Hamelin was a dancing man of fashion, one of the leading Anglomaniacs, admitted to the balls of Marie Antoinette. He enjoyed himself in Paris during the Terror, and married in 1792. His wife was a San Domingo creole, differing from the other ladies contributed by the French Antilles to the gaiety of the Directory by a marked strain of black blood. She was ugly, and throughout her long life was a police spy. Like the other marriages of the time, except that of Joséphine, the Hamelin wedded life did not last long; but after a judicial separation both the contractor and Madame Hamelin remained close friends of all the governing people of the Consulate and Empire. When Hamelin made his exit from the private life of Madame Hamelin, Montrond came into it; and Montrond is known in history as Talleyrand's secret agent in the first thirty-four years of the nineteenth century. Under Montrond there worked all Talleyrand's spies; and Madame Hamelin was in the main employed by Talleyrand, but worked occasionally for Napoleon, for the Duc Decazes, and probably, like Fouché, for the British Government. When Fouché fell, she transferred her French work to Savary, his real successor; and during the days of her exile by the Restoration she lived with Savary from time to time, always, however, preferring the Comte de Montrond to the Duc de Rovigo. Like Tocqueville, Madame Hamelin prophesied the return of the Bonaparte dynasty in the person of Louis Napoleon, at the moment when he touched his lowest depth. Soon after Waterloo, the Duke of Wellington used to dine with Madame Hamelin, Bonapartist though apparently she was. At all events, her salon was the Bonapartist salon, and the ordinary police were watching her as the chief Bonapartist spy. Nevertheless, it is far from certain that she was not at the moment employed by the Court of Louis XVIII. to record the movements of those of whom she was the nominal head. During the embassy in London of the Duc Decazes she was employed by him, but her daily letters, so far as they exist, are hostile to the Court of which he was the official representative; yet when her daughter married, in the last years of the Restoration, the register was honoured by the signature of Charles X. himself. Madame Hamelin has always been credited in history with the chief share in the return from Elba, and was certainly an agent at the moment of Queen Hortense, and was received and directly employed by Napoleon during the Hundred Days. In the forties Madame Hamelin was the guest of the ex-Queen Hortense, then known as the Duchesse de Saint-Leu. Another guest, the Duchesse de Dino, had a contempt for Madame Hamelin as complete as was her aversion for Montrond—the one man to whom Madame Hamelin was comparatively faithful.

Comte Marquiset has the right to use the title which he has given to his volume; but although Madame Hamelin was one of the five leading women of that greatest day of women, the Directory—although her parties came next to those of Madame Tallien, and before those of Joséphine during the reign of Barras—yet there is little or no material in existence for recording Madame Hamelin's life before 1815. Our author is driven to write pleasantly about the times rather than to give us a biography of the heroine.

Among the gaps that we have left in our sketch of the chief events with which Madame Hamelin was connected, we fill by a word that relating to Franco-British history in 1807-10. The dismissal of Fouché for spying on Napoleon through Joséphine for the British Cabinet; the arrest of Ouvrard, the rival contractor, who had succeeded Hamelin; and the secret negotiations of Napoleon with our Government through Ouvrard and Labouchere, were sources of profit to Madame Hamelin. Savary had a delicate task in conducting the arrests, inasmuch as the Emperor's anger was intended for the public, and it was necessary not to reveal the use that he himself was making of the criminals. The future Duc de Rovigo called on Madame Hamelin, and, according to her account, beat about the bush so long before coming to his point that she had to tell him that she was expecting "two gentlemen" to call. When pressed, she added: "I have no reason for concealment. They are Talleyrand and Ouvrard." Savary bolted to the barracks of the picked gendarmerie who were directly under his control, and surrounded Madame Hamelin's house. Ouvrard he took away. Talleyrand he left in conversation with the hostess. Fouché the next day naturally remarked that Madame Hamelin had sold Ouvrard. But on that day Savary became officially Minister of Police, and Madame Hamelin flourished as his right hand. This was the moment at which she drew Chateaubriand into her net, and there she kept him for a generation, till Madame Récamier, blind and old, found in Madame Hamelin the most hated of her rivals.

Another moment of Madame Hamelin's known power was that when Montrond was dispatched to Vienna by Napoleon before Waterloo to try to bring over Talleyrand to his side, and Madame Hamelin afterwards sent by him on a similar secret mission. If the Emperor had time during the Hundred Days to be amused, the letters of Madame Hamelin, so far as we can judge by the few which remain, were calculated to afford him grim satisfaction.

From 1815 the police reports form the bulk of M. Marquiset's pages. Those which we have from the ordinary French police records are doubtless not the best. The best have probably been destroyed; but, such as they are, these reports throw light upon police methods. The observation under which the Bourbons kept not only our Whig peers, but even Wellington, is not surprising. We now know that suspicion in such quarters has no limits, and that letters written on the order of Bismarck by the Prussian Field Ministry of Foreign Affairs were opened during the siege of Paris by the Prussian General Staff. Louis XVIII. is noted by the Inspector of Police as having scolded the Duke of Wellington for his repeated visits to Madame Hamelin; but the details are obviously absurd, though the report is itself authentic. When Madame Hamelin was sent away from Paris by an act of State, she gave so much trouble to the secret police at Brussels by forming a Bonapartist headquarters composed of marshals of the Empire that it was thought better to bring her back again. In October, 1815, a search in the French Château of Lord Kinnaird led to her prompt flight while the police inspectors were detained at the front gate. But the trouble over her return was greater still. She was sheltered by an official amnesty. She was then stopped as the keeper of a gaming hell. She was again provided with a passport, and after the French representative in Belgium had given to this passport a special visa, she was detained by a royal counter-order at the frontier. Friends of all sorts in high places intervened, and the tears of Chateaubriand at last produced safety. The police reports went on. One calls the lady "the old priestess of the upset idol," and describes her salon as "the Sibyl's cave." How dangerous a person she was is proved by the copies of Montrond's letters to her. Then she turns up in London, and the French ambassador, the Marquis d'Osmond, writes to the Minister of Foreign Affairs that Madame Hamelin has been seen "in the park, driving in a carriage with a coat of arms." Montrond was in London at the time.

A letter well worth reading is to be found at p. 215, and is from Madame Hamelin to the Duc Decazes. It bears date in the month which followed the death of Caroline of Brunswick, and the last words are à la façon de Bergami, Mon ami.

Bergami, historians of the Queen's trial will remember, was the famous courier whose memory was short.

One of the strangest parts of Madame Hamelin's career was her attachment to the Saint-Simoniens, and intimate friendship with Michel Chevalier, at that time their secretary. When we remember up to how recent a date the widow of this distinguished economist was keeping house for M. Paul Leroy-Beaulieu (still happily among us), we are struck with the tie formed by Madame Hamelin's life between Paris society of 1792 and the professorial world of Paris under the Third Republic. The grandchildren of Cobden's friend, the negotiator of the Commercial Treaty of 1860 on the part of France, will hardly treasure the correspondence between the young Chevalier, Madame Hamelin, Hortense Allart de Méritens, and Père Enfantin.

Inasmuch as Chateaubriand in his memoirs carefully left out all allusion to Madame Hamelin by name, we note the correspondence here published, which shows how little truth there was in his promise given to Madame Récamier, as well as to that lady's acknowledged rival, never to see "Madame H." again. During his tenure of office as Minister for Foreign Affairs Chateaubriand had been in the habit of writing every morning to Madame Hamelin; and it is clearly established by M. Marquiset that she gambled on the Stock Exchange with the information thus obtained, and did so with Chateaubriand's knowledge. One result was the purchase of land in Paris on which a street was built which still bears Chateaubriand's name, though the Christian name of Madame Hamelin, given by her at the same time to another, has been changed: "L'Avenue Fortunée s'appelle aujourd'hui la rue Balzac." At the last, "sachant René immuablement fidèle et inconstant, elle se contenta d'une amitié durable."

M. Marquiset does not tell us much about payments made to Madame Hamelin for her secret services to various causes, but details are given by him as to the salary paid as late as 1842 by the Monarchy of July to Casimir de Montrond. All the great spies seem to have followed the example of Fouché in taking money from every quarter; but Talleyrand generally obtained their services gratis, being clever enough to make his enemies pay. Montrond had every reason to expect a large legacy from Talleyrand, but was disappointed at receiving only an old arm-chair. The Duchesse de Dino, who frankly states the horror with which she viewed her uncle's chief male friend, had evidently provided against a final acknowledgment of his sinister devotion.

NEW NOVELS.

Noblesse Oblige. By M. E. Francis. (John Long.)

MRS. BLUNDELL'S new book concerns itself with the fortunes of certain noble émigrés in London in the days of the French Revolution. Yvonne de Cassagnac, with a view to supplying the luxurious necessities of M. le Marquis her grandfather, is compelled, without his knowledge, and at the risk of his grave displeasure, to give dancing lessons in a semi-bourgeois family. There she lights upon her ultimate destiny in the person of M. Lenoir, a gloomy and mysterious compatriot who officiates in the same circle as music-master; and we are not startled when the latter finally blossoms forth as the Comte de Mévigny, and receives the due reward of much unobtrusive and faithful service. Though the characters evince an unexciting scrupulousness in doing what is expected of them, the story is brightly told, and makes pleasant reading.

'The Wassail Bowl,' with which the volume concludes, is a Christmas tale on ultra-Dickensian lines.

A Castle of Dreams. By Netta Syrett. (Chatto & Windus.)

MISS SYRETT shows herself, as usual, clever at handling an imaginative theme, but we are not sure that she has been wise in choosing Ireland as a background for her castle of dreams. Her Celtic peasants are painfully conventional, and speak a dialect which would hardly satisfy an expert critic in such matters. Yet, certainly, that portion of the story which deals with the heroine's neglected childhood and the heartlessness of her father is less unlikely to have occurred in John Bull's other island than among our own more commonplace—and better-principled—population. The humour, though sometimes telling, is scarcely spontaneous, and the British Philistines introduced are caricatures, not of the highest order; but the book can boast of a wholesome love-interest and a happy ending.

Syrinx. By Laurence North. (Heinemann.)

THIS is an interesting, almost an important story. Three purposes are fulfilled in it. It expresses hints of a new social manifestation; it preserves (in difficult circumstances) an air of sanity and reality; and it inspires in a reader the desire to know what will happen. Yet the novel is not so much one of incident as of character and manners. One knows that obscure intellectual and moral forces are working a change in a small section of English society. Here their probable effect is made visible by an original observer. The name on the title-page is unfamiliar to us; but the handling suggests experience and ease. Observation, imagination, and reticence are all there. The result may seem to some people far from charming, or even wholesome, but it is as far from being stupid. And though the author avows no personal bias in favour of his men and women, there are indications that he may be himself on the side of the angels. The leading lady is a modern Aspasia, a scholarly girl-voluptuary, a connoisseur in, and truly devout worshipper of, every form of beauty, classic and modern. A little coterie of clever but shallow young men and women centres round her higher scholarship and bolder nature. The author holds a delicate balance between them and his real Intellectuals. Some of these are excellent, and, in a quiet way, suggestive of his own accomplishment and knowledge of human nature.

Ione Chaloner. By the Earl of Iddesleigh. (John Murray.)

THOUGH placed amid the stirring scenes of the '45, Ione Chaloner is a modern young lady with nothing particularly interesting or original about her. Blessed with surpassing beauty, and being also an heiress, she becomes, as was to be expected, the victim of a plot; but the cunningly conceived devices of Sir Charles Dawley, her rebuffed lover, and his faithful dependant are tedious to follow, and do not seem to have been regarded seriously by any of the persons affected. The heroine's aunt, a foolish old lady whose Jacobite leanings provide material for certain playful passages—is mildly amusing; but the rest of the characters are on conventional lines, and the author's style lacks distinction.

The Dream—and the Woman. By Tom Gallon. (Stanley Paul & Co.)

THE key to Mr. Tom Gallon's mystery is a murder that turns out to be no murder, thus enabling the supposed victim—a species of cosmopolitan refugee of the most approved ruthlessness—to begin life anew and become a thorn in the side of the virtuous. A ruined castle on the Cornish coast is the scene of the more bloodthirsty episodes, and gives occasion for some picturesque and, at times, vivid descriptive writing; while hints of a South American revolution in the background lend colour to the prevalent atmosphere of espionage and assassination. Mr. Gallon has resorted to Wilkie Collins's method of narration, and the principal personages—including a somnambulistic lady and her daughter, a briefless barrister, and an impulsive millionaire—by turns take up the tale with a verisimilitude that goes far to atone for a too abundant use of coincidence. The characterization, being subordinate to the intricacies of the plot, does not call for remark, except in the case of a strong-minded lady whose refreshing brusqueness may perhaps be traced to the influence of Miss Betsy Trotwood.

The Last Persecution. By S. N. Sedgwick. (Grant Richards.)

MR. SEDGWICK'S novel opens in 1947, when England and the whole of Europe are under the heel of Chinese power, personified in a mysterious veiled being, residing in Buckingham Palace, and known by the name of "The Ping Wang." The subject races are permitted by their conquerors to do very much as they please until the religious bickerings aroused by a General Election in England lead to an inquiry, and the ultimate abolition of the Christian religion in favour of universal Confucianism, with a view to promoting peace and quietness. The persecutions consequent upon this proceeding—an impressive trial in the Albert Hall, beheadings on the steps of St. Paul's, burnings in Trafalgar Square, and torturings everywhere—supply the main incidents of the story, in which a curate and a semi-Chinese nobleman of peculiarly diabolical tendencies stand for the opposing forces of good and evil. The characterization, if at times exaggerated (as in the case of the two persons already mentioned), is, in the main, strikingly life-like; and the book shows the author's power as a realist.

The Dukedom of Portsea. By Alice Maud Meadows. (Werner Laurie.)

A DIVORCED duke settles in Africa, and there marries a coloured woman. At his death he leaves a son by her, as well as the heir by his English wife. Until then the half-caste son has not been told of the existence of his brother, and sails for England with murder in his heart. He has never heard of the dukedom, but to lose the large African property is more than he can bear. Many of the social figures in England, male and female, especially a very Belgravian mother, Lady Clarice, are deftly drawn; but the coloured desperado, who fails in his attack on his brother, is a little crude. On the other hand, there are some pleasant sketches of honest British colonists, and the local colour is good.

L'une et l'autre. By J. Marni. (Paris, Pierre Lafitte & Cie.)

PRAISE in which we did not join has recently been heaped on the lighter writings of Madame Jeanne Marni, but we note with pleasure the appearance of a simple novel from her pen. Madame Marni's dialogues we had been unable to notice in our pages, as their indelicacy did not appear to be relieved by the wit of Henri Lavedan, Abel Hermant, "Gyp," or "Mab." Despite the fashion, we should be inclined to place them rather with the easy trivialities of "Richard O'Monroy." Readers of 'L'une et l'autre' will find the volume more fit for general circulation than others bearing Madame Marni's name. Her ability no one can doubt who has seen or read "Le Joug," a play produced at the Vaudeville as chiefly, though not wholly, hers. We do not find her present novel sufficiently remarkable to justify selection for review, except, indeed, for such a difference from her previous work as gives promise for the future. In the mean time we commend the book in which the modern problems of women's position in industry find their place.

ANATOLE FRANCE IN ENGLISH.

The Well of Saint Clare. By Anatole France. Translated by Alfred Allinson. (John Lane.)—The versions of the great French author already published make it plain that the difficulties of translation have been under-estimated. What is disheartening about the series is that not one of the translators seems to have a sense of style—the reader asks himself whether they have ever hesitated over the turn of a phrase or the choice of a word. Mr. Alfred Allinson, it is true, has a style, but not one that we can praise. Unnecessary adjectives are freely inserted, while the rhythmic structure of the sentence is often destroyed by inversions and changed relationships. Occasionally Mr. Allinson's vocabulary fails him, and he has to translate French by French. We fail to understand why he renders raisins as "roses," cresson as "water-weed," gentille as "gallant," gueule as "belly," audacieux as "a hero," cubes as "cubes," défiant as "unscrupulous," and so on. These are matters of detail, but matters of importance in this case.

The Crime of Sylvestre Bonnard appears in a version made by Lafcadio Hearn. We noticed this translation briefly on its appearance. The Americanisms of style and the misprints on which we remarked are still there, the latter increased in number. Hearn's translation has the merit of being easily read, though it contains such phrases as "He had been on bad terms with some poachers, whom he used to shoot at like rabbits"; its faults are due to the fact that Hearn did not know enough French when he made it. He translates nous as you; apside, apsis; moulin à eau, windmill; fête, birthday; délicat, polite; hôte, hostess; charte, chart; bandeaux noirs, black fillet, &c. He leaves as untranslatable tartine, poivrière, foulard, bonne, graines à gratter, &c. He thinks ragouts are cooked in a frying-pan, and prints "Cosmography of Munster" as if it were a work relating to Munster. Surely the general editor of a series should consider the correction of faults like these as part of his duties. Further, let us say it briefly, the issue of this translation in an edition of the complete works of Anatole France is hardly fair to the public. Anatole France has completely rewritten the whole book since its translation in 1890, and, needless to say, improved it. Mr. Frederic Chapman is not equal to his responsibilities as general editor. If he thought that Anatole France had spoilt the book by the alterations he had made and that this earlier piece of work was worth preserving, the public should have been told this in so many words. At present their only chance of learning the fact is a note on the back of the title-page: "Copyright 1890 By Harper and Brothers, all rights reserved."

Balthazar, which has been translated by Mrs. John Lane, is much more accurate than the preceding versions, though sufficient reference has not been made to the grammar, and the "horrid" concatenations of short words have had their usual success in misleading the translator. Il n'y a de vrai que ce qui est divin is not "Only that which is true is divine." Balthazar when he first sees the Star of Bethlehem speaks of him who "is born" (naître) under it; later, when he meets the other Magi, he refers to the child "who is about to be born" (vient de naître). The treatment that Anatole France's style receives may be judged from the translation of oubliait son empire, "was employing his time in forgetting his country," the merit of the phrase being that it conveys the idea of the imperfect tense, which the translator usually neglects. Les joies du Carmel can hardly be "the festival of our Lady of Mount Carmel," which happens in mid-July, since the snow is on the ground; we do not speak of "Norman" architecture in Aquitaine, but call it Romanesque; nor is anything gained by changing Roman chevaliers into "nobles." The author's zoology of the cuttlefish is correct; Mrs. Lane makes it inaccurate. A correction of l'avenue de l'Impératrice on p. 41 seems wrong and to have been badly carried out. We must add that the translation has fine moments; the last paragraph of 'Balthazar' proves that Mrs. Lane is capable of really good work.

SCANDINAVIAN LANGUAGES AND LITERATURE.

The Elder or Poetic Edda.—Part I. The Mythological Poems. Edited and translated by Olive Bray (Viking Club).—A new translation of the Edda poems has long been needed, that by Thorpe being antiquated and out of print, and that in the 'Corpus Poeticum Boreale' scarcely attractive enough for the general reader. The tastes of the latter will be more adequately met by Miss Bray's version, of which the first half has appeared in the work named above. The Icelandic text of the poems and the translation are printed on opposite pages, a method which may encourage some users of the book to learn to read the original. The text is satisfactory for the purpose, except for some misuse of the letter ö; and if this very modern sign was to be used, there is not much point in retaining þ for ð. (The capital "thorn" is very bad, and much more like a "wén.") Both text and translation are printed in "long lines," no doubt the most convenient method for a quarto page; but where this is touched upon in the Introduction, it would not have been amiss to explain that in all Icelandic practice and tradition it is the "short line" which is the metrical unit. In the case of 'Hárbarðsljóð' the absence of "any definite principle in the metre" is surely due to the fact that the reciter had forgot most of the original wording, and was able to give only the substance of the poem. On the other hand, 'Hymiskviða,' to which the epithets "rude," "ill-strung," and "clumsy" are applied, is one of the few Edda poems which are composed in absolutely correct scaldic verse. The translation has evidently been done with much care and close study of the latest authorities; departures from the original are obviously due for the most part to considerations of rhythm, by which the readableness of the version is certainly increased. This has often led to considerable expansion of the wording, as when the word sær is rendered by "the billows of the sea" or himinn by "the sphere of heaven"; but on the whole the middle course between bald literalism and poetic freedom has been successfully followed. The difficult question of attempting to translate the proper names is mentioned in the Introduction: it is impossible to be consistent in this matter, but if Svásuðr in one line means "Sweet-south," Vásuðr in the next can hardly mean "Sorrow-seed." Why Loddfáfnir should be rendered "Stray Singer" is not clear, especially as the foot-note admits that the meaning is unknown. Fortunately the names which are not translated are given in their Icelandic form: "Thiodwolf" on p. iii. is exceptional.

The Introduction (of eighty pages) will help towards the understanding of the poems, both on the mythological and literary side. Perhaps the latter is sometimes a little exaggerated: what are called "magnificent strophes" in 'Grímnismál' might equally well be regarded as a mere alliterative list of some of Odin's many names. It is highly probable that in this, and several poems of the same kind, the real theme is not the story (however striking this may be) but the mythic lore, which the poet simply puts into this setting to make it more attractive, and more easily remembered. This is no doubt also the explanation of part of 'Fáfnismál' and 'Sigrdrífumál'; but in these the poet has chosen heroic instead of divine persons to supply the dramatic interest. The character of these pieces also accounts for the numerous interpolations, the presence of which is not made sufficiently clear in this volume. Many of these are perhaps not real interpolations made by the reciters, but fragments recalled by one or other member of the company while the poem was being written down, and noted at once by the collector to prevent their possible loss. The conditions under which the Edda poems would naturally be collected have certainly not been sufficiently realized by all the scholars who have discussed them. In the present Introduction nothing is said on this point, and the difficult questions relating to the origin and date of the poems are only lightly touched upon. On p. lxiv there is a curious combination of errors in the sentence: "In Denmark strange rites were observed, with burning of rings at Baldrshagi ('Friðjofssaga')." The scene of this saga is in Norway, and "burnt rings" only means that they were of refined metal. The note to bautasteinar on p. 81 would certainly lead the reader to suppose that the words "thousands of which are preserved" related to Iceland, which is not the case. The use of rennet "in Iceland," mentioned on p. 101, is common enough in other countries. These, however, are small matters, and do not affect the general value of Miss Bray's work, which will no doubt be to many readers a welcome opening-up of one of the great storehouses of old Northern mythology and poetry.

Translations from the Icelandic. Translated and edited by the Rev. W. C. Green. (Chatto & Windus.)—It was only right that a series like "The King's Classics" should include a volume of translations from Icelandic, but it is a pity that a better one was not found than this. The choice of specimens is far too limited, and that not by the exigencies of space, but by the mistaken judgment of the translator in giving more than half of the book to verse. Even the best possible renderings of Old Icelandic poems must be failures, more or less, and their place would be better filled with pieces of good prose. It is still worse to give up twenty-five pages to religious verse of the seventeenth century, which in translation has nothing specially Icelandic about it. Worst of all is the waste of over fifty pages on metrical renderings (called "ballads" in the Preface) from the prose of the sagas! The result is that the prose pieces are limited to a few extracts from one part of Snorri's 'Edda' and passages from five sagas. These are on the whole accurately translated, and in readable English; it is misleading, however, to make Egil "sing" his verses, while Gunnlaug "recites" his. There are some irregularities in the forms of proper names, and a few misprints, but these will probably not trouble the reader much. The translation of proper names is overdone in the case of "Gray" for the horse-name Grani (not "Gráni"). Some of the statements in the Preface betray an imperfect knowledge of facts. It is not the case "that most of the days of our week were named from Scandinavian deities." The writing of Icelandic records did not begin about A.D. 1000, but more than a century later. That the Edda poems "were collected by Sæmund the learned" ought not to be stated as a positive fact, however much one may wish to believe it. The cases in which the poets used kennings "purposely to puzzle the hearer" were certainly exceptional: that the modern reader is puzzled is another matter. The statement that "the Icelandic prose is... more interesting and more valuable than the Icelandic verse" might bear qualification; but if the translator had acted more upon his own maxim, the result would have been more representative of Old Icelandic literature as a whole.

Etymologisk Ordbog over det norrøne Sprog paa Shetland. By Jakob Jakobsen. Part I. (Copenhagen, Vilhelm Prior.)—In the preface to his dissertation on 'The Norn Tongue in Shetland' which was published in 1897, Dr. Jakobsen intimated that he had in view a more comprehensive work, of the nature of a dictionary, dealing with this highly interesting remnant of Scandinavian speech. The first part of this has now appeared, under the above title, and will be welcome to all who take an interest in Shetland and its dialect, as well as to many whose Scandinavian studies are of a wider character. It can have been no light task to bring together the mass of material contained in these pages, to weigh carefully the arguments for and against the inclusion of each word, and to find the original form which it probably represents. In consequence of immigration and influence from Scotland, the Norse or Norn (i.e., Norræn) tongue in Shetland gradually declined during the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries, until by 1800 it had virtually ceased to be spoken. It has left its traces, however, on the mixed Scottish and English dialect which succeeded it, and how extensive these traces are may be realized by a glance at Dr. Jakobsen's dictionary, which in 240 double-columned pages has not reached the end of the letter G. For most of the words he has included there is full justification; and even if the doubtful cases were removed, the bulk would not be sensibly diminished. Yet in spite of the extensive vocabulary thus collected, it is clear that what has been preserved is but a miserable fragment of what once existed, and that in the days of its full vigour the Norwegian of Shetland exhibited the richness and variety of words and idioms which still mark the dialects of Norway. Had the old speech been able to hold out for another century, much more would have been rescued, and Dr. Jakobsen's task, while rendered more extensive, might in some ways have been less difficult. Nothing more strikingly marks the stage of decay at which the language has arrived than the number of cases in which he is unable to give any certain answer as to the etymology of the word. Although the uncertainties of Shetland phonetics may render more than one explanation possible, it is sometimes difficult to accept any of Dr. Jakobsen's suggestions as a satisfactory solution. Where he has failed, it may be hard or impossible to do better; but one is left with the feeling that it ought not to be so often necessary to postulate a form which occurs nowhere else in the whole Scandinavian area. This applies not only to the words in ordinary use, but also to the curious "haaf" words used at sea in order to avoid mentioning a thing by its proper name; most of these are clearly of Scandinavian origin, but many of them are disguised beyond recognition.

In a certain number of cases Dr. Jakobsen has perhaps not sufficiently considered the probability that the word he cites is not Norn at all, but of Scottish or English origin; yet as a rule he has been cautious in this respect. In doubtful cases it is natural enough that he should incline to the Scandinavian side, where a scholar belonging to this country would be apt to take the other view. A more intimate knowledge of Lowland Scottish than can be acquired from Jamieson or Wright might sometimes even have led Dr. Jakobsen to omit a word, or to express his opinion differently. There is one clear example of this in the following entry: "Banger, in the expression 'to skirl op de banger,' to sing very strong and loud. Probably a derivative of O.N. bang, noise, din." Probably few Scots would have failed to recognize in this a direct echo from Burns's 'Ordination,'

O' double verse come gie us four, where Bangor is the name of a well-known psalm tune.
An' skirl up the Bangor,

Of other words on which some remark might be made, a few must suffice. Akami, a worn-out lean creature, is more likely to be an alteration of attamie, "an-atomy," than of an unknown Old Norse af-komi. In alikasi, a pet lamb, the ali- is certainly Norn, but cade in this sense is common in English dialects, though apparently unknown in Scotland: the precise relationship of kadi and cade is thus somewhat puzzling. In andelokk, ondelokk, mishap, misfortune, for which Edmondston has angaluck, it is surely simpler to see the Dutch ongeluk than to suggest such an impossible form as and-ga-lukka, "where ga in the old prefix." The history of this prefix in Scandinavian is fatal to such a suggestion; and equally improbable are Dr. Jakobsen's explanations of certain words beginning with b-, in which he sees the prefix bi-, bc-.

To comment further on individual words would lead too far into particulars, and might convey a wrong impression of the work as a whole. It is undoubtedly one of the most important contributions of recent years to the study of Scandinavian dialects, and will take rank as a standard work. It will also serve a useful purpose if it leads future dictionaries of Lowland Scots to exclude, as lying outside their province, the purely Shetland (and Orkney) words of which it treats. It is to be hoped that the issue of the remaining parts will not be long delayed.

HOLIDAY READING.

Green Ginger (Hutchinson & Co.) is not in Mr. Arthur Morrison's original and austere vein; it is a popularization of his special knowledge of Essex and the East End. These short stories have probably all appeared in magazines, and some of them are so slight that they might well have been left there. On the other hand, we should have been sorry to miss others, as, for example, the tale of the Conjurer who conjured too complacently with a thief, and the tale of the man who sold his hate to the devil; or the story of Snookey Timms. The last is a character after Mr. Morrison's heart, and reminds one of earlier books. But here he is of necessity material for comedy, nor do we regret it: Mr. Morrison's humour has grown more mellow and kindly, and 'Dobbs's Parrot' is the sort of work we might have expected from Mr. Jacobs. But we are bound to express our disapprobation of the shocking morals of these quondam associates of the author. He apologizes himself for Snookey, and Bill Wrag is pretty nearly as bad. We do not consider Mr. Morrison does himself justice by opening his volume with two of the least successful tales. The good wine is for the most part at the other end.

The tales in Brothers All, by Maarten Maartens (Methuen & Co.), are of unequal merit, but on the whole it cannot be said that the author shows at his best in them. The majority deal with the Dutch peasant, an unattractive personage, it would seem, whose character has not a little in common with that of the rigid Calvinistic Scot who has been sufficiently exploited in fiction. Certainly Maarten Maartens represents his compatriots in a very unamiable light, and though he can sentimentalize on occasion, we cannot help feeling that he is often out of sympathy with his subject. Many of the stories are decidedly lacking in substance, but a deft and agreeable manner of narration generally carries them off successfully enough. One or two excursions into the farcical strike us as the reverse of happy.

The Painted Mountain. By Peter Lauristoun. (Chatto & Windus.)—"The Painted Mountain" is the Lebanon—a Lebanon temporarily exalted to a sort of Balkan independence, with Beyrout annexed by way of capital—and serves as the setting for a rambling and prolix narrative in which the minor characters loom largest. So far as a main theme, concerned with definite human personalities and passions, is discernible at all, it is found in the tragic, but discursively treated love of a half-breed for a pretty and businesslike woman. This source of interest, however, is so belated in its development as to suggest an after-thought, for the story early resolves itself into a zealously didactic exposition of the scenery and customs of the Mountain, the ancient feud between Druso and Maronite, and the methods of British diplomacy, personified in Sir Philip Ruthven, the Consul-General. When not usurping the functions of the guide-book, or the essayist, Mr. Lauristoun writes easily and with some humour. His portraits of the little English colony are well done, as also is the too brief sketch of one Mikhail Bey, a Beyrouline; but haphazard construction constitutes a serious flaw, and the persons of the tale, one and all, move stiffly.

Woman's Looking-Glass. By Constance Evan Jones. (Nisbet & Co.)—Since the days of 'Shirley,' the superfluous woman has been constantly with us in fiction, and no thinking person will maintain that the complicated problem for which in real life she stands has even now been more than provisionally solved. But a question which has occupied Charlotte Brontë and George Gissing needs freshness and distinction of treatment if it is to be made the central theme of a novel, and there is not much of these qualities here. The agony is piled on to an extent which makes it impossible to consider the heroine's case representative. Her aunt is abnormally brutal, just as the object of her affections is abnormally irresponsible, and she herself abnormally invertebrate. Yet during the period of her adversity she does excite our pity, but it changes sharply to contempt when, at the age of thirty-five, she suddenly finds herself in possession of nine thousand a year, and welcomes this favour of the gods in the same lachrymose manner as her former troubles. In the interests alike of a possible husband and of that blessed word "eugenics," we are constrained to rejoice that she remains single.

Margery Pigeon. By Jane Wardle. (Arnold.)—This novel is radiant with benevolent comicality. Margery, a pretty barmaid, escapes the dishonourable importunities of the manager of a London public-house, and enters the service of a widowed lady of title, who passes her off as her Australian niece with the object of making a fool of her snobbish sister. The imposture is successful, and is highly ludicrous when Margery ministers to a thirst for information about her fictitious home by quoting verbatim from a work on Australia. The hero's ascent of the first rungs of the ladder of journalism inspires some interesting chapters, and there is a freshness about the tale which enables one to tolerate the coincidences that speed it to a happy close. Though the author has an aptitude for humour, she should beware of the dullness resulting from lack of vitality in humorous writing.

The opening sentence of Chip, by F. E. Mills Young (John Lane), is descriptive of the sky at sunset, and has so familiar a sound that it is pleasing to find that the author has a tale to unfold of unusual romantic interest. The scene is a farm in South Africa, near the borders of Swaziland, where a jilted Englishman rules his grumbling native labourers with a rod of iron, and nurses a bitter feeling against women. The theme of the story is the effect on his character of an exhibition of the feminine temperament through the medium of a young woman, disguised as a man, who becomes his partner. The secret, though soon guessed, is not told to the reader till late in the story; and considerable power is shown in the narration of the ugly incidents which follow the woman-hater's discovery of her sex.

The pathos belonging to people who sign the death-warrant of their happiness is exhibited with grim determination by Mrs. Jessie Ainsworth Davis in A Forsaken Garden (John Long). Her hero and heroine are highminded Irish people whose marriage is hindered by the refusal of the girl's invalid father to accept a substitute for her filial services. The hero, a man of science, having aroused his fiancée's magnanimity by an unhappy letter, receives his freedom, and marries a girl whom he does not love on the day when the news reaches him of the death of the heroine's father. The heroine becomes an English teacher in a convent school, and by taking the veil prepares the way for another crushing display of Fate's perversity. Though provokingly artificial in structure, the tale is touching. Particularly good is the scene between the hero and a light woman with whom he dines in a London restaurant on Christmas Day.

The principal theme of An Adventure in Exile, by Mr. Richard Duffy (Stanley Paul & Co.), a mildly interesting tale, is the love of a wealthy young American for a French beauty, whose bad husband conveniently dies after a motor-car accident. Mr. Duffy attains his highest level in the episode of a Normandy servant-girl who commits suicide in despair at being jilted for the third time. One of the characters talks American in an amusing style.

A King's Treachery. By Albert Lee. Illustrated by Watson Charlton. (Pilgrim Press.)—The revolt of the Huguenots in France under Charles IX., and the religious tyranny of the Duke of Alva in the Netherlands, provide Mr. Lee with materials for a romance suitable for a school prize, containing abundance of alarms and excursions, culminating in the massacre of St. Bartholomew. The historical characters include Charles IX., Coligny, and the Prince of Orange, the narrator being a young Huguenot, who acts as Coligny's messenger to the Prince when the latter is in hiding at Antwerp with a price on his head. Mr. Lee is apparently too humane to write powerfully on the theme he has chosen, and he contents himself with outlines and suggestions where another historical novelist might have horrified the reader.

The Mystery of the Myrtles. By Edgar Jepson. (Hutchinson.)—Mr. Jepson writes a great deal better than the average purveyor of sensation, and manages to interest us in his worshippers of the occult in a London suburb. But we think he wastes too much time on love-sentiment, which is out of place in a sensational narrative, and gives away a little too much of his secret at an early stage in the book.

Money, by Marie Connor Leighton (Ward & Lock), opens well, but hardly keeps up its promise. We have a wealth of mystery and excitement, but it is produced at the expense of probability, and the characterization is remote from life, lacking the convincing touches which make for reality.

In The Broad Road, by Annie S. Swan (Hurst & Blackett), we are presented with a sympathetic picture of Jewish life, high and low. A county family of the Christian faith has been brought low by the recklessness of its head, and is almost plunged in the depths of degradation by the eldest son. To the regeneration of the latter in particular, and the family in general, comes a Jewish financier—the motive being love for the daughter of the house. How the nobility of the Jew breaks down the barrier set up by difference of faith we leave our readers to learn, assuring them of much pleasant entertainment the while.

The Apostate, by Mr. B. A. Lloyd Maunsell (Allen & Sons), presents the conflict between spiritual art and sensual life with much insight into character. The hero, a visionary, becomes enamoured of a young girl dominated by the joy of living, and himself for a time gives way to the same domination. This constitutes his apostasy. Sickness sends him back to his higher motive in life; in fact, as our sympathy seems to be asked on behalf of the artist, we must say that the weakness of the tale lies along the familiar line. "The devil was ill, the devil a monk would be." There is a verisimilitude about the ending which makes the closing tragedy of the ill-matched couple effective.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

ON the Continent we are supposed to have paid for the extraordinarily successful event of last summer described by Mr. Charles Roden Buxton in his volume Turkey in Revolution (Fisher Unwin). It is of little use for Britons to explain that we are not given to paying from "Secret Service" for revolutions, although the Garibaldian expedition to Marsala and Naples may possibly have been an exception to the rule. If so, it was the last. Neither are there large funds at the disposition of British ministers for such a purpose, even were their habits such as to make it conceivable that they should so employ the taxpayer's money. Nevertheless, the suddenness and completeness of the movement make it remarkable in so high a degree as to account for the ridiculous suspicion. A Spanish pronunciamento has always been the act of some one general to which others have adhered. But in Turkey the whole army was prepared for the revolution, and the selection by the committee in Paris of a particular army corps was dictated by reasons here set forth, but was not a case of Hobson's choice of that or nothing. The geographical situation and the susceptibilities of adjoining Powers and of local "bands" were carefully weighed. Mr. Roden Buxton is probably aware of earlier suggestions by journalists and politicians upon the Continent who do not understand our national ways, to the effect that the Balkan Committee itself, with which several of his family have, we believe, been connected, was the disburser of millions for the purposes of a policy anti-Austrian in its main lines, though viewed with suspicion not only at Vienna, but also at St. Petersburg. He contrives, however, to write a book which is not, as some might expect, specially pro-Bulgarian: it is, on the contrary, marked by conspicuous fairness, and is highly interesting.

The striking illustrations are of various degrees of accuracy and merit, for they have been collected by strange means and from diverse sources. Some of the Turkish caricatures combine absence of artistic merit with excellent picturesqueness and character. One called 'An Official of the Old Régime' represents Izzet Pasha standing, with a smile childlike and bland, before a table at which sit two indignant representatives of Young Turkey, who present him with a bill due, in their belief, to the Turkish nation. This broadsheet, sold in the streets of Constantinople, will please admirers of rough but striking caricature. It did not prevent the mysterious escape of the Sultan's secretary, who, despite Sir Edward Grey's dispatches, was a guest at London dinner-parties a little later. The most curious of all the cuts contained in the volume is one which is truth and life itself.

Who the Briton was who "snapshotted" the Sultan alighting at the mosque at Selamlık we do not know; but had he taken his marvellously successful portrait a week earlier his life would have stood in danger. Even under the revolution the photograph appears to be prohibited, and is—as Mr. Buxton says—"unique." On the other hand, the picture of the Selamlık on a later page seems "fudged," for the head "of the Sultan" is undoubtedly not his. Several of the cuts seem to be from well-executed water-colour drawings, as, for example, that which represents the mutiny, against the revolution, of the Palace Guard. The reception of the Balkan Committee's delegates by the Sultan, who is making a speech to them, is probably very like the scene, but is also apparently from a drawing. A red flag, to which special attention is called by Mr. Buxton, forms a curious example of British enterprise, inasmuch as, lettered in Turkish and French, and bearing the date of the revolution, it has a look so foreign that the stamp "Bradford" fills one with surprise.

We congratulate Mr. Buxton on his admirable account of one of the most extraordinary events of history—now commemorated, indeed, in a somewhat wooden Blue-book, containing papers laid before Parliament by our Foreign Office, such as, to say the least of it, do not clear up the mystery. Within the first few pages of the thick official volume are to be found telegrams from our embassy foretelling the proceedings of Izzet Pasha, and proposing to save his life should he fly there from his pursuers; and next a note of his departure on board a British ship, of the stopping of the vessel under the batteries of the Dardanelles, and of the somewhat contradictory directions to our representative on the spot, preceded as they were by action on his part. All is no doubt well that ends well, even in the flight of a Turkish Pasha before a military rising in favour of a forgotten, but still existing Constitution. All the same, foreigners will read with some satirical surprise the dispatches in which strict orders are given that nothing shall happen of the nature of what had in part occurred before the dispatches were delivered. The German embassy, to which Izzet in fact repaired, until he left it for the British ship, had received his confidences perhaps more frequently than had the rival palaces; but Sultans' secretaries are too useful to diplomats to allow of their repulse when they present themselves in circumstances only less frequent in Constantinople than in Teheran.

A "BIOGRAPHY AND APPRECIATION" of a living statesman does not require long notice at our hands. That of The Right Hon. H. H. Asquith, M.P., by Mr. Frank Elias (James Clarke & Co.), is well executed, and we congratulate the author on the successful accomplishment of a most difficult task. The life of the Prime Minister as here set forth is frankly told, and offers more agreeable reading than most such books do. Much early history is brought up which, though forgotten, is worth reviving in the case of so distinguished a career. Few now remember that Mr. Asquith, though a practising barrister, found time to write upon economic questions for The Spectator and The Economist. The Corrupt Practices Act was more obviously in his line, for he first won distinction, apart from school and university, in working under that great draftsman and lawyer, R. S. Wright. It was from the chambers of that future judge that Mr. Asquith came to Sir Henry James as a skilled exponent of election law. Mr.

Asquith's books are not so plentiful as his unknown essays, and the election guide from his pen, published by the National Press Agency in 1883, is the more noteworthy.

WE have accorded exceptionally favourable treatment to several books from the pen of the Marquis de Ruvigny, who forms an exception among compilers of pedigrees by giving real attention to their historical side. The Nobilities of Europe (Melville & Co.) somewhat disappoints us, being more like the work of inferior men, and containing fewer elements of distinction. The plan is to deal with the interesting subject of dignities granted by rulers of other nations, and held by those of British allegiance or descent. The list of the countries treated strikes us as somewhat capricious, and the second part as both trivial and fragmentary. That much of interest can be collected from the volume is true, as it must be of any compilation to which the author of 'The Plantagenet Roll of the Blood Royal' has given time and labour. But it is a drop indeed to come from illustrious descents through Edward III. of England, James III. of Scotland, Edward IV. and Henry VII. of England, to the dozen pages of Britons decorated by Japan that end the present volume. We would not have it supposed that the whole book is of this type. But Part II. might be improved, largely by exclusion of the unimportant classes of undistinguished orders, and partly by the inclusion of some not named. We do not, indeed, understand the principle of selection. Some distinguished Englishmen—such, for example, as Prof. Jebb—have been justly proud of their Hellenic knighthood; but the Greek order, superior in standing to many of those given, appears to be omitted. The catalogue of Irishmen and Scots ennobled in the Holy Roman Empire and in Spain, and that of the Scotch and English ennobled in Russia, are, as might be expected, full of high romance; and here the Marquis de Ruvigny is dealing with topics which are worthy of his attention, but form unfortunately the smaller portion of his book.

A UNIVERSAL and hearty welcome will be given to the editio princeps of the Authorized Version of 1611, a fine reprint of which, in five volumes of the "Cambridge English Classics," has just been executed at the University Press, under the supervision of Mr. W. Aldis Wright. Of the A.V. there were in 1611 two issues, which, owing to a fault in the earlier ("and he [she] went into the citie," Ruth iii. 15), emended in the later issue, have come to be distinguished as the "He Bible" and the "She Bible" respectively. The modern text derives from the latter; the present reprint is of the former or "He Bible."

It will surprise some, and perhaps dismay not a few, Bible-readers to learn that the text of to-day differs in many particulars from that put forth "by his Majesties speciall comandement" in 1611. "Some of these differences"—we quote from the prospectus of the reprint—

"may have arisen from oversight; but by far the greater number are deliberate changes, introduced silently by men whose very names are often unknown. Words and phrases, spelling and punctuation, have been altered. Additions, too, have been made from time to time to the alternative renderings given in the original edition, while out of the vast collection of parallel texts which crowd the margin of our modern Bibles scarcely a seventh part is due to the original translators."

The purpose of the Cambridge reprint is to present the A.V. in a shape befitting its literary importance as

"in itself and by itself the greatest of English Classics—as the book which, if everything else in our language should perish would alone suffice to show the whole extent of its beauty and power."

The editor prints a list of some seven hundred and fifty variations noted by him while collating the two issues of 1611. One of these serves incidentally to illustrate the difficulty of attaining absolute fidelity of reproduction. According to the list, the earlier issue, or "He Bible," Gen. xxxiii. 2, reads, correctly, "their children," while the later issue, or "She Bible," reads "the children." On turning to the passage in the reprint we find that the text here gives "their children"—not "children"—which convicts the list of inaccuracy, unless indeed we are to conclude that the Cambridge compositors and readers of the text are here at fault.

Amongst several instances of erroneous deviation from the editio princeps the "She Bible" exhibits the following:—"and hee stayed yet over [other] seven dayes," Gen. viii. 10; "let my people goe, that they may serve thee [me]," Exod. ix. 13; "hee shall slay [flay] the burnt offering," Lev. i. 6; "among the bushes they prayed [brayed]," Job xxx. 7; and "though hand joyne in hand, he shall not be punished [unpunished]," Prov. xvi. 5. Elsewhere the "She Bible" rectifies an error of the earlier issue—as, for instance, in Jer. xxii. 3: "deliver the spoiled out of the hand of the oppressour," where the editio princeps reads "spoiler."

The tables of contents prefixed to each chapter, and the marginal alternative readings, present some curious points of difference. The substance of verses 5-9, for example, in the table of contents, 2 Sam. xxiv. is in the "He Bible" given thus: "The captaines in nine moneths and twentie dayes, bring the muster of eleuen thousand fighting men"—a strange blunder, seeing that verse 9 states explicitly that "there were in Israel eight hundred thousand valiant men that drewe the sword: and the men of Judah were fife hundred thousand men." Here the "She Bible" gives the correct total, "thirteen hundred thousand." Again, to the names of the constellations "Arcturus, Orion, and Pleiades" (Job ix. 9), the editio princeps appends the following marginal note: "Heb. Ash, Cecil, and Cimah." In the later issue of 1611 this reappears as "Heb. Ash, Cecil, and Cimah." Is Cecil merely a slip of the printer, or may it be the silent tribute of some courtly "reader" to the man at the helm, Robert Cecil, Earl of Salisbury, the director of England's foreign policy, the contriver of that sage, but unluckily frustrated scheme, the "Great Contract"? 'Twere to consider too curiously, perhaps, to consider so: indeed, the compliment, if compliment it was, came too late to serve the author, since before a year was out Robert Cecil, like the mighty eponymist of his race, Orion-Cecil, before him, had been called aloft. One other marginal note may be mentioned,—that on Jer. xii. 9: "Mine heritage is unto mee as a speckled bird, the birdes round about are against her." Here "speckled" is furnished with the alternative "or, tallented," in the earlier issue, and this reappears in the later as "or, talloned." Modern Bibles give, more intelligibly, "or, having talons."

We may add that these five volumes, pleasant to handle, and well printed on good paper, may be had in various stronger and handsomer bindings, as well as the now familiar red cloth of the "Cambridge English Classics."

Registum Ade de Orleton, Episcopi Herefordensis, A.D. 1317-27. (Hereford, Wilson & Phillips.)—We are glad to receive the second half of Bishop Orleton's Register, as issued by the Cantilupe Society of that diocese. The whole makes a volume of 409 pages, and the extended transcripts with brief English headings seem to have been done with much care and fidelity. We understand that this diocesan society is working in close and friendly relationship with the Canterbury and York Society, which has the general control of the publishing of the invaluable series of mediæval episcopal registers throughout England and Wales. Such an arrangement enables both societies to do better and fuller work.

Orleton presided over the See of Hereford during an interesting period, from 1317 to 1327. The subjects touched in the latter half of this register or act book are singularly varied. They include the reconciliation of the church of Monmouth, polluted by bloodshed; the appropriation by the Pope of the church of Shinfield to the fabric fund of Hereford Cathedral; the appointment of penitentiaries to hear confessions in reserved and other cases; dispensations for illegitimacy and other impediments to the taking of orders; sanction for the appropriation of various churches to monastic houses; a statement of the reforms effected by the Bishop in Abergavenny Priory; demands from the Papal Nuncio for arrears of his procurations from the diocese; and instances of purgation in the case of serious charges. We find also the inclusion of an anchorite or recluse in the church of St. Giles, Hereford; the removal of the Prior of Cherbury for irregularities; the causing of prayers to be offered in 1322 throughout the diocese for success in the campaign against Thomas of Lancaster and the other rebel lords; licence from the Bishop of London to the Bishop of Hereford to hold an ordination in the former's diocese; and sentence of excommunication against the Prior of St. Guthlac's, who had blasphemously attacked the Bishop whilst the latter was celebrating Mass in the church of Ross.

Some of the cases of which full details are given are of general as well as local interest, for they throw light upon the social life of the period. Cardinal Arnold, the Papal Nuncio, admitted to penance one William Wynewod, who, being a priest, served as a soldier and joined in various acts of homicide. He was not to be allowed any further exercise of his orders. This occurred in 1312, and seems to have been inserted in Orleton's Register as a precedent that might be followed in the complicated case of Hugh de Cardiff, which occurred in 1320. In November of that year the Pope's penitentiary admitted Hugh de Cardiff, who had slain a priest, to penance; and since Hugh was afraid to enter his own diocese of Coventry, he was to perform the enjoined penance in the diocese of Hereford. It was ordered that he was to proceed through all the greater churches of the city, with bare feet and stripped of garments except his breeches, carrying a rod in his hands and a scourge (corrigeam) round his neck; and before the doors of those churches he was to be scourged at a time when the greater number of people would be present, and there make a public confession. This order came from the Pope in November, and in the following month the Bishop instructed the Chapter of Hereford Cathedral to admit Hugh to penance in accordance with the letter of the Pope's penitentiary.

On December 17th the Chapter sent their certificate to the Bishop, stating that the penance had been duly executed. Two days later the Bishop duly forwarded this information to Walter Langton, the Bishop of Lichfield and Coventry; but on Christmas Eve Bishop Langton wrote to his brother of Hereford, begging him to act cautiously in the matter of Hugh de Cardiff, since his murder of Robert de Haselbech, formerly his chaplain, was inhuman and horrible, and stating that the papal letters he exhibited were probably false. To this the Bishop of Hereford replied that he had strictly carried out the instructions he had received, under undoubted authority from the penitentiary of the Roman Court; but that if Hugh de Cardiff failed to make full satisfaction, he would again excommunicate him. Part of the papal injunction in this case had been that Hugh was to make full satisfaction to the church served by the slain priest, and it was to this part of the sentence that the Bishop of Hereford referred.

Another curious case is recorded in this Register in February, 1321. Matthew de Ludlow had uttered certain blasphemous words against St. Thomas Cantilupe, who was Bishop of Hereford from 1275 to 1282, and also against his successor Richard Swinfield, who was bishop from 1283 to 1317. His brother Nicholas de Ludlow and Adam Munmouth interceded with the Bishop, pleading that the offence occurred in private before a few, and not publicly, and that it was done out of levity, rather than intentionally criminal. Whereupon Bishop Orleton declared that he would be content with a public confession of wrongdoing made by Matthew in the parish church of Ludlow at High Mass, after the offertory had been sung.

THE "Oxford Edition" of The Complete Poetical Works of Edgar Allan Poe (Frowde) is now available, to which three of his essays on poetry are added. The editor, Mr. R. Brimley Johnson, contributes a memoir judicious in tone, textual notes, and bibliography. We should have liked to see more recognition of the writers who have made a fair biography and a good text of the poems possible. Poe was certainly an irritating person, with a great lack of humour, and the editor does not reveal the silliness and vulgarity to which he could descend in criticism. Further, we find nothing about the three 'Essays on Poetry,' which contain some amazing views, e.g., the suggestion that Horace made a dactyl out of "Sunt quos cur-" in his first Ode! This is bad and mad enough even for a metrist.

IN La Littérature féminine d'aujourd'hui (Paris, Librairie des Annales Politiques et Littéraires) M. Jules Bertaut has an admirable subject which he treats with ability and perverseness. As the French would say, he breaks sugar over the heads of the women writers, but in such fashion as to show the profound dislike that underlies his compliments. The selection which he makes for immortality, with a larger class picked out for temporary fame, of itself reveals a certain prejudice. We are, however, inclined to forgive him much for his agreement with The Athenæum in placing Madame Tinayre's 'François Barbazanges' in something like its true position. The extraordinary success of that one of her books which immediately preceded our favourite brought into fashion the four early novels of Madame Tinayre, all of them unnoticed at the time of their appearance, and none of them first-rate; but few French critics have gone beyond the general public in finding the merits which differentiate that one novel, not of real life. It revealed Madame Tinayre as a romantic prose-poet of the highest order.

Like some English writers of the day, M.

Bertaut puts Madame Marni in the same class as Abel Hermant among men, and Gyp among women writers—a judgment in which we are unable to agree, for reasons given in another column.

Madame de Noailles and her most popular colleagues among the new women poets are praised by M. Bertaut for their literature at the expense of their morality. M. Bertaut is inclined to deny the "inferiority of feminine literature"; but he asserts the opinion, with an attempt at proof in several of his essays, that, with the exception of Madame Tinayre and few if any others, the women writers are all alike in taking a view of life, and the relations of the sexes in particular, far lower than that entertained generally by men. He admits, indeed, that "the phenomenon" is not unnatural, given the sudden "waking to life of a whole sex, which, coming out of a long slumber," becomes conscious of its distinct personality. The polite admission naturally follows of a possibility that a time may come when women may be no worse than men. Meanwhile "their avidity for work and their physical energy" are accompanied (in our author's view) by a drying-up of the heart to the advantage of the brain. Above all, he is convinced that it is established that "the woman sees the woman invariably in the same way. If all agree in this same visual conception, it is because it is accurate." In one of his amusing articles in Le Temps M. Pierre Mille, since the appearance of M. Bertaut's book, has related an imaginary conversation between two stupid readers on the subject of "literary maternity." A paragraph was supposed to have announced the discovery of an Italian lady who had written every line "of the works of Madame Marcelle Tinayre." Critical examination proved that the Signora was eleven years old at the date of the appearance of 'Avant l'Amour'; but the conclusion reached was a grudging "not guilty" with an obiter dictum: "Il trouvait idiot que les femmes se missent à écrire." The reader of M. Bertaut's sparkling pages cannot resist the feeling that the author has a certain sympathy with M. P. Mille's Philistine.

From his estimate of the work of Madame de Noailles we are not inclined to differ. Some will think that he goes a little "far," as the phrase runs, in declaring, after analysis, that "there do not exist in literature works more unhealthy or likely to have a more destructive influence, unless it be some by Gabriele d'Annunzio. Well-weighted minds resist; for others they distil poison." M. Bertaut excuses much by admitting often that "the moral law troubles women much less than it does us."

IN 1907 a volume by Prof. Raleigh appeared, entitled Shakespeare, in "The English Men of Letters Series," published by Messrs. Macmillan. It now reappears with the same title in the same publishers' "Eversley Series." It gives no hint of pre-existence, nor does it explain its reappearance by a plea of revision and expansion. We find, on careful comparison, that it is a verbatim reprint of the former edition. There is no variation except in binding and an expansion of the type, from 232 to 304 pages, which has involved some fresh work in regard to the Index. So the book can be truly called neither a first nor a second edition, and some information should have been given to show that it is a reprint. Messrs. Macmillan are generally careful to note such matters for readers.

As to the merits of the work itself we have already borne testimony—its critical acumen; its sympathetic revelations of the connexion between the poet and his works; and its inspiring effect upon readers and students. The author gives the results not of research among dusty records, but of long dwelling on the man and his works. We think it a pity that in this new issue occasion was not taken to correct one or two slips pointed out by reviewers.

THE firm of J. B. Wolters, of Groningen, have sent us K. ten Bruggencate's Engelsch Woordenboek, which is divided into two parts, 'Engelsch-Nederlandsch' and 'Nederlandsch-Engelsch.' This is the fourth edition, revised and improved by L. van der Wal, and on testing it we find it laudably comprehensive and accurate. Phrases as well as words are included: thus we find in the early pages an A.B.C. shop, "the school-master is abroad," and "the Devil's Own." Revision by a competent English scholar would have saved the inclusion of some words which are not English, e.g., "Academian" for the student of an Academy. Improvement is also needed in distinguishing between slang and ordinary speech.

In Search of a Polar Continent, 1905-7. By Alfred H. Harrison. Illustrated. (Arnold.)—The object of Mr. Harrison's venture was, in his own words, "to discover whether there was land hitherto unknown in the Arctic Ocean"; he had therefore the same end in view as Capt. Mikkelsen, of the Anglo-Danish Expedition, who set out in the same year. But Mr. Harrison was more ambitious, for his journey was prompted by the desire, "should opportunity offer," of reaching the Pole. But the work that he actually accomplished was of a far more modest character. He spent only five weeks of his two years on the Arctic Ocean, and these in waters annually visited by the whalers; the rest of his time was passed on the more familiar American continent.

As regards exploration, however, that time was by no means wasted. In the winter of 1906-7, which he spent with the Eskimo, he made a careful survey of the district marked on the chart as "Eskimo Lake," to the east of the Mackenzie delta; and he proved that there are really five lakes, connected only by narrow channels, and that the most northerly of these communicates with Liverpool Bay on the Polar Sea. The result of these researches is embodied in an excellent map, the data for which were collected with difficulty, in temperatures constantly below zero. There are also some good photographs, of which more than half represent scenes on Canadian rivers and at the fur-trading forts. Like most pioneers in these regions, Mr. Harrison often came perilously near to starvation; and he owed his success to adopting the mode of life of the Eskimo, to whose good qualities he pays a high tribute. His chapter on the two tribes with which he was associated is interesting, but does not contain much that is new. He did not fall in with Capt. Mikkelsen's ship, and perhaps that is the reason why his three attempts to spell the captain's name are all unsuccessful. The account of his adventures makes pleasant reading; it is plentifully strewn with allusions to Dickens, "tags" from Virgil, and occasional puns—which do not always look their best in print, even when they are explained in a foot-note.

The final chapter unfolds a scheme for reaching the Pole which is of a distinctly novel character, for it involves a winter sledge-journey from Banks Land to Spitzbergen, across the Pole. It is in the area included in this journey that Mr. Harrison expects to find his unknown "continent"; and we cannot but think that, in naming this book, he has used a title which would more fitly belong to the record of his future expedition—if he ever returns from it. He firmly believes that there is land at the Pole, but he gives no reason for this belief; and Arctic explorers generally are of opinion that if land exists in the Polar Basin—that is, north of the 85th parallel—it can only be in this very quarter, in the shape of small islands beyond the Parry Archipelago. But if land exists in large masses—which from the known direction of the Polar currents is most improbable—Mr. Harrison will find it an insuperable obstacle to the execution of his plan. The only difficulties which he recognizes are those of carrying supplies and evading open-water lanes. But he has forgotten that land is the invariable cause of formidable ice-pressures in the sea that surrounds it, and that it was only at a distance from land that Commander Peary and Capt. Cagni were able to make good progress in their sledge-journeys over the Arctic ice. On the other hand, if he meets with no land, his sledges will be drifted hither and thither, like the Fram and the Jeannette, at the mercy of the winds and currents. Nor is he consistent with regard to the open-water lanes which caused the failure of Mr. Peary's last attempt. On p. 60 he conjectures that the bow-head whale spends the winter in a large "polynia" or open-water space north of Alaska; but when advocating his scheme on p. 281 he says of the same "polynia" and others that they would be frozen over in winter. He makes nothing of the danger of winter travelling during the dark months, ignoring the fact that Commander Peary, during a far shorter December journey, lost nearly all his toes from frost-bite. Mr. Harrison thinks that such a journey without Eskimo would be fruitless. But when he was at Herschel Island he found it impossible to persuade the Eskimo to accompany him even in short trips over the ocean ice; and he describes them generally as too independent to work under a master. It would be cruel to employ them on such a journey without explaining to them its length and dangers; and if he did so, they would probably refuse, except on condition of taking their families, which would of course be impossible. For these reasons—and others—we consider Mr. Harrison's scheme visionary. If the region which he seeks to traverse is ever thoroughly explored, it can only be in a drifting ship of the same build as the Fram.

OMNIA SOMNIA.

DAWN drives the dreams away, yet some abide.
Once, in a tide of pale and sunless weather,
I dreamed I wandered on a bare hillside,
When suddenly the birds sang all together.
Still it was winter, even in the dream;
There was no leaf nor bud nor young grass springing;
The skies shone cold above the frost-bound stream:
It was not spring, and yet the birds were singing.
Blackbird and thrush and plaintive willow-wren,
Chaffinch and lark and linnet, all were calling;
A golden web of music held me then,
Innumerable voices, rising, falling.
O, never do the birds of April sing
More sweet than in that dream I still remember:
Perchance the heart may keep its songs of spring
Even through the wintry dream of life's December.

ROSAMUND MARRIOTT WATSON.

HOW LEIGH HUNT TREATED SHELLEY'S LETTERS.

LEIGH HUNT is one of the last people whom one would accuse of disloyalty to the memory of his two illustrious friends Shelley and Keats; and yet it is but too true that any letter of Shelley published by Hunt needs very careful scrutiny whenever the opportunity of consulting the holograph occurs. I have before me for the first time, by the courtesy of Messrs. H. Sotheman & Co., the poet's autograph letter, as it passed through the post, dated the 27th of September, 1819, when the Shelleys were at Leghorn. The variations which it shows from the text as given in my library edition of Shelley's works (Prose, 1880, vol. iv. pp. 126-9) are not of capital importance; but they fully justify the general principle of editorship asserted above. When I printed the letter in 1880, it was from a mere collation of Hunt's and Mrs. Shelley's printed versions: the manuscript was not forthcoming, though sought diligently enough. Again in 1895, when I dealt with Shelley's letters to Hunt in 'Literary Anecdotes of the Nineteenth Century,' in a contribution called 'A Bundle of Letters from Shelley to Leigh Hunt,' I had not seen the holograph, or I should have included the letter, as I did that of the 3rd of September, 1819, for the sake of completing and revising it, although the object of printing the ten letters then published was to give the public something new of Shelley's. It is true that Mr. Thomas J. Wise had printed in 1894, in a private issue of thirty copies, all the letters of Shelley to Hunt which he could then ascertain to be extant, whether published or unpublished, including most of those in the bundle. But in that charmingly printed book, wherein the letters had been collated with the autographs as far as they were then available, this particular letter remained as I left it in 1880, save for two seemingly accidental omissions of words and an attempt to explain a small blank space, which does not turn out to be the right explanation, and was of course conjectural. Both Mr. Wise and I were at that time already adopting the useful plan of setting out the addresses in full when publishing letters; and, as this was perforce not done in the privately printed book so far as this particular letter was concerned, I will at once furnish the following copy of the address:—

Angleterre

Leigh Hunt Esq
Examiner Office
19 Catharine Street
Strand
London

The postmark is "F.P.O. Oc. 12 1819"; and the heading is "Monday I. Livorno, Sept 27 1819." The calligraphy throughout the letter is fine and characteristic, and seems to me to be quite easy to read, even where Hunt failed to decipher a word.

It is scarcely needful to apologize for circumstantiality in describing and completing a truncated letter in which Shelley liberates his soul on the relative merits of Dante, Petrarch, Boccaccio, Ariosto, and Tasso, even though there is nothing to add about these great folk or Raphael and Michelangelo, also both mentioned by way of illustration. Familiar and intimate particulars which editors in the first half of last century ordinarily modified or omitted are often essential to the perception of the writer's frame of mind. Leaving aside insignificant details of spelling and pointing, I note that in the second mention of the two poets placed by Shelley above his beloved prose-poet Boccaccio, he writes "Petrarch and Dante," which Hunt altered to "Dante and Petrarch"—justified from the standpoint of editorial probity in 1828 by the fact that his friend had used that order earlier in the letter, and assuredly did not mean to exalt Petrarch above Dante. Hunt diluted the sentence "In vain do we seek in the finest passages of Ariosto," &c., by printing fine for finest, and spoilt the pleasant exclamatory note on Boccaccio, "What descriptions of nature are those in his little introductions to every new day!"—wherein he printed there for those. This I think was a mere matter of haste; but I am glad to note that Shelley himself confirms my text of 1880 in both respects.

The Bocca bacciata passage suffered something from Hunt's editorial discretion and Mrs. Shelley's bashfulness; for she must have had access to the MS. in order to restore what she did restore; and now I mean to give the dear playful-serious poet the full advantage of my own unabashed indiscretion, if your readers are pleased in this twentieth century to call it so, by transcribing the passage exactly as he wrote it:—

"He [Boccaccio] is a moral casuist, the opposite of the [Christian, Stoical,] ready made & worldly system of morals. [Do you remember one little remark or rather maxim of his, the application of which might do some good to the common narrow minded conceptions of love 'Bocca bacciata non perde ventura; anzi rinnuova, come fa la luna.' If you shew this to Marianne give my love to her and tell her that I don't mean xxxxx. . . .!!?..(..)?.."]"

Hunt omitted all that I have enclosed in brackets—only printing the sixteen words left outside in the cold. Mrs. Shelley restored "Christian, Stoical," and from "Do you remember" to "luna" all except "the application of"—in the omission of which I am unable to follow her thought. Hunt also omitted the whole of the paragraph next following, about Mrs. Shelley's expected confinement; but she herself restored so much of it as I have not now given within brackets:—

"We expect Mary to be confined towards the end of October, [& one of our motives in going to Florence is to have the attendance of Mr. Bell, a famous Scotch surgeon, who will be there....I should feel some disquietude in entrusting her to the best of the Italian practitioners.—] The birth of a child will probably relieve her from some part of her present melancholy depression."

Mrs. Shelley printed retrieve for relieve, not very blameworthy, for she may easily have been misled by the phantasm of a cross belonging to a t in the word the written back to back with relieve.

In the passage about Charles Lloyd and Bishop Berkeley, the phrase "on which I had founded much of my persuasions regarding the imagined cause of the Universe" is corrupted by both editors, with some trifling excuse, by substituting the awkward expression as regarded for the easy colloquial regarding used by Shelley.

The next variation or two have to do with that part of the letter which is backed by the very heavily written address and slightly mutilated by the process of unsealing; and I had better transcribe the passage, indicating in brackets what no self-respecting editor in the twentieth century, following the example established in the last thirty-five years or so of the nineteenth, should venture to insert without that form of confession:—

"Of Lamb you know my opinion; & you can bear witness to the regret which I felt when I learned that the calumny of an enemy had [deprived me of his society whilst in England.

"Ollier [tells] me that the Quarterly are going to review me[;] I suppose [it will be a pretty morsel, & as I am acquiring a taste for humour & drollery I confess I am curious to see it—I have sent my Prometheus Unbound to Peacock—if you ask him for it—he will shew it you—I think it will please you—"]"

The word torn out which I have presumed to be tells Hunt and Mrs. Shelley supplied as told, which strikes me as unnatural: the word morsel they seem to have found illegible; and it was the gap they left for it that Mr. Wise accounted for by the words "paper torn." The paper turns out not to be torn there; and the word does not really admit of the shadow of a doubt. Peacock is written in full—not "P." as Hunt and Mrs. Shelley gave it. I can but conjecture that in the next paragraph, where Shelley wrote plainly "Mary wrote to you," it was mere accident that caused the two editors to leave out "to you." There is an unfinished and cancelled paragraph immediately after this, reading as follows:—

"I omitted in the transcription of my poem which you will have received, the following verse which comes after the line."

This I have been at the pains to decipher and set out from motives of common honesty; for if, as I cannot but assume, it relates to 'The Mask of Anarchy' written out by Mrs. Shelley and elaborately revised by Shelley himself, the word transcription might, though not of necessity, be held to show that the poet did not dictate that poem from a rougher MS. to his wife, as I suggested in my commentary of 1876.

There are two postscripts to this letter—both unimportant; but we may as well have them for what they are worth. The first, written by Shelley immediately below his initials, is:—

"You will probably soon see Mr. Gisborne. I think I told you about him before."

The second, written by Mrs. Shelley on one of the doublings—she was great on the utilization of doublings as a part of the art of letter-writing in the early nineteenth century—reads as follows:—

"Direct your letters ferma in Posta Firenze."

H. BUXTON FORMAN.

OMAR AND THE FITZGERALD CENTENARY.

WE hear people everywhere complaining that they are "fed up" with centenaries of our great men. The phrase is slangy, and seems ungratefully to ignore the chief purpose of such celebrations, which is to promote occasions for dining and other festivities, including what the British public regards as oratory from the eminent, who need know little of the ostensible excuse for the gaiety. The magazines, which generally cast a careless eye on literature not of the "topical" sort, overflow with articles on the dead lion of the day; and the general press, instructed for the occasion, repeats old stories with an engaging air of novelty, slays the slain with resolute virtue, and ignores as often as not the real pioneers who have made the hero's life clear and vindicated his position. Sometimes, it is true, direct oral information is provided, as when Sir Frederick Bridge explained to a distinguished audience collected by the British Academy the plot of 'Comus.' But such recognition of the limits of knowledge is rare, and for the most part our celebrators and their commentators are content to talk vaguely of greatness (a word now staled by the ignoble uses of advertisement), world-message, influence, &c., without descending to details involving critical knowledge and study. To improve on this state of things in the case of so popular a figure as Omar Khayyam (which means FitzGerald's version or perversion of the 'Rubâiyât') is possibly a hopeless task. Still, we may attempt to say something about the claims put forward for the book and its author.

In the first place, it is necessary to set forth a few plain facts concerning the Persian Omar and the collection of poetry which passes under his name. How was he regarded by his contemporaries? What rank does he hold among the Persian poets? Did he actually write the 'Rubâiyât' or any large proportion of them? And if so, have we any means of discovering his genuine handiwork? The researches of European Orientalists during the last twelve years enable us to give a definite answer to these questions, which obviously have an important bearing on the discussion that still rages round the philosophy and personality of Omar.

The oldest and most authentic accounts of his life show that his contemporary as well as his posthumous reputation rested almost exclusively on his scientific eminence. He was a learned astronomer and mathematician, and also a successful astrologer, though it was remarked that he had no great belief in astrological predictions. Like many intellectual Moslems who went beyond the strict warrant of the Koran, he was accused of being a freethinker and materialist. This charge does not amount to much, if we consider by whom it was made. That he was no mystic at heart may be gathered from the uncomplimentary terms applied to him by a well-known mystical doctor. It is recorded that he wrote occasional verse of an irreligious character, but in the ancient biographies of Persian poets his name is mentioned only fortuitously, and even at the present day his countrymen do not esteem him as anything better than a poet of the third class. Whether their verdict is just we are no longer in a position to decide. It has been proved that a large number of the quatrains attributed to Omar are to be found in the works of other poets, and were really composed by them. To these demonstrably spurious quatrains, the total of which might be doubled or trebled by an exhaustive investigation, we must add many more belonging to anonymous authors, which have been swept from all sides into the original stock; for, as Omar gradually came to be looked upon as the prince of Persian quatrain-writers, the copyists followed in his case a maxim put in the mouth of the Prophet—"Whatever good thing has been said, I have said it." Thus the collection, as it has come down to us, is the result of a process of accumulation extending over six hundred years. It is impossible to identify the genuine minority among the mass of spurious immigrants, and except in one or two instances we cannot say of any single quatrain that it was certainly written by Omar himself. On a moderate reckoning, three-fourths of the quatrains ascribed to him are not his.

Bearing these facts in mind, the reader may judge what is likely to be the value of a personal system of philosophy constructed from such materials, and at the same time he will see how natural it is that Omar should be variously depicted as an Epicurean sage, a fervent mystic, a mocking free-thinker, a gay sybarite, or a melancholy moralist. In truth, the 'Rubâiyât' are a mirror of Persian life during the Middle Ages: they represent many diverse schools of thought, many discordant shades of opinion, many conflicting views of the world; they express, not the changing moods of a single person, but the rich and manifold genius of the whole Persian race. So far as Omar was a typical Persian, we can find him in the poems with which he is for ever associated, but where, it is to be feared, his distinctive personality is for ever submerged.

If the Persian original reveals little or nothing of Omar, the English paraphrase cannot be expected to yield more light. In making it FitzGerald selected with fine taste only those stanzas which were best suited to his purpose and most in harmony with his philosophy. It was inevitable that he should introduce fresh currents of modern speculation; and even when he renders the general sense accurately he often gives it a peculiar turn of his own. What he has done, and done magnificently, is to transfuse some leading and characteristic ideas of Persian literature into English poetry. Beyond this, there is no evidence that his view of life specially coincided with Omar's rather than with that of many other Persian contributors to the anthology. Doubtless FitzGerald believed that he was reshaping Omar alone, though he deliberately added a few Oriental touches suggested by his wider reading, and we dare say he would have dealt severely with any iconoclast who told him that his "large infidel" was not merely "two," but a multitude of, "single gentlemen rolled into one."

"BIBLIOTHECA LINDESIANA."

STUDENTS of English history have long been indebted to the Earl of Crawford for the only works dealing with royal proclamations from the accession of the Tudors—his 'Handlist' of 1886, followed in 1893-1901 by a larger volume indicating in a single-line entry the date and purport of each proclamation then known, and the libraries—if any—in which a copy could be seen. To those acquainted with the importance of these documents it will seem incredible that this was the first attempt at a complete enumeration of them. No official record of them is, or ever has been, kept. They do not all appear in the Gazette. No copy of them is filed for reference at the British Museum; and though many of them are on record at the Public Record Office, a large proportion seem, for no apparent reason, not to have gone through the regular course. A few of them have been reprinted, in the great historical collections, Rymer, Rushworth, Nalson, &c.; but the great bulk of them are unknown to all but the most persevering students.

In his preface to the 'Handlist' of 1893 Lord Crawford sketched out a scheme for a complete catalogue of a collection of proclamations, which has been carried out under his direction by Mr. Robert Steele, and the catalogue is nearly ready for issue, as a new instalment of the "Bibliotheca Lindesiana." In it every known proclamation of England, Ireland, and Scotland from 1485 to 1714, issued under the authority of the monarch or other ruling body, has been catalogued. Each entry consists of a complete bibliographical description of the proclamation, where it exists as a broadside, or in some cases in Scotland as a folio tract, with a special notation, devised for the purpose, to distinguish between various editions; a summary of the contents of the proclamation, omitting verbiage, but reproducing all its essential statements; a list of the libraries in which copies may be seen, in the case of public libraries giving the press-marks; a note of the entry on the Patent Roll or other official record; and a list of works in which the proclamation is printed in full or in great part. The historical student will thus have all his matter indicated, and find the greater part of the labour of reference done.

The full index contains every proper name mentioned in the proclamations—a point to which Lord Crawford attaches much importance. It need hardly be said that the two volumes contain many more entries than the 'Handlist' of 1893-1901; the scope of the catalogue has been enlarged during the periods of the Civil War and the Revolution to include all broadsides issued by the governing bodies on either side—Parliament, Army Generals, Committee of Estates, Confederate Catholics, &c., as well as the King or Lord Lieutenant. The documents here calendared will be found to add greatly to our knowledge of the history of England during the Civil War and under the Commonwealth, and of Ireland under the Stuarts; while for Scotland they are for long periods the sole records of the activity of the Privy Council. A full historical introduction and an appendix of documents will complete the volumes.

Previous issues of the "Bibliotheca Lindesiana" have been, as students are aware, printed in very small numbers, and are only accessible in libraries to which they have been presented by the Earl of Crawford, but the importance of the subject has led him to allow a small edition to be published shortly, under the title of 'Tudor and Stuart Proclamations,' by the Oxford University Press. Students of constitutional history will therefore be able for the first time, thanks to Lord Crawford's munificence, to compare side by side the proclamations and ordinances of the King in Council with the laws of the King in Parliament.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Bennett (Rev. W. H.), Old Testament History, 6d. net. One of the Century Bible Handbooks.
De Mill (Richard Mead), The Foundation and the Superstructure; or, The Faith of Christ and the Works of Man, 12/6 net.
Figgis (Rev. J. N.), The Gospel and Human Needs, 4/6 net. The Hulsean Lectures delivered before the University of Cambridge, 1908-9, with additional sermons, and Appendix containing notes.
Lintern (W.), Creation and Grace, 3/ net. An exposition of the first three chapters of Genesis and their harmony with science. New Edition.
Mackintosh (Prof. R.), Christian Ethics. Another of the Century Bible Handbooks.
Manual of Occasional Offices for the Use of the Clergy, 4/ net. Compiled by the Rev. J. L. Saywell, assisted by two clergymen of the diocese of Worcester. Contains primitive collects, formulae, tables, and lists.
Scott-Moncrieff (Rev. C. E.), St. John, Apostle, Evangelist, and Prophet, 4/6 net.—St. Mark and the Triple Tradition, 2/6 net.
Sunday School Quarterly, Vol. I., No. 1, April, 3d. Edited by the Rev. J. A. Pearson.
Wakerley (J. E.), The Making of Moral Manhood, 2/6

Law.

- Aske (R. W.), The Law relating to Custom and the Usages of Trade, 16/
Chapman (A. B. W. and M. W.), The Status of Women under the English Law, 2/6 net.
Lawyer's Manual of Reference, 1909, 15/ net.
Maclean (A. H. H.), The Law concerning Secondary and Preparatory Schools, 15/ net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Baldry (A. Lys), Burne-Jones, 1/6 net. Illustrated with 8 reproductions. One of the Masterpieces in Colour.
Bensusan (S. L.), Holbein, 1/6 net. Illustrated with 8 reproductions. Another of the Masterpieces in Colour.
Berenson (Bernhard), The Florentine Painters of the Renaissance, with an Index to their Works, 5/ net. Third Edition, revised and enlarged.
Braithwaite (Rev. P. R. P.), The Church Plate of Hampshire, 31/6 net.
Carotti (Dr. G.), A History of Art: Vol. II., Part I., Early Christian and Neo-Oriental Art, European Art north of the Alps, 5/ net. Translated by Beryl de Zoete, and contains 360 illustrations.
Palestine Exploration Fund, Quarterly Statement, April, 2/6—Annual Report and Accounts for the Year 1908.
Richmond (Sir W. B.), Inaugural Address delivered on the Occasion of the Opening of the First Exhibition of the North British Academy, Newcastle-on-Tyne, 1/
Three Great Modern Painters: Leighton, Burne-Jones, Whistler, 5/ net.
White (Gleeson), Master Painters of Britain, 5/ net. Contains 164 full-page plates.

Poetry and Drama.

- Allen (Immo S.), The Garden of Love, and other Poems, 3/6 net.

Music.

- Catalogue of the Allen A. Brown Collection of Music in the Public Library of the City of Boston: Vol. I. Part I. A—Boosey; Part II. Boosey—Concertos: Part III. Concertos—For, 1 dol. each.

Political Economy.

- Forbes (Alexander), Tariff Reform: a Plea for Fair Trade, 1/. Addresses delivered between 1882 and 1889.

Henderson (C. R.), Industrial Insurance in the United States, 9/ net.

Scottish Bankers Magazine, Vol. I., No. I., April, 1/. The journal of the Institute of Bankers of Scotland.

History and Biography.

- Book of the Old Edinburgh Club, Vol. I. Contains papers on old Edinburgh houses, the embalming of Montrose, an old debating society, &c.
Conder (Col. C. R.), The City of Jerusalem, 12/ net. The object of the volume is to present in a convenient form the results of research and exploration concerning the history and buildings of Jerusalem.
Cowan (S.), Three Celtic Earldoms, Atholl, Strathearn, Menteith: Critical and Historical Recital so far as known, 2/6 net.
Edicts of Asoka, 21/ net. Edited in English, with an introduction and commentary, by Vincent A. Smith. The volume has been prepared at the request of Dr. Ananda K. Coomaraswamy, in order to provide lovers of dainty books, who do not care for antiquarian and philological lore, with a readable version of Asoka's sermons and other records in an attractive form.
Finlayson (Rev. A. R. M.), Life of Canon Fleming, Vicar of St. Michael's, Chester Square, 6/ net.
Fresh Leaves and Green Pastures, by the Author of 'Leaves from a Life', 10/ net.
Haggard (Lieut.-Col. A. C. P.), Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette, 2 vols., 24/ net. With photogravure plates and other illustrations.
Lant (A. C.), The Conquest of the Great Northwest, 2 vols., 21/ net.
Mason (A. J.), Memoir of George Howard Wilkinson, 2 vols., 28/ net. An account of the Bishop of Truro who became Primus of the Scottish Church. Illustrated.
Neeser (R. W.), Statistical and Chronological History of the United States Navy, 1775-1907, 2 vols., 50/ net.
Scots Peerage, founded on Wood's edition of Sir Robert Douglas's Peerage of Scotland: Vol. VI., Marchmont—Oxford. Edited by Sir J. Balfour Paul. For review of Vol. V., see Athen., Sept. 19, 1908, p. 332.
Writings of George Washington, 10/6 net. Edited, with introduction and notes, by Lawrence B. Evans. The first volume of a series called Writings of American Statesmen.

Geography and Travel.

- Handbook of Travel-Talk, 3/6. A collection of questions, phrases, and vocabularies in English, French, German, and Italian. New Edition.
Kelly's Directory of Lancashire, 1909, 35/
Pier (G. Chatfield), Inscriptions of the Nile Monuments, 21/ net. A book of reference for tourists, with 120 illustrations and a map.
Watney (C.) and Lloyd (Mrs. Herbert), Motoring in India, 5/ net. A guide to the tourist and resident.

Philology.

- Berg (P. J. van den), Per Istrade Aperte. Parts 2 and 3, 3/ net. each. New practical method of learning Italian.
Harbottle (T. B.) and Dalbiac (Col. P. H.), Dictionary of Quotations (Italian), 3/6 net. With indexes of authors and subjects.
Meyliar (Leo), English-Russian and Russian-English Engineering Dictionary, 2/6 net.
Pallis (A.), The Twenty-Second Book of the Iliad, with Critical Notes. The Preface is mainly concerned with considerations on metre.

School-Books.

- Chatwin (G. A. F. M.), A First Précis Book, 2/6. Selected English passages for précis-writing.
Selections from the Poems of Robert Browning, 1/. With introduction and notes by Mrs. M. G. Glazebrook. Part of English Literature for Secondary Schools.

Science.

- Archives of the Middlesex Hospital. Clinical Series, No. 1, 5/ net.
Equinox, Vol. I., No. 1, 5/. The official organ of the A.A., the review of Scientific Illuminism.
Glossina palpalis, Rob.-Desv., and the Means of Prevention of Sleeping Sickness. Reprinted from The Sleeping Sickness Bureau Bulletin, No. 3.
Influence of Heredity on Disease, with Special Reference to Tuberculosis, Cancer, and Diseases of the Nervous System, 4/6 net. A discussion by Sir W. S. Church (Introductory Address), Sir W. R. Gowers (Diseases of the Nervous System), A. Latham (Tuberculosis), and E. F. Bashford (Cancer). From the Proceedings of the Royal Society of Medicine, 1909.
Master Telegraph Code, 50/ net.
Tolman (W. H.), Social Engineering, 8/6 net.

Fiction.

- Adderley (J.), A Piece of New Cloth, 2/ net. A Church tale of the twentieth century, dealing with the difficulty felt by many in combining active work in the Church of the present day with a knowledge of the effects of modern scientific criticism when applied to conventional Christianity.
Banks (E.), The Mystery of Frances Farrington, 6/. Margaret, the heroine, is beautiful, and engaged to a man whom a lawyer tries to ruin. Margaret has a second personality as Frances Farrington, hence the mystery.
Bourget (Paul), The Weight of the Name, 6/. Translated by George Burnham Ives.
Campbell (Mrs. Vere), Render unto Caesar, 6/. A story of finance, love, and deceit.
Dalton (M.), Olive in Italy, 6/. Tells of an English girl—highly educated, but an orphan and penniless—who goes to seek her living in Italy. She sees life in a Tuscan hill-town, then in Florence, and later in Rome, and is brought into many unconventional situations.
Grier (Sydney C.), A Young Man Married, 6/. Deals with the later stages of the Peninsular War, from the fall of Badajoz to the battle of Vittoria.
Marriott (C.), When a Woman Woos, 6/. The story of a love-match after difficulties.
Urquhart (M.), The Modelling of the Clay, 6/. A story of love and temptation.
Wynne (May), For Church and Chieftain, 6/. An Irish story beginning in the year 1532.

General Literature.

Dog World and Anti-Cat Review, written and illustrated by Dogs for Dogs with the assistance of Walter Emanuel, 1/ net. An amusing skit by the author of 'A Dog Day.' Grayson (D.), Adventures in Contentment, 5/ net. The observations of a farmer on men and things. New Poor Law or No Poor Law. A description of the Majority and Minority Reports of the Poor Law Commission, with an introductory note by Canon Barnett. Seymour (C.), Speaking in Public: How to produce Ideas and How to acquire Fluency, 3/ net. Stock Exchange Official Intelligencer, 1909, 50/ Wade-Evans (A. W.), Papers for Thinking Welshmen, 1/ net. New Edition. In Unwin's Sociology Series.

Pamphlets.

Recantation, by J. M., 3d. net. A supplement to 'Shakespeare Self-Revealed.' Some Common Objections: III. The Esthetic Argument. Issued by the Simplified Spelling Society.

FOREIGN.

Bibliography.

Katalog Literatary Naukowej Polskiej (Catalogue of Polish Scientific Literature), Vol. VIII., Parts I. and II. Morel (E.), Bibliothèques: Essais sur le Développement des Bibliothèques publiques et de la Librairie dans les deux Mondes, 2 vols., 15m.

History and Biography.

Bardoux (J.), Silhouettes d'Outre-Manche, 3fr. 50. Sketches of prominent English politicians and others. Chalvet-Nastrac (Vicomte de), Les Projets de Restauration Monarchique et le Général Ducrot, Député et Commandant du 8e Corps d'Armée, d'après ses Mémoires et sa Correspondance, 7fr. 50. With portrait and facsimiles of autograph letters of the Comte de Chambord. Cor (R.), M. Anatole France et la Pensée contemporaine, 5fr. Grönbech (V.), Lykkemand og Niding vor Folkeet i Oldtiden. Nicolle (H.), Les Souverains en Pantoufles, 3fr. 50. Pingaud (L.), Jean de Bry, 1760-1835, 7fr. 50.

Geography and Travel.

Fougères (G.), La Grèce, 15fr. One of the Guides Joanne.

Philology.

Langdon (S.), Sumerian and Babylonian Psalms. Translations in Roman characters, with English translations on the facing pages. Dedicated by the author to M. V. Scheil, the Professor of Assyriology at the École des hautes Études, Paris. Roiron (F. X. M. J.), Étude sur l'Imagination auditive de Virgile. A thesis presented to the Faculty of Letters of the University of Paris.

Fiction.

Kistemaekers (H.), Aëropolis, 3fr. 50. Tany (P.), Les deux Routes, 3fr. 50.

General Literature.

La Mésangère, Les Petits Mémoires de Paris, Vol. II. Rues et Intérieurs; Vol. III. Le Carnet d'un Suiveur, 2fr. each. Both illustrated by Henri Boutet.

* * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

DR. HEINRICH FELBERMANN, proprietor and editor of The English Mail, is just finishing his reminiscences, which will appear shortly under the title 'Cut Leaves.' The work will consist of three parts: Part. I. will describe his life in Paris, Part. II. his life in London, and Part III., his early years in Hungary, amongst mediæval surroundings.

MR. WERNER LAURIE is publishing a new book by Mr. James Huneker, which will be called 'Egoists: a Book of Supermen' It includes discussions of Stendhal, Anatole France, Max Stirner, Nietzsche, and M. Maurice Barrès. He is also publishing for Miss Catherine Bates, author of 'Do the Dead Depart?' a new work entitled 'Physical Science and Christianity.'

MESSRS. WHITTAKER & Co. are to publish during this month a 'South African Parliamentary Manual' on the lines of 'Dod's Parliamentary Companion.' The greater portion of the volume is devoted to South African Parliamentary procedure, both for public business and private Bills, and contains other useful information relating to South Africa. The work is compiled by Mr. E. M. O. Clough, Clerk to the Transvaal Legislative Council.

SOMERVILLE COLLEGE, OXFORD, is offering for the third time a Research Fellowship, tenable for three years, for which application must be made before May 15th to Miss Darbishire, Somerville College. The two Fellows hitherto elected have done good work in foreign history and mineralogy. This year the Fellowship is open for the first time to students of Cambridge and Trinity College, Dublin, as well as Oxford.

MR. PHILIP H. LEE WARNER has retired from the firm of Chatto & Windus, and communications intended for him should for the present be addressed care of the Medici Society, 1B, Albemarle Street, W. On May 25th Mr. Lee Warner will open an office at 38, Albemarle Street, from which address he will shortly begin the publication of works in literature and the arts.

THE death is announced in his eighty-seventh year of Mr. Alexander Ramsay, LL.D., for sixty-two years editor of The Banffshire Journal. He furthered the interests of agriculture in every way in his power. He edited four volumes of 'The Polled Herd Book,' acted as Secretary for the Aberdeen Angus Cattle Society, and edited the annual volume of the Herd Book for many years. He wrote a history of the work of the Highland Agricultural Society of Scotland.

TRINITY COLLEGE, DUBLIN, has added the first woman to its teaching staff, in the person of Miss Constantia Maxwell, who has been appointed assistant to the Professor of Modern History.

THE KING OF ITALY opened at Rome, on Saturday last, the house in which Keats lived as a permanent memorial to him and Shelley.

MESSRS. EYRE & SPOTTISWOODE (Bible Warehouse) will issue about the end of this month 'The English Church Pageant Handbook,' the official guide to the show at Fulham Palace, from June 10th to 16th.

The English Review for April has two striking poems by Mr. Thomas Hardy, visions of 'London Nights.'

The Author for this month notes the grant of pensions of 50l. a year by the Pension Fund Committee of the Authors' Society to Dr. Beattie Crozier and Mr. Richard Whiteing. It also includes a 'Report on the Sevenpenny Cloth-bound Copyright Novel' by Messrs. A. Hope Hawkins, Maurice Hewlett, and Bernard Shaw. The Report discusses the influence of the sevenpenny edition on the six-shilling novel, and is of great interest. The main conclusion reached is that the six-shilling edition should have a minimum run of two years before a cheaper issue is produced.

CANON HENRY HOLDEN, whose death was announced on Friday in last week, had reached his ninety-fourth year. Educated at Shrewsbury and Balliol, he was appointed Head Master of Uppingham School in 1847 and Durham Grammar School in 1853, a post which he held till 1882. He was joint editor of the fourth edition of 'Sabrinæ Corolla,' the great Shrewsbury collection of Latin and Greek verse, and published 'The Symbolical Teaching of the Sanctuary' in 1849.

MR. JAMES MILES, the bookseller of Guildford Street, Leeds, has issued an excellent catalogue of the antiquarian library of the late William Andrews, the author of many books, chiefly on subjects of bygone times. Nearly 1,300 books are described, many of them presentation copies with autograph inscriptions. In some cases autograph letters of an interesting character are included, in addition to Andrews's quaint book-plate.

WE hear with regret of the death on Saturday last of Mr. Alfred Slate, who was something like an Athenæum institution, having been employed on the paper for no fewer than sixty-four years. Mr. Slate was an excellent worker, and maintained his vigour and interest till the end. As a young man he had a wonderful likeness to Tom Hood, who in early days was frequently to be seen at the Athenæum office. He retired from the management of the Athenæum Press eleven years ago, though he continued to visit the office, and give valued advice to the younger generation. He had reached his eighty-ninth year.

Two new members were elected last week to the Académie Française. M. Jean Aicard succeeds (after eight ballots) to the chair of François Coppée, and M. René Doumic to that of M. Gaston Boissier. M. Aicard has written various volumes of verse, and also had success as a novelist. M. René Doumic is well known as a literary critic, and lecturer.

MR. WERNER LAURIE has arranged with Pierre Loti to issue an English edition of 'La Mort de Philæ.'

ONE of the best-known American bibliophiles, Mr. Augustus Toeteberg, died recently at the age of eighty-five. Born in Germany, Mr. Toeteberg settled in the United States in 1844, and soon became famous for his skill in extra-illustrating books. Perhaps his greatest work in this direction was the Douay Bible, which he illustrated for the late Augustin Daly, and on which he spent twenty years. This was in 42 volumes, with upwards of 8,000 prints, drawings, &c., and realized 5,544 dollars at the sale in 1900.

THE death is also announced of the popular American novelist Mrs. Elinor Macartney Lane, a descendant of an old Irish family settled in Maryland. Mrs. Lane published her first novel, 'Mills of God,' in 1901; three years later her historical romance, 'Nancy Stair,' came out; and her last novel, 'Katrine,' was published only shortly before her death. Her books enjoyed a wide popularity throughout America.

AMONG Parliamentary Publications of interest we note: Abstract of Accounts of the University of St. Andrews (3d.); and Report to the Poor Law Commission on Poor Law Medical Relief in certain Unions in England and Wales, by Dr. McVail (3s. 1d.).

SCIENCE

Psyche's Task. By J. G. Frazer. (Macmillan & Co.)

THIS (we presume expanded) lecture to the Royal Society is on the use of superstition in establishing certain fundamental principles of human society by the fear of spirits of the departed punishing certain acts, which would otherwise be frequently done, and would prove very detrimental to the progress of man. Hence in this book the belief in a future life is shown to have a great social value in primitive society. Nevertheless we come upon the following remarkable caveat from the author:—

"It might be maintained that no belief has done so much to retard the economic, and thereby the social, progress of Mankind as the belief in the immortality of the soul, for this belief has led race after race, generation after generation, to sacrifice the real wants of the living to the imaginary wants of the dead. The waste and destruction of life and property which this faith has entailed are enormous and incalculable. But I am not here concerned with the disastrous and deplorable consequences, the unspeakable follies and crimes and miseries, which have flowed in practice from the theory of a future life."

He proceeds to show that nevertheless this horrid folly has been a powerful agent in the protection of human life from murder.

The ordinary reader, in the face of these conflicting benefits and injuries arising from a primitive instinct, would naturally explain them by holding the instinct to be sound and useful, but liable to much abuse and misapplication in practice. Dr. Frazer prefers to hold that it is unsound and mischievous in itself, but that it accidentally leads to an actual diminution of the rudenesses and violences of savage life. The author's unconcealed antagonism to Christianity in his other books is probably the reason why he adopts the second, and to us less logical conclusion. At all events he shows that in giving authority to kings and chiefs, in protecting life and property from outrage, in limiting promiscuous sexual intercourse, the fear of punishment from unseen spirits, generally of deceased ancestors, or victims of violence, has been an agent far more powerful than ordinary legislation. He has hardly stated the two principal reasons adequately. The first is that supernatural agents are expected to reward virtue, whereas human laws confine themselves to restraining vice. Secondly, in the latter case the culprit may easily evade the detection of men: he cannot escape the more intimate and penetrating survey of the spiritual world. Hence the primitive man comes to feel the whole of life under this control—a control enforced by tremendous sanctions which the lawgiver cannot command.

In the space at his command Dr. Frazer has not told us how far universal are the beneficial superstitions which he illustrates from various parts of the world with his usual learning. Is it universal that homicide should be regarded as risky, or that incontinence in savage girls should be a grave social offence? We have often heard of savages who glory not only in killing an enemy in battle, but also in treacherous killing of a stranger, without the smallest fear of spiritual consequences. The heads or scalps of his victims are the greatest glory and ornament of many a savage warrior. So also there are certainly savage societies where young girls are perfectly free to indulge themselves, without incurring any punishment or damaging their tribe, though when they marry their husbands may insist upon the strictest conduct, and punish any delinquency with death. Are the numerous cases to the contrary frequent exceptions to primitive liberty, or are they the law? Perhaps the strange tyrannies of tabu are thought worth mentioning by travellers, whereas ordinary loose conduct passes unnoticed. To answer such questions would, however, require Dr. Frazer's vast learning. But even he confesses himself wholly at a loss to account for the very general existence of artificial restrictions on marriage, which amount among many savages to extending the crime which we abhor as incest to cases which we regard as perfectly innocent. The instinct against "breeding in" does not exist, so far as we yet know, in any of the lower animals. But what about plants? Is it true that in the case of bisexual plants, there are provisions that each tree or plant shall not be fertilized by itself, but by some other plant of the same species? This, if true, points to a law of nature very remote and deep in its origin, and one of which traces might be found among the lower animals, if men would set themselves to study them from this particular point of view.

Among the vagaries of superstition the most grotesque, as well as terrible, is the treatment allotted to a widower in some tribes of British New Guinea. From the moment his wife dies he is a disgraced outlaw who is barely allowed to live. We are not told, but we infer, that he is utterly precluded from making amends by marrying a second wife. That widows should be persecuted in this inhuman way is frequent enough among savages, and even among semi-civilized people; but to treat the widower as a criminal is most strange. Such practices lead a careful thinker to exercise great caution in framing any general theory of human superstition; and for this very reason we have from Dr. Frazer many interesting observations, but no attempt to formulate general law. This new book is indeed short, but also very long, in the sense of the famous aphorism of Hippocrates: "Life is short, but art long."

ASTRONOMICAL LITERATURE.

A Treatise on Spherical Astronomy. By Sir Robert Ball, Lowndean Professor of Astronomy at Cambridge. (Cambridge, University Press.)—Sir Robert Ball is best known for his large number of popular books, which—particularly 'The Story of the Heavens'—are highly appreciated. But the work now before us is of a different character, being a textbook on astronomy for students at the universities. Plato, we are told, had the words "Let no one ignorant of geometry enter here" inscribed over the door of the Academy; and those who are ignorant of mathematics, including the differential and integral calculus, will not find much of this book within their grasp. But a knowledge of these is indispensable for students of the higher departments of science.

Sir Robert speaks in high terms of the 'Lehrbuch der sphärischen Astronomie' of Brünnow, which was published in 1851. This was translated by Main, formerly Chief Assistant at the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, and afterwards Radcliffe Observer at Oxford (the author himself published an English translation of the second edition in 1865). But Main subsequently brought out an excellent work on mathematical astronomy, which was supplemented by a smaller and more elementary one, called 'Plane Astronomy,' by his son, the late Mr. P. T. Main. The course of time, the recent rapid progress of astronomical discovery, and the introduction of many new methods, have made the production of a new treatise on the subject a real need, and the task could not have fallen into more appropriate and competent hands than those of the present Lowndean Professor at Cambridge. In his Preface he tells us that by spherical astronomy he means that part of mathematical astronomy which lies between the vast domain of dynamical astronomy on the one hand and the multitudinous details of practical astronomy on the other; but that, whilst generally keeping within the limits thus indicated, he has "not hesitated to transgress those limits now and then when there seemed to be good reason for doing so." And, in fact, to describe modern methods it is sometimes necessary to refer to modern results and observations. Moreover, in the two concluding chapters some account is given (which could ill be spared) of the fundamental geometrical principles of astronomical instruments. Special attention may be directed to the sections on the solar parallax, giving all the modern methods of determining that fundamental unit of our system, and showing that though more refinements may be obtained by later observations of the small planet Eros, the value now adopted in the national ephemerides (8".80) can hardly be more than 0".02 in error; to that on the heliocentric parallax of the fixed stars, of which a complete list of the satisfactory determinations up to the present time is given; and to those on the calculation of solar and lunar eclipses. The tracing of the laws of Kepler, and the consequent deduction of the great law of gravity by Newton, are lucidly explained. Such articles as relate to the more important subjects are generally illustrated by exercises; and in the selection of these preference has been given, not only to those which bear directly on the text, but also to such as have some special astronomical or mathematical interest, many being taken from the Tripos and College examinations at Cambridge. Prof. Newcomb, it may be remembered, published about three years ago a work on 'Spherical Astronomy,' which was noticed in The Athenæum for Sept. 1st, 1906, p. 245; but it specially relates to matters bearing on the determination and reduction of the positions of the fixed stars and the formation of star-catalogues, and does not touch upon many of the portions of scientific astronomy here fully set out by Sir Robert Ball. The book, we may add, has been provided with a very careful and complete Index, and in every respect corresponds to the student's need at the present time.

The Heavens and their Story. By Annie S. D. Maunder and E. Walter Maunder. (Culley.)—Mr. Maunder, Superintendent of the Solar Department of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich, has produced a large number of admirable works on the science to which he is devoted. For many years past he has had the valuable co-operation of his wife; and he tells us that the present publication, although it bears both their names, is in fact almost wholly her work, as he was prevented soon after its beginning from taking any further part in it. The volume is not intended as a textbook to teach astronomy, but has rather been written with the hope that readers may be drawn by it to study astronomy for themselves, for "the heavens are telling stories of interest, stories of wonder, if we have but the eyes to see and the ears to hear."

The book is divided into four principal sections. In the first some of the lessons are dealt with which the open heavens, if watched with attention and thought, can teach us. In the second, much interesting information is given concerning what has been learnt about the sun by means of the telescope, the spectroscope, and photography, particularly with regard to the question, often asked nowadays, whether sunspots have any influence on the earth. The third is devoted to a few particulars respecting the planets and other members of the solar system, the design being to point out wherein they differ from the world which we inhabit. The fourth and concluding section touches lightly on the structure of the stellar universe, and is intended to suggest rather than to describe the vastness and mystery of the great starry system, of which our sun and his family occupy a small and insignificant corner. If the highest praise of a book be that it corresponds fully and felicitously to the object of the author in composing it, such commendation may unstintingly be given to the work before us. Sir John Herschel, in the preface to his 'Outlines,' remarks that he hopes few will be in the predicament of making it the last work on astronomy that they read, and no doubt Mrs. Maunder feels the same, none the less that three-quarters of a century have elapsed since Sir John's treatise first appeared, and that the science has since undergone wonderful extension. But even those who have read many modern books on astronomy will find this very helpful, whilst those who begin their astronomical studies with it cannot fail to be led on to a quickened interest. It only remains to add that the illustrations are both numerous and of high excellence and authority.

ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES.

THE HON. K. R. DUNDAS supplies to Man for March an account of the Kikuyu divisions of the year (East Africa). They have two seasons: one of seven months, July to January; the other of five months, February to June. The month corresponding to July is one of little work—the men clear the grass, the women burn it, the weather is cool, and the boys and girls begin boring the lobes of their ears; August, the women dig up the fields; September, all work at preparing for the rains and sowing seed; October, all are busy weeding; November and December, the men do no work, the women and children keep the birds off the crops; January, harvest. The arrangements in the second season are much the same. April is the circumcision month for boys and girls in the West, and is a time of feasting and dancing. Mr. Dundas does not state what is the circumcision month for the East, but it is one of the months of the first season (November?).

M. A. van Gennep, treating of a method of making string bags by netting without a knot in the Angoni district (East Africa), notes that a similar method is used in North Eastern Brazil by the Indians.

Mr. Edge Partington illustrates and describes a collection of wooden chests for containing the remains of deceased chiefs in the possession of Mr. Alexander Turnbull of Wellington, New Zealand. No specimen of these rare objects is known to exist in this country.

Dr. Seligmann illustrates and describes a type of canoe ornaments with magical significance from South-Eastern British New Guinea. They bear designs representing birds, and are supposed to be effectual in ensuring a speedy and safe voyage.

L'Anthropologie (vol. xix. Nos. 5 and 6) contains an obituary notice, by M. Marcellin Boule, of Albert Gaudry, who died on November 27th in his eighty-second year. He was one of the first of the French academical authorities to follow the lead of Evans and Prestwich in asserting the authenticity of the discoveries of Boucher de Perthes, and he was author of 'Matériaux pour l'Histoire des Temps Quaternaires,' and other important works in prehistoric archaeology.

The same review contains two original memoirs (one by M. Boule, and the other by the Abbés A. and J. Bouyssonie and M. L. Bardon) on the discovery at the cave of La Chapelle aux Saints (Corrèze) of a fossil human skeleton belonging to the Mousterian period. It was found in association with many animal remains, including the reindeer, the bison, and the rhinoceros. The cranium presents the same characters as those of Néanderthal and of Spy, in an even greater degree, and it is M. Boule's opinion that it carries back the origin of man further than has been generally supposed.

SOCIETIES.

GEOLOGICAL.—March 24.—Prof. W. J. Sollas, President, in the chair.—Messrs. E. C. Andrews, S. S. Dornan, J. C. Gordon, and W. Macdonald, were elected Fellows.—Prof. W. M. Davis read a paper on 'Glacial Erosion in North Wales.'

SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS.—April 5.—Mr. E. R. Matthews read a paper on 'The Corrosion of Steel Reinforcement in Concrete.'

Science Gossip.

THE death was announced on Thursday in last week of Prof. Arthur Gamgee, F.R.S., a distinguished physiologist. His most important work was a textbook of the 'Physiological Chemistry of the Animal Body,' which occupied him from 1880 to 1893.

RECENT Government Publications include 'Solar Physics: a Discussion of Australian Meteorology' (5s.), and 'Kew Gardens: Catalogue of Library and Additions during 1908' (4d.).

NEW editions, brought up to date, have recently been published (Bagster & Sons) of Mr. Lynn's handy little books of reference, 'Remarkable Comets' and 'Remarkable Eclipses.'

THE ROYAL DANISH ACADEMY OF SCIENCES proposes the award of its gold medal as a prize for a successful determination of the mass of a comet. Papers must be sent in before the end of October, 1910.

THE REV. J. H. METCALF of Taunton, Mass., obtained a fine series of photographs of Morehouse's comet (c. 1908), and some excellent reproductions of specimens of these, which accompany his description of them in No. 4316 of the Astronomische Nachrichten, exhibit in a striking manner the extraordinary changes in the shape of the tail. No observations of the comet have yet been published since its perihelion passage on the 26th of December.

WE have received Nos. 10, 11, and 12 of Vol. I. of the Publications of the Allegheny Observatory of the University of Pittsburgh, in Western Pennsylvania. The first two contain determinations, by Mr. R. H. Baker, of the spectroscopic components of Spica and of α (68) Herculis; the third is on the orbit of α Coronæ by Mr. F. C. Jordan. The bright star, Spica, we may remark, was one of the first to be known as a spectroscopic binary, the fact having been detected by the late Prof. Vogel in 1890. A comparison of his observations with those recently obtained at Allegheny shows a period of 4.014 days. That of α Herculis, at first supposed to be long, is now found by Mr. Baker to amount to no more than 2.051 days, and the variability to be of the β Lyrae type. The variable radial velocity of α Coronæ was discovered by Prof. Hartmann from observations in 1902 and 1903; Mr. Jordan finds, by a comparison of these with his own, a period amounting to 17.36 days.

FINE ARTS

ORIGINAL PRINTS AT MESSRS. OBACH'S GALLERIES.

ON more than one occasion already we have insisted that it is conducive to the best interests of modern art that its finer products should from time to time be shown side by side with the masterpieces of the past. A well-chosen collection of prints by Mr. Muirhead Bone, Sir Francis Seymour Haden, Mr. D. Y. Cameron, and Whistler may here be studied with the advantage of easy comparison with that pattern and perfect model of fine etching—Rembrandt; and the opportunity is thus given of appreciating the degree of success each attains in certain matters of technique. We say of technique because, by comparison with the deep and intimate sympathy of some of these Rembrandt plates—the Jan Silvius (14), for example, or the Rembrandt Drawing (22), or that other portrait of himself Leaning on a Stone Sill (18), which reveals itself as the inspiration of one of the best of Meissonier's illustrations for 'Lazarillo de Tormes'—all these modern etchers seem a little slight in subject-matter. Even when, as in such a print as the Landscape with a Cottage and Haybarn (11), Rembrandt deals with the simplest of landscape themes, we are still impressed first and foremost by his natural and unpretentious absorption in what he has seen. His work has the innocence of a child's drawing, beside which modern etching looks professional. In transcendental sincerity Rembrandt stands alone, and all the products of our sophisticated generation necessarily seem inferior in this respect.

Even from the point of view of the full use of the possibilities of the etcher's medium, however, these unpretentious landscapes of the Dutch master offer a formidable criterion by which to measure modern work. Hardly ever in the latter do we find the procession of tones from strong dark to light achieved as Rembrandt constantly achieves it—in the natural course of draughtsmanship, without any apparently conscious “toning” of dark-coloured objects. Mr. Muirhead Bone’s conduct of this transition is admittedly (in the period covered by his exhibits here) less subtle in his etched work than in his drawings. In the former, either the blacks break away from the rest of the drawing—often in a spotty fashion, as in the Demolition of St. James’s Hall: Interior (31)—or the sequence of tones becomes confused, as in the fine Building (27), which has, nevertheless, a certain authority in nature for the intricacy of reflected sunlight in a mass of scaffolding. To unravel such a maze of form passes, perhaps, the limitations of etching, and calls for colour. Whistler, on the other hand, while respecting such limitations, and throwing off the daintiest of detail-drawing, sensitive in character, and disdainful of repetition, hardly welds his series of calligraphic flourishes into any compact black-and-white statement, so that in the plates shown here it is only by the obvious device of printing in the palest of ink on darkened paper that he achieves any unity of tone at all. His houses have not the substance with which they would have been endowed by Mr. Cameron, who, with a use of line less elastic than Whistler’s, gives his Venetian palaces a look of greater permanence and actuality, thanks to his acceptance of a kind of “accompaniment” of almost mechanically repeated forms patiently elaborated to support the main features of his design. It is interesting to compare the finely wrought Ca d’Oro (54) with Whistler’s analogous subject The Palaces (46), in which the leading lines are perhaps more freely drawn than those of Mr. Cameron’s composition (see the dainty record of the traghetto to the left of the picture), but which fails to make a strong impressive pattern. Whistler’s lively draughtsmanship is unsupported by any great power of chiaroscuro, and becomes pretty filigree work. Mr. Cameron’s undoubted sense of tone and mysterious gloom is expressed often by the methods of the tone-draughtsman, by the piling-up of weight in lines not in themselves highly functional, the draughtsmanship of which at any rate is of a static order. Except with regard to the wonderful Morgue (17), so ingeniously packed with varied interest, the same criticism might be passed on the selection of Meryon’s work included in the show.

Kensington Gardens (33) is by far the worthiest example here of the work of Sir Francis Seymour Haden, and, if slightly laboured, has a strong thread of interest vigorously held. His other etchings are by comparison photographic, like the Shere Millpond (34), or confused, like his By-road in Tipperary (36). The presence of fine prints of five of Dürer’s most important engravings—St. Jerome (6), The Knight and Death (8), and Melancholia (10) are among them—would alone suffice to make this collection important, but the five woodcuts by the same artist show him in his more arbitrary and mannered style.

A NEW REMBRANDT.

A PANEL measuring 10½ in. by 15 in., and entitled ‘David with the Head of Goliath,’ was sold at Messrs. Robinson & Fisher’s on February 18th last (lot 82) for 9½ guineas. It was one of forty-seven pictures sold out of a private collection in Hampshire, and was catalogued under the name of Eeckhout. It has since been recognized as an authentic and very early work by Rembrandt, whose signature was revealed as soon as the picture was taken out of the modern frame in which it had been placed, apparently in recent times.

The painter seems to have here used the monogram R. H. with which he usually signed his very early works. The date, which is also difficult to decipher, has been read by several who have seen it as 1631; but the picture might on stylistic grounds be assigned to the slightly earlier date 1629–30.

The brushwork is similar to, but freer than, that of ‘The Money-Changer,’ a signed and dated work of 1627, which was formerly in the collection of Sir F. Cook at Richmond, and was presented to the Berlin Museum (No. 828D) by Sir Charles Robinson in 1881. The treatment of David’s needlessly cumbersome sword in the new Rembrandt is nearly related to that seen in the ‘St. Paul in Prison,’ of the same year, in the Stuttgart Museum. The figure of King Saul, wearing a richly resplendent yellow robe, recalls the painting of the High Priest in the ‘Judas bringing back the Thirty Pieces of Silver,’ which was painted about 1629, and is now in a private collection in Paris. It is reasonable to assume that in one of the men of about thirty years of age in the right background we have a sketchy representation of Rembrandt’s father, whose features are known to us, notably in the ‘Portrait of the Artist’s Father in a Cap with a Blue Feather’ of the same period, which was exhibited at the Old Masters in 1884, and is now in a private collection at Brighton.

We possess in ‘The Wine Contract’ in the National Gallery (No. 1459) a good example of the art of Gerbrand van den Eeckhout. The same painter, who was one of Rembrandt’s earliest pupils, may also have painted the ‘Christ blessing Little Children’ in the same Gallery (No. 757) where it is now officially catalogued as of the School of Rembrandt, having been purchased on the Continent in 1866 as a work by the master for a large sum.

THE BRITISH SCHOOL AT ATHENS.

THE fourth open meeting of the session was held in the Library of the School on Friday, March 19th, when Messrs. J. P. Droop and M. S. Thompson made the following communications dealing with the results of the excavations at the Temple of Artemis Orthia at Sparta.

Mr. Droop described the Laconian style of vase painting. The style began in the seventh century, after the end of the Geometric period, with simple decoration in purple and black and white slip laid over the pink clay. At the close of the seventh century the style developed, figures and animals in the incised technique being introduced. Fifty years later the decay of the style began, of which the signs are the partial abandonment of the slip, and degeneration in the patterns. At the beginning of the fifth century slip is no longer found, and the style degenerated more and more, until its place was taken at the end of the fourth century by the widespread Hellenistic styles. It was pointed out that all this pottery was undoubtedly made locally, a fact the more interesting through the identity of the pottery with the so-called Cyrenaic fabric, which is now seen to be really the Laconian fabric of the sixth century.

Mr. Thompson next read a paper on ‘The Winged Artemis.’ Previously our knowledge of this much-disputed type had depended on about fifty examples from various localities, but recently a large series had been found at the shrine of Artemis Orthia at Sparta, which, besides giving several new variants of this type, showed that it was on the mainland of Greece in the Geometric age. The type therefore appears to be Peloponnesian rather than Ionian; its prototype, however, can be traced in Minoan art, but in the Minoan examples the goddess is not winged, but only accompanied by her animals, which also form a prominent feature of the type in later times. The wings are probably due to a wave of Oriental influence originating from the winged deities of Assyria, and coming into the Peloponnese by way of the southern islands of the Ægean. This island route is the only way known by Homer across the South Ægean, and became in later times a line of Achæo-Dorian colonies. As the shrine of Orthia is the home of this type, we may infer that the type is to be identified with Orthia, or rather with a whole class of primitive Artemis cults of which Orthia is the most prominent example. The titles Orthia and Λυγροδέσμη suggest ultimately an aniconic origin.

SOME CHURCHES OF SOUTH-EAST DEVON.

I.

ONE of the great advantages of taking an intelligent interest in ecclesiology or in the general condition of the old parish churches of England is that, no matter where one may be, the churches cannot fail to supply abundant motives for walks and rambles; whilst for the most part they yield some noteworthy details, and not infrequently tell something of the evolution of both Church and State for nine or ten centuries. In some parts, as in every district of Devonshire, the churches have to be sought amid beautiful and diversified scenery; and nowhere is this more the case than in the well-wooded combs, valleys, and uplands of that corner of this delightful county which is bounded by the coast-line from near Lyme Regis, past the mouths of the Exe, the Sid, and the Otter, on to Exmouth; hence northward up the estuary of the Exe past the various Clysts, westward through Honiton to Axminster, where the Dorset border is shortly gained.

Within these comparatively narrow limits there are upwards of fifty parish churches, which, whilst generally retaining certain common features, vary considerably in size, age, degree of interest, and amount of restoration or rebuilding. Here, as elsewhere, the church explorer should never be contented to omit a visit to the more secluded and less-known small churches, more particularly if the local or other guide-books tell the reader that “the building is devoid of all interest.” In such instances the ecclesiologist will usually be well rewarded for his persistence in visiting all the churches of a district.

Without this persistency such a church as Farway—which, though standing some 450 ft. above sea-level, is hidden away in a fair valley or depression among the Honiton hills, surrounded on almost all sides by hills about double this height—would never have been seen. Now in this little village, so charmingly situated, about equidistant (five miles) from Colyton and Ottery St. Mary, where the advent of a visitor is a surprise, the church is particularly well worth a visit, notwithstanding the truth of the statement in the Postal Directory (which would repel many) that “it was entirely restored” in 1876. The restoration was drastic so far as the outer walls were concerned, and singularly tasteless windows were inserted in the north aisle; but the tower and not a little of the interior escaped devastation.

Moreover on the south side of the church are a pair of noble yew trees. I do not know of any other churchyard that has two such fine ancient examples. The larger, which divides itself into three great limbs a short distance above the ground, yielded a girth of over 20 ft. by a somewhat hasty measurement just below the forking. At any rate, it may be reckoned among the first score of ancient healthy yews in English churchyards.

The story of this church is pretty plain to read. Here was a simple little fabric for Christian worship in the days when Goscelin held Fareweia and several adjacent manors at the time of the Domesday, or possibly under the tenure of the Saxon Chenias in the reign of Edward the Confessor. As population increased in the first half of the twelfth century a north aisle was added to the nave; the three Norman circular piers of the arcade that divided this aisle from the nave still remain, but the indented capitals were partly cut away about the year 1300 to fit in with the new, simply chamfered pointed arches then substituted for the original semicircular ones, when the old aisle was doubtless considerably widened, for the Norman aisles of country churches were invariably narrow. The restoration or rebuilding of the outer walls of nave and chancel has been too severe to permit of the tracing of possible work of the fourteenth and fifteenth centuries, except for the western tower. Farway shared with the vast majority of the parish churches of the West of England in the fashion that prevailed throughout the fifteenth century of erecting towers sufficiently substantial to carry a ring of bells. The western tower is a good average village example of what is usually termed the Perpendicular style, and seems to belong to the third quarter of the fifteenth century. It is of two stages, with battlements and stair turret, at the south-east angle of somewhat higher elevation. It has no buttresses. Where the local stone was good and lime for mortar abundant, it is by no means uncommon to find in the West of England that buttresses were considered superfluous for the less ornate or massive towers.

There are no bench-ends, screenwork, or other pre-Reformation fittings, and the font is modern. But in the chancel is a highly interesting remnant of Elizabethan work. The small oak altar or holy table, 4 ft. long by 2 ft. broad and 3 ft. high, has bulbous or "melon" legs, with richly carved upper and lower rails. It is in very good preservation, and is as handsome a specimen of the art of that date in church furniture as could be found in any English church. There are several larger ones extant, but the Farway example may certainly be placed among the half-dozen best instances. The earliest dated example of altar-tables with these bulbous legs is of 1572, and the latest 1606; this instance probably belongs to circa 1575, or at any rate to the last quarter of the sixteenth century. By its side stands a good highbacked, well-carved chair of Renaissance design. It is apparently late Elizabethan, but is obviously of secular origin, and it is not possible to say when it was introduced into the church.

There was a general neglect of places of worship throughout Elizabeth's long reign. Not only did many a chapel of ease lapse into complete ruin, but all over the country church fabrics fell into decay, and not a few were curtailed of aisles. This seems to have been the case with the north aisle of Farway during this reign. The arcade was probably built-up during that period. But with the dawn of Charles I.'s reign there came a better state of things in this remote valley. Against the north wall of the aisle is a Shakspeare-like bust, and below it the inscription: "This parte of the Church was new Builte in the yere of O^r Lord 1628, By the Benevolence of Humphrie Hutchins of this Parish." The restorers of 1876 suffered an outer stone bearing the date 1628 to remain.

This date is of particular local interest, as on March 28th, 1628, occurred the death of Sir Edmund Prideaux, a lawyer of much repute. Netherton Hall, in this parish, was built by Sir Edmund in 1607; he was made a baronet in 1622. He was buried in the north-chancel chapel of this church, an extension of the north aisle. It would appear that another worthy of this parish was moved to rebuild the north aisle at the time of the interment of the great lawyer. Against the north wall of this north chapel is an elaborate mural monument in memory of "Sir Edmund Prideaux, Baronette," who died at the age of seventy-four. His full-length effigy is depicted in legal costume. On a ledge below is another effigy in late plate armour, lying on the side, bearing a shield of the Prideaux arms in one hand, and holding a sword in the other. There is no name to this figure, but it is supposed to represent Sir Peter Prideaux, M.P., son and heir of Sir Edmund. Sir Peter died in 1681.

These somewhat lengthy notes as to Farway church are set forth as an instance of what may be missed by neglecting to visit a village church ignored or despised by the average guide-book writer. Of other small retired churches having particular points of interest, three or four should be mentioned. The church of Northleigh, about two miles to the south-east of Farway, is generally stated to be notable for "a Norman font and a Perpendicular screen." The font, which has been much rescraped, is of unusual design, both bowl and shaft being square, with shafts at the angles; it is of early thirteenth-century date, not Norman. The small rood-screen is of good late fifteenth-century workmanship. It is 13 ft. 6 in. wide and 8 ft. 6 in. high; the central doorway is 3 ft. 9 in. wide, and on each side of it is a four-light fenestrated opening. The original coping or canopy work on the west side projects 2 ft. 4 in. from the back of the screen. The cresting is modern. There is also a screen shutting off the north aisle from the north-chancel chapel of somewhat different design, but the lower panels of both screens are carved with the linenfold pattern. There is a good Jacobean pulpit. In the vestry is another small Elizabethan holy table with bulbous legs, but destitute of all enriched carving. By far the best part, however, of this church (the walls of which have been over-restored) remains to be mentioned. Almost the whole of the seats, with their square back-ends excellently carved, are of pre-Reformation date, circa 1500, and noteworthy. On one bench-end the floriated initials I.S. may be noticed.

Fine-Art Gossip.

THE death is announced in Edinburgh last week of Mr. W. Beattie Brown in his eighty-seventh year. This artist was distinguished for landscape work. From 1848 until now he had been an annual exhibitor at the Royal Scottish Academy. Some of his earlier work embraced careful studies of scenery in Surrey, Kent, and Yorkshire; but his most successful subjects were found in the Scottish Highlands, where he used to spend about three months every year.

MR. NEWTON BENETT writes:—

"In your review of Prof. Holmes's 'Notes on the Science of Picture-Making' you say you do not remember having seen the important truth that

'fine or subtle colour is never associated with strong relief or great roundness of modelling' stated before. May I be allowed to point out that it was one of the principles on which Ruskin laid stress in various passages of his writings? e.g., in 'Modern Painters,' vol. iv. part v. chap. iii., he says 'a slight tendency to flatness is always characteristic of the greater colourists.'

It is proposed to establish in one of the towers of Notre-Dame, Paris, a museum devoted exclusively to the history of this famous cathedral, to include ancient engravings, plans, views, and so forth. The idea is excellent, and has found favour with the authorities.

R. W. C. writes concerning the Horse Guards Parade:—

"As you have afforded space in your columns to this subject, will you permit a few remarks by way of criticism of the whole scheme of revolution of St. James's Park proposed by Mr. Speaight? The whole lay-out is a striving after rigid symmetry where there is next to nothing in the surrounding buildings or the neighbourhood to suggest it, and a sacrifice of the many beauties which are the result of the naturalness of the park as it at present exists. What purpose can there be in the new avenue from a corner of the India Office which meets the Mall? What sort of effect would the colonnade or arcade against the buildings bounding the Parade produce but incongruity, combining nothing, harmonizing with nothing?"

A NEW book by Mr. John Stabb, whose work on 'Some Old Devon Churches' we recently reviewed, will be published next month by Messrs. Simpkin & Marshall, under the title of 'Devon Church Antiquities.' It will contain 135 illustrations from photographs of panel paintings, bench-ends, monuments, pulpits, fonts, &c., in the parish churches of Devonshire.

MUSIC

Richard to Minna Wagner: Letters to his First Wife. Translated, Prefaced, &c., by William Ashton Ellis. 2 vols. (H. Grevel & Co.)

WE have always been under the impression that in reference to the causes which led Wagner to break up his home at Zurich, Mr. Ellis was somewhat hard and unsympathetic towards Minna. Already in the first volume of his 'Life of Richard Wagner,' when referring to the marriage in 1836, he remarks that "the picture she formed of his future had no higher light in it than an honourable appointment with good pay"; also that "any profounder sense of the enormous artistic significance of her husband never dawned upon her, either in this cloudy period or at a later date." No one at that time suspected that the Königsberg conductor possessed genius of the highest order; while for years after, with few exceptions, distinguished musicians and prominent critics in Germany ignored or attacked his works. It would then have been surprising if Minna Planer had realized that she was giving her hand to a man who, though obscure and poor, would successfully fight against all difficulties, and whose works would, in the distant future, become not only celebrated, but even popular.

In the volumes under notice there are special letters, which Mr. Ellis conveniently names in his Preface, and which give us further insight into the causes that led to the separation. There is much in them which shows that Wagner, though hasty in temper, and rather inclined to think somewhat too leniently of his own conduct, did really try to make matters go smoothly. At the same time there is no doubt that Minna during the years of adversity showed love and attachment to Wagner, which he himself fully acknowledges in one letter. There were evidently faults on Minna's side: the deception as to her age on the marriage certificate, her running away from home the year after marriage, and her conduct concerning the mysterious Nette, Minna's sister, or child, "according to a now current tradition," says Mr. Ellis. With regard to the last two matters we are not in possession of sufficient details to form a really impartial opinion. Minna's failure to recognize Wagner's genius was not her fault, but her misfortune. Her letters to Wagner are not forthcoming, and we shall probably never have them. In reading Wagner's letters to her, we are apt to take a one-sided view.

The world shows a pardonable curiosity to learn as much as possible about the lives of men who have distinguished themselves. Hence these letters will be perused with interest. But those relating to marital misunderstandings form only a comparatively small fraction of the volumes. There are many striking references in them to music and musicians.

It is pleasant, for instance, to read that Mendelssohn, who was present at the first performance at Berlin in 1844 of 'The Flying Dutchman,' at the close "came on the stage, embraced me, and congratulated me very cordially." So much for the man Mendelssohn; for his music, with few exceptions, Wagner cared little. At London in 1855 he was to conduct "the poor 'Italian' Symphony," and in a later letter he only speaks of the 'Scotch' as "at any rate better than the earlier." With Handel's music Wagner was certainly not familiar, but in London he was taken to a performance of 'The Messiah,' "at which I nearly died of ennui." How much of this ennui was due to the performance, and how much to the music we are left to conjecture.

Of the Philharmonic orchestra Wagner declares that "these gentlemen play quite well, no doubt, have thoroughly mastered their instruments, and can take anything that is set before them; but—like machines, exactly like Geneva snuff-boxes." If he could revisit London and hear the orchestra now, he would, we are sure, express a very different opinion. In those days they probably did not understand his style of conducting, and, as we know from these letters, he could not properly explain his intentions, his knowledge of the English language being very limited. We may quote one brief passage, also from a London letter. On Queen Victoria (or "my little Victoria," as he calls her) he appears to have made a highly favourable impression. Some said it was caused by his "beautiful tail-coat," while others attributed it to a "white cravat" lent to him by Praeger. He then adds:—

"For my own part, I have to reproach myself with having deceived her throughout the whole concert; she is said to have stubbornly fancied, to wit, I had entirely new gloves on, whereas they were nothing but cleaned. In that you'll recognize my savingness, no doubt, but, alas! a lack of candour too."

Of the letters in these volumes the first is dated Dresden, July 21st, 1842; the last in November, 1863, a little over two years before the death of Minna, of whom there is a portrait in vol. ii. An excellent Index deserves note.

Musical Gossip.

'PSYCHE,' an Idyll in three scenes, dramatic action and dances arranged by Signor Alfredo Curti, music by Alfred Moul, was produced at the Alhambra Theatre on Monday evening. Mr. Moul is favourably known as a composer of songs, his setting of Rossetti's 'Mid Rapture' being performed at the Melbourne Festival in 1882. His 'Psyche' music is tastefully written and effectively orchestrated. All the numbers are short; the most taking are the 'Homage to Venus,' 'Cupid's Awakening,' and the 'Veil Dance.' The stage presentation of the "Idyll" is excellent, the harmony of colouring being most delicate.

It is now settled that four performances of Miss Ethel Smyth's 'The Wreckers' will be given at His Majesty's Theatre on the afternoons of June 22nd, 25th, and 29th, and July 1st, under the direction of Mr. Thomas Beecham. The soloists will be Madame De Vere Sapio and Messrs. John Coates, A. Winckworth, and Lewys James.

M. JULIEN TIERSOT has acquired for the Paris Conservatoire de Musique an interesting portrait of Berlioz which was painted in 1830, just after he had won the Prix de Rome.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN.	Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
—	Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
—	Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
WED.	Mr. Francis Macmillen's Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
THURS.	Mr. Bronislaw Huberman's Violin Recital, 8.15, Queen's Hall.
FRI.	Stock Exchange Orchestral Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall.
SAT.	London Symphony Orchestra, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Mozart Society, 3, Portman Rooms.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

HAYMARKET.—Bevis: a Comedy in Three Acts. By Hubert Henry Davies.

THE latter-day traditions of the Haymarket seem to exercise a demoralizing influence on its playwrights. To Mr. Frederick Harrison the drama of ideas owes a debt of gratitude which it should not be slow to acknowledge; it was he who kept alive the Vedrenne-Barker management at a critical period of its history. Nevertheless the sort of play which Mr. Harrison and Mr. Maude, when in association, encouraged at this house still serves as a sort of model, whereas it should stand as an example to be avoided. Mr. Jones hinted at a better way in 'The Manceuvres of Jane' and 'Dolly Reforming Herself.' Mr. Davies has gone back to that type of piece which Mr. Maude and his colleague favoured, and which in its very name—sentimental comedy—confesses itself a contradiction in terms. And so the Haymarket is once again the theatre which caters for the young person and dabbles in domestic romance. Boy-and-girl love—though it is love in high life—is the burden of Mr. Davies's tale; and misunderstandings, artificially arranged and prolonged, are the means by which he provides variations on this hackneyed theme. Did not the playhouse afford a variety of compensations for the mistakes of its craftsmen, were it not that Mr. Davies is, almost despite himself, a master of situation and humorous surprises, one might wax melancholy or angry over the spectacle of a writer who in 'The Mollusc' has given us one of the most brilliant of modern light comedies wasting his art on no better topic than calf-love. In point of fact, notwithstanding all its artificialities and puerilities, there is no speaking of 'Bevis' except in a friendly way.

Its story is trivial enough. Bevis, Marquis of Bewdley, is a self-centred, but rather "nice" boy who has allowed his mother to negotiate a marriage for him with a rich brewer's daughter. The pair overhear their respective parents quarrelling about settlements, and Rachel Hopkins, a highspirited girl, finding that considerations of money have had more to do with the match than love, insists on breaking off her engagement. Very neatly, though mechanically, the dramatist contrives that when she is inclined to surrender Bevis shall in his turn refuse, for romantic reasons, to go on with the marriage. Having had one curtain with the boy, and another with the girl, as non-consenting party, Mr. Davies naturally devotes the last act to bringing the young couple together. But such a summary of the plot overlooks the many redeeming features of the play. Some of the characterization—notably that of the boy's mother, mercenary, overbearing, politely insolent; of his idle uncle, who would only too gladly step into his nephew's title; of an indiscreet widow whom this uncle woos half-heartedly—is indicated with admirable discrimination. All sorts of unexpected strokes of humour vary the monotony and disguise the inevitableness of the story. For instance, we have a piquant situation produced in the second act by a manœuvre of the widow, who at Bevis's request invites the two families to a week-end party, and is punished on both sides by a refusal to rob the meeting of its awkwardness. There is a diverting moment, too, when this same lady, expecting to be paid a sort of commission as go-between, obtains from Rachel's father for her pains nothing more than a kiss. A quaint turn is given to the third act when Bevis is supposed to be drowned, and forced to listen in hiding to a conversation in which his uncle accepts the possibility of his death with selfish satisfaction. Lastly, Mr. Davies gets a touch of freshness into his boy-and-girl love-scene by making the girl offer all the advances and venture on the first kiss. For the sake of these and other amusing details the childishness of his scheme and his frequent lapses into old-fashioned farce may be forgiven. The best acting comes from Mr. A. E. Matthews and Miss Henrietta Watson. The former's assumption of seignorial dignity gives just the right idea of a spoilt boy of rank preoccupied with an idea of his own importance; while Miss Watson's stony glare, in the moment in which the dowager marchioness discovers that she has been trapped into a meeting with her enemy the brewer, is the perfection of high-comedy pantomime. Miss Madge Titheradge, a little nervous at first in the part of Rachel, plays the sentimental scenes with a pretty earnestness; and though Miss Lottie Venne as the widow is a little too extravagant in the farcical episodes of the play, she is always amusing, if only by virtue of the trick she has of taking, as it were, her audience into her confidence.

Plays of our Forefathers. By C. Mills Gayley. (Chatto & Windus.)—It is Dr. Gayley's conviction, as it is that of most students of stage history, that the origins of mediæval no less than classical drama are to be traced to religious ritual and folk festivals, and in this thoughtful book he shows how our miracle plays grew naturally out of the dramatization of the services of the Church. When once, as he points out, the liturgy proper to the feast of Easter or the Nativity became a scenic paraphrase of the events of divine history which it celebrated, the drama of the Christian era, alike in England and on the Continent, was already in its beginnings. There needed but a step—though it was a long step—to transform such tropes, as they were called, into the liturgical plays which covered the whole tragedy of Christ's Passion, and, ranging further afield, extended back to the Creation and forward to the Day of Judgment. These were the "miracles," and no sooner was their representation transferred from church to churchyard or the street corners of the town, no sooner did the municipality co-operate in or take over the management of the "pageants," than a drama, which had been essentially ecclesiastical, was in the way of being secularized.

Dr. Gayley concentrates his attention mainly on the four more important cycles of liturgical plays—those of Chester, York, Wakefield, and Coventry, or, as he prefers to call the Ludus Coventriæ cycle, because he believes it to have been performed by nomadic actors, the N—Town collection. He examines the contents of these cycles, and discusses the differences which exist between their material and the special contributions supplied by each school.

Some of his conclusions, however, on the York and the Wakefield plays are too ingenious not to be mentioned. He decides not only that were there three York periods or schools, but also that there was at least one playwright in each of the two latter who distinctly helped in the development of English drama:—

"A playwright of the middle period, to which belong 'Caym,' 'Noe and his Wife,' and 'The Angels and the Shepherds,' is characterised by an unsophisticated humour; the distinctive playwright of the later or realistic period is marked by his observation of life, his reproduction of manners, his dialogue, and the plasticity of his technique."

Similarly Dr. Gayley is inclined, with Mr. Pollard, to assign a single authorship to a group of the Wakefield plays—about a fourth of the cycle—in which the metre is that of nine-line stanzas, and realistic and humorous qualities are shown in vigorous combination, and to attribute them to a writer whom he styles the Prayer-Clerk of Wakefield. Dr. Gayley thinks this playwright owed much to the example of his York colleagues, but declares that he achieved an independent result.

Dr. Gayley has also an interesting theory as to the general tone of the "miracles," which, he contends, inasmuch as they present the individual achieving his ends not by revolt, but by adjustment to circumstance and convention, were "in essence a preparation for comedy rather than tragedy." He gives instances in support of his proposition. "Herod, Judas, and Antichrist," he says, "are foils, not heroes. The hero of the miracle seals his salvation by accepting the spiritual ideal of the community." "The Massacre of the Innocents emphasises not the weeping of Rachel, but the joyous escape of the Virgin and the Child." "The murder of Abel gradually passes into a comedy of the grotesque." Even "the Drama of the Cross is a triumph," a case of tragedy averted.

One other point seems to call for notice. Respectfully, but firmly, the author contests the validity of Dr. Furnivall's statement that, "in the progress of the drama, Moralities followed Mysteries, and were succeeded by Interludes," and that "when folk tired of Religion on the stage they took to the inculcation of morality and prudence, and when this bored them they set up Fun." The statement, says Dr. Gayley, represents the facts roughly; but if it is not to be misconstrued, its clauses must be qualified. Its very terms, he insists, are misleading. "Mystery," as a synonym for the miracle play, suggests the French mystère, a very different thing; and "morality" was never used to indicate the moral play by the English contemporaries of the type. There is a record, too, of a York "moral" entitled 'The Play of the Lord's Prayer' which "must have existed before 1384"; while extant "morals," such as 'The Pride of Life' and 'The Castell of Perseverance,' go back to the first decade of the fifteenth century, the age of the "Miracles." "Nor," adds this critic, "can it be said that one of these kinds survived the other." He argues, therefore, that "the moral was rather a younger contemporary of the miracle than a follower or substitute for it."

Reproductions from quaint contemporary prints illustrating the staging of the miracle and morality plays lend a picturesqueness to the volume.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—C. B.—J. P. B.—A. . S.—A. L.—C. G.—Received.

J. P. (N. Z.)—We never supply such information.

WE cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

AUTHORS' AGENTS	PAGE
BELL & SONS	448
CASELL & Co.	452
CATALOGUES	426
EDUCATIONAL	425
ENO'S FRUIT SALT	451
EXHIBITIONS	425
INSURANCE COMPANIES	427
LECTURES	425
LONGMANS & Co.	428
MACMILLAN & Co.	428
MAGAZINES, &c.	427
MISCELLANEOUS	426
NOVELLO & Co.	457
PRINTERS	426
PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS	425
SALES BY AUCTION	426
SHIPPING	451
SITUATIONS VACANT	425
SMITH, ELDER & Co.	449
TYPE-WRITERS, &c.	426
UNWIN	423

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

JUST PUBLISHED. Post 8vo, with 48 Illustrations and a Map. 7s. 6d. net.

ALASKA, THE GREAT COUNTRY.

By ELLA HIGGINSON.

In this volume Miss Higginson, whose writings are well known in America, tells the story of the growth of Alaska, for which at present little-known country she predicts a great future. The numerous illustrations are a special feature of the book.

JUST PUBLISHED. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

ATHLETIC GAMES IN THE EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

By GERTRUDE DUDLEY,
Director of the Women's Department of Physical Education, Chicago University, and FRANCES A. KELLOR.

JUST PUBLISHED. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

HISTORY OF THE LATIN AND TEUTONIC NATIONS (1494-1514).

By LEOPOLD VON RANKE.
A Revised Translation by G. R. DENNIS,
B.A. (Lond.).

With an Introduction by EDWARD ARMSTRONG, M.A., Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford.

JUST PUBLISHED. Vol. IV., containing Parts VII. and VIII. With 3 Maps and 2 Plans. Small 4to, 12s. net.

THE ITINERARY OF JOHN LELAND.

Newly Edited from the MSS. by LUCY TOULMIN SMITH.
Vol. V., completing the Work, is in active preparation.

NEW VOLUME OF BELL'S CLASSICAL TRANSLATIONS.

Crown 8vo, sewed, 1s.
HOMER'S ILIAD. Books IX. and X.
A New Literal Translation by E. H. BLAKENEY,
M.A., Head Master of the King's School, Ely.

BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

"The new series of Bohn's Libraries, on which judicious bookbuyers have long learned to keep a careful eye."—Athenæum.

This well-known Series now includes upwards of 800 Volumes of Standard Works in English Literature, and Translations from the Classics and all the Modern Languages on

HISTORY	SCIENCE
BIOGRAPHY	NATURAL HISTORY
ARCHÆOLOGY	PHILOSOPHY
THEOLOGY	POETRY
TOPOGRAPHY	ART
ANTIQUITIES	FICTION

With Dictionaries and other Books of Reference. Price 3s. 6d. or 5s. per Volume (with exceptions).
A Detailed Catalogue of the Libraries will be sent on application.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S ANNOUNCEMENTS.

NOW READY. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

HENRY W. LUCY'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

With a Portrait Frontispiece in Photogravure from a Painting by J. S. SARGENT, R.A.

SIXTY YEARS IN THE WILDERNESS

SOME PASSAGES BY THE WAY.

BY HENRY W. LUCY ("TOBY, M.P." of Punch),

Author of 'A Diary of Two Parliaments,' 'Mr. Gladstone: a Study from Life,' 'Peeps at Parliament,' &c.

Times.—"An autobiography of the frankest and most candid kind.....A remarkable career, the details of which are told simply and unaffectedly..... Full of anecdote.....It is all very clever and very vivid."

Daily Telegraph.—"We are tempted to linger over many excellent stories, for, indeed, the book is full of them.....A feast of kindly wisdom and a flow of genial soul, in company which regards the whole world as little more than a home of warm-hearted fellowships and affectionate associations."

Daily Chronicle.—"Mr. Lucy has known everybody and seen everything. Here he comes to us in his honoured eventide, rich with the spoils of war..... All his stories are good, and all are smartly told."

Daily News.—"These memories, in interest and variety are equal to any that have been published in recent years.....It is good to hear that Mr. Lucy is willing to give us another volume."

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

THE STORY OF HAUKSGARTH FARM.

By EMMA BROOKE,

Author of 'Sir Elyot of the Woods,' 'Susan Wood and Susan Won.'

Times.—"A beautiful and touching story."

Liverpool Daily Post.—"For intense power, boldly used, 'The Story of Hauksarth Farm' takes high place.....Miss Brooke has given the world a revelation of the Westmorland of the middle of last century."

THE FLYING MONTHS.

By FRANCES M. PEARD.

[Ready April 20.]

PRISCILLA OF THE "GOOD INTENT."

By HALLIWELL SUTCLIFFE.

[Ready May 4.]

DAVINA.

By FRANCES G. BURMESTER.

[Ready May 4.]

On APRIL 26, with 8 Illustrations, large post 8vo, 6s. net.

LEAVES OF THE LOWER BRANCH:

THE ATTORNEY IN LIFE AND LETTERS.

By E. B. V. CHRISTIAN.

* * * Consists of sketches of the Attorney as he is depicted in literature, and of the work done in literature by solicitors. These sketches range from a humorous defence of the much-pilloried Messrs. Dodson & Fogg to more serious studies in books.

SECOND IMPRESSION. READY IMMEDIATELY. With 8 Illustrations. Large post 8vo. 7s. 6d. net.

THE BISHOP OF NORWICH.

A BISHOP IN THE ROUGH.

Edited by the Rev. D. WALLACE DUTHIE,

With a Preface by the Right Rev. THE LORD BISHOP OF NORWICH.

East Anglian Daily Press.—"An enchanting volume.....This fascinating tale of travel and adventure.....as a travel book or as an autobiography it has the rare distinction of holding the reader's attention until the last page is reached, and one regrets there is not another volume."

Daily Telegraph.—"Fascinating from beginning to end.....We recommend no one to miss this most entertaining volume."

Daily Chronicle.—"We commend to all who are interested in the puzzles and wonders of the world this delightful book of traveller's gossip."

RE-ISSUE OF THE

DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.

Edited by LESLIE STEPHEN and SIDNEY LEE. IN TWENTY-TWO VOLUMES.

Cloth, gilt top, 15s. net each; half-morocco, marbled edges, 21s. net each.

Now ready. Vol. XIV. (MYLLAR—OWEN), and a Volume will be issued each month until the completion of the Edition in December, 1909.

Country Life.—"This magnificent book of reference is absolutely essential to any well-equipped library."

MR. CLEMENT SHORTER in the Sphere.—"The 'D. N. B.' is a book that should be in every library, and they are indeed fortunate who can have it on their shelves in twenty-two volumes instead of the sixty-six of the original edition, more particularly as, unlike most reprints, the new form is handier and more attractive than the old. The set is the most perfect birthday present for a bookish person that our age has known."

* * * Prospectus, with Specimen Pages, post free on application.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

THE GENERAL INDEXTO THE EIGHTH SERIES.

"The General Index to NOTES AND QUERIES has just appeared in an eighth volume of 143 pages, which, with the seven previously issued, brings the total of pages up to 1,221. The range of NOTES AND QUERIES, which will fill out its hundredth volume this year, or 50,000 pages, is wider than that of any encyclopædia that has ever been projected. Established in London, the most cosmopolitan of cities, its Notes, whether resulting from experience, interviews, or research, were such as to rouse cosmopolitan Queries or criticism from the utmost corners of the English-speaking world. Week by week it has taxed for its purposes all departments of the British Museum, as well as returned and retired travellers. IN AMERICA AS WELL AS IN THE OLD WORLD, every puzzling question arising in the conversation, games, or customs of society has led to Queries, and hence to Notes which have year by year shed new sidelights on domestic life. No literary enterprise is too grand to seek or to find a valuable auxiliary in NOTES AND QUERIES. THE OXFORD DICTIONARY, incomparably superior to any similar work in any language, ASKS and RECEIVES such ASSISTANCE almost every week—indispensable minutiae which had eluded its thousand co-workers. So has the unrivalled 'DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY,' now approaching its sixtieth volume, BEEN AIDED IN ALL ITS SERIAL ISSUES. When articles on any subject have become numerous they are classified, to facilitate examining them. Thus, in the eighth index alone the Shakspeariana show five columns of titles, pointing to hundreds of criticisms. This department was long ago deemed by Furness worthy of his study (see Eysell in 'Hamlet,' &c.), and hence cannot be neglected by any dramatic student. As to Proverbs, observing that 246 of them were treated in the first series and 335 in the last, and that these numbers indicate the average in the other four-score volumes, one sees a quarry from which it would be easy to build up a better book of proverbs than has been elaborated since the days of Solomon. Similar compilations might be made of Songs, sacred and secular, Epigrams, Epitaphs, &c. The present index points to more than 400 quotations, few of them in Bartlett, but many of them worthy to stand there. The word Folk-lore was created by the first editor of NOTES AND QUERIES, and its first series showed 300 paragraphs, or longer remarks, on the subject. So suggestive and hence sought for are the General Indexes that the earlier ones are out of print—and if one turns up it brings a fabulous price at auction. That to the Second Series, borrowed from an Historical Society, was all copied with a pen by one Wisconsin minister who could neither find nor purchase the master key to a dozen favourites in his choice library. The compiler of the eighth and jubilee Index cannot but recall the fact that no survivor remains of those who founded and first laboured for NOTES AND QUERIES."

New York Nation, Jan. 19, 1899.THE GENERAL INDEX TO THE EIGHTH SERIES

CAN STILL BE HAD, PRICE 6s.

JOHN C. FRANCIS,
Notes and Queries Office,
Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C."LEARNED, CHATTY, USEFUL."—Athenæum.

"THAT DELIGHTFUL REPOSITORY OF FORGOTTEN LORE, 'NOTES AND QUERIES.'"

Edinburgh Review, October, 1880.

NOTES AND QUERIES:

A Medium of Intercommunication

FOR

LITERARY MEN, GENERAL READERS, ETC.

Subscription, 10s. 3d. for Six Months; 20s. 6d. for Twelve Months.

(Including postage.)

IN THE PAST

no considerable work of reference has been concluded without the co-operation of 'Notes and Queries.'

IN THE PRESENT

every week's issue reveals a discovery or re-discovery of interesting facts in

Americana,Bibliography and Literary History,*Biography, Ecclesiastical Matters,*Folk-Lore and Popular Antiquities,*Genealogy and Heraldry,*History: English, Irish, and Scottish,*Philology and Grammar,*Proverbs and Quotations, Topography.THE FUTUREwill see the greater development of our usefulness to the Second-hand Booksellers—a class already showing their hearty appreciation—as well as other new features.JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

YOUR BIRTHRIGHT IS HEALTH.THE SCIENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

'Health is a Man's Birthright. It is as natural to be well as to be born. All pathological conditions, all diseases, and all tendencies to disease are the result of the transgression of physiologic and hygienic law. This is the science of health in a nutshell.'—DENSMORE.

Eno's Fruit Salt

IS NATURE'S ANTIDOTE FOR HUMAN ILLS
arising from the neglect or violation of her laws.

'Our Acts, our angels are, for good or ill, our fatal shadows that walk by us still.'

'And such is life, so gliding on, it glimmers like a meteor, and is gone.'

CAUTION.—Examine the capsule, and see that it is marked ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT.' Without it you have the sincerest form of flattery—IMITATION.

Prepared only by J. C. ENO (Limited), 'FRUIT SALT' WORKS, LONDON, S.E

WORKS BY WILLIAM THYNNE LYNN.

ELEVENTH EDITION NOW READY, price Two Shillings net.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS:

A Handy Book of Astronomy.

Eleventh Edition. With 5 Plates.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S., Member of the British Astronomical Association, formerly of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich,

Author of 'Remarkable Comets,' 'Remarkable Eclipses,' 'Astronomy for the Young,' &c.

"Well known as one of our best introductions to astronomy."—Guardian.

NINTH EDITION NOW READY, fcap. 8vo, cloth, price Sixpence net.

REMARKABLE ECLIPSES:

A Sketch of the most interesting Circumstances connected with the Observation of Solar and Lunar Eclipses, both in Ancient and Modern Times.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

"The booklet deserves to continue in popularity. It presents a mass of information in small compass."—Dundee Advertiser.

THIRTEENTH EDITION, JUST OUT, price Sixpence, cloth.

REMARKABLE COMETS:

A Brief Survey of the most interesting Facts in the History of Cometary Astronomy.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S.

London: SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster Row.

NEXT WEEK'S ATHENÆUM will contain Reviews of GENTLEMEN ERRANT, by
MRS. HENRY CUST, and A DICKENS
DICTIONARY, by A. J. PHILIP.

Shipping.

P. & O.

PLEASURE CRUISES FROM MARSEILLES.

(Rail and Steamship connexions from London.)
S.Y. VECTIS	No. 3.—April 22 to May 20. VENICE, DALMATIA, CORFU, NAPLES, SICILY, VILLEFRANCHE, &c. Fares from 30 Guineas.
	No. 4.—May 21 to June 12. NAPLES, ALGIERS, LISBON, AND LONDON. Fares from 20 Guineas.
	Special Terms for Cruises 3 & 4 in conjunction. From London and Leith.
	No. 5.—July 1 to July 27. SPITZBERGEN, NORWAY, &c. Fares from 30 Guineas.
BY	No. 6.—July 29 to August 11.
	No. 7.—August 13 to August 26. THE NORWEGIAN FJORDS. Fares from 12 Guineas.

P. & O. CRUISING YACHT VECTIS,

6,000 tons, 6,000 h.p.

For Passage, Illustrated Handbooks, and all information, apply Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, Northumberland Avenue, W.C., or 122, Leadenhall Street, E.C., London.

AS AUTHORIZED TO BE USED BY BRITISH SUBJECTS.

NOW READY,

THE

NATIONAL FLAG,

BEING

THE UNION JACK.

SUPPLEMENT TO

NOTES AND QUERIES

For JUNE 30, 1900,

Price 4d.; by post 4½d.

Containing an Account of the Flag,

Reprinted June, 1908, with

Coloured Illustration according to Scale.

JOHN C. FRANCIS & J. EDWARD FRANCIS,
Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

A TONIC FOR THE FEET.—For all Relaxed, Tender, Swollen conditions of the feet, "PEDESTRIANE" gives instant relief. It allays inflammation and the painful smarting that keeps you in perpetual discomfort. A trial will convince. 1s. 3d. and 2s. 6d. post free.—MARSHALL & CO., 70A, Basinghall Street, E.C.

For Acidity of the Stomach.
For Heartburn and Headache.
For Gout and Indigestion.

D I N N E F O R D ' S

M A G N E S I A.

For Sour Eructations and Biliary Affections.

A Safe and most effective Aperient for regular use.

CASSELL'S NEW BOOKS

EVERY-DAY JAPAN

By ARTHUR LLOYD, M.A.

Written after Twenty-five Years' Residence and Work in the Country. With an Introduction by Count TADASU HAYASHI. 8 Coloured Plates and 96 Reproductions from Photographs. Royal 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt edges. 12s. net.

THE NATURE BOOK

A popular description by Pen and Camera of the delights and beauties of the open-air. Profusely Illustrated from Photographs taken by well-known Naturalists and a Series of Coloured Plates. Vol. I. now ready; Vol. II. ready April 23, cloth, gilt edges. 12s. net.

HEALTH AND COMMON SENSE

By WOODS HUTCHINSON, M.A. M.D.

"It is long since we have met with so useful a treatise on hygiene, so trustworthy a guide to common sense, and so amusing a book of science."—Morning Post. Cloth gilt, gilt edges. 6s. net.

BEAUTIFUL GARDENS

By WALTER P. WRIGHT.

"If there is a gardener oppressed by his four-square plot who would like to turn it into a miniature Eden, then we commend the book to his notice. It is full of cultural hints, beautiful and practical pictures, and told with an appealing charm."—Daily Chronicle. With 2 Coloured Plates and numerous Exquisite Garden Pictures, Practical Plans, and Diagrams. New and Enlarged Edition. Cloth gilt. 6s. net.

FAMILIAR SWISS FLOWERS

By F. E. HULME, F.L.S. F.S.A.

Introduces those who turn over its pages to many very interesting flowers and plants to be found either in the lowlands or highlands of Switzerland. With 100 Coloured Plates from Original Drawings by the Author. Series 1, paper covers, 1s. net, ready April 23.

WOMEN OF ALL NATIONS

Edited by T. ATHOL-JOYCE, M.A., and N. W. THOMAS, M.A.

Profusely illustrated with Reproductions of Striking and Original Photographs, and a Series of Magnificent Plates in Colour. In 2 vols. half-leather, gilt edges. 15s. net each.

MIND AND WORK

By LUTHER H. GULICK, M.D.

A practical helpful book, showing how mental soundness influences health, friendliness, happiness, and wholesomeness. Cloth gilt. 3s. 6d. net.

FAITH: its Nature and its Work

By the Right Rev. HANDLEY C. G. MOULE, D.D., Bishop of Durham.

Approaches Faith, for study and discussion, from the avowedly Christian point of view. Combines spiritual inspiration with practical suggestion. Cloth gilt, 3s. 6d.

CASSELL'S NEW NOVELS

THE SWORD OF THE LORD

By JOSEPH HOCKING

Brian Hamilton is sent to Germany on a political mission by Henry VIII. At the time of his arrival, Germany is in a state of ferment owing to the growth of the Reformation. He meets Martin Luther, eventually throws in his lot with him, and has many thrilling adventures before the fulfilment of his mission. With Frontispiece in Colours. Cloth gilt. 3s. 6d.

THE YELLOW GOD

An Idol of Africa

By H. RIDER HAGGARD

With Frontispiece in Colours and 2 Half-Tone Plates.

"A breezy, spiritedly written tale of adventures, weird and wonderful."—Globe. "As vivid, thrilling, and picturesque as even Mr. Haggard can make it."—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE CONQUEST OF CRYSTABEL

By Mrs. GEORGE DE HORNE VAIZEY

With Frontispiece in Colours.

"A bright, fresh, amusing story, with a welcome spice of humour."—Christian World. 2nd Impression. 6s.

THE LURE OF EVE

By EDITH MARY MOORE

With Frontispiece in Colours.

"The emotions are real emotions, and the passions real passions—the men are alive as well as the women."—Mr. JAMES DOUGLAS in the Star. 2nd Impression. 6s.

PEGGY THE DAUGHTER

By KATHARINE TYNAN

With Frontispiece in Colours.

"Full of charm, with a pleasant breath of romance.....The whole story makes very delightful reading."—Christian World. 3rd Impression. 6s.

POLLY OF THE CIRCUS

By MARGARET MAYO

"A story of love, pathos, and adventure overflowing with incidents amusing and most touching.....a most attractive novel."—Eastern Morning News.

With 8 Illustrations. 3s. 6d.

THE INTERRUPTED KISS

By RICHARD MARSH

"Packed with genuine and enjoyable thrills."—Newcastle North Mail. With Frontispiece in Colours. 6s.

THE CIRCULAR STAIRCASE

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

One of the best detective stories of recent years. The plot is ingenious, the extraordinary incidents follow each other naturally. Unlike most books of its kind, it is humorous.

With Coloured Frontispiece and 4 other Illustrations. Ready April 16. Cloth gilt 6s.

CASSELL'S ART BOOKS

BYWAYS OF COLLECTING

By ETHEL DEANE

"The pages are full of shrewd hints and fine illustrations, and they show the way to other people intent on acquiring rare and beautiful objects without straining the resources of even a modest purse."—Standard.

With 73 Illustrations. 7s. 6d. net.

A HISTORY AND DESCRIPTION OF ITALIAN MAJOLICA

By M. L. SOLON

"A complete epitome of all that is known about the beautiful painted and lustrated tin and enamelled ware for which Italy is so justly famous, beginning with its first introduction in the 15th Century and ending with the modern revival."—International Studio.

With 24 Coloured Plates and numerous Black and White Illustrations. 42s. net.

A HISTORY AND DESCRIPTION OF FRENCH FAIENCE

By M. L. SOLON

"It would be hard to find a better and more lovely contribution to Ceramic Art than Mr. Solon's descriptive, accurate, and one may say exhaustive book on the French potters and their work."—Bookman.

With 24 Coloured Plates, Reproductions of Marks, and 54 Black and White Plates. 30s. net.

A HISTORY AND DESCRIPTION OF FRENCH PORCELAIN

By E. S. AUSCHER

Translated and Edited by WILLIAM BURTON, F.C.S.

"Of immense value to the collector, and of deep interest to the general reader..... The story of the rise of French Porcelain is told with clearness and authority, and beautiful illustrations are given of leading specimens."

With 24 Coloured Plates, Reproductions of Marks, and 48 Black and White Plates. 30s. net.

A HISTORY AND DESCRIPTION OF ENGLISH EARTHENWARE AND STONEWARE

To the beginning of the 19th Century

By WILLIAM BURTON, F.C.S.

"In the beautiful and exquisitely illustrated volume before us his theme is English Earthenware and Stoneware down to the Eighteenth Century.....Mr. Burton's summary of the wonderful results attained by Josiah Wedgwood is fascinating reading."—Nottingham Guardian.

With 24 Coloured Plates, Reproductions of Marks, and 54 Black and White Plates. 30s. net.

ILLUSTRATED LIST OF SPRING BOOKS POST FREE ON APPLICATION.

CASSELL & CO., LTD., La Belle Sauvage, London, E.C.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4251.

SATURDAY, APRIL 17, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

Lectures.

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN, ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, W.

TUESDAY NEXT, April 20, at 3 o'clock, Prof. F. W. MOTT, M.D. F.R.S., FIRST OF TWO LECTURES on 'The Brain in Relation to Righthandedness and Speech.' Half-a-Guinea the Course.
THURSDAY, April 22, at 3 o'clock, JAMES PATERSON, Esq., A.R.S.A. R.W.S., FIRST OF THREE LECTURES on 'Aspects of Applied Esthetics.' Half-a-Guinea.
SATURDAY, April 24, at 3 o'clock, ROBERT T. GÜNTHER, Esq., M.A. F.R.G.S., FIRST OF TWO LECTURES on 'The Earth Movements of the Italian Coasts, and their Effects.' Half-a-Guinea.
Subscription to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.
The EVENING MEETINGS will be RESUMED on FRIDAY, April 23, at 9 o'clock, when Mr. ALEXANDER SIEMENS, M.Inst.O.E., will give a DISCOURSE on 'Tantalum and its Industrial Applications.'

Societies.

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY (Incorporated by Royal Charter).

An ORDINARY MEETING will be held on THURSDAY, April 22, at 5 P.M. in the SOCIETY'S ROOMS when a Paper will be read by Miss LEONORA DE ALBERTI and Miss A. B. WALLIS CHAPMAN, D.Sc.Lond., on 'English Traders and the Inquisition in the Canaries during the Reign of Queen Elizabeth.'
H. E. MALDEN, Hon. Secretary.

THE FOLK-LORE SOCIETY.—The NEXT MEETING of the SOCIETY will be held at 22, ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, on WEDNESDAY, April 21, at 8 P.M., when a Paper, entitled 'Personal Amulets (European),' will be read by Miss LINA ECKENSTEIN, and illustrated by Exhibits of European Amulets by Mr. E. LOVETT and others.
F. A. MILNE, Secretary.

11, Old Square, London, W.C., April 8, 1909.

Exhibitions.

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S SPRING EXHIBITION of PORTRAITS and LANDSCAPES by EARLY BRITISH and FOREIGN MASTERS is NOW OPEN.
SHEPHERD'S GALLERY, 27, King Street, St. James's.

Educational.

BEDFORD COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (UNIVERSITY OF LONDON), YORK PLACE, BAKER STREET, LONDON, W. Principal—Miss M. J. TUKE, M.A.

The EASTER TERM BEGINS on THURSDAY, April 22, 1909. Lectures are given in preparation for all Examinations of the University of London in Arts, Science, and Preliminary Medicine for the Teachers' Diploma, London, the Teachers' Certificate, Cambridge, and for the Cambridge Higher Local Examination.
Six Laboratories are open to Students for practical work.
There is a Special Course of SCIENTIFIC INSTRUCTION in HYGIENE, designed to furnish Training for Women, Factory and Sanitary Inspectors, and Teachers of Hygiene.
The ART SCHOOL (which is conducted at South Villa, Regent's Park), may be attended by Students who are not taking other Subjects at the College.
A Single Course in any Subject may be attended.
Regular Physical Instruction is given free of cost to Students who desire it, by a fully qualified Woman Teacher.

ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.

ONE REID SCHOLARSHIP in Arts, value 31l. 10s. First Year, 25l. 7s. Second and Third Years.
ONE OLD PUPIL SCHOLARSHIP in ARTS, value 20l. for Two Years.
ONE PFEIFFER SCHOLARSHIP in SCIENCE, annual value 48l., tenable for Three Years: will be awarded on the results of the Examination to be held in June.

RESIDENCE.

Accommodation for about 40 resident Students is provided in the College. At Easter the College will open as an additional Residence. South Villa, Regent's Park, where further accommodation for 15 Students will be provided. The New House is about five minutes' walk from York Place, and has large Gardens available for Students of the College.
Full particulars on application to the Principal at the College.

DEPARTMENT FOR PROFESSIONAL TRAINING IN TEACHING.

Head of the Department—Miss MARY MORTON, M.A.

The Course includes full preparation for the Examinations for the Teaching Diplomas granted by the Universities of London and Cambridge.
Students are admitted to the Training Course in October and in January.
One Free Place (value 26l. 5s.), one Scholarship of the value of 20l., and a limited number of Grants of 10l. are offered for the Course beginning in October 1909.
They will be awarded to the best Candidates holding a Degree or its equivalent in Arts or Science.
Applications should be sent to the Head of the Department.

ROYAL HOLLOWAY COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (University of London)

ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS. — TWELVE ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS, from 50l. to 60l., and several BURSARIES of not more than 30l., tenable for three years at the College, will be awarded on the results of an EXAMINATION to be held from JUNE 29 to JULY 2, 1909. Names must be entered before MAY 29. The College prepares Students for London Degrees. Inclusive fee, 100l. a year. For forms of entry and further particulars, apply to the SECRETARY, Royal Holloway College, Englefield Green, Surrey.

WEYBRIDGE LADIES' SCHOOL, SURREY.
Miss E. DAWES, M.A. D.Lit.Lond., Classical Scholar, Girton. Refined Home. Thorough Education and Physical Care. Good Grounds. Position high, and one of the healthiest in England.

LEATHERHEAD COURT, SURREY.

A London School in the Country for 45 Girls (Residents).
Principal—Miss TULLIS.
The School aims at an intellectual training suited to the individual physical development on safe lines, and the cultivation of generous thoughts and pleasant manners.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH, S.E.

F. W. AVELING, M.A. B.Sc.
Preparation for Universities and Professions.
Stress on Modern Languages and Science.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CIRENCESTER. (Founded 1845. Reorganized 1908.)

Patron—H.M. KING EDWARD VII.
Chairman—LORD MORETON.
For Landowners, Land Agents, Surveyors, Agriculturists, Intending Colonists, &c.
FARMING AND COLONIAL BRANCH.
ESTATE MANAGEMENT AND FORESTRY BRANCH.
For Prospectus of Curriculum, Fees, Entrance Exhibitions, Scholarships, Diplomas, &c., apply to THE PRINCIPAL.
NEXT TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, May 18.

BIRMINGHAM AND MIDLAND INSTITUTE.

SCHOOL OF MUSIC.

Visitor—Sir EDWARD ELGAR, Mus.Doc. LL.D.

Visiting Examiner—W. G. MCNAUGHT, Mus.Doc.

Principal—GRANVILLE BANTOCK.

SESSION 1908-1909.

The SESSION consists of AUTUMN TERM (September 31 to December 19), WINTER TERM (January 15 to April 3), SUMMER TERM (April 19 to June 26).

Instruction in all Branches of Music. Students' Choir and Orchestra, Chamber Music, Students' Rehearsals, Concerts, and Opera.

Prospectus and further information may be obtained from ALFRED HAYES, Secretary.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTORs in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.
Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

Situations Vacant.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD.

PROFESSORSHIP OF ECONOMICS.

The COUNCIL will shortly proceed to the ELECTION of a PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS in the UNIVERSITY.—Applications must reach the Registrar, from whom further particulars may be obtained, not later than MAY 12, 1909.

W. M. GIBBONS, Registrar.

UNIVERSITY OF BIRMINGHAM.

(FACULTY OF ARTS.)

PROFESSORSHIP OF HISTORY.

The COUNCIL invites applications for the CHAIR OF HISTORY. Stipend 600l. per annum. The successful Candidate will be required to enter on his duties on OCTOBER 1, 1909.
Applications, with full particulars of Academic distinctions and appointments, and published work, together with the names of not less than three References, should be sent to the undersigned on or before MAY 8. Sixty-five copies should be sent.
Testimonials are not required.
Further particulars may be obtained from
GEO. H. MORLEY, Secretary.

APPLICATIONS are invited for the post of A PROFESSOR OF ENGLISH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE in the MAHARAJA'S COLLEGE, MYSORE, SOUTHERN INDIA. The Candidate selected for the post will be on probation for two years; at the end of which period the Government of H.H. the Maharaja of Mysore will be at liberty to terminate the contract. Candidates should be distinguished University men who have taken first-class honours in Classics and made a special study of English Language and Literature, or taken the M.A. Degree with first-class Honours in English Language and Literature in a Scottish or British University. Those who have in addition received training in the Theory and Practice of Teaching, or have had experience of professorial teaching in a University College will be preferred. The terms of pay, leave, and pension will be the same as those allowed to members of the Indian Educational Service. The initial Salary will be Rs. 500 a month, the Salary for the second year Rs. 550, and thereafter, if the selected Candidate is confirmed in his post, his Salary will be Rs. 600 at the end of the second year of service, rising by annual increments of Rs. 50 to Rs. 1,000 a month. Free first-class passage to India, also back to England if the contract is terminated at the end of the second year of service. Candidates should love educational work among natives of India, and be fond of outdoor games. Applications will be received by the INSPECTOR GENERAL OF EDUCATION IN MYSORE, Bangalore, South India, up to JUNE 10, 1909. The selected Candidate will be expected to join duty as early as possible.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

ESSEX EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

APPOINTMENT OF PRINCIPAL, COUNTY LABORATORIES, CHELMSFORD.

The ESSEX EDUCATION COMMITTEE invite applications for the appointment of PRINCIPAL of their COUNTY LABORATORIES, CHELMSFORD. The person appointed must be specially qualified in the Sciences applied to Agriculture, and must undertake the duties of Head of one of the Departments at the Laboratories, preferably the Biological Department, and devote the whole of his time to the Committee's work. The Salary will be at the rate of 400l. per annum, rising by annual increments of 25l. to 500l. per annum. The appointment will be determinable by six months' notice on either side. Canvassing is prohibited, and will be regarded as a disqualification.—Further particulars and Forms of Application may be obtained from me, the undersigned, and applications, accompanied by a full statement of the qualifications of the Candidates, and copies of Testimonials (not exceeding three in number) must be sent in addressed to me, on or before May 1, 1909.
J. H. NICHOLAS, Secretary.
County Offices, Chelmsford, April 13, 1909.

KENT EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

RAMSGATE HIGHER EDUCATION SUB-COMMITTEE. COUNTY SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

HEAD MASTER REQUIRED on AUGUST 1 for the NEW COUNTY SCHOOL, to accommodate 150 Boys, to be opened at Ramsgate in September next. Candidates should be University Graduates and experienced in the work of a Secondary School. Initial Salary not less than 300l. per annum, with increments in accordance with the Committee's Scale, which may be obtained, together with Form of Application, from the undersigned. Applications must be received by the Secretary not later than noon on MAY 10. Canvassing will be considered a disqualification.
By Order of the Committee,
FRAS. W. CROOK, Secretary.

Caxton House, Westminster, April 8, 1909.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF BOLTON EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

MUNICIPAL DAY TRAINING COLLEGE FOR WOMEN.

WANTED in SEPTEMBER: (1) STAFF LECTURER (Woman), in ENGLISH and FRENCH. Commencing Salary 150l. per annum, rising by annual increments to 175l.
(2) ASSISTANT LECTURER (Woman), in NATURE STUDY and MATHEMATICS. Commencing Salary 115l. per annum, rising by annual increments to 150l.

Candidates for both appointments must have a University qualification (or its equivalent). Previous experience in a Training College will be an additional qualification.

(3) DRILL INSTRUCTRESS, who will also be required to teach Needlework or some other Subject. Salary 115l. per annum.
All three appointments are subject to residence at the College Hostel if the Committee so desire. If required to be resident in Hostel 35l. per annum will be deducted from the above Salaries.

Application Forms will be sent on receipt of stamped addressed foolscap envelope. The last day for receipt of applications, which must be sent to the undersigned, is APRIL 17, 1909.

FRED. WILKINSON, Director of Education.

Education Offices, Nelson Square, Bolton.

MODERN LANGUAGE and FORM MISTRESS
WANTED at EASTER for DULWICH HIGH SCHOOL (G.P.D.S.T.).—Apply at once to THE HEAD MISTRESS.

MILHAM FORD SCHOOL FOR GIRLS,
OXFORD.—VICE-HEAD MISTRESS WANTED after the Summer Vacation. Degree and experience in Girls' Secondary Schools essential. Salary 200l.—Letters of application should be addressed to THE PRINCIPAL.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—FORTH-
COMING EXAMINATION. JUNIOR APPOINTMENT in ADMIRALTY; EXAMINER, EXCHEQUER and AUDIT DEPARTMENT; and ASSISTANT SURVEYORSHIPS OF TAXES (18-194). JUNE 10. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received.—They must be made on Forms to be obtained, with particulars, from THE SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, Burlington Gardens, London, W.

Situations Wanted.

OXFORD GRADUATE (Honours), aged 25, desires PRIVATE SECRETARYSHIP in England or Abroad, Excellent References. Now in town.—SIGMA, Box 1585, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Miscellaneous.

WHO WILL HELP promising Author (University Graduate, Lecturer), overwhelmed by loss, to complete important Work—rescue the labour of years? Will not some generous Gentleman or Lady, or School, Library, Publication, Church, kindly offer him room, with or without Board, and small Stipend, preferably near Town (British Museum), in exchange for superior service as Secretary, Tutor (specialty German), Editor, Librarian? Or, as patron of Literature, will some one contribute necessary financial means? Exceptional qualifications. References. Churchman: helpful, social work.—Address AUTHOR, Ferndale, Warnley, near Bristol.

UNIONIST M.P.s, JOURNALISTS,
AUTHORS.—Competent STENOGRAPHER, with literary ability, SEEKS WORK. Useful knowledge matters Journalistic, German and French Languages. Own Remington.—Letters to SIGNET, 55, Chancery Lane.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

THE

AUTOTYPE COMPANY,

74, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON.

MONOCHROME COPIES

By the PERMANENT AUTOTYPE CARBON PROCESS OF PICTURES BY OLD MASTERS from the Principal Collections of Note.

NUMEROUS EXAMPLES OF WORKS BY MODERN ARTISTS.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY'S PROCESSES OF PERMANENT PHOTOGRAPHIC REPRODUCTIONS are extensively employed by the Trustees of the British Museum, the Local Government Board, many of the Learned Societies, and leading Publishers.

Copies of Coins, Seals, Medals, MSS., Drawings, Engravings, Art Objects, Microscopic Works, &c.

For Limited Editions the Autotype Processes of Book Illustrations are cheaper than any existing methods of Block Reproductions, and yield infinitely superior results.

Inquiries are invited from those requiring Book Illustrations of the very highest quality.

SPECIMENS AND ESTIMATES SUBMITTED.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE ART GALLERY,
74, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.

Open free daily, 10 to 6.

REGINALD GLENCROSS, M.A. LL.B. Cantab., undertakes GENEALOGICAL and RESEARCH WORK. Three years' experience in Ulster's Office, Dublin. Highest references. Terms moderate.—3, Chaloners Street, West Kensington.

THE DAUGHTER of a well-known Literary Man is desirous of meeting with a LADY and GENTLEMAN to SHARE her HOUSE; or would take boarders. Rooms Furnished or Unfurnished. The House is situated on South Norwood Hill, five minutes from Norwood Junction Station, close to the Stanley Halls (where Concerts, Lectures, &c., are continually given), near the Public Library, and within a walk of the Crystal Palace, or One Station from it. Norwood is regarded as one of the healthiest places round London, and was at one time a well-known health resort. A good train service to London Bridge and Victoria.—Address C. M., Box 1562, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Type-Writers, &c.

TYPEWRITER. KINDLY NOTE CHANGE OF ADDRESS. MISS E. M. TIGAR, 10, MATTLAND PARK VILLAS, Haverstock Hill, N.W.

TYPE-WRITING OF EVERY DESCRIPTION by EXPERT, 8d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000 words. Accuracy and prompt return guaranteed. Reliable References.—NORA DICKINSON, 1, Sackville Gardens, Ilford.

TYPE-WRITING.—The WEST KENSINGTON OFFICES. Authors' MSS., Translations, &c. Legal and General Copying. Private Dictation Room. Circulars, &c., Duplicated. Usual Terms. References. Established sixteen years.—SIKES & SIKES, 223A, Hammersmith Road, London, W.

TYPE-WRITING, 9d. per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272, Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING OF ALL KINDS done promptly and intelligently. Special care taken with Technical MSS. Fiction 10d. per 1,000 words.—Price List and Specimens from MISS ROUTH, 43, Harwood Road, Waltham Green, S.W.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kimberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING.—All MSS., STORIES, PLAYS, NOVELS, &c., accurately TYPED. 9d. per 1,000 words. Carbons 3d. per 1,000. Specifications carefully copied.—F. BATE, 53, Bushwood Road, Kew, Surrey.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGESS, 24, Paternoster Row.

Printers.

HAVE YOU A FAMILY PEDIGREE which you would like to have PRINTED? Send it to us and it will be done under Expert Supervision at the lowest rates.—GERRARDS, LTD. (The Westminster Press), Genealogical Printers, 411A, Harrow Road, London, W.

For Booksellers' Catalogues see p. 478.

Sales by Auction.

Works of Art.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, April 19, at 1 o'clock precisely, WORKS OF ART, comprising the COLLECTION of W. CAREW HAZLITT, Esq., of Barnes Common, including fine Specimens of Oriental, Continental, and English Porcelain; other Properties, including Silver Plate—old Furniture—Oriental and Continental Porcelain—a few Pieces of old English Pottery, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

A valuable Collection of Greek Coins and the Numismatic Library of an American Collector.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, April 20, at 1 o'clock precisely, a valuable Collection of GREEK COINS in Gold, Electrum, Silver, and Copper, chiefly selected for their artistic merit, and the NUMISMATIC LIBRARY of an AMERICAN COLLECTOR. Among the most noteworthy examples of ancient Greek monetary art represented in this Collection are the following Coins:—Lot 8, Litra of Aetna—13, Electrum of Assos—20, Archaic Stater of Corinth—28, Stater of Elis, with eagle's head (the finest known specimen of this artistic type)—30, Stater of Elis, with noble head of Hera—48, Stater of Rhodus, of very fine style—49, Litra of Segesta—50, Tetradrachm of Selinus—53-70, a fine Series of Syracusan Tetradrachms of the transitional and best art periods, some with Artists' Signatures—71, Dekadrachm of Syracuse, by Euanetos—85-97, a beautiful Series of Thurian Distaters and Staters—and a choice Selection of Copper Coins, chiefly with fine Patina, including an excellent Portrait Coin of the famous Cleopatra, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

A Selection of Greek Coins in Gold, Silver, and Copper from a well-known Cabinet.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, April 21, at 1 o'clock precisely, a selection of GREEK COINS in Gold, Silver, and Copper, from a well-known Cabinet. Among the noteworthy Coins in this Collection are:—Lot 13, Tetradrachm of Mausolus—19, Tetradrachm of Cnossus—22, Stater of Elis—53, Dekadrachm of Syracuse, with Artist's Signature, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Collection of Greek Coins the Property of Prof. L. WHITE-KING, C.S.I. LL.D. F.S.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 22, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of GREEK COINS in Gold, Electrum, Silver, and Copper, the Property of Prof. L. WHITE-KING, C.S.I. LL.D. F.S.A.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Collection of Japanese Colour Prints, Illustrated Books, and a few Kakemono, the Property of JOHN STEWART HAPPER, Esq., of New York City, U.S.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, April 26, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS, ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, and a few KAKEMONO, the Property of JOHN STEWART HAPPER, Esq., of New York City, U.S.A.

May be viewed on April 22, 23, and 24. Catalogues may be had, price 1s. each, or, with Illustrations, 5s. each.

Japanese Colour Prints and Surimono, comprising the Collections of LAWRENCE T. W. SALT, Esq., A. G. WEBSTER, Esq., and Capt. V. J. SCANTLEBURY.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 30, at 1 o'clock precisely, JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS and SURIMONO, comprising the COLLECTIONS of LAWRENCE T. W. SALT, Esq., of Egerton Terrace, S.W., A. G. WEBSTER, Esq., of Lincoln, and Capt. V. J. SCANTLEBURY.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Estate of Rev. Prebendary J. H. STEPHENSON, deceased. Lympsham Manor, near Weston-super-Mare, Somerset.

LALONDE BROS. & PARHAM have been favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION on the PREMISES, on TUESDAY, May 11, 1909, and Four Following Days, the ANTIQUE and MODERN HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE—a few fine Specimens of Early English Carved Oak—Grand Piano (Broadwood)—Single Manual Pipe Organ—Invalid's costly Wheel Chair—valuable Oil Paintings attributed to Sir Joshua Reynolds (after Van Dyck), Rubens, Vickers, and Zuccheri School, Engravings, Prints, and other Pictures—two valuable Panels of Embroidery—two large Seventeenth-Century Carved Figures of Apostles (said to be from Bath Abbey)—Old Armour—Antique Ornamental China—Old Silver and Sheffield Plate—King Charles I. Handkerchief—Bric-à-brac—Old Gold and Silver Coins, including three Aureus of Nero and Tiberius.

Extensive LIBRARY of OLD and VALUABLE BOOKS, including Shakespeare's Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies, Second Impression, 1632. Horae Beatae Mariae Virgine, Fifteenth Century, on Vellum, and Missale Hildensemense, 1499, and other rare Works.

On view the Monday preceding the Sale from 11 till 5, and the Auction will commence at 2 o'clock each day.

Illustrated Catalogues (price 6d. each, which must be remitted) are in course of preparation, and may be obtained of the Auctioneers, Weston-super-Mare.

Valuable Miscellaneous Books, including the Modern Library of a Gentleman (removed from Teddington) and other Properties.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 22, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock, the MODERN LIBRARY of a GENTLEMAN, comprising Hakluyt's Voyages, 12 vols., and other Books of Travel—Standard Historical, Theological, and Philosophical Works—the Writings of Victorian Novelists and Poets, &c.; also other Properties, including Nattes' Views of Bath, and Louthborough's English Scenery, Coloured Copies—Elwes' Genus Liliun—Morant's Essex, 2 vols.—Oxford Historical Society's Publications, 46 vols.—a few Old Bindings, and Books from the Baskerville Press—Bullen's English Dramatists, 16 vols., Large Paper—Florio's Montaigne and North's Plutarch, 9 vols. (Tudor Translations)—First Editions of Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, and others.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

A Collection of Books relating to America—also a Selection from the Library of a Nobleman.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 22, at 1 o'clock, a COLLECTION OF BOOKS RELATING TO AMERICA, comprising Early Voyages and Books on Navigation—Works relating to the First Settlements of the Colonies and to the American Indians—Rare Tracts on the Revolution—Histories of the States and Counties—Travels in Canada and Hudson's Bay—Books on South America, and the West Indies—American Printed Books, &c., mostly in old calf bindings or in the original boards, also an Early Mezzotint Portrait of George Washington—to which is added a SELECTION FROM THE LIBRARY OF A NOBLEMAN, comprising Buck's Views in Great Britain, 4 vols.—the Works of Piranesi (Early Impressions), and other Architectural Books—Early Works on Gardening—Folio Volumes with Engravings—Old Atlases—Le Sacre de Louis XV., in morocco by Padeloup—La Galerie du Palais Royal, in old French morocco—Albums of Original Water-Colour Drawings, &c.

Catalogues on application.

Valuable Books and Original Drawings from the Collection of the late T. C. BLOFELD, Esq., formerly Chancellor of the Diocese of Norwich (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 30th, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE BOOKS from the above LIBRARY, comprising Topographical and Antiquarian Works—Early Printed and Black-Letter Books—a printed Horæ on Vellum (Illuminated)—Rare Books in Seventeenth-Century Literature—MSS. &c.; also original Water-Colour Drawings and Engravings from the same Collection; to which are added the Houghton Gallery, 2 vols. Sir Richard Strange's Engravings—Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery (the Property of a Gentleman)—a Complete Set of First Editions of Scott's Waverley Novels—A Copy of 'King Glumpus,' with Illustrations by Thackeray, in the original wrappers—A Fifteenth-Century MS. Horæ on vellum, with Miniatures—The Editio Princeps of Euclid, &c.

Catalogues on application.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, April 19, a COLLECTION of OLD DRAWINGS, the Property of a GENTLEMAN, and Pictures by Old Masters.

On TUESDAY, April 20, a valuable COLLECTION of MEZZOTINT PORTRAITS after Sir J. Reynolds, the Property of LOWES DICKINSON, Esq., deceased, late of 1, All Souls Place, Portland Place, W.

On THURSDAY, April 22, OLD ENGLISH and FOREIGN SILVER, from various Sources.

On FRIDAY, April 23, PORCELAIN, DECORATIVE OBJECTS, and FURNITURE, from various Sources.

On SATURDAY, April 24, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late J. J. ELLIOTT, Esq.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester-square, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 22, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, the LIBRARY of the late EDWARD CHAPLIN, Esq., of Hamburg, removed from that City, and other Properties, including First Editions of the Works of Dickens, Thackeray, A Beckett, Lever, &c., in the Original Parts—Books with Coloured Plates by Rowlandson, Cruikshank, and Leech—a Collection of Works relating to the County of Notts—Books on the Fine Arts—Ackermann's Microcosm of London, Original Edition—Redford's Art Sales—Burlington Fine Arts Club Exhibition Catalogues—Sporting Books with Coloured Plates by Alken—Thornton's Tour—a long run of the Sporting Magazine—a Collection of Autograph Letters, Engravings, &c. Catalogue in preparation.

STEVENS'S AUCTION ROOMS. Established 1760.

TUESDAY NEXT, April 20, at half-past 12 o'clock.

NATIVE PADDLES, Swords, Knives, Brass Bowls, and Natural History Specimens from Borneo and other parts—Bronzes and China—Carved Ivory Tusks—Chinese Porcelain—Japanese Works of Art—and Curiosities from all parts.

Mr. J. C. STEVENS will sell the above by AUCTION at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

On view Monday, 10 to 5, and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

Rare and Valuable Books.

HAMPTON & SONS will SELL by AUCTION at 30, Pembridge Square, Notting Hill Gate, on APRIL 21, at 1 o'clock, the valuable COLLECTION of BOOKS formed by the late DAVID MURRAY, Esq. (by order of the Executors), amongst which will be found Burton's Arabian Nights, with Supplement—Smith's British Mezzotint Portraits—Walpole's Anecdotes of Painting—Jackson's Wood Engraving—Bartsch, Le Peinture-Graveur—Hamerton's Etching and Engraving—National Portrait Gallery—Ruskin's Modern Painters, Stones of Venice, Seven Lamps, Arrows of the Chase, &c.—Bewick's Quadrupeds—Crowe and Cavalcaselle's Lives of Titian and Raphael—Froude's History of England—Grote's History of Greece—Burton's Pilgrimage to El Medinah—Shakespeare's Works, 12 vols.—Billing's Baronial and Ecclesiastical Antiquities of Scotland—Buller's Birds of New Zealand—Dürer, La Vie de Sainte Vierge—Otley's History of Engraving—Survey of Western Palestine—L'Art, 49 vols.—Ruins of Palmyra and Balbec—Gillray, Caricatures and Suppressed Plates and Volume of Text—Holbein's Portraits of Illustrious Personages—Rembrandt, L'Euvre, with the Volume of Free Subjects.

Catalogues of the Auctioneers, 2 and 3, Cockspur Street, S.W.

For Magazines, &c., see p. 478.

THE GRANT RICHARDS BOOKS

A SELECTION OF SPRING PUBLICATIONS

BY FILSON YOUNG

MEMORY HARBOUR: Essays Chiefly in Description. By the author of 'The Wagner Stories,' &c. Imperial 16mo, cloth gilt, 5s. net.
This volume contains essays on Monte Carlo, The Year in Cornwall, Byways of a War, A Morning Dream in Ireland, A Memory of Beasts, The Piccadilly Symphony, In Praise of the Railway, In Memoriam, &c., &c.

BY FREDERICK LAWTON

THE THIRD FRENCH REPUBLIC. By the author of 'Rodin,' &c. With 32 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 12s. 6d. net.
"To those who wish to make a serious study of modern France we highly recommend Mr. Lawton's history....His book is a brilliant one, and as accurate as it is brilliant."—Globe. "A valuable work....a most informing volume."—Daily News.

BY HARRY DE WINDT

MY RESTLESS LIFE. Personal Reminiscences by the author of 'A Ride to India,' &c. Large post 8vo, cloth gilt, 7s. 6d. net.
"A book of reminiscences which hale fellows will describe as 'topping.' He is irrepressible, admirable; there is something invigorating and bracing about Mr. De Windt."—Daily Mail. "The most fascinating book of adventure we have read for a long time."—Sportsman.

BY CHARLES EDWARD RUSSELL

THOMAS CHATTERTON: The Story of a Strange Life. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.
"I have here set forth the plain record of this extraordinary life, with the hope to do something, however little, to clear from calumny and undeserved reproach the memory of one of the greatest minds and sweetest souls that ever dwelt upon this earth."—FROM THE PREFACE.

BY CLAYTON HAMILTON

MATERIALS AND METHODS OF FICTION. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s. net.
In this book the author, from a study of many novels and short stories of acknowledged greatness, deduces and formulates the general principles of the art of fiction. It is of especial value to students and young authors who desire to profit by the example of the masters.

THREE NEW NOVELS

THE LIVING STRONG-BOX. By Frederick Mauzens. With 80 Illustrations, 6s.

"It is seldom so much mirth can be extracted from a novel as from this."—Scotsman. "The story is a thoroughly diverting trifle."—Outlook.

THE GRIP OF FEAR. By Maurice Level. 6s.

"One of the most sensational stories we have come across for many a long day."—Morning Post. "Extremely powerful and well written."—Globe.

THE LAST PERSECUTION. By S. N. Sedgwick. With Frontispiece, 6s.

"The reawakening of Christianity under the stress of a persecution of unprecedented fierceness is strongly portrayed."—Glasgow Herald.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

EMPIRES OF THE FAR EAST:

a Study of Japan and its Possessions, of China, Manchuria, and Korea, and of the Political Questions of Eastern Asia and the Pacific. By Lancelot Lawton, for Five Years Special Correspondent of the 'Daily Telegraph' in Tokyo and Manchuria. 2 vols. demy 8vo, cloth gilt, with Maps, 24s. net. [August.]

ROUND THE WORLD IN A MOTOR-CAR. By Antonio Scarfoglio. With 60 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 16s. net. [June.]

THE COMPLETE WILD - FOWLER ASHORE AND AFLOAT. By Guy Thorne and Stanley Duncan. Fully Illustrated with Diagrams and Reproductions in Half-Tone. Royal 8vo, cloth gilt, 15s. net. [July.]

LITERARY BY - PATHS OF OLD ENGLAND. By Henry C. Shelley. With 125 Reproductions of Photographs by the Author. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 10s. 6d. net. [April.]

SHAMROCK LAND. By Plummer F. Jones. With 48 Illustrations in Half-Tone. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 10s. 6d. net. [June.]

SPAIN: A Study of her Life and Arts. By Royall Tyler. With 64 Illustrations in Half-Tone. Large post 8vo, cloth gilt, 7s. 6d. net. [May.]

THE SPORT OF BIRD STUDY. By Herbert K. Job. Illustrated with Reproductions of Photographs from life by the author. Foolscap 4to, cloth gilt, 7s. 6d. net. [April.]

HOW TO APPRECIATE PRINTS. By Frank Weitenkamp. With 33 Illustrations in Half-Tone. Demy 8vo, cloth gilt, 7s. 6d. net. [April.]

Uniform with 'The Perfect Garden.'

THE GARDEN WEEK BY WEEK THROUGHOUT THE YEAR. By Walter P. Wright. With 100 practical Illustrations and many others in Colour and in Black and White. Large post 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s. net. [May.]

NOTES ON THE ATTIC COMEDY. By Herbert Richards. M.A., author of 'Notes on Xenophon.' Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. net. [June.]

THE MENACE OF SOCIALISM. By W. Lawler Wilson. With Maps. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 6s. net. [April.]

THE RIDDLE OF PERSONALITY. By H. Addington Bruce. Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, 5s. net. [April.]

POEMS. By Madison Cawein, author of 'Kentucky Poems,' &c. Foolscap 8vo, half-parchment, 5s. net. [May.]

THE TRAGEDY OF NAN, &c. By John Masefield. Large post 8vo, paper boards, 3s. 6d. net. [June.]

FICTION

ANTONIO. By Ernest Oldmeadow, author of 'Susan,' &c. With Frontispiece in Colour, 6s. [May.]

THE LIMIT. By Ada Leverson, author of 'Love's Shadow,' &c., 6s. [June.]

MULTITUDE AND SOLITUDE. By John Masefield, author of 'Captain Margaret,' &c., 6s. [June.]

THE BRONZE BELL. By Louis Joseph Vance, author of 'Terence O'Rourke,' &c. With 4 illustrations. 6s. [May.]

THE UPPER HAND. By Mrs. Frederick Dawson. 6s. [May.]

THE CONSERVATIVE. By Mabel Godfrey Faussett, author of 'The Dual Heritage,' 6s. [June]

GRANT RICHARDS, 7, CARLTON STREET, S.W.

MACMILLAN'S NEW BOOKS.

VOL. II. JUST PUBLISHED.

A Catalogue Raisonné of the Works of the Most Eminent Dutch Painters of the Seventeenth Century.

Based on the Work of John Smith, by C. Hofstede de Groot (with the assistance of Dr. W. R. Valentiner). Translated and Edited by EDWARD G. HAWKE. In 10 vols. 8vo, 25s. net each.

VOL. II. THE WORKS OF AELBERT CUYP and PHILIPS WOUWERMAN.

Previously published.

VOL. I. JAN STEEN, GABRIEL METSU, GERARD DOU, PIETER DE HOOCH, CAREL FABRITIUS, JOHANNES VERMEER. 25s. net.

Social Life at Rome in the Age of Cicero.

By W. WARDE FOWLER, M.A., Author of 'The Roman Festivals of the Period of the Republic,' &c. With Map and Plans. 8vo, 10s. net.

Monuments of Christian Rome

from Constantine to the Renaissance. By ARTHUR L. FROTHINGHAM, Ph.D., Professor of Archaeology and Ancient History at Princeton University. Illustrated. Extra crown 8vo, 10s. 6d.

[Handbooks of Archaeology and Antiquities.]

The Ancient Greek Historians

(Harvard Lectures). By J. B. BURY, Litt.D. LL.D., Regius Professor of Modern History in the University of Cambridge. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

Dante's Inferno, Purgatorio, and Paradiso.

Translated by EDWARD WILBERFORCE. 3 vols. Globe 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

St. Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians

An Exposition, by J. ARMITAGE ROBINSON, D.D., Dean of Westminster. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

Studies in Mystical Religion.

By RUFUS M. JONES, M.A. D.Litt., Haverford College, U.S.A. 8vo, 12s. net.

This work deals with the mystics from the days of primitive Christianity to the period of the English Commonwealth. The book is written without sectarian cast or bias.

Mars as the Abode of Life.

By PERCIVAL LOWELL, A.B. LL.D., Author of 'Mars and its Canals,' &c. Illustrated. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

GERVASE.

By Mrs. PERCY DEARMER.

[Tuesday.]

The life-history of an idealist, whose ideals finally triumph, but only at the cost of the hero's happiness.

TONO-BUNGAY.

By H. G. WELLS.

ONE IMMORTALITY.

By H. FIELDING HALL.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

MESSRS.

Longmans, Green & Co.'s

LIST.

Memoir of George Howard Wilkinson,

Bishop of St. Andrews, formerly Bishop of Truro and Vicar of St. Peter's, Eaton Square. By ARTHUR JAMES MASON, D.D. With Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo, 28s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"One of the most interesting biographies published for a long time."—Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette.

Sir George Mackenzie, King's Advocate, of Rosehaugh: His Life and Times, 1636(?)–1691.

By ANDREW LANG. 8vo, 15s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"The book is a fascinating blend of history and biography. Mr. Lang handles his material like a magician, and his style is as fresh as ever."—Birmingham Post.

The Curious Case of Lady Purbeck: a Scandal of the Fifteenth Century.

By the Author of 'The Life of Sir Kenelm Digby,' 'The Life of a Prig,' &c. 8vo, 6s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"Attractive as romance and fascinating as history." Daily Telegraph.

"Might almost be taken for romance if it were not solemnly declared to be history."—Daily Chronicle.

"As fascinating and entertaining as fiction." Manchester Courier.

Industrial Efficiency: a Comparative Study of Industrial Life in England, Germany, and America.

By ARTHUR SHADWELL, M.A. M.D. NEW and CHEAPER EDITION in ONE VOLUME, with a SUPPLEMENTARY CHAPTER. Crown 8vo, 6s. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

The Springs of Helicon: a Study in the Progress of English Poetry from Chaucer to Milton.

By J. W. MACKAIL, M.A. LL.D., Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"He lectures with so much unobtrusive learning, tact, and sympathy that one hopes he may bring some to read the old poets for themselves."

MR. ANDREW LANG in the Morning Post.

Pastor Ovium: the Day-Book of a Country Parson.

By JOHN HUNTLEY SKRINE, Author of 'Pastor Agnorum,' &c. Crown 8vo, 5s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"Mr. Skrine is cheerful as well as earnest, and philosophically deals with mankind as he finds it. His records sparkle with the sidelights of humour and shrewdness and observation; and of course for the literary reader it has many echoes and graces."—Times.

The FIELD says that 'POLLY WINFORD' is "One of the best sporting novels which has been published for some time."

Polly Winford. By EYRE HUSSEY, Author of 'Miss Badsworth, M.F.H.' Crown 8vo, 6s.

"A clean, wholesome story, written in an easy, flowing style, without pretence, without straining after effect, and without any other feeling than that life is jolly and well worth living."—Australasian World.

Odds and Ends.

By R. MONTAGU TABOR. Fcap. 8vo, 5s. (Inland postage 3d.)

"The book is full of interest for a reader who can appreciate comic culture."—Scotsman.

A Pluralistic Universe: Hibbert

Lectures at Manchester College on the Present Situation in Philosophy. By WILLIAM JAMES, Professor of Philosophy at Harvard University. 8vo, 5s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
39, PATERNOSTER ROW, LONDON, E.C.

Swan Sonnenschein & Co., LTD.

SOME NEW AND FORTHCOMING BOOKS.

NEW VOLUME OF THE LIBRARY OF PHILOSOPHY. VALUATION:

ITS NATURE AND LAWS.

By Prof. URBAN. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

STUDIES IN ROMAN HISTORY.

Vol. II. By E. G. HARDY, M.A. D.Litt. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

HEGEL'S EDUCATIONAL THEORY AND PRACTICE.

By MILLICENT MACKENZIE, M.A., Professor of Education, University College, Cardiff. With an Introductory Note by Prof. T. S. MACKENZIE, Litt.D. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. net.

OPINIONS ON MEN, WOMEN, AND THINGS.

By the late HARRY QUILTER. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. Also an EDITION DE LUXE of 50 Copies on Art Paper, bound in vellum, 3l. 3s.

SONNENSCHN'S QUOTATION SERIES.

The two following are now issued in crown 8vo form at 3s. 6d. net.

DICTIONARY OF ITALIAN QUOTATIONS.

By P. H. DALBIAC and T. B. HARBOTTLE.

DICTIONARY OF GERMAN QUOTATIONS.

By LILIAN DALBIAC.

NEW EDITIONS OF THE CELL.

By Dr. O. HERTWIG. Edited by H. J. CAMPBELL, M.D. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

CRIME AND ITS CAUSES.

By Rev. W. D. MORRISON. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

INTRODUCTION TO THE STUDY OF ORGANIC CHEMISTRY.

By JOHN WADE, D.Sc.

This Work is now issued in Two Volumes:—

Vol. I. ALIPHATIC OR OPEN-CHAIN COMPOUNDS. 5s. net.

Vol. II. AROMATIC OR RING COMPOUNDS. 4s. 6d. net.

THE BROWNING CYCLOPÆDIA.

By Dr. ED. BERDOE. Sixth Edition, Revised. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d.

THE ARCANUM OF NATURE.

By HUDSON TUTTLE. With an Introduction by EMMET DENSMORE, M.D. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

NEW VOLUME OF THE NEW CLASSICAL LIBRARY. THE INSTITUTES OF GAIUS. (Extracts.)

The Digest. Title XLV. Translated by J. GRAHAM TRAPNELL, LL.B. B.A. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. net; leather, 4s. 6d. net.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS YEARBOOK, 1909.

NINETEENTH YEAR OF ISSUE. 3s. 6d. net.

THE SCHOOLMASTERS' YEARBOOK AND DIRECTORY, 1909.

SEVENTH ANNUAL ISSUE. 7s. 6d.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO., LTD.,
25, HIGH STREET, BLOOMSBURY, W.C.

SATURDAY, APRIL 17, 1909.

CONTENTS.

PAGE

BAGWELL ON IRELAND UNDER THE STUARTS AND DURING THE INTERREGNUM	457
GENTLEMEN ERRANT	458
A DICKENS DICTIONARY	458
FERRERO ON THE REPUBLIC OF AUGUSTUS	459
NEW NOVELS (The Three Brothers; Katherine the Arrogant; The Compact; Teresa; The Member for Easterby; Geoffrey Cheriton; Felix Stone; The Alternative; The First Stone; Purple and Homespun)	460-461
CLASSICAL BOOKS	461
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (Sixty Years in the Wilderness; Figures de Moines)	462-463
ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE; GEORGE SELWYN'S TASTE FOR EXECUTIONS; FRANK MARION CRAWFORD; THE HON. F. STRUTT	463-465
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	466
LITERARY GOSSIP	467
SCIENCE—COL. VERNER ON THE WILD BIRDS OF SPAIN; SOCIETIES; GOSSIP	467-470
FINE ARTS—AUBREY BEARDSLEY; ENGLISH HOUSES AND GARDENS; AN OLD YORK CHURCH; EARLY ENGLISH PORTRAITURE AT THE BURLINGTON CLUB; SOME CHURCHES OF SOUTH-EAST DEVON; SALE; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS	470-473
MUSIC—GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	473-474
DRAMA—HISTORY OF THE ENGLISH STAGE; GREAT ACTORS OF THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY; THE SCHOOL FOR SCANDAL; THE ARTFUL MISS DEARING; AS YOU LIKE IT; GOSSIP	474-476
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	476

LITERATURE

Ireland under the Stuarts and during the Interregnum. By Richard Bagwell.
2 vols. (Longmans & Co.)

WITHIN the limits Mr. Bagwell has assigned himself, this is a valuable and generally trustworthy handbook. The sixty years of history it covers saw the greatest calamity Ireland ever suffered, and the administrations of three of its ablest rulers—Chichester, Wentworth, and Henry Cromwell. The greater part of the period is unusually well “documented”—the first fifteen years by the Carew Papers and the State Papers in the Record Office; the last twenty by the Carte Papers at Oxford, and by the Cromwellian and Confederate Catholic official books and papers in the Public Record Office at Dublin—while St. John and Falkland have left us little or no record of their rule, and we learn little of Wentworth’s administration till we come to its closing years.

The accession of James I. found Ireland seething in turmoil, economical, political, and religious. Elizabeth in her last years had attempted to set up a token coinage in Ireland, exchangeable at a fixed rate, far above its intrinsic value, in certain English ports. The system had broken down, after denuding the country of its good coin, and causing considerable loss to the Government exchanges. The first care of Chichester was to substitute for this base coinage the standard Irish coin, always of lower value than the English standard; and English money was made current at the same time at the rate of 16 Irish pence for an English shilling. The import and sale of arms were stopped; all distinctions between English and Irish before the law were abolished by proclamation in 1605, and the sole authority of the King’s Courts enforced, while their dignity was enhanced. In religious matters an attempt was made to revert to the practice of the early years of Elizabeth, by ignoring the presence of secular priests, but proscribing Jesuits and regulars. Finally, great efforts were made to follow up the settled policy of the English Government, and encourage the conversion of tenures by tanistry into socage, even to the extent of enfranchising tenants holding by tanistry from a mesne lord. Much of this activity is unnoticed by Mr. Bagwell, though it was one of the causes of the flight of Tyrone, and the search for defective titles on one occasion led to the precipitate flight of the whole corporation of Drogheda on the approach of the Lord Deputy to hold an inquisition. Indeed, we may say that the want of a clear account of the dealings of the Government with the landowners is the great weakness of the book. The full measure of the resentment felt by them towards Wentworth cannot be judged unless one has in mind the proclamations and commission of James I. (1605–10), or those of Charles I. (1631–3), under which absolute titles had been obtained by them at great expense. Nor is any history of the Ulster Plantation complete without mention of the proclamation of September 7th, 1607, promising peaceable possession of their holdings to the tenants of Tyrone and Tyrconnell. To this Mr. Bagwell hardly refers, as he does not seem to have consulted the Patent Roll Calendars.

Under St. John the energies of Government seem to have been directed towards the encouragement of trade and internal regulations. An attempt was made to enforce registration of births, deaths, and marriages; the English licensing laws were adopted in a modified form; a Post Office was established, the wool trade extended, &c. Mr. Bagwell questions the statement that St. John disarmed Irish Protestants, but the two proclamations of 1619 entered on the Patent Rolls must have had that effect; and as for his Protestant zeal, one of his proclamations attained such celebrity that two French contemporary translations of it are extant. Falkland continued the task of pacific administration, but there is evidence of increased disturbance, cattle-stealing, &c.; while a jealous watch was kept over the efficiency of the troops and the import of arms and ammunition. The secular quarrel between the Lord Deputy and his Chancellor was connected with the command of the forces: unless a standing army was levied the Chancellor was in command of a much larger body than the Deputy, having under his orders all the sheriffs’ officers in each county. A restriction was put on Falkland’s powers by the royal proclamation of 1625 forbidding the hearing of private causes before the Deputy and Council. But his greatest administrative difficulty was the continual deficiency of the revenue. The sheriffs, who were men of little or no importance in their counties, were unable to enforce the payment of Crown rents, and the pay of the army was therefore met by assignments to their officers of overdue rents. These were collected by quartering the men on the debtors till they paid, and thus discipline was impossible, while the army and the people were alike dissatisfied.

The appointment of Wentworth revolutionized this system amongst others. The soldiers were recalled to duty, and discipline strictly enforced; while the Court of Exchequer made its coercive powers felt. The exemptions from customs claimed by the chief ports were annulled by proclamation, and the Lord Deputy renounced some of his claims the better to impose a similar course on other officials. He encouraged the linen trade, and enforced residence in the country on absentee landlords. He ordered ditches to be made round each property, and abolished the use of the Irish currency in public accounts. The history of his dealings with the lands of Connaught may be read in these volumes; but Mr. Bagwell has not brought out the significance of the Act of Council of July, 1637, which voided all the patents of James I. granted by any other tenure than knight’s service in capite, thus leaving nearly all the land held in socage at the mercy of the Crown. We can commend the history of Strafford’s later years and his fall as told by our author.

We have no intention of following Mr. Bagwell through his account of the long years of the Irish Rebellion, with its welter of contending armies, Scots, Parliamentary, Royalist, Confederate Catholic, and Ulster Irish, and its kaleidoscopic changes of leaders. It is admirably clear, and in its statements of fact as accurate as may be, in view of the author’s avoidance of the Dublin Record Office. Some few slight errors may be amended: thus the ports were opened again before Wandesford’s death (i. 312), and the Covenant was officially repudiated in Ireland as early as December 18th, 1643. As for the loyalty of the gentry of the Pale, it is interesting to notice that the Irish Parliament, meeting against the orders of the Lord Justices on November 16th, 1641, removed the royal emblems from the head of their printed declaration. In 1653, when the Rebellion was at an end, the country was a desolate waste. Besides those slain in the war, 40,000 able-bodied men had entered the service of France and Spain, leaving behind them their aged, their women, and children. The Commissioners of Parliament in despair called for a subscription from all persons, civil and military, for a year to aid them in dealing with the multitudes of vagrant poor. “Some feed on carrion and weeds; some starve on the highways; poor children deserted or exposed by their parents are fed on by ravenous wolves and beasts and birds of prey.” These words are taken from the official ‘Declaration Touching the Poor’ of May 12th, 1653. It needed three or four years of steady hunting, aided by handsome rewards, to reduce the numbers of wolves to insignificance. But matters soon took a turn for the better, and by the end of 1655 commerce was so far restored that all restrictions on the export of provisions were removed, and from that time to 1660 the material welfare of the country increased to such a point that Ireland was in the next reign regarded as a serious competitor to English trade.

It is one of the minor inconveniences of working from Calendars instead of original documents that errors in dates occur, especially during the first quarter of the year. By such an error two events are said on p. 129 of vol. i. to be simultaneous which are a year apart. A few misprints occur, mostly in figures: some are important, as on p. 218, which hides the significance of the traditional amount paid to Members of Parliament. Another date on p. 131 seems an error: the Patent Roll gives the date of prorogation as May 19th, 1614. On p. 147 two proclamations are made into one. Occasionally there are signs of the easy writing which makes hard reading, and we wish that Mr. Bagwell would in future put the exact date of the occurrences he is describing in the margin, as a check to discursiveness.

In conclusion, we should like to congratulate Mr. Bagwell on a fine piece of work. Whoever undertakes the history of Ireland enters on a thankless task. Every one wishes to find out and state the facts, no doubt; but unfortunately there are often diametrically opposite statements from contemporaries to select from, to take no account of the efforts of later generations. It is the province of the historian to weigh these statements impartially in the light of the other evidence open to him, and we are sure Mr. Bagwell will carry with him the judgment of most students of Irish history. We look forward with great interest to the promised volume which is to give us an account of the years from 1660 to 1688, and of the social conditions of Ireland under Stuart rule.

Gentlemen Errant. By Mrs. Henry Cust. (John Murray.)

THIS scholarly contribution to historical research is well designed and ably executed. Mrs. Henry Cust was happily inspired when she determined to resuscitate some of the minor chronicles of the fifteenth and sixteenth centuries, and her notes show that she has spared no pains on her task. She gives, in the result, a vivid presentment of an age of upheaval, when the nobles fought and jostled, and left their creditors to howl—when the Fuggers amassed their fortunes, and the peasants starved. As her pages are concerned with men of the lance and the cup, we get but few glimpses of the New Learning, though we breathe the atmosphere of witchcraft and enchantment which enveloped rich and poor alike, not greatly, it must be confessed, to their concern. Our only complaint is that Mrs. Cust seems to have wavered here and there between transcription and a running commentary, and as she has caught the style of her originals, it is sometimes rather difficult to tell what is theirs, and what her own. She brings out, on the other hand, the humorous side of events, and that without any tedious and obvious insistence on the difference between the century of Mauretianas and those when a journey from Calais to Dover was an adventure fraught with the perils of the unknown.

The interest attaching to the exploits of Mrs. Cust's first gentleman errant, Lev, Lord of Rozmital and brother-in-law of George of Podebrad, King of Bohemia, is mainly that of manners. The account of his "grand excursion throughout the world," which led him across Germany into England, through France, Spain, and Northern Italy, is based on the twin chronicles of Schaschek of Mezihortz and the Nuremberger Gabriel Tetzels, who accompanied Lev. The travellers encountered famous personages, such as Albert Achilles of Brandenburg; Edward IV. of England, "a passing comely upright man"; Louis XI. of France, with his long nose and small legs; that characteristic product of the Italian Renaissance, Galeazzo Maria of Milan; and the niggardly Emperor, Frederick III. of Austria. But the revelations of character do not amount to much. The charm of the chronicles consists, rather, in their open-eyed observation of life. They dwell upon the craft and treachery of the English, while duly sensible of the beauty of their womankind, and the ferocity of the Catalans. At Finisterre they beheld a rock that "strangely resembled 'a ship, with oars and rudders, and all the appurtenances of the sea.' And this, they learned, was the very vessel whence Christ and Our Lady had disembarked, when they came hither to found in her honour the Church 'that is known to this day by the name of the Stella Obscura.' So soon as the Blessed Pair had quitted the ship, it had turned to hardest stone."

Two warriors succeed: Wilwolt of Schaumburg, as eulogized by a chronicler whom Prof. Ulmann has identified with the younger Eyb, and Frederick, Palsgrave of the Rhine, as portrayed by his secretary Hubertus Thomas of Liège. Eyb's ecstasies are, perhaps, rather cloying; none the less he presents a grim picture of war as conducted by Charles the Bold and Albrecht of Saxony, under whom Wilwolt served as a trusted and faithful captain. Wilwolt displayed remarkable skill in the conquest of Friesland, despite the insubordination of his landsknechts; and when he fell dangerously ill, the Duke paid him the delicate attention of choosing his tomb:—

"And I cannot refrain from writing, that not all princes are as this one. For he had remembered the honour and high faithfulness of his chosen Captain, to reward him not only in life with much respect, but also after his death to add a burial whereby he should be held in everlasting remembrance. But one findeth not many such princes who bethink them of such things, but rather do they suffer their servants, knights, and soldiers to be stricken down, even as the hounds which in a boar-hunt are left lying miserable and unre-membered on the field."

The better-known Palsgrave Frederick also distinguished himself in battle against the Turks, but he appears rather, as viewed through his shrewd secretary's eyes, in the more engaging part of an impecunious amonist. The story of his various courtships, in the course of which he was egregiously befooled, now by the Emperor, now by the King of France, is true comedy, and Hubertus tells it with spirit. A servant of invaluable qualities to a penniless prince, the secretary conducted himself with much discretion when Henry VIII. challenged him to drain a goblet of wine or beer at a draught. He could also appreciate the love of letters which prevailed at the Court of Francis I.—"that true school," as Brantôme called it:—

"Apart from adulation, I must say that I, who have often stood before tables where kings and the Pope, cardinals and bishops, have had their meals, remember no such learned table—so to express myself—as this of the King of France. For at it there was ever reading, debate and discourse; and none was so learned that he learned not more therefrom, none so experienced that he did not gain further experience, none so valiant a warrior but he might here find a better beside him. Yea, if one may dip so low, should even a smith, a gardener, or a tiller of the ground chance to be of the company, he would—at least, if the King himself had discoursed of the matter—not without instruction have gone away."

We descend from high comedy to farce when we come to the wanderings of Heinrich XI. of Liegnitz—"An Epic of Debts," as Mrs. Cust calls it. Here the narrator is the gentleman of the bed-chamber Hans von Schweinichen, a racy writer with much of Pepys's talent for self-revelation, combined, it is only just to add, with a higher standard of morals than Pepys ever attained. The shifts to which this Mascarille had recourse to supply the needs of his deplorable lord were surprisingly ingenious, yet the wonder must be that the pair kept up the game so long as they did. The explanation seems to be that a prince was a privileged being; that his subjects regarded Heinrich XI. with that softhearted affection on which the Rawdon Crawleys of this world can always depend; and that the Emperor was slow to move. But the Duke, in fulfilment of his father's prophecy, was consigned to prison at last; and though he escaped, it was only to die of fever at Cracow, and to be laid away on a shelf in the little chapel of the Begging Friars, "where no doubt the good gentleman will remain to the Last Day." Mrs. Cust treats this mountebank's progress with a light touch, making it the enlivening afterpiece of a volume on which she is much to be congratulated.

A Dickens Dictionary. By Alex. J. Philip. (Routledge & Sons.)

IN defining the scope and purpose of this volume Mr. Philip is at pains to explain that it "does not pretend to be an index or concordance," and the statement is significant of the limitations of the work.

For a 'Dickens Dictionary,' if it is to justify its title, a judicious blending of the qualities both of index and concordance is essential. A compilation so named should aim at being useful not only to that unimaginable portion of the public which still needs to be told that Mr. Pickwick was the founder and chairman of the Pickwick Club, Mr. Pecksniff an architect and surveyor residing near Salisbury, or Mrs. Gamp a midwife, but also in a far greater degree to the immense body of average Dickensians who would welcome some aid in fixing the exact whereabouts of particular persons, passages, and sayings, without the loss of time involved in searching. Such deathless conceptions as "the Ankworks Package" the "Swarry," Chinese metaphysics, King Charles's head, and "The Toots's Joy"; the salient features of Mrs. Harris's philosophy, and the riper fancies of Mr. Swiveller should be assured of a place in a 'Dickens Dictionary.' Being presumably outside the sphere of the present work, they are not to be found here, though in the unnecessary minuteness of certain of Mr. Philip's entries—for example, 'Beings. Such,' or 'Husband. First,' and the multitude of obscure and unimportant references grouped under the headings 'Men,' 'Gentleman,' 'Fellow,' 'House,' 'Children,' 'Waiters,' and the like—the compiler shows himself to be not above intruding upon ground proper to both the above carefully disclaimed pretensions.

If the design of the book is faulty and defective, the flaws in its execution are also plentiful, and accuracy, the first qualification of a dictionary, is set at naught. Actual omissions, indeed, are not numerous, though in this respect the compiler is not entirely guiltless. Several Lord Chancellors are mentioned, but we find never a word of Mr. Solomon Pell's eminent patron, though the far more fleeting allusions of Cousin Feenix to "Jack Adams" and his brother Joe are duly chronicled, and even Mr. Wolf's friend the Viscount is deemed worthy of notice. Absent, too, are the "Highland outlaw" of Mr. Crummles's play; and the "young man, a guard upon a railway"; and Mrs. Harris's "own relation by her sister's marriage with a master sawyer," whose six-and-twenty godchildren might have entitled him to consideration.

From a host of inaccuracies—not all attributable to the long-suffering printer—we may single out the following. "Annie" is described as "Doctor Strong's wife's cousin," an inexcusable confusion with Mr. Jack Maldon, whose name is here consistently spelt Malden; the sallow-faced gentleman with the lumpy forehead who sat on a "supplementary chair" at the corner of Mr. Podsnap's table and ejaculated "Esquer" is apparently identified with the "captive" or "automaton" at the piano on the same occasion; General Fladdock and the passenger with the very little valise of pale leather in the after-cabin of the "Screw," being one and the same, are here referred to as distinct persons; Mr. Carker the Junior is cited as Mr. Carker Junior, and the Deputy Shepherd as "Stiggings"; Miss Podsnap's dancing mistress, Madame Sauteuse (a sufficiently unambiguous name), is made into Madame Santense; and Mr. John Smauker, the select footman of Bath, shares a similar fate as Smanker. The mysterious letters P. J. T., which afforded Mr. Grewgious matter for speculation, are here given as T. J. P. without the date, 1747, which Dickens specially notes twice. There is no reference to 'Edwin Drood' at all, a strange piece of carelessness; and we may add, despite the note to the contrary, that there is no reason for supposing the explanation of the letters to be other than that set forth in The Dickensian of February, 1906; "Staggs's Gardens" appear throughout as "Stagg's Gardens," with no allusion to the deceased capitalist Mr. Staggs, for whose delectation the "Gardens" were by some supposed to have been built; and Mr. Anthony Humm becomes president of the Ebenezer Temperance Association, instead of president of the Brick Lane Branch of the United Grand Junction body of that name. The 'Synopsis of the Various Works' which are prefixed to the Dictionary proper show like defects; Sir Mulberry Hawk, for example, is transformed, possibly by a confusion of ideas, into "Lord Hawk," and from the résumé of 'Martin Chuzzlewit' all mention of "Todgerses" is omitted. These summaries are further calculated to bewilder the uninitiated reader by constantly assuming a previous familiarity with the subjects touched on.

The prototypes of scenes and characters plentifully supplied might be a useful feature to the enthusiastic Dickensian if they were the result of a careful sifting of evidence; but the wildest of conjectures from a miscellaneous collection of press cuttings are included.

Mr. Philip's attempt is in itself praiseworthy, for an adequate book of reference on the subject is needed; but the present work is of little value, and many of its shortcomings might with reasonable care have been avoided.

The Greatness and Decline of Rome. By Guglielmo Ferrero. Translated by the Rev. H. J. Chaytor.—Vol. V. The Republic of Augustus. (Heinemann.)

WE have read this volume of Signor Ferrero's now popular and much-discussed book with mixed feelings. At the outset he disappointed us greatly, but we found that the first chapter (on the East) is the weakest in the volume, while the last, on the idea of the Roman Empire, is full of lofty and suggestive thoughts.

Let us consider the merits first. He holds with profound truth that the great secret of Augustus's success in making a Roman Empire which lasted with splendour for several centuries was his obstinate adherence to the republican, as opposed to the monarchical, idea. The historians who declare this republic to have been a mere sham, and Augustus really an autocrat, are right, perhaps, in view of practice, but wrong in theory. It was the old Respublica which Augustus and Tiberius maintained, which could not be destroyed or alienated, but was the property of every Roman alike. Augustus was only the princeps in it—president as he is called in these pages—and the State was the real thing. Signor Ferrero speaks of the indivisibility of this State, if he is rightly translated. He should rather have spoken of its impersonality. Augustus would not say with Louis XIV. L'État, c'est moi, but rather Moi, c'est l'État. And this is the reason of the constant show of republican forms, the apparent hypocrisy of republican elections. It was the outworn dress of the old Roman State, but it was still the emblem and evidence that the Republic towered above even its deified presidents.

As regards the deification of these heads of the State, we find here the acute remark that until Semite notions of the sole Deity, removed by a huge impassable gulf from humanity, became prevalent, the divine and the human were not very far apart. To deify a man then was to raise him in degree, not in kind, above his fellows, and therefore the moral indignation we see in many modern histories over the degradation of the Greeks and Romans in worshipping even living mortals as gods takes its flavour from our own half-Semitic religion, and adopts a false standpoint in judging the old Aryans of Europe.

The third excellent feature in the volume is the appreciation of Ovid and his position in Roman society. The aristocracy was then—as it now is in London, and we presume in other capitals—divided into a serious, hardworking, honourable majority, of whom we hear but little, and a fast, dissolute minority, whose crimes and scandals are the talk of the town, and warp the judgment of the vulgar against the whole class. The Roman Empire could never have lasted, the Flavian and Antonine emperors could never have arisen, had there not been a great residuum of antique virtue in Roman society.

But to build up Roman history upon such consistent lines is not the aim of Signor Ferrero. He rather seeks to give us a series of striking pictures drawn from special groups of evidence, and presently jumps spasmodically to a wholly different position, and paints the same society in wholly different colours. This is unavoidable in a thinker whose philosophy is the coarsest Hobbism, and who nevertheless comes to narrate facts inexplicable from the doctrine of selfishness as the sole motive of men's acts. Thus at the outset of this volume he bids us lay aside the notion that Rome ever intended to govern her subjects for their good:—

"Subject countries have never been so governed, either by Rome or any other empire; domination has never been of advantage to subject races except by accident; the dominant race has invariably attempted to secure the largest possible profit for itself with the least possible amount of risk and trouble."

And in another place:—

"Strange indeed would be the monarch who would furnish from his private purse the means of satisfying a sudden philanthropic whim on the part of the public. True monarchy acts very differently, and noiselessly squeezes the subjects to secure a colossal fortune for the reigning family."

Yet Augustus and Tiberius, who by merely sitting quiet could have seen the Republic go to ruin, and the whole State lapse into a despotism, strove and worried themselves all their lives to prevent this very result, as the author explains to us.

Human motives are by no means so simple and so base as he supposes. The Italian policy in Erythræa is said to have been of some such kind, and it resulted in Adowa; other empires have been sustained by the unselfish labour of a great aristocracy that might have lived an idle and useless life. Of no man is this more true than of Tiberius. Signor Ferrero tells us that his character has not been understood because his early career has been overlooked; and though we differ from him here, we approve thoroughly of his insistence that Tiberius's reign really begins in A.D. 4, and not A.D. 14. During the last ten years of the rule of Augustus the younger man was doing everything. But how was it consistent for a proud, gloomy man, of high ability, first to refuse all aid to Augustus, because his policy was thwarted, and to retire sulking to Rhodes, and then to submit to any humiliation in order to recover the favour of the Emperor? If, indeed, he imagined he was indispensable, and merely sulked in order to coerce Augustus, in which he failed, and then cried peccavi, we have rather a politician like the late Lord Randolph Churchill than the great, proud, serious man who appears to us elsewhere in these pages.

The general prosperity of the Empire is sketched with great eloquence in the last chapter of the volume. If all this happiness accrued by accident to the world from the action of a set of schemers to benefit themselves, then history becomes a novel study.

We will pass from Signor Ferrero's politics to his literary judgments. Concerning Ovid we have already expressed our full agreement with him. It is not so regarding Horace, whom he rates far too high. He speaks of the 'Carmen Seculare' as if it were superior to the 'Æneid,' and does not refrain from sundry disparaging remarks about the far greater poet. No doubt Horace was a consummate artist, and a very clever court poet; his cue is evidently taken from his high-placed friends; he is not often expressing the independent convictions of a great soul. But what can we expect from a man who gives the following literary judgment on the 'Æneid'? "The poem, as a whole, lacks the true poetic inspiration, because the conclusion of it is fore-ordained; the pious Æneas must triumph," &c. Now did any poet, great or small, ever write a poem without having its conclusion foreordained? Or was Virgil to drift along not knowing how the tale would turn out? Then, a few lines further on: "There is more human reality in the loves of Dido and Æneas, but their history is suddenly cut short by the necessities of the poem"! Does our critic imagine that the sudden and tragic end of the fourth book would have been more poetical had the poet added an amorous eclogue, and kept Æneas at Carthage to play the shepherd? It is by such criticisms that Signor Ferrero is enabled to declare Horace the greatest poet of his age. But then Virgil was, as has been remarked, a religious poet, and it is not difficult to feel the anti-religious spirit that breathes through this book—a spirit not uncommon in Italy. It is perhaps due to this spirit that part of the author's education seems to have been neglected. How else are we to account for the statement that Herod had become the king of an "obscure and uncivilized nation"? Since the Jews had for centuries been the bankers and business men of Egypt and Syria and Asia Minor, to call them obscure is silly enough; but to call them uncivilized, in the face of their literature, is only to be explained by ignorance of the Old Testament. We earnestly recommend Signor Ferrero to procure that volume: he will find at the very outset a passage quoted by a Greek critic contemporary with Augustus as a specimen of the sublime, and in the books of Kings historical pictures as lively as his own.

There are smaller flaws which are hardly worth mentioning. When he says that the Greek literature of Syria at this epoch consisted merely of prose work, he ignores the fact that the majority of the authors of the best epigrams in the 'Anthology' come from this province of Hellenism. It is not true that the republic had never dreamt of educating foreign princes at Rome. This was an old and well-known policy for the previous two centuries.

The Index is not good, e.g., Marcellus is left out. Some references in the notes show in the translator want of familiarity with the subject, e.g., "Hertzburg," "Pollio," "Ælius." But on the whole the work is well done, runs easily, and is throughout very good, if not convincing, reading.

NEW NOVELS.

The Three Brothers. By Eden Phillpotts. (Hutchinson & Co.)

MR. PHILLPOTTS remains faithful to Dartmoor, and manages to keep his material and his methods as fresh as ever. It is a considerable feat that this, his latest novel of the district, should be in some ways more interesting than any of its predecessors. It is in a more sober key than previous books, and perhaps is all the better for lacking the exuberance which is wont to characterize the author. The colours are greyer, not so vivid, and the result is restful for the reader perhaps weary of grappling with Titanic passions.

The three brothers are elderly men, one being over the allotted span of years, and they are of the yeoman class which Mr. Phillpotts loves to depict. The characters are drawn most carefully, and without exaggeration or weak lines—Vivian the robust, Nathan the amiable and untrustworthy, Humphrey the cynical and shrewd, the misunderstood. All the people in Shaugh one seems to know familiarly as Mr. Phillpotts proceeds, and certainly it is not his fault if we are not uplifted by the picturesque scenery of the moor. Mr. Phillpotts's luxuriance of style paints this for us with loving generosity. He is never tired of pointing out its beauties, of recording its features at all times and seasons. Dartmoor is his peculiar territory as clearly as Wessex was Mr. Hardy's; and it seems as if the fount of his inspiration were inexhaustible.

Katherine the Arrogant. By B. M. Croker. (Methuen & Co.)

THIS story has some of Mrs. Croker's usual qualities, and the defects of these. It is written with an appearance of ease and competency of touch tending to disarm criticism. Sometimes, however, one fancies that she writes too hurriedly. This story is just a little unequal in interest and power of expression, but the girl who is the principal person grows rather than diminishes in likeableness. Indeed, as the story proceeds the reader is anxious that her prospects should improve. They do, for both love and prosperity become her portion. There is a spirited old worldling—Lady Warbeck, aged seventy-five—as selfish as such beings are made. She is not wholly evil in her intentions, nor even in her performance, though fully armed for self-protection and the pursuit of pleasure at any cost rather than her own. Her saving grace—and it is only negative—is that she is not a hypocrite, though she is in some ways a deceiver. The meeting between the girl and the "nameless man" who turns out to be some one else's husband has pretty touches of sentiment and sadness, and eventually the path is made straight for them. The girl's touch of pride and brave endurance are not the least creditable and useful of her qualities in her difficult existence. One or two people who do nothing in particular might have been omitted.

The Compact. By Ridgwell Cullum. (Chapman & Hall.)

THE scene of this vigorous story is laid in South Africa in the days following the Majuba incident, and the desperate doings of the freebooters of Bechuanaland form the background to the romantic events of the tale. The two Englishmen who figure prominently in the book—Ferman Elwood, undemonstrative, determined, and loyal, and Guy Chalmer, fascinating, shallow, and unscrupulous—are vividly and carefully drawn; but the central incident of the story—the compact by which each undertakes to destroy his own life on an appointed day if he fails to secure the love of Elwood's wife—is conventional and unconvincing. So strong and dignified a man as Elwood, whose only desire is to promote his wife's happiness, though he has failed to win her affection, would scarcely be likely to make her the subject of a desperate bargain with so feeble and worthless a rogue as Chalmer. But in Mr. Cullum's hands the compact makes a dramatic and moving story, the main situations being handled so skilfully that their inherent weakness is almost concealed. The real merit of the book lies in its picturesqueness, its spaciousness, its atmosphere. The air of the veldt pervades it.

Teresa. By Edith Ayrton Zangwill. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

THE best part of Mrs. Zangwill's story consists of pictures of New York society and its fads and fancies. There is also much sound sense and good feeling in the book; but its characterization is rather amateurish and at times vapid. Its heroine is impossibly childish, and the general air is that of earnest sentimentalism. It is a pity that Mrs. Zangwill had not the courage to develop her thesis naturally instead of conventionally. She has succeeded in getting on paper some of the emancipated modern types of woman, but yet without sacrificing their femininity. The novel is by no means so good as 'The First Mrs. Mollivar,' with which the author began.

The Member for Easterby. By James Blyth. (John Long.)

WORLDLINGS with a taste for satire, and without the ill-temper which goes with cynicism, will find abundant entertainment in Mr. Blyth's latest novel. The character described by the title is a solicitor and moneylender who, while electioneering in a town by the North Sea, becomes infatuated with a woman who unites a roving sensuality with a keen business instinct. For her sake he interests himself in a will case with features pointing to murder and forgery; and at a critical period in his career he is ordered by the Divorce Court to pay heavy damages to her vilely complaisant husband. It is in dealing with this woman and her cronies that Mr. Blyth makes his best effects.

Geoffrey Cheriton. By John Barnett. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

THE author's main purpose appears to be to depict three English public-school boys of different types. The one who gives his name to the book has hints of what we might call autobiographical research. The study of Geoffrey Cheriton's boyhood and youth has interest, and in places reality. The character seems, however, a blend of intimate knowledge and supposition, and the two methods do not always fuse well. The same objection as to lack of artistry applies in smaller measure to all three. In writings about boyish life one allows for the presence of youth and high spirits; and slang and jocularity are to be expected. The jocular youth in this book is too jocular for our taste. It almost seems as though the author had stored up all the absurd utterances and actions he had heard and seen in real life, and set them in his book without having passed them through the melting-pot of his own imagination. The third boy, the boy of charm, who makes an irreparable stumble on the threshold of life, is more of a composite picture. Geoffrey Cheriton's deep and lasting devotion to the unfortunate sinner, his friend, is in a way fine. It might sometimes savour of over-sentiment were it not for the brusque, slangy expression of it. It is also touched, even in its nobility, with natural human faultiness and shortcomings. The girl who is loved by two of the friends is nice enough. For her nineteen years she is perhaps a little too sensible and didactic to please every reader.

Felix Stone. By Alice and Claude Askew. (Everett & Co.)

THE authors of this elaborate fabric of coincidences deserve credit for some novelty in method; for it is unusual for a man not intended for a conventional villain to disown his wife with brutal callousness in chap. ii. and commit bigamy by chap. v. A wealthy financier of forceful and strenuous character need not be expected to behave like persons who are merely respectable; but the extenuation of his indiscretions and the artistic control of their consequences demanded considerable ingenuity and a rapid succession of dramatic scenes. Mr. Stone's wives have an honourable lover, who is the most attractive male character in the story.

The Alternative. By A. F. Slade. (Hutchinson & Co.)

THIS narrative of the miserable complications which follow the loveless marriage of a refined woman to a coarse and selfish man is full of melancholy interest. Her unscrupulous mother is mainly responsible for the ill-assorted match, but the wife is goaded into a culpable deception for which her shrewd and determined husband exacts a terrible vengeance. His ultimate remorse is the only relief to the gloom produced by the sufferings of his high-minded rival, his wife, and his son. The author has a good sense of character.

The First Stone. By Mary Stuart Boyd. (Hodder & Stoughton.)

'THE FIRST STONE' presents the life of a dutiful wife who left her husband (a talented Scotch minister) because she could not approve of his continuance in the ministry until he had made open confession of a sensual fault. Her self-martyrdom is complete when, having fallen in love with the man whom she serves as lady-housekeeper, she returns to her hypocritical husband, who has become physically repugnant to her, in order to appease an appetite which threatens to lead him into further wrongdoing. The author's aim is not ironic, and there is enough spiritual light in the story to leave the reader compassionately reflective instead of bitter. The minister's wife is a memorable portrait. Some Scotch servants are capitally drawn, but the minister is unconvincing.

Purple and Homespun. By Austin Fryers. (Ward, Lock & Co.)

IN this story the Princess Alicia of Alsenburg, falling in love with an artist whom she meets by the merest chance in the Green Park, decides, after the third interview, to relinquish her royal state and share with him a humble suburban home. The usual obstacles have of course to be surmounted, and the narrative—aided by the now familiar apparatus of plotting Grand Dukes and Chancellors, to say nothing of a providential resemblance which enables its two principal ladies to be mistaken for one another at will—goes on its way mechanically to a mechanical conclusion. The characters lack life, and their adventures fail to excite us.

CLASSICAL BOOKS.

Hesiod: the Poems and Fragments. Edited by A. W. Mair. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—It is to be wished that all books had a table of contents. Mr. Mair's has not, so we may premise that his pages are made up mainly as follows: Introduction, on the Hesiodic Epos and Life of Hesiod, pp. v-xlvii; translation of 'Works and Days,' pp. 1-30; of 'Theogony,' 31-68; of 'Shield of Herakles,' 69-85; of Fragments, 86-101; Addenda, pp. 102-66, comprising discussions of the farmer's year in Hesiod, and agricultural implements. There is an index of proper names. It will thus be seen that this particular volume of the Oxford translations is composed of 100 pages of translation, and some 111 of illustrative matter; but no one will be inclined to object to these proportions.

Mr. Mair, who dislikes dogmatizing without sufficient evidence, brings together a good deal of material about the Hesiodic Epos and the traditional Hesiod, and some topics connected with the 'Works and Days.' His Introduction is an interesting piece of work. He is not inclined to endorse all Prof. Murray's ideas on his subject, and begins by pointing out the distinction that the Homeric poet aims at giving pleasure and is a teacher only indirectly, whereas the aim of the Hesiodic epic is not to please, but to instruct. Mr. Mair works out skilfully the parallel between the wisdom of the Hebrews as represented by Job, Proverbs, and Wisdom of Solomon, and Hesiod, finding the wisdom of both essentially practical, offering a reward in this world; they both are "parabolic" in nature, teaching by parable, proverb, fable, and allegory. In Hesiod this takes the curious form of the allusive or descriptive expression in place of the proper word: thus an old man with his staff becomes the "three-footed man"; the cuttlefish, "the boneless one"; the ant is called "the wise one"; the burglar, "the day-sleeper." As to the life of Hesiod, Mr. Mair simply states the internal and external evidence, and leaves his readers to use the materials as they will. We cannot here enter into the discussion of recent attempts at construction made by Mr. Lawton, Prof. Murray, and others. Mr. Mair professes that he has "no desire to imitate the easy dogmatism which moves so lightly in slippery places." As to the date and authenticity of the 'Works' and other poems he writes: "Here I merely imitate Athenaios and say that 'to me they appear ancient': cetera alii aut nos alio loco." The translation is in every way adequate.

Catulli Carmina. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by Charles Stuttaford. (Bell & Sons.)—The author of this edition of Catullus intends it for the use of "that class whose Latin has become 'rusty,' in consequence of the exigences of a professional or business occupation." He attempts—successfully, we think—to give such readers the sort of help they require. He has taken much that is interesting from the older commentators on Catullus, such as Guarinus and Muretus; and of course owes much to the "wonderful commentary of Prof. Robinson Ellis." The notes are good of their kind, making plain the drift of the various poems. The edition, however, is not one to put into the hands of schoolboys; its tone is distinctly suited to adults, and it has its faults. The author labours to be striking, and appears to us to love an epigram more than strict justice. Muretus "is always interesting, but lazy." The metrical translation "by the late Sir Richard Burton is as bad as any translation of any poet ever can be."

The Introduction on the times of Catullus is clever, but somewhat cynical. Party politics, we are told, "are, at bottom, nothing more than the clash of class interests." We read of Cæsar's "unrivalled talents for managing the rabble and for mob-oratory"; and again, "Cæsar went to the Gallic province, which he had chosen as his sphere, a dissolute spendthrift, destitute of character, moral or political." In regard to the question which our author says has exercised all historians—"whether Cæsar was a vulgar adventurer, or a saviour of society"—he himself seems to prefer the former alternative. With his smart tendency to iconoclasm, he leaves few of the great men of the time any character worth having, except the "brave, but dull-witted Pompey." The climax of this sort of cynicism is, perhaps, reached in the words "that part patriot, part tyrant, and wholly madman, Tiberius Gracchus." Lesbia is hit off as "this ox-eyed Jezebel." Our author states that "we think of Lesbia and Catullus as we think of Romeo and Juliet."

Mr. Stuttaford uses his tinsel effects very freely, and gives us too much of the erotic side of Catullus to be pleasant. His grammar is open to question.

Prof. Mackail has brought out a new edition of his excellent prose translation of The Æneid of Virgil (Macmillan). It first appeared in 1885, and was welcomed for its taste and poetical quality. The revision presented to us includes several lines and phrases previously omitted, and in other ways strikes us as an improvement on the first issue. The difficult line beginning "Sunt lacrimæ rerum" is now translated instead of paraphrased. "For love and pity's sake" seems overdoing "misera mihi" in iv. 420-21, but it is correct for "misera amanti" in 429, which is merely rendered "to his lover." In approaching nearer to natural speech in some of his renderings Prof. Mackail does well. We are struck by the frequent grace of the translation. The original Preface is altered and 'Notes' at the end no longer appear. Mr. F. A. Hirtzel's Oxford classical text of Virgil being now followed. We miss the commendation of Servius which pleased us in the first edition.

Post-Augustan Poetry from Seneca to Juvenal. By H. E. Butler. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—Mr. H. E. Butler, whom we already know through his excellent commentary on Propertius, has now attempted to provide an introduction to the poetical literature of the post-Augustan age from Seneca to Juvenal. For whom does he write? We should guess that he has chiefly in mind candidates for Honour Moderations at Oxford, although we would not be thought to suggest that the outlook of these pages is so limited as not to interest any student of poetical literature. His method is pleasing; he first steeps us in the general tendencies, social and literary, of the Silver Age; then makes us at home with the author in hand; and next, with a grateful amplitude of quotation and translation, detaches and illustrates his excellences and defects. To have so much done for us by a man of Mr. Butler's literary powers, with his clearness of discrimination and expression, is a substantial boon. We wish to make it plain that we consider Mr. Butler's book wholesomely helpful, because there is too often in evidence a kind of superior person who affects to regard books offering an appreciable amount of æsthetic comment on great writers as an impertinence. But, as a matter of fact, in the early stages of classical work a young student wants frequent guidance on the æsthetic road.

The first chapter handles the general question of the decline of post-Augustan poetry, and then we have a series of chapters dealing with Seneca, Persius, Lucan, Petronius, the minor poetry of the years 14-69 A.D. and 70-117, Valerius Flaccus, Statius, Silius Italicus, Martial, and Juvenal. We are glad to find that Mr. Butler resists the exaggerated statements too often made as to the principate being the fons et origo of the decline of post-Augustan poetry. Coming to close quarters, we find that for four emperors at least—Tiberius, Caligula, Claudius, and Nero—the direct influence of each princeps in turn was certainly not an important factor in the literary decline. Only certain literary forms were likely to be subject to any set-back—satire, recent history, and political oratory; and consequently there was a wide atmosphere in which aspirants might have grown. If literature is silent, it is due to the "exhaustion of genius following naturally on the brilliance of the Augustan period." The principate supervened upon a society in which the seeds of decay had already been planted deep, and beside this moral canker the influence of the principate, if not negligible, was comparatively small.

Mr. Butler proceeds to find the causes of literary decline in the general decay of the Roman character, the peculiar nature of Roman literature, and the vicious system of Roman education. The whole chapter forms an excellent introduction to what he has to say in the succeeding sketches: the broad outlines of the subject are presented in good perspective, and with a power of clear summing-up which is one of the attractive features of Mr. Butler's style. Thus it is well said of Persius:—

"He leaves a vivid impression of his personality, and reveals a genuine moral ardour and nobility of character that refuse to be clouded or hidden by his dark sayings and his perverse obscurity." Or again of Lucan:—

"The absurdities [of the 'Pharsalia'] slip from the memory, the dreariness of the narrative is forgotten, and the great passages of lofty rhetoric, with their pungent epigram and their high political enthusiasm, remain deeply engraved on the mind.... The 'Pharsalia' is dead, but Lucan lives."

Mr. Butler is not content to see his authors or their works from a few points of view: he walks deliberately round his subject, assigning praise to this point, blame to that, and strikes the balance with the nice discrimination of a judge. He has some telling phrases. For instance, Martial is aptly hit off as the "laureate of triviality," and it is well said that "it is the artist rather than the man that wakens our interest," or that "Martial was a child-lover before he was a man of letters." In this respect, for a moment, Martial is comparable to Byron, who both in 'Don Juan' and in 'Cain' often apostrophizes children in a manner which seems to betoken real feeling.

We have no space to follow Mr. Butler through his appreciations of Juvenal and the other poets, though we are inclined to put his study of Juvenal high in the series. His main conclusions are summed up characteristically:—

"It is precisely because he is no casuist, because he hits hard and unsparingly, and is translucently honest, and because his weapon is the most fervid and trenchant rhetoric, that Juvenal is the most quoted and one of the most popular of Latin poets."

Although the present book is not quite the same in scope and intention as North Pinder's 'Less-Known Latin Poets,' the two volumes suggest comparison. It is forty years exactly since Pinder's book was published by the Clarendon Press, and it may be supposed that Mr. Butler's work is intended to take its place. The author does not mention North Pinder among his authorities, but there are several signs that the work has been consulted, as also has, we should conjecture, M. Nisard's 'Études,' although no obligation to this work is stated in the Preface. For the rest, the best modern authorities have been used, though not in such a way as to check the natural flow of the author's own feelings and opinions. We have enjoyed the perusal of Mr. Butler's pages, perhaps the more because in his critical estimates he allows generosity gently to strike the balance, and is determined to dig out what precious ore there may be in a confessedly second-rate mine

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MESSRS. SMITH, ELDER & Co. publish Sixty Years in the Wilderness, by Mr. H. W. Lucy, with an excellent frontispiece from a Sargent portrait. Several of the chapters have appeared in magazine form, but there is much new matter, and the frank and simple account of the author's early struggles has not received so much notice as it deserves. We are inclined to think that one of the grounds given by Mr. Lucy for the suggestion that his father's inventions were of a hopeless kind goes only to prove that that gentleman was, like many unsuccessful inventors, in advance of his times. It seems that Mr. Lucy senior was struck with the "idea" of preserving "flowers beautiful for ever." They died, and "my father locked himself in his room and invented something else." The preservation of flowers presents difficulties which have not been mastered, but a great trade has been set up in France since Mr. Lucy's day in the preservation of natural leaves, and yields results which are now at last being imitated here.

Biographies, and especially autobiographies, as a rule avoid descriptions of personal appearance in the earliest years of life. Mr. Lucy faces every difficulty, and is not ashamed of the touching picture presented by him when sent to school. His appearance

"was much resented by the older boys who had won their way there through all the grades. What with my lace-frilled calico pantalettes, and my unusual surname, they affected to believe I was a girl, an imputation that sorely wounded me."

In later life certain characteristics have been observed in our author which go to show that, although masculine and even belligerent in character, he has another side, justifying in some degree the view taken by the boys. It is rumoured that Mr. Balfour was once interrupted in a difficult passage of a somewhat abstract speech made by him as leader of the House of Commons by a crash in "The Gallery." The cause is discernible from these pages:—

"I always comforted myself through long debates and all-night sittings with a handful of flowers, set in a little glass on my desk, which was generally upset in the course of the evening by some unsympathetic reporter borrowing my box during temporary absence."

Like many distinguished men, Mr. Lucy has suffered through life from his bad handwriting. For many years he served under Sir J. Robinson on the staff of The Daily News; and the manager once rebuked him for an illegibility which unduly prolonged the labour of compositors and "nearly led to that unpardonable sin, 'losing the post.'" Mr. Lucy "pasted a sheet of paper over Robinson's note, cutting a hole that disclosed these three words, and took it down with me to the office. Having humbly apologised for mine own weakness, and promising effort at amendment, I produced the shrouded note, and asked Robinson what the three words were. He glared at them through his glasses, turned them upside down, and finally admitted he could not tell.....He chuckled, added the story to his dinner list, embellishing it as time sped."

Recent difficulties about the date of birth of old-age pensioners are illustrated by the fact that our author tells us that he does not know in what year he was born. Perhaps he, like Irish widows, has not verified the alleged non-existence of an official record. We heartily commend this pleasant book.

L'ABBÉ DIMNET, a distinguished monk, a member of the popular House of the French Parliament, in which he holds his own with the best debaters, is known by previous essays to be an elegant writer of French. A former book from his pen, favourably reviewed by us, was subsequently put in the Index. Nevertheless, the position of the author is far too orthodox to invite comparison between him and a newly elected monkish member of the Italian Parliament, who, excommunicated for being elected against the order of the Holy See, has joined the Socialists, and is now to be expelled from their ranks for refusing to give up ecclesiastical costume. The Abbé Dimnet's Figures de Moines (Paris, Perrin & Cie.) contains several chapters likely to have a special interest for English readers. Among these are the first, which deals with the English Benedictines of Douai, and one on the monks of Shakespeare. M. Ernest Dimnet was brought up in the neighbourhood of Douai, and took as a boy a romantic interest in the various English and Irish religious establishments connected with the town and neighbourhood. A student of English, he received as a school prize a translation of Newman's 'Apologia,' for which the Cardinal had written a preface addressed to Frenchmen in explanation of the Constitution of Oxford and criticism of the Anglican position. Although the book had no popularity in France, and attracted the directors of religious institutions partly because it came from a stock sold off at a reduced price, while the Abbé Dimnet modestly asserts that he received it only because he was "pretty good at fives," he goes on thus:—

"Il serait inutile d'essayer de décrire l'impression que cette merveilleuse histoire d'âme fit sur moi. Oxford est vivant dans l'Apologia avec sa poésie propre qui ne ressemble à aucune autre. Quant au progrès religieux de Newman, il s'accompagnait d'une vie intérieure noble et mâle, d'un goût de vérité et de beauté, très humain et très élevé, que je n'avais jamais vus rassemblés dans une vie de saint. Le pauvre livre méprisé m'enchantait par ce qu'il m'apprenait, par ce qu'il me faisait deviner et par les problèmes que mon esprit se posait à lui-même chaque fois que je l'ouvrais. La pensée anglaise m'attira dès lors par son originalité et sa fraîcheur et je devins curieux de tout ce qui me venait de ce côté. Je ne me rappelle pas comment je connus l'existence du monastère anglais de Douai.... Douai eut cinq établissements britanniques: un couvent franciscain, un monastère bénédictin, le Collège anglais ou des Grands Anglais, comme on l'appelle encore, celui des Ecossais et un autre pour les Irlandais, dont il ne reste rien. La maison des franciscains, comme leur église, n'avait pas subi le moindre changement."

Dimnet soon lost his heart to an English fellow-student:—

"Il avait des opinions faites sur une foule de points où les Français n'en ont jamais, parce qu'ils passent brusquement du rêve de l'enfance à l'indifférence ou au scepticisme de leurs vingt ans. Il jugeait les hommes aussi, promptement et franchement, et avait le mépris facile. Il était doux, sociable et obligeant, mais dans les limites que j'ai souvent eu occasion depuis de voir que les Anglais ne franchissent guère. Tenace et persévérant, il avait les découragements subits et profonds, les impuissances devant des obstacles qu'un Français voit à peine, si fréquents chez l'Anglais isolé et qui l'empêcheraient à jamais de faire aucun progrès dans la vie et sur le globe, si quelques instincts dominateurs ne possédaient toute la race et n'entraînaient les faiblesses des individus comme un torrent."

At the Benedictine college there was a chapel built by Pugin:—

"Ruskin dit, quelque part, de je ne sais quelle église ogivale moderne, que ceux qui l'ont faite n'y croyaient pas. Pugin avait cru de tout son cœur à sa chapelle."

The second essay is on La Trappe, on a visit to which M. Dimnet ate the famous cheese "Port Salut" at its birthplace; but he does not mention the fact that it is to the cheese that La Trappe owes the continuance of its existence—"Reconnu d'intérêt public. Décret, Ministère de l'Agriculture."

The essay on Shakespeare's monks is full of literary interest, but the view taken of the English Reformation will not please either Protestants or Anglican Catholics. All who are merely Shakespeareans will be delighted by our author. It is hardly true that under Elizabeth "England.... had no colonies"; but perhaps some day the Abbé Dimnet will make researches into the history of Virginia, likely, we think, to attract his historic mind and versatile pen. His praise of Shakespeare is worth having: "Son langage, en parlant des choses de la religion, est d'une infaillible exactitude"; although the Abbé admits that "il est bien probable que Shakespeare vécut et mourut dans une complète indifférence religieuse." The friar of 'Romeo and Juliet' is so profound a portrait that "all the admirable Churchmen who have followed one another in hundreds on the stages of all the countries have owed some trait to him." A contrast between the official restorer of the philosophy of religion in France, Chateaubriand, and our English playwright, "dont les convictions les plus fortes, furent probablement des doutes," shows the latter to have had "un sens plus profond de la poésie de la religion."

ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE.

SINCE the death of Tennyson the world of letters has suffered no loss so heavy as that of the one great poet who was left to us from Victorian days, and with whom were associated so many memories and traditions of all that was noblest and greatest in literature and art during the past half-century. The Monday before Mr. Swinburne died was his seventy-second birthday. He was then suffering from influenza; pneumonia supervened on Tuesday; and on Saturday morning the end came.

We need not go through the details of a career which has long been part of the familiar history of English letters. For many years the fame of Mr. Swinburne has been so securely fixed by the homage of mankind that it can hardly be enhanced by the accolade of death. He was a classic for more than half his life. It is forty-four years since 'Atalanta in Calydon' placed him in the first rank of lyrical poets. It remains his masterpiece. In it his unique genius culminated. Nothing he has written, and nothing any other poet has written, surpasses the lyrical splendour of its choruses, which are worthy to stand beside the finest choruses of Sophocles. They possess the universal quality of the greatest poetry. They are flawless masterpieces which rival the Greek poet's noblest reflections on the destiny of man. Their artistic symmetry sufficed to establish the young poet's reputation as a master of the pure lyric. It is remarkable that he never surpassed, though he often equalled, the technique which he attained in his youth. This early maturity is partly explained by the fact that he burnt many of his juvenile verses. Probably there has never been a poet so prodigally precocious. From the first stirrings of inspiration he was a poet's poet. His genius was literary in its beginnings, and it remained literary to the end. He was always an artist, always a virtuoso, fascinated by the instrument, enchanted by the vehicle. To him life was only the fuel of imagination, the tinder of song. He was interested solely and wholly in form, and the theme presented itself to him only as an agent of expression. The poetic impulse in his soul was overwhelmingly lyrical; but his lyricism was impersonal, the lyricism of the sovereign artist whose governing passion was the rapture of utterance rather than the gathering of experience. Throughout his artistic adventures Swinburne was an emotional interpreter rather than a victim of existence, a superb impressionist rather than a martyr of life. He had no time to live. For him life was song. No other lyrical poet pours so little of his own personal anguish and ecstasy into his songs. If we are rightly to understand the lyrical genius of Swinburne, we must sharply distinguish it from the lyrical genius of Burns, in whom the cry of the heart is the very essence. The cry in Swinburne is always the cry of another man's passion, never the cry of his own personal ache or agony. In his poetry we feel the riotous pulse of human vitality, the throb of mortal destiny, the beat of mundane doom; but we miss the homely pang of sorrow endured and the quiet ecstasy of joy experienced. In the most impersonal of our lyric poets, Shelley, there is more intimate pathos and tenderness than in Swinburne. The driving force in the genius of Swinburne was the troubadour instinct of musical expression. Of all great poets he was nearest to the great musical composers, for in him music was an overmastering passion, and he took the whole pageantry of life and turned it into oratorios and symphonies, fugues and sonatas and songs. The vast space through which his rhythmical energy sweeps proves that the dominant fire in him was a lust for the spontaneous expression of sensation by means of swiftly improvised sound. He loved the long undulating line and the sonorous thunder of the ode; he delighted in heavy movements of majestic harmony; he gloried in the deploying of massed stanzas.

He may, without straining the analogy, be called the Wagner of poetry, for he forced our harsh and obstinate vocables to express emotions and moods and sensations which hitherto had been deemed to be beyond the powers of poetry. The language in which he wrote is as poor in melody as it is rich in colour. As a musical instrument it is immeasurably inferior to Greek, to Latin, to Italian, and even to French. English is a prose language, and to this fact is due the unparalleled dignity and sublimity of the Bible and the Book of Common Prayer. In no language is there prose so majestic as ours. But the very qualities which make English prose unsurpassed are the qualities which drive the English poet into despair. English prose is based upon accentual stress, because the language is governed by accent, and not by quantity. The majesty of Biblical prose depends entirely on accent, for it is the accentual stress which gives life to its miraculous rhythm, a rhythm which draws all its gait from the irregularity of the accents. But the accentual irregularity that is the soul of prose rhythm is fatal to poetic rhythm, which is the opposite of prose rhythm, since prose rhythm must be unexpected, whereas poetic rhythm must always be foreseen.

The genius of Swinburne set itself to reconcile the temper of the English language with the demands of poetry. Like Milton, he was saturated with the spirit of Greek poetry and with the prose rhythms of the Bible. As in the case of Milton, the crossing of the classical and the Biblical influences produced a poetic style which combines the sublimity of prose with the music of poetry. The note of Milton is epic sublimity. The note of Swinburne is lyrical sublimity. Therefore it is with Milton, rather than with Shelley, that Swinburne ought to be ranked. No other poet is so consistent and consummate a master of the grand style. He never stoops to the trivial.

Milton was fortunate in his choice of epic subjects—more fortunate than Swinburne, who ransacked life and literature for a theme worthy of his transcendent lyrical genius. The later poet was born between two worlds—a world half dead, and a world that was waiting to be born. He spent his energy on phases of human passion rather than upon a central fire of human faith. It was his fate to live in an age when the soul of man was adrift on a sea of change, when revolt and rebellion were the only gospels, when authority was repudiated, when the supreme enthusiasm was a negation. He sang the songs of disillusion with clanging scorn and ringing anger. He assailed dying conventions with an unbridled fury of imagery and a measureless wrath of rhetoric. All the dazzling vitality of revolt against insincere compromises and capitulations flamed in his denunciations of priests and diatribes against kings. In the exuberant riot of his vigorous youth he sometimes hymned impossible perversities and esoteric morbidities. He gloried in the human beast as fiercely as in the human god. For him art knew no limits, and poetry no prohibitions. Whatever was human was to him a legitimate theme. But it was the artist, and not the man, that revelled in every aspect of life. Never has a great poet more fearlessly asserted the right of poetry to express the whole ferment of being and the whole fever of existence. If his audacity terrified the timorous, at least it must be admitted that he was a daring liberator and enlarger of the province of poetry in an age when it had almost ceased to assert the full rights of its sovereignty. His excesses were the inevitable defects of a rebellious genius. He himself laughingly called them péchés de jeunesse.

Milton hewed his epic grandeur out of the quarry of religion. Swinburne hewed his lyric grandeur out of the quarry of democracy. Faith and liberty are both abstractions; but Milton had the advantage over the later poet, owing to the existence of the Christian mythology. Swinburne had to make his music out of a religion which had no mythology, but his lyrical passion was equal to the strain, and he made gods for himself out of Mazzini and Victor Hugo, Garibaldi and Cavour, Aurelio Saffi and Giordano Bruno. Already the names he crowned with song are becoming as dim as the names of the saints and devils in Christian legends; but they have served their turn, and the Swinburnian mythology, like the Miltonic, will carry them down the ages on the tide of style. Such poems as 'The Eve of Revolution,' 'Tiresias,' 'The Halt before Rome,' the 'Song in Time of Order,' the 'Song of Italy,' and many another incendiary ode and sonnet, will be read when the French Revolution is a wraith of history and United Italy a ghost of politics. After all, the irresistible charm of Swinburne is the metrical splendour, and not the message. It is the rush and swoop, the beauty and fire, the swiftness and fury, the sheer passion and power of his passionate flight that compel us to admire and to marvel.

English poetry was rich before Swinburne remoulded and reshaped it, but he left it richer a thousandfold. Before his advent its store of lyrical measures was small. He gave it a variety unequalled in any other language, ancient or modern. No poet has ever rivalled him as a "many-mouthed inventor of harmonies." He made nearly every form he handled a new thing. In 'Tristram of Lyonesse' he transformed the heroic couplet as miraculously as Milton transformed the blank verse of Shakespeare. He freed it from the arid sententiousness of Dryden and the epigrammatic frigidity of Pope. He delivered it from the damnable monotony of balanced antithesis and the detestable boredom of iambic bars. He turned its prosaic stiffness into a lyrical sweetness, flexibly spontaneous and passionately fluent. He lengthened the anapaestic line, and transfigured dancing measures out of doggerel into the divine music of 'The Hymn to Proserpine' and 'Hesperia.' He even naturalized the hexameter, achieving a feat which had baffled that supreme metrical genius Coleridge. When Coleridge wrote,

Fill the pause of my harp, or sustain it with musical murmurs,
Into my being thou murrest joy, and tenderest sadness, the ear was disappointed at the end of the line, and the thing sounded like an exercise. Swinburne satisfied the ear by reinforcing the hexameter with rhyme:—

Where beyond the extreme sea-wall, and between the remote sea-gates,
Waste water washes, and tall ships founder, and deep death waits.

It is obvious that if the rhyme stress did not fall on "gates," the accentual stress would remain on "sea," and the ear would be unsatisfied. Swinburne used rhyme to overcome the accentual stress of the language. He also strengthened the caesural pause with rhyme. In Coleridge's verse the pause on "harp" and "mur" is too feeble to satisfy the ear. Swinburne uses the rhyme in "wall" and "tall" to emphasize the caesural pause. It rings like the hammer on the anvil, and satisfies the demands of the ear. Indeed, it may be said that Swinburne was the first English poet to develop the poetic resources of rhyme stress as a counterweight for accentual stress. His feats in rhyme are prodigious. Most remarkable of all are his innovations in the use of double rhymes. He rescued them from the comic muse. Before him double rhymes were the dismay and despair of our poets, but he made them flexible and natural, spontaneous and sincere. 'Dolores,' we believe, was a deliberate experiment in double rhymes, written stanza after stanza in the glee of conscious virtuosity until the language refused to yield more.

Another of Swinburne's feats of metrical invention was the discovery that alliteration was the true basis of English lyrical poetry. In our language there is a plethora of monosyllabic and disyllabic words. The supply of anapaests and dactyls is limited, and the poet is forced into a very liberal use of adverbs, adjectives, and conjunctions. The result is monotony and diffuseness and metrical debility such as we find in the verse of Longfellow and Mr. Kipling. Swinburne discovered that alliteration put life into the movement of the verse and lifted it over the clogging consonants. He combined daring alliteration with the most subtle use of liquids and labials and elisions. In this way he achieved a volume and breadth of verbal music which hitherto had seemed impossible. There is no doubt that he often did so at the expense of that illusion of sincerity which is the supreme aim of the poet. He sacrificed metrical sincerity for the sake of metrical music, but he boldly relied upon the metrical energy of his verse to counteract the impression of insincerity produced by the artifice of alliteration. There is no doubt that in his first poems the metrical energy utterly overwhelms the alliterative artifice. The imaginative ardour behind the music breaks up the monotonous beat of the alliteration just as the wind breaks up the monotonous beat of the waves. Moreover, the poet invented an infinite variety of rhythmical modulations which play a great part in the masking of the metrical artifice. Just as the rhythmical modulations build up the varied music of Miltonic blank verse, so the rhythmical modulations build up the varied music of Swinburnian lyrical verse. Take, for example, this passage in 'Hesperia':—

Our wild steeds press on the night, strain hard through pleasure and peril,
Labour and listen and pant not or pause for the peril that nears;
And the sound of them trampling the way cleaves night as an arrow asunder,
And slow by the sand-hill and swift by the down with its glimpses of grass,
Sudden and steady the music, as eight hoofs trample and thunder,
Rings in the ear of the low blind winds of the night as we pass.

Here the verse reproduces with astounding realism the speed and clamour of the ride, and we hear and see the horses in the rise and fall of the rhythm. Similar passages abound in Swinburne's poetry—passages which actually challenge the most modern exponents of illustrative music to rival their magical feats of representative art.

It is, then, as a master of verbal music that Swinburne is without a peer in any language. The miracle of his art is intensified by the fact that English is of all languages the least tractable and tuneful. He is the poet of difficulty overcome. It is not surprising that so great a virtuoso often erred through excess of virtuosity, and that the manner of the master culminated in mannerism. But this is the inevitable law of poetry, for even Shakespeare and Milton were not exempt from it, not to mention another consummate artist, Tennyson, whose later manner also hardened into mannerism. We must judge a great poet by his best, and assuredly Swinburne at his best is unsurpassed, and probably unsurpassable.

Surveying his work as a whole, we may say that his prose and verse together are greater in bulk than the prose and verse of any leading English writer, and fully as great in cumulative effect and influence. His formative value is manifest in contemporary poetry, and it is sure to be permanent. He has left his seal and signet on our lyrical poetry for all time. Since Milton we have not had a poet so learned and scholarly, and so richly steeped in classical traditions. His heroic sincerity and veracity, and splendid indifference to popular clamour and criticism, are not less notable than his fiery nobility of soul, which expressed itself in sympathy with high human ideals and in prodigal generosity of praise for the work of other artists, from the lesser Elizabethans to his own contemporaries, from William Blake to Emily Brontë, from Charles Lamb to Charles Reade, from George Withers to Walt Whitman, from George Chapman to Charles Dickens, from Shakespeare to Hugo. Never has a great poet gloried so magnanimously in "the noble pleasure of praise." The range of his artistic sympathy was almost illimitable, and the width of his knowledge was only equalled by the delicate sureness of his insight. All his life he revelled in "the bitter and severe delight" of letters, and his "laborious days" were passionately devoted to the service of literature in its highest forms. To the last he preserved his freshness and keenness of interest, and he never lost the childlike temper which is the mark of all great men. More than most poets of the first order, he was fortunate in his friendships, and not least among the gifts showered upon him by the gods was the companionship and comradeship of thirty years with his housemate at the Pines, Mr. Theodore Watts-Dunton, to whom the world of letters offers its sympathy in his irreparable loss. It is his consolation and ours that

Bending us-ward with memorial urns
The most high Muses that fulfil all ages
Weep, and our God's heart yearns.

JAMES DOUGLAS.

GEORGE SELWYN'S TASTE FOR EXECUTIONS.

Dunheved, Villa Road, S.W., April 10, 1909.

HAVING long shared the doubt expressed in your review of Mr. S. Parnell Kerr's 'George Selwyn and the Wits,' as to the accuracy of the denial by some of his friends of his traditional taste for witnessing executions, I drew attention in Notes and Queries (9 S. iii. 245), exactly ten years ago, to the fact that Selwyn's own reference to the allegation "scarcely sounded a convincing refutation of the alleged slander." This was in a letter to Lord Carlisle of February, 1777; but, although he may have resented its frequent repetition, it had then been common talk among his intimates for a quarter of a century. Horace Walpole, for instance, writing to George Montagu from Strawberry Hill on June 6th, 1752, and describing a burglary at his town house, incidentally remarked: "I dispatched a courier to White's for George Selwyn, who, you know, loves nothing upon earth so well as a criminal, except the execution of him." Is it possible to believe that this deep-seated and long-expressed belief had no foundation in fact?

ALFRED F. ROBBINS.

FRANK MARION CRAWFORD.

4, Leonard Place, High Street, Kensington, W.,
April 10, 1909.

ANOTHER link with my long years in Italy is broken by the death of my old friend Crawford yesterday at Sant' Agnello di Sorrento.

My acquaintance with him began in 1877 in this wise. We found ourselves seated in the compartment of the celebrated Caffè Greco in Via Condotti, Rome, yclept the "omnibus"—in that corner where Thackeray, Gibson the sculptor, and hundreds of other noted English and American writers and artists have assembled for full a century past. Presently Crawford elongated his brawny limbs, and addressed me thus: "You are Mercer, and I am Crawford; it is not of much use waiting for an introduction; will you play me a game of chess?" I did. Crawford was utterly unknown to fame then, and only scribbled a little for the London papers. About that time he was corresponding for The Daily Telegraph, and I acting as deputy correspondent, in place of T. Adolphus Trollope (then on a holiday tour), for The Standard.

Whilst I was spending an afternoon in his rooms in the Via Sebastianello his valet entered, and found us absorbed in our game of chess; he carried in his hand the Italian version of King Victor Emmanuel's speech at the opening of Parliament, but could not obtain Crawford's attention. Readers of The Daily Telegraph read next day the speech as I translated it on that occasion in the intervals of our game.

I think it was a little later when Crawford thought proper to rusticate a while, and asked me to supply him with an introductory letter to Mr. Murphy, a Dano-Irish painter living at Olevano, near Subiaco. The German colony at Rome had just bought a small boschetto near there, containing curiously gnarled trees and branches, to save them from the axe of the woodcutters and vandals.

In 1879 we met again in Siena, and having roused me early, he would choose occasionally to wander idly around the Lizza Gardens to view the extensive panorama from the ramparts. Mindful of his Heidelberg student days, he, in my company, would quench his Teutonic thirst under the acacia trees surrounding the Birreria outside the theatre, and the German brewer would cheerfully hasten to bring his metal-crowned tankards foaming with very unintoxicating beer.

Next (in the same year, I suppose) we met at the Oriental Congress and Exhibition at Florence for the last time, as there he saw Mr. Cama, the Parsee merchant, who procured him an appointment at the Calcutta University after stipulating for his acquisition of Sanskrit. This, with his wonderful linguistic faculty, he soon mastered. How, after three or four years, he returned to Italy by way of New York, and on dining with his uncle (Sam Ward) was bitten by the tarantula of novel-writing, starting with the Anglo-Indian tale of 'Mr. Isaacs,' is a matter known to everybody now.

Ten years passed before he was established for life in his villa at Sant' Agnello above Sorrento, and won his reputation as a novelist. Truth to tell, he surpassed all the expectations of those who had known him from boyhood intimately, except always his own mother.

It was in 1887 that I heard he had undertaken an uncongenial labour for Messrs. Macmillan & Co., having promised them a life of Sir John Hawkwood for one of their series of eminent men. Knowing that Mr. Temple Leader, in conjunction with an Italian professor, Marcotti, was then preparing a most elaborate biography of this same illustrious Anglo-Florentine "Free Lance," I warned Crawford of the dangerous rivalry. He consulted me about the best method to escape the collision of books, and my answer may be found in a letter on Sir John Hawkwood contained in The Athenæum of May 11th, 1889. Crawford accepted the position, and retired from the field, whilst I deprived the public of a semi-romantic story from his pen, and received, mirabile dictu, thanks from both sides. I possess two long letters on the subject from Crawford, dated April 18th and 25th, 1889; but I fear I cannot trespass further on your limits of space to transcribe them.

One of Crawford's sisters, Mrs. Hugh Fraser, is well known as a writer of books of travel and novels. WILLIAM MERCER.

WE may add to Mr. Mercer's interesting recollections a few details concerning the author's life and work. Born in Italy of American parents, Marion Crawford went to school in the United States, and later to Trinity College, Cambridge, Heidelberg, and Harvard. In 1873 he took to journalism. His first novel, 'Mr. Isaacs,' at once won him success, and, though somewhat sketchy in its working-out, will be preferred by many to his numerous Italian stories. There was some ground for Oscar Wilde's suggestion that he had immolated himself on the altar of local colour, as in 'Sant' Ilario' and 'Saracinesca'; and the growing habit of moral reflection, though it probably made for popular success, as in the case of H. S. Merriman's work, did not make for artistry. A master of effective plot, as in 'Paul Patoff,' Mr. Crawford wrote with directness and great fluency; but he lacked the distinction and the powers of analysis, of creating character, which make work permanent. In love-stories such as 'Marzio's Crucifix' and 'A Cigarette-Maker's Romance' he was, perhaps, at his best. The latter, indeed, is instinct with genuine pathos, and the most effective of all his books. His last trilogy of novels, 'Soprano,' 'The Prima-donna,' and 'The Diva's Ruby,' shows a distinct advance in ability. His historical works—'Ave Roma Immortalis: Studies from the Chronicles of Rome,' 'Gleanings from Venetian History,' and 'Rulers of the South: Sicily, Calabria, Malta'—were alive with interest and pertinent criticism, but hardly satisfactory in detail to scholars.

THE HON. F. STRUTT.

WE regret to announce the death of the Hon. Frederick Strutt, the youngest son of the late Lord Belper, and brother of the present peer. He died suddenly on Easter Monday at Trent Railway Station, apparently through hurrying to catch a train.

Mr. Strutt, who was born in 1843, led a most strenuous and useful life, notwithstanding the drawbacks of delicate health. In 1886 he sustained severe injuries to the head in an accident, and remained unconscious for nearly five months. On his recovery, which is always considered one of the most remarkable in the annals of modern surgery, he, although continuing to suffer from considerable deafness and partial loss of eyesight, resumed to a great extent his varied labours, taking a great interest in politics, education, and philanthropy. There are few public men who will be more generally missed in Derbyshire and the Midlands.

Mr. Strutt, who was one of the oldest members of the Athenæum Club, was a widely read and well-travelled man, and possessed of considerable literary gifts. He was a member of various learned and literary societies, and President of the Derbyshire Archaeological and Natural History Society at the time of his death. In the well-being of that Society he took the greatest possible interest, and recently played a prominent part in its strenuous and happily successful protest against the proposed destruction of the most valuable parts of the church of Ilkeston. To the Society's Journal he made several valuable contributions, and he spent most of his leisure time in the last two years in compiling a singularly thorough index to the first twenty-five volumes of its proceedings. This volume is at the present time going through the press, and is a monument of careful industry. In his last letter on this subject, written to a friend a few days ago, he wrote:—

"The work of comparing each printed item with the actual volumes is a far bigger job than I anticipated; the slips I now return (only part of the letter B) have occupied myself and assistant nine hours; but after all an index is worthless unless really correct."

Mr. Strutt was also engaged in the preparation of an important topographical work on the extensive parish of Duffield, for which he had made collections for several years. He had just arranged with his old friend the Rev. Dr. Cox to assist him in necessary researches at the Public Record Office. He also edited the parish registers of Duffield and of certain adjacent parishes.

His collections of manuscripts, drawings, prints, and books illustrating the whole of Derbyshire (and also to some extent Nottinghamshire) are most extensive. We believe it will be found that he has left the Derbyshire portion of his splendid library to the Derbyshire County Council. Mr. Strutt was a warm supporter of the Victoria County History scheme.

Another work of his was a privately printed biography of his great-grandfather Jedediah Strutt, the eminent mechanician and inventor of the ribbed stocking frame. A portion of this he contributed to the 'Memorials of Old Derbyshire' issued in 1907.

Mr. Strutt possessed a remarkably interesting collection of letters from the many literary friends of his father and grandfather. A few years ago some unpublished letters of Moore from this source appeared in our columns.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Brooke (A. E.) and McLean (N.), The Old Testament in Greek, Vol. I. Part II., 12/6 net. Based on the Codex Vaticanus, supplemented from other uncial manuscripts, with a critical apparatus containing the variants of the chief ancient authorities for the text of the Septuagint.
- Carver (W. Owen), Missions in the Plan of the Ages, 3/6 net. Bible study in missions.
- Hinton (J.), The Mystery of Pain, 1/ net. One of the Heart and Life Booklets.
- More (P. Elmer), Shelburne Essays, Sixth Series, 5/ net. Studies of religious dualism, including work on St. Augustine, Sir Thomas Browne, Rousseau, and the trial of Socrates.
- Waylen (Hector), Mountain Pathways, 2/6 net. A study in the ethics of the Sermon on the Mount, together with a revised translation and critical notes, and an introduction by F. C. Burkitt.

Law.

- Hemmant (D. G.), The Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908, 6/ net.
- Hynes and Jameson's County Council Licences, 10/6 net.
- Stone's Justice's Manual, 1909, 25/

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Birmingham Museum and Art Gallery, Illustrated Catalogue, with Descriptive Notes of the Permanent Collection of Paintings in the Art Gallery and in Aston Hall and Elsewhere, 6d.
- Book of Trade Secrets: Recipes and Instructions for renovating, repairing, improving, and preserving Old Books and Prints, by an Expert, 1/ net.
- Bumpus (T. Francis), Canterbury Cathedral, 2/6 net. Illustrated.
- Caroe (W. D.), King's Hostel, Trinity College, Cambridge, 10/6 net. An examination of the history of King's Hall, with special reference to the buildings recently disclosed.
- Gomme (Bernard), Index of Archaeological Papers published in 1907. The seventeenth issue of the series, completing the Index for the period 1891-1907.
- Mees (C. E. K.), The Photography of Coloured Objects. An attempt to put clearly the theory underlying the photography of coloured objects, and the application of that theory to those branches which are of the most importance.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Cook (W. P.), Carthoon, 2/6. A tragedy in three acts.
- Dante's Divine Comedy: Inferno, Purgatorio, and Paradiso, 3 vols., 10/6 net. Translated by Edward Wilberforce.
- Esque (J. Louis de), Betelguese. A fantastic trip through hell.
- Ibsen (H.), The Fantasy of Peer Gynt, 3/6 net. Selections from 'Peer Gynt' done into English verse by Isabelle M. Pagan.
- Narkissos, by W., 2/6 net.
- Robins (E.), Votes for Women, 1/. A play in three acts.
- Steynor (M.), Lancelot and Elaine, 2/ net. A play in five acts.
- War and other Short Poems, by T. E. C., 3/6 net.

Bibliography.

- Leslie (Major J. H.) and Smith (Capt. D.), A Bibliography of Works by Officers, Non-Commissioned Officers, and Men who have served in the Royal, Bengal, Madras, or Bombay Artillery; Part I. Abbott-Biddulph, 1/
- Library of Congress: Want List of American Historical Serials. New Edition.

Philosophy.

- Bradley (A. C.), English Poetry and German Philosophy in the Age of Wordsworth, 6d. net. The Adamson Lecture, 1909.
- Cronin (Rev. M.), The Science of Ethics: Vol. I. General Ethics, 12/6 net. The main purpose of the work is to present a full and connected account of the ethical system of Aristotle and St. Thomas Aquinas.

Political Economy.

- Morris (R. D.), Life Assurance from the National and Personal Standpoint, 6d. net. With an introduction by the Right Hon. D. Lloyd George.
- Schloss (D. F.), Insurance against Unemployment, 3/6 net.
- Shadwell (A.), Industrial Efficiency, 6/ net. A comparative study of industrial life in England, Germany, and America. New Edition.

History and Biography.

- Burke (A. Meredith), Prominent Families of the United States of America, Vol. I., 42/ net.
- Caithness and Sutherland Records, Vol. I. Part I. Miscellaneous documents edited and translated by the Rev. Henry Paton.
- Colvin (Sir Auckland), The Making of Modern Egypt, 1/
- Dictionary of National Biography: Vol. XIV. Myllar-Owen, 15/ net.
- Hamilton (Angus), Problems of the Middle East, 12/6 net. Treats of the Young Turk Party, Persia and the Powers, the Baghdad Railway, &c.
- Hastings (G. W.), A Vindication of Warren Hastings, 6/ net.
- Herkless (Prof. J.) and Hannay (R. Kerr), The Archbishops of St. Andrews, Vol. II., 7/6 net.
- London in the Sixties, with a few Digressions. By One of the Old Brigade, 3/6
- McCabe (J.), The Iron Cardinal, 15/ net. A new life of Richelieu.
- Magna Charta, 6d. net. From a translation in the British Museum, probably made early in the eighteenth century.
- Makower (S. V.), Richard Savage, 16/ net. A romance in biography, with 17 illustrations.
- Moresby (Admiral J.), Two Admirals: Admiral of the Fleet Sir Fairfax Moresby, G.C.B., 1786-1877, and his Son, John Moresby, 14/ net. A record of life and service in the British Navy for a hundred years, with portraits and illustrations.
- Orkney and Shetland Records, Vol. I., Part V. Contains documents edited and translated by the Rev. Henry Paton.
- Review of Historical Publications relating to Canada, Vol. XIII. Edited by George M. Wrong and H. H. Langton. For notice of Vol. XII. see Athen., May 9, 1908, p. 573.
- Russell (C. E.), Thomas Chatterton, the Marvellous Boy, 7/6 net. A study of his life. Illustrated.
- Waddington (S.), Chapters of my Life, 7/6 net. An autobiography.

Geography and Travel.

- Higginson (Ella), Alaska, the Great Country, 7/6 net.
- Kirkham (S. D.), Mexican Trails, 7/6 net. A record of travel in Mexico, 1904-7.
- Tate (G. P.), The Frontiers of Baluchistan, 12/6 net. Travels on the borders of Persia and Afghanistan, with an introduction by Col. Sir A. H. McMahon, a coloured frontispiece, 36 plates, and 2 maps.
- Thomson (J. M. A.) and Andrews (A. W.), The Climbs of Lliwedd, 5/ net. With illustrations and diagrams. Issued by the Climbers' Club, and intended for experienced climbers.

Sports and Pastimes.

- Browning (Capt.), Auction Bridge, and How to Play It, 1/. An attempt to explain the game of auction bridge in a simple, definite, and coherent form.

Education.

- College of Preceptors, Calendar for 1909, 2/6

Philology.

- Homer, Iliad, Books IX. and X., 1/. Translated by E. H. Blakeney.
- Leeb-Lundberg (W.), Word Formation in Kipling, 2/6 net. A stylistic-philological study.
- Ullman (B. L.), Additions and Corrections to C.L.L. Reprinted from Classical Philology, Vol. IV., No. 2.

School-Books.

- Forsyth (J.), Select Readings and Recitations. Adapted and arranged for the classroom, the drawing-room, and the platform, with rules and exercises.
- Healey (E.), A First Book of Botany, 1/6
- Lamb (C. and M.), Tales from Shakespeare, Second Series, 1/6. With introduction and notes by C. D. Punchard.
- Pichot (Amédée), Pocahontas, 6d. One of Siepmann's French Series for Rapid Reading.
- Plato's Republic, Book I., Vocabulary, Syntax, Exercise, by the Rev. John Highwood, 5/ net.

Science.

- Bailey (L. H.), Beginner's Botany, 3/6
- Bird Notes and News, Vol. III. No. 5. Journal of the Royal Society for the Protection of Birds.
- Childe (C. P.), Operative Nursing and Technique, 3/8 net. A book for nurses, dressers, house-surgeons, &c.
- Guide to the Whales, Porpoises, and Dolphins (Order Cetacea) exhibited in the Department of Zoology, British Museum (Natural History), 4d. Illustrated by 33 figures.
- Hudson (Bernard), Aids to Medicine, 2/6 net. In the Students' Aids Series.
- Hulme (F. E.), Familiar Swiss Flowers, First Series, 1/ net. Contains 24 coloured plates.
- Minett (E. P.), Differential Diagnosis of Bacteria, and Practical Bacteriology, 2/6 net.
- National Physical Laboratory Report for the Year 1908. Publications of the Research Defence Society, March, 1908-9, selected by the Committee, 2/6 net.
- Roth (W. A.), Exercises in Physical Chemistry, 6/ net.
- Sudborough (J. J.) and James (T. C.), Practical Organic Chemistry, 5/ net.

Fiction.

- Benedict (C.), A Resemblance, and other Stories, 6/. A series of short stories, three of which have appeared in American magazines.
- Brown (Alice), The Story of Thyrsa, 6/. A love-story placed in an American village. With a frontispiece by Alice B. Stephens.
- Couch (Stata B.), In the Shadow of the Peaks, 6/. The scenes are laid in the valley of Cuernavaca, Mexico.
- Fletcher (J. S.), The Mantle of Ishmael, 6/. A sensational story of crime.
- Heilgers (Louise), Vain Tales from 'Vanity Fair', 3/6. A series of short stories, with an appreciative preface by Frank Harris.
- Hilliers (A.), As It Happened, 6/. A story of action, dealing with the period 1778-9.
- Macchi (Countess M.), The Mersteins, 1/. Contains two tales, one of which has to do with the owner of a Ligurian copper mine.
- Maltby (A.), Inez the King's Page, 6/. The story is laid in the time of Philip and Mary. Third Edition.
- Moore (F. Frankfort), Priscilla and Charybdis, 6/. A story of alternatives.
- Pemberton (Max), The Show Girl, 6/. An account of Paris—the Paris of Montmartre and the Quartier Latin—as seen by a rollicking art-student. There is a frontispiece by Cyrus Cuneo.
- Philips (F. C.), One Never Knows, 6/. A story of love, the stage, and a secret marriage.
- Rawson (Maud S.), The Stairway of Honour, 6/. The tales are in three sections: I. of the olden days; II. of the eighteenth century; III. of to-day.
- Rowland (Helen), The Widow—to say Nothing of the Man, 1/ net. A humorous book, chiefly occupied with discussions on marriage. Contains 8 illustrations by Esther P. Hill.
- Sidgwick (Mrs. Alfred), Cynthia's Way, 7d. net. For former review see Athen., Jan. 18, 1902, p. 77.
- Whyte (A. Gowans), A Comedy of Ambition, 6/. In the protagonists the author has made a study of idealism, passion, and ambition.
- Wilson (T. Wilson), The Bargain, 6/. Ara, not seventeen, romantic and proudly sensitive, had left her boarding school, to discover her idealized father, lately returned from India, dying in a wayside inn. Ara understood one thing by "the Bargain," Tredethy, an Indian judge, another.
- Wood (Mrs. Henry), Elster's Folly, 6d.
- Yorke (Curtis), Once, 6d.

General Literature.

- Catechism on Field Training, 3/ net. With illustrations and explanatory notes in accordance with the latest textbooks and regulations, and practical exercises and examples, revised and edited by Lieut.-Col. W. Plomer. New Edition.
- Export Merchant Shippers and Manufacturers of Great Britain and Ireland, 1909, 2 vols., 15/6 net.
- Foltz (E. B. K.), The Federal Civil Service as a Career, 6/
- Hamilton (C.), Materials and Methods of Fiction, 5/ net. The author, from a study of many novels and short stories of acknowledged greatness, deduces and formulates the general principles of the art of fiction. There is an introduction by Brander Matthews.
- Hartley (C. Gasquoine), Stories from the Greek Legends, 3/6 net. With 8 illustrations.
- Higgins (P.) and Conolly (F. V.), The Irish in America, 6d. Vol. IV. of the Irish Library.
- Leatham (C. W.), Sketch and Stories of the Royal Irish Constabulary, 6d.
- Mount Tom, October-November, 12 numbers for 1 dol. An "all-outdoors" magazine, issued at Northampton, Mass.
- Old-Lore Miscellany, Vol. II., Part II. Issued by the Viking Club.
- Press Album, 2/6 net. Published in aid of the Journalists' Orphan Fund, and edited by Thos. Catling.
- Souvenir and Book of Words of the Colchester Pageant, June 21st-26th, 1909, invented and arranged by Louis N. Parker, 1/ net.

Statistics of the Dominion of New Zealand for the Year 1907, Vol. II. Compiled in the Registrar-General's office from official records.

Young (Filson), Memory Harbour, 5/ net. Essays chiefly in description.

Pamphlets.

Nationalism in Hungary from the Business Point of View, by Veridicus, 1d.

Toynbee (G.), Joseph Toynbee, F.R.S., Aural Surgeon, 3d. net.

FOREIGN.

Fine Art and Archæology.

Havard (H.), La Céramique hollandaise : Histoire des Faïences de Delft, &c., et des Porcelaines de Weesp, &c., 2 vols., 75/ net. These sumptuous volumes have 35 full-page plates and over 500 other illustrations.

Poetry.

Victoria (Leandro Arrarte), La sin par Morocha. Two short poems from Montevideo.

Philology.

Κριτικά καὶ ἐξηγητικά περὶ τριῶν Ὀυεργιλίου στίχων, by I. Roiron. Notes on Virgilian criticism in modern Greek.

Fiction.

Marguerite (P.), La Lanterne magique, 3fr. 50.

Téramond (G.), Le mystérieux Inconnu, 3fr. 50.

General Literature.

Lazursky (V.), On the Essays of Steele and Addison, Part I. Issued in Russian characters by the Imperial University of Odessa.

* * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

MESSRS. LONGMAN hope to publish during the present month Mr. J. Atkinson Hobson's new book, 'The Industrial System.' By means of an outline of the structure and working of modern industry the writer seeks to show how the distribution of wealth is actually effected, and what are the forces that determine how much goes in payment to landowners, capitalists, entrepreneurs, and labourers for various services rendered.

'LEAVES OF THE LOWER BRANCH: THE ATTORNEY IN LIFE AND LETTERS,' by Mr. E. B. V. Christian, which will be published by Messrs. Smith & Elder on the 26th of this month, consists of sketches of the attorney as he is depicted in books, and the work done in literature by solicitors. The sketches range from a humorous defence of Messrs. Dodson & Fogg to more serious studies in books. The volume will include nine illustrations.

MESSRS. SMITH & ELDER also promise a new novel by Miss F. M. Peard, entitled 'The Flying Months,' next Tuesday; while on the 4th of May they will publish Mr. Halliwell Sutcliffe's story, 'Priscilla of the Good Intent,' which is appearing in The Cornhill Magazine, and a story of to-day by Miss Frances G. Burmester, entitled 'Davina.'

THE forthcoming number of The Library will contain an article by Mr. H. R. Plomer on a newly found document of unique interest for the history of English printing and bookselling in the fifteenth century. Dr. Hessels begins a destructive criticism of numerous documents said to refer to Gutenberg. Mr. Alfred Pollard suggests some general principles for the arrangement of bibliographies, and describes a hitherto unknown book from the second Oxford press. In other articles, Mr. Ballinger completes his survey of his twenty-four years' work at Cardiff, and Mr. William Jaggard offers further evidence as to the alleged false dates in various Shakespearean quartos.

THE book on the sea and national spirit which Mr. G. A. B. Dewar began some time ago will be published by Messrs. George Allen & Son. The author was ill during most of the winter, and forbidden to do any work. He has now, however, taken up the book again.

'THE FOOTSTEPS OF GORDON AT KHARTUM' is the subject of an article by Mr. Douglas Sladen in the May Sunday at Home. Dr. George Hanson discusses the scientific and other problems suggested by the first chapter of Genesis. Mr. T. H. S. Escott in 'The Romance of a Dead Language' gives an account of the study of Greek at Oxford, with special reference to Gaisford and Liddell and Scott. Mrs. Pout describes a holiday in Norway, and Mr. Oliver G. Pike contributes an article on the swarming of bees.

MESSRS. SOTHEY'S sale on May 6th will consist of a collection of illuminated manuscripts on vellum. It extends to sixty-seven lots, an unusual number to appear in one property. The twenty-five plates in the sale catalogue to some extent indicate the variety and beauty of the MSS., which chiefly date from the fifteenth century, and are Books of Hours.

MR. WILLIAM ALDIS WRIGHT sends us the following regarding a point noted in our review of the Cambridge reprint of the Authorized Version:—

"In Genesis xxxiii. 2 the text is quite correct in reading 'their children,' and thus justifies my confidence in the accuracy of the compositors and readers. I perfectly well remember noting the misprint of the first issue, and the error must have crept in when I transcribed my notes for the press. I hope there are not many such."

THE speakers at the dinner of the Royal Literary Fund, at which Mr. Andrew Lang will preside on Thursday, May 13th, will be Lord Tennyson, Sir Edward Clarke, and Mr. Maurice Hewlett.

THE obituary of the week includes the name of Dr. Whitley Stokes, who died on Tuesday last at the age of seventy-nine. Dr. Stokes was one of our leading Celtic scholars, joint editor of the series of 'Irish Texts,' the 'Thesaurus Palæohibernicus,' and the 'Archiv für keltische Lexicographie.' His 'Urkeltscher Sprachschatz,' produced in conjunction with Prof. Bessenberger, is a monument of philological research. He also did some important work in the codification of Indian law.

OUR paragraph announcing that a volume of J. M. Synge's poems would shortly be published by "the Dun Emer Press" should read "the Cuala Press," as Miss Elizabeth Yeats's printing establishment is now known by that name. Mr. Synge's volume will appear in about six weeks. Miss Yeats's brother Mr. W. B. Yeats is adding an appreciation, and another brother, Mr. Jack B. Yeats, a drawing.

RECENT Parliamentary Papers of interest are Annual Report on the Finances of the University of Glasgow (3d.); and Welsh Colleges Committee, Report, Evidence, &c. (1s. 5½d.).

SCIENCE

My Life among the Wild Birds in Spain. By Col. Willoughby Verner. (Bale, Sons & Danielsson.)

AN inveterate birdnester, unrepentant, but not indiscriminating, Col. Verner commands far more respect than many more plausible humanitarians. His remarks about the ethics of his beloved hobby are much to the point, and we can well understand that to a man with his code the "bestial paid collector and his most accursed myrmidon the local sportsman" are a disgrace. He himself has been intimately associated with some of the greatest ornithologists of the last generation, and has contributed some of the finest specimens to the British Museum.

But perhaps the chief interest of this book for the general reader lies in the fact that Col. Verner writes as an acknowledged expert on climbing. It may seem a simple matter to be hauled up a big tree by a rope or lowered down the face of a precipice; but these pages, apart from the numerous sensational illustrations of awkward corners and overhanging cliffs, will quickly correct any such mistaken impression. The first six chapters of the book are largely concerned with the methods and equipment suggested by long experience. With almost insurmountable difficulties of transport, the first consideration must be to reduce the weight of all impedimenta to a minimum. Within these limits it has always been Col. Verner's rule to neglect no reasonable precaution; but, like every other birdnester, sooner than admit defeat, he has often adopted desperate measures. He has habitually invited picked friends to accompany him on his expeditions, and naval officers, familiar with the handling of ropes, have often assisted him.

Long accustomed to supplement his journal with a sketch-book, the author eventually called in the aid of photography to complete his records and furnish material for this book. Only a light hand-camera was taken, and, in his opinion, for 90 per cent of his pictures any more cumbersome outfit would have been useless. As it was, his earlier efforts were needlessly hampered by the irritating limitations of a "fixed focus" lens. With the opportunism of a cliff-climber, he has often secured a long time exposure under the most difficult conditions. He betrays a certain satisfaction over the inability of the professional bird-photographer to accomplish as much with all his elaborate paraphernalia. Indeed, he relates with some gusto a ludicrous incident at the expense of one of these gentlemen. Col. Verner had despoiled a Bonelli's eagle of an egg, which, on the chance that a second might be laid, he replaced with a substitute borrowed from a tame goose. Presently the unsuspecting photographer visited the spot, and achieved the comparatively easy feat of carrying off the spurious egg, but, fortunately perhaps for himself, failed to secure a picture of his prize in situ to illustrate the detailed account he subsequently wrote of the adventure. The author's photograph of the genuine egg is here reproduced to give point to the story, the facts of which only came to light in the following year.

As a contribution to ornithology this work is particularly valuable by reason of its many beautiful plates of the larger Raptores; these, while representing the experience and skill of a field naturalist of repute, have for the most part been subjected to the exacting test of Lord Lilford's scrutiny and approval. All that Col. Verner has to tell us of the birds of Spain is bound to carry great weight, owing to the continuity of his observations; for from the early seventies he has repeatedly visited the same scenes, and during the last few years has wintered in the country.

The convenient plan has been followed of grouping the various birds according to their appropriate environment. Here, perhaps unconsciously, the climber's instinct has evolved an ascending scale—laguna, plain, woodland, sea-cliff, and finally sierra. In the marshes the splendid cranes hold pride of place, and their great migratory movements may be witnessed with unerring regularity as regards both time and direction in South-West Andalusia. The number that remains to nest is sadly diminishing every year, owing to persistent "egging." To discover a nest among the immense red-beds is a matter of supreme difficulty, and Col. Verner tells of a whole series of reconnaissances on horseback before he was successful in obtaining a photograph. It is a pity that many of the photographs taken in otherwise favourable circumstances have been badly under-exposed, presumably through the prevalence of wind. On one occasion a pair of cranes in their parental anxiety simulated disablement after the most approved fashion.

Among the denizens of the plains the great bustard is at once a commanding and, during the well-known "paroxysms of courtship," a grotesque figure. It is pointed out that long after the females have settled down on their eggs in distant cornlands, the males congregate in big flocks and continue the farce of these terrific encounters. An amusing description is given of their methods:—

"One can almost imagine one inverted old cock saying to another, 'You be off!' 'I won't,' replies Number Two. 'What! you won't?' thunders Number One, rustling up to him with creaking primaries and a generally appalling appearance. 'No!' says Number Two, equally crackling all over and strutting around ferociously. 'Then stay where you are,' remarks Number One, wheeling about and adroitly evading the difficulties of the situation."

The remarkable speed at which these huge birds fly is noticed. With the steady beat of their enormous wings, their flight is so deceptive that, though they seldom travel more than 30 yards above the ground in a drive, no bird is in practice more easily missed. Even more difficult to "bag" is the handsome little bustard, too elusive either to drive or to stalk.

Col. Verner has found its nesting habits baffling in the extreme.

The cork forests and pine woods are so rich in varied avifauna that a few glimpses only of the most salient features are possible. Overshadowed by the greater birds of prey, many beautiful nesting species—including the golden oriole, the bee-eater, the hoopoe, and a host of interesting warblers—are dismissed in a single chapter. It is a curious fact that the blackbirds, which swarm in Southern Spain, never appear to lay more than three eggs. The author has found the brilliant hues even of the male oriole undeniably protective in the surroundings these birds persistently affect; for, avoiding the more sombre cork-oaks and olives, they show a marked preference for the vivid foliage of ash and Spanish oak, where they can lose themselves effectually in the high lights and deep shadows. Though game-preserving is already declaring a war of extermination in various districts, the kites and tree-nesting eagles are still numerous, and for the most part build in easily accessible positions. Indeed, the largest of the latter, the white-shouldered eagle (Aquila adalberti), nests often in extremely small trees, in some cases only 15 ft. or so from the ground. Such sites, however, do not always lend themselves well to photography. On the other hand, the black vulture, selecting the tallest and most formidable trees, once succeeded in defeating Col. Verner himself. On this memorable occasion a stolid woodman at last proved the deus ex machina, and his marvellous climb and almost uncanny manipulation of a rope are described with generous appreciation.

The short section dealing with the sea-cliffs contains interesting accounts of ravens and ospreys. Some of the habits of the former in the Spanish peninsula are distinctly puzzling. Thus we are told that in sunny Andalusia it lays its eggs on an average a full two months later than in the British Isles. Again, the periodic processional movement of a number of ravens in pairs, travelling at intervals along the same line of flight, is a phenomenon that has hitherto attracted little or no attention. Thus on April 18th, 1906, Col. Verner counted no fewer than seventeen pairs proceeding in this fashion. It is to be noted that in this case, as in the exactly parallel occurrence we recently alluded to briefly in these columns, the movement took place at a date when all local ravens would ordinarily have settled down at their breeding quarters.

The last portion of the book is the most important, and the description of bird life in the sierras provides much stirring narrative. In these remote rocky wastes the lesser birds are but sparingly represented; a brief mention suffices for some half-dozen species, including the blue rock thrush, the black wheatear with his curious nest of stones, the chough, and the Alpine accentor. It is pleasing to read how the common wren shares the wildest and most desolate cliffs and caverns with huge vultures and eagles, his cheery song being often the only sound to break the impressive stillness of the scene.

A chapter is devoted to the eagle owl, which is more frequently heard than seen; and a most amusing account is given of two of these birds in captivity. Col. Verner's experience of the golden eagle is that in Spain its nest is always in a cliff, and its marked preference for the limestone country is, it is suggested, partly due to its antipathy for griffon vultures, which occupy all the best sandstone crags. It was in a visit to a griffonry in his early days that the author undertook the foolhardy climb which his riper experience condemns. His account of this adventure was published in full in Seebohm's 'History of British Birds,' together with a woodcut illustration of a perilous corner. This picture forms the frontispiece of the present work; in the interval that has elapsed since its first publication the climber has changed his nether garments! The culminating feat of Col. Verner's long birdsnesting career was only accomplished in 1908 with a successful campaign against the famous lämmergeyer, or, as he prefers to call it, the bearded vulture. He had the evidence of his own eyes that the title "bone-breaker" is no misnomer. The excellent sketches of this and other great birds upon the wing are a welcome feature. The scenes of the final act—the succession of bitter disappointments, dangerous predicaments, and eventual triumph—come with singularly dramatic effect. A large and carefully prepared general view of the great cliff in question adds much to the story. The indomitable veteran ends with a heartfelt "Nunc dimittis."

The whole book exercises a singular fascination, and should be read and enjoyed at leisure. The only adverse criticism we offer is that the punctuation is faulty, and the construction of some of the sentences cumbrous, and even ungrammatical.

SOCIETIES.

ROYAL ASTRONOMICAL.—April 7.—Prof. H. H. Turner, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. E. B. Knobel gave a description of a Chinese planisphere that had been exhibited in the Franco-British Exhibition as "a bronze compass" believed to be Japanese. The stars on the planisphere are represented by raised dots, connected in groups, each group representing a Chinese asterism. These have no relation to our constellations, and do not in any sense represent areas of the heavens. The principles of the "siou," or Chinese limar mansions, were explained.—Dr. Ritchey, of the Solar Observatory, Mount Wilson, California, described the construction and mountings of a 60-inch Cassegrain reflecting telescope, and showed a series of slides illustrating the various processes. The tests to which the mirror was subjected showed that its figure was of great perfection. The serious difficulties of transporting the heavy weights of the mirror tube, polar axis, &c., to the summit of Mount Wilson have been overcome, and the telescope is now mounted in the 50-foot dome erected for it.—Mr. S. S. Hough, Director of the Royal Observatory, Cape of Good Hope, exhibited a series of photographs of comet Morehouse taken after its perihelion passage, showing changes in the tail resembling those photographed in the northern hemisphere before perihelion.—Mr. Ernest W. Cooke, Director of the Perth Observatory, Western Australia, gave an account of the condition of astronomy in the Australian continent, especially with reference to the State Observatories.—Mr. J. H. Reynolds showed photographs of Jupiter taken during the opposition 1908-9.—Prof. Turner briefly mentioned two papers by himself: on the number of faint stars with large proper motions, and on the position of the sun's axis of rotation.—Mr. Crommelin gave an account of the orbit of the eighth satellite of Jupiter, as determined by Mr. Cowell, Mr. Davidson, and himself, and showed that, as at present determined, the orbit did not make a closed curve.

LINNEAN.—April 1.—Dr. D. H. Scott, President, in the chair.—Miss M. Rathbone, Mr. J. M. F. Drummond, and Dr. Marie C. Carmichael Stopes were admitted Fellows.—Mr. H. Caracciolo, Mr. J. B. Groom, and Dr. A. A. Lawson were elected Fellows.

Dr. Marie Stopes exhibited several microscope slides and micro-photographs of plant petrifications from Japan. The petrifications are of Cretaceous age, and are preserved as masses of fragments in some degree like the Palæozoic "coal-balls." The specimens included a number of new genera and species, the structure of which throws light on the flora of the Cretaceous period, and in particular is important in relation to the question of the early Angiosperms. These specimens are the first to be worked on from these beds. The President, in the name of the Society, congratulated Miss Stopes on the important results of her journey and explorations. Prof. F. W. Oliver and Mr. E. A. Newell Arber joined in the discussion which followed.

Mr. A. D. Darbishire exhibited seven cases of specimens as the results of breeding experiments with peas, illustrating Mendelian phenomena; and Mr. A. W. Sutton showed a large series of seeds, some being results obtained by crossing Pisum arvense, from the neighbourhood of Jaffa, with varieties of culinary peas, P. sativum. Prof. Keeble and Mr. J. R. Drummond contributed further remarks.

The first paper was by Mr. A. O. Walker, entitled 'Amphipoda Hyperidea of the Sealark Expedition to the Indian Ocean.' The Amphipoda Hyperidea of the expedition consist of 35 species in 28 genera, none new to science. Mr. Walker also showed specimens of Amphipoda preserved for 26 years in pure glycerine, the colour and markings being perfectly retained. He concluded by offering to the Society a microscope by E. Leitz of Wetzlar, fitted with three powers and Abbe's condenser.—Dr. J. Cosmo Melvill gave an outline of the contents of his memoir on the marine Mollusca of the same expedition. The Rev. T. R. R. Stebbing and Prof. Dendy added a few observations.

A paper by Mr. E. R. Sykes on 'The Land and Freshwater Mollusca of the Seychelles Archipelago' was formally read.—The last paper was by Dr. W. T. Calman, on a blind prawn from the Sea of Galilee, constituting a new genus and species, Typhlocaris galilea. The author briefly replied to questions put by Mr. A. O. Walker and the Rev. T. R. R. Stebbing.

ZOOLOGICAL.—April 6.—Mr. F. Gillett, V.P., in the chair.—The Secretary exhibited, on behalf of Mr. G. Jennison, some fertilized eggs from a pair of Seba pythons in the Belle Vue Zoological Gardens, Manchester.—Dr. R. T. Leiper exhibited a greatly distorted elephant's tusk from the Congo, and a malformed canine tooth of a hippopotamus from Uganda, the conditions most probably originating from mechanical injury.—Mr. E. T. Newton exhibited a metatarsal bone of an ox, showing in a remarkable manner the marks of gnawing by rodents, possibly squirrels, rats, or mice. He had found the bone in the woods near Cromer.—Mr. R. I. Pocock communicated a paper entitled 'Description of a New Form of Ratel (Mellivora) from Sierra Leone, with Notes upon the Described African Forms of this Genus.'—Miss Muriel Robertson read a paper 'On an Ichthyosporidian causing a Fatal Disease in Sea-Trout.'—Mr. C. Tate Regan read a paper on a small series of fishes from Christmas Island, collected by Dr. C. W. Andrews. Seven new species were described, comprising five Blennies, a Pampeneus and a Cirrhites.—Mr. Hamilton H. Druce read a short paper 'On some New and Little-known Hesperidae from Tropical West Africa,' which contained remarks on, and descriptions of, some new forms of these butterflies lately obtained by Mr. G. L. Bates on the Ja River, Cameroons, and others from Nigeria. New species of the genera Abantis, Acleros, Gorgyra, Parnara, and Ceratrichia were described.

PHILOLOGICAL.—April 2.—Mr. H. A. Nesbitt, Treasurer, in the chair.—Dr. H. Bradley gave a report on the S words he is editing for the Society's Oxford Dictionary. Since last April he has produced 160 pages of the work: he had hoped for more; but some of the R words were very difficult, and some of his assistants had been ill. He has now 120 pages of S in type, 88 of them being in page form. The last word dealt with is "sassaby," a large South African antelope. His main helpers have been M. Caland of Holland, Canon Fowler of Durham, the Rev. W. Wilson of Dollar (who have read and added to his proofs), Mr. Jas. Platt for out-of-the-way languages, Mr. Bullock for Chinese, Mr. R. J. Whitwell, Mr. W. W. Jenkinson, and Dr. Furnivall for special subjects. The death of Mr. H. Chichester Hart, a diligent Elizabethan helper, was a great loss. Dr. Bradley has made one discovery, the source of sash, first spelt shash in Hakluyt, soon after 1590: "Shashes for Moores." This is not Prof. Skeat's Persian shasht or sasht, but the Arabic shāsh, muslin, turban—"sash" (Dozy), a band of a fine material worn twisted round the head as a turban by Orientals. It was, like turban, used in 1657 for one who wears a sash, a Mohammedan: "they who have conversed with Shashes and Turbants." The modern sense occurs in 1681, in R. Knox's 'History of Ceylon': "A blew or red shash girt about their loyns." Sashoon or sashune is not an Eastern word, but is a corruption of the French chausson, and means a stuffed leather pad formerly worn inside the leg of a boot, 1687, &c. The Old English sam, half, semi-, is used in compounds: sam-hale, half-whole, poorly; sam-sodden, half-cooked, and figuratively "striped," like "half-baked"; sam-crisp, -dead, -red, -ripe. Of this, sand-blind is no doubt a perversion. The early Sabras of the 'Anceren Riwe' and the 'Promptorium,' a decoction or infusion, is the old Provençal saboratz, seasoned, flavoured, from saboras, to season. Sanderling, sandling, a sandy-shore bird, is probably from a supposed O.E. sand-yrsling, literally "sand-plowman." Sack, wine, Fr. vin sec, was doubtless a dry or non-sweet wine at first, but the name was later extended to include sweet wines, though Shakespeare writes of "sack and sugar." Sack, a bag, is in all Semitic languages as well as in most Teutonic, and in Keltic, classical, and Romance ones, so that Johnson said it must have existed before the Deluge. "To get the sack" seems to be from the French "On luy a donné son sac, hee hath his passport given him (said of a servant whom his master hath put away)," 1611, Cotgrave; but it occurs in Middle-Dutch in the fifteenth century. Salvatella is a diminutive formed from salvare, to save, to translate the Arab dim. al-usailim: it is the name of a vein on the back of the hand, near its ulnar edge, bloodletting from which was held to be of great efficacy in curing diseases. Saphena is from the Arabic ṣafin, the root of which refers to the leg. It is the distinctive name of two veins in the leg, and is used by Trevisa in 1398. The form Sanhedrim is peculiar to England. It should be Sanhedrin, but gets its -in from Hebrew, in analogy with Cherubim, Seraphim, &c.: it is from Gr. συνέδριον, a sitting together, a council. Sale (cf. Lat. sat-, satis, enough) was earlier salc, to satisfy, to become satiated: 1611, Cotgrave, "Assouvir, to cloy, glut, sate." Sad was, 1, satisfied, sated; 2, settled, steadfast; 3, strong, valiant; 4, orderly, grave, serious, in looks, learning, &c.; 5, of persons, sorrowful, mournful, causing sorrow; 6, bad, "sad dog," &c.; and also in various physical senses, cf. Pepys's wife "hanging the long chamber with the sad stuff that was in the best chamber," &c. Sabbath was at first Saturday, and did not become common in England as a synonym for Sunday till the seventeenth century. Sabaoth, the Lord of Hosts, was confused by Spenser, 'F.Q.', VII. viii. 2, with Sabbath, though the words are not connected etymologically. Same, from Scandinavian, the English equivalent being ilk, and meaning identical, was dealt with under its two divisions: 1, with forward reference; 2, with backward reference, identical with what has been indicated. The four varieties in the use of same as were noted, and the obsolete "same that" for "same as": 1577, Fulke, "The Pope was of the same judgement that the counsell"; 1671, Milton, "Such was thy zeal To Israel then, the same that now to me." Dr. Bradley was warmly thanked for his paper, and for his past twenty years' work as one of the joint editors of the Society's Dictionary.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—April 6.—Mr. Alexander Siemens in the chair.—It was announced that 12 Associate Members had been transferred to the class of Members, and that 137 candidates had been admitted as Students.—The monthly ballot resulted in the election of 4 Members, 74 Associate Members, and 1 Associate.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.—April 5.—The Duke of Northumberland, President, in the chair.—Mr. L. J. Baker, Mrs. S. G. Brown, and Miss Carvill were elected Members.

ARISTOTELIAN.—April 5.—Dr. Shadworth H. Hodgson, V.P., in the chair.—A paper was read by Dr. Hubert Foston on 'The Mutual Symbolism of Intelligence and Activity.' Intelligence and activity are not so much names of two different facts as indications of two ultimately distinct points of view for considering fact. Intelligence implies procedure by way of definition; but definition can never be completely closed, because experience is continually subject to change. This subjection to change is, from an active point of view, the key to opportunity; it involves a plasticity in fact which leaves room for hope and effort. All definiteness in experience involves the intellectual point of view; all consciousness of process involves an active basis—continuous process being recognized only through active expectation. As neither complete definiteness free from change, nor pure change or movement without form, affords a possible start for interpreting experience, we cannot avoid in philosophy a double point of view, at once intellectual and active. This double point of view cannot actually be reduced to theoretical unity, since there is really no comparison possible between intelligence and activity, as if they were two kinds of fact. Neither is there any contradiction between them—for contradiction can only be asserted where two matters conflict when seen from a unitary point of view. Since, however, intellect and activity are always mutually implied, reference to the one comes ambiguously to symbolize a reference to the other; and there thus arises the philosophical illusion of a unitary point of view. While intelligence and activity can never fall for us into a unity of comprehension, they do fall into a unity of conspiracy—conspiring to suggest an ideal aim. All that can be known by beings such as ourselves suggests an ideal, either of amelioration or of continuance. But the suggestion of an ideal is not a matter of pure intelligence. We can entertain it as such only because we are active beings. Our activity must be taken seriously. The intellectualist analysis of it by reference to the expansion of an idea against limits owes its apparent success to our being stirred to be sympathetically active in the very interpreting of the word "expansion"; and thus the whole problem of activity is given back to us, unanalyzed, in the use of the phrase. On the other hand, an ideal aim implies more than pure activity. Ideal method cannot be deduced from our activity, abstractly regarded, and the ideality must be taken as a constitutional datum. If it be such in us, and not essentially of our active "making," there remains no scotch for the Pragmatist denial of it as an original datum also in the facts which appear in so suggestive and educative a shape about us. Pragmatism is unreasonably exclusive here, and is tainted with the characteristic activist fallacy of making process as active account for the structural form of process which it implies. For us, as beings constitutionally committed to a life of ideal aim, ultimate reality is synonymous with ultimate trustworthiness. It is a business of philosophy to interpret the relative trustworthiness which we find in experience, alike in its aspects to thought and its warrant for practice.

PHYSICAL.—March 26.—Dr. C. Chree, President, in the chair.—Mr. F. Lloyd Hopwood was elected a Fellow.—A paper by Dr. J. A. Fleming and Mr. G. B. Dyke, on 'The Production of Steady Electrical Oscillations in Closed Circuits and a Method of Testing Radiotelegraphic Receivers,' was read by the authors.—A paper was also read by Dr. J. A. Fleming and Mr. H. W. Richardson on 'The Effect of an Air Blast upon the Spark Discharge of a Condenser charged by an Induction Coil or Transformer.'—Dr. S. W. J. Smith read a paper 'On the Action between Metals and Acids and the Conditions under which Mercury causes Evolution of Hydrogen.'

FARADAY.—March 30.—Dr. H. Borns in the chair.—A paper by Messrs. E. Sabersky and E. Adler on 'A New Electrical Hardening Furnace' was read by Mr. Adler. The paper was illustrated by lantern-slides.—A paper entitled 'The Relation between Composition and Conductivity in Solutions of Meta- and Ortho-phosphoric Acids,' by Dr. E. B. R. Prideaux, was read in abstract by Dr. T. M. Lowry.—Dr. F. Mollwo Perkin read a paper on 'The Electro-Analysis of Mercury Compounds with a Gold Cathode.'

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Institution of British Architects, 8.—'The Architectural Work of the London County Council,' Mr. W. E. Riley.
- TUES. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Brain in relation to Right Handedness and Speech,' Lecture I., Prof. F. W. Mott.
- Colonial Institute, 4.30.—'Canada Illustrated' by Canadian Artists, Miss E. Vaughan Jenkins.
- Society of Arts, 4.30.—'South Africa,' Hon. C. Gideon Murray. (Colonial Section.)
- Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'The "New York Times" Building.'
- Anthropological Institute, 8.15.—'The Blackfoot Indians of Montana,' Mr. W. MacIntock.
- WED. Meteorological, 7.30.—'Percolation, Evaporation, and Condensation,' Mr. Baldwin Latham; 'The Meteorological Conditions in the Philippines, 1908,' Rev. José Algué, S.J.
- Folk-lore, 8.—'Personal Amulets (European),' Miss Lina Eckenstein.
- Microscopical, 8.—'On the Recent and Fossil Foraminifera of the Shore-Sands of Selsea Bill, Sussex,' Mr. E. Heron-Allen; 'The Disappearance of the Nucleolus in Mitosis,' Mr. E. J. Sheppard.
- THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'Aspects of Applied Aesthetics: (I) How a True Art Instinct may be best Developed,' Mr. J. Paterson.
- Royal, 4.30.
- Historical, 5.—'English Traders and the Inquisition in the Canaries during the Reign of Elizabeth,' Miss Leonora de Alberti and Miss A. B. Wallis Chapman.
- Institution of Electrical Engineers, 8.—Discussion on 'The Electrical System of the London County Council Tramways.'
- FRI. Physical, 5.—'On a Want of Symmetry shown by Secondary X-Rays,' Prof. W. H. Bragg and Mr. J. L. Glasson; 'Transformations of X-Rays,' Mr. C. A. Sadler; 'Theory of the Alternate-Current Generator,' Prof. T. R. Lyle.
- Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—'The development of Hydro-Electric Power Schemes; with Special Reference to works at Kinlochleven,' Mr. J. M. S. Culbertson (Students' Meeting.)
- Institution of Mechanical Engineers, 8.—President's Address.
- Royal Institution, 9.—'Tantalum and its Industrial Applications,' Mr. A. Siemens.
- SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Earth Movements of the Italian Coast and their Effects,' Lecture I., Mr. R. T. Gunther.

Science Gossip.

PROF. FREDERICK EDWARD HULME, who died last Sunday at the age of sixty-eight, was best known for his popular books on natural science, which include a long series of 'Familiar Wild Flowers,' 'Wild Fruits of the Country-Side,' 'Plants: their Natural Growth and Ornamental Treatment,' 'Butterflies and Moths of the Country-Side,' and 'Natural History Lore and Legend.'

PROF. HULME was also a writer on artistic and archæological subjects, publishing 'The Principles of Ornamental Art,' 'Art Instruction in England,' and 'Histories of Symbolism in Art, Heraldry, and Flags,' as well as a book on 'Proverb Lore.'

MR. FROWDE is publishing shortly a new number of the Annals of Botany (No. 90), which will contain several important papers by specialists.

PROF. HALE, Director of the Mount Wilson Observatory, California, has been elected a Foreign Associate of the Royal Society.

THE BRUCE GOLD MEDAL of the Astronomical Society of the Pacific has been awarded to Dr. G. W. Hill of New York for his important investigations, especially on the lunar theory.

It was stated in our 'Science Gossip' last week that no report had yet been received of any observations obtained of Morehouse's comet (c, 1908) since its perihelion passage on December 26th; but at the meeting of the Royal Astronomical Society held on the 7th inst., a report of which appears in another column, Mr. Hough, His Majesty's Astronomer at the Cape of Good Hope, gave an account of a series of observations obtained there this year. Prof. Ristenpart, Director of the Observatory at Santiago de Chile, also publishes in No. 4318 of the Astronomische Nachrichten the results of observations obtained there at the end of last month, the comet being then situated in the constellation Chamæleon, little more than ten degrees from the South Pole.

THE principal papers in the third number, recently issued, of Vol. XXXVIII. of the Memorie della Società degli Spettroscopisti Italiani are also on Morehouse's comet—physical and spectroscopical observations by Prof. Riccò at Catania, a continuation of Prof. Bemporad's photometric observations, and a note by Dr. Horn, accompanied by a plate, on its structural appearance. The series of spectroscopical images of the sun's limb, as taken at several observatories, is also continued to the end of May, 1906.

FINE ARTS

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Aubrey Beardsley. By Robert Ross. Illustrated. (John Lane.)—In a small compass we find here an excellent biography and appreciation of an artist the nature of whose importance it is easier to discern now than for the general public his vogue is past. The time has come when artists may learn from his example, studying the artistic characteristics of his work instead of reproducing, as did his contemporary imitators, the types and subjects he affected.

Mr. Ross contributes something towards the better understanding of Beardsley's art and its origins, laying stress rightly on the importance of the drawings on the Greek vases among the many influences which inspired him. The writer might have gone further, indeed, and emphasized how largely in his multitudinous borrowings the most of what he effectively borrowed was in its essence the same. From Mantegna and Crivelli, from Polygnotus and Outamaro, the lessons he learnt were identical in kind with those he had had from Burne-Jones, though superior in quality. All to him were valuable, in the first place, in proportion as they revealed to him how the mere boundaries of things may, by their extreme continuity and simplicity, make up a structure so strong and flexible as to atone for entire absence of modelling and give the illusion of completely rendered form. What else he appropriated from his many masters hardly contributed to his powers as an original draughtsman; but if we compare with the 'Atalanta' (opposite p. 32 in the present volume, and a beautiful example of drawing as he understood it) such a work as 'The Mysterious Rose Garden,' opposite p. 36, we are reminded that there was an artistic quality other than draughtsmanship which contributed to his success. This—the "cloisonné" look of much of his work—is probably what Mr. Ross imputes as a fault to the Salomé series, because, as he says, it is suggestive of some other medium than pen and ink. Mr. Pennell, however, was wise in encouraging Beardsley to regard the print, and not the drawing, as the aim of the book-decorator, and after all a process block presents very much the appearance of the cloisons which are to hold an enamel. Now that illustrators are, in fact, working in colour enclosed in a mesh of line, the parallel is closer than ever, and the time may well be ripe for a continuation of Beardsley's technical innovations.

There should now be no lack of artists to follow him. Students are no longer warned (as in many quarters in Beardsley's time) against frequenting the Old Masters. The approach of actuality by means of scholarship, which made him so strange a figure when the fashion was for naturalism, is to-day less remarkable—threatens, indeed, to be the rule when the young artist is generally bred in the colourless respectable surroundings of a civilization which regards anything very expressive as "bad form." To such a one art is apt to be at first more stimulating than life, nor is it to be wondered at if, when he finds at last a like inspiration in the life of the present day, he finds it often in phases of society very different from those in which he was brought up. It is an odd criticism of existence to-day that naturalism should so often be pallid and flavourless, while the approach to blood and passion is found through pedantry.

English Houses and Gardens in the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries. By Mervyn Macartney. (Batsford.)—This attractive volume consists of a selection of birdseye views of English country houses, made for the most part by Dutch engravers at the end of the seventeenth century and the beginning of the eighteenth, admirably reproduced by means of photography.

The material the author had to draw upon was large, and he has made an excellent selection. The period is a fascinating one, the houses, though in some cases Tudor, being chiefly of the time of Inigo Jones and Wren, and either the work of those masters or of their pupils and followers; while at no other time, perhaps, has garden design reached so high a level. During this period, too, the use of wrought-iron gates and railings became common, and many examples occur in these plates, in some cases being attributed to Tijon. It is exasperating to reflect on the loss suffered by the destruction, a few decades later, of the majority of these magnificent gardens.

There is an interesting Introduction, the greater part of which is devoted to garden design; and in addition there is a short description of each plate, containing much useful information. We notice one or two slight misprints, and in the list of subjects illustrated the view of Penshurst is given as drawn and engraved in 1778 by Knyff and Kip, who died in 1721 and 1722 respectively, and had nothing to do with this plate, which is dated 1747; while that of Ambrosden is attributed to W. Kennett, the author of 'Antiquities of Ambrosden,' the volume from which the view is taken, instead of to Michael Burghers, who drew and engraved it.

While the plates reproduce with remarkable fidelity both the spirit and detail of the originals, the considerable reduction in scale is a distinct loss. The originals were themselves to a small scale, and as here reduced much of the detail is difficult to see without the use of a magnifying glass. We must refer to the title-pages by Mr. Goodison, which are excellent, and thoroughly in keeping with the work. There are also included half a dozen views of colleges at Oxford and Cambridge by Loggan, the best engraver here represented. The double plate showing Christ Church, Oxford, is particularly good, and interesting as taken a few years before Wren's alterations, and showing the delightful privy gardens and attached farm buildings.

An Old York Church: All Hallows in North Street. Illustrated by Mabel Leaf and E. Ridsdale Tate. Edited by the Rev. P. J. Shaw. (York, Church Shop.)—Every student of mediæval stained glass knows the church of All Hallows, North Street, York. The illustrations in this handsome volume are numerous and most welcome. There are nine fine plates in colour of the old glass; five plates in black and white of window details; six plates from pen-and-ink drawings; sixteen plates from pencil drawings, and two from rubbings; and thirty-six illustrations in the text.

Notwithstanding the crude and mischievous efforts of restorers of the Mid-Victorian times, the old painted windows of this church present more interesting features, and are more numerous than those of any other church of like size in the kingdom. Their value and beauty were fully realized by Mr. Winston in his important work on old glass windows in the middle of last century; still more attention was given to these windows by Mr. Westlake in his four fine volumes on the same subject, published in 1891-4; whilst Mr. Lewis F. Day naturally dilates on these glass pictures in his 'Windows: a Book about Stained Glass,' as well as his recent Victoria and Albert Museum Art Handbook on glass. Glass of the fourteenth century remains in two of the windows, but all the rest is of the fifteenth century. Mr. Shaw, therefore, cannot be blamed for finding little or nothing that is new to tell us about these windows, not even when he deals with the remarkable window illustrative of 'The Pricke of Conscience,' or the successive scenes of the last fifteen days preceding the end of the world. Nevertheless this volume is highly desirable by reason of the coloured plates and details which fully illustrate the whole of this memorable series of painted glass.

It is good also to have such graphic drawings of the fine series of angels holding musical instruments and other devices, of fourteenth-century date, which grace the roofs of the choir and its chapels. The remarkable Renaissance pulpit, dated 1675, bearing round the top the text "And how shall they preach unless they be sent?" is also well worthy of being pictured. In short, the numerous illustrations, though of varying degrees of merit and importance, are satisfactory.

The same cannot be said of the letterpress. The writer has apparently but little, if any, first-hand acquaintance with old documents. In the production of so costly and imposing a monograph, surely all possible pains ought to have been taken to make the history of the church complete; but several sources of information have been overlooked, whilst others have been imperfectly consulted, and hence imperfectly cited. A long list of rectors and patrons of the church, beginning in the thirteenth century, is set forth. These are taken from the Torre Manuscripts, compiled in 1691, preserved among the muniments of York Chapter. Torre's list of Yorkshire incumbents is frequently cited; He was an industrious, but somewhat careless compiler from the Episcopal Registers. Now within five minutes' walk of Mr. Shaw's residence in York, the whole of the diocesan registers of the see, beginning with Archbishop Walter de Gray (1216-53), are preserved, and might have been readily consulted. We cannot say that Torre made any mistakes in his list of rectors of All Hallows, North Street; but we do know that his misspellings, mistakes, and omissions in other Yorkshire lists are fairly frequent. Moreover, scraps of information, and occasionally matters of considerable importance, affecting particular parishes, occur in the registers of which Torre took no note.

We have another suggestion to make. If any of the copies of this work are not yet bound, the last chapter should be omitted. This chapter deals, in an egotistical and dogmatic fashion, with the services and ritual details favoured by Mr. Shaw. Such matters as the special stamp of wafer-bread made and used in this parish, or the ornamental treatment of the censer there in use, are not only particularized, but also recommended for general adoption. Not a few expert ritualists would disagree on historical grounds with some of the customs adopted; and we do not think Mr. Shaw is qualified to advise the Church of England. We doubt if anybody is, since freedom of usage and of opinion is desirable.

EARLY ENGLISH PORTRAITURE AT THE BURLINGTON CLUB.

Few of the works shown here are indisputably by English painters. The exhibition has been formed, indeed, largely to provoke from archæologists some inquiry into a sphere in which our knowledge of artistic history is vague. It offers an occasion for closer study of painting in England up to the time of Holbein, which may or may not enable us in future to discriminate a strain of native portraiture apart from periodic excursions of Continental artists; at the same time it offers an opportunity of seeing a large number of works either by Holbein himself or by his most successful imitators, and is to be welcomed on this ground, apart from its success in settling those questions of doubtful attribution which are at this period so frequent as to be the rule rather than the exception.

Of the Edward Grimston (67) which we noticed in the Guildhall Exhibition of three years ago—Scharf is quoted as saying that it "stands alone in English portraiture, being a solitary instance for the fifteenth century of a picture having the date, the names of the painter and the person represented, equally well defined." And even here, be it observed, we are not dealing with an English painter, as the portrait was painted apparently by Petrus Christus when Grimston was on an embassy to Brussels, just as Memlinc, according to Mr. Weale, painted the Duke of Devonshire's group of the Donne family when they were at Bruges, assisting at the wedding of Charles the Bold. The well-known triptych (22), of which the latter is the centre panel, was also shown at the Guildhall on the occasion already referred to, and is a typical expression of Memlinc's attractive, but not at bottom great personality. Technically, of course, he never achieved the splendour of material of Jan van Eyck, and but for its more exquisite carefulness this beautiful picture is exceedingly like some contemporary oil painting in its rather thin use of bright colours, as well as in its tempering, for the purposes of diffuse realism, of the severely masculine and decisive execution of the Van Eycks.

Modern artists who have imitated these early painters have usually erred, indeed, in esteeming them too exclusively as realists, and in under-estimating the extent to which their artistic position depends on their rigidly selecting from nature just the special pictorial qualities germane to their particular technique. Without some such tensely homogeneous design in terms of the brush-stroke, Pre-Raphaelitism becomes lifeless plodding; and without a definite recasting and simplifying of colour for the purposes of pictorial design, it may sink to foolish elaboration of the sitter's best clothes. These, the dangers besetting this manner of painting, are as visible in the less successful examples of any large collection of early pictures as they would be in the work of the considerable body of living artists who emulate such archaic models; and the small Henry VIII. (38), by Holbein, lent by Earl Spencer, while magnificently spontaneous in touch is not entirely free from reproach on the second count—above all, if we compare it with Princess Elizabeth (29), by an unknown artist, or even with the contemporary copy after Holbein, Queen Jane Seymour (46). In both of these the colours are grouped with a fantastic simplicity better suited to such conventional pattern painting than is the greater elaboration of the former picture. That Holbein escaped so frequently as he did the temptation of too realistic local colour was doubtless owing to his practice of painting rather from his masterly drawings than from nature, and modern followers might be wise in this to follow his example. Sir Thomas Le Strange (41) is a favourable example of this practice of adding by recipe a generalized scheme of colour to a closely observed drawing. The well-known "Nine of Diamonds" miniature Mrs. Pemberton (Case B, No. 3) is an absolute masterpiece, with a subtlety so akin to nature's that we are tempted to ascribe to it a larger basis of realism of colour than it actually possesses. A charming pair of Portraits of Little Girls (5), by Lavinia Teerlinc, are less subtle, but by their discreet acceptance of the limitations of grisaille stand comparison with the wonderful 'Mrs. Pemberton' better than the rest of the contents of the case, although those others are from the hand of Holbein. One of them, however, Queen Jane Seymour (2), is very intimate in characterization, and interesting to compare with another version of the same subject (5, Case C), of which it is almost a replica. The latter miniature is infinitely the finer as a decorative arrangement of colour, but, while pictorially more attractive, has not the look of being so close a portrait. We incline to the opinion that the other is the earlier, but both seem to be by Holbein himself. The fine quality of this collection of miniatures (which include examples by Hilliard and Isaac Oliver as well as a prodigal display of Holbeins) is alone enough to make the exhibition noteworthy.

Historically, perhaps the most noteworthy of all the Holbeins included in the exhibition is the famous Sir Thomas More (53), lent by Mr. Edward Huth. It cannot be pretended, however, that it is artistically among the most satisfactory. To a certain extent the character of the sitter is impressive; but the painting is heavy-handed, the local colour of the face being over-varied for the general scheme. The colour divides into two distinct groups of strong greens and strong reds, to which the brown fur offers, indeed, a neutral, but a neutral which does not run through the flesh-tones, so that the face also divides into halves, one red, and the other, the ill-shaved portion, green. Sir Thomas thus appears to have a thick oily skin, which, but for the impenetrable regard which speaks of such plenteous reserves of character, would be sufficiently repulsive. These qualities, however, are probably quite unintentional, and have no real connexion with Sir Thomas More. Holbein's draughtsmanship expresses his character—intuitive, but slow. He was not a bold theoretical thinker. Of the fine line, the noble convention, he had a perfect sense, in so far that when once he saw either before his bodily eye he held it fast. But he approached both in groping fashion, and we see him here in the act of guessing in what proportion realism was to be admitted into his process of colouring. The Sir Nicholas Curew (45) shows him in a still more chaotic state of mind, accepting in turn more than one standard of realism.

The somewhat vague personality of Guillim Stretes is provisionally offered to us as the nearest approach to an heir for Holbein's genius. The fine William West, First Lord Delawarr (51), shown in the Academy Winter Exhibition of last year, looks even finer on further acquaintance; and it is obvious that the hand that painted this virile portrait or the figure of Henry Howard, Earl of Surrey (54), never painted the architectural framework in grisaille which surrounds the latter portrait. It would seem, nevertheless, that the 'Surrey' was painted with a view to such decorative additions, for the bold way in which the conventional design is carried into the figure by means of a rather Italianate pattern on the man's costume can hardly be a happy accident. Shockingly ill done as is the architectural setting, which shows the "School of Fontainebleau" at its worst, the whole design is singularly effective, having something grandiose in its easy assumption of a large point of view, capable of combining realism and generalization in one decorative ensemble without incongruity. It is difficult to believe a Dutchman could have done it or even played so effectively his part in the concerted scheme.

The other works of Italian origin which, is the warp to the Flemish woof of the fabric of early English painting, are the Henry VIII. with a Scroll (24), which reflects a much better original, and (surely, though not so catalogued) the noble drawing of An Unknown Man (71) lent by Mrs. Locker-Lampson—a puzzling drawing for which we hesitate to suggest an author, who must however, be looked for in the highest rank of artists.

In the lower room a portrait of Edward VI. formerly in "Nell Gywnn's" house at Hampstead, was probably very fine indeed before the head was repainted in rather common fashion by a hand by no means destitute of ability. Of the three ancient paintings formerly in Baston House, Kent, the worst preserved (14) has hints of the finest design. More definitely than anything else here, perhaps, they have the look of being indigenous, showing, for their early date, a wonderful capacity, and that "common sense" which usually bars English technique from soaring into transcendental liberty above merely utilitarian aims. It is difficult to imagine even a primitive British artist so naive as to forget what his public asks for.

SOME CHURCHES OF SOUTH-EAST DEVON.

II.

THE little church of Combyne, between Axminster and Lyme Regis, used to be rarely visited, but there is now a station of that name on the new Lyme Regis connexion, about a mile out of the village. The church is chiefly of the first half of the thirteenth century, but was much restored in 1877 and again in 1907. The western tower has a steeply gabled roof. During the last restoration the walls were found to have several layers of paintings. The upper layer has been carefully preserved in the nave; the Our Father, the Credo, and certain texts were disclosed in black with red initials and having decorative borders; they are of Restoration or Charles II. date. The noteworthy point about this church is its possession of beautiful examples of pre-Reformation chalice and paten. There are only ten other parish churches that possess both mediæval chalice and paten, mostly, as might be expected, in retired places. A photograph with description of those of Combyne hangs up in the church.

Another small church is that of Venn Ottery, on the west bank of the Otter, about half-way between the stations of Tipton and Newton Poppleford, on the line to Exmouth. The church of this tiny village is so delightfully hidden among trees and foliage that it is usually passed by without being detected, though roads almost encircle it. Two guide-books, including one dated 1907 by a somewhat famous writer, tell us that the church is chiefly Norman. No Norman work could, however, be detected. The small unbuttressed western tower is of picturesque red sandstone. The lower stage seems to be of Edward I.'s time, circa 1300; but the upper stage, bell-chamber windows, and battlements are certainly of the fifteenth century. The octagon font has been much scraped, but seems to be of fourteenth-century date.

The stairway in the north-west angle of the tower is not part of the original work, but was inserted when the upper part was rebuilt. The south side of the tower is dangerously overburdened with ivy; unless the parochial or diocesan authorities see to its speedy removal, it will jeopardize the safety of the whole of this part of the fabric. There is a Jacobean altar-table; and a few well-carved fifteenth-century bench-ends (one bearing the initials B.D.) were spared when the church was "thoroughly restored in 1882."

A small amount of old bench-panelling is preserved at the grievously over-restored church of Seaton. The restoration of 1865 destroyed a particularly interesting rood-screen; and several others, that had survived the storm of the Reformation and the Puritan ascendancy of the Commonwealth, fell victims to the ignorance and neglect of last century. Other rood-screens of this district destroyed during the latter part of last century were those of Gittisham and Whimble. There is a singularly fine rood-screen extant at Littleham, near Exmouth, the lower panels of which are most richly carved. Its date is about the first quarter of the fifteenth century; Mr. Baring-Gould says that "it was much spoilt by cheap and injudicious restoration in 1886, the groining being of the flimsiest nature." There is a later parclose screen on the north side of the chancel. The screens of Northleigh have already been mentioned. In the large church of Axminster there is a small parclose screen on the north side of the chancel. At Colyton there are two stone parclooses—one on the south side of the chancel of early sixteenth-century date, and another of Jacobean style on the north side.

Awliscombe has a fine stone rood-screen, but badly restored in 1887. There is a poor rood-screen at East Budleigh, and good ones with vaulted canopy work at Buckerell, Clyst St. Lawrence, Feniton, Honiton, Payhembury, and Talaton. At Payhembury the levels of the old screens have been mischievously altered during a recent restoration; the ill-judged, topheavy appearance of regilding and repainting the upper vaulted work, whilst the rest is left bare, is also here made manifest. So very little church repair was done in Elizabeth's reign that it is interesting to note at Feniton a cornice band of Elizabethan moulding on the screen across the south aisle. The gates or doors of this part of the screen were recently removed by local wisecracks, and now lie flat on the top of the screen! At Clyst St. Lawrence the screen retains much of its old colouring. The rood-screen of Woodbury was much altered and ruined by restoration in 1862.

The pulpit of Buckerell is of pre-Reformation date, though a good deal altered. Axminster pulpit is a fine piece of carving dated 1633. There are several plainer pulpits of this period in the district.

East Budleigh has a wealth of old seating with carved bench-ends. The church has been lately described as "a treasure-house of magnificent oak carving." But this is a considerable exaggeration; the work is of the year 1537, when the religious upheaval caused by Henry VIII. was at its height. There is not a single Christian symbol throughout; much of the carving is weird or grotesque, and it is all of poor execution, though bold in design. In addition to the numerous bench-ends already named at Northleigh, others may be noted at Talaton, Payhembury, and Feniton.

There are many good examples of coffin-stools of Jacobean date, with well-turned legs, as at Shute, Offwell, Widworthy, and Southleigh. At Axmouth the legs are spiral and of Charles II. date. At Branscombe they are missing, but a good pair (perhaps from the church) stand in the lobby of the Mason's Arms, an inn in the centre of the village.

In a few cases the churches of this district retain their original doors and ironwork. The best example is the south door at Talaton, where the woodwork is enriched with carved panelling having traceried beads; there is also a good small original inner door to the tower stairway of Clyst St. Lawrence.

In an account, some few years ago, of a large group of churches, mostly of a small character, in North-West Devon, the prevalence of an early cruciform type was noted. The same is true of the district now under consideration. Fully a fourth of the old churches—leaving out several that have been entirely rebuilt or "restored" out of knowledge—are still cruciform or retain indications of that original plan. The cruciform churches are those of Branscombe, Buckerell, Axminster, Colyton, Honiton, Sidbury, Shute, Widworthy, and Clyst St. Mary. Among several which yield evidence of an early cruciform plan, Awliscombe, Axmouth, Seaton, Feniton, and Woodbury, may be mentioned. A plan of this nature, with low central tower, nave, small chancel, and embryo transepts, such as may be seen at Breamore, Hants, was characteristic of the later Anglo-Saxon architecture. Future developments gave to most of such churches a western tower; but at the exceptionally interesting church of Branscombe a Norman tower seems to have been erected on the older substructure. It is also highly probable that there is much pre-Norman material in the lower parts of the later central towers of Axminster and Colyton. As to the last two towers, the plaster and paint of the interior work hide the actual fabric; and the same is true of the layers of decayed plaster and colour-wash of the tower piers of Branscombe. Branscombe is said to be on the eve of restoration, and the surmise concerning their pre-Norman date will then be set at rest. As to this last-named church, its history, both in records and fabric, is all in favour of an early date. The church is dedicated to St. Winifred, the seventh-century virgin martyr of Flintshire; the suggestion that the dedication is in reality to St. Boniface, whose original name was Winfred, is inadmissible, for the apostle of Germany was always known ecclesiastically as Boniface. Wilfrid has also been suggested, but at any rate the saint-name is pre-Norman. The finely built Norman tower is not early in the style, probably c. 1150, and it is almost impossible to believe that the severely plain lower piers of the tower are of that date. Moreover, a careful examination of the interior of the tower discloses the fact that a considerable number of dressed stones of a former building, marked with the unmistakable Anglo-Saxon zigzag tooling, have been re-used in the upper stages, whilst the masonry still in situ on the left hand on entering the doorway leading to the newel stairway is positively pre-Conquest. At all events, enough remains to show that a substantial well-built church stood on this site prior to the Conquest. These stones probably belonged to the church that was built or rebuilt here about 925, which was the year when King Athelstan gave Branscombe, with other estates, to the Benedictine house of St. Peter at Exeter.

As to other Saxon ecclesiastical work of this district, in addition to that which probably still remains in the basements of the central towers of Branscombe, Axminster, and Colyton, an interesting discovery was made at the important church of Sidbury (which used to have a central tower) in 1898-9.

During certain restoration works a small crypt, about 10 ft. square, was found within the lines of the foundations of the Norman chancel. The jambs of the remains of the doorway leading to the steps up into the old chancel are of "long and short" work and of Saxon axe-trimming.

There is no better church of recent restoration anywhere in Devonshire than that of Sidbury, and few of greater and more diversified interest. The late Norman western tower was mischievously treated in 1843, and the chancel stripped of much good old work in 1859; but in 1884-5 the fabric was happily placed in the conservative and skilful hands of the late Mr. Micklethwaite, who treated the whole building with the greatest reverence. The present writer learnt much from discussing the nature and repairs of this building with Mr. Micklethwaite when it was under his charge. In addition to the tower, there is a good deal of Norman work extant in the side walls of the chancel. The visitor to this church should not fail to purchase a recently compiled 'Short History of Sidbury Church,' which has a ground-plan showing in colours the respective work of the Norman Transitional, Early English, Decorated, and Perpendicular periods. It can be obtained at the local post office at a modest price.

In addition to the Norman towers of Branscombe and Sidbury and the Norman nave of the former church, there is work of this period to be noted in the piers of the arcades of Colaton Raleigh, Axmouth, Farway, and Salcombe Regis; whilst there is a beautifully enriched Norman doorway at Axminster. This doorway now stands in a most strange position at the east end of the south aisle; it was formerly the main south entrance to the church, and was moved here when the present south aisle was built in 1830.

J. CHARLES COX.

SALE.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE sold on the 3rd inst. the following pictures, the property of the late Mr. J. J. Brown. Continental Schools: J. Israëls, The Assassination of William the Silent, 567/. P. Joanowitch, The Traitor Tracked, 204/. M. de Munkacsy, Drink, an interior, with a peasant family, 336/. English School: J. D. Harding, The High Alps, as seen from between Como and Lecco, 115/. J. Linnell, An Autumn Afternoon, a woody landscape in Surrey, with drovers, cattle, and sheep on a road, 273/. E. Long, Primero Segundo y Basso Profundo, 110/. Pictures by Old Masters: B. van der Helst, Portrait of a Lady, 378/. Karl de Moor, Portrait of a Lady, 126/.

Fine-Art Gossip.

At the City of Manchester Art Gallery the Spring Exhibition of Water-Colour Drawings began last Monday, and will remain open during April and May. The Jubilee Exhibition of works by past and present members of the Manchester Academy of Fine Arts will be on view during June and July.

THE Salon des Artistes Humoristes in Paris is to be opened at the Palais de Glace on the 25th inst., and will remain on view until June 15th. It is to have three retrospective features this year: portraits of the nineteenth century, and works of Caran d'Ache and the German caricaturist Wilhelm Busch.

Mlle. EUGÉNIE HAUTIER, a talented artist, who studied under Robert-Fleury and Isabey, died a few days ago at Belley, at the great age of eighty-seven. She was at one time a school inspector of drawing in Paris, and director at the École des Arts Industriels for women, instituted when M. Béhic was French Minister of Commerce.

Mlle. Hautier was a frequent exhibitor of flower pictures, rustic interiors, and still life at the Salon in the sixties. She retired from active life a quarter of a century ago.

M. JEAN HENRI ZUBER, a member of the Société des Artistes Français, died last week in Paris at the age of sixty-five. A native of Rixheim (Alsace), he began life as a naval officer, but took up painting and studied under Gleyre. He exhibited in 1869 two souvenirs of a voyage in the East: 'La grande Rue de Pékin' and 'La Tour de Porcelaine du Palais d'Été.' He took part in the war of 1870, and after the peace again became an exhibitor at the Salon, chiefly of landscapes. The Luxembourg contains four examples of his work.

M. LOYS DETTEIL is continuing his remarkable series of illustrated catalogues raisonnés of contemporary engravers. The subject of his new volume is Anders Zorn. The book will have about 230 facsimiles in addition to an original etching, the 'Portrait du Sénateur Américain Mason,' which is regarded as one of Zorn's masterpieces.

THE city of Douai is going to erect a monument to John of Bologna, one of its most famous citizens. The sculptor was born there in 1524, and died at Florence in 1608, the appellation of Bologna being a corruption of his own name of de Boullongne, an old Flemish family still in existence.

THE death is announced, in her sixty-first year, of Miss Emily D. Norcross, formerly manager of the School of Painting in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts. Miss Norcross studied art in Paris, Rome, and Venice, and frequently exhibited her works. She was a native of Cambridge, Mass., and of late years had devoted her time almost exclusively to teaching.

THE death in his eightieth year is also reported from Bonn of the archaeologist Prof. Ernst aus'm Weerth, for many years Director of the Rhenish Provincial Museum and author of 'Bad der römischen Villa bei Allenz,' 'Mosaikboden von St. Gereon zu Cöln,' and 'Wandmalereien des christlichen Mittelalters zu Cöln.'

IN the church of S. Maria dei Frari at Venice, which has long been undergoing repairs, some fifteenth-century frescoes in a very good state of preservation have lately come to light behind the tomb of the Doge Francesco Foscari.

THE KAISER FRIEDRICH MUSEUM at Berlin has recently acquired a predella by Fra Angelico representing the death of St. Francis, which is said to be remarkably fine in colour and in good condition.

THE arrangements of the University of London for Extension Lectures in the summer term include a course of five lectures on 'Mediæval and Early Renaissance Sculpture in France and Germany,' by Mr. S. M. Peartree, on April 27th, May 4th, 11th, 18th, and 25th, at South Kensington. The lectures, which should be well worth the attention of students, will be followed by a conversational class in which free discussion will be encouraged.

A PREHISTORIC German cemetery has been unearthed at Kessenick, near Maeseyck, at a depth of 30 ft. Many skeletons have been found in urns which are of different shapes, but reveal a German origin in their ornamentation. It was in the same neighbourhood that Dr. Nyssens discovered some years ago a Roman cemetery.

THE Exhibition of One Hundred Female Portraits of the English and French Eighteenth-Century Schools, which has been organized by L'Art et les Artistes, and is to be held in the Salles du Jeu de Paume in the Jardins des Tuileries, is now being finished. The carpenters and upholsterers are still at work there, and none of the pictures has yet been hung. The catalogue, however, is in hand, and it is anticipated that all will be ready by varnishing day.

EXHIBITIONS.

SAT. (April 17).—Mr. Arnesby Brown's Cabinet Pictures, 'The Changing Hours,' Private View, Leicester Galleries.
— Mr. E. T. Compton's 'The Alps and Snowdonia,' Private View, Fine-Art Society's Gallery.
— Miss Ruth Dollman's Water-Colour, 'The Sussex Downs,' Private View, Leicester Galleries.
— Mr. H. J. Ford's 'In Fairyland,' Mr. W. G. Robb's Landscape Pictures, and Mr. J. Sowerby's 'Cottages and their Gardens,' Private View, Baillie Gallery.
— New Gallery, Summer Exhibition.
— Mr. Frank O. Salisbury's Pictures of Historical Subjects, Portraits, and 'Messages from Life's Morning,' Private View, Doré Galleries.
— Mr. Frank Short's Etchings and Engravings, Private View, Fine-Art Society's Gallery.
WED. Baroness Helga von Cramm's Water-Colours, 'The Royal River from Source to Sea,' Private View, Messrs. Graves's Galleries.
THURS. Mr. P. Wilson Steer's Paintings, Private View, Goupil Gallery.

MUSIC

Musical Gossip.

A NINTH CHAMBER MUSIC FESTIVAL will be held at Bonn in May. The first and fourth days will be devoted to Beethoven, the second to Brahms, the third to Schubert, and the fifth to Mozart and Mendelssohn. Among the Beethoven works will be an unpublished Quintet for wind instruments, which is in the possession of Dr. Erich Prieger.

THE twelfth and last Broadwood Concert of the present season took place at the Æolian Hall on April 1st, when Mr. Henschel sang seldom-heard songs by Pergolesi, Mozart, and Beethoven, a Brahms Lied, two numbers from his own cycle, 'Der Trompeter von Säkkingen' and three Loewe ballads, and all with exquisite taste and finish. He also played, and admirably, his own accompaniments. Mr. Maurice Sons gave good performances of Bach's Violin Sonata in E minor and Henschel's 'Ballade,' Op. 39. The concerts will be resumed next season, beginning on October 28th, and ending on March 17th, 1910.

DR. HENRY WATSON will read a paper on 'Thomas Mace, the Man; his Book "Musick's Monument"; and the Instruments, "The Heroic Viol" and "The Noble Lute,"' at the sixth meeting of the Musical Association, in the King's Room, Messrs. Broadwood's, next Tuesday.

Two years ago a grand concert was given at the Paris Opéra, the net receipts of which were given to the fund for the erection of a Beethoven monument at Paris. On that occasion M. Saint-Saëns conducted the 'Choral' Symphony. A second concert for the same purpose is to take place on Tuesday, May 25th.

A PRIZE of 50/. is offered by Mr. W. W. Cobbett for the best Sonata for pianoforte and violin, and 20/. as a second prize, by Capt. Beaumont. The judges are Baron D'Erlanger, William Shakespeare, Paul Stoeving, and W. W. Cobbett, assisted by Efreim Zimbalist. Manuscripts must be sent in by October next. The competition is international. Particulars can be obtained from Messrs. Breitkopf & Härtel.

A SPECIAL concert was given by the London Symphony Orchestra at Queen's Hall on April 7th. Under the direction of Dr. Richter a highly impressive performance was given of Sir Edward Elgar's Symphony. The programme included Bach's fine Concerto in C for three claviers and strings, the pianists being Messrs. Leonard Borwick, Donald Francis Tovey, and York Bowen. This work is said to have been given in 1844 by Moscheles, Thalberg, and Mendelssohn, but from contemporary accounts of the performance it is most difficult to make out what Bach music was actually played.

THE third concert given by the New Symphony Orchestra, under Mr. Landon Ronald, at Queen's Hall on April 7th, opened with so brilliant a rendering of Dvorák's 'Carneval' Overture that Mr. Granville Bantock's clever, delicately scored 'Pierrot of the Minute,' given under his direction, was not heard to best advantage. There was a new pianist, Mr. Leonid Kreutzer. He has good command of the keyboard, and plays with intelligence, but his reading of the solo part of Tschai-kowsky's B flat minor Concerto proved disappointing: it lacked soul, fire, and temperament. The programme ended with a fine performance of Strauss's 'Don Juan.'

MENTION has already been made of the two recently discovered violin concertos of Haydn. The one in C was written for Luigi Tomasini, leader of Prince Esterházy's orchestra. His great-great-grandson, Carl Tomasini, will not only revive the work, but will also perform it on the instrument used when it was produced 140 years ago. He is at present a member of the Hofkapelle at Neustrelitz.

MR. FRANCIS MACMILLEN, who made his reappearance in London at Queen's Hall last Wednesday evening, had the assistance of Dr. F. H. Cowen and the London Symphony Orchestra. The American artist played the solo parts in the Mendelssohn and Goldmark Concertos, and in Vieuxtemps's work in D minor. Always an able executant, Mr. Macmillen now exhibits a much larger command of expression. His interpretation of the lovely Andante in Mendelssohn's work, and the charming 'Air' in the Concerto by the Hungarian composer—who enters next month upon his eightieth year—was replete with feeling. Altogether, he gave an interesting and satisfactory display of his powers.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN.	Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
—	Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
—	Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
MON.	Mr. Thomas Beecham's Orchestra, 8.15, Queen's Hall.
WED.	Miss Susan Metcalfe's Vocal Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.
THURS.	Madame Leginska's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Aeolian Hall.
—	Miss Anita Rio's Vocal Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
—	West London Choral Union, 8, Queen's Hall.
FRI.	Mr. Harold Bauer's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
—	New Symphony Orchestra, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Miss Effie Kalisz's Pianoforte Recital, 3.15, Steinway Hall.
—	Miss M. Verne and Mlle. Wietrowetz's Sonata Recital, 8, Bechstein Hall.
SAT.	Miss Helen Holme's Concert, 3, Bechstein Hall.
—	Queen's Hall Orchestra, 3, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

A Short History of the English Stage. By R. Farquharson Sharp. (Walter Scott Publishing Company.)

A History of Theatrical Art.—Vol. V. The Great Actors of the Eighteenth Century. By Karl Mantzius. Authorized Translation by Louise von Cossel. (Duckworth & Co.)

THERE is a right and a wrong way of writing stage history, and in its later chapters at any rate Mr. Farquharson Sharp's book illustrates the wrong way. If there is one quality which an historian of the theatre must possess if he is to make his theme interesting or to do it justice, it is a sense of proportion. Mr. Sharp seems to lose all idea of perspective when he nears modern times. He does well enough with the earlier periods which come under his survey; he can get his outlines clear so long as he can rely on the researches of others and summarize the conclusions of authorities. But as soon as, with an approach to our own day, he is compelled to depend, more or less, on his own judgment, all semblance of order and all appreciation of the relative importance of things disappear from his 'Short History.' A sufficient criticism of his treatment of the annals of our stage is the statement—which cannot be denied—that he occupies three-fifths of his narrative with an account of what happened between the time of Macready and Phelps and the summer of last year. That he has chosen to write of English theatres and English acting, rather than of English drama, is not a matter for which he can be fairly censured, though it has certainly helped to produce confusion. He had a right to adopt his own lines. It is a fact, however, that his attempt to combine two different methods of treatment, in one of which he provides a record of the various theatrical managements, and in the other tries to trace the history of particular playhouses, leads to lamentable disorder. Still, his plan succeeds while he is dealing with fairly simple conditions, such as those of the Elizabethan stage, the patent houses, Drury Lane and Covent Garden in the eighteenth century, or the reign of Garrick.

It is when he is discussing the last fifty years that his double system involves him in difficulties. His description of Irving's tenure of the Lyceum is on the whole adequate; but his annals of other important modern managements—the Bancrofts', Mr. Tree's, Mr. Alexander's, Sir Charles Wyndham's, Sir John Hare's—are far from satisfactory, and in the main but a catalogue of plays. Moreover, they are badly arranged. You have to look for Sir Charles Wyndham's managerial record as well as for the Vedrenne-Barker experiment in a chapter headed 'Comedy and Farce.' Mr. Alexander's St. James's career and Sir John Hare's Garrick management are tucked into a section devoted to the Kendals. Mr. Tree's two managements are separated by extraneous matter, and are treated as a pendant of the Bancrofts' enterprises. At the same time Mr. Sharp is perverse in his handling of modern actors and acting. He can go into details over the work of Miss Ellen Terry and her sister Marion; he can pick out for special comment a novice—though a brilliant novice—such as Miss Viola Tree; yet he fails to offer a reasoned estimate of the powers of Lady Bancroft, Mrs. Kendal, Sir Charles Wyndham, and Sir John Hare. It is a small matter, perhaps, that he goes wrong over tiny facts—that he talks of adaptations as though they were the original work of their adapters, or speaks of Mr. Tree as playing first Hotspur and then Falstaff in his revival of 'Henry IV.' Still, in a book such as this errors of the kind ought to have been avoided. It is more exasperating that here and there in the second half of his history Mr. Sharp writes of ephemeral topics in the style of modern journalism.

On the other hand, Herr Karl Mantzius knows, as few men do, how to write interesting stage history—knows how to arrange and group his material, and also how to conceal scholarship that is wide and thorough under a style of delightful vivacity. He can render the dustiest records of the theatre attractive because he possesses to a rare extent the gift of historical imagination. Thanks to that, he can make dead actors and past movements live again, he can recreate the social atmosphere of particular periods. The fifth volume of his 'History of Theatrical Art' maintains the reputation of that work, and is rightly styled, inasmuch as the time of which it treats was more an age of acting than of dramatic fecundity, 'Great Actors of the Eighteenth Century.' The players covered in this survey include Carolina Neuber, Konrad Ekhof, Schröder, Iffland, and Adrienne Lecouvreur among Continental celebrities; and such persons of mark on our own stage as Betterton, Cibber, Anne Oldfield, Quin, Macklin, and Garrick. To English readers or playgoers the German actors mentioned in this list are doubtless the merest shadows of names, but in Herr Mantzius's pages they stand out as distinct in individuality as that heroine of tragedy in real life, Adrienne Lecouvreur. Lessing, of course, assumes a large place in the German chapters, just as does Voltaire in those allotted to the French theatre, and in the course of this volume the author pictures very entertainingly the enthusiasm of the "Sturm und Drang" era. Herr Mantzius is a little unfair to our comedy of the eighteenth century, and indulges, we venture to think, in rather hasty generalizations when he declares that "none" of Dryden's plays "bears the stamp of a truly poetic mind," and talks of Wycherley, Congreve, and Vanbrugh as "amateurs." Our old comedy writers seem to annoy him by their lack of "architectonic mastership." But surely they may fall short of Molière in this respect, and yet be admired for the unceasing volleys of their wit, and for the merits of particular scenes and characters. Here we seem to strike upon a certain defect of sympathy in an historian who is otherwise admirably catholic in his taste.

THE WEEK.

HIS MAJESTY'S.—The School for Scandal. It is impossible for any theatrical manager nowadays to satisfy everybody over a revival of 'The School for Scandal.' On the one hand, he cannot get together a company of artists on all of whom he can rely to play their parts in the traditional manner; for while veterans may be found for the more mature characters, the Charles Surfaces and Lady Teazles of one decade grow too old for another, and young blood must therefore be infused into any cast which is to secure illusion in the matter of physical appearance. Yet every change of this sort involves some slight loss in the simulation of old-fashioned manners and diction.

On the other hand, no modern producer of Sheridan's comedy can take the risk of discarding tradition altogether and letting his players handle the piece as though it had never been presented before. Besides offending the praisers of past time, the experienced theatregoers who always form a large section of the patrons of old comedy, such a policy would sacrifice many graces and charms which go to make the eighteenth-century tone of the play, and would abandon, without sufficient compensation, all the experience collected and handed down by generations of actors. So every revival is bound to be a compromise and show an incongruity between the older and younger members of the cast.

Mr. Tree's production is a case in point. At His Majesty's just now are to be discovered some of the most revered and longest-trained actors we possess, and by their side are two or three of the most promising and youthful of the new generation. On the whole, the honours fall to the elder school; but the moderns supply at least one performance which is worthy of such companionship. It is difficult to imagine a more genial, more robustly sentimental Sir Oliver than that of Mr. Henry Neville, a famous Charles Surface of other days. Nor, though his voice has grown a little thin, could we have more finished phrasing or more neatly calculated effects than those Mr. Hermann Vezin secures as Rowley. No less sure in its quiet humour is the work of another veteran, Mr. Lionel Brough, in the part of Moses; while Mr. Edward Terry's Crabtree is delightfully in the picture. This is just the point in which Mr. H. V. Esmond slightly errs as Sir Benjamin Backbite. His sketch of the fop is wonderfully elaborated, but elaborated at the expense of his stage comrades, so that this Sir Benjamin stands out too much from the canvas. No such fault can be imputed to the Lady Sneerwell, Miss Ellis Jeffreys. The actress is almost too self-effacing, adopts perhaps rather too gentle a manner to suggest the widow's acidity of temper, just as Miss Suzanne Sheldon, in the character of Mrs. Candour, is almost too jolly and jovial for malice. Mr. Tree's performance, like that of Miss Sheldon or Miss Jeffreys, stands half-way between the old school and the new. No more personable Sir Peter has ever graced our stage; with such a knight one can be hopeful of Lady Teazle's final reconciliation. But a price has to be paid for making the husband younger than Sheridan intended. Fifty in the eighteenth century was a much older age than it is to-day, and the playwright certainly hinted at a suggestion of senility in Sir Peter—to contrast with Lady Teazle's youthfulness—which Mr. Tree's reading fails to furnish. In other respects we find a deliberate and sententious, nay almost phlegmatic, rather than explosive Sir Peter.

For one thing the playgoer of to-day owes Mr. Tree a debt of gratitude, and that is for getting an atmosphere of youth into the piece, for insisting that Lady Teazle and the two brothers Surface shall have young representatives. But, alas! just as few actresses are competent to take up the part of Juliet till they are too old to look it, so one might almost say of Sheridan's heroine. Miss Marie Löhr's Lady Teazle is not merely a girl, but a child, and so, while we get the earlier comedy scenes carried through with refreshing vivacity and ingenuousness, this cherry-checked, rustic-looking girl seems out of place in the moments wherein the woman of the world is permitted to reveal herself. This is not the woman who could warn Joseph Surface that he is to have no more chances of making protestations to Maria; addressed to such a childish Lady Teazle, Joseph's overtures in the screen scene seem little short of indecent; while the climax of the scene, with such an obviously innocent heroine, is robbed of its force, and Miss Löhr's rather juvenile pathos in the appeal to Sir Peter does not help matters. Ten years later a different tale may have to be told. At present the clever young actress would do better as Maria, a part in which Miss Dagmar Wiehe is not satisfactory. Mr. Basil Gill as Joseph Surface lacks any pretence at subtlety, but delivers all the sentiments with unction; he is more like a good young man feigning to be wicked than a hypocrite mouthing morality. The one contribution of the younger school which can be praised almost unreservedly is the Charles Surface of Mr. Robert Loraine. Here are high spirits, bravado, dare-devilry—the right mercurial temper. Here also is the pace at which old comedy should be taken. There are modern touches in Mr. Loraine's Charles, notably in his softening down of the final speeches in the screen scene. Here, to twentieth-century ideas, Charles behaves like a cad, but an actor has no right to defy Sheridan's own view of the character. This moment apart, Mr. Loraine's Charles Surface is worthy to be set beside his Young Marlowe.

Of the beauty of the setting it is scarcely necessary to speak. There is not a single article of furniture on the stage which has not been chosen with consummate taste, while both the pictures of Lady Sneerwell's drawing-room and Sir Peter's town house sum up admirably the best features of eighteenth-century architecture.

COURT.—As You Like It.

NEGATIVE terms best describe the rendering of 'As you Like It,' given at the Court as the opening enterprise of Miss Fay Davis and Mr. Gerald Lawrence's Shakespearean season. The play is not "let down," the acting, though uninspired, is "not at all bad." The company shows no exceeding merit, but can be credited with painstaking work. The experiment is not rendered the easier by tapestries (together with dwarf trees to represent the Forest of Arden) being used in place of scenery. Eager as one may be to recognize the enthusiasm and earnestness of Miss Davis and her husband, it would be sheer flattery to say that their efforts or those of their colleagues catch the spirit of Shakespeare, the feeling for the open air, or the idea of idyllic love. Mr. Haviland is a sound actor, but his Clown would be improved by a lighter and more humorous touch. Mr. Will Dennis's delivery of the "Seven Ages" speech is intelligent without being remarkable. Mr. Lawrence proves a handsome Orlando, but mistakes resonant elocution for fervour, and almost consistently over-emphasizes his lines. Miss Davis has daintiness and refinement, but she gives us a demure, a sedate, and grave Rosalind, with sudden bursts into gaiety that do not seem spontaneous. Winsome she is, but scarcely fathoms deep in love; serious she only too often is, but never passionate.

TERRY'S.—The Artful Miss Dearing: a Comedy in Three Acts. By Arthur Law.

A COMEDY its author calls this play, whereas if it is anything it is a farce, and a farce of extraordinary incoherence, for Mr. Law has not known how to use his material. He takes us to the home of an impoverished aristocrat dependent for money, apparently, on loans from an inept youth who wishes to be his son-in-law, while his wife augments the family resources by launching into society a rich but vulgar widow. A nephew of his has committed forgery, and induced another man—his double—for a round sum with which the forger has made off, to endure his term of imprisonment. On "coming out" the double resolves to impersonate this black sheep, but is discovered by the family governess, who consents, for a consideration, to act as his confederate. Mr. Law brings together these characters—a shabby set, it will be seen—but he makes nothing out of their meetings. In a vague way the father and mother plan a marriage between their daughter and her supposed cousin. In a vague way the governess, who has tricks of using her eyes languishingly and putting her innocent-seeming face near that of any man she is talking to, throws herself at the head of her young charge's lover. But nothing comes of either her or her stage colleague's behaviour till at the end of the second act Mr. Law seems to think it time he got some plot into his play. So he makes a peer die abroad, with the result that the pseudo-hero is hailed as heir to the title. Finally we are plunged into a long rigmarole concerned with a marriage the dead peer had contracted with the widow, by virtue of which the masquerader turns out, after all, to be claiming what is only his due. By this time the governess thinks her confederate worth marrying, and her charge's parents are content, on their part, with their little daughter's choice. So ends a weak play, the wit of which is sadly to seek, and the story of which would never hold the audience but for the cleverness with which Miss Annie Hughes repeats her old 'Country Mouse' success in the character of the intriguing governess.

Dramatic Gossip.

THE ENGLISH DRAMA SOCIETY will present at the Fortune Playhouse on the afternoons of the 26th, 27th, 29th, and 30th inst., 'Judas,' a dramatic poem by the Hon. Eleanor Norton; 'The Song of Songs,' with Miss Isabel Roland as the Shulamite; and 'Job,' adapted from the Revised Version by Mr. Nugent Monck.

IN a recent Revue Bleue M. Paul Flat has an interesting account of a play on 'Beethoven' by M. René Fauchois at the Odéon. The general atmosphere is one of gloom, Giuletta Guicciardini being a light beauty unworthy of the master. Bettina Brentano, however, brings to Beethoven the tribute of Goethe's admiration, and nine sisters, symbols of the nine symphonies, soothe his dying hours. The success of the play has, apparently, been sufficient to suggest a 'Chopin' and a 'Berlioz' on similar lines.

THE bookings for the Stratford festival are good, and the town promises to be very full during the three weeks, in spite of the rival commemoration in London. It is to be decorated as it was last year, and it is hoped that the weather will be more favourable. Old English sports are to be included in the attractions. Many London actors are co-operating with Mr. Benson in order to make a successful season, and some rarely performed plays are included in the list. One new feature this season is to be a lecture on 'Cymbeline' in the Theatre.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—D. C.—J. P. B.—J. J. F.—C. B.—O. A.—E. C. Y.—N. M.—Received.
L. N.—Not suitable for us.

WE cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

NO notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

WE do not undertake to give the value of books, china, pictures, &c.

THE ATHENÆUM,

PRICE THREEPENCE.

Is published every FRIDAY in time for the Afternoon Mails. Terms of Subscription, free by post to all parts of the United Kingdom: For Six Months, 7s. 8d.; for Twelve Months, 15s. 3d. For the Continent and all places within the Postal Union: For Six Months, 9s.; for Twelve Months, 18s., commencing from any date, payable in advance to

JOHN C. FRANCIS,

Athenæum Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
AUTHORS' AGENTS	454
AUTOTYPE CO.	454
BELL & SONS	476
BISHOP'S VARALETES	478
BOULGER	479
CATALOGUES	478
CHATTO & WINDUS	479
CONSTABLE & CO.	476
DUCKWORTH & CO.	477
EDUCATIONAL	453
EXHIBITIONS	453
INSURANCE COMPANIES	478
LECTURES	453
LONGMANS & CO.	456
MACMILLAN & CO.	456, 479
MAGAZINES, &c.	478
MISCELLANEOUS	453
PRINTERS	454
PUTNAM'S SONS	480
REBMAN	479
RICHARDS	455
SALES BY AUCTION	454
SHIPPING	478
SITUATIONS VACANT	453
SITUATIONS WANTED	453
SOCIETIES	453
SONNENSCHNEIN & CO.	456
TYPE-WRITERS, &c.	454

BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

"The new series of Bohn's Libraries, on which judicious bookbuyers have long learned to keep a careful eye."—Athenæum.

This well-known Series now includes upwards of 800 Volumes of Standard Works in English Literature, and Translations from the Classics and all the Modern Languages on

HISTORY
BIOGRAPHY
ARCHÆOLOGY
THEOLOGY
TOPOGRAPHY
ANTIQUITIES

SCIENCE NATURAL HISTORY
PHILOSOPHY
POETRY
ART
FICTION

With Dictionaries and other Books of Reference. Price 3s. 6d. or 5s. per Volume (with exceptions).

A Detailed Catalogue of the Libraries will be sent on application.

NEW AND FORTHCOMING VOLUMES.

COMPLETION OF
MR. TEMPLE SCOTT'S EDITION OF SWIFT.

With numerous Portraits and Facsimiles.

In 12 vols, 5s. each.

THE PROSE WORKS OF JONATHAN SWIFT.

Edited by TEMPLE SCOTT. With an Introduction by the Right Hon. W. E. H. LECKY, M.P.

Just published, Vol. XII., completing the Edition. Bibliography and Full Index, with Essays on the Portraits of Swift and Stella by the Right Hon. Sir FREDERICK FAULKNER, K.C., and on the Relations between Swift and Stella by the Very Rev. J. H. BERNARD, D.D., Dean of St. Patrick's. With 2 Portraits and a View of Woodpark.

NOW READY, 2 vols, 3s. 6d. each.

GOETHE'S AUTOBIOGRAPHY.

('POETRY AND TRUTH FROM MY OWN LIFE.')

A Revised Translation by M. STEELE-SMITH (Head Lecturer in Modern Languages at Newnham College, Cambridge). With an Introduction and Bibliography by KARL BREUL, Litt.D. Ph.D.

READY SHORTLY.

MORE'S UTOPIA.

Robinson's Translations of the 'Utopia,' together with Roper's Life of Sir Thomas More, and More's Letters to Margaret Roper and others. Edited, with Notes, by GEORGE SAMPSON.

NOW READY, 3 vols, small post 8vo, 3s. 6d. each.

A HISTORY OF THE POPES.

By LEOPOLD VON RANKE. Translated by E. FOSTER. New Edition, Revised by G. R. DENNIS, B.A.

* * * This edition has been revised throughout by the latest German editions, the chapters on Pius IX. and the Vatican Council have been translated for the first time, and a new and very full Index has been added.

A NEW TRANSLATION OF HOMER'S ILIAD.

In 2 vols, 5s. each.

Vol. I., containing Books I.-XII., in the Press.

THE ILIAD OF HOMER.

Translated into English Prose by E. H. BLAKENEY, M.A., Head Master of the King's School, Ely.

SPECIAL OFFER.

Messrs. Bell have made arrangements to supply selections of 100 or 50 volumes from these famous Libraries, for £11 11s. or £6 6s. net respectively. The volumes may be selected without any restriction from the full list of the Libraries.

WRITE FOR FULL PARTICULARS.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

CONSTABLE'S BOOKS

GLIMPSES OF THE TWENTIES.

By WILLIAM TOYNBEE, Author of 'Vignettes of the Regency.' With Photogravure Frontispiece and 24 Plates. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

Glasgow Herald.—"Mr. Toynbee's absorbingly interesting book is in effect a complete review of English Court and political history during the period from the last days of George III. to the death of George IV."

ECONOMIC HERESIES:

Being an Unorthodox Attempt to Appreciate the Economic Problems presented by 'Things as They Are.' By Sir NATHANIEL NATHAN. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"The author's general attitude may be gathered from his frank recognition that the authority of the professional economists has completely broken down, and that the orthodox teaching requires a thorough-going reconstruction.... A distinctly valuable contribution to the thought of the day."

SIX MASTERS IN DISILLUSION.

By ALGAR THOROLD. Penetrating Studies of Anatole France, Huysmans, Maeterlinck, Fontenelle, Mérimée, and Fabre. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

Scotsman.—"A book of lively interest for readers who like to cultivate a conscious recognition of new intellectual tendencies in modern thought."

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS OF WAGNER.

By ANGELO NEUMANN. With 4 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

Daily Telegraph.—"Call no man a perfect Wagnerite till he has read and digested this addition to Wagnerian literature.... this delightful and interesting book."

THE VALLEY OF SHADOWS.

By FRANCIS GRIERSON, Author of 'Modern Mysticism,' and 'The Celtic Temperament.' Demy 8vo, 6s. net.

Aberdeen Free Press.—"He has set down the recollections of an eventful youth with the rare charm that can be wielded only by the accomplished essayist."

Nation.—"A genuine document of much historical interest and artistic force.... One scarcely knows whether to admire most the extraordinary tenacity of his memory, or the living freshness of his vivid pictures."

AENEAS SILVIUS—Pius II.

Orator, Man of Letters, Statesman, and Pope.

By WILLIAM BOULTING. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

Times.—"A welcome attempt by a writer of taste and judgment to supply an English biography of the great mediaeval scholar (1405-1454), whose papacy is memorable for his efforts to form an armed confederation of Christian princes to resist the Turk."

IN THE DAYS OF THE COUNCILS.

A Sketch of the Life and Times of Baldassare Cossa (afterwards Pope John the Twenty-third). By EUSTACE J. KITTS. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

Aberdeen Free Press.—"It is most interesting reading, and throws a clear light on an obscure and confused period of European history."

AN HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION TO THE MARPRELATE TRACTS.

A Chapter of the Evolution of Religious and Civil Liberty in England. By WILLIAM PIERCE. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

The Rev. C. SILVESTER HORNE says, in the British Weekly.—"The unsolved problem of Martin's personality lends perennial interest to the drama in which he played so conspicuous and influential a part. This book, which is admirably printed, is the first worthy discussion of a great controversy. We heartily congratulate Mr. Pierce on a notable success, and we urge all our readers who are interested in our history to add this book to their libraries."

UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATION.

By CHARLES W. ELIOT, Crown 8vo, 6s. net.
Oxford Magazine.—"Of special interest and value in Oxford at the present time."

SIX-SHILLING NOVELS

PRISCILLA AND CHARYBDIS.

By F. FRANKFORT MOORE, Author of 'The Jessamy Bride,' &c.

Morning Leader.—"We commend 'Priscilla and Charybdis,' to all who want plain, unaffected pleasure of a kind not common enough in an age of careless or boring fiction."

THE STORY OF THYRZA.

By ALICE BROWN, Author of 'Rose Macleod,' &c.
Liverpool Daily Post.—"A charming story, a triumph of simple, sincere, and unaffected art."

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO. LTD.,
10, Orange Street, London, W.C.

New and Forthcoming Books from DUCKWORTH & CO.'S List of Publications

Carotti's History of Art.

Vol. I., ANCIENT ART, now ready.
Vol. II., THE MIDDLE AGES, now ready.

A History of Art, to be completed in four volumes, from the Earliest Times to the Present Day.

By Dr. GIULIO CAROTTI of the Royal Academy in Milan and the Royal University of Rome.
Edited by Mrs. S. ARTHUR STRONG, LL.D.
With several hundred Illustrations in each volume.
Small crown 8vo, 5s. net a volume.
Sold separately.

Great Actors of the Eighteenth Century.

By CARL MANTZIUS.
Being Vol. V. of 'A History of Theatrical Art.'
With 73 Illustrations, royal 8vo, 10s. net.

A NOVEL OF THE OPEN AIR.

Miss Rosamond Napier's first work is being highly praised by the leading critical journals. The author reveals a kinship with nature which must ensure her an enthusiastic reception from all those to whom sun, wind, rain, and the scent of the earth mean much.

The Heart of a Gypsy.

By ROSAMOND NAPIER.
Crown 8vo. 360 pages. 6s.

"A touching and human story."—TIMES.
"This clever and thoughtful book."—ACADEMY.
"Imaginative and original work."—OBSERVER.
"Poetic and mystic imagination."
MORNING POST.
"A living and poignant piece of work."
OUTLOOK K.

The Infamous John Friend.

A NOVEL.
By Mrs. R. S. GARNETT.
Crown 8vo, 6s. [Shortly.]

The Rubaiyat of Umar Khayyam.

FITZGERALD'S SECOND EDITION.
Edited by EDWARD HERON ALLEN.
Crown 4to, 10s. 6d. net.

The Scientific Feeding of Animals.

By O. KELLNER.
Translated by W. GOODWIN, B.Sc. Ph.D.
404 pages, crown 8vo, 6s. net.
Prospectus can be had.

The Country Month by Month.

By J. A. OWEN and Prof. G. S. BOULGER.
A NEW EDITION.
With Notes by the late LORD LILFORD.
20 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 6s. net.
[Shortly.]

South American Sketches.

By W. H. HUDSON.
A RE-ISSUE.
Cloth, crown 8vo, 1s. net.

R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM'S NEW VOLUME. Faith.

By R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM.
Crown 8vo, 6s.
"One realises that this author stands out from among his fellows, since Stevenson died, as the embodiment of one thing in literature.....that rare thing, charm..... Full of pleasing whimsicality, of literary distinction, of quaint, ironical philosophyfor all readers who can appreciate literary grace and ironical humour."
ATHENÆUM.

Essays in Freedom.

By H. W. NEVINSON.
Large crown 8vo, 6s. [Shortly.]

Blake.

By BASIL DE SELINCOURT.
With 40 Illustrations. Pott 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.
[The Library of Art.]

Great Masters of Dutch and Flemish Painting.

By Dr. W. BODE.
39 Plates. Pott 4to, IX. 358 pages,
7s. 6d. net.
Write for Prospectus of this important work.

Memoirs of a Surrey Labourer.

By GEORGE BOURNE.
NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.
Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.
[March 26.]

JOHN GALSWORTHY'S PLAYS.

Strife. Joy. The Silver Box.

In One Volume. 6s.
 Now in great demand at the Booksellers'.

Makers of Our Clothes.

A Case for Trade Boards.
By Mrs. CARL MEYER
and
CLEMENTINA BLACK.
Demy 8vo, 5s. net.

Yachting on the Pacific.

By ALEXANDER MANN.
With a Portrait. Large crown 8vo, 6s.
[Immediately.]

Catalogues.

MAGGS BROS.,

109, Strand, London, W.C.

DEALERS IN RARE AND VALUABLE BOOKS
PRINTS, AND AUTOGRAPHS.

CATALOGUES sent post free to all parts of the World

Export Orders Solicited.

Telegraphic and Cable Address: "Bibliolite, London."

Telephone: "Gerrard 4664."

THE following CATALOGUES of portions of B. H. BLACKWELL'S Stock are in active preparation, and will be issued shortly:—

CXXXII. EUROPEAN PHILOLOGY, including
ANGLO-SAXON—Gothic—Old, Middle, and New English—
British Dialects—Romance Languages, &c.

CXXXIII. HISTORY AND LITERATURE OF INDIA AND THE FAR EAST, including interesting items from the LIBRARY of the late CUTBERT SHIELDS,
M.A. Oxon; Duplicates from an important Oriental Library, &c.

CXXXIV. BRITISH TOPOGRAPHY AND LOCAL HISTORY, containing about 2,000 items, many of exceptional interest.

50 and 51, BROAD STREET, OXFORD.

GLAISHER'S REMAINDER BOOK
CATALOGUE

For MARCH (No. 363).

NOW READY, and will be forwarded on application.

It comprises a specially attractive Selection of Publishers' Remainders, including many Good Bargains

WILLIAM GLAISHER, LTD.,

Booksellers, 265, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE
BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.—Yellow Book, 13 vols. 2l. 10s.; Trigg's Art Garden
Design, Italy, 3½ guineas for 2ls.; E. Fitzgerald's Works, 7 vols. 3l. 3s.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON, Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W.
Established upwards of a Century.

CATALOGUE No. 50—Drawings by Turner,
Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour Prints—Illustrated
Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

Magazines, &c.

APRIL NUMBER READY, 2s. 6d. net; 2s. 9d. post free.

THE HIBBERT JOURNAL.

Principal Contents.

CREDO.

IS THERE A COMMON CHRISTIANITY? Prof. J. H. Muirhead.
CHRISTIANITY AMONG THE RELIGIONS. John Wright Buckbam, D.D.

ISLAM, THE RELIGION OF COMMON SENSE. Ibn Ishāk.

THE MESSAGE OF MR. G. K. CHESTERTON. Rev. John A.
Hutton, M.A.

THE PHILOSOPHY OF BERGSON. Prof. William James.

THE SOCIAL CONSCIENCE OF THE FUTURE. II. The New Righteousness. Miss Vida Scudder.THE INSUFFICIENCY OF SOCIAL RIGHTEOUSNESS AS A MORAL IDEAL. Rev. P. T. Forsyth, D.D.

THE OVER-EMPHASIS OF SIN. Rev. Alexander Brown.

THE MESSAGE OF MODERN MATHEMATICS TO THEOLOGY.
Prof. Cassius J. Keyser, Ph.D.CHRISTIANITY AND THE EMPIRE IN CHINA. Rev. P. J.
MacLagan, M.A. D.Phil.VARIATIONS BETWEEN MATTHEW AND MARK. Rev. B. H.
Alford, M.A.ON TWO DISLOCATIONS IN JOHN'S GOSPEL. Rev. F. J. Paul.
With a number of Discussions, Signed Reviews, and Bibliography of Recent Theological and Philosophical Literature.WILLIAMS & NORGATE, 14, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine
Street, London, W.C., April 17, contains:—

ELNE: WITH ILLUSTRATIONS.

THE TRADE BOARDS BILL.

THE L.C.C. BUDGET.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY EXTENSION.

CARPENTERS' HALL LECTURES.

THE ARCHITECTS' TECHNICAL BUREAU.

ILLUSTRATIONS:

LATE RENAISSANCE CHURCHES OF LONDON.—IV.
ST. GEORGE'S BLOOMSBURY.

LLOYDS BANK, WEALDSTONE.

"GRANT'S WOOD," HORSHAM, SUSSEX.

"THE LODGE," PLAYDEN, SUSSEX.

STUDY OF A MANSION ON MEDIEVAL LINES.

BROWNE'S HOSPITAL, STAMFORD.

PULPIT IN LUTHERAN CHURCH, CAPETOWN.

From Offices as above (4d., by post 4½d.), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all Newsagents

Shipping.

P. & O.

PLEASURE CRUISES FROM MARSEILLES.

(Rail and Steamship connexions from London.)S.Y.
VECTIS

No. 3.—April 22 to May 20.

VENICE, DALMATIA,
CORFU, NAPLES,
SICILY, VILLEFRANCHE, &c.
Fares from 30 Guineas.

No. 4.—May 21 to June 12.

NAPLES, ALGIERS, LISBON, AND LONDON.

Fares from 20 Guineas.

Special Terms for Cruises 3 & 4 in conjunction.

From London and Leith.

No. 5.—July 1 to July 27.

SPITZBERGEN, NORWAY, &c.

Fares from 30 Guineas.

No. 6.—July 29 to August 11.

No. 7.—August 13 to August 26.

THE NORWEGIAN FJORDS.

Fares from 12 Guineas.

BY

P. & O. CRUISING YACHT VECTIS,
6,000 tons, 6,000 h.p.For Passage, Illustrated Handbooks, and all information,
apply Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Company, Northumberland Avenue, W.C., or 122, Leadenhall
Street, E.C., London.

Insurance Companies.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS, SICKNESS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY, BURGLARY, AND
FIDELITY GUARANTEE RISKS

INSURED AGAINST BY THE

RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE CO.

Capital (fully subscribed), £1,600,000. Claims paid, £5,600,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

A. VIAN, Secretary.

NATIONAL

PROVIDENT

INSTITUTION

FOR

MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.

Established 1835.

ASSURANCE AND INVESTMENT.

Write for Leaflet on net cost of Endowment Assurances,

48, Gracechurch Street, London, E.C.

Applications for Agencies invited.

DO YOUR FEET ACHE? If so, use Marshall's
Foot Tonic, "PEDESTRIAN." For all relaxed, swollen, tender conditions its action is simply magical; it cools, comforts, and enables the foot to resist boot pressure. A trial will convince. 1s. 3d. and
2s. 6d. per bottle, post free.—MARSHALL & CO., 70A, Basinghall
Street, E.C.

HIGHEST AWARDS.

CORK, 1883. LIVERPOOL, 1886. PARIS, 1886. ADELAIDE, 1887.

PARIS, 1889. CHICAGO, 1893. PARIS, 1900. ST. LOUIS, 1904.

FRANCO-BRITISH, 1908.

OLD BUSHMILLS.

Have you tried this—the Prize-Winning Whisky?

From all Wine Merchants.

Address of nearest Agent sent on application.

"OLD BUSHMILLS" DISTILLERY CO., LTD.,

20, Mark Lane, E.C.

HOW TO RECOGNISE
GOUTY AILMENTS.

The mistaken notion prevails somewhat extensively that gout is an ailment strictly confined to old gentlemen who have led lives of ease and indulgence, and upon whose great toe the arthritic demon lays his hold in just retribution.

Such is the common misconception of gout, and a very serious misconception it is. As a matter of fact, no class of ailments has so many widely different forms as the class which has its origin in uric acid. It is only one form which affects the toe and other small joints, and this form is not by any means the most prevalent one. There are also, to name the

COMMONEST URIC ACID DISEASES, rheumatic gout, and gouty rheumatism (pain, inflammation, stiffness, and swellings, chiefly in the joints); gouty eczema (affecting the skin);

lumbago (persistent and intense pain in the loins); sciatica (acute pain extending from hips down thigh and knee, often causing lameness); stone and gravel (crystalline uratic deposits causing agonising pains and prostrating illness); and neuritis (numbness or tingling in the muscles of the arm, developing into very severe pain).

Now, it is an undeniable fact—a fact which physicians are laying more stress upon daily—that none of these ailments, whether hereditary or acquired, could possibly reach their severest forms if the right steps were taken at the first signs of their approach.

The presence of uric acid in all parts of the system is evident when one begins to suffer from pain and fullness after meals, indigestion, flatulence and heartburn; when the spirits are low, and the limbs often cold and numb; when the temper becomes irritable, when little pains and swellings trouble one, and there is "tingling" or stiffness in the muscles; and shortly afterwards, when there are irritation and burning of the skin and small lumps about the joints, outer rim of ear, or eyelids. As soon as such symptoms do appear it is certainly urgent that the person affected should take a uric acid eliminant.

Whether you suffer from the earliest stage of uric acid trouble—the acidity, heartburn, and flatulence stage—or whether you are a victim to the most chronic phase of the worst uric acid disease, the remedy you need is Bishop's Vara-lettes.

It is absolutely essential to employ this remedy because it is the only one which will rid the whole system of uric acid and uratic deposits; it is, in fact, the one remedy known to science which has the power of penetrating to every part of the system and removing the pain-causing substances therefrom.

If you have not passed the first stages of uric acid trouble do not wait until excruciating gouty pain comes to warn you that you need Bishop's Varalettes. Take them now.

A BOOKLET FOR THE GOUTY.

Bishop's booklet contains a complete dietary for the gouty subject. Not the least valuable part of the book is the conclusive manner in which it proves to you why Bishop's Varalettes fulfill all the demands which experience can make of a remedy for any gouty ailment—tells you how, when Bishop's Varalettes are dissolved and taken in any liquid, they are absorbed right into the blood and penetrate with it to the innermost recesses of tissues, muscles, organs, and joints, dissolving and removing every particle of uric acid and urates.

A copy of this valuable booklet will be sent you free on receipt of your name and address by Alfred Bishop, Ltd., Manufacturing Chemists
(Established 1857), 48, Spelman Street London,
N.E. Please ask for Booklet V.

Bishop's Varalettes are small, white, tasteless, and effervescent, and may be dissolved immediately and taken in any liquid without the slightest inconvenience. Of all chemists, 1s., 2s., and 5s. (25 days' treatment), or from the Makers, as above.

Bishop's Varalettes may be had of the leading chemists in every country. Our principal general Agents abroad are:—
AUSTRALIA.—Potter & Birks, 1½, Macquarie Place,
Sydney, N.S.W.

INDIA.—Mr. W. Moore, c/o Grindlay Groom & Co., Bombay.

UNITED STATES.—Lehn & Fink, 120, William Street,
New York.

SPAIN.—Foye y Gimenez, Calle Gerona, 4 pral, Barcelona.

FRANCE.—Roberts et Cie, 5, Rue de la Paix, Paris.

RUSSIA.—Mr. F. Brempel, Serpoukhovskaya Street, 17,
St. Petersburg.

MR. SWINBURNE'S WORKS.

MR. SWINBURNE'S COLLECTED POEMS.

In 6 vols. crown 8vo, 36s. net the Set.

SELECTIONS FROM MR. SWINBURNE'S
WORKS. Fcap. 8vo, 6s.

THE QUEEN MOTHER; and ROSAMOND.
Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

ATALANTA IN CALYDON. Crown 8vo, 6s.

CHASTELARD: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 7s.

POEMS AND BALLADS. FIRST SERIES.
Crown 8vo, 9s.

POEMS AND BALLADS. SECOND SERIES.
Crown 8vo, 9s.

POEMS AND BALLADS. THIRD SERIES.
Crown 8vo, 7s.

SONGS BEFORE SUNRISE. Crown 8vo,
10s. 6d.

BOTHWELL: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 12s. 6d.

SONGS OF TWO NATIONS. Crown 8vo, 6s.

GEORGE CHAPMAN. (In Vol. II. of G.
Chapman's Works.) Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

ESSAYS AND STUDIES. Crown 8vo, 12s.

ERECHTHEUS: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A NOTE ON CHARLOTTE BRONTË. Crown
8vo, 6s.

A STUDY OF SHAKESPEARE. Crown 8vo, 8s.

MR. SWINBURNE'S TRAGEDIES.

In 5 vols. crown 8vo, 30s. net the Set.

SONGS OF THE SPRINGTIDES. Crown 8vo, 6s.

STUDIES IN SONG. Crown 8vo, 7s.

MARY STUART: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 8s.

TRISTRAM OF LYONESSE. Crown 8vo, 9s.

A CENTURY OF ROUNDELS. 4to, 8s.

A MIDSUMMER HOLIDAY. Crown 8vo, 7s.

MARINO FALIERO: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A STUDY OF VICTOR HUGO. Crown 8vo, 6s.

MISCELLANIES. Crown 8vo, 12s.

LOCRINE: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A STUDY OF BEN JONSON. Crown 8vo, 7s.

THE SISTERS: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 7s.

ASTROPHEL, &c. Crown 8vo, 7s.

STUDIES IN PROSE AND POETRY. Crown 8vo, 9s.

THE TALE OF BALEN. Crown 8vo, 7s.

ROSAMUND, QUEEN OF THE LOMBARDS:
a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A CHANNEL PASSAGE. Crown 8vo, 7s.

LOVE'S CROSS-CURRENTS. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

WILLIAM BLAKE. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

THE DUKE OF GANDIA. Crown 8vo, 5s.

THE AGE OF SHAKESPEARE. Crown 8vo,
6s. net.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

NOW READY.

THE SECOND AND CONCLUDING PART OF THE HISTORY OF BELGIUM.

Waterloo to the Death of Leopold I.

By DEMETRIUS C. BOULGER.

21 Full-Page Portraits. 450 pages, 8vo, gilt top, price 18s. net.

A few Copies of Part I. remain.

Published by THE AUTHOR, to whom Orders may be sent, at 12, Bloomsbury Square, London, W.C.

TO BE PUBLISHED ON WEDNESDAY APRIL 21. In crown 8vo, 6s.

A REMARKABLE NOVEL OF HIGH LITERARY QUALITIES!

THE ROMANCE OF A NUN.

By ALIX KING, Author of 'The Little Novice.'

NOTE.—A LEADING LITERARY CRITIC, who has read the MS., TELLS US THERE HAS BEEN NOTHING FINER SINCE OLIVE SCHREINER'S 'STORY OF AN AFRICAN FARM.' If this be so, it will be THE BOOK NOT OF THIS SEASON ONLY, BUT OF MANY SEASONS.

* * * Orders should be placed at once.

London: REBMAN, LTD., 129, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.C.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE:

Its Past, its Present, and its Future.

Edited by A. F. POLLARD, M.A.

Pp. 896, 5s. net.

Fifteen Special Contributors, and over a Hundred Authorities in all parts of the Empire have collaborated in its production.

LEAGUE OF THE EMPIRE,

Caxton Hall, Westminster; and all Booksellers.

JUST PUBLISHED, price 4s. 6d. net.

THE INFLUENCE OF HEREDITY ON DISEASE.

WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO TUBERCULOSIS, CANCER, AND DISEASES OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

A Discussion opened at the Royal Society of Medicine by Sir
WILLIAM S. CHURCH, Bart. K.C.B. M.D.; Sir WILLIAM R.
GOWERS, M.D. F.R.S. (Diseases of the Nervous System); ARTHUR
LATHAM, M.D. (Tuberculosis); and E. F. BASHFORD, M.D.
(Cancer).

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 39 Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

WORKS BY THE LATE F. MARION CRAWFORD.

NEW NOVEL READY MAY 4.

THE WHITE SISTER

A STORY OF ROME.

Crown 8vo, 6s.

UNIFORM EDITION OF THE NOVELS.

Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. each.

MR. ISAACS: a Tale of Modern India. Also sewed 6d.

DOCTOR CLAUDIUS: a True Story.

ROMAN SINGER. Also sewed 6d.

ZOROASTER.

TALE OF A LONELY PARISH.

MARZIO'S CRUCIFIX. Also sewed 6d.

PAUL PATOFF.

WITH THE IMMORTALS.

GREIFENSTEIN.

SANT' ILARIO.

CIGARETTE - MAKER'S ROMANCE. Also
sewed 6d.

KHALED: a Tale of Arabia.

WITCH OF PRAGUE.

THREE FATES.

DON ORSINO.

CHILDREN OF THE KING.

PIETRO GHISLERI.

MARION DANCHE: a Story without Comment.

KATHARINE LAUDERDALE.

RALSTONS.

CASA BRACCIO.

ADAM JOHNSTONE'S SON.

TAQUISARA. A Novel.

ROSE OF YESTERDAY.

CORLEONE.

VIA CRUCIS: a Romance of the Second Crusade.

IN THE PALACE OF THE KING.

MARIETTA: a Maid of Venice.

CECILIA: a Story of Modern Rome.

THE HEART OF ROME.

WHOSOEVER SHALL OFFEND . . .

SOPRANO: a Portrait.

A LADY OF ROME. Crown 8vo, 6s.

ARETHUSA. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

THE PRIMADONNA. A Sequel to 'Soprano.' Crown
8vo, 6s.

THE DIVA'S RUBY. A Sequel to 'The Primadonna' and to 'Soprano.' Crown 8vo, 6s.

A SINGER'S TRILOGY: Soprano, The Primadonna, The Diva's Ruby. 3 vols. Limp leather, in a cloth box, 10s. 6d. net.

THE LITTLE CITY OF HOPE. A Christmas
Story. Globe 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

THE LITTLE CITY OF HOPE. With Illustrations in Colour by A. S. HARTRICK. 8vo, 5s. net.

MAN OVERBOARD! Pott 8vo, 2s. net.

LOVE IN IDLENESS. A Bar Harbour Tale.
Fcap. 8vo, 2s.

AVE ROMA IMMORTALIS. With Illustrations.
New Edition. Extra crown 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

SOUTHERN ITALY AND SICILY, AND RULERS OF THE SOUTH. Illustrated. Extra
crown 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

GLEANINGS FROM VENETIAN HISTORY.
With 225 Illustrations (including Photogravure Plates)
after Drawings by JOSEPH PENNELL. 2 vols.
Extra crown 8vo, 21s. net. Popular Edition. Illustrated. Extra crown 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS' LIST.

WHAT HAVE THE GREEKS DONE FOR MODERN CIVILIZATION? The Lowell Lectures of 1908-9. By Prof. JOHN PENTLAND MAHAFFY, C.V.O. Crown 8vo, cloth.

Contents.—Causes of Greek Pre-eminence—Greek Poetry—Greek Prose—Greek Art, Part I.—Greek Art, Part II.—Greek Science—Grammar, Logic, Mathematics, Medicine—Philosophy, Speculative and Practical, Theology—Politics and Sociology.

The volume consists of a series of papers in which this eminent scholar, who has all his life devoted himself to a study of things Hellenic, sums up concisely his conclusions regarding the influence of Greek civilization upon modern life. These lectures take a wide sweep, and present the author's conclusions regarding the modern world's political, social, literary, artistic, and philosophical heritage from the Greeks.

BARTHOLOMEW DE LAS CASAS: His Life, His Apostolate, and His Writings. By FRANCIS

AUGUSTUS MACNUTT. Illustrated. 8vo, cloth extra, 15s. net.

Las Casas, the sixteenth-century historian of early Spanish America, the devoted missionary, and the defender of the Indians who fared so ill at the hands of their Christian conquerors, is the subject of the biography entitled 'Bartholomew de las Casas,' by Francis Augustus MacNutt, whose translation of 'The Letters of Cortes,' with its comprehensive, original, and scholarly editorial equipment, has given him a high place among authorities on the history of early sixteenth-century America.

LIFE OF JOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH. By Sir C. HUBERT H. PARRY, Bart., M.A., Mus.Doc., D.C.L.

Fully illustrated. 8vo, cloth extra, gilt top, 12s. 6d. net.

Considering the importance of the man who is the subject of this life and the authority of Sir Hubert Parry as a critic and writer, no student of music can afford to be a stranger to this thorough and comprehensive work.

CHARACTERS AND EVENTS OF ROMAN HISTORY. From Cæsar to Nero (60 B.C.-70 A.D.). By

GUGLIELMO FERRERO, Author of 'The Greatness and Decline of Rome,' &c. 8vo, cloth.

Prof. Guglielmo Ferrero's work consists of a series of studies of the great men and great ladies of ancient Rome, and of critical moments and events in Roman History.

A NEW EDITION PRINTED FROM NEW PLATES.

THE WORKS OF THEODORE ROOSEVELT. Dakota Edition. Illustrated. 16 vols. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. each.

LIST OF VOLUMES.

THE NAVAL WAR OF 1812; or, the History of the United States Navy during the Last War with Great Britain. 2 vols.

AMERICAN IDEALS AND OTHER ESSAYS, SOCIAL AND POLITICAL. 2 vols.

ADDRESSES AND PRESIDENTIAL MESSAGES. 1902-1904. 2 vols. With an Introduction by HENRY CABOT LODGE.

THE WINNING OF THE WEST. 6 vols.

THE WILDERNESS HUNTER. 2 vols. With an Account of the Big Game of the United States and its Chase with Horse, Hound, and Rifle.

HUNTING TRIPS OF A RANCHMAN. 2 vols. Sketches of Sport on the Northern Cattle Plains. With numerous Engravings from Designs by Frost, Gifford, Beard, and Sandham.

* * Send for Special Circular concerning Mr. Roosevelt's Writings.

HEROES OF THE NATIONS.—Fully illustrated. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 5s. each.

FERNANDO CORTES AND HIS CONQUEST OF MEXICO, 1485-1547. By FRANCIS AUGUSTUS

MACNUTT, Author of 'Bartholomew de Las Casas,' Editor of the 'Letters of Cortes,' &c.

* * Descriptive Circular of previous 43 volumes will be sent on application.

POEMS OF EDGAR ALLAN POE. Small Paper Edition. 8vo, cloth extra, gilt top, 7s. 6d. net. This new edition of poems by the Author of 'The Raven' contains an Introduction by Prof. Richardson and many Illustrations by Mr. F. S. Coburn.

A PHYSICIAN TO THE SOUL. By HORATIO W. DRESSER, Author of 'The Power of Silence,' &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d.

THE ART OF NATURAL SLEEP. With Definite Directions for the Wholesome Cure of Sleeplessness.

Illustrated by Cases Treated. By LYMAN P. POWELL. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 2s. 6d.

A HISTORY OF MODERN BANKS OF ISSUE. With an Account of the Economical Crises of the Present Century. By CHARLES A. CONANT. Fourth Edition, Revised. With an Account of the Economic Crisis of 1907. 8vo, cloth, 15s. net.

THE HEART OF A GEISHA. By Mrs. HUGH FRASER. With a Frontispiece in Colour by LUDWIG HOLBERG and Ornamental Borders and Decorations by R. WEIR CROUCH. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s. net.

FIGHTING THE TURK IN THE BALKANS: an American's Adventures with the Macedonian Revolutionists. By ARTHUR H. HOWDEN SMITH. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

AMERICAN LECTURES ON THE HISTORY OF RELIGIONS. 8. THE RELIGION OF ISLAM.

By IGNAZ GOLDZIEHER, Ph.D., Professor of the University of Buda Pesth. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

This volume by so famous a scholar as Prof. Goldziher will be an important addition to this series of lectures on the religions of the world.

THE CENTURY OF THE CHILD. By ELLEN KEY. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. net.

THE WIVING OF LANCE CLEAVERAGE. By Miss ALICE MACGOWAN, Author of 'Judith of the Cumberlands,' Illustrated in Colour. Crown 8vo, cloth extra, 6s.

On a strip of California beach between the pines and the sea lies fair Carmel, which is the home—pro tem. at least—of a group of talented writers, among them Miss Alice MacGowan, author of 'Judith of the Cumberlands,' and many a stirring tale of the Tennessee mountains, and her sister, Mrs. Grace MacGowan Cooke, who collaborates with her.

NEW AND ENLARGED EDITION.

THE FLORENTINE PAINTERS OF THE RENAISSANCE. With an Essay on their Genius, and a Full List of their Works in British and Continental Galleries. By BERNHARD BERENSON, Author of 'The Venetian Painters of the Renaissance,' &c. Third Edition, Revised and Enlarged. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net.

"A highly competent student of Italian art; a practitioner of the most modern methods of investigation."—Times.

"This little book is written by a man who knows his subject well and who is thoroughly in sympathy with the spirit of the Renaissance."—Standard.

SHELBURNE ESSAYS. Studies of Religious Dualism. Sixth Series. By PAUL ELMER MORE. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net.

The publication of a new volume of the 'Shelburne Essays,' by Paul Elmer More, is a recurring event of importance in the world of letters. Like all that Mr. More writes, these essays appeal to every man whose intelligence is awake, whose curiosity about life and human nature is keen, and who wishes, as well through the broader experience of books as through the narrower personal experience, to know the world better, and, if possible, to come to better terms with it. They are chiefly concerned with religion and philosophy, but, as in the case of the studies of Pascal, Sir Thomas Browne, Bunyan, and Rousseau, with literature too, in its religious and philosophical bearing.

THE EMMANUEL MOVEMENT IN A NEW ENGLAND TOWN. A Systematic Account of

Experiments and Reflections Designed to Determine the Proper Relationship between the Minister and the Dكتور in the Light of Modern Needs. By LYMAN P. POWELL, Author of 'Christian Science: The Faith and its Founder,' 'The Art of Natural Sleep,' &c. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net.

NEW CATALOGUE AND ANNOUNCEMENT LIST NOW READY.

G. P. PUTNAM'S SONS, 24, Bedford Street, Strand, London; and New York.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4252.

SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

Lectures.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

The following ADVANCED COURSES of LECTURES will be delivered:-

PHILOSOPHY.—1. 'Natural and Social Morals,' by Prof. CARVETH READ, M.A., at UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, GOWER STREET, W.C., on APRIL 29, MAY 6, 13, 20, 27, and JUNE 3, 1909, at 5 P.M.

HISTORY.—2. 'The Influence of Roman Law on Western Europe,' by Prof. PAUL VINOGRADOFF, M.A. D.C.L. LL.D. F.B.A., Corpus Professor of Jurisprudence in the University of Oxford, at KING'S COLLEGE, STRAND, W.C., on APRIL 26, MAY 3, 10, 17, 24, and JUNE 7, 1909, at 4.45 P.M.

Admission to the above Lectures is free, and no Tickets are required. P. J. HARTOG, Academic Registrar.

LONDON HOSPITAL MEDICAL COLLEGE (UNIVERSITY OF LONDON).

A COURSE OF EIGHT LECTURES will be delivered by Mr. G. P. MUDGE, A.R.C.S. Lond. F.L.S., Lecturer on Biology, on TUESDAYS at 10.30 A.M. in the BIOLOGICAL THEATRE of the COLLEGE, commencing on TUESDAY, May 4, 1909. Subject:—'Experimental Evidence relating to Variation and Heredity and its bearing upon the Problems of Evolution.'

All Students of the University are free to attend. Members of the Profession will be admitted on presentation of their address cards. MUNRO SCOTT, Warden.

Turner Street, Mile End, E.

'THE RELIGION OF SHAKESPEARE.'

ANNUAL LECTURE by Mr. G. W. FOOTE, President of the National Secular Society, at ST. JAMES'S HALL, GREAT PORTLAND STREET, LONDON, W., on SUNDAY EVENING, April 25, at 7.30. Seats 1s. and 6d. Questions and Discussion permitted.

Exhibitions.

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S
SPRING EXHIBITION OF PORTRAITS and LANDSCAPES by EARLY BRITISH and FOREIGN MASTERS is NOW OPEN. SHEPHERD'S GALLERY, 27, King Street, St. James's.

Provident Institutions.

ROYAL LITERARY FUND.

(For the assistance of Authors and their Families who are in want).

Mr. ANDREW LANG

will preside at the 119th ANNIVERSARY DINNER on MAY 13 at the WHITEHALL ROOMS, HOTEL METROPOLE at 7 for 7.30 P.M.

LORD TENNYSON, Sir EDWARD CLARKE, K.C., and Mr. MAURICE HEWLETT will speak.

Donations to the Chairman's List will be gratefully acknowledged on behalf of the Committee by the Secretary.

A. LLEWELYN ROBERTS.

296, Vauxhall Bridge Road, S.W.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1839.

Funds exceed 32,400l.

Office: 15 and 16, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.

Patron:

The Right Hon. THE EARL OF ROSEBURY, K.G. K.T.

President:

Col. The Hon. HARRY L. W. LAWSON, M.A. J.P.

Treasurer:

THE LONDON AND WESTMINSTER BANK, LIMITED.

OBJECTS.—This Institution was established in 1839 in the City of London, under the Presidency of the late Alderman Harmer, for granting Pensions and Temporary Assistance to principals and assistants engaged as vendors of Newspapers.

MEMBERSHIP.—Every Man or Woman throughout the United Kingdom, whether Publisher, Wholesaler, Retailer, Employer, or Employed, is entitled to become a Member of this Institution, and enjoy its benefits, upon payment of Five Shillings annually, or Three Guineas for life, provided that he or she is engaged in the sale of Newspapers, and such Members who thus contribute secure priority of consideration in the event of their needing aid from the Institution.

PENSIONS.—The Annuitants now number Thirty-six, the Men receiving 25l. and the Women 20l. per annum each.

The "Royal Victoria Pension Fund," commemorating the great advantages the News Trade enjoyed under the rule of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, provides 20l. a year each for Six Widows of Newsvendors.

The "Francis Fund" provides Pensions for One Man, 25l., and One Woman, 20l., and was specially subscribed in memory of the late John Francis, who died on April 6, 1882, and was for more than fifty years Publisher of the Athenæum. He took an active and leading part throughout the whole period of the agitation for the repeal of the various then existing "Taxes on Knowledge," and was for very many years a staunch supporter of this Institution.

The "Horace Marshall Pension Fund" is the gift of the late Mr. Horace Brooks Marshall. The employees of that firm have primary right of election to its benefits.

The "Herbert Lloyd Pension Fund" provides 25l. per annum for one man, in perpetual and grateful memory of Mr. Herbert Lloyd, who died May 12, 1899.

The principal features of the Rules governing election to all Pensions are, that each Candidate shall have been (1) a Member of the Institution for not less than ten years preceding application; (2) not less than fifty-five years of age; (3) engaged in the sale of Newspapers for at least ten years.

RELIEF.—Temporary relief is given in cases of distress, not only to Members of the Institution, but to Newsvendors or their servants who may be recommended for assistance by Members of the Institution. Inquiry is made in such cases by Visiting Committees, and relief is awarded in accordance with the merits and requirements of each case. W. WILKIE JONES, Secretary.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Invested Capital, 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT

Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical Advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

For further information apply to the Secretary, Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Educational.

ROYAL HOLLOWAY COLLEGE FOR WOMEN (University of London)

ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS.—TWELVE ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS, from 50l. to 60l., and several BURSARIES of not more than 30l., tenable for three years at the College, will be awarded on the results of an EXAMINATION to be held from JUNE 28 to JULY 2, 1909. Names must be entered before MAY 29. The College prepares Students for London Degrees. Inclusive fee, 100l. a year. For forms of entry and further particulars, apply to the SECRETARY, Royal Holloway College, Englefield Green, Surrey.

LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.—PROFESSIONAL

EXAMINATION.—The NEXT PROFESSIONAL EXAMINATION of the LIBRARY ASSOCIATION will be held JUNE 7-12, 1909, at the LONDON UNIVERSITY, SOUTH KENSINGTON, and at various Provincial Centres. Last date of entry, MAY 15.—Copies of the Syllabus, together with all details, can be obtained on application to ERNEST A. BAKER, M.A. D.Litt., Hon. Secretary, Education Committee, 24, Whitcomb Street, W.C.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, BRISTOL.—A

HALL OF RESIDENCE for WOMEN STUDENTS, situated in CLIFTON, will be OPENED in SEPTEMBER NEXT.—For all particulars apply Miss M. C. STAVELEY, M.A., University College, Bristol.

WEYBRIDGE LADIES' SCHOOL, SURREY.

Miss E. DAWES, M.A. D.Lit. Lond., Classical Scholar, Girton. Refined Home. Thorough Education and Physical Care. Good Grounds. Position high, and one of the healthiest in England.

THE DOWNS SCHOOL, SEAFORD, SUSSEX.

Head Mistress—Miss LUCY ROBINSON, M.A. (late Second Mistress, St. Felix School, Southwold). References: The Principal of Bedford College, London; The Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge.

LEATHERHEAD COURT, SURREY.

A London School in the Country for 45 Girls (Residents). Principal—Miss TULLIS. The School aims at an intellectual training suited to the individual, physical development on safe lines, and the cultivation of generous thoughts and pleasant manners.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH, S.E.

F. W. AVELING, M.A. B.Sc.
Preparation for Universities and Professions.
Stress on Modern Languages and Science.

THE CRYSTAL PALACE COMPANY'S

SCHOOL OF PRACTICAL ENGINEERING. Principal—J. W. WILSON, M.I.C.E. M.I.M.E. The SECOND (SUMMER) TERM of THIRTY-SEVENTH YEAR will OPEN on WEDNESDAY, April 28. New Students should attend at the School on TUESDAY, 27th inst., for Examination between 10 A.M. and 1 P.M.—Prospectus forwarded on application to THE REGISTRAR, School of Engineering, Crystal Palace, S.E.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,

CIRENCESTER. (Founded 1845. Reorganized 1908.) Patron—H.M. KING EDWARD VII. Chairman—LORD MORETON. For Landowners, Land Agents, Surveyors, Agriculturists, Intending Colonists, &c. FARMING AND COLONIAL BRANCH. ESTATE MANAGEMENT AND FORESTRY BRANCH. For Prospectus of Curriculum, Fees, Entrance Exhibitions, Scholarships, Diplomas, &c., apply to THE PRINCIPAL. NEXT TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, May 18.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTOR in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

Situations Vacant.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD.

PROFESSORSHIP OF ECONOMICS.

The COUNCIL will shortly proceed to the ELECTION of a PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS in the UNIVERSITY.—Applications must reach the Registrar, from whom further particulars may be obtained, not later than MAY 12, 1909.

W. M. GIBBONS, Registrar.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

APPLICATIONS are invited for the post of PROFESSOR of ENGLISH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE in the MAHARAJA'S COLLEGE, MYSORE, SOUTHERN INDIA. The Candidate selected for the post will be on probation for two years, at the end of which period the Government of H.H. the Maharaja of Mysore will be at liberty to terminate the contract. Candidates should be distinguished University men who have taken first-class honours in Classics and made a special study of English Language and Literature, or taken the M.A. Degree with first-class Honours in English Language and Literature in a Scottish or British University. Those who have in addition received training in the Theory and Practice of Teaching, or have had experience of professorial teaching in a University College will be preferred. The terms of pay, leave, and pension will be the same as those allowed to members of the Indian Educational Service. The initial Salary will be Rs. 500 a month, the Salary for the second year Rs. 550, and thereafter, if the selected Candidate is confirmed in his post, his Salary will be Rs. 600 at the end of the second year of service, rising by annual increments of Rs. 50 to Rs. 1,000 a month. Free first-class passage to India, also back to England if the contract is terminated at the end of the second year of service. Candidates should love educational work among natives of India, and be fond of outdoor games. Applications will be received by the INSPECTOR GENERAL OF EDUCATION IN MYSORE, Bangalore, South India, up to JUNE 10, 1909. The selected Candidate will be expected to join duty as early as possible.

MCGILL UNIVERSITY, MONTREAL.

CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.

The GOVERNORS of MCGILL UNIVERSITY are prepared to receive applications for appointment to the STRATHCONA CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.—For all information apply to W. VAUGHAN, Secretary.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

CAMBRIDGE AND COUNTY SCHOOL OF ARTS AND CRAFTS.

A PRINCIPAL is REQUIRED who will either (a) devote the whole of his time to his duties, undertaking the General Direction of the School in Day and Evening Classes, and the Teaching of One Department, at a Salary of 300l. a year; or (b) devote part of his time to his duties, undertaking the General Direction of the School, with a limited amount of Teaching, preferably in the Building Department, at a Salary of 150l. a year.

It is proposed that the School shall include in its Prospectus the Work of a School of Art in accordance with the Regulations of the Board of Education, together with Building Subjects (including Building Construction, Builders' Quantities, Wood Carving, Plumbers' Work, Iron Work, Stone Cutting, &c.); Metal Work Subjects; Needle-work Subjects; other Subjects (Shorthand, Book-Keeping, &c.); and probably Bookbinding.

Applications (15 copies), setting forth particulars of previous experience, together with copies of not more than three recent Testimonials, must be sent to the undersigned on or before SATURDAY, May 15, 1909, of whom any further information may be obtained.

AUSTIN KEEN, Education Secretary.

County Offices, Sidney Street, Cambridge, April 20, 1909.

ESSEX EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

APPOINTMENT OF PRINCIPAL, COUNTY LABORATORIES, CHELMSFORD.

The ESSEX EDUCATION COMMITTEE invite applications for the appointment of PRINCIPAL of their COUNTY LABORATORIES, CHELMSFORD. The person appointed must be specially qualified in the Sciences applied to Agriculture, and must undertake the duties of Head of one of the Departments at the Laboratories, preferably the Biological Department, and devote the whole of his time to the Committee's work. The Salary will be at the rate of 400l. per annum, rising by annual increments of 25l. to 500l. per annum. The appointment will be determinable by six months' notice on either side. Canvassing is prohibited, and will be regarded as a disqualification. Further particulars and Forms of Application may be obtained from me, the undersigned, and applications, accompanied by a full statement of the qualifications of the Candidates, and copies of Testimonials (not exceeding three in number) must be sent in addressed to me, on or before May 1, 1909.

J. H. NICHOLAS, Secretary.

County Offices, Chelmsford, April 13, 1909.

KENT EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

RAMSGATE HIGHER EDUCATION SUB-COMMITTEE COUNTY SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

HEAD MASTER REQUIRED on AUGUST 1 for the NEW COUNTY SCHOOL, to accommodate 150 Boys, to be opened at Ramsgate in September next. Candidates should be University Graduates and experienced in the work of a Secondary School. Initial Salary not less than 300l. per annum, with increments in accordance with the Committee's Scale, which may be obtained, together with Form of Application, from the undersigned. Applications must be received by the Secretary not later than noon on MAY 10. Canvassing will be considered a disqualification.

By Order of the Committee, FRAS. W. CROOK, Secretary.

Caxton House, Westminster, April 8, 1909.

THE GOVERNORS of the THETFORD BOYS'

GRAMMAR SCHOOL invite applications for the post of HEAD MASTER. Duties to commence in SEPTEMBER NEXT. University Graduate. Secondary School experience. Salary 120l. per annum, with maximum Capitation fees of 3l. per pupil and a House rent free. No pension. Personal canvassing will disqualify.—Applications, with three Testimonials to be sent not later than MAY 5, to F. V. TOUCHEN, Clerk to the Governors, London Road, Thetford, April 16, 1909.

MANCHESTER HIGH SCHOOL FOR GIRLS.

WANTED, for SEPTEMBER, TWO MATHEMATICAL TEACHERS (one with very high Scholarship). Knowledge of Physics a recommendation. ONE MISTRESS for COOKERY, LAUNDRY, &c., who can act as Form Mistress and Teach other Subjects. Good general education required. ONE MISTRESS especially for French, who must be a trained Teacher.

All Candidates must be College Graduates or equivalent. Initial salary 100l. to 120l., with increase according to scale.—Applications to be sent to THE HEAD MISTRESS.

KENT EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

DOVER MUNICIPAL SCHOOL OF SCIENCE, ART, AND TECHNOLOGY.

WANTED an ASSISTANT ART MASTER, who must have had good teaching experience. Initial Salary from 120l. to 150l. per annum, according to qualifications and experience. Particulars of the appointment may be obtained from the Head Master, Mr. V. H. EAST, who will also supply Forms of Application, which should be returned as early as possible to Mr. R. E. KNOCKER, Town Hall, Dover. Canvassing will be considered a disqualification.

By order of the Committee,

FRAS. W. CROOK, Secretary.

Canton House, Westminster, S.W., April 19, 1909.

CITY OF LEEDS PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

The LIBRARIES COMMITTEE invite applications for the position of ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN. Previous experience in a Public Library and a knowledge of Cataloguing necessary. Commencing Salary 50l. per annum, rising by annual increments of 5l. to 100l. if services satisfactory. Applications, in Candidate's own handwriting, stating age, experience, and qualifications, accompanied by copies of not more than three Testimonials, to be delivered to the undersigned not later than SATURDAY, May 8.

THOMAS W. HAND, City Librarian.

Central Library, Leeds, April 20, 1909.

GIRLS' COLLEGIATE SCHOOL, PIETERMARITZBURG, NATAL.

WANTED, to begin work on AUGUST 1, a SIXTH FORM MISTRESS, with Special Subjects, Mathematics and Botany, for Cape Matriculation Examination. Salary 110l., 120l., and 130l., for three successive years, with Board and Residence. Holidays included if desired. Passage out paid. The School is a Boarding and Day School under a Committee.

Apply, by letter, with copies of Testimonials (which will be returned after the appointment is made), names of personal Referees and full particulars as to age, religious denomination, qualifications, and experience to Mrs. STEWART, care of Miss Walker, St. George's Training College, 5, Melville Street, Edinburgh.

MODERN LANGUAGE and FORM MISTRESS

WANTED at EASTER for DULWICH HIGH SCHOOL (G.P.D.S.T.).—Apply at once to THE HEAD MISTRESS.

MILHAM FORD SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, OXFORD.—VICE-HEAD MISTRESS WANTED

after the Summer Vacation. Degree and experience in Girls' Secondary Schools essential. Salary 200l.—Letters of application should be addressed to THE PRINCIPAL.

Situations Wanted.

BARRISTER, Graduate of Oxford, with exceptional Scientific qualifications, requires EDITORIAL or SECRETARIAL WORK. Advertiser would undertake Indexing or Cataloguing Books or Libraries.—Apply Box 1536, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

TWO PUBLISHERS.—ART EDITOR of very successful Publications, Expert in Modern Styles of Illustration, wishes to undertake SUPERVISION of the ART WORK of a PUBLISHING FIRM. Terms according to time required.—K., care of PETER HARPER, 29, New Bridge Street, E.C.

Miscellaneous.

JOURNALIST and AUTHOR requires the services (Afternoons only), of well-educated YOUNG LADY, competent Shorthand Typist, knowing French and German.—Box 1587, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

A GENTLEMAN, thoroughly experienced in travelling, who has studied and knows intimately the chief Art Centres of Europe, University Graduate, and who now occupies important post as Librarian in London, desires to travel Abroad as COMPANION, SECRETARY, or GUIDE to Gentleman or Family, either now or later. Small salary. Highest References and Testimonials.—Write C. G., Box 1518, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

UNIONIST M.P.s, JOURNALISTS, AUTHORS.—Competent STENOGRAPHER, with literary ability, SEKS WORK. Useful knowledge matters Journalistic. German and French Languages. Own Remington.—Letters to SIGNET, 55, Chancery Lane.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ACCURATE RESEARCH and GENEALOGICAL WORK undertaken by R. M. GLENCROSS, M.A. LL.B. Advice also supplied to Persons drawing up their own Pedigree. Excellent Testimonials.—3, Chalonier Street, West Kensington.

TRANSLATION, RESEARCH, INDEXING. ARTICLES and other Literary Work. Classics, French, German, Italian, Spanish, Portuguese. Varied experience. Moderate Terms.—Miss SELBY, 30, Northumberland Place, W.

CAPITAL STUDIO (33 by 22), with Gallery, Bedroom, W.C., &c. TO BE LET at moderate Rental. Resident Housekeeper. Also RESIDENTIAL CHAMBERS TO BE LET.—Apply, 32, Great Ormond Street, W.C.

THE DAUGHTER of a well-known Literary Man is desirous of meeting with a LADY and GENTLEMAN to SHARE her HOUSE; or would take boarders. Rooms Furnished or Unfurnished. The House is situated on South Norwood Hill, five minutes from Norwood Junction Station, close to the Stanley Halls (where Concerts, Lectures, &c., are continually given), near the Public Library, and within a walk of the Crystal Palace, or One Station from it. Norwood is regarded as one of the healthiest places round London, and was at one time a well-known health resort. A good train service to London Bridge and Victoria.—Address C. M., Box 1562, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Business for Disposal.

FOR SALE.—PRINTING and PUBLISHING BUSINESS in EDINBURGH. Good connexion. Central and suitable Leasehold Premises. Machinery, &c., in first-class order. Excellent opportunity for young man with moderate capital.—Apply WHITSON & METHUEN, C.A., 21, Rutland Street, Edinburgh.

Type-Writers, &c.

TYPE-WRITING, 9d. per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272. Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING OF ALL KINDS done promptly and intelligently. Special care taken with Technical MSS. Fiction 10d. per 1,000 words.—Price List and Specimens from Miss ROUTH, 43, Harwood Road, Walham Green, S.W.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING.—ALL MSS., STORIES, PLAYS, NOVELS, &c., accurately TYPED. 9d. per 1,000 words. Carbons 3d. per 1,000. Specifications carefully copied.—F. BATE, 53, Bushwood Road, Kew, Surrey.

TYPE-WRITING OF EVERY DESCRIPTION by EXPERT, 8d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000 words. Accuracy and prompt return guaranteed. Reliable References.—NORA DICKINSON, 1, Sackville Gardens, Ilford.

AUTHORS' MSS. TYPED from 6d. 1,000 words; Scientific from 9d. Accuracy guaranteed. Specimens sent.—Miss HABERSHON, L.L.A. (St. Andrews), Hons. Science and Language, 101, Palmerston Road, Southsea.

TYPE-WRITING.—AUTHORS' MSS. 8d. 1,000 words; with Carbon Copy, 9d.; Paragraphs and Essays, 600 words or less, 5d. MSS. fastened in covers.—GIRTON, 2, Grove Lane, Camberwell, S.E.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, 24, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Larner's personal supervision.—23, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

Printers.

THE HISTORY OF YOUR LANDED ESTATES should be put into permanent form. We undertake this Work in its entirety. Searches made; material arranged and printed under Expert Supervision.—GERRARDS, Ltd., Genealogical Printers, 411A, Harrow Road, London, W.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Catalogues.

GLAISHER'S REMAINDER BOOK CATALOGUE For MARCH (No. 363).

NOW READY, and will be forwarded on application. It comprises a specially attractive Selection of Publishers' Remainders, including many Good Bargains.

WILLIAM GLAISHER, LTD., Booksellers, 265, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.—Yellow Book, 13 vols. 2l. 10s.; Trigg's Art Garden Design, Italy, 34 guineas for 21s.; E. Fitzgerald's Works, 7 vols. 3l. 3s.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON, Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

CATALOGUE No. 50—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

BOOKS. BOOKS.—CLEARANCE CATALOGUE in all Branches of Literature post free. Catalogues may also be had of Ancient and Modern Mathematical Books. GALLOWAY & PORTER, Booksellers, Cambridge (Eng.).

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. CATALOGUES issued and sent post free on application. Books Bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.

Sales by Auction.

The valuable Collection of Japanese Colour Prints, Illustrated Books, and a few Kokemono, the Property of JOHN STEWART HAPPER, Esq., of New York City, U.S.A.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, April 26, and Three Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS, ILLUSTRATED BOOKS, and a few KAKEMONO, the Property of JOHN STEWART HAPPER, Esq., of New York City, U.S.A.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had, price 1s. each, or, with Illustrations, 5s. each.

Japanese Colour Prints and Surimono, comprising the Collections of LAWRENCE T. W. SALT, Esq., A. G. WEBSTER, Esq., and Capt. V. J. SCANTLEBURY.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 30, at 1 o'clock precisely, JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS and SURIMONO, comprising the COLLECTIONS of LAWRENCE T. W. SALT, Esq., of Egerton Terrace, S.W.; A. G. WEBSTER, Esq., of Lincoln, and Capt. V. J. SCANTLEBURY.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Greek Coins, the Property of R. Y. TYRRELL, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, April 30, at 1 o'clock precisely, a small COLLECTION of GREEK COINS, the Property of R. Y. TYRRELL, Esq.; the Property of a GENTLEMAN, including Greek, Roman, British, &c. Coins; Roman Family and Imperial Denarii, Roman Gold Coins, English Gold Coins, Books, &c., the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

English and Foreign Coins and Medals.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 3, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGLISH and FOREIGN COINS, the Property of WALTER H. SPEKE, Esq., Ilminster, Somerset; GREEK and INDIAN COINS, collected by Major MACKENZIE ELLIOT; a valuable COLLECTION of GREEK, ROMAN, BYZANTINE, ENGLISH and FOREIGN COINS in Gold and Silver, the Property of Dr. SOMERSFIELD; and other small Properties—Coin Cabinets, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Illustrated Manuscripts on Vellum, the Property of a Gentleman recently deceased.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 6, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ILLUMINATED MANUSCRIPTS on VELLUM, the Property of an ENGLISH GENTLEMAN recently deceased, who lived abroad.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had; illustrated Copies, 5s. each.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square:—

On MONDAY, April 26, at 1 o'clock. MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS, the Property of HAROLD RATHBONE, Esq., and others.

On WEDNESDAY, April 28, at 2 o'clock, Choice WINES, the Properties of LILY, DUCHESS OF MARLBOROUGH, deceased; FRANK TAYLOR, Esq., deceased; J. J. VAN ALLEN, Esq., and others.

On THURSDAY, April 29, at 1 o'clock, PORCELAIN and DECORATIVE FURNITURE of J. A. HOUSTON, Esq., R.S.A. R.I., deceased, and others; and OBJECTS of VERTU of the late Mrs. CHARLES EDWARDS.

On FRIDAY, April 30, at 1 o'clock, important MODERN PICTURES, the Property of the late JAMES A. GARLAND, Esq., of New York; fine ANCIENT and MODERN PICTURES, the Property of the Right Hon. LORD BATTERSEA, deceased, late of Surrey House, Marble Arch, W.; the Right Hon. JAMES A. CAMPBELL, deceased, late of 2, Prince's Gardens, S.W.; and of J. H. VAN EEGHEN, Esq., of Amsterdam.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., EARLY IN MAY, VALUABLE BOOKS in all Classes of Literature, including the LIBRARY of MODERN WORKS, the Property of the late Mr. BATHO, in remarkably fine state, removed from Eastbourne; rare Sixteenth and Seventeenth Century Books from the LIBRARY of a COLLECTOR, and other Properties, further particulars of which will be duly announced.

A Collection of Books relating to America—also a Selection from the Library of a Nobleman.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, April 29, at 1 o'clock, a COLLECTION of BOOKS RELATING TO AMERICA, comprising Early Voyages and Books on Navigation—Works relating to the First Settlements of the Colonies and to the American Indians—Rare Tracts on the Revolution—Histories of the States and Counties—Travels in Canada and Hudson's Bay, &c. mostly in old calf bindings; also an Early Mezzotint Portrait of George Washington—to which is added a SELECTION FROM THE LIBRARY of a NOBLEMAN comprising Buck's Views in Great Britain, 4 vols.—the Works of Piranesi and other Architectural Books—Early Works on Gardening—Folio Volumes with Engravings—Le Sacre de Louis XV. in morocco by Padeloup—La Galerie du Palais Royal, in old French morocco—Albums of Original Water-Colour Drawings, &c.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Rare Books and MSS. from the Library of the late T. C. BLOFELD, Esq., formerly Vice-Chancellor of Norwich (removed from Hoveton House, near Norwich), by order of the Executor.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C. on FRIDAY, April 30 at 1 o'clock, RARE BOOKS and MSS. selected from the above Library, comprising Arnold's Chronicle, 1502—Chaucer's Works, by Stow, 1561—Roy's Satire on Wolsey, 1526—A Printed Horse on Vellum, Illuminated (ca. 1505)—A Large-Paper Copy of the 1757 Edition of the Decameron, 5 vols.—Curious Books in Old English Literature—Early MSS., including a Fourteenth-Century Liber Custumarum, Great Britain's Treasure, by Sir Nicolas Halse, 1636, and a Seventeenth-Century Heraldic MS. Emblazoned—Wallis's London's Armory, Inscribed Presentation Copy, 1677—Best Edition of Dugdale's Monasticon, 8 vols.—Morant's Essex, Original Edition, 2 vols.—Guillim's Heraldry, Sixth Edition, and other Antiquarian Books—a few Autograph Letters, &c.; to which are added VALUABLE BOOKS from other sources, including a Fifteenth-Century MS. Horse on Vellum, with Miniatures—Editio Princeps of Euclid, 1482—a few modern Illuminated Books in fine Bindings—The Houghton Gallery, 2 vols.—Engraved Works of Sir Robert Strange and Sir Thomas Lawrence, the latter being chiefly proofs—Scott's Waverley Novels, 77 vols., all first editions, in uniform binding—a copy of 'King Glumpus,' in the original wrappers, &c.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Original Water-Colour Drawings and Engravings from the Collection of the late T. C. BLOFELD, Esq. (by order of the Executor).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C. on FRIDAY, April 30, at 3 o'clock, ORIGINAL DRAWINGS from the above Collection, comprising examples by Barlow, Paul Sandby, Gainsborough, Rowlandson, Marlow, Sullivan, Cozens, Grose, and others—Topographical Views and Landscapes, by J. Skelton (fl. 1750)—a few Drawings of the Italian and Dutch Schools—also Engravings, comprising Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery, in the original unbound state—Prints by Hollar—Houbraken's Heads, &c.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Valuable Modern Books from the Library of a Gentleman, and other Properties.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C. on TUESDAY, May 4, and Two Following Days at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE MODERN BOOKS, including the Edinburgh Stevenson, 30 vols.—Éditions de Luxe of Meredith and Kingsley—Large Paper Sets of Dumas' Novels, 60 vols. and Balzac's Human Comedy, 40 vols.—Fur and Feather Series, 12 vols.—Large Paper—Rare Coloured Sporting Plates by Alken—Jenkins' Naval and Martial Achievements, Coloured Plates, 2 vols.—Jefferys' American Atlas—a Collection of Books on Scotland—Topographical Works and Books in General Literature. Also the extensive THEOLOGICAL LIBRARY of the Rev. J. G. PILKINGTON (formerly Vicar of Holy Trinity, Paddington).

Catalogues on application.

Valuable Books from the Library of the late Sir MAURICE HOLZMANN, K.C.B. K.C.V.O., &c., removed from St. James's Palace (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, DURING MAY, VALUABLE BOOKS from the above Library, comprising a fine Collection of Alpine Books and Works on Mountaineering—Fine Art Books and Works in General Literature, &c., mostly in handsome calf or morocco bindings.

Catalogues are preparing.

Magazines, &c.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW.
No. 423. APRIL, 1909. 8vo, price 6s.

1. GERMAN IMPERIAL FINANCE.
2. HALLEY'S COMET.
3. THE PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICE OF LABOUR CO-PARTNERSHIP.
4. THE POETRY OF CARDUCCI.
5. PRAGMATISM.
6. THE ECONOMICS OF EMPIRE.
7. FRENCH LITERATURE FROM THE RENAISSANCE TO THE 'CLASSIC AGE.'
8. THE POOR LAW REPORT OF 1909.
9. TWO CANADIAN POETS: FRÉCHETTE AND DRUMMOND.
10. SOCIAL PSYCHOLOGY.
11. THE POLITICAL SCENE.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

THE ENGLISH HISTORICAL REVIEW.
Edited by REGINALD L. POOLE, M.A. LL.D.

No. 94. APRIL 1909. Royal 8vo, price 5s.

1. Articles.
THE ADMINISTRATION OF NORMANDY UNDER HENRY I. By Prof. Haskins.
THE DEPRIVATION OF PURITAN MINISTERS IN 1605. By Roland G. Usher.
THE RELATIONS BETWEEN ENGLAND AND GERMANY, 1660-1688. By C. Brinkmann. Part I.
THE MISSIONS OF WILLIAM GRENVILLE TO THE HAGUE AND VERSAILLES IN 1787. By J. Holland Rose, Litt.D.
2. Notes and Documents.
THE EMBASSY OF JOHN THE GRAMMARIAN. By Prof. Bury, LL.D. D.Litt.
THE CHARTERS OF HENRY II. AT LINCOLN CATHEDRAL. By the Rev. H. E. Salter.
THE COMMUNE OF BURY ST. EDMUNDS, 1264. By H. W. C. Davis.
STATISTICS FROM SUBSIDY ROLLS OF EDWARD II. By Sir James H. Ramsay, Bt. LL.D.
ARCHBISHOP MORTON AND ST. ALBANS. By James Gairdner, C.B. LL.D.
And others.
3. Reviews of Books.
4. Short Notices.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine Street, London, W.C., APRIL 24, contains:—

RESULT OF THE PLEBISCITE ON THE REGISTRATION OF ARCHITECTS.
THE ARCHITECTURAL WORK OF THE LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL (Institute of Architects).
THE STABILITY OF ARCHES.
THE NEW GALLERY.
NOTES FROM PARIS.
THE ARCHITECTS' TECHNICAL BUREAU.

ILLUSTRATIONS:

PORTA DELLA CARTA, VENICE
COMPETITION DESIGN FOR THE PALACE OF PEACE;
NEW WING TO GIRLS' SCHOOL, PINNER;
A DEESIDE HOUSE.
HOSPITAL OF ST. JOHN, SHERBORNE.

From Offices as above (4d., by post 4½d.) at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all News-agents.

JUST PUBLISHED, price 4s. 6d. net.

THE INFLUENCE OF HEREDITY ON DISEASE.

WITH SPECIAL REFERENCE TO TUBERCULOSIS, CANCER, AND DISEASES OF THE NERVOUS SYSTEM.

A Discussion opened at the Royal Society of Medicine by Sir WILLIAM S. CHURCH, Bart. K.C.B. M.D.; Sir WILLIAM R. GOWERS, M.D. F.R.S. (Diseases of the Nervous System); ARTHUR LATHAM, M.D. (Tuberculosis); and E. F. BASHFORD, M.D. (Cancer).

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO. 39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

"One of the really notable literary achievements of the year."

J O A N O F A R C.
By JOHN PRESLAND.

Price 5s. net.

Of absorbing dramatic interest. The topic of the hour.

Scotsman.—"The play shows how impressive she may be made as the central figure in a history.... It is all the more impressive because it does not bring in any invented theatrical love interest, or anything to confuse the simple lines of the story."

London: SIMPKIN, MARSHALL & CO., LTD.

SANDS & CO.

THE NINETEENTH EUCHARISTIC

CONGRESS, WESTMINSTER, 1908. The Official Report of the Congress, containing a full Account of all the Proceedings, the full Text of the Papers read, and the Correspondence between the Archbishop of Westminster and the Prime Minister, with the Press Comments thereon. With Prefaces by His Grace the ARCHBISHOP OF WESTMINSTER and the Rev. ABBOT CABROL, O.S.B. With 14 Full-Page Illustrations. In 1 vol. demy 8vo, 730 pp. cloth extra, price 5s. net.

RELIGIOUS AND MONASTIC

LIFE EXPLAINED. By the Right Rev. Dom PROSPER GUÉRANGER, O.S.B., Abbot of Solesmes. Small crown 8vo, price 2s. 6d. net.

THE DECREE ON DAILY COM-

MUNION. A Historical Sketch and Commentary. By the Rev. J. B. FERRERES, S.J. Crown 8vo, price 2s. 6d. net.

THE ROMAN INDEX OF FOR-

BIDDEN BOOKS. Briefly Explained. With a Summary of the Index. By the Rev. Fr. S. BETTEN, S.J. Small crown 8vo, price 1s. 6d. net.

THE SERVANTS OF THE SICK.

A Manual of Prayer for Nurses and all who wait upon the Sick and Suffering. By J. F. SCHOLFIELD. Fcap. 8vo, price 1s. 6d.

SMITH'S

CATALOGUE RAISONNÉ

OF THE WORKS OF THE MOST EMINENT DUTCH, FLEMISH, & FRENCH PAINTERS.

A Verbatim and Facsimile Reprint in 9 vols. with the Addition of 42 Photogravure Plates.

In 9 vols. price 5l. 5s. net.

"A remarkable book, and has maintained an undisputed authority as a work of reference for the past eighty years." Athenæum.

London: 15, KING STREET, COVENT GARDEN; and Edinburgh.

THE DOVES PRESS

No. 1, THE TERRACE, HAMMERSMITH

NOW READY:

CREDO: PLENI SUNT COELI

ET TERRA GLORIA TUA. By T. J. Cobden-Sanderson. Small 8vo, pp. 1-6. 250 copies on paper at 1l. 1s. bound in leather and lettered in gold at The Doves Bindery; and 12 copies on vellum at 3l. 3s. bound in leather and lettered and tooled in gold.

In June will be published:

THE TRAGICALL HISTORIE

OF HAMLET, Prince of Denmarke. Small 4to. Printed in black and red, from the Second Quarto with additions from the First Folio of parts not found in the Quarto. Initial capital flourished in green by Edward Johnston. ¶ 250 copies on paper at 2l. 2s. and 15 on vellum at 10l. 10s. Bound in limp vellum at The Doves Bindery.

¶ For the text of Hamlet there are two main authorities, (1) the second quarto imprinted at London in 1604, and (2) the first folio printed in 1623, which in the main again are identical. The present edition will comprise the whole of the quarto, and the whole of such portions of the folio as are not already given in the quarto, no more, no less. The two texts, thus supplementing one another, constitute also the standard texts of to-day, notably the Cambridge edition; but into them have been introduced (1) modern spelling, (2) modern and elaborated punctuation, (3) metric rearrangement of lines, (4) new stage directions and descriptions, with omission and variation of the old, (5) a division into acts and scenes not given in the originals, and (6), here and there, conjectural textual emendations which, whether or no they satisfy the original intention, do with the modern spelling, punctuation, and the rest substitute for the original text and workmanship, the workmanship and text of a later time, and affect the whole character and atmosphere of the Play ¶ Into the present edition of the two texts nothing will be introduced which is not already to be found in one or other of them: the old spelling and punctuation will be retained, and to preserve as much of the atmosphere of the time as may be contained even in the presentment itself of the Play, the division into acts and scenes will not be adopted. The text is a great text, and we should do it wrong, being so majestic, to offer it the show of violence. The only change will be the typographical substitution of the short s for the long f, and the disuse of italics; and the only addition, the marginal notation, for convenience of reference, of the acts and scenes of modern editions. ¶ An Appendix, separable from the Play, will set out in detail the parts of the folio which have been added to or substituted for words or passages in the quarto, together with a note of such changes in the punctuation of the quarto, if any, based on the folio, as may seem to affect the interpretation of the text.

In Preparation:

FAUST. EINE TRAGOEDIE VON

GOETHE. Zweiter Theil. Small 4to. Printed in black and red from the 1899 Weimar edition, specially revised by the Editor, Dr. Erich Schmidt, for this Edition. 250 copies on paper at 3l. 3s. and 25 on vellum at 15l. 15s. ¶ The First Part of FAUST was published in November, 1906.

THE DOVES PRESS

No. 1 THE TERRACE HAMMERSMITH.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS.

COMPLETION OF THE WORK.

THE IMPERIAL GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

NEW EDITION.

In 26 vols. 8vo, cloth, 5*l.* net; morocco back, 6*l.* 6*s.* net.

The Four Volumes of 'THE INDIAN EMPIRE' separately, 6*s.* net each, in cloth, or 7*s.* 6*d.* net with morocco back; the Atlas separately, 15*s.* net in cloth, or 17*s.* 6*d.* net with morocco back.

Vol. I. DESCRIPTIVE. Vol. II. HISTORICAL.
Vol. III. ECONOMIC. Vol. IV. ADMINISTRATIVE.
Vol. V-XXIV. ALPHABETICAL GAZETTEER.
Vol. XXV. INDEX. Vol. XXVI. ATLAS.

Each Volume contains a map of India specially prepared for this Edition.

Standard.—"A work of which British geography may justly be proud."
.....The book gains much by its excellent indexes."

THE ENGLISH FACTORIES IN INDIA. By

W. FOSTER. 8vo. (Published under the patronage of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council.) Vol. III., 1624-1629, 12*s.* 6*d.* net. [Immediately.]

Previously Published.—Vol. I., 1618-1621, 12*s.* 6*d.* net. Vol. II., 1622-1623, 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

HISTORICAL PORTRAITS.—RICHARD II. TO HENRY WRIOTHESLEY, 1400-1600. THE

LIVES by C. R. L. FLETCHER. THE PORTRAITS chosen by EMERY WALKER. With an Introduction on the History of Portraiture in England. With 103 Portraits, crown 4to, 8*s.* 6*d.* net.

Spectator.—"In every way a most interesting book."

IONIA AND THE EAST. Six Lectures delivered

before the University of London. By D. G. HOGARTH. With a Map, 8vo, 3*s.* 6*d.* net.

PLATO'S DOCTRINE OF IDEAS. By J. A.

STEWART. 8vo, 6*s.* net.

POST-AUGUSTAN POETRY: from Seneca to Juvenal. By H. E. BUTLER. 8vo, 8*s.* 6*d.* net.

Oxford Magazine.—"Mr. Butler's book is one which no student of Roman poetry can neglect."

THE MORAL SYSTEM OF DANTE'S INFERNO.

By W. H. V. READE. 8vo, 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

KANT'S THEORY OF KNOWLEDGE. By H. A.

PRICHARD. 8vo, 6*s.* 6*d.* net.

THE ORIGINS OF CHRISTIANITY. By the late C. BIGG, edited by T. B. STRONG. 8vo, 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

ISRAEL'S HOPE OF IMMORTALITY. Four

Lectures by C. F. BURNEY. 8vo, 2*s.* 6*d.* net.

MODERN RESEARCH AS ILLUSTRATING THE BIBLE. By S. R. DRIVER. 8vo, 3*s.* net.

CATALOGUE OF SANSKRIT MSS. IN THE BODLEIAN LIBRARY. Appendix to Vol. I. (Th.

Aufrecht's Catalogue.) By A. B. KEITH. 4to, 15*s.* net.

COLLOTYPE FACSIMILE OF IRISH MANUSCRIPTS IN THE BODLEIAN LIBRARY. With

Introduction by KUNO MEYER. Rawlinson B. 502, including the Annals of Tigernach; the Psalter Na Rann; Brehon Law Tracts, and many Poems and Stories, Tribal Histories, and Genealogies. Folio, containing 83 leaves of Vellum, with which 20 leaves of Paper are bound up. Subscription price, 4*l.* 4*s.* net.

OECOLOGY OF PLANTS. An Introduction to the Study of Plant-Communities. By EUG. WARMING, assisted by MARTIN VAHL, prepared for publication in English by PERCY GROOM and ISAAC BAYLEY BALFOUR. Royal 8vo, 8*s.* 6*d.* net; morocco, 10*s.* net.

SOLEREDER'S ANATOMY OF THE DICOTYLEDONS. Translated by L. A. BOODLE and

F. E. FRITSCH. Revised by D. H. SCOTT. Two volumes, morocco back, 27*s.* 6*d.* net each; cloth, 24*s.* net each.

ANNALS OF BOTANY. Edited by I. BAYLEY

BALFOUR, D. H. SCOTT, J. B. FARMER, and R. THAXTER, assisted by other Botanists. Royal 8vo, with many Plates and Illustrations in the Text. Subscription price for each 4 parts, 30*s.* Vol. XXIII., No. 90, 14*s.* [Immediately.]

A NATURALIST IN TASMANIA. By

GEOFFREY SMITH. With 33 Plates, 4 Text Figures, and a Folding Map showing the Geological Features of the Island. 8vo, 7*s.* 6*d.* net.

Times.—"The book furnishes a good sketch of the natural history of Tasmania.....The illustrations, good in themselves, are excellently selected to elucidate the text; and the style of writing is in every respect superior to that of most books of travel or of natural history."

EXPERIMENTAL EMBRYOLOGY. By J. W.

JENKINSON. 8vo. 12*s.* 6*d.* net.

MILTON MEMORIAL LECTURES, 1908.

Read before the Royal Society of Literature. By G. C. WILLIAMSON, W. H. HADOW, E. H. COLERIDGE, W. E. A. AXON, E. H. PEMBER, G. E. B. SAINTSBURY, H. G. ROSEDALE, E. DOWDEN, Sir E. BRABROOKE, and A. VAMBÉRY. Edited, with an Introduction, by P. W. AMES. With 4 Illustrations. 8vo, 6*s.* net.

OXFORD LIBRARY OF PROSE AND POETRY.

Feap. 8vo, from 2*s.* 6*d.* net each; on Oxford India paper, from 3*s.* net each.

DE QUINCEY'S LITERARY CRITICISM.

Edited with an Introduction by H. DARBISHIRE.

THE HEROINE. By EATON STANNARD BARRETT.

With an Introduction by WALTER RALEIGH.

JOSEPH AND HIS BRETHREN. By C. WELLS.

With an Introduction by A. C. SWINBURNE, and a Note on Rossetti and Charles Wells by T. WATTS-DUNTON. From 1*s.* net. ("World's Classics.")

Athenæum.—"All readers of any pretension to a thorough acquaintance with English poetry should get this little pocket 'Joseph.'"

AUTHORS' AND PRINTERS' DICTIONARY.

A Guide for Authors, Editors, Printers, Correctors of the Press, Compositors, and Typists, with full List of Abbreviations, an attempt to Codify the best Typographical Practices of the Present Day. By F. HOWARD COLLINS, with the assistance of many Authors, Editors, Printers, and Correctors of the Press. Tenth Thousand. 1*s.* net.

CLARENDON PRESS CATALOGUE (160 pages) post free on application.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Oxford University Press, Amen Corner, E.C.

WARD, LOCK & CO.'s LIST.

AT ALL BOOKSELLERS'. NEW SIX-SHILLING FICTION.

AT ALL LIBRARIES.

JEANNE OF THE MARSHES.

E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM.

Mr. Oppenheim's style is, as ever, easy and pleasant, and the book is both engrossing and noteworthy.

THE SIN OF ALISON DERING.

L. G. MOBERLY.

"The plot of this story is cleverly conceived and well carried out. Miss Moberly writes with great charm and skill, and the reader is not likely to put down the book until the tangle is finally cleared up. As a character-study, the figure of Alison Dering is drawn with considerable insight."—Financial Times.

THE DUKE IN THE SUBURBS.

EDGAR WALLACE.

"Mr. Wallace is at his best in the broad spirit of comedy, and his humour is always infectious."—Yorkshire Post.

PURPLE AND HOMESPUN.

AUSTIN FRYERS.

"The book will please all who like a light, interesting novel."—Christian World.

MONEY.

MARIE CONNOR LEIGHTON.

"Opening in the wilds of Australia with a discovery of gold by men who are starving, 'Money' unfolds a striking and vividly imagined story."—Bookman.

SARAH TULDON'S LOVERS.

ORME AGNUS.

"Sarah Tuldon is a creation in the full sense of the word; a thing afire with life and the energy of a fearless paganism that is yet clean as the open hills. Splendour is the word that most naturally links itself with her—splendour in courage, mastery, and laughter."—Manchester Guardian.

A POACHED PEERAGE.

Sir WILLIAM MAGNAY.

"The book is written in a style delightfully fresh and natural, and does not contain a dull page. It is rich in striking situations, strong dramatic power, and a keen sense of humour, and is one the reader would fain finish at a single sitting."—Irish Independent.

THE SOCIALIST.

GUY THORNE.

"A work of absorbing interest, dealing with one of the burning questions of the day in a manner alike entertaining and instructive."—Irish Independent.

HIS FATHER'S HONOUR.

DAVID CHRISTIE MURRAY.

"As we know from 'Rainbow Gold' the late Mr. Christie Murray was capable of really fine work, and in 'His Father's Honour' we have the work of a skilled writer."—Morning Leader.

SIR MORECAMBE'S MARRIAGE.

FLORENCE WARDEN.

"It is almost a foregone conclusion, when the name of Florence Warden appears on a book, that a good story will be found within, and 'Sir Morecambe's Marriage' is no exception to this rule. This most up-to-date story is well worth reading."—Irish Times.

PRINCE KARL.

A. C. GUNTER.

"A book that will hold its own among the light literature of the present day. The local colour is subtly realized. Just sufficient is the plot to excite the interest without putting too great a strain upon the reader, whilst the dialogue is brightly written."—Harrogate Advertiser.

A TRAITOR'S WOOING.

HEADON HILL.

A book of absorbing interest, which will tempt many to finish it at one sitting.

IN THE DEAD OF NIGHT.

JOHN T. MCINTYRE.

"Feverishly exciting from first page to last."—Liverpool Post.

THE NECKLACE OF PARMONA.

L. T. MEADE.

"Written in Mrs. Meade's well-known and highly popular style."

THE WINDSOR MAGAZINE FOR MAY

(READY ON THURSDAY NEXT)

CONTAINS:—

A COMPLETE STORY OF INDIAN LIFE BY

MRS. F. A. STEEL.

THE PICTURESQUE CLIMAX TO

JUSTUS MILES FORMAN'S

NEW SERIAL 'THE QUEST.'

AN EXHILARATING COMEDY STORY BY THE AUTHOR OF

'MRS. WIGGS OF THE CABBAGE PATCH.'

SIXTEEN ADMIRABLE REPRODUCTIONS FROM FAMOUS PICTURES BY MODERN ARTISTS IN

THE McCULLOCH COLLECTION.

AN ARTICLE ON

THE SHAKESPEARE FESTIVAL

includes

31 FINELY REPRODUCED PORTRAITS 31

of the many distinguished Players taking part in this year's Celebration at Stratford-on-Avon.

SIR W. MARTIN CONWAY

CONTRIBUTES AN INTERESTING ARTICLE ON 'MOUNTAIN ACCIDENTS.'

AND A TIMELY ARTICLE ON

THE EDUCATION OF THE ARMY HORSE.

COMPLETE STORIES BY

FRED. M. WHITE, CHAS. G. D. ROBERTS.

THE WINDSOR for MAY. Price SIXPENCE.

WARD, LOCK & Co., LIMITED, Salisbury Square, London, E.C.

MR. JOHN GALSWORTHY'S NOVELS.

Crown 8vo, 6s. each.

FRATERNITY.

[Second Impression.]

"It will be a document to those in future times who ask, 'What view of the world and man in their own day were people taking in 1909?' It is, for ourselves, not only a picture of our own life, but a picture with a philosophic intention behind it. It answers not only the question, 'Where are we?' but two others, 'Ought we to be there?' and 'How are we going to get away?'"—Times.

FRATERNITY.

"A sincere, strenuous, finely subtle book. It fits into and enlarges the scheme of 'The Man of Property' and 'The Country House.' We read him again in this book—with its extraordinary, almost devilish cleverness so closely allied to its tenderness—with admiration and delight."—Daily Chronicle.

FRATERNITY.

"It is difficult to remember any novel in the English language in which London has been so poetically visioned. There are many things in this book that are unforgettable; there are whole chapters that are masterpieces of delicate and restrained workmanship. Mr. Galsworthy has never written such beautiful English prose before."—Standard.

FRATERNITY.

"Certainly the cleverest novel of the season."—Truth.
"The story is of poignant interest, its truth is as unquestionable as its art is supreme. It is worth whole libraries of ordinary novels."—Pall Mall Gazette.

FRATERNITY.

"Full of the understanding born of human sympathy, a picture of human life painted with sure distinction and artistic power, this fine and fascinating novel raises still higher the reputation the brilliant young writer has won."—Literary World.

FRATERNITY.

"It has a quality that no one appreciative of fine craft can measure, we think, without delight. It is not enough to say that 'Fraternity' is good; it is alive with genius. It is a transcript from life."—Illustrated London News.

FRATERNITY.

"Mr. Galsworthy's new story is noteworthy in more ways than one. An admirable piece of literary work, it is as interesting as its plot is simple and its characters human. The book is aglow with insight and sympathy."—Christian World.

THE MAN OF PROPERTY.

[Fourth Impression.]

"One of the few volumes among recent works of fiction to which one thinks seriously of turning a second time—a book in which an intelligent man could browse with satisfaction, even with profit. It has in it some of the generous qualities which make 'Vanity Fair' the wholly delightful work it is.... The whole is a sound and equable piece of work, deserving high praise."—Athenæum.

THE COUNTRY HOUSE.

[Fifth Impression.]

"A story worthy of his reputation. It is by his knowledge of character, his insight, his literary power, that the author claims and holds our interested attention. 'The Country House' deserves the widest measure of success as a careful study of modern life, and an interesting piece of fiction, presented with remarkable literary ability."—Daily Telegraph.

THE ISLAND PHARISEES.

[Third Impression.]

"A masterly work, strong, vivid, observant, and stimulating; it seems to shine out above anything else in contemporary fiction. Mr. Galsworthy is already one of the few novelists who really count, and it is safe to prophesy for him an ever-increasing fame."—Daily Mail.

London: WM. HEINEMANN.

J. M. DENT & CO.

BEETHOVEN'S LETTERS.

Critical Edition, with Explanatory Notes. By Dr. ALF. CHR. KALISCHER. Translated, with Preface, by J. S. SHEDLOCK, B.A.

This Edition contains a Facsimile in Coloured Photographure from the famous Miniature of Beethoven in his twenty-first year, also Facsimiles of Music hitherto unpublished, &c. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 21s. net.

This is the First Complete English Edition of Beethoven's Letters, and contains over 1,100 Letters and Notes.

Daily Telegraph.—"It is hardly too much to state that here we have the final word on Beethoven, the best of all studies of the man and his innermost self."

A NEW LIGHT ON THE RENAISSANCE.

By HAROLD BAYLEY. Super-royal 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. Over 400 Illustrations.

The design of this work is to explain the origin and meaning of the multifarious "trade-marks" and decorative designs used by the early printers and paper-makers, and as far as possible to recover some of the fragrance with which these neglected emblems were once permeated.

TALES FROM SACCHETTI.

Translated from the Italian by MARY G. STEEGMANN. Introduction by Dr. GUIDO BIAGI. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

Athenæum.—"For Miss Steegmann's translation of more than eighty of Sacchetti's tales we have nothing but praise. It is an excellent piece of work."

A POCKET LEXICON AND CONCORDANCE TO THE TEMPLE SHAKESPEARE.

Prepared by MARIAN EDWARDES. Illustrated. Cloth, 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. net.

Consists of various readings and interpretations of words and phrases, including the latest contributions given in 'The Oxford Dictionary.' The Glossary is accompanied by a Concordance, and illustrations from authentic sources have been introduced as a necessary means of understanding words referring to dress, armour, &c.

NEW POOR LAW or NO POOR LAW.

Being a Description of the Majority and Minority Reports of the Poor Law Commission. With an Introductory Note by CANON BARNETT. 1s. net.

THE NEW QUARTERLY

A REVIEW OF SCIENCE AND LITERATURE.

Edited by DESMOND MACCARTHY.

Contents for APRIL, 1909.

Is Immortality desirable?

G. LOWES DICKINSON

An Essay in Æsthetics

ROGER FRY

Gogol, and the Cheerfulness of the Russian People

MAURICE BARING

Genius

SAMUEL BUTLER

The Physics of M. Gustave Le Bon

NORMAN R. CAMPBELL

The Ideas of William Morris

A. CLUTTON-BROCK

The Old Culture and the New

OSCAR BROWNING

Letters from Thomas Carlyle to the Socialists of 1830

Flaubert and Some Critics

T. STURGE MOORE

Price 2s. 6d. net.

Yearly Subscription, 10s. post free.

J. M. DENT & CO.

Aldine House, Bedford Street, W.C.

FACT IS STRANGER THAN FICTION

THE

LOVE LETTERS OF THOMAS CARLYLE AND JANE WELSH

Edited by ALEXANDER CARLYLE.
Uniform with 'New Letters and Memorials of Jane Welsh Carlyle.'
2 vols. 25s. net.

Daily News.—"The literature of letters will be searched in vain for a parallel to these volumes. Even the love-letters of the Brownings suffer by comparison."

Spectator.—"No one will regret the appearance of these letters."

PRIZE COMPETITION—A PRIZE OF FIVE GUINEAS is offered for the best substitute for one of Mrs. Carlyle's missing letters. See THE BODLEIAN for April and May, 1½d. each, post free, to be had from Publisher only. The time allowed for competitors has now been extended to May 21.

LADIES FAIR AND FRAIL

Sketches of the Demi-Monde during the Eighteenth Century. By HORACE BLEACKLEY. With 16 Portraits reproduced from Contemporary Sources. Demy 8vo 12s. 6d. net

Tatler.—"An interesting and most fascinating chronicle of the lighter side of the Eighteenth Century."

THE LOVE AFFAIRS OF NAPOLEON

By JOSEPH TURQUAN. With 22 Full-Page Illustrations. Demy 8vo (Ready on 30th) 12s. 6d. net

A SISTER OF PRINCE RUPERT:

Elizabeth, Princess Palatine, Abbess of Herford. By ELIZABETH GODFREY. With 17 Illustrations Reproduced from Contemporary Portraits, Prints, &c. Demy 8vo 12s. 6d. net

Morning Post.—"No historical biography published during the last few years surpasses this one in the minuteness of its research and the width of the field it has covered."

THE JOURNAL OF JOHN MAYNE

During a Tour on the Continent upon its Re-opening after the Fall of Napoleon, 1814. Edited by his Grandson, JOHN MAYNE COLLES. With 16 Illustrations. Demy 8vo 12s. 6d. net

Morning Post.—"Very readable and obviously trustworthy and sincere."

MEMOIRS OF THE DUKES OF URBINO

By JAMES DENNISTOUN of DENNISTOUN. A New Edition. Edited by EDWARD HUTTON. 3 vols. 42s. net

Times.—"Dennistoun's delightful work.... the clear insight, diligent research, and literary taste won for his book a place among the classics."

MEMOIRS OF A VANISHED GENERATION

Chronicles of the Knox Family. By Mrs. WARRENNE BLAKE. With 21 Illustrations. Demy 8vo 16s. net

Times.—"It is comfortable to imagine that the world before our time was so comfortable a place. Much of our history has to do with the deeds of such men and women in the mass; and to read their trivial family letters is like standing on the hearthrug in the firelight and listening to evening gossip."

COKE OF NORFOLK

[Second Edition.]

By A. M. W. STIRLING. With 63 Illustrations. 2 vols. 32s. net

The hero of this remarkable book proposed the resolution in the House of Commons which closed the War between England and America. He was the greatest agriculturist England ever had, and introduced swedes into England. He was the last of Gainsborough's sitters. He danced with the bride of Charles Edward, the Young Pretender, and his son, the Earl of Leicester, died only a few weeks ago.

Times.—"Mr. Stirling has given us one of the most interesting memoirs of recent years."

DEVONSHIRE CHARACTERS

By S. BARING-GOULD. With 55 Full-Page Illustrations. Demy 8vo 21s. net

CORNISH CHARACTERS

By S. BARING-GOULD. With 62 Full-Page Illustrations. Demy 8vo 21s. net

In these two volumes Mr. Baring-Gould is at his best. Readers, and indeed writers, will find more stirring romance, thrilling incident, and originality of character in them than in whole libraries of modern fiction.

JOHN LANE, THE BODLEY HEAD, W.

*Just Published.A COMPLETE GUIDE TO HERALDRY

By A. C. FOX-DAVIES
Of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister-at-Law,
Editor of 'Armorial Families,'
Author of 'The Art of Heraldry,' &c.

Nearly 800 Designs and several Plates in Colour specially executed for the Present Work by GRAHAM JOHNSTON
Herald Painter to the Lyon Court.

The aim of the Work is to give in a convenient form, and at a price not hitherto attempted, a comprehensive and accurate guide to the law and practice of heraldry.

Every part of the science and each "charge" is dealt with and explained, both as to its meaning and the rules which govern its use.

"Mr. Fox-Davies deserves much praise, not only for the completeness of his book, but also for his careful regard of evidence—a most excellent thing in any heraldic writer."
Times.

In 1 vol. containing over 600 pp. large square 8vo, cloth gilt, 10s. 6d. net.

*Just Published. A New Comprehensive Work.BRITISH AND FOREIGN ARMS AND ARMOUR

By CHARLES HENRY ASHDOWN
Hon. Secretary of the St. Albans and Herts
Archæological Society,

Author of 'St. Albans: Historical and Picturesque,' &c.

Illustrated with about 450 Engravings in the Text and 40 Plates, mostly from actual Examples, Missals, Illuminated MSS., Brasses, Effigies, &c., and from Original Research in the British Museum, the Tower of London, Wallace Collection, Rotunda at Woolwich, many Private Collections, &c.

A STANDARD WORK OF REFERENCE AND A VOLUME OF MUCH BEAUTY.

"The work of a competent and careful antiquary, but written on popular lines. In consequence of the very large number of good illustrations, it is of no great length."
Times.

In 1 vol. square 8vo, cloth gilt, 10s. 6d. net.

*Just Issued. An entirely New Edition ofFAIRBAIRN'S BOOK OF CRESTS

As against 223 Plates in the 1892 (Third) Edition, there are over 300 in the New Edition. The Text portion has been entirely re-set and greatly extended.

The only authoritative and the most complete collection of Crests and Mottoes in use in this Country.

The Work consists of: 1. Nearly 5,000 Engravings, comprising over 300 Plates. 2. A List of many thousand Crests properly described under the surnames of the individuals using them. 3. A Collection of Mottoes. 4. A Key to the Illustrations. 5. A Glossary of Heraldic Terms.

The above New Edition is now re-issued at 25s. net. (2 vols. 4to, cloth gilt as before.)

"'Fairbairn's Book of Crests' has been a familiar work of reference for nearly half a century... For the arrangement of the volumes we have nothing but praise.... 'Fairbairn' is so desirable a book of reference that its long-continued vogue is in no way surprising."
Standard.

A Cheap Re-issue: Gleeson White's Great Book for 5s. net; original price, 50s. net.

No other Collection is so typical of British Art.

THE MASTER PAINTERS OF BRITAIN

By GLEESON WHITE
Late Editor of 'The Studio,' &c.

164 Plates of Representative British Paintings, with Descriptive Text, Special Introductions, Biographical Dictionary of Artists, &c.

1 vol. decorated boards, 5s. net, and bound in art cloth, 7s. 6d. net.

*CHEAP RE-ISSUE OFMONOGRAMS AND CIPHERS

Designed and Drawn by A. A. TURBAYNE

Includes a larger number of Monograms than any other book, viz., over 1,200 Designs.

Previous price, 37s. 6d. net; now issued at 5s. net (paper covers); cloth, 7s. 6d. net.

"Impossible to over-estimate the value of the work."
Studio.

BEAUTIFUL FLOWERS AND HOW TO GROW THEM

BY

HORACE J. WRIGHT & WALTER P. WRIGHT
The Famous Horticulturists.

Illustrated with 100 Plates in Full Colours from Paintings by BEATRICE PARSONS, ELEANOR FORTESCUE BRICKDALE, ANNA LEE-MERRITT, HUGHL. NORRIS, LILIAN STANNARD, MARGARET WATERFIELD, A. F. MUCKLEY, and F. E. JAMES, and many Cuts in the Text.

2 vols. 4to, cloth gilt, 10s. 6d. net.

VOL. I. JUST ISSUED.

"The amateur will find this work a most valuable guide."
Pall Mall Gazette.

"The large plate illustrations are marvels of colour-printing."
Bookman.

"The authors of the popular but practical letterpress are well recognized authorities, and a notable feature is the collection of fine coloured drawings."
Times.

*A Fine Art Book at a Popular Price.THE NATIONAL GALLERY

One Hundred Plates in Colour.

General Editor—T. LEMAN HARE.

Joint Authors:

PAUL G. KONODY, F. W. LIPPMANN,
MAURICE W. BROCKWELL.

In 2 4to vols. cloth gilt, 10s. 6d. net.

VOL. I. JUST ISSUED.

Criticisms and comments, often of the most useful and inspiring kind, which have previously appeared only in very exclusive or foreign publications accessible to comparatively few, will be brought within the knowledge of every amateur.

"There have been so many failures in the attempt to reproduce in facsimile pictures by the Old Masters that one looks askance at new efforts. The success of Messrs. Jack's 'National Gallery' is consequently something of the nature of a surprise."
Athenæum.

*An Edition de Luxe at a Popular Price.THE WILD BEASTS OF THE WORLD

By FRANK FINN, B.A. (Oxon.), F.Z.S.,
Author of 'Birds of the Countryside,' &c.

Illustrated with 100 Reproductions in their Full Colours from Drawings by Louis Sargent, Cuthbert E. Swan, and Winifred Austin

In 2 4to vols. cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

VOL. I. READY.

"Messrs. Jack have broken new ground in this remarkable work. These splendid pictures make for intimacy."
Parents' Review.

"Is such a presentment of Natural History as has hitherto been only attainable in editions de luxe."
Sunday Times.

*An Imperial Series.ROMANCE OF EMPIRE

Edited by JOHN LANG

CANADA. By BECKLES WILLSON. Illustrated by Reproductions in Colour of Twelve Original Drawings by HENRY SANDHAM.

"Mr. Beckles Willson knows his Canada well. He has made a fascinating book out of the adventures of Champlain, de la Tour, and Tracey. Our author writes with sympathy and enthusiasm."
Spectator.

AUSTRALIA. By Dr. W. H. LANG. Illustrated in Colour by G. W. LAMBERT.

"A volume of truth that reads more like pure fiction."
Observer.

OUTPOSTS OF EMPIRE. By JOHN LANG. Illustrated in Colour by JOHN R. SKELTON.

"We find ourselves occasionally catching our breath at the relation of some dare-devil enterprise which went to the building up of Empire and sea-power."
Saturday Review.

NEW ZEALAND. By REGINALD HORSLEY. Illustrated in Colour by A. D. MCCORMICK, R.I.

"A fascinating panoramic story of our island colony."
Globe.

INDIA. By VICTOR SURRIDGE. Illustrated in Colour by A. D. MCCORMICK, R.I.
"No one who takes the volume up will willingly lay it down again unfinished."
Sheffield Telegraph.

Square 8vo, cloth, with characteristic design, 6s. net per vol.

Also in Roxburghe binding, 7s. 6d. net per vol.

*New Volume by Dr. ParkinSIR JOHN A. MACDONALD

In 1 vol. cloth, 8vo, 380 pages with Frontispiece, 12s. 6d. net.

"It is well that a writer so admirably equipped as Dr. Parkin should have been entrusted with this monograph about one of the greatest statesmen of the Dominion. Sir John Macdonald represented better, perhaps, than any other man the aspirations of Canada, and the story of his public life is in itself a history for almost half a century of that country."
Standard.

THE

WORLD'S STORY-TELLERS

THE BEST OF THE WORLD'S STORIES
IN A HANDY FORM.

Each volume will contain one or more complete stories by one of the greatest story-tellers of the world, an introductory essay by Mr. ARTHUR RANSOME, and a Frontispiece Portrait by Miss J. GAVIN.

Volumes already issued:—

GAUTIER — HOFFMANN — POE — HAWTHORNE — MERIMEE — BALZAC — CHATEAUBRIAND — STORIES BY THE ESSAYISTS — CERVANTES.

Other Volumes in preparation.

"These little volumes of stories form in themselves a literary treasure of rare jewels, and Mr. Ransome's critical introductions double their value."
Bookman.

Cloth, 1s. net; also cloth gilt, gilt top, 1s. 6d. net.

NATURE BOOKS.

THE MOST MARVELLOUS BOOKS FOR 2s. 6d. NET.
48 Colour Plates and Simple Informative Text.

Edited by LOUEY CHISHOLM, the Editor of the now famous "Told to the Children" Series.

THE

"SHOWN TO THE CHILDREN" SERIES

consisting of compact volumes on subjects of general appeal to children, abundantly illustrated with 48 clearly-defined Drawings in Colour, and with Text bearing directly on the illustrations, written specially to interest the child.

The volumes issued include BIRDS (British), FLOWERS (Wild), THE SEA-SHORE, THE FARM, TREES, BEASTS. (Next month BUTTERFLIES AND NESTS AND EGGS.)

By far the most widely sold Nature Books of To-day.

THE "LOOK-ABOUT-YOU" NATURE BOOKS

A CAREFULLY GRADED SERIES OF INTERESTING BOOKS ON NATURAL SUBJECTS.

Containing about 100 pages in bold type, freely illustrated by Blocks in the Text, and with 8 Illustrations in Colour, from Drawings by PERCY BILLINGHURST, and other suitable Artists.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—"As a Nature-Study Reader Mr. Hoare's book is unique in its charm and various excellences. No one but a consummate teacher and zealous lover of nature could have written such a book. In your special department as printer you have nobly backed him up: paper, type, woodcuts, and coloured illustrations are all admirable."

Seven Volumes in attractive boards, 6d. net; also in picture cloth bindings, 1s. net.

The Seven Volumes in One, cloth, picture binding, gilt top, 5s. net.

THE LATEST NATURE SERIES.

"Among all the many nature-books that are being issued for children, 'The Dwellers Series' stands foremost for its clever and accurate illustrations, and simple while extremely interesting text, printed in clear large type on good paper."
Athenæum.

"THE DWELLERS" SERIES

By Rev. THEODORE WOOD

In 4to volumes, bold type, containing 4 Illustrations in Colour, and numerous Text Cuts from: Drawings by F. M. B. BLAKIE

The Series consists of the following volumes:—

1. DWELLERS IN THE GARDEN. Treating of Common Garden Birds and Insects.
2. DWELLERS IN THE POND. Including Sticklebacks, Tadpoles, Toads, Frogs, and Newts, and the various Aquatic Insects.
3. DWELLERS ON THE RIVER BANK. Comprising the Animals, Birds, and Insects to be seen in the course of a stroll along the Banks of a Stream.
4. DWELLERS IN THE WOODLAND. Treating in the same way of the inmates of the Woods.
5. DWELLERS IN THE MEADOWS. Including Hedgehogs, Dormice, Harvest Mice, and the Birds and Insects which haunt the open Fields.
6. DWELLERS UNDERGROUND. Comprising the various Burrowing Animals and Insects. In dainty picture bindings, cloth, 1s. net; covers, 6d. net. Also the Six Volumes bound in One, cloth, picture binding, gilt top, 5s. net. A beautiful presentation volume.

London: T. C. & E. C. JACK, 16, Henrietta Street, W.C.; and Edinburgh.

MACMILLAN'S NEW BOOKS.

VOL. II. JUST PUBLISHED.

A Catalogue Raisonné of the Works of the Most Eminent Dutch Painters of the Seventeenth Century.

Based on the Work of John Smith, by C. HOFSTEDE DE GROOT. Translated and Edited by EDWARD G. HAWKE. In 10 vols. 8vo, 25s. net each.

VOL. II. THE WORKS OF AELBERT CUYP and PHILIPS WOUWERMAN.

Previously published.

VOL. I. JAN STEEN, GABRIEL METSU, GERARD DOU, PIETER DE HOOGH, CAREL FABRITIUS, JOHANNES VERMEER. 25s. net.

Social Life at Rome in the Age of Cicero.

By W. WARDE FOWLER, M.A., Author of 'The Roman Festivals of the Period of the Republic,' &c. With Map and Plans. 8vo, 10s. net.

SECOND AND CHEAPER IMPRESSION.

The Provinces of the Roman Empire from Cæsar to Diocletian.

By THEODOR MOMMSEN. Translated with the Author's Sanction and Additions by Prof. WILLIAM P. DICKSON, D.D. LL.D. With 10 Maps. In 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. net. [Tuesday.]

The Novels of Henry James.

Édition de Luxe. In 24 vols. 8vo, 8s. 6d. net each.

VOL. XV. The Lesson of the Master. The Death of the Lion. The Next Time, and other Tales.

GERVASE.

By Mrs. PERCY DEARMER.

Author of 'The Alien Sisters,' &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The life-history of an idealist, whose ideals finally triumph, but only at the cost of the hero's happiness.

NEW BOOK BY THE WRITER OF 'CONFESSIO MEDICI.'

Faith and Works of Christian Science.

Extra crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

A thorough examination of what Christian Science claims to be and to have done, and is likely to cause much discussion both among those who are in sympathy with its teaching and those who are antagonistic.

Dante's Inferno, Purgatorio, and Paradiso.

Translated by EDWARD WILBERFORCE. 3 vols. Globe 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

Studies in Mystical Religion.

By RUFUS M. JONES, M.A. D.Litt., Haverford College, U.S.A. 8vo, 12s. net.

Mars as the Abode of Life.

By PERCIVAL LOWELL, A.B. LL.D., Author of 'Mars and its Canals,' &c. Illustrated. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

Messrs. Longmans & Co.'s LIST.

THE BEATIFICATION OF JOAN OF ARC.

The Maid of France: being the Story of the Life and Death of Jeanne d'Arc. By ANDREW LANG. With Illustrations. THIRD IMPRESSION. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

"The book is a fine book, written in a fine spirit, and has not a dull page.....Mr. Lang has, indeed, succeeded in his purpose to fill this empty place in our book-shelves, and to depict this glory of her sex 'a star of ancient France.'"

MRS. CREIGHTON in the Church Family Newspaper.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION IN ONE VOLUME, WITH A SUPPLEMENTARY CHAPTER.

Industrial Efficiency: a Comparative Study of Industrial Life in England, Germany, and America.

By ARTHUR SHADWELL, M.A. M.D. Crown 8vo, 6s. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

"The most valuable and suggestive contribution to the living question of international competition that has yet been written."—Chamber of Commerce Journal.

The Springs of Helicon: a Study in the Progress of English Poetry from Chaucer to Milton.

By J. W. MACKAIL, M.A. LL.D., Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"Mr. Mackail lectures with so much unobtrusive learning, tact, and sympathy that one hopes he may bring some to read the old poets for themselves."

MR. ANDREW LANG in the Morning Post.

NEW BOOK BY PROF. WILLIAM JAMES.

A Pluralistic Universe: Hibbert

Lectures at Manchester College on the Present Situation in Philosophy. By WILLIAM JAMES, Professor of Philosophy at Harvard University. 8vo, 5s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

Memoir of George Howard Wilkinson, Bishop of St. Andrews, formerly Bishop of Truro and Vicar of St. Peter's, Eaton Square. By ARTHUR JAMES MASON, D.D. With Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo, 28s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"One of the most interesting biographies published for a long time."—Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette.

A History of the Church of England. By the Rev. M. W. PATTERSON, Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Oxford, Examining Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Exeter. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. (Inland postage, 4d.) [In a few days.]

Pastor Ovium: the Day-Book of a Country Parson. By JOHN HUNTLEY SKRINE. Crown 8vo, 5s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"Mr. Skrine is cheerful as well as earnest, and philosophically deals with mankind as he finds it. His records sparkle with the sidelights of humour and shrewdness and observation; and of course for the literary reader it has many echoes and graces."—Times.

"One of the best sporting novels which has been published for some time."—Field.

Polly Winford. By EYRE HUSSEY, Author

of 'Miss Badsworth, M.F.H.' Crown 8vo, 6s. (Inland postage 4d.)

"A clean, wholesome story, written in an easy, flowing style, without pretence, without straining after effect, and without any other feeling than that life is jolly and well worth living."—Australian World.

Poems. By W. J. CAMERON. Fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net. (Inland postage, 3d.)

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

MESSRS. CONSTABLE'S LIST.

GLIMPSES OF THE TWENTIES.

By WILLIAM TOYNBEE, Author of 'Vignettes of the Regency.' With Photogravure Frontispiece and 24 Plates. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. Glasgow Herald.—"Mr. Toynbee's absorbingly interesting book is in effect a complete review of English Court and political history during the period from the last days of George III. to the death of George IV."

ECONOMIC HERESIES:

Being an Unorthodox Attempt to Appreciate the Economic Problems presented by 'Things as They Are.' By Sir NATHANIEL NATHAN. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

Pall Mall Gazette.—"The author's general attitude may be gathered from his frank recognition that the authority of the professional economists has completely broken down, and that the orthodox teaching requires a thoroughgoing reconstruction... A distinctly valuable contribution to the thought of the day."

PERSONAL RECOLLECTIONS OF WAGNER.

By ANGELO NEUMANN. With 4 Illustrations, demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. Daily Telegraph.—"Call no man a perfect Wagnerite till he has read and digested this addition to Wagnerian literature... this delightful and interesting book."

THE VALLEY OF SHADOWS.

By FRANCIS GRIERSON, Author of 'Modern Mysticism,' and 'The Celtic Temperament.' Demy 8vo, 6s. net.

Aberdeen Free Press.—"He has set down the recollections of an eventful youth with the rare charm that can be wielded only by the accomplished essayist."

Nation.—"A genuine document of much historical interest and artistic force... One scarcely knows whether to admire most the extraordinary tenacity of his memory, or the living freshness of his vivid pictures."

CHAPTERS ON SPANISH LITERATURE.

By J. FITZMAURICE-KELLY. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

Nation.—"Remarkable for sanity of criticism." Athenæum.—"The most valuable English contribution to Spanish letters since the same author gave us his 'History of Spanish Literature.'"

Manchester Guardian.—"These brilliant essays."

FAMOUS WOMEN OF FLORENCE.

By EDGCUMBE STALEY. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. [Next week.]

The careers and characters of some of the famous ladies of Florence whose stories illustrate the Renaissance period.

THE BIOGRAPHY OF A SILVER FOX.

By ERNEST THOMPSON SETON. With numerous Illustrations by the Author. Demy 8vo, 5s. net.

This charming life of a fox, by the author of 'Lives of the Hunted' and 'Two Little Savages,' will be ready next week.

THE DOMINION OF DREAMS.

By FIONA MACLEOD. New Edition, Pocket Size. Cloth, 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. 6d. net. [Shortly.]

The mysterious personality and peculiar genius of the writer who chose the name of Fiona Macleod were never more beautifully rendered than in 'The Dominion of Dreams.' It was the book she liked best herself, and the critics were unanimous in placing it first among her writings.

SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

PRISCILLA AND CHARYBDIS.

By F. FRANKFORT MOORE, Author of 'The Jessamy Bride,' &c.

Times.—"This most entertaining social comedy." Observer.—"For good, festive, but not facetious novels it would be hard to beat him."

THE STORY OF THYRZA.

By ALICE BROWN, Author of 'Rose Macleod,' &c.

Daily Chronicle.—"A strengthening tale, builded of charity, human kindness, and the humour which has tears behind it."

THE PERJURER.

By W. E. NORRIS, Author of 'The Square Peg.' [Shortly.]

LONDON: 10 ORANGE STREET LEICESTER SQUARE W.C.

'The Country Home' on Sale everywhere.

SATURDAY, APRIL 24, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
A GEORGIAN PAGEANT	489
FRANCIS THOMPSON ON SHELLEY	490
IN OLD CEYLON	491
FROM DAMASCUS TO PALMYRA	492
NEW NOVELS (The Love Story of St. Bel; Little Devil Doubt; The City of Beautiful Nonsense; A Young Man Married; Wax; The Threshold; In the Potter's House; Pomp and Circumstance) ..	493-494
BOOKS ON LONDON	494
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (The Unreformed House of Commons; Old Times on the Upper Mississippi; Sunset Playgrounds; Proceedings of the Classical Association; The Press Album)	495-496
SWINBURNE, SONNET BY EDEN PHILLIPOTS; WHITLEY STOKES; "SEX-TOTEMS" IN ENGLAND; "GREAT BRITAIN'S TREASURE," BY SIR NICOLAS HALSE ..	496-497
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	497
LITERARY GOSSIP	498
SCIENCE—THE ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION; RESEARCH NOTES; THE DAYLIGHT-SAVING BILL; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP	500-502
FINE ARTS—THE NEW GALLERY; THE WORK OF MR. FRANK SHORT; OTHER EXHIBITIONS; PRE- HISTORIC ANTIQUITIES IN MALTA; SOME CHURCHES OF SOUTH-EAST DEVON; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS ..	502-506
MUSIC—CHOPIN'S BAPTISM; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	506
DRAMA—MR. PREEDY AND THE COUNTESS; THE DEVIL; THE EARTH; THE CHORUS LADY; WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD; SHAKESPEARE AT STRATFORD	506-508
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	508

LITERATURE

A Georgian Pageant. By Frank Frankfort Moore. (Hutchinson & Co.)

THIS series of eighteenth-century studies is "the practical result of a long conversation which the writer had with the late Prof. Churton Collins upon a very memorable occasion." That lamented critic encouraged him to make public his contention that certain "existing views" respecting personalities of the Georgian period were "grossly erroneous"; and he now does so in a volume which, whatever its faults, has undoubtedly been written con amore, and is therefore eminently readable. It should also be said that it is tastefully illustrated.

Mr. Moore's is no trivial knowledge of the subjects he handles, and he sets it forth with a vivacious pen. His wit is abundant, if sometimes rather boyish, but so is his spleen; and his prejudices, though they undoubtedly help to give colour to his writing, do not serve proportionately to advance his theses. He abuses the plaintiff's attorney too frequently and with too much zest to commend himself to a dispassionate jury. Now and again his accuracy is not unimpeachable, as when Sir Constantine Phipps is termed the earliest of Arctic voyagers, or Sterne included among the satirists of sentimentalism. If Walpole did not "know at once" (he is charged with pretending that he did) that the Rowley poems submitted to him were forgeries, it is pretty clear that he very soon suspected it, and, when backed by Gray and Mason, did not hesitate long about stating his opinion. And how is it that so finished a writer as the author came to pen "at Italy"?

Two of the Georgian studies are concerned with the Burneys, one with Baretti, three with the Gunnings, as many with Goldsmith, and two with Sheridan and his first wife. In all these the writer has a thesis to maintain, which he works up to with no little skill, and always holds his reader, if he does not invariably convince him. But this thesis is often subordinated to Mr. Moore's pet prejudices—an inordinate exaltation of Goldsmith and an implacable hatred of Boswell. Occasional expressions of a fine Celtic contempt for Dr. Johnson, and a few not unmerited censures of Walpole's scandalmongering proclivities, are thrown in as flavouring. The fact is that our author, as an amateur of the chosen century, is not sufficiently catholic. He is not satisfied with proclaiming an admiration without a countervailing antipathy; and the result, though undeniably piquant, does not always tend to edification.

In the opening essay on Fanny Burney the main thesis—that after all too much has been made of the hardship of her Court life, since it gave us her 'Diary,' which is superior to her novels, and brought her money—seems to us reasonable; yet who but its maintainer would deem it necessary to set against Fanny Burney's "genius for observation" Boswell's "genius for recording," with the addition that the latter's "powers of observation" were "on a level with those of a sheep"? The further remark that the author of 'Evelina' "had the artist's instinct for collecting only such incidents as heighten the effect" betrays the popular novelist rather than the biographical critic. Moreover, the concluding observation about the place of the Burney diary in letters does not agree with our ideas of its importance.

Similarly in the second Burney study, the nominal theme of which is the party at the house in St. Martin's Street where Mrs. Thrale first met her second husband, why should it be necessary to denounce the inoffensive brewer and to bracket him as a glutton with Dr. Johnson, in order to convince any one that in marrying Piozzi the lady did nothing derogatory? The long and short of the matter is that at that time there was a strong social prejudice against artists, and that to-day there is not, at least not in all circles. Boswell once more comes in for punishment because he recorded the general disapproval of the Thrale-Piozzi match, and also because he did not sufficiently appreciate "honest Dr. Goldsmith." The latter point is now generally admitted. We will make Mr. Moore a present of the admission that Johnson had no taste for art or music, and that he was wrong about the marriage; nor will we venture to maintain that "Bozzy" excelled in tact or delicacy. We may perhaps take exception to the journalistic use of the term "tragedy" as a title for the Baretti affray, but must express our acknowledgments to its vivid narrator. Baretti seems to have been a singularly unpleasant person, whatever his linguistic talents; and his conduct in regard to Johnson and the Thrales was abominable. It is to be hoped that the one story related to his credit is true. He is supposed to have been visited in prison by a professional rival, who requested his recommendation to his own pupils, so that he might teach them "when you are hanged, sir," and to have refrained from kicking the man out of the place. Mr. Moore in this paper gets in a palpable hit at both Johnson and Burke for indulging their conversational propensities when they should have been thinking only of their friend in peril; and in this case has a legitimate complaint against Boswell for the meagreness of his report of that Baretti trial when "a constellation of genius" enlightened the Old Bailey.

The author retells the story of the Gunning beauties in his own way. He is probably right as to the undue amount of "romance" with which it has been invested, and justified in the scepticism with which he regards George Ann Bellamy's account of the part she played in it. But there seems some inconsistency in his treatment of the characters of the Countess of Coventry and the unfortunate niece who is declared to have resembled her so closely; and his handling of the actress who married the latter's widower strikes us as decidedly captious. Moreover, unless there is a misprint in one case or the other, his "exact chronology of the crisis" (the death of the first Lady Derby and the second marriage of her husband) is at fault. According to the 'Dictionary of National Biography,' March 14 is the date of the death of the first countess—the further approximation between the two events would, of course, heighten Mr. Moore's view of the indecorum of the latter.

A most diverting piece of writing is the third Gunning sketch, called 'The Plot of a Lady Novelist,' in which are exposed the marriage manoeuvres of another niece of the beauties, or rather, as Mr. Moore shrewdly suspects, of her mother, née Miss Susannah Minifie, the novelist. Two ducal families—those of Argyll and Marlborough—were involved, and Walpole wrote a skit in verse upon the affair which is admitted, even by his frequent censor, to have been "really clever," though he will by no means allow that (as Horace wrote) "the family" (Gunnings) had "dragged themselves down into the very dirt," since a Minifie was at the bottom of it all.

"Tragedy with a twinkle—that was Oliver Goldsmith," according to Mr. Frankfort Moore, who is much concerned because his hero was not properly appreciated by Boswell and Beattie. Now, allowing that these gentlemen underestimated the brilliant Irishman, and that Beattie was a little jealous of him, we cannot suppose that posterity has followed their lead in considering him "an awkward lout, a shallow pedant, and a generally ridiculous person." Was it necessary for his latter-day admirer to maintain such extreme propositions as that irony is a special perquisite of the Irishman, that "blarney" and "palaver" are consciously humorous modes of defence; above all, that the humour of an Irish bull is not involuntary? For it seems that Goldsmith was never vain or awkward, but was continually amusing himself at the expense of the obtuse Saxon! We had always imagined that "self-depreciation" was practised by Greeks and Orientals; and have encountered even Englishmen who have at times indulged in mystification. Mr. Moore either proves too much, or he is laughing at his readers, some of whom may be found to set up 'Tom Jones' or 'Amelia' against 'The Vicar' as the novel of the eighteenth century, or to deny the assertion that no other work of fiction of that period is now read "for pleasure." It may also be fairly questioned whether 'The Deserted Village' or 'The Traveller' is "the finest poem" of the eighteenth century, while rivals to the boasted pre-eminence of 'She Stoops to Conquer' (the story of the conception and production of which Mr. Moore tells with spirit) might be suggested.

Finally, Goldsmith may not have been vain, but is the record of his sensitiveness with regard to the success of his best play a valid proof of the absence of this human weakness? Or is it evidence of the "real" vanity of Johnson that he wore a showy costume at the production of that same play? We trow not: the first instance surely tells the other way; and we fancy that Johnson's motive was strictly practical, and has been recorded. With regard to the incident of the Horneck sisters, their friend "Dr. Goldsmith," and the French officers, we have our doubts. It is noticeable that Mr. Moore makes the place "Lisle" in one passage (p. 122), and Calais in another (p. 225).

The author puts forward a good case for the rejection of Sheridan's sister's story (given to Moore) of his secret marriage in France with Elizabeth Linley, about which Fraser Rae expressed some doubt; and he tells most amusingly the story of the "amazing duels" connected with it, which must have been in the mind of the dramatist when he wrote 'The Rivals.' Mr. Moore has not yet discovered the origin of the sobriquet "The Jessamy Bride," but he prints some interesting private correspondence from descendants of the Hornecks.

The volume concludes with two non-controversial studies which show the writer at his best. Whether the shooting at Covent Garden of Miss Reay by Hackman should not be styled tragedy rather than "melodrama" may be a question; there can be none as to the skill with which the subject is handled, and the analytical acuteness shown in the investigation of the development of the action. Even Boswell (who rode with the murderer to Tyburn) gets a good word from the author at last. 'The Comedy at Downing Street' deals in sprightly style with the marriage of Lady Susan Fox-Strangways to O'Brien the gentleman-actor, a framework of fact being filled in imaginatively. It would make an excellent short play if thrown into dialogue form.

Shelley. By Francis Thompson. With an Introduction by the Right Hon. George Wyndham. (Burns & Oates.)

IN the mind of every man and woman to whom poetry is something more than a collocation of metrical lines, life something more than a procession of disconnected and meaningless events, there is, as it were, a shelf dedicated to that supreme criticism which adds, not so much to our knowledge of literature as to the power whereby we appreciate literature, and, through literature, life. There the present reviewer has placed 'The Phædrus' of Plato; there is Dryden's 'Essay on Dramatic Poesy'; there are Coleridge's 'Lectures on Shakespeare' and Shelley's sublime 'Defence'; and there must space be found for Francis Thompson's essay on Shelley. This essay is a profound appreciation of one poet by another, and most appropriately is it introduced by a fine letter from Mr. Wyndham. If we are unwilling to extend to the letter the high title we have bestowed on the essay, it is not that we are blind to the poetic quality of the writer's mind, but merely because by so doing we should hazard our sense of proportion. Mr. Wyndham is not to Thompson what Thompson was to Shelley. Nevertheless, he has raised expectations which he is bound in honour to fulfil; admirers of the poet whom he understands so well have a right to claim some more elaborate appreciation.

On Thompson's essay we have but one stricture to make, which, perhaps, will best be made and disposed of at once. Thompson wrote as a Roman Catholic for Roman Catholics; consequently he adopted a tone of religious patronage which, though not offensive, is hardly artistic. The blemish is infinitely faint; indeed, Mr. Wyndham holds that the "apologia for writing on Shelley," and the "apologia for Shelley," "are but the grey goose-feathers that speed it to the universal heart of man": that is to say, he regards the blemish, not as negligible, but as non-existent. Perhaps he is right; yet we incline to think that once at any rate (on pp. 68 and 69, to be precise) the intrusion of the patronizing spirit has damaged the structure of the essay.

There is a single method, it seems, of appreciating an artist's work: the critic, that he may understand why the artist felt what he did feel, and expressed what he felt as he has expressed it, must try to see the world as the artist saw it. Roughly, success in criticism may be measured by the distance within which this perfection has been approached. The advantages that a poet enjoys as a critic of poetry are therefore evident. Thompson, using his own sure intuition, his opulent but ordered imagination, his sensitiveness to external reality, his delicate feeling for implicit emotion—all that made him an artist, in short—has climbed cautiously up the thin-spun and elusive thread of Shelley's poetry—the only way by which we may come at the heights from which Shelley viewed life—and has sent us back a message for which both readers and poetry are the richer. His first discovery—that "both as poet and man he [Shelley] was essentially a child"—may sound like a commonplace to the dull-witted, but how many of us know the graces and privileges of childhood as well as this critic?

"Know you what it is to be a child? It is to be something very different from the man of to-day. It is to have a spirit yet streaming from the waters of baptism; it is to believe in love, to believe in love-ness, to believe in belief; it is to be so little that the elves can reach to whisper in your ear; it is to turn pumpkins into coaches, and mice into horses, lowness into loftiness, and nothing into everything, for each child has its fairy godmother in its own soul; it is to live in a nutshell and to count yourself the king of infinite space; it is

To see a world in a grain of sand,
And a heaven in a wild flower,
Hold infinity in the palm of your hand,
And eternity in an hour;

it is to know not as yet that you are under sentence of life, nor petition that it be commuted into death."

Sentences like these, in which every simple word is pregnant with meaning, open up vista after vista of recondite truth, the truth that lies about us unseen. The "child's faculty of make-believe"—the faculty which, amongst men, poets preserve and enjoy—is one of the two great secrets of Shelley's genius:—

"He is still at play, save only that his play is such as manhood stops to watch, and his playthings are those which the gods give their children. The universe is his box of toys. He dabbles his fingers in the day-fall. He is gold-dusty with tumbling amidst the stars. He makes bright mischief with the moon. The meteors nuzzle their noses in his hand. He teases into growling the kennelled thunder, and laughs at the shaking of its fiery chain. He dances in and out of the gates of heaven: its floor is littered with his broken fancies. He runs wild over the fields of ether. He chases the rolling world. He gets between the feet of the horses of the sun. He stands in the lap of patient Nature, and twines her loosened tresses after a hundred wilful fashions, to see how she will look nicest in his song."

Then, by a graceful transition, we are brought through our conception of Shelley, the heaven-born child and poet of nature, to a view of Shelley, the heir of the Metaphysical School. Standing in the high places where Shelley stood, Thompson sees him as a true poet of nature, but not of the Wordsworthian type; for he saw in nature "not a picture set for his copying, but a palette set for his brush"; and owing to this view of nature "imagery was to him not a mere means of expression, not even a mere means of adornment; it was a delight for its own sake." This is the second secret by understanding which we come to understand Shelley: consciously or unconsciously, he is a direct descendant from Crashaw through Collins.

"The Metaphysical School, like Shelley, loved imagery for its own sake: and how beautiful a thing the frank toying with imagery may be, let 'The Skylark' and 'The Cloud' witness. It is only evil when the poet, on the straight way to a fixed object, lags continually from the path to play. This is commendable neither in poet nor errand-boy. The Metaphysical School failed, not because it toyed with imagery, but because it toyed with it frostily. To sport with the tangles of Neëra's hair may be trivial idleness or caressing tenderness, exactly as your relation to Neëra is that of heartless gallantry or of love. So you may toy with imagery in mere intellectual ingenuity, and then you might as well go write acrostics: or you may toy with it in raptures, and then you may write a 'Sensitive Plant.' "

Armed with this twofold perspective glass, we are bidden to contemplate the poetry of Shelley, and observe its supereminence in that quality which is admittedly the essence of poetry—the perception and expression of the abstract in terms of the concrete. Given genius, Shelley's childlike feeling for reality and passionate preoccupation with imagery were the natural and necessary parents of this essential quality. But to it something was added; for one moment Thompson turns to a particular passage in 'Prometheus Unbound' (Chorus of Spirits, Act IV.), and in a flash of insight reveals the peculiar treasure of Shelley's mind, shows how he was greater than a great poet:—

"He had an instinctive perception (immense in range and fertility, astonishing for its delicate intuition) of the underlying analogies, the secret subterranean passages, between matter and soul; the chromatic scales, whereat we dimly guess, by which the Almighty modulates through all the keys of creation. Because, the more we consider it, the more likely does it appear that Nature is but an imperfect actress, whose constant changes of dress never change her manner and method, who is the same in all her parts.

"To Shelley's ethereal vision the most rarified mental or spiritual music traced its beautiful corresponding forms on the sand of outward things. He stood thus at the very junction-lines of the visible and invisible, and could shift the points as he willed. His thoughts became a mounted infantry, passing with baffling swiftness from horse to foot or foot to horse. He could express as he listed the material and the immaterial in terms of each other."

We are unwilling to forgo this opportunity of saying a word about Thompson's style; not only the style of this essay, which is as admirable for lightness and perspicuity as for chaste splendour of imagery, but also of his poems, which is often, and often unjustly, censured for obscurity. This charge, to be sure, is generally nothing more than a confession that the critic is ignorant of Latin—a confession apt to reduce literary discussion to the petty commerce of the drawing-room. Yet at times Thompson is, in a sense, obscure, though assuredly it is never the obscurity which arises from thoughts but half laid hold on, and power insufficient for expressing such fragments as have been grasped. Thompson is obscure in the sense that Berkeley is obscure, in the sense that the Greek language is obscure to modern minds: he perceives and communicates relations and differences, shades of thought and feeling, that are beyond the comprehension, or even the ken, of ordinary intellects. Again, he is obscure in the sense that most good poets and poetical writers, Shakespeare, for example, are obscure. The progress of his explicit ideas is accompanied by a progress of implicit emotions; and when, at some sharp turn in his discourse, he calls upon the reader to rise with him to realms of almost inexpressible feeling, he expects him to have followed emotionally as well as intellectually—to take leave of earth from the same high peaks.

"Enchanted child, born into a world unchildlike; spoiled darling of Nature, playmate of her elemental daughters; 'pard-like spirit, beautiful and swift,' laired amidst the burning fastnesses of his own fervid mind; bold foot along the verges of precipitous dream; light leaper from crag to crag of inaccessible fancies; towering Genius, whose soul rose like a ladder between heaven and earth with the angels of song ascending and descending it;—he is shrunk into the little vessel of death, and sealed with the unshatterable seal of doom, and cast down deep below the rolling tides of Time. Mighty meat for little guests, when the heart of Shelley was laid in the cemetery of Caius Cestius!"

Such a passage perhaps, in the intensity of its latent passion, is only to be felt by one who has followed the writer step for step, through all his emotional wayfarings. Ultimately, it must be understood by the sympathetic imagination. Is it not by such imagination that we understand all great criticism, all poetry and art, all that is most profoundly significant in life itself?

In Old Ceylon. By Reginald Farrer. (Arnold.)

"WHEN you leave the Island of Angamanain [Andaman], and sail about a thousand miles in a direction a little south of west, you come to the Island of Seilan, which is in good sooth the best Island of its size in the world."

Such is the recorded opinion of Marco Polo, and many travellers before and since have shared his favourable opinion. For Ceylon has many distinctions: scenery and tropical vegetation of great beauty and profusion, with facilities for sport and travel; a variety of precious stones, with imitations for the unwary; a history beginning long before the Christian era; a religion which remains by its extensive influence one of the moving powers of the world; and a language akin to Pali, which, though now dead for more than two thousand years, was that in which Sakya Muni, otherwise Gautama the Divinely Perfect Being, declared the Way.

These qualities naturally attracted many men of different types, each following the line in which he was specially interested. For its history Englishmen are mainly indebted to George Turnour, who was born in Ceylon in 1799, brought up in England under the guardianship of Sir Thomas Maitland (King Tom), and entered the Civil Service in 1818. Sir J. Emerson Tennent about fifty years ago recorded that Turnour was exploring the Pali manuscripts when Prinsep was deciphering Buddhist inscriptions in Hindustan and Western India, Csoma de Kőrös the Buddhist records of Tibet, and Brian Hodgson those of Nepal. The result was a translation of the 'Mahavansa,' or records of the Great Dynasty, condensed in an 'Epitome of the History of Ceylon,' which, though incomplete when the author died in 1843, is the basis of our knowledge of events dating from five centuries before Christ. Like the 'Rājatarangīni' of Kashmir, it is a metrical chronicle; in it the chief events of each reign, the founding of great cities with their monuments of Buddhism, and the construction of important works for the supply of water are duly set forth, and by it the value of Singhalese literature as material for history is established.

In addition to information about Ceylon, the 'Mahavansa' contains a history of Buddhism in India from 590 to 307 B.C., a period which covers the operations of Alexander the Great and the embassy of Megasthenes to Chandra Gupta at old Patna. The books are stated to be made of leaves of the palm tree two or three inches broad and from one to three feet long, pierced with holes at both ends, through which they are secured by a cord between ornamental wooden covers. The description calls to mind the find by M. Dutreuil de Rhins, in Chinese Turkestan, of ancient birch-bark leaves containing a Buddhist text in early Prākṛit and Kharosthi script, and the account by Dr. Stein of similarly bound books found in the sand-buried cities of the Takla Makán desert.

Turnour was followed by Tennent, whose 'Ceylon,' published in 1860, is valuable as adding much miscellaneous information to the history recorded in the older work. Now Mr. Farrer takes us over the old ground; his book is divided into three parts of six chapters each, and these are of varying merit. He visited Colombo and Kandy, and has recorded his impressions occasionally in a manner not to our liking. Here is a sample extracted from a description of Kandy lighted at night:—

"Across the stillness to our left lies the extended front of the hotel over the quivering gleam of the water, and the barbaric effect of its arcade, illuminated through panes of topaz, amethyst, ruby, emerald, and thrown up again from the lake in smooth answering jewel-flashes of emerald, ruby, amethyst, topaz, becomes a glamour, rich and fairy-like under the transfiguring magic of mother night. And through the healing gulf of silence in which we are plunged pierces only the dim susurrence of cicalas in the trees that stand, immovable black bronzes, along the shore of the water, or up the crowded slopes that now are nothing but enormous crested waves of darkness, foaming up and up to the dense sapphire of the sky."

From this it is a relief to turn to the account in chap. v. of a visit to the Holy of Holies, and better still to the expression, in refreshingly plain English, of the author's dislike of the ills to which travellers are subject:—

"And yet at Dambūlla here are these guardians of the shrines no less greedy than any guide to a catacomb or church. At each successive door in the cliff's face they pillage the visitor, demanding fresh sums before they will open. Even the villagers, who stream up in their wake, will confront you with long written accounts of undeserved misery, and try to make a prey of you; while the guide-boy from the rest-house not only offers no sort of help as to the sums that it is decent to give these people (the only reason for which he was engaged), but ultimately demands a preposterous fee for himself, on the strength of having been perfectly useless.... I disliked the greedy monks, the chattering guide, the pestering villagers; not less did I dislike the ramshackle rest-house, with its bad food and its rude, indifferent rest-house-keeper. And I cannot conceive, nor have ever been able to learn, how any animal can continue to live in such a state of utter fleshlessness as characterizes the typical rest-house chicken. I believe the breed is a special development, evolved, for the traveller's torment and the owner's avarice, to such a monstrosity of nude boniness that one could almost shave with any portion of its anatomy."

Setting forth for the sacred city eighty-five miles from Kandy, Mr. Farrer wisely preferred the ancient mode of travel by stages to the modern railway or motor, and diverged at pleasure to see places of interest. To the leisure thus obtained we are indebted for an account of the 'Mahavansa'; some entertaining stories concerning Buddhadasa, who "was a mine of virtue and an ocean of riches"; and descriptions of Sigiri the lion rock, of Polonnaruwa, and finally of Anuradhapura, the great city which was visited by Fa-hian in 413 A.D. "It was crowded," he says,

"with nobles, magistrates, and foreign merchants; the houses were handsome, and the public buildings richly adorned. The streets and highways were broad and level, and halls for preaching and reading bana [the Way] were erected in all the thoroughfares."

It was the capital from about 437 B.C. to 726 A.D. with interruptions, Polonnaruwa, and eventually Kandy, taking its place.

Mr. Farrer describes the ruins and surroundings of Anuradhapura with evident fidelity and becoming reverence, and ends his book thus:—

"And so, as one gazes over the waste of Anuradhapura, and repeats the invocation, 'Anicca, dukkha, anatta'—'Impermanent, full of disappointment, without fixed personality'—one realizes also that in the higher sense these things, and all lovely things of good intent, are permanent, filled with perfect satisfaction, radiant with an eternal fixed personality that must outlast the stars and the universe. Farewell, then, to the earthly relics of the Sacred City, which is the soul of Ceylon, sleeping peaceful there for ever across the plains of forest that fill the world from the high places of Mihintale. And after Anuradhapura there is nothing else to think of in Ceylon, nor ever can be."

The volume, though not entirely easy reading, because considerable research and learning are inferred, has many attractions, and should be read by all who have a kindly feeling towards Buddhism; the type is excellent, and it is fairly illustrated from photographs.

From Damascus to Palmyra. By John Kelman. Illustrated by Margaret Thomas. (A. & C. Black.)

IN some of the series of "Beautiful Books" published by Messrs. Black the beauty almost hides the book: the pictures, instead of illustrating, seem to efface the writing. This is not the case with Dr. Kelman's latest contribution to the series. Miss Margaret Thomas's drawings are attractive, even under the somewhat garish disguise of the colour-process of reproduction; but the main interest of the book lies in Dr. Kelman's scholarly and at the same time vivid descriptions. He has already produced a notable work on the Holy Land, and the fact that he was formerly the assistant of Prof. George Adam Smith vouches for his sound training in Palestinian research. To this he adds a genuine love of the East and an appreciative sympathy with its people and its ideas. His powers both of observation and description are above the average. In a modest preface he disclaims all ambitious aims, and regrets that, in regard to the history of Palmyra, he has "been able only to look over the edge of a land which I would gladly have explored. Nothing could be more tantalising than thus to hear the call of the ancient East, and yet go no further than the borderland."

But though his visits to Syria had to be snatched in the rare leisure of a busy life, Dr. Kelman is evidently a rapid impressionist, carries an open and sensitive mind, and had the advantage of friendship with experienced residents in the country. He is also well equipped in the literature of his subject, and frequent references attest the care with which he worked up his own experiences in the light of more profound researches. He writes, moreover, with a full sense of the glamour and romance of the East. Yet he seldom irritates us by too purple patches, and his enthusiasm is tempered by that sober reasonableness which Scotsmen believe to be peculiarly indigenous in Britain north of the Tweed:

"The objective of the book is Palmyra, but it reaches its destination by way of Beyrout, Baalbek, and Damascus. Only a passing glimpse of these cities is allowed us, but I have tried to give character to these glimpses by taking each of them as a type or symbol of one aspect of Oriental life. Beyrout may stand for the modern contact of East and West, Baalbek for the same contact in Græco-Roman times, and Damascus sits dreaming her timeless dream."

"Look how wide the East is also from the West" is the exordium of the book, and Dr. Kelman has little sympathy for the process of occidentalizing the former, and less belief in any "real and vitalising fusion" of the two, even in Egypt. In Beyrout, indeed, "the two jostle each other at every corner," but "although the centuries appear to be mixed up in a kind of solemn confusion, there is no question that the new world holds the crown of the causeway." The introduction of Western influences fills our author with dismay, not merely as regards external signs. Every traveller has lamented the degradation of an Arab sheikh who disguises himself in shabby European "reach-me-downs"; but it is impossible to check the process, despite the obvious fact that the change is disastrous to personal appearance:—

"'Paris fashions' is the cry of this deluded land, at the call of which the girls, heavily painted, with short frocks and open-work stockings, with unspeakably gaudy dresses, and hats that neither tongue nor pen can describe, have transformed themselves from one of the finest spectacles in the world to the appearance of a ballet strayed by accident into the daylight. The lads have as a rule preserved the tarbush, the red fez which lights up an Eastern crowd so brightly; but...the gaily cut trousers and the heavy scent that lingers behind those dandies after they have passed tell of a vulgarised and impoverished spirit."

The change is regretted by many of the Syrians themselves, we are told; and they compare their Westernized countrymen to the "crooked walker," the raven, which once hopped gracefully like other birds, but in an evil moment attempted to copy the gait of the gazelle: "Now it walks as you see—neither like one nor the other. And that is what these are—crooked walkers." The East, says Dr. Kelman, is awakening from her dream, but not to any new inspiration:—

"Rather has she awakened to all manner of machines and utilities, pleasures, and fashions and ambitions of place and money. Holding lightly by her ancient and proper ideals, she is now in the act of exchanging old lamps for new"; and it is no consolation to be told that they burn kerosene. Moreover, this extensive transformation reacts upon Western visitors. A vulgarized East makes vulgar tourists yet more vulgar. Undoubtedly "the ancient visitors were more reverent to the mysticism of the lands they came to," and it is a less wistful, and therefore a less sympathetic, Europe that now explores Asia. The spell of the East is no longer so potent as it was, and the loss is the more regrettable since never has the West stood more in need of what the East could once give, and may still, if only it rejects the new false gods—the gift of thought and beauty worshipped for their own sakes, with no thought of utility; the "value of reverence and the value of peace."

Fortunately the corroding effects of European fashions have not yet penetrated the desert. In his admirable chapter on 'Oasis Villages and Arab Life' Dr. Kelman gives a charming picture of the unadulterated Arab. He understands the characteristic humour of the Oriental, and his manner of turning off awkward questions by unexpected replies:—

"The humour of the East is sensitive to any sort of ingenuity, and truth is wholly subordinate to quickness of repartee. A native servant, appearing in appalling déshabillé, was asked why she had not combed her hair. 'Oh,' she replied, 'this is not the week for combing the hair; this is the week for washing the neck!'"

The argumentum ad hominem is, however, the backbone of Oriental repartee. Dr.

Kelman can tell a story well, but we will not retail his anecdotes—they should be read in their context. United Free Presbyterian minister as he is, he takes a scientific interest in the Oriental art of cursing. To curse your religion (though it be his own) is the fiercest expletive of a Muslim, and it is applied without discrimination of the object: "You will hear an old woman cursing the religion of her recalcitrant donkey, or a little child addressing the same language to a fly that persists in alighting on his face." The art of cursing relations is sometimes curiously exercised:—

"A very small kitten, after attempting a raid from several points, at last succeeded in a sudden spring upon a piece of meat. A servant-lad picked up the offending kitten, still holding the meat in firm jaws, and flung it from him with the cry, 'A curse on thy harem!' The kitten was certainly an unmarried person."

Another delightful chapter describes 'The Desert,' and we do not recall any better account of one of its most striking characteristics—its secrecy, the mysterious secrecy so beloved by Orientals:—

"There is nothing which gives a more impressive and a more insistent aspect of the desert than its boundless possibilities as a hiding-place. It is the infinite absence of cover which intensifies this to a point far beyond the suggestiveness of woods or rocks for hiding. The track passed over disappears behind the traveller until all conspicuous objects in it are wiped clean out. This creates a kind of entraînement like that of long forest glades or mountain vistas, but more irresistibly alluring than these. A whispered promise seems to keep imagination ever at the stretch. It is this constant expectancy that partly explains the fascination of the desert, as well as the fear which keeps the nerves of its children so overstrung. . . . So there comes on all men that suspicion of possible watching eyes—not from gardens or from behind the walls of houses, but from hollows, mountains, the very stones of the ground itself—which adds to the eeriness of being alone the greater eeriness of probably being not alone."

In his chapters on Palmyra and the romantic, but too legendary story of Odenathus and Zenobia Dr. Kelman is on ground already covered, as his ample references sufficiently indicate; but he adds his own "note" of sympathetic imagination and quick impression. The book is eminently readable from end to end, and not only readable, but also scholarly. One or two pardonable slips may be pointed out: "Mr. W. M. Conway" has for some time enjoyed a title; "Mr. Yeates" disdains the second e; and the "Celtic League" is unknown in Ireland.

NEW NOVELS.

The Love Story of St. Bel. By Bernard Capes. (Methuen & Co.)

MR. CAPES'S latest book has all the qualities that a good romance should possess: a dramatic plot; swiftness and colour in the narrative portions; and characters that claim and obtain the reader's sympathy. Even the villain has a human and attractive side, and becomes genuinely pathetic in his tragic end, for which the author has drawn with great skill upon the historic episode of St. Catherine of Siena and Niccolò di Toldo. Few are the pages without that "addition of strangeness to beauty" which was for Pater the mark of the true romantic. Moreover, while the writing is forcible and picturesque, it is free from the verbal extravagances which disfigured some of the author's earlier work, though his metaphors are occasionally far-fetched, and he has still a fondness for the curious phrase. He is at home in fourteenth-century Siena, and the vitality of his condottieri and robber barons does not surprise us. Surprise only mingles with admiration when we consider his portrait of Siena's Saint. Seldom has the unique figure, at once mystical and homely, of Catherine Benincasa been so exquisitely and convincingly set forth as in her brief appearances in Mr. Capes's fiction.

Little Devil Doubt. By Oliver Onions. (John Murray.)

MR. ONIONS displays in his new novel an intimate acquaintance with the conditions of a printer's workshop and also with the art classes of London. As a matter of fact, his knowledge may be said to be exercised here very broadly and generously. His intention has obviously been to write rather a bitter satire on the modern state of art and literature as accomplished by Board schools and "half-education." One of his characters in the printing works is constantly muttering curses on the memory of W. E. Forster, and that we may take as the key to Mr. Onions's story. The result of his scheme is that the book as a novel suffers very much, and is not saved by an attempt to give it artificial coherence by the reintroduction of a printer's girl in another capacity later. But we confess to finding the various scenes in printing works, art circles, and the journalistic offices of Battye & Battye of engrossing interest. Probably the earlier scenes in Mason's at Burlborough are the best, because they are the most restrained. The characters that move about the printer's works are vivid and admirably rendered. The London journalistic scenes are caustic and a trifle out of drawing; but they are sufficiently alive to set a reader wondering, and perhaps doubting. The book ends with a display of rollicking satire.

The City of Beautiful Nonsense. By E. Temple Thurston. (Chapman & Hall.)

MR. THURSTON seems to have abandoned his realistic studies of modern life. We should be more disposed to regret this if he had not apparently found a delightful substitute in the shape of sentimental comedy. His first experiment therein, 'Mirage,' was not entirely successful; it was too fantastic and too sentimental. But this latest, which by its title hardly claims to be other than fantastic, is in reality something different. It is good sound sentimental comedy, not always very real, but always very readable and charming, and plausible. We have only to object to the impersonation of a living author by one of the characters, as out of keeping with the delicate fabric, and we are at an end of our adverse criticism. Mr. Thurston can write a love-story, which is one of the hardest things in the world to do; and he can write humorously, which is also a difficult achievement. If he does not intend to go back to "Sally Bishops," he might well develop this vein. After all, why should he go back?

A Young Man Married. By Sydney C. Grier. (Hutchinson & Co.)

So spirited a book on a grandiose scale might have had a more distinctive title. The author displays an astonishing knowledge of the Peninsular War, and the complicated battles waged by Wellington in the course of that remarkable campaign. Her knowledge, indeed, appears to extend to the topography of the battlefields. This is a notable book, and we offer the author our compliments on it as a tour de force. Apart from that aspect of it, the story is thrilling, and only suffers a little in interest by being episodic. The picaresque adventures of Capt. Cinnamond, due to his marriage to a young Spanish heiress, are related with vigour, a sense of character, and unflagging zest.

Wax. By G. Somes Layard. (Allen & Sons.)

'WAX' is a disappointing novel in that it starts from an interesting situation, and steadily retreats. A young man, who has been befriended by a generous patron, finds that he is in love with the very girl to whom his elderly friend is engaged. There might have been some interesting developments given to that theme; but Mr. Layard merely lapses into an extravagance which is almost farcical. He makes use of hypnotism, and gives us an amazing adventure at Madame Tussaud's in a fog. Nor does he appear to have taken any particular trouble with his characters. It is just a happy-go-lucky story such as is now produced in plenty.

The Threshold. By Winefride Trafford-Taunton. (John Long.)

THIS is a clever and a thoughtful, but not an attractive book: the few characters that move through it are drawn with a firm, though ponderous touch, while the whole atmosphere is one of drab depression. We find no enlivening colour-sense, no glimpse of humour to relieve the gloom as the narrative progresses slowly to its inevitable close. The scene is mainly laid in the district of the potteries, and the chief love-interest centres in a young engineer from London and a beautiful "pug-girl" with whom a brutal overseer is also infatuated. Inclination is sacrificed to the claims of faith, and the hero becomes a friar; but he eventually recants, and, upon the crest of a second renunciation, is murdered by the jealous overseer. The author has certainly the courage of her opinions, which she sets forth with commendable clarity and candour. Perhaps in her next novel she will omit certain passages of a slangy nature which here and there strike a jarring note.

In the Potter's House. By George D. Eldridge. (Methuen & Co.)

THE struggle presented might be described as the effort of a man who, under the belief that he has fulfilled his Master's commands, desires to mould his inward life on that of an austere monk while mixing with his parishioners. The task, difficult in any circumstances, is rendered peculiarly so by the conditions existing in his pastorate. How his self-imposed austerity wars with his real sympathy with the waywardness of his people is shown with a rare knowledge of the diversity of character to be found in every community. The story is stronger in its sense of character than in incident.

Pomp and Circumstance. By Dorothea Gerard. (John Long.)

HERE are no thrilling incidents, elaborate characterization, or epigrammatic dialogue. A simple, conventional story is simply, pleasantly told. The heroine, the daughter of an English banker in Vienna, is the only member of his family who stands by his side when financial and social ruin overtakes him. She helps him to escape to London, where, gaining a modest livelihood as a teacher of languages, she is employed to give lessons in Hungarian to a well-connected, ambitious young clerk in the Foreign Office. A charming heroine she is, and the more the course of her love is obstructed, the more obvious does the happy ending become. The book is a careful and pleasing piece of work, its sentimentality being redeemed by a delicate touch of humour.

BOOKS ON LONDON.

Tyburn Tree: its History and Annals. By Alfred Marks. (Brown, Langham & Co.)—Mr. Marks's exhaustive investigations on the history of the Tyburn gibbet, here set forth with great clearness, form a work of much value, which settles a difficulty that has long puzzled historians. The author transfers to Tyburn the hangings of well-known persons which have hitherto been supposed to have taken place at Smithfield, owing to a mistaken opinion that the term "The Elms" referred especially to the latter place. He shows that among the Normans the elm was looked upon as the Tree of Justice, and was planted to mark places of execution. This symbolical character was retained by the elm in France long after its use in connexion with places of execution was discontinued in England.

Certain great landowners had the privilege of erecting gallows on their estates; for instance, we learn from the Hundred Rolls and other documents that the Abbot of Westminster had gallows in fifteen places in Middlesex, in addition to one in the ville of Westminster. These were at Eye, Teddington, Knightsbridge, Greenford, Chelsea, Brentford, Paddington, Iveney, Laleham, Hampstead, Eeclesford, Staines, Halliford, Westbourne, and Shepperton. Mr. Marks refers to several places named "The Elms" which he connects with gallows, and possibly more will be found now that attention has been drawn to this point.

The confusion that has arisen between the Elms at Tyburn and at Smithfield will be cleared up if we bear in mind the fact that the former was the king's gallows, and the latter that of the City of London. The author sweeps away the popular delusion that the gallows was removed about the end of the fourteenth century from Smithfield to St. Giles's, and then to Tyburn. The answer to this blunder is first that the gallows certainly existed at Tyburn at the end of the twelfth century, and secondly, that there is no evidence that a royal gallows ever existed at St. Giles's, although a gallows was occasionally erected there for a special case, as was done when Sir John Oldecastle was executed in 1417, and those implicated in Babington's Conspiracy suffered in 1586.

The earliest date to which the establishment of Tyburn as a place of execution can with probability be assigned is 1108; but the first record of an execution in London at present discovered was in 1177, and this was probably at Tyburn. The first record in which Tyburn is definitely named as the place of execution is dated 1196. In this year the turbulent William Fitzosbert, popularly known as Longbeard, was hanged at Tyburn, although, owing to the assertion of Stow, it is generally stated that his death took place at Smithfield. Among other important executions at Tyburn are those of Sir William Wallace (1305) and Roger Mortimer (1330), both of which have been set down to Smithfield.

The site of Tyburn has been disputed for many years, and the discussion has been somewhat complicated by the confusion of two totally distinct things—the turnpike and the gallows. Through the earnest research of Mr. Marks and some others, it may now be considered as settled that the gallows stood at the end of Edgware Road, in the centre of the space where Oxford Street and the Bayswater Road meet it. This is shown on John Mackay's map of the parish of St. George, Hanover Square (1725), and Rocque's large map of London (1746). Norden's map of Middlesex (1607) shows the gallows, but gives little indication of position.

The next point to mention is the form of the gallows. There is a record of two new gallows being ordered in 1220, but the first mention of the triangular gallows ("the triple tree") occurs in 1571, on the occasion of the execution of Dr. John Story. This, as probably the previous ones, was a permanent erection, subject to renewal from time to time. In 1759 the triple tree gave place to a movable gallows. The latter was erected before each execution, and "when the bodies were cut down was carried off in a cart." The movable gallows was ordinarily fixed near the corner of Bryanston Street and Edgware Road, but the position was often slightly changed. Besides the gallows, there were gibbets at Tyburn to which bodies were transferred after having been hanged on the gallows. The word "gibbet," however, was used loosely, and often made to do duty for the other.

When the permanent gallows was removed, its site was occupied by the tollhouse of the turnpike, which was shifted from the east corner of Park Lane (then Tyburn Lane) to the corner of Edgware Road.

The last execution at Tyburn was in 1783, in which year the new gallows was set up at Newgate. Besides the complete annals of hangings, Mr. Marks incidentally notices various points relating to the subject, such as the drawings to the place of execution. He writes:—

"There were three kinds of drawing. In the vast majority of cases drawing means dragging to the place of execution, where hanging, disembowelling, and quartering followed. But drawing sometimes means dragging till the sufferer died of mere dragging. In some cases drawing means tugging by horses in opposite directions till the sufferer was torn to pieces."

The torture of dragging the prisoner for miles along a bad road, sometimes paved with sharp stones, was afterwards modified by placing oxhide under him. Then came the use of hurdles, and lastly of the sledge.

This book is largely made up of fresh material, and forms a distinct addition to our knowledge. Its value is greatly enhanced by the original collection of illustrations, showing, among other things, the appearance of the triple tree, and its site; also Sir William de Marisco (or Marsh) drawn to Tyburn in 1242 with nothing between him and the rough road; and a representation of the drawing on hurdles in the reign of Elizabeth.

The Private Palaces of London, Past and Present. By E. Beresford Chancellor. (Kegan Paul & Co.)—This is a handsome volume, well illustrated, and containing much useful information respecting most of the lordly houses of London, which will interest a large number of readers. We wish that an exterior view of each of these had been given, as this would help to identify such as have frequently changed their names. The author may claim some authority for his title from the recorded saying of Queen Victoria to her friend the Duchess of Sutherland, "I have come from my house to your palace"; but the junction of "private" with "palaces" sounds rather incongruous.

The greater part of the book is devoted to mansions that still exist, and many of them are the glories of London. A clear and careful account of such well-known centres of rank and fashion as Apsley, Bridgewater, Devonshire, Dorchester, Grosvenor, Lansdowne, Spencer, and Stafford Houses cannot fail in interest. There is a sort of rivalry between Stafford House and Dorchester House as to which is the nobler mansion. The former is well known, but the latter required a good description so that the man who knows only the beautiful exterior may learn something of its wonderful contents—information which the author gives, not forgetting to indicate the presence of one of the finest libraries in the country.

We regret that there is no account of Harrington House in Craig's Court or of Harewood House in Hanover Square. The latter has only just been razed to the ground. Harrington House is a very fine building which has been singularly neglected by the topographers of London. It was for sale a short time ago, but it still exists in the heart of town, although, being out of sight, it is little known. Harewood House, the residence of the great book-collector the Duke of Roxburghe, was one of the finest houses built by the brothers Adam, and its destruction is a great loss. Room for a description of these houses could have been obtained by the omission of some of the earlier chapters on houses in the City and the Strand concerning which there is little information to be had. Mr. Chancellor writes in a verbose style which wastes a good deal of space and does not tend to pleasant reading.

London Passed and Passing: a Pictorial Record. By Hanslip Fletcher. With Notes by Various Authors. (Pitman & Sons.)—At a time when topographical books are so numerous, and some of them show little reason for their existence, it is pleasant to welcome a volume that contains so interesting a series of pictures of old London, the originals of many of which have passed away, whilst others are threatened with destruction. These are true illustrations of the streets, drawn in different styles and various positions by an artist of distinction, and selected with judgment.

We naturally regret the loss of such curious old streets as Holywell and Wych Streets, but the houses were worn out and unfit for habitation, so that it was really an advantage to be rid of them; but surely an effort should be made to save the work of our two great architects—Inigo Jones and Sir Christopher Wren. In the case of the former, the houses designed by him on the west side of Lincoln's Inn Fields, with their pilasters boldly decorated with the rose and fleur-de-lis, ought to be preserved, but several have already gone. Mr. Fletcher has drawn one of these which, according to local tradition, was the residence of Nell Gwyn. This had to go to make room for a new street, but other examples of Jones's bold street architecture, although decayed, ought to be respected, and restored with discretion. Wren's churches are the glory of the City, and were designed to form a setting of brilliant gems surrounding St. Paul's; but they are gradually being cleared away. If the towers had been left in all cases, there would be something to be thankful for.

Although much of old London is lost yearly, there are still left many charming relics of past centuries, such as the Charterhouse, the Temple, Gray's Inn, Clifford's Inn, Staple Inn, and Barnard's Inn. Some of these are represented in this volume. Clifford's Inn is a favourite of the artist, and the drawings of it are good, especially one of a room in the inn (No. 3) which has had the beautiful carving once covering its walls taken from it, and transferred to the Victoria and Albert Museum; but we must let Mr. Frederick Fenn describe it himself, for he lived in it:—

"All the doorways, cornices, and the fireplace were richly decorated with wonderful carving attributed to Grinling Gibbons....In earlier days the room illustrated had been used for the dinners of the Society of Clifford's Inn, and there was at that time a magnificent mahogany dining-table to be seen, and also some fine Chippendale chairs."

The old shop in Portugal Street was worth figuring, but we are surprised that Mr. James Bone should be inclined to credit the modern claim for it as being the original of Dickens's 'Old Curiosity Shop.' The claim cannot be sustained, as reference to Dickens's text will show.

We are indebted to Mr. Fletcher for his picture gallery, and to "the eminent hands" who have written the discriminating text.

Wanderings in Piccadilly, Mayfair, and Pall Mall. By E. Beresford Chancellor. (Alston Rivers.)—In this pretty little book the illustrations are of more value than the letterpress, which is merely an epitome of other books on the same subject. These notes on the heart of the West End are made to gyrate round Stewart's Tea-Rooms at the corner of Bond Street, called "Stewart's Corner." The publisher seems to have felt that to assume this shop to be the hub of the best part of London is sufficiently remarkable to require explanation, so he writes:—

"To begin one's peregrinations at the corner of Bond Street and Piccadilly seems at first sight a little arbitrary, but one soon realizes that in starting from 'Stewart's' and keeping within a half-mile radius of this centre, one is really covering by far the most interesting portion of the West End."

The plates, which are mostly reproductions of old prints, are singularly interesting (especially the coloured ones), and are themselves worth the price of the book.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

WE are glad to note a reissue, we believe at a cheaper price, by the Cambridge University Press, of a most valuable work on the Parliamentary constitution of this country, duly praised by The Athenæum at the time of its appearance. The Unreformed House of Commons, dealing chiefly with borough representation before 1832, and incidentally with many subjects of historical and archaeological interest, was issued by Edward Porritt, assisted by Annie G. Porritt, from the State of Connecticut in 1903, and appears again now also in two volumes. Of these the second deals with Scotland and Ireland. Time has only confirmed the view that the first volume is, on the whole, the most useful book in existence upon the English borough system of Parliamentary representation.

Recent Suffrage agitation among women will cause fresh attention to be turned towards many passages which affect women's place in political affairs. Such, for example, are those where it is shown that women burgage holders were permitted to transfer their right to vote to husbands, sons, and even nephews; or to any man possessing qualification in the particular borough. Distinct from these women burgage holders were women patrons controlling boroughs. Mr. Porritt shows that, although the custom of women attending debates in the House of Commons did not become established until the reign of George II., women "lobbied" for private Bills as early as the last years of the seventeenth century. Attention is called to a speech by Grantley Berkeley in which he pointed out that as early as 1716 women were on one occasion admitted not only to the Gallery, but also to the floor of the House itself.

Among the matters dealt with at the time of the first appearance of the book were important passages showing electioneering on the part of Kings of England, similar to that of which the present German Emperor is a master. The modern Constitution with which the Kaiser has to deal does not allow him the scope possessed by Queen Elizabeth in the grant of charters to boroughs "rotten from the beginning of their Parliamentary history." It is, however, noteworthy that the great creation by Queen Elizabeth, in 1562, of Cornish Parliamentary boroughs, intended to strengthen her in Parliament against the Puritan opposition, did not in all cases produce the result desired by the Crown. Burleigh and Walsingham, among those on whose advice at various times the Queen relied, had friends and relations in the Puritan party; and Tregony and others of the newly created boroughs sent occasionally to Parliament some of the fiercest among the opponents of the Court.

Old Times on the Upper Mississippi. By George B. Merrick. (Cleveland, Ohio, Arthur H. Clark Company.)—The Mississippi is identified for most of us with Mark Twain, whose very name was derived from the cry of the pilot as he took soundings. Mr. Merrick's book is stated to be "the recollections of a steamboat pilot from 1854 to 1863." This, however, is something more than the truth, as Mr. Merrick himself states that his piloting lasted only a few seasons, certainly not over the period mentioned, which covered his life between the ages of twelve and twenty-one. Yet Mr. Merrick had a childhood and youth intimately associated with life on the great river. He was born in Michigan, and brought up at Prescott, at the junction of the Mississippi and St. Croix rivers. In those days the river was the main highway of communication with the outer world from inland States. It drained and supplied Iowa, Michigan, Wisconsin, and others. It ran like a sea, as it does now, and the craft that braved its winds and waters were huge and serviceable boats, many of which are illustrated affectionately in these pages, all being registered faithfully in Mr. Merrick's lists.

Mr. Merrick began life, so to speak, facing the friendly waters, and saw experience as clerk, engineer, and pilot. What he has to tell us of those far-off days when Mark Twain was piloting boats in the lower reaches of the river is interesting—perhaps even more interesting to oversea folk than to his own countrymen. Civilization, thinks Mr. Merrick, has been the undoing of the Mississippi. Once primeval forests spread for hundreds of miles on either bank, and held the snows of winter. Now these forests have gone, and the melting snows and rains drain into the river and produce floods at some stages of the year, subsequently reducing the majestic flow to "the dimensions of a second-rate stream." The railways have killed the Upper Mississippi, as the photographs of Prescott in 1876 and 1908 demonstrate at a glance. But the life on the river was of vivid old-world interest, and we are glad to have some facts recorded, even if the record lacks the imaginative and humorous power of Mark Twain. It is possible, on account of the very naïveté and lack of art in Mr. Merrick's pages, to get a good idea of the life in the fifties. We should have liked a really good map, which is lacking; but we appreciate the immense patience and research which have gone to make the various tables and lists. Also we like the story of Bob Eden, son of an English baronet, destined to holy orders, and of his adventurous career.

Sunset Playgrounds. By F. G. Affalo. Illustrated. (Witherby & Co.)—Mr. Affalo has a good many books to his credit, but he has still to learn that negative information is not interesting: he is too fond of writing about what he did not do, where he did not go, and fishes he did not try to catch. Except where he writes, as it were, with his fishing-rod in one hand and his pen in the other, the present volume is not very much better than the record of a globetrotter who has fixed his itinerary before leaving home, and lets his tour and his book suffer accordingly.

Mr. Affalo's style is frequently slipshod. He takes a flying leap from Panama to Canada to tell us about the mosquitoes in the latter country, and they evidently made a painful impression on him, for he tells us all about them again, in almost identical words, when he arrives in what he calls "The Land of Snows." When dealing with aquatic scenery and the beguiling of fish, however, he is in his element, and writes well and interestingly. The picture of the submarine "gardens" of Catalina, for instance, is satisfactory, and the pages on the yellow-tail tuna could not well be improved. We sympathize with his strictures on "the inordinate thirst for 'buttons'" (the Californian fisherman's equivalent of the golfers' "Monthly Medal") which, as he says, "does much to spoil the true spirit of sport."

The following passage is a fair example of Mr. Aflalo at his best. He is fishing for black sea bass, and is "into" a big fish, and waiting for his boatman's word to "strike":—

"Now, sir, let him have it!"

"I did. Then he let me have it, pulling the rod down into the water before I could slip the butt in the leather socket under my chair, and rushing off with eighty or ninety yards in a mere preliminary frolic. Then, as I got the butt home, Herbert put out the oars, for the sudden moves of a big bass must be followed very cautiously, and the engine is useless for such work. The line was now tight, and we settled down comfortably to what looked like a long interview, the bass towing the boat gently but firmly half a mile further from the land, with every now and again a little joyous rush of twenty or thirty yards off the reel, just by way of showing his quality. I knew that the tarpon tackle was sound enough, so I acted on Herbert's admonition to 'sock it into him.' Such a burst of speed did this inspire that he ran the line through the bait, which came in view, only to be cut loose and recovered by Herbert in case some shark or other marauder might be attracted by it and bite through both it and the line, as had more than once happened to me with a kingfish, when catching tarpon in Florida. Within about twenty minutes, being fresh that morning and full of energy, I had him alongside...."

This was followed by a somewhat similar run, the two fish aggregating nearly 300 lb.

The latter part of the book, where we come to British Columbia and Canada, is more attractive than the beginning. The author, too, seems to be on better terms with his work, and the good passages come more and more frequently. There is a graphic description of a drive through the darkness with an incompetent hand in charge of the horses; and a good account of the National Park at Banff, a district in which, we are glad to note, there is a large and steadily increasing herd of the shaggy bison, once nearly extinct.

Mr. Aflalo tells us that the so-called "harnessing" of Niagara has done very little to destroy the beauty of the Falls, and that there are not so many offensive advertisements as he had feared. He saw Niagara, but "with a stubborn neglect of the 'side-shows.' Thanks to American enterprise, everything is an extra.... It was not so much that I grudged the money, but it seemed profanity to put your hand in your pocket every few seconds to enjoy the freedom of God's masterpiece.... It is this side-show element which ruins Niagara as a spectacle, and neither the advertisement nor the mechanical harness.... It is possible.... to turn your back on the trippers and your face to the Falls, losing all thoughts of man's villainess in the roaring swirl of the waters round Goat Island, or enjoying their more subdued murmur from a solitary seat in the Victoria Park on the Canadian side, the only spot where privacy is possible."

There are many attractive photographs in the book, which is well turned out in every respect, though the Index has apparently been compiled without the author's supervision, as it contains some curious entries, such as "Flamboyant" (an adjective occurring in the middle of a sentence).

THE Proceedings of the Classical Association 1908, Vol. VI. (John Murray), should be read by all classical scholars. They include an 'Interim Report on the Pronunciation of Greek'; a 'Report of the Curricula Committee,' a representative body of teachers; and, inter alia, noteworthy papers by Prof. Mackail on 'How Homer came into Hellas,' and by Prof. Sonnenschein on 'The Unity of the Latin Subjunctive.' The Prime Minister found time to deliver an interesting address as President of the Association in October last, in which he referred to the recent broadening of classical study.

The Press Album is published by Mr. Murray for the benefit of the Journalists' Orphan Fund, and edited by Thomas Catling. The contents are full of brightness and variety. A crowd of well-known artists and authors contribute to the distinction of the volume, which should bring much good to a deserving charity.

SWINBURNE.

CHILDREN and lovers and the cloud-robed sea
Shall mourn him first; and then the mother-land,
Weeping in silence by his empty hand
And fallen sword, that flashed for Liberty.
Song-bringer of a glad new minstrelsy,
He came and found joy sleeping and swift fanned
Old pagan fires, then snatched an altar brand
And wrote, "The fearless only shall be free!"

Oh, by the flame that made thy heart a home,
By the wild surges of thy silver song,
Seer before the sunrise, may there come
Spirits of dawn to light this aching wrong Called Earth! Thou saw'st them in the fore-glow roam;

But we still wait and watch, still thirst and long.

EDEN PHILLPOTTS.

WHITLEY STOKES.

WE may add to the brief note published by us last week on Dr. Whitley Stokes. This celebrated Celtic scholar, who died last week at his house in Kensington, was born in 1830 in Dublin. He came of a family of academic distinction. His great-grandfather Gabriel Stokes was a Fellow of Trinity College, Dublin; his grandfather Whitley Stokes was also a Fellow and Regius Professor of Physic; and his father William was a still more famous Professor of Physic. Sir Gabriel Stokes, the Lucasian Professor of Mathematics at Cambridge, was his cousin.

Whitley Stokes was educated at Trinity College, Dublin, was called to the Bar in 1855, and in 1862 went to India, where in 1877 he became legal member of Council. The remarkable features of his career were the diligence with which throughout life he pursued the study of Celtic languages and the perseverance with which he edited Irish texts. When he died he was at work on the Irish versions of the mediæval prose renderings of Lucan's 'Pharsalia.' "It is my Schwanengesang," he said; "my eyes grow too dim to read any more manuscripts." Yet had he lived he would certainly have attacked some other text. He studied philology under Prof. Siegfried in Dublin, and read the 'Grammatica Celtica' of Zeuss, O'Donovan's grammar, and O'Reilly's dictionary. Thus he began, and was encouraged by O'Donovan and O'Curry, but never tried to attain any colloquial knowledge of the language. His earliest work appeared in 1860, and was an edition of eleven hundred Irish glosses on a Latin treatise on the declensions, and of the Latin text and Irish glosses of the poem known as the 'Lorica' of Gildas. Mr. S. H. O'Grady read the whole, and added some interesting notes. The text of the 'Sanas Cormaic,' a glossary attributed to Cormac MacCuillennain, Bishop of Cashel, who died in 903, and two other glossaries, were Stokes's next work, and appeared in 1862. O'Donovan had left in manuscript a text, translation, and notes of Cormac's book, and these Stokes printed with some philological notes at Calcutta in 1868. In 1866 he finished at Calcutta 'Goidelica,' a collection of Irish glosses, of which an enlarged edition appeared in 1872. In 1870 he printed at Simla the Irish text and a translation of Adamnan's vision of a journey to heaven and hell. He published at Calcutta in 1877 texts and versions, partly based on O'Donovan, of Irish lives of Patrick, Brigit, and Columcille; and in 1882, also at Calcutta, the 'Togail Troi,' an Irish tale of the siege of Troy, in part founded on the 'De Excidio Troiæ' of Dares Phrygius. He edited in the Rolls Series the tripartite life of St. Patrick in 1887. In the "Anecdota Oxoniensia" in 1890 he printed the Irish lives of saints from the Book of MacCarthaigh Riabhach. The huge 'Thesaurus Palæo-hibernicus,' which he issued with Strachan in 1901, though based on the work of Ascoli, Bradshaw, and others, required enormous labour. Stokes printed many other Irish texts and translations, as well as numerous philological papers, two Cornish texts, and some Breton glosses. In 1905 he published with the Bradshaw Society the 'Félire' of Oengus Ceile Dé, a metrical account of Irish and other saints which he had edited in quarto, but from fewer MSS., in 1880.

The works which have been mentioned show the continuous occupation of his industrious life. In his hours of relaxation he enjoyed music, and used to drive out to Richmond Park and take exercise by throwing the boomerang. His interests were philological, and it is curious that he never learnt how to pronounce the Irish language, and could not read aloud a single sentence with correct accent. He often spoke contemptuously of the old scribes, and never showed any affection for the great names of Irish literature. He became the despair of university printers in the vain endeavour, as his works abundantly show, to attain absolute accuracy in an editio princeps of an obscure text. He was intolerant of the mistakes of others, and sometimes denounced men who, like the late Prof. O'Beirne Crowe, were familiar with parts of Irish of which he knew nothing. He had some peculiarities of translation. He often rendered the Irish word baile—the modern word for a town, a townland, and home—by the old English stead; he translated gilla, which has a wider meaning, by gillie; and was fond of the verbs "to fare" and "to bide." He did not always clearly state the sources of his knowledge. This defect is to be observed in his earliest works, and increased as he grew old. It is right to mention it, for it affects the estimate of the value of some of his books. The main effect of his work was to cause Irish grammar and Irish texts to be better known and more studied. Every Irish scholar of the future will have to make himself acquainted with the long shelf of volumes which are the product of the arduous labours during fifty years of Whitley Stokes.

"SEX-TOTEMS" IN ENGLAND.

St. Andrews.

THE Australian "sex-totems" are mysterious things. They are inevitably exogamous, for so are the sexes; but their origin is obscure, and their social influence is of the faintest. Among the Kurnai the emu-wren is the elder brother of the men, and the superb warbler the elder sister of the women. Among the Wotjobaluk to injure a bat is to harm a man; to injure the owl-nightjar is to harm a woman. The women occasionally kill the men's sex-totem and display its body in camp to cause a skirmish, which, among the Kurnai alone, apparently, produces flirtations and proposals. The fight is "a jolly kind of fight, like skylarking," in the Turrbal tribe; and really the practical results of "sex-totemism," which is only known in Australia, come to no more.

In mediæval England, I am pleased to find, the holly tree was the sex-totem of the men, the ivy tree of the women; and the social result was "a jolly kind of fight, like skylarking." The young men entered the hall with branches of holly, singing,

Here comes holly that is so gent,
To please all men is his intent.

In Northern Ireland, as I found out in a curious way, "the holly is a gentle tree," and dear to the fairies. This came out in a recent case of a Poltergeist at a farmer's house. Stones and other objects flew about, and no human hand was ever caught in the act of throwing them. My information was from the parish minister, whose son was an eyewitness. The neighbours attributed the troubles to the fairies, for the farmer had swept his chimney with a large bunch of holly boughs, and "the holly is a gentle tree."

To return to our English "sex-totems." The girls brought ivy into hall; both sexes bade every one speak well and honourably—the men of the holly, the women of the ivy. The end was "a jolly kind of fight," in which the lads drove the lasses out of hall, and sang a song in honour of men and holly, and derisive of women and ivy. It appears to me that the Australian "sex-totems" are of no more importance, and are no more to be called "totems" than our old ivy and holly, for the myth that "the bat made the men, and the night hawk made the women" of the Turrbal tribe merely accounts for the fact that the bat is the men's badge, while the night hawk is that of the opposite sex.

See Howitt, 'N.T.S.E.A.' pp. 148–51, 'Cambridge History of English Literature,' vol. ii. pp. 379–80; for the Holly and Ivy Song, Anglia, xxvi. 279.

The Kentish custom by which the lads steal the "ivy lass" of the girls, the girls steal the "holly lad" of the boys, and the totem effigy of either sex is burnt by the other, is noted in Brand and Ellis, 'Popular Antiquities,' vol. i. p. 68. This custom corresponds to the killing of the men's emu-wren by the women of the Kurnai.

A. LANG.

'GREAT BRITAIN'S TREASURE,' BY SIR NICOLAS HALSE.

A COPY of an interesting and little-known seventeenth-century treatise on trade, commerce, and the Navy, entitled 'Great Britain's Treasure Environing this famous Isle with brazen walls invincible, maintained with great gaine, by forces invincible,' 1636, is comprised in Messrs. Hodgson's catalogue of books and MSS. from the Blofeld Collection, to be sold on Friday next. The work was left in manuscript by Sir Nicolas Halse, and "recovered and painfully recollected out of the old papers and fragments of that worthy and lately deceased Knight," by Francis Stewart [Hepburn], "Eldest Sonne to the late Earle Bothwell."

The work includes five separate treatises, chiefly concerned with schemes for raising funds to replenish the exhausted exchequer of King Charles I., to whom the work was dedicated—and to whom a specially written copy was presented, as may be seen from the only other recorded example, viz., that in the Egerton Collection of MSS. at the British Museum. The latter copy differs only from the one now under notice in being more closely written and on a smaller page, while the binding is stamped in gold on the front cover with the words "Tibi Soli o Rex Charissime."

The first and second treatise discuss "the rich and unknowne worth of youre Mats Brittain's ffishings, whereby Fourty Hundred thousand pounds Sterling by Treaty judiciously and faithfully managed may be gained of the Hollander by way of Fine, for 21 Yeares lease"; while at the end of it "a broad way is layd open" by which the King may enforce his desires upon the Hollander, should they refuse to entertain the proposition.

The third discourse points a way in which the King's "Royall Navy may be doubled in number or tripled in a short tyme," in order "to subdue the Hollanders unto youre Royall pleasures," and at the same time to "force the King of Spaine allsoe to be glad to begg youre Royal Highnes ffriendshipp, favour and aid."

The fourth treatise, which is perhaps the most interesting, sets forth a scheme for coining "Mundick and Silver Tynn"—which the author naively remarks is "all-most as faire as silver"—for circulation amongst the colonists in the New Plantations, which would enable the settlers to "traffique or Trade with the Barbarians or heathen, and will preserve the Treasure of youre Mats kingdome wh^{ch} is now vapoured away with the smoke of Tobacco."

In this way wood and iron are to be obtained for the building of "ffifty Sayle of warlike Shippes of great burthen," which will result in such an addition of strength

"to yo^re Mats force by Sea, as that yo^re Highness shall absolutely Comand the same as yo^re Royall Progenitors have done heretofore."

The last treatise deals chiefly with an "Oeconomick or domestick way" by which the method of "Maulting" may be greatly improved. Halse was the inventor of a new mode of drying malt and hops by means of iron plates, and several orders and petitions made in connexion with this patent are mentioned in the 'Dictionary of National Biography.'

It may be added that the work is written on 82 leaves, and bound in contemporary black morocco. It is ruled in red throughout, the first 123 pp. being numbered, while the remainder consist of an Epilogue, Tables or Breviats, and a "Medulla sive Synopsis totius Opusculi" (sic).

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Coppens (C.), Choice Morsels of the Bread of Life; or, Select Readings from the Old Testament, 2/6 net. Taken from the Douay version with notes.
Drummond (J. S.), Parables and Pictures for Preachers and Teachers, 2/6
Edmunds (A. J.), Buddhist and Christian Gospels, now first compared from the Originals, Vol. II., 9/ net. A reprint of 'Gospel Parallels from Pali Texts,' edited, with English Notes on Chinese versions dating from the early Christian centuries, by Masaharu Anesaki. New Edition.
Free Church Year-Book, 1909, 2/6 net.
Jones (Rufus M.), Studies in Mystical Religion, 12/ net.
Kent (C. F.), The Heroes and Crises of Early Hebrew History, from the Creation to the Death of Moses; The Founders and Rulers of United Israel, from the Death of Moses to the Division of the Hebrew Kingdom, 5/ net each. With maps and plans. Parts of the Historical Bible.
Liber Genesis, Capita Selecta sine Punctis Impressa, 1/ net. Hebrew text, edited by George Wilkins.
Lunoro Portions of Prayer Book, 3 parts, 1/2 each.
Mansfield College Essays, 12/ net. Presented to Dr. Fairbairn on the occasion of his seventieth birthday, Nov. 4, 1908.
Moore (W. T.), Man preparing for other Worlds; or, The Spiritual Man's Conflicts and Final Victory, 6/ net.
Moyes (Right Rev. M.), Saint Anselm of Canterbury, 6d. net.
Robinson (J. A.), St. Paul's Epistle to the Ephesians, 2/6 net. A separate issue of the first portion of the author's 'Commentary on the Ephesians' published in 1903.
Saywell (Rev. J. L.), Manual of Occasional Offices for the Use of the Clergy, with Primitive Collects, Formule, Tables, and Lists, 4/ net.
Smith (Walter C.), Sermons, 5/ net.

Law.

- Journal of the Society of Comparative Legislation, Vol. IX. Part 2, 5/ net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Archæological Survey of India: The Bower Manuscript. Revised translation of Parts I.-III., with facsimile leaves, Nagari transcript, romanized transliteration, and English translation with notes. Edited by A. F. Rudolf Hoernle.
Carter (R. Radcliffe), How to Teach Drawing without Copies, 3/6 net.
Duff (J. R. K.), Pastel, 1/6 net. A treatise for beginners.

Groot (C. Hofstede de) and Freise (Kurt), A Catalogue Raisonné of the Works of the Most Eminent Dutch Painters of the Seventeenth Century, based on the Work of John Smith, Vol. II., 25/ net. Translated and edited by Edward G. Hawke. For notice of Vol. I. see Athen., Aug. 8, 1908, p. 159, and Aug. 15, p. 189.

Moncrieff (A. R. Hope), The Heart of Scotland, 7/6 net. Contains 24 illustrations from paintings by Sutton Palmer.

Parbury (Florence), The Emerald set with Pearls, 21/ net. Reminiscences of the land of Kashmir, with illustrations from water-colour drawings. The volume also includes Moore's 'Lalla Rookh,' with musical additions by Florence Parbury and Guido Zuccoli.

Paris, 3/6 net. Seventh Edition, with 32 reproductions from photographs. One of Grant Allen's Historical Guides.

Rice (B. L.), Mysore and Coorg, 12/6 net. From the inscriptions published for Government.

Venice, 3/6 net. Reprinted Edition, with 32 reproductions from photographs. Another of Grant Allen's Historical Guides.

Poetry and the Drama.

Cotton (Julian J.), A Book of Corpus Verses, 1/ net.
Hewlett (Maurice), Artemision: Idylls and Songs, 3/6 net.
Hudson (G.), Vanderdecken, and other Pieces.

Macbride (Melchior), The Story of Glastonbury and the Grail; or, The Light of Avalon, 4/6 net. A mystery play concerning the introduction of Christianity to England by Joseph of Arimathea.

Pound (Ezra), Personæ, 2/6 net. A mixture of rhymed and unrhymed verse.

Tadema (L. Alma), A Few Lyrics, 2/6 net.

Thaw (A. Blair), Pæstum, and other Poems, 3/6 net.

Tudor Facsimile Texts: U. Fulwell's Like will to Like; Nice Wanton; Youth.

Music.

King's Musick, 12/6 net. A transcript of records relating to music and musicians, 1460-1700, edited by Henry Cart de Lafontaine.

Bibliography.

Bibliography of the Writings of Alfred, Lord Tennyson, Vol. II. The second part of Mr. Wise's admirable work, dealing with 'Pirated Issues,' 'Collected Editions,' and 'Complete Volumes of Biography and Criticism.' For notice of Vol. I. see Athen., Sept. 26, 1908, p. 359.

Clark (J. W.), The Care of Books, 7/6 net. An essay on the development of libraries and their fittings, from the earliest times to the end of the eighteenth century. New Edition.

Library, April, 3/ net.

Philosophy.

James (W.), A Pluralistic Universe, 5/6 net. Hibbert Lectures at Manchester College on the present situation in philosophy.

Political Economy.

Root (J. W.), British National Finance, 5/ net. An extension of studies in the same subject published by the author in 1901.

History and Biography.

Accounts of the Lord High Treasurer of Scotland: Vol. VIII., 1541-6. Edited by Sir J. Balfour Paul.

Bierce (Ambrose), Collected Works, Vol. I., 10 dols. Including 'Ashes of the Beacon,' 'John Smith, Liberator,' 'Bits of Autobiography,' &c. Works of an American reformer.

Boulger (D. C.), The History of Belgium: Part II., 1815-65, Waterloo to the Death of Leopold I., 18/ net. Contains 21 portraits.

Bushell (Rev. W. Done), The Alienation of the Harrow Manors and the Surrender of the Chantries, 1/. One of the Harrow Octocentenary Tracts.

Hart (Sir Robert), The Romance of a Great Career told by his Niece Juliet Bredon, 6/ net. With a photogravure portrait and 32 illustrations.

Kuropatkin (General), The Russian Army and the Japanese War, 2 vols., 28/ net. Historical and critical comments on the military policy and power of Russia and the campaign in the Far East, translated by Capt. A. B. Lindsay, and edited by Major E. D. Swinton, with maps and illustrations.

Maxwell (Right Hon. Sir H.), The Story of the Tweed, 6/ net. Illustrated.

Milton Memorial Lectures, 1908, 6/ net. Papers read before the Royal Society of Literature, and edited with introduction by Percy W. Ames. Contains 4 illustrations.

Russo-Japanese War: Wa-fan-gou and Actions preliminary to Liao-yan, 10/6 net. Prepared in the Historical Section of the German General Staff, translated by Karl von Donat.

Some Reminiscences of Three-Quarters of a Century in India, by a Mutiny Veteran, 2/6 net.

Geography and Travel.

Diver (Maud), The Englishwoman in India, 5/ net.
Hale (A.), The Adventures of John Smith in Malaya, 1600-5.

Lees (F.), A Summer in Touraine, 10/6 net. Contains 12 illustrations in colour by Maxwell Armfield, and 87 other illustrations and a map.

Moore (Mabel), Days in Hellas, 6/ net. With numerous illustrations and coloured frontispiece.

Philips' Handy Atlas and Gazetteer of the British Isles, showing Local Government and Parliamentary Divisions, 7/6 net. Edited by George Philip.

Sports and Pastimes.

Dudley (G.) and Kellor (F. A.), Athletic Games in the Education of Women, 5/ net. The authors write from the University of Chicago.

Education.

Firth (C. H.), The School of English Language and Literature, 1/ net. A contribution to the history of Oxford studies.

Short Manual of the Education (Scotland) Act, 1908, fully annotated with sections from the Children Act, 1908, 1/ net. Edited by S. M. Murray, with notes by John Clark, D. M. Cowan, and others.

School-Books.

- Blackie's English Classics: Byron's Childe Harold's Pilgrimage, Canto IV., 6d.
 Blackie's English Texts: Defoe's Captain Singleton's Early Adventures, Macaulay's John Hampden, Sir William Temple, and War of the Spanish Succession.
 Evans (H. E.), A General Geography of the World: Physical, Historical, Political, 3/6. With glossary.
 Heaton (Ellis W.), A Scientific Geography: Book VII. The British Empire, 2/ net.
 Kirkman (F. B.), The Growth of Greater Britain, 1/9. A sketch of the history of the British Colonies and Dependencies.
 Rogers (Rev. H. G.), A Brief Survey of the World's History, 1/ net.
 Rose (J. Holland), The Reign of Queen Victoria, 1/9
 Sallust: Catiline, 2/6. Edited by D. A. Penick.
 Siepmann's French Series for Rapid Reading: Chateaubriand's Les Aventures du dernier Abencerage, Dumas's Les deux Frères, J. Gérard's La Chasse au Lion, Madame de Girardin's Le Chien volant, Laboulaye's Pif Paf and Yvon et Finette, Xavier de Maistre's Les Prisonniers du Caucase, Perrault's Contes de Fées, Lucie Pezet's Les jeunes Parisiens, Souvestre's David le Trappeur, and Töpffer's Le Col d'Anterne, 6d. each.

Science.

- American Journal of Mathematics, April.
 Annals of Mathematics, Vol. X., No. III., 2/ net.
 Annual Reports of the Progress of Chemistry, Vol. V., 4/6 net.
 Bateson (W.), Mendel's Principles of Heredity, 12/ net. The author's object is to give a succinct account of discoveries in regard to heredity made by the application of Mendel's method of research. Illustrated.
 Cooper (C. S.) and Westell (W. P.), Trees and Shrubs of the British Isles, Native and Acclimatised, Part 3, 1/ net. Illustrated with coloured plates and black-and-white plates drawn direct from nature by C. F. Newall.
 Eugenics Review, Vol. I. No. I., 1/ net. A review on a subject which needs to be widely known.
 Jameson (H. G.), Illustrated Guide to the Trees and Flowers of England and Wales, 2/6 net.
 Lewkowitsch (Dr. J.), Chemical Technology and Analysis of Oils, Fats, and Waxes, 3 vols., 50/ net. Contains 54 illustrations and numerous tables. New Edition.
 Macdonald (I.), Home Nursing, with Notes on the Preservation of Health, 2/6 net.
 Royal Astronomical Society, Monthly Notices, March, 2/6
 South African Association for the Advancement of Science, Report of the Sixth Meeting, Grahamstown, 1908.
 Transvaal Department of Agriculture, Annual Report, 1907-8.
 Weule (Dr. Karl), Native Life in East Africa, 12/6 net. The results of an ethnological research expedition, translated by Alice Werner.

Juvenile Books.

- Hamilton (John A.), A Mountain Path, and Forty-Three other Talks to Young People, 2/6. New Edition.
 Hastie (Rev. J. S.), Under the Blue Dome, 3/6. Open-air studies with young folk.
 Parrott (J. E.), Britain Overseas: The Empire in Picture and Story, 4/ net. In the Young Folks' Bookshelf.

Fiction.

- Bazin (René), The Nun, 1/ net. New Edition. For notice of first edition, see Athen., March 14, 1908, p. 318.
 Combe (Mrs. Kenneth), Cecilia Kirkham's Son, 6/
 Crockett (S. R.), Rose of the Wilderness, 6/
 Dawson-Scott (C. A.), Treasure Trove, 6/. The story is framed in the grey atmosphere of suburban life, which is relieved with patches of humour and character-painting.
 Dearmer (Mabel), Gervase, 6/. The history of an idealist whose ideals finally triumph, though only at the cost of his own happiness.
 Faber (Beryl) and Hamilton (Cosmo), a Sense of Humour, 6/. The story of one day in the lives of four intimate friends.
 Handasyde, Other Things than Love, 6/. Lord George Bentinck is the prototype of the central character, but whereas the one gave up his turf career to devote himself to a closer study of the Corn Laws, the other sacrifices his racing ambition to Tariff Reform.
 Hill (Headon), A Traitor's Wooing, 6/. An exciting tale of the vengeance vowed by a rejected Maharajah. Illustrated.
 James (L.), Side-Tracks and Bridle-Paths, 6/. Many of these sketches, dealing with Persia, Russia, South Africa, and other places, have appeared in Blackwood, The Times, and The Pall Mall Gazette.
 King (Alix), The Romance of a Nun, 6/. The story of a young girl who, adopted as an infant by a community of French nuns, is educated by them, and becomes one of them while in ignorance both of the world she is renouncing and the world she is about to enter.
 Langfield (J.), Biddy the Spitfire, 6/. Has to do with the hunt for a buried box containing 6,000l.
 Luk-Oie (Ole), The Green Curve, and other Stories, 6/
 McCall (Florinda), Double Bonds, 6/. Relates the adventures of a child of the bush, who, left a widow at the early age of sixteen, is taken charge of by her aunt, who wishes to arrange a brilliant marriage for her. The girl is commanded to keep her former marriage secret, and this brings her into trouble.
 Meade (L. T.), The Fountain of Beauty, 6/. A tale of a fatal jewel.
 Nesbit (E.), These Little Ones, 3/6 net. Ten short sketches, with illustrations by Spencer Pryse.
 Norris (W. E.), Clarissa Furiosa, 7d. net. For former notice see Athen., March 20, 1897, p. 374.
 Peard (Frances M.), The Flying Months, 6/
 Ranger-Gull (C.), The Terror by Night, 6/
 Singh (Sirdar Jogendra), Nur Jahan, 6/. The romance of an Indian queen.
 Sutcliffe (Halliwell), Willowdene Will, 3/6. New Edition in the Adelphi Library. For former review see Athen., Dec. 21, 1901, p. 388.
 Warden (Florence), The Veiled Lady, 6/. The starting-point of 'The Veiled Lady' is the appearance in a sleepy village of two women whose conduct arouses suspicion, and the reader is straightway plunged into a series of events of a perplexing character.

General Literature.

- Atkinson (Capt. J.), Guide for Officers and Non-Commissioned Officers of the Territorial Force, 2/ net. With specimen examination papers.
 Collins (F. Howard), Authors' and Printers' Dictionary, 1/ net. Third Edition of this excellent guide for authors, editors, printers, correctors of the press, compositors, and typists, with full list of abbreviations.
 Coomaraswamy (Ananda K.), The Indian Craftsman, 3/6 net. With appendixes by Sir George Birdwood and others.
 Essex Review, April, 1/6 net.
 Gibbons (Stanley), Priced Catalogue of Stamps of the British Empire; Priced Catalogue of Stamps of Foreign Countries, 2/6 net each.
 Gregory (J. W.), Report on the Work of the Commission sent out by the Jewish Territorial Organization, under the Auspices of the Governor-General of Tripoli, to Examine the Territory proposed for the Purpose of a Jewish Settlement in Cyrenaica, 5/ net. The object of the Ito is to procure a territory upon an autonomous basis for those Jews who cannot or will not remain in the lands in which they at present live.
 Greyfriar, April. A school chronicle in black and white.
 Tadema (L. Alma), The Meaning of Happiness, 2/6 net. A discourse.
 Tompson (F. W.), High Licence, 1/ net. A critical examination of the licence duties prevailing in the United Kingdom and the United States.

Pamphlets.

- Buckman (S. S.), An Octaval instead of a Decimal System, 6d. net. An essay to show the advantages of an eight-figure, and the disadvantages of a ten-figure, notation for money, weights, and measures.
 Spanish Placard for Good Friday, 2d.

FOREIGN.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Aynard (J.), Oxford et Cambridge, 3fr. 50. In the series Les Villes d'Art Célèbres.
 Debillemont-Chardon (Mme. G.), La Miniature sur Ivoire: Essai historique, Traité pratique, 6fr.
 Guiffrey (J.), Le Musée du Louvre: Peintures, Dessins, Chalcographie, 3fr. 50.

Philosophy.

- Navarro (M. Romero), Ensayo de una Filosofía feminista: Refutación a Moebius, 3 pesetas.

History and Biography.

- Bizet (G.), Lettres à un Ami, 1865-72, 3fr. 50.
 Longy (Lieut.), La Campagne de 1797 sur le Rhin, 10fr.
 Seillière (E.), Une Tragédie d'Amour au Temps du Romantisme: Henri et Charlotte Stieglitz, 3fr. 50. Charlotte killed herself in 1834 in order to rouse her husband from a morbid condition of mind.
 Turquan (J.), La Dernière Dauphine: Madame, Duchesse d'Angoulême, 1778-1851, 5fr.

Philology.

- Vürtheim (L.), Octavia Prætexta, 2m. A critical edition of the play formerly attributed to Seneca.

General Literature.

- Lanessan (J. L. de), Le Bilan de notre Marine, 3fr. 50.

* * * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

IN The Cornhill Magazine for May 'History and Citizenship: a Forecast,' embodies a lecture on F. W. Maitland by Mr. A. L. Smith. 'Ten Days of a Frontier Show' gives the impressions of a subaltern in a brush with the Afghans. Mr. A. C. Benson writes on 'Jane Austen at Lyme Regis,' and Mr. Horace Hutchinson discusses 'People who go to Plays'; while the breaking-up of Codrington's old flagship the Asia suggests to Mr. John Barnett 'That Day at Navarino.' Short stories are 'Between the Lights,' by Mr. Perceval Gibbon, and 'The Choice,' by Miss Margaret Sherwood. Verse is represented by Miss Millicent Wedmore's 'Jarjaille of Arles: a Provençal Legend.'

THE May number of Blackwood contains a sketch of Sir John Ardagh by Sir Henry Brackenbury, and a poem by Mr. Henry Newbolt entitled 'Sir Hugh the Palmer.' There is a descriptive paper by Mr. W. B. Thomson, entitled 'The Year round in Northern Nigeria,' and other articles are 'The Admirable Crichton,' by Mr. Charles Whibley; 'Sir John Sinclair and Arthur Young,' by A. T. S. Goodrick; 'The Coup d'État in Turkey'; and 'Naval Defence by Panic.'

MESSRS. SMITH & ELDER will publish immediately 'The English Woman: Studies in her Psychic Evolution.' The work is a translation, by Mrs. J. M. E. Brownlow, of 'La Femme anglaise et son Evolution psychique,' and exemplifies the growing study in France of English life.

MR. JOHN MURRAY is publishing 'The Reminiscences of Carl Schurz,' who had a remarkable political career alike in Germany and the United States; 'Memoirs of Col. Kenyon Slaney,' edited by Mr. Walter Durnford; and 'Louis Napoleon and the Napoleonic Legend,' by Mr. F. A. Simpson, a study which is based on careful examination of unpublished material. Translations are to be issued of 'A Short History of the Chief Campaigns in Europe since 1792,' by General A. von Horsetzky, who writes from the Austrian point of view, and 'Rasplata,' by Commander Semenoff, the diary of a naval officer during the blockade of Port Arthur and the voyage of the fleets under Rodjestvensky.

IN Chambers's Journal for May Mr. A. Stodart Walker continues his 'Celebrities I Have Known,' including Gladstone, John Bright, Henry Irving, and J. L. Toole. Capt. Oliphant gives a second instalment of his 'Impressions of Algeria'; and Mr. G. M. Fraser writes on 'The Literary Associations of Dumfries.' Other papers are 'The Charm of the Cheviots' and 'Glimpses of Mexico.'

MESSRS. MACMILLAN & Co. have arranged for the publication of 'The Economic Annals of the Nineteenth Century,' by Prof. William Smart. During his three years' work on the Poor Law Commission Prof. Smart felt the need of such a record. The first part of the work, which will probably appear in the autumn, deals with the period from 1801 to 1820.

'THE ENGLISH IN CHINA' will be published next week by Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons. The author, Mr. J. Bromley Eames, sometime Professor of Law in the Imperial Tientsin University, traces the history of our relations with the Chinese down to 1843, and in a rapid survey summarizes the leading facts of the subsequent developments.

MR. FISHER UNWIN will publish soon a new novel by Mr. H. de Vere Stacpoole. The title is 'The Pools of Silence,' and the scene is laid in Central Africa. The book will complete, with 'The Crimson Azaleas' and 'The Blue Lagoon,' a trilogy of romances of the Tropics and the East.

MR. FROWDE is publishing shortly The Journal of Theological Studies for April. It includes 'Christ before Herod,' by Dr. A. W. Verrall; 'Lanfranc's Monastic Constitutions,' by Dean Armitage Robinson; 'Addenda to "Some Coptic Apocryphal Legends,"' by Mr. E. O. Winstedt; various 'Notes and Studies' and reviews; and a 'Chronicle' of the 'Philosophy of Religion,' by Dr. F. R. Tennant.

MR. RICHARD EDGCUMBE has just completed a new book on Byron, which will be published shortly. In this work the main causes of the separation between Lord and Lady Byron will be revealed from authentic sources. In 'Byron: the Last Phase,' an attempt is made to put the character of the poet in its true light, while the charges brought by the late Lord Lovelace against Mrs. Leigh will be vigorously contested.

MR. SIDNEY LEE delivers at Oxford next Monday the first of the course of lectures on 'The Literary Relations of England and France in the Sixteenth Century,' which he has been appointed to deliver by the Delegates of the Common University Fund.

MR. HUGH S. WALPOLE gives the title 'The Wooden Horse' to a volume from his pen which Messrs. Smith & Elder will publish on May 11th. The story deals with a feud in the family of a certain Sir Jeremy Trojan and his three children.

MR. MURRAY'S new fiction includes 'The Shuttles of the Loom,' by K. M. Edge, which deals with the life of a forest officer in Southern India; 'The Romance of a Plain Man,' a Virginian story by that striking writer Miss Ellen Glasgow; 'The Haven,' a story of a Devonshire fishing village by Mr. Eden Phillpotts; and 'Fiona,' a study of modern life and society by Lady Napier of Magdala.

MR. ANDREW LANG is the third literary chairman who will have presided at the Royal Literary Fund Dinner during the past five years, his predecessors in the chair having been Mr. J. M. Barrie and Mr. Rudyard Kipling. The only speakers, besides the Chairman, on May 13th will be Lord Tennyson, Sir Edward Clarke, K.C., and Mr. Maurice Hewlett.

A MOVEMENT has been set on foot to establish in Southampton a memorial to the Pilgrim Fathers who set sail from that port for the New World in 1620. A circular has been drawn up, containing a narrative of the events of that year, and particulars of the scheme for a celebration. Those who are interested in the movement are requested to write to the Honorary Secretary to the Memorial Committee, Dr. F. J. C. Hearnshaw, Hartley University College, Southampton. Contributions may be sent to Mr. R. G. Oakley, the Mayor of Southampton.

'THE ENGLISH JERUSALEM' is the title of an historical guide to Glastonbury which Mr. George Gregory of Bath is about to publish. The writer is the Rev. C. L. Marson, incumbent of Hambridge, near Taunton.

OWING doubtless to the fact of the day (August 29th) falling within the summer holidays, it has been decided to anticipate the celebration of the centenary of Oliver Wendell Holmes. The proceedings, in the Sanders Theatre, Cambridge, U.S., next Tuesday, will be under the auspices of the Cambridge Historical Society. They will include addresses by Dr. Waldo Emerson of Concord, Col. Thomas Higginson, and others; and recitals by Mr. Charles Townsend Copley of 'The Last Leaf' and 'The Chambered Nautilus.' President Eliot will be in the chair, and graduates of the Harvard Medical School between 1847 and 1882 will be invited.

MR. B. H. BLACKWELL of Oxford expects to publish early in May a volume of poems entitled 'In Itinere,' by Mr. Norton Northrop, of Magdalen College, Oxford.

THE catalogue of rare books and MSS. which Messrs. Hodgson will offer for sale on Thursday and Friday next includes many items of special interest. In another column will be found some account of an unpublished seventeenth-century manuscript, which comes from the collection of the late Mr. T. C. Blofeld, who was well known as Recorder of Ipswich. Other MSS. include a fourteenth-century 'Liber Custumarum' (London) and an old heraldic MS. 'Boke of Knights,' emblazoned; and there is a copy—in the original wrapper—of 'King Glumpus,' by John Barrow, to which Thackeray contributed three illustrations.

DR. D. M. ROSS writes:—

"With reference to the review of Baddeley's 'Scotland' (Athenæum, April 3, p. 406), may I say that the Innerpeffray Library is still at Innerpeffray? I visited it there a year ago."

THE death took place in Edinburgh on Tuesday, in his eighty-seventh year, of Mr. David Lewis, a vigorous Temperance reformer, who wrote much on his special subject, including a 'History of the Temperance Movement in Scotland,' 'The Drink Problem,' 'The Drink Traffic in the Nineteenth Century,' and 'The Drink Trade.'

THE friends and relatives of Mr. John Davidson, who has not been seen since he left his home in Penzance on the evening of Tuesday, March, 23rd, have now come to the conclusion that he has committed suicide. A letter found last week in a parcel containing the MSS. of a new volume of poems by him lends some support to this theory, though it is by no means decisive. We have still hopes that the poet may be alive, and that his movements may be traced.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—

"Two notable names have recently disappeared from the little band of lay advocates for, and exponents of, the teachings of Swedenborg. First in seniority is that of Mr. Theodore Compton, who died on the 12th ult. at Winscombe, Somerset, where he had lived for upwards of fifty years. He attained to the patriarchal age of ninety-two. He, like his wife's grandfather William Cookworthy—one of the earliest translators of Swedenborg's writings into English—retained through life his connexion with the Society of Friends. Mr. Compton's largest work was his 'Life and Correspondence of the Rev. John Clowes...for Sixty-Two Years the Rector of St. John's Church, Manchester,' a third edition of which appeared in 1898. His 'Life of Pastor Oberlin' has had many readers, and his 'Winscombe Sketches' more than a local circulation.

"The second name is that of Mr. George Trobridge, for many years head master of the Belfast School of Art, who died on the 8th inst., aged fifty-eight. His 'Emanuel Swedenborg: his Life, Teachings, and Influence' has had a large circulation in a sixpenny form; and he was engaged upon the preparation of an enlarged and illustrated edition, when attacked by his last illness. His other literary work included 'The Foundations of Philosophy: a Study of the Doctrine of Degrees,' and 'The Letter and the Spirit.' He was, moreover, like Mr. Compton, a constant contributor to the periodical literature of the 'Swedenborgians.'"

AMONGST the latest work from the pen of Marion Crawford is a series of papers in the New York Outlook on the Messina earthquake, entitled 'The Greatest Disaster of History,' the first of which has appeared. These papers are fully illustrated.

M. PASCHAL GROUSSET, a member of the French Chamber, who has just died at the age of sixty-four, was a Corsican by birth, and from his youth an active journalist. M. Henri Rochefort appointed him editor of La Marseillaise in 1869. He took part in the Commune as delegate for Foreign Affairs, escaped in a feminine disguise, and was eventually captured and deported to New Caledonia. He got away, however, to England, remaining in this country till 1881. Grousset was an ardent admirer of ourselves and our athletic sports. Under the name of Philippe Daryl he contributed articles and correspondence to Le Temps, and translated English novels into French. He published a large number of romances, travels, and so forth under one of his many pen-names, André Laurie.

MESSRS. LALONDE BROTHERS & PARHAM of Weston-super-Mare are selling at Lympham Manor on May 11th some rare and valuable books, including a fine Second Folio Shakespeare, County Histories, a beautiful copy of Horæ on vellum, and a Missal of 1499.

MESSRS. WILLIAM WHITELEY have just opened a new department at their Westbourne Grove establishment, a circulating library on an elaborate scale, with comfortably furnished reading-rooms.

THE death in his sixty-third year is announced from Munich of the distinguished Romance scholar Prof. Karl von Reinhardstöttner. He was an authority on the Portuguese language and literature, and published among other works a critical and biographical edition of Camoens, and a Portuguese grammar. Of late years he had devoted much time to Bavarian history. He was too zealous an adherent of the Old Catholic party to be appointed to any of the best Bavarian professorships, and refused all invitations to other German universities.

STEPHEN VON KOTZE, whose death at the early age of thirty-nine is announced from Berlin, was an author of marked individuality, with a strong sense of humour, which made his travels excellent reading. Among his best-known works are 'Australische Skizzen,' 'Ein afrikanischer Küstenbummel,' and 'Im europäischen Hinterhaus.'

WE note the publication of the following Parliamentary Papers: Report on the Finances of Edinburgh University (1½d.); and Regulations for the Training of Teachers of Domestic Subjects (1½d.).

SCIENCE

THE ANTARCTIC EXPEDITION.

National Antarctic Expedition, 1901-1904. —Meteorology. Part I. Observations at Winter Quarters and on Sledge Journeys. With Discussions by Various Authors. (Royal Society.)—The expedition to which this volume relates was that of H.M.S. Discovery, which left Cowes under Commander R. F. Scott, R.N., on August 6th, 1901, and returned to Spithead on September 10th, 1904. The portion of the results here contained has been prepared under the superintendence of the Director of the Meteorological Office (Dr. W. N. Shaw, F.R.S.), with the co-operation of a committee of the Royal Society.

The ordinary meteorological equipment of the expedition was supplied through the Meteorological Office, at the expense partly of the Office and partly of the Admiralty. A number of additional instruments were also provided at the cost of the funds of the expedition. It is evident, therefore, that the provision for scientific observations was adequate and extensive, and the results, as might be expected, are of great value as regards the condition of a part of the earth's surface hitherto but little known. The data of the observations at winter quarters and on the sledge journeys have been carefully examined, and are printed in extenso on pp. 17 to 364, with maps prepared by Lieut. Mulock for the Royal Geographical Society to illustrate the geographical positions. Other illustrations relate to parhelia observed at different places, cloud-formations, and various matters tending to assist in forming a clear idea of climatic and meteorological conditions in distant Antarctic regions. A chart is supplied of the Antarctic Ocean between longitudes 150° east and 150° west, on which the track of the Discovery is marked from New Zealand until the expedition reached its furthest south in latitude 82° 16' 33", when it was in west longitude 164°. This was on December 30th, 1902; but in the early part of that year they had voyaged somewhat further, reaching a point in south latitude 76° and longitude little more than 150° east of Greenwich, where land was discovered, and designated King Edward VII. Land.

The winter quarters were in South Victoria Land, situated in west longitude 162°, and south latitude 77°. No navigator had ever got so far south as this before; and in comparison with Arctic exploration, it may be mentioned that the furthest point reached towards the north was that attained by Capt. Cagni, attached to the expedition of the Duke of the Abruzzi. With a sledging party in the spring of 1900, after the previous winter had been spent on an island to the north of Spitzbergen, Cagni reached a latitude of 86° 33' (at longitude about 64° east of Greenwich), or about 250 miles from the North Pole. Dr. Nansen reached in April, 1895, a point only about 20 miles short of this, in latitude 86° 13' north, at longitude about 74° east. Notwithstanding Commander Scott's adventurous expedition, therefore, the South Pole has been less nearly approached than the North by about 250 miles. This was written, however, before Lieut. Shackleton's achievements had been reported.

It is impossible to speak too highly of the way in which Dr. Shaw and his colleagues have discharged their duty of presenting an important part of the results obtained in a carefully digested form, with excellent maps and other illustrations (many of them from photographs), and the publication of the volume cannot fail to increase greatly our knowledge of a large portion of the Antarctic Ocean.

National Antarctic Expedition, 1901-1904. —Album of Photographs and Sketches, with a Portfolio of Panoramic Views. (Royal Society.)—It was a happy inspiration of the Committee of the Royal Society which published the scientific results of the expedition to issue this splendid Album with the object of illustrating the scenery and natural history of its field of work. Some of these illustrations have already appeared in Capt. Scott's narrative and in other works; but a large proportion of them are new, and are obviously required to make the pictorial record complete. In his Prefatory Note Sir Archibald Geikie points out the value to future explorers of "a permanent connected record" of such physical features as are variable—as snow-fields, glaciers, ice-barrier, &c.

The way in which the publication has been arranged and executed reflects the highest credit on all concerned. There are 165 plates—representing nearly 300 photographs and many sketches by Mr. E. A. Wilson, the latter dealing chiefly with the meteorology and the coastal mountain ranges. Indeed, the panoramas from Mr. Wilson's pencil—one of them nearly nine feet long—cover virtually the whole coastline surveyed, from Cape Adare in 71° S. lat. to Cape Goldie beyond 83°. The excellence of Mr. Wilson's work will appeal to all, and not less his persistence in it during the extreme cold of the southern sledge-journey, when he suffered acutely from snow-blindness. His sketches are reproduced by a new process, which is a model of clearness. There are also two key-maps, based on Lieut. Mulock's admirable charts—one of the whole region, and the other, on a larger scale, of the Ross Island neighbourhood—in which the position of the artist and the photographer of every separate view are ingeniously indicated. It is therefore possible for a reader of the narrative who will compare the maps and the views to follow the explorers through the grand scenery of South Victoria Land. The general editor has been Mr. Wilson, who has written the whole of the letterpress; this, however, has been revised throughout by Capt. Scott and by Lieut. Skelton, whose numerous photographs are far the best in the volume. Each plate is faced by a few lines of description, which add greatly to the value of the pictures, besides giving in each case the photographer's name, the size of the plate, and the date on which the view was taken. Every effort has been made to ensure accuracy, though occasionally (as in plates cxxv. and cxlvi.) wrong dates have been given. Of the plates, twenty are photogravures; and for these and the half-tone reproductions special care has been taken to provide a durable paper.

RESEARCH NOTES.

At the meeting of the Chemical Society on the 13th of March a paper by Dr. Gray and Sir William Ramsay was read announcing that they had succeeded in both liquefying and solidifying the emanation of radium by the use of a compressing apparatus and a capillary tube. The liquid emanation is itself colourless as water, and gives in the dark a faint green or blue phosphorescence; but, if it is touched with a ball of cotton-wool soaked in liquid air, it becomes brilliant, the colour changing to a bright steel blue. If the low temperature thus produced be maintained, the colour of the liquid again changes, becoming first white, then pale yellow, and finally orange; and on the liquid air being removed, the same colours reappear in the reverse order, and the liquid gradually transforms itself into a gas. It is said by the authors that there can be no doubt that the brilliant white light (which appears, when looked at through the microscope, like that of a small arc-lamp) comes from a portion of the liquid having passed from that form into the solid state; but no further experiments confirmatory of this seem yet to have been made. It would be especially interesting to know whether the solid thus formed is crystalline, and whether its rate of dissociation differs in any respect from that of the forms of radium previously known. No doubt we shall hear more about this later.

In his opening discourse to the Congrès des Sociétés Savantes, held last week at Rennes, M. Moreau, Dean of the Faculty of Sciences in the University of that town, gave a useful summary of the views now held by the scientific world concerning the constitution and structure of the atom. M. Moreau treated the general radio-activity of matter as a fact definitely acquired by science, and said that the atom of every substance went through the cycle of birth, life, and death, like any other organism, those formerly thought to be specially stable—such as the atoms of the precious metals and iron—being merely the corpses of "elements" which in a former state had been endowed with different properties from those they now exhibit. He also discussed the utilization of the energy within the atom, which he seemed to consider might one day be possible, although he perhaps went too far in asserting that Mr. Makower's experiments have "put it beyond doubt" that the rate of decay of radium C is capable of acceleration by the application of very high temperatures. He suggested further that the Zeeman phenomenon and the discharge of electrified bodies by ultra-violet light might offer some solution of the utilization problem; and drew an eloquent parallel between our present position with the few grammes of radium salt distributed about the different laboratories of the world, and that of the physicists of Volta's time with the feeble electric currents at their disposal by means of the first chemical batteries. Finally, he mentioned, but declined to consider as proved, the electrical theory which would make all matter to consist, in the last resort, of particles of electricity. A good report of the speech is to be found in the Revue Scientifique of the 17th inst.

A new use for the ultra-violet rays has been found by different French savants in the sterilization of milk and other liquids. In a recent communication to the Académie des Sciences, M. Dastre announced that for some time past experiments have been made in the Physiological Laboratory of the Sorbonne on what he called the "abiotic" properties of ultra-violet light; and two of his pupils, M. Victor Henri and M. G. Stodel, described in another note experiments made by them with mercury-vapour lamps on milk mixed with a large proportion of bacilline cultures, as well as on the milk of commerce. In every case the immediate death of the bacilli was the result, and, as the temperature of the milk was hardly raised in the process, it is claimed that this mode of sterilization avoids most of the drawbacks of the older process of heating to 115° C. A still more striking experiment was described in a communication appearing in the same number of the Comptes Rendus, in which M. J. Courmont and M. Th. Nogier relate how they suspended a 9-ampere mercury-vapour lamp in a metal vessel of 60 cm. diameter, containing 115 litres of water contaminated with all sorts of microbes, including the Bacillus coli and the Eberth bacillus. After the lamp had been set to work, one minute sufficed to sterilize the whole of this mass of liquid, and the domestic use of the rays to destroy bacteria therefore seems to be easy. The lamp in all these cases was made of quartz, which allows the free passage of the rays, and the candle-power employed at the Sorbonne was 1,500, although it seems from MM. Courmont and Nogier's figures that a smaller illuminating power would suffice. A "pli cacheté" opened at the same séance of the Académie showed that M. A. Billon-Daguerre had anticipated some of these results in a note written by him in January, 1907.

The possible existence of a very penetrating radiation, which has been often alluded to in these Notes, has perhaps been brought to a crucial test by some recent experiments. In the March number of the Physikalische Zeitschrift, Herr Theodore Wulf describes some observations made by him at Valkenburg in Holland, in the month of October last, on the leak of a charged electroscope under certain conditions. This he found to be due to the ionization of the air contained therein by a powerful radiation coming from outside, and he declares that this radiation shows a fairly exact correspondence with the periodical variations in the potential of the atmosphere already known. Thus the maximum radiation in winter takes place between 10 and 11 A.M., while in summer it is about two hours earlier; and he considers that the average ionization produced is from 25 to 30 ions per centimetre per second. It varies, however, in different places, and was much less in a stone quarry in which he made some observations. Comparing these results with Profs. Elster and Geitel's experiments in a mine of rock-salt, and with those made by himself and Prof. Gockel in the Simplon Tunnel, the author comes to the conclusion that some of the terrestrial strata act as a screen towards this radiation, while others, on the contrary, emit it. This may be, but there seems nothing in his explanation so far to rebut the presumption advanced by others—M. Pellat, for instance—that the phenomena observed are due to a widespread diffusion of the emanations of the highly radio-active substances.

A communication by M. J. A. Le Bel to the Académie des Sciences, appearing in the Comptes Rendus of this month, goes some way, however, to contradict the last hypothesis. M. Le Bel says he has for some time observed that substances like granite and sand, if surrounded by a sheath of some insulating substance such as asbestos, maintain themselves at a temperature of .02 to .03 C. above that of the surrounding objects; and he further states that these experiments have been confirmed by others undertaken by M. Twing. But he has found that the material of the walls and ceiling of the room in which the experiments are conducted has a great effect on the phenomenon, and he has at last succeeded in getting a cellar roofed and lined with limestone, which gives him constant results. From this he gathers that the chief part of the heat of the rocks forming the crust of the earth is due not to radio-activity, as has been suggested, but to their perpetual bombardment by a radiation coming from some external source. This may be; but the chief argument against the radio-active theory—viz., that the rocks would in that case disintegrate—depends on very delicate observations, and in his paper M. Le Bel gives no hint of necessary precautions taken by him. Moreover, even if this argument be disposed of, there remains Prof. Lenard's theory that the apparent radiation in the atmosphere may be the result of the ultra-violet rays of the sun. Yet the idea of a universal radiation of the kind suggested has been taken up by so many physicists of distinction—notably M. Villard—that any experiments on the point seem worth recording.

A controversy has been for some time waged in the same Comptes Rendus between M. Jean Becquerel and M. A. Dufour with regard to the first-named scholar's experiments on certain uniaxial crystals, such as xenotime and tysonite, which, when exposed to a strong magnetic field, seem, as has been stated in these Notes, to offer a proof of the existence of positive electrons. M. Dufour has objected to this conclusion, on the ground, among others, that the doublets observed by M. Becquerel are due to an incomplete polarization of the light, and that the bands seen are what he calls the "residues of polarization." M. Becquerel replies to this in the current number of the Comptes Rendus with proof that in his experiment all the light is entirely polarized, and that the supposed residues of polarization do not exist. He further shows that the hypothesis of the existence of positive electrons is the only one that thoroughly accounts for all the phenomena observed, which the rival hypotheses of Lorentz and others fail to do. In this he certainly seems to be justified by the facts; but it may be noted that the tube invented by him for the demonstration of his hypothesis in another way, and described in these Notes (see The Athenæum, Nos. 4213 and 4218), has not given satisfactory results in all hands. M. Moulin in the current number of Le Radium points out some apparent defects in the arguments which M. Becquerel derives from it. It will be interesting to see what answer he makes to this criticism.

At the recent Naturforscherversammlung held at Cologne, Prof. Rubener of Berlin delivered a lecture on the relation of matter and energy in the living organism. According to a summary which has just appeared, the root of the matter lies, in Prof. Rubener's opinion, in the chemical processes which accompany the absorption of food, and set free much spontaneously acting energy. He thinks that with warm-blooded animals, while about 95 per cent of the alimentary substances is interchangeable and merely required for the purpose of fuel, the remainder must be present in the state of albumen, so as to maintain the secretory processes, and the replacement of the vital substances lost in small quantities. One of the functions of the organism that require the greatest conversion of energy is that of growth, although this differs enormously in the various warm-blooded animals. With regard to death, Prof. Rubener contrasts the different theories current as to the origin of what he calls "physiological" death, which some attribute to an auto-intoxication starting in the intestines, others to the complete expenditure of a vital ferment, and others to an over-accumulation of the products of metabolism, or, like M. Metchnikoff, to a modification of the brain-cells. Now all the mammals present this phenomenon, that at their deaths—by old age—they have all converted an almost identical amount of energy. Man alone is an exception to this rule, and the only reason that can be assigned for his superior longevity over that of the animals which anatomically most resemble him is, says Prof. Rubener, that his vital substance has a greater resistance. "Voilà pourquoi votre fille est muette!"

A curious question is raised by Dr. P. Baroux and Dr. L. Sergeant in an article in the Revue Scientifique of the 10th inst. on 'The Influence of the Soil on the Face and Character.' One of the authors practises medicine in Flanders, the other in Picardy, and their observations are drawn entirely from these two countries, which, although neighbours, have an entirely different geological formation, Flanders being as flat as Picardy is hilly. These differences show themselves, according to the authors, in variations in the shape of the nose and cheeks, the hair, and the ears; and they are exhibited not only in the human race, but also in the dogs, horses, cattle, and sheep of the two countries. This is illustrated by many photographs which would be more convincing did they not remind one so much of the woodcuts in Baptista Porta's 'Magia Naturalis' by which that ingenious author strove to prove that there are men with leonine, bovine, and other dispositions, because their faces have the same contour as that of the animals which they are supposed to resemble. MM. Baroux and Sergeant, however, account for the variations observed by the theory that the more humid air of Flanders, for instance, makes a nose with more widely opened nostrils, finer and more abundant hair, and the like, a physiological necessity. The idea is well worked out, and, while the authors' arguments are not convincing when they take up the psychological side of their thesis, they may be commended as one of the few serious attempts that have been made to find a scientific basis for the study of physiognomy.

F. L.

THE DAYLIGHT-SAVING BILL.

SIR ROBERT BALL is reported to have said, at the Guildhall meeting on the so-called Daylight-Saving Bill, that the introduction of another reckoning of time would not be any serious objection to the scheme, because there are already four kinds of reckoning in use. As this way of putting the matter may lead to misconception, it is desirable to consider these seriatim.

The four are mean time, apparent time, local time, and sidereal time.

1. Mean time is what we always use, reckoning it from Greenwich in this country.

2. Apparent time is only registered on sundials, and whoever takes time from a sundial takes care to add or subtract the equation of time so as to get mean time. Clocks could not be made to keep apparent time, because the length of every day is slightly different from the preceding and following. But the difference between mean and apparent time seldom exceeds a few minutes, being about sixteen at a maximum.

3. Local time is never used now. The railways ended clocks being regulated in that way, because, if still used, it would make it necessary to change the reckoning of time during a journey of a few hours' duration.

4. Sidereal time is, and must be, in constant use in observatories, because right ascensions are measured by it, the hour-hand of a sidereal clock being regulated to make a complete round whilst the earth turns on its axis. But sidereal time is used only in observatories, and for this special purpose.

On the whole, then, the time by which we regulate the actions of our lives is mean time, and that alone. Any interference with it would, as has been previously indicated in these columns, lead to indescribable confusion, whilst it would be unnecessary as an inducement to rise or begin work earlier at certain seasons.

W. T. LYNN.

SOCIETIES.

ROYAL NUMISMATIC.—April 15.—Mr. Horace W. Monckton, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. W. Marsh exhibited a heavy groat of Edward IV. with the mint-mark a rose and with a quatrefoil on each side of the King's neck on the obverse; and Lieut.-Col. H. W. Morrieson a series of light groats of the same reign with the mint-marks rose and crown, sun and crown, cross fitchée and rose, and annulet.

Mr. F. A. Walters read the second and concluding portion of his paper on the coinage of Edward IV (1461-70). The writer dealt with the light coinage of this reign, which, though ordered in 1461, does not appear to have been completely carried out till the following year. A new gold coinage was introduced, consisting of the rose noble or ryal and its divisions the half and quarter rose noble. These coins differed somewhat in type from the previous nobles, and the current value of the ryal was placed at 10s., whilst the value of the old noble was raised to 8s. 4d. An entirely new coin called the angel noble, of the value of 6s. 8d., was also ordered; but its issue appears to have been deferred for a few years, i.e., till 1470. In order to facilitate the striking of these new gold coins, Edward extended their issue to several of the local mints—Bristol, Coventry, York, and Norwich. The silver coinage was also reduced in weight, the penny of 12 grains being substituted for that of 15 grains. In the earlier issues the rose mint-mark was continued, but this soon gave way to the sun and crown, and later to the cross fitchée, which was adopted shortly before the restoration of Henry VI. (1470-71). Mr. Walters described the more important pieces of the London and provincial mints, distinguishing in the case of Canterbury, Durham, and York between such as were struck under the authority of the King and those of the bishop or archbishop. In subsequent papers the writer proposes to deal with the coinages of Henry VI. issued during 1470-71, and those of Edward IV. which followed his restoration. In connexion with his paper Mr. Walters exhibited a unique half-groat of Norwich, and pennies of Canterbury, Bristol, and York of specially rare types.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Institute of Actuaries, 5.—'Notes on Mortality and Life Assurance in India,' Mr. A. T. Winter.
- Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—'Road Motors,' Col. H. C. L. Holden. (James Forrest Lecture.)
- Society of Arts, 8.—'Aerial Flight,' Lecture I., Mr. F. W. Lanchester. (Cantor Lecture.)
- TUES. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Brain in Relation to Right-Handedness and Speech,' Lecture II., Prof. F. W. Mott.
- Statistical, 5.—'The Increase in the National Consumption of Water,' Mr. W. R. Baldwin-Wiseman.
- Faraday, 8.—'Experiments on the Current and Energy-Efficiencies of the Finlay Alkali Chlorine Cell,' Dr. F. G. Donnan, Dr. J. T. Barker, and Mr. B. P. Hill; 'On the Coefficients of Absorption of Nitrogen and Oxygen in Distilled Water and Sea-Water, and of Atmospheric Carbonic Acid in Sea-Water,' Dr. C. J. J. Fox; 'On the Electromotive Force of certain Platinum Compounds, with Special Reference to the Oxygen-Hydrogen Gas Cell,' Dr. P. E. Spielmann.
- Institution of Civil Engineers, 8.—Annual Meeting.
- WED. British Numismatic, 8.—'The Coinage of Prasutagus,' Mr. H. Laver; 'Bed-rock Principles of Mediæval Numismatics,' Mr. Shirley Fox.
- Geological, 8.—'The Boulders of the Cambridge Drift: their Distribution and Origin,' Messrs. R. H. Rastall and J. Romanes; 'The Nephrite and Magnesian Rocks of the South Island of New Zealand,' Mr. A. M. Finlayson.
- Society of Arts, 8.—'The Resources of the Peruvian Andes and Amazon,' Mr. C. R. Enock.
- THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'Aspects of Applied Aesthetics: (II.) Landscape, Old and New,' Mr. J. Paterson.
- Society of Arts, 4.30.—'The Problem of Indian Labour Supply,' Mr. S. H. Fremantle.
- Society of Antiquaries, 8.30.
- FRI. Royal Institution, 9.—'The Pitfalls of Biography,' Mr. Edmund Gosse.
- SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Earth Movements of the Italian Coast and their Effects,' Lecture II., Mr. R. T. Gunther.

Science Gossip.

THE well-known explorer Prof. Otto Nordenskjöld of Gothenburg intends during the summer months to visit the west coast of Greenland for geographical and geological purposes.

THE permanent committee of the Astrographic Congress of 1887 met at Paris this week, to make arrangements for the completion of the unexecuted part of the work of the international chart and catalogue of the heavens, initiated at the same place under the late Admiral Mouchez. The work was divided amongst sixteen observatories, but has proceeded at very different rates according to their means and opportunities, so that whilst some portions are virtually completed, others are far behind. The steps now being taken at the suggestion of M. Baillaud, the present Director of the Paris Observatory, will, it is hoped, lead to the rectification of the deficiencies.

WE have received the 'Calendrier-Annuaire' of the Zi-ka Wei Observatory for 1909, published at Shanghai by the Imprimerie de la Mission catholique, which contains many astronomical data for the year (including maps of the constellations and planets for each month), as well as a great deal of general information useful to those resident in China. The position of the Zi-ka Wei Observatory is north latitude $31^{\circ} 12'$, east longitude (from Greenwich) $116^{\circ} 46'$.

MESSRS. WITHERBY & Co. have in preparation an important work on 'The Birds of Kent' by Dr. Norman F. Ticehurst, who is well known among ornithologists as a close observer. The work will be published by subscription, and in a limited edition.

MR. MURRAY is publishing 'The Life of Sir William Broadbent,' told mainly in his letters, and edited by his daughter; 'An Egyptian Oasis,' by Mr. H. J. L. Beadnell, which is based on twelve years' survey and exploration in the Libyan desert; and 'The French System of Intensive Cultivation,' by Mr. John Weathers, a description of the remarkable results attained by market gardening in the neighbourhood of Paris.

THE Annual Report of the Imperial College of Science and Technology ($1\frac{1}{2}d.$) is published as a Parliamentary Paper.

FINE ARTS

THE NEW GALLERY.

THE Spring Exhibitions of the New Gallery have for some years furnished occasions for much searching of spirit on the part of the conscientious art-critic. He would fain have seen in this, the principal rival to the exhibition at the Royal Academy, a better show than was provided by the undigested crowding together of everything that happened to fit. Yet, though pre-disposed to praise by the reasonable scale of the exhibition and its comparatively harmonious hanging, he has year by year been forced to the conclusion that the intrinsic merit of the pictures was on the whole distinctly less than it is at Burlington House. Perhaps the directors concerned in selecting pictures were not sufficiently proof against the well-mannered and well-connected painter armed with an introduction, and indeed the genial "good fellow" type of man, so useful in many walks of life, is the last person to be trusted in these days with the formation of a picture exhibition. At all events, the gathering of picture by personal invitation had resulted latterly in collections of such characterless work that most onlookers must have been glad to hear that this year the exhibition was to be placed on another footing, and to be limited, like those of many other societies, to subscribing members.

It is sad to have to record that the result shows no such improvement as we had anticipated. There are perhaps fewer incapable pictures—the amateur is less in evidence; but notable works are even rarer than they were. We have seldom seen pictures of Mr. D. Y. Cameron, Mr. Hughes Stanton, or Mr. Arthur Lemon look better than they do here; the reason, however, is not that these artists have surpassed themselves, but that they have a foil in an extensive background of dullness. The little Box Hill (81), by the last-named painter is within its modest limits a delightful picture. It is admirably simple and unified, yet its paint is very varied in quality, the solidity of the foreground contrasting easily with the subtler texture of the distance, while the movement of the advancing horses and the quiescence of the standing ones are equally well realized, without any apparent effort. On the Campagna (78), which balances it, is the sort of picture which Mr. Lemon has offered us frequently of late years—ill constructed and "painty" in quality, and unworthy of his talent. Mr. Peppercorn (26, 29, 150) and Mr. Cameron (27) have the unity of Mr. Lemon's little picture, but not its richness of interest. Certainly the dignity of design and the technical logic of their painting are very welcome, but their work is a little flimsy; and lingering in a world of vague generalization which they have come to accept as the only proper field of painting, they lack the close grip of actuality which might bring them in touch with a larger public. The two small landscapes (63 and 66) by Mr. Hughes Stanton are admirable in colour-design, and sufficient in draughtsmanship—as good as anything the painter has ever done. In the more complex scheme of his large picture The Mountain Road, Provence (96), however, the drawing flags, and the elaborately designed frame, which makes the work at first sight so handsome a centrepiece, calls attention to the presence in the picture itself of detail less highly organized. The planes of the foreground rocks do not sweep irresistibly down the hill, and in the trees there are passages which tamely repeat each other, instead of being rhythmically varied as parts of a larger scheme. The colour too, while handsomely conceived, has the look of having been first cast in a narrower range, and touched up at the end with stronger hues for purposes of exhibition.

After these painters, Mr. Charles Shannon and Mr. Cayley Robinson are the most successful exhibitors, and successful in a more difficult phase of art. They are almost alone in attempting imaginative figure-design, but Mr. Robinson's The Farewell (5), though firmly and thoroughly wrought out in detail, is only a variant of a theme which he has previously shown in a better form. Mr. Anning Bell in his Mermaid on a Dolphin's Back (16) has perhaps been moved by Mr. Robinson's example to attempt a severer design than is usual with him; but as yet he moves not quite easily in these regions of rarefied air, and the result is a little stilted. Mr. Shannon's Mermaid (51), on the other hand, is easy and spontaneous, and for once he has been content with exploiting the intrinsic facts of a group, without trimming those essential facts with jewellery, or weakening the structural lines with loosely designed drapery or clouds. His Winter: Scheme for Decoration (35) is fairly successful by somewhat obvious devices of symmetry. If he were to carry it out, he would have to beware of the humorous suggestion whereby the principal personage, flourishing an axe in the neighbourhood of a kneeling figure, apparently destitute of a head, takes on the appearance of a vindictive executioner exulting over his victim.

Among imaginative figure-work must presumably be classed the Butterflies (142) of Mr. George Henry and In the Dunes (80) by Mr. J. J. Shannon. Of the two, the former is certainly the more successful in blending figures and landscape in one consistent act of vision. That vision, however, is realized in the flimsiest fashion in comparison with the size of the canvas, and results in a dream of vapid sentimentality. By such studiously unreal presentments of lackadaisical ladies in pretty dresses Mr. Henry may become the Marcus Stone of his generation. Mr. J. J. Shannon's Portrait of Mrs. Douglas Vickers (135) is conceived in somewhat similar vein, but the painting of the dress shows a high degree of virtuosity. More realistic figure painting is shown by Mr. Austen Brown in an honest portrait group, Mrs. George Wilson and Daughter (70); by Mr. Young Hunter in The Orchard Door (68); and by Mr. H. S. Hopwood in Morning (40). Mr. Hunter's picture is the best thing he has yet shown, recalling as it does such essentially sincere work as Mr. Rothenstein's earlier painting. Mr. Hopwood's two oil paintings (40 and 71) show him as a conscientious painter less skilful as yet in oils than with water colour. Desiring to build up his picture in a series of trustworthy tones, he tries to paint throughout in opaque colour. Inevitably he breaks down in the darkest passages, which thus divide in rather meagre fashion from the rest of the paint, which in its turn looks chalky. Either the contrast of transparent and opaque paint should be better distributed through the picture on lines more parallel with its primal structure, or the picture should be carried through in a narrower range of tone, more exclusively in the higher registers, with some sacrifice of fullness of relief. A like salience of small, dark spots disfigures the work of Mr. Terriek Williams (23), which also suffers from a photographic ideal of draughtsmanship, and a failure to endow the central and neutral tones of his scheme with the rich colour-quality necessary to carry such heavy adornment of primaries.

Some of the best work is in the Balcony, whither, it is to be feared, the casual visitor rarely penetrates. Here are an excellent group of miniatures by Mr. Charles M. Gere (224-30), and the somewhat similar Miss Ewart (260), by Miss Lisa Stillman; two good water-colours by Mr. Nelson Dawson (Dawn on Mount Grammont, 291, and A North-Easter off Scarborough, 296); also a spirited series of Punch drawings by Mr. F. H. Townsend (244-53). Here, above all, are Mr. Theodore Roussel's etchings, some of which we have already noticed, though one of the best, The Snow: My Front Garden on March 2nd, 1909 (270), is fresh. His group of etchings in colour, again, are technical marvels, his elaboration of rich formal pattern resembling a miniature restoration of the Greek frescoes of which Pompeian decoration offers a degenerate echo. Whether the designs he fixes as centre of such a scheme of ornament are always sufficiently forcible in generalization to serve as the leading motive in such rich orchestration we are inclined to doubt. The note of blue in No. 273 appears too obvious, indeed, the whole design is not sufficiently disengaged from its husk of reality; yet such a strange amalgam of realism and convention as No. 276, A Window seen through a Window, seems by some miracle satisfactory.

Amongst the sculpture in the Central Hall the most striking exhibit is Mr. Henry Poole's brilliant Sketch for a statue of the Stuart period (167). Mr. Frank Brangwyn's Mosaic Panel (181) we do not approve of at all.

THE WORK OF MR. FRANK SHORT.

WHILE in his work as an etcher Mr. Short has been surpassed by several of his contemporaries, he stands alone as a master of mezzotint, and his work after Turner in this medium already takes its place as at least equal to that of the contemporary engravers who worked under the eye of the great artist. Occasionally, as in the splendidly powerful Slant of Light in Pol- perro Harbour (No. 33 in the collection now on view at the Fine-Art Society's galleries), his original work rises to the same high level, bearing comparison even with The Falls of the Rhine, Schaffhausen (30), the serene Æsacus and Hesperie (55), or that marvel of writhing, vehement form, The Storm over the Lizard (135). At other times we may feel that the influence of the two artists in the interpretation of whose work he has been most prominently engaged, while in both cases it made for mysterious delicacy of gradation, in neither case set invariably an example of the austerity which seems necessary as a corrective to a medium with such infinite capacity for extremes of softness as to threaten weakness. It is a misfortune that mezzotint has usually been pushed to its greatest technical perfection in the hands of men who have not felt this danger. Turner felt it, but a mere copyist of this or that drawing might easily find in the other work of Turner apparent authority for what in mezzotint would be merely pretty work. Mr. Short is much to be congratulated on having taken the great master of design (who was also so great a master of trick) on his more virile side. Witness the vigorously whipped surface of The Victory coming up the Channel with the Body of Nelson on Board (97).

With Mr. Watts the temptation to interpret the wrong element was much stronger, and the engraver deserves still more credit for his firm and manly treatment. In the circumstances it is a little surprising that his original work should sometimes be open to criticism on this ground. The water-colours shown are vigorous and straightforward, but a little thin in aspect, and for this reason the use of tinted paper, as in No. 169, Breaking up the Great Eastern, seems useful.

OTHER EXHIBITIONS.

At the Baillie Gallery is a collection of the drawings of Mr. Henry J. Ford, whose illustrations to fairy tales seemed to us more satisfactory twenty years ago, before Beardsley and Mr. E. J. Sullivan by their more powerful imaginings, and Mr. Rackham by his more vital intelligence, had set up exacting standards.

In the further room the drawings by Mr. John Sowerby of 'Cottages and their Gardens' must not be passed over because they lack, as they frankly do lack, any feeling for tone in the modern sense of the word. Examination of these water-colours will bring to light passages of detail conceived in a taste of singular purity, and showing a sensitiveness to colour and frail delicacies of form which is rare to-day. A Berkshire Cottage (7) is a fair example of this not very strong, but very personal talent; and details like the pear blossom in No. 16, the lilac in Nos. 18 and 24, and the flowering elder in No. 26, deserve in these days to be prized at something more than their face value. Culham Bridge (30) is the one drawing which achieves pictorial completeness. Its values may seem arbitrary to eyes schooled to unemotional record, but it has high importance as a document reflecting the fairer world which floods with wonder the amazed eyes of the primitive.

At the Doré Gallery, for purposes of violent contrast, the reader may behold the work of that prolific artist Mr. Frank O. Salisbury. He has a considerable knowledge of Nature, and the more he knows about her, the greater seems to be his effort to improve on her.

At the Dowdeswell Gallery is shown a collection of water-colours by the late John Fulleylove, whose best work has always appeared to us to have considerable charm. A fair proportion of the drawings here are quite his best, Nos. 2, 7, 14, 18, 37, 38, and 48 attracting us at once by their mellow brilliance, as of that golden afternoon in which Fulleylove always was most at home. On closer inspection, however, others emerge as equally beautiful—The Pantheon (4), for example, with its river rushing beneath the timber bridge; or the two versions of Jesus Lock, Cambridge (21 and 54), full of holiday leisure; or The Orangery, Versailles (34), with its dainty miniature realism. The freshness of observation shown in the deftly painted dots of figures counts for much in the charm of these drawings.

PREHISTORIC ANTIQUITIES IN MALTA.

THE third open meeting of the British School at Rome was held on Wednesday, March 31st, in the library of the School, the chair being taken by Prof. J. S. Reid, President of the Managing Committee. The Director, Dr. T. Ashby, read a paper, illustrated by lantern-slides, on 'The Prehistoric Antiquities of Malta.' The most prominent are the great megalithic structures of Gigantia on Gozo, and of Mnajdra and Hagar-Kim in Malta. The first two show the normal plan most distinctly.

The entrance door leads into a roughly rectangular space, with an apse at each end; the longer side of this space is at right angles to the main axis of the building. Opposite the entrance another passage leads into a similar room similarly placed, and opposite the door is an apse, occupying thus the most important position in the building. Both Gigantia and Mnajdra consist of two of these buildings placed side by side, with their entrances in the same façade. At Mnajdra, however, there was originally only one such building; another has been added on the north, and the original edifice has also been modified. Hagar-Kim has undergone even greater changes by the addition of other rooms and recesses. It originally consisted of a single building of the type already described; another, with its entrance on the opposite side to that of the first edifice, was then added, and still later this second building was partly destroyed and much modified.

In point of date the Gigantia is probably the earliest, and this is shown by the primitiveness of its construction. All are built upon the same principle: the lower part of the wall facing is formed of large slabs placed vertically. These are often, especially in the external walls, of very considerable dimensions, such measurements as 7 ft. high by 5 ft. wide being frequent in the interior, while those of the exterior may be as much as 21 ft. long and 9 ft. high, or 19 ft. long and 13 ft. high. In the case of doorways and corridors, the sides are formed of such slabs, and the roofing is of similar slabs laid flat. The upper part of the walls is of masonry of more or less careful construction. This style has been recognized by Dr. Mackenzie in the construction of the "tombs of the giants" of Sardinia, and the formation of the apses (which were certainly roofed, though the rest of the chambers probably were not) is especially like the architecture of the interior of these tombs; for in both cases the masonry above the slabs gradually converges. The walls themselves are of considerable thickness, and faced in the manner described both inside and out, the intervening space being filled with small stones and earth. The flooring consists partly of slabs, partly of rammed clay, and partly of the natural rock.

In the various apses, and also elsewhere in these buildings, recesses and niches are met with, which show dolmenlike construction, being roofed, as are the passage-ways between the rooms, with large flat slabs. The entrances to these niches are sometimes through windowlike apertures in the vertical slabs by which they are shut off from the main part of the construction.

In these remains monolithic tables of solid stone, with a single foot or pillar, have also been found; and at Hagar-Kim and the Gigantia actual batyli, or conical sacred stones, have come to light.

There is a slight curve in the front wall in some cases, which may tend to associate buildings of this class with the tombs of the giants. Another analogy, besides the style of construction already mentioned, is to be found in the windowlike opening in the façades of the tombs of the giants; while the plan of these structures may be paralleled with that of the larger Sardinian and Sicilian rock-tombs with several chambers. In this connexion it may be noted that similar tombs ought to occur in Malta, though no undoubtedly prehistoric tomb has as yet appeared there.

Of these remains, Hagar-Kim has been known since the seventeenth century, but the others have been comparatively recently discovered, i.e., in the first half of the nineteenth. With them must also be classed the hypogæum of Halsafieni, not far from Valletta, discovered in 1902, and not yet completely excavated. Albert Mayr, who has carefully studied and described them (see his 'Vorgeschichtliche Denkmäler von Malta' and 'Insel Malta im Alterthum'), considers that the remains known as Tal-Khaghan, on the island of Gozo, which have not yet been excavated, belong to the same class of monuments; but from a study of the site Dr. Ashby concluded that two groups of ruins which he studied separately, considering those to the east to be part of a temple (they do resemble a part of the façade of the Gigantia), and those to the west to be habitations, should really be taken together, and that they belong to the enceinte of a fortified village, occupying a strong position on rising ground in the middle of a valley protected by a rock ledge on the north and west. Excavation within the site would be possible, and probably repay the trouble, the usual prehistoric pottery being present.

Mayr also classes with the three great temples the remains at It-torri-tal-Mramma, in the south-east portion of Gozo. The construction is of smaller blocks, and much more primitive, and the original plan is much confused by later fieldwalls; but the site has not been excavated, and would probably reward investigation. The characteristic construction of slabs placed alternately longitudinally and across may be noted. At one point is a niche with a table slab over it, 9 ft. by 5 ft. by 1 ft. thick, looking curiously like a dolmen. A similar niche exists in a structure not far off—that of Dura Taschira Gbira or Ta Cenc.

Mayr was not aware of the existence of dolmens in Malta, though he rightly inferred that they were to be expected; and similar was the state of things in Sardinia until recently (see Athenæum, March 27th). Another, close by, that of Dura tal Mara, has a top stone 7 ft. 6 in. by 6 ft. by 1 ft. 6 in. thick.

Nor is this the only specimen in the Maltese group of islands, for since Dr. Ashby's departure Prof. Tagliaferro has discovered two more, both in Malta: one between Musta and the church of S. Margherita, and the other between Siggiewi and Krendi. The former consists of a large coverslab, supported by five smaller blocks; while the latter has a slab measuring over 13 ft. in length, nearly 11 ft. in width, and from 6 in. to 2 ft. in thickness: its original sides have been replaced by walling of smaller blocks, and a recent hut for watching the crops built upon the top (see Daily Malta Chronicle, March 11th).

Of menhirs there are no certain specimens: as Mayr says, various upright monoliths are mentioned, but it is impossible to tell whether they are not parts of larger structures. Thus the stone called Hagra Wiehfa, not far from the village of Kala, in Gozo, bears also the name of Djebel Wiehfa, i.e., the standing stones, as though there had been more; and indeed there are pieces of another standing slab, broken up, in the fieldwall, with a small round hole through it.

It seems possible that the circular enclosure of Tal Mriegsbiet, close to Tal Khaghan, may also have a sepulchral character: its discoverer, Father Magri, whose death has removed the best authority on the prehistoric antiquities of Gozo, named it "the tomb of a chieftain." The external diameter of the circle is about 40 ft., which renders it also possible that it was a hut foundation, though it seems rather too large; and, though there is nothing now visible in the centre, a photograph in the Malta Museum shows some stones there which might have formed part of the cella of a tumulus. The structure is circular—not oval, as Caruana asserts.

Other buildings show most decidedly the character of fortified structures. Such are the massive ruins of Borg-en-Nadur, which occupy the southern end of a plateau above the bay of Marsa-Scirocco in Malta. The massive external walls on the north and east are still well preserved, with the aid of some restoration; but the interior has not been excavated, and much that Mayr saw there has since his visit been destroyed.

In this part of the island are remains of several round towers: besides that of It-torri-tal-Gauhar, and others mentioned by Mayr, there is one unknown to him—Torre Tal Borg, to the north-west of the village of Mkabba, which was first noticed by Dr. Zammit. It consists of irregularly rectangular blocks of local stone (which, it must be remembered, is easy to work in Malta) set without mortar, and is about 14 ft. high, and 42 ft. in diameter. The walls are nearly 5 ft. thick at the bottom, and 3½ ft. at the top. Inside it is a wall forming a radius of the circle, with a doorway in it. Their construction and the finding of prehistoric pottery near them render it probable that these towers belong to the same early period.

To a different class belong the two large groups of remains on the hill of Corradino, below the military prison—over the Great Harbour. Both of them are described by Mayr, but since he wrote the lower group has been completely excavated by Dr. Zammit and Prof. Tagliaferro, while the upper group, partly examined by Dr. Caruana, was the scene of a small trial excavation in October, and will form the object of further investigations in May. They may prove that Mayr's distinction of the character of the two halves cannot be maintained. The outlines in both cases are very irregular: one meets with the same tendency towards apsidal chambers as in the sacred buildings; the doorways and walls are lined with standing slabs (a good deal smaller, however), and the walls are some way apart, the intervals being filled with earth and small stones. Pottery of a similar character and period to that found in the other megalithic remains of the island has been discovered in these buildings also. There are several such buildings on the same hill, which may also repay investigation.

As to the object of the buildings of a sacred character, Mayr at first considered them to have been only temples, but now adopts the view of Mr. Arthur Evans, who, relying on Ægean parallels, interprets them as buildings of a sepulchral character in which a hero cult gradually grew up. The oval chambers would thus have been originally intended for the reception of dolmen tombs, and the semicircular area in front of the building would be analogous to those in front of the "tombs of the giants" in Sardinia. No actual interments have been found, it is true: a skull recorded as discovered in Hagar-Kim must be referred to a recent burial; but the dolmenlike niches seem to indicate a sepulchral character, as does also the large quantity of pottery found in them. And the analogy of the recently discovered hypogæum of Halsafieni, where human remains have been found, is important.

It seems, however, that Mayr is right in maintaining that in later times the purpose of these chambers fell into oblivion; for only in one case do we find the front of the dolmenlike niches closed, and we find also, as mentioned above, batyli, personifications of the departed heroes, which came to represent independent deities. Finally, too, we get an actual representation of the deity in human form, as at Halsafieni, Hagar-Kim, and the Gigantia.

Dr. Ashby concluded by pointing out the importance of Malta for archæological investigation, especially as the only site in the Mediterranean where British students could take part in excavation on British soil, the Government of Malta, while reserving to itself the conduct of such work, cordially welcoming the co-operation of the School; and assisting its investigations in every way.

Prof. Reid concluded the proceedings by an appeal for support in order that the work might be properly carried through, laying especial stress on the importance of further local research in the Western Mediterranean area as disproving the old maxims, such as that there were no dolmens south of the Alps, and as producing interesting parallels with the prehistoric monuments of the British Isles. The Director and Mr. T. E. Peet, Student of the School, will proceed to Malta in May to assist in the supervision of the excavations at Corradino.

SOME CHURCHES OF SOUTH-EAST DEVON.

III.

DEVONSHIRE is celebrated for the number and variety of its Norman fonts, of which about a hundred survive. The proportion in South-East Devon is not so large as elsewhere. The earliest in this district is that of Topsham, which has a dragon with foliated tail in the upper moulding of the bowl. At Salcombe Regis and at Colaton Raleigh the bases or shafts are Norman. There is a mutilated Norman tub font, with a cable moulding round the centre, under the tower of Lympstone. Other Norman fonts may be noted at Honiton Clyst and at Clyst St. Lawrence. The Southleigh font has a square, plainly arcaded bowl, and stands on a central and four smaller shafts; it may be termed either late Norman or Transitional. The same description applies to the font of Talaton.

The Early English or thirteenth-century style is not strongly represented in the extant fabrics. Transepts were added to the Norman church of Branscombe early in the reign of Henry III., immediately to the west of the central tower. The north transept retains a lofty lancet window in the north wall. The clustered banded shafts of the archway of this transept were shamefully hacked away to make room for poor high deal pews early in last century. The nave was at this time repaired, as is shown by the blocked-up lancet light in the south wall, and by parts of the corbel-table of the north wall. The work of this style at Combpyne has been already named. The central tower at Shute is supported by Early English shafted piers; and other details of this period can be noted at Colaton Raleigh, Salcombe Regis, Sidbury, Clyst St. Mary, Clyst Honiton, and in the chancel of Colyton. As to thirteenth-century fonts, that of Northleigh, which is square with angle shafts, is of King John date. Combpyne is later. The base of Harpford font is of Purbeck marble, and originally bore a central and four supporting shafts.

Church work of the first three Edwards or of the Decorated style is also exceptional. About the best example of the earlier part of this period is the chancel of Branscombe church (excepting the east window); the inner roll stringcourse running round the chancel is dipped on each side to give way to a "low side window" opening. The date of this chancel approximates to 1300, and this, too, is the date of the south window of the south transept. At this period also the Early English archways into the transepts were replaced by simple ones of two orders of plain chamfers. Parts of the chancel of Axminster are of the beginning of Edward I.'s reign. In two or three cases, as at Seaton and Salcombe Regis, the arcade arches are of the Decorated style. At Offwell the south porch entrance is enriched with the characteristic ball-flower moulding; the work is new, but it is stated that it is an exact reproduction of the old work. The arcades of the much-restored church of Harpford, between the nave and north aisle, appear to be fourteenth-century. The lower stages of the towers of Venn Ottery, Offwell, and East Budleigh are a good deal earlier than the Perpendicular period, and probably approximate to the year 1300. The only font of this district which can apparently be styled Decorated is the simple one at Venn Ottery.

As to the Perpendicular work of the fifteenth and early sixteenth centuries, it chiefly manifests itself here, as throughout the West of England, in the western towers. This is not the place in which to discuss the cause or causes of this general development of towers sufficiently strong to carry a ring of bells. A few churches of the fifty of this district—probably not more than ten—had towers before the fifteenth century dawned, but by the end of that period they were all well provided. In a district like this, where workable stone abounded, timber expedients for providing belfries, such as obtained in the north of Hampshire and in Essex, were unknown, for every parish had a good quarry within reasonable distance.

The first two churches of this corner of Devonshire to be provided with western towers of the Perpendicular style were those of Lympstone and Woodbury. The date of the erection or completion of each is known: in the former case it was 1405, and in the latter 1409. Not only are these two the earliest, but they are also undoubtedly the finest examples of the district. They are both of three stages and of considerable height, embattled, and with an angle projecting stair-turret of several feet higher elevation. Each of these towers, too, possesses the distinctive feature of having a pair of buttresses at each angle, which terminate just below the battlements. There can be no doubt that both are the work of the same builders, but Woodbury is the richer; its battlements are enriched, and they have been surmounted by pinnacles, whilst the lower sets-off of the buttresses originally bore small images of saints. Sidmouth has a fairly good tower of somewhat the same style, but later date. Talaton is remarkable for its enrichment with images, especially on the stair-turret; whilst the neighbouring smaller tower of Clyst St. Lawrence is on the same plan.

In Somersetshire, which is par excellence the county for towers, the tower-building increased in stateliness and beauty of ornament as time went on; but it was not so in this neighbourhood. The talents of the tower-builders seem to have exhausted themselves in Lympstone and Woodbury, and the others just named, for the rest of these western towers, though fairly good of their kind for non-opulent villages, present no particular features, and in a few cases are somewhat mean. They have, in almost every instance, the common characteristic of a projecting stair-turret, which is carried up to the leads at the summit, and protected by an octagonal and embattled crown, rising above the rest of the battlements. This turret usually forms half of an octagon in its projection, and is sometimes found at the north-east angle of the tower, and sometimes at the south-east; the turrets, for instance, of Axmouth, Payhembury, Newton Poppleford, Withycombe Raleigh, Harpford, East Budleigh, Feniton, and Offwell are in the former position; and those of Seaton, Salcombe Regis, Sidmouth, Honiton, Colaton Raleigh, Clyst St. George, Talaton, Farway, and Kilminster in the latter position. At Widworthy there is no turret, but circular stairs are provided in a projection on the north side as high as the first stage. The north face also of the base of the tower of Southleigh is provided with an extended projection which covers a straight and original stone stairway leading to the first flooring, an arrangement that has not been noticed elsewhere.

Most of the towers have two diagonal buttresses at the west, and none at the eastern angles where they are held up by the nave; such are those of Musbury, Axmouth, Seaton, and Littleham. A few others, like Awliscombe, Venn Ottery, Newton Poppleford, Feniton, and Colaton Raleigh, have no buttresses.

The greater part of these towers appear to be of the first half of the fifteenth century, but in at least two cases (those of Kilminster and Colaton Raleigh) they date from about the reign of Henry VII.; each of these has a squared hood mould over the western door, with well-carved spandrels.

J. CHARLES COX.

Fine-Art Gossip.

THE ST. GEORGE'S GALLERY, a new institution, is now being opened at 108, New Bond Street. Pictures and crafts by well-known artists, including a group of works by Miss Jessie Bayes, are on view.

A LOAN EXHIBITION of masterpieces by Jan Steen has been arranged by Messrs. Dowdeswell, and will be held in their galleries, 160, New Bond Street, in May, in aid of the Duchess of Albany's Jubilee Fund in connexion with the National Hospital for the Paralyzed and Epileptic in Queen's Square.

THE fifth annual meeting of the National Art-Collections Fund will be held in the rooms of the Society of Antiquaries, Burlington House, on May 5th.

MR. MURRAY is publishing 'Notes from a Painter's Life,' by Mr. C. E. Hallé. It includes sketches of life in Paris, Rome, and Venice, and a short account of the Grosvenor and New Galleries. The author has acted as one of the directors of both institutions from 1877 up to the present time.

THE death is announced of Mr. George Herbert McCord, a well-known American landscape and marine artist. He was born in New York on August 1st, 1848, and studied art under Prof. Moses Morse in his native city. He won a number of medals at various American art exhibitions, and was a member of the National Academy of Design and the American Water-Colour Society.

M. LIONEL LE COUTEUX, whose death is also announced, was born at Mans in 1847, and, after studying law, devoted himself to etching, in which he achieved great success. He obtained a medal at the Salon in 1879, and others in 1881, 1884, 1889, and 1899, besides a grand prix in 1900.

WE have further to record the death of M. Alfred Robaut, an accomplished lithographer and writer on art subjects. M. Robaut was seventy-nine years of age, and was an enthusiastic admirer of Delacroix and Corot, his work on the latter being one of the most elaborately "documented" monographs ever published on a single artist. He retired a year or so ago, and his collection was dispersed at the Hôtel Drouot in December, 1907.

THE MEDICI SOCIETY announces that the sole agency in this country for the three limited editions of 'Early Painters of the Netherlands,' 'Early German Painters,' and 'Italian Painters of the Quattrocento and Cinquecento' has been taken over by it in place of Messrs. Chatto & Windus, the previous agents. The Society is advised by the Berlin publishers that Part IV. of each of the latter works will shortly be ready. The entire Netherlands set is now ready, including Mr. E. G. Hawke's translation of Prof. Pol de Mont's text.

THE same Society also informs us that it has succeeded Messrs. Chatto & Windus as sole English agent for Signor Giacomo Brogi's series of "photo-reliefs," in colours, after the original reliefs by the Della Robbias, Donatello, &c.

THE death at the age of fifty-eight is announced from Venice of Prof. Franz Wickhoff, the well-known writer on art. He believed strongly in the influence of literature on art, and his intimate knowledge of the classics and Italian Renaissance literature enabled him to trace the literary sources to which in many cases painters like Titian and Giorgione owed their inspiration.

A NUMBER of water-colour and sepia drawings by British and foreign artists, from the collection of the late Mr. T. C. Blofeld, will be included with the rare books and MSS. selected from his library, the sale of which on Friday next is referred to elsewhere. Perhaps the most interesting is a selection of landscapes—chiefly views in Kent—by an apparently unknown artist of the middle of the eighteenth century.

AMONG the articles in The Antiquary for May will be 'The Bellbutts of the Parish of Scotter, Lincs,' by Dr. T. B. F. Eminson, with a map; 'Some Extracts from the Court Rolls of the Manor of Portishead,' by Mr. Henry Carr; 'Some West-Country Wells,' by Dr. J. C. Bridge, illustrated; the continuation of 'London Signs and their Associations,' by Mr. J. H. MacMichael; and the conclusion (illustrated) of Mr. Tavenor-Perry's paper on St. Hilary the Great.

EXHIBITIONS.

- SAT. (April 24).—Mr. Roger Fry's Pictures and Drawings, Carfax Gallery.
- The late John Fulleylove's Water-Colours, 1870-1907, Dowdeswell Galleries.
 - Grafton Gallery, Exhibition of Chosen Pictures, Private View.
 - Mr. Burrell Hayley's Water-Colour Sketches at Home and Abroad, Modern Gallery.
 - Mr. Louis Kronberg's Pictures, 'Behind the Footlights,' Mendoza Gallery.
 - Modern Gallery, Spring Exhibition of Sketches and Pictures.
 - Royal Society of Painters in Water Colours, Summer Exhibition, 3A, Pall Mall East.
 - St. George's Gallery, Opening Exhibition of Pictures and Crafts, including Works by Miss Jessie Bayes.
 - Water-Colours by Miss Alwen Montgomerie, the Misses Dorrien-Smith, and Lady Mabel Sowerby, New Dudley Gallery.
 - '91 Art Club, Annual Exhibition, Alpine Club.

MUSIC

CHOPIN'S BAPTISM.

Corpus Christi Church, Baltimore, Md., April 10, 1909.

IN your issue of March 27th last (p. 386) there is a reference to Chopin's baptism which seems to call for explanation. The words of the parish priest quoted from the register of baptisms are supposed to warrant the inference "that there had been a previous baptism which was an empty ceremony." On the contrary, those words were intended to emphasize the validity of the previous rite. The essential act in a Catholic baptism is the application of the water to the body of the person to be baptized and the simultaneous utterance of the baptismal formula: "I baptize thee," &c. Where these rites are exactly performed, there can be no question of the validity of the baptism. But the Catholic Church, to enhance the dignity of the sacramental act, has provided in her ritual a number of prayers and symbolical ceremonies which must be used whenever the baptism is administered solemnly, that is, within the church or the baptistery. When an unbaptized person's life is despaired of, and a priest cannot be summoned in time, any one present not only may, but must administer the sacrament, using the barely essential rites. If the person recover, he must be taken to the parish church at the earliest convenient time, that the omitted ceremonies may be supplied. The priest makes careful inquiry into the manner in which the rite was performed, and if he is satisfied of its validity, he simply supplies the prescribed ceremonies. This would seem to have been the case in the Chopin baptism. The parish priest was evidently satisfied that the child had been duly baptized. Indeed, for anything which appears to the contrary, he may himself have baptized the child privately, as it is said—that is, at home and without the ceremonies, these being reserved for a future time at the church.

WM. E. STARR.

Musical Gossip.

THE programme of the third of the second series of the Thomas Beecham Orchestral Concerts, given at Queen's Hall on Monday evening, contained excerpts from Miss Ethel Smyth's 'The Wreckers.' One was the excellent Prelude to the second Act, which has already been heard; the others were the 'Ballad of the Slain Lover' and a Love-Song, effectively rendered by Fräulein Signe von Rappe from the Vienna Hofoper. The Prelude themes, their meaning being given, can stand alone; but to judge the songs they must be heard in their proper connexion, and for this an opportunity will soon present itself. A Tone-Poem, 'Into the Twilight,' by Mr. Arnold Bax, who studied at the Royal Academy of Music under Mr. Frederick Corder, has for its poetic basis Mr. Yeats's poem of the same name. The music, well scored, is picturesque, and the melody on which, after the mystic opening, the work is based, is broad and effective. At the end of the programme came Rimsky-Korsakoff's 'Antar,' which was described by the analysts as, "strictly speaking, a symphony, not a symphonic poem," though we think the latter title by far the more suitable. There is a motto theme which appears in every movement. The work is clever, imaginative, and most effectively scored; but neither the story nor the music is strong or characteristic. Fräulein Signe von Rappe also gave Lieder by Brahms and Strauss with artistic taste and skill.

THE ROYAL OPERA season at Covent Garden opens on Monday evening with Saint-Saëns's 'Samson et Dalila,' which has been performed in London as an oratorio, but will be given on the stage for the first time here. Madame Kirkby Lunn will impersonate Dalila, and M. Charles Fontaine, of Lyons, Samson. The work will be conducted by M. Frigara. 'Samson et Dalila' was originally produced at Weimar in 1877.

'FAUST' will be given on the following evening; 'Madama Butterfly,' with Madame Destinn in the title-rôle, on Wednesday, and 'Die Walküre' on Thursday, with Madame Saltzmann-Stevens as Brünnhilde, and Dr. Richter as conductor. On Friday came the twin operas 'Cavalleria Rusticana' and 'Pagliacci'; and on Saturday 'La Traviata' with Madame Tetrzzini.

A SEASON of Italian opera, organized by Mr. Louis Hillier, also opens at the Coronet Theatre on Monday evening. The repertory for the first week is 'Il Trovatore' on Monday, 'Cavalleria Rusticana' and 'Pagliacci' on Tuesday, 'Il Barbiere' on Wednesday and Thursday, and 'Zaza' on Friday and Saturday. There will be matinées on Wednesday and Saturday.

SUPPLEMENTING our paragraph of the 3rd inst. concerning Joachim's biography, we quote from information received from Mr. Harold Joachim. After mentioning the editors, he adds:—

"Even letters which are not of sufficient public interest to be published may yet be of the greatest assistance for establishing dates, explaining allusions, and generally securing accuracy in the edition."

All who are able and willing to help are requested to communicate with Dr. Johannes Joachim, 17, Wilhelm Weber Strasse, Göttingen; Prof. Andreas Moser, 28, Lutherstrasse, Berlin; or Mr. Harold Joachim, 9, Keble Road, Oxford.

AMONG the performances connected with the commemoration next month at Vienna of the hundredth anniversary of Haydn's death, there is one of considerable interest. The composer's opera 'L'Isola disabitata' is to be given at the Hofoper. The work was produced at Esterhazy in 1779, and a few years later performed at the Vienna National-Hoftheater.

THE Société des Concerts Français gives a third concert at Bechstein Hall on Monday evening next. The programme will be devoted to the works of MM. Maurice Ravel and Florent Schmitt.

'THE KING'S MUSICK,' a transcript of records relating to music and musicians (1460-1700), edited by Henry Cart De Lafontaine, has just been published by Messrs. Novello.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

- SUN. Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
 — Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
 — Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
 MON.-SAT. Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
 MON.-SAT. Italian Opera, S. Coronet Theatre.
 (Wed. and Sat., Matinées, 2.30.)
 MON. Miss Nadia Sylva's Violin Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.
 — Concert of Modern French Music, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
 TUES. Queen's Hall Orchestra, 3, Queen's Hall.
 — Mr. R. F. Russell's Vocal Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
 — Madame Bokken Lasson's Song Recital, 8.15, Bechstein Hall.
 — Mr. Guy Pertwee's Concert, 8.15, Steinway Hall.

- WED. Fräulein Else Gipeer's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
 — Madame Miriam Wohl's Vocal Recital, 3.15, Aeolian Hall.
 — Miss G. Sutherland and Mr. F. Thistleton's Old Chamber Music, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
 THURS. Miss Jolanda Mero's Orchestral Concert, 3.15, Queen's Hall.
 — Misses Satz's Pianoforte Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.
 — Miss Heymann's Pianoforte Recital, 3.30, Aeolian Hall.
 — Miss Vera Jachles's Pianoforte Recital, 8.15, St. James's Hall.
 — Miss Edith Smeraldina's Violin Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
 FRI. Mr. Harold Bauer's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
 — Mr. Plunket Greene's Song Recital, 3.30, Aeolian Hall.
 — Dresden String Quartet, 8, Bechstein Hall.
 SAT. London Symphony Orchestra, 3, Queen's Hall.
 — M. Busoni's Pianoforte Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

CRITERION.—Mr. Preedy and the Countess: a Farce in Three Acts. By R. C. Carton. RARELY has Mr. Carton shown himself in brighter or wittier vein than in this farcical piece. He has the genuine craftsman's gift of being able at once to suit to a nicety the idiosyncrasies of his interpreters and to hit on a fresh and entertaining story. Here he presents a couple of characters that in their very differences of type and temperament have been obviously designed for Mr. Weedon Grosmith and Miss Compton; on the other hand, though he must have had these players in his mind's eye while he was writing the farce, there is nothing forced or artificial about the conduct of his plot—it proceeds as it were spontaneously, with all the high spirits of an improvisation. Conceive a kindly but fussy little business man, somewhat underbred, and therefore rather ill at ease with his social superiors, and disposed to press his attention too obtrusively on his guests, forced by his partner to offer hospitality, and even give up his flat, to a lady of title who is as self-contained as he is lacking in repose, and as unconcerned in situations of delicacy as he is inclined to exaggerate their awkwardness, and you have the central idea of the piece. The details are more or less immaterial, though they add to the piquancy of the juxtaposition of these two dissimilar persons. The Countess is eloping with Mr. Preedy's partner from a husband who has given her every cause for infidelity; but as she is anxious that the peer, and not she, shall be the defendant in any divorce action, she wishes to consult the proprieties as far as possible. Hence it is that Mr. Preedy's flat is called into requisition. Despite, however, these sacrifices to the god Convention, relatives of the peer bombard the flat and abuse harmless Mr. Preedy as though it were he who was the Countess's lover, and not his partner, who in point of fact is already preparing to leave her in the lurch. But the playwright has a rod in pickle for this scamp—a thorough punishment which the Countess is able to administer by contrasting Mr. Preedy's chivalry with the senior partner's betrayal alike of the woman who has trusted him and the husband who has been his friend.

There are various clever performances given by subordinate members of the cast, notably Mr. Davy Burnaby, Mr. Vane Tempest, and Miss Dora Barton; but the real charm of the acting depends on the contrast that is afforded between Miss Compton's bland, deliberate accents, always informed as they are by a quiet sense of humour, and the fidgety, over-expansive manner of Mr. Weedon Gro-smith, a comedian who has a unique capacity for portraying the "bounder" without making him offensive or un-sympathetic.

ADELPHI.—The Devil: a Play in Three Acts. From the Hungarian of Francis Molnár. By Henry Hamilton.

'THE DEVIL' is but a vulgarized version of the 'Faust' legend, with its scenes laid in modern Paris, and a Tempter who has not a suggestion of sublimity or majesty in his mien, or of poetry in his speech. He is just a prosy and rather tedious advocate of the gospel of animalism and fleshly lust (he calls it love). His main business is to act as pander between a hot-blooded young pair—one the wife of a millionaire whom she has married for his wealth, the other an artist who, to drown his memory of the days when the heroine and he were playmates, has doubly guarded himself by contracting an engagement with an innocent girl and starting an intrigue with a model. This Devil sets to work in the crudest fashion, resorts to the cheapest and most obvious of witticisms, appeals baldly and coarsely to carnal instincts. Mr. Hamilton—who says he has taken but the skeleton of the original story and reclothed it with his own language—may claim that his Devil is but the evil self of each of his characters, who reveals to them their secret thoughts and feelings; indeed, his play is in large measure, especially when the fiend exercises his powers at a ball given by the heroine, no more than an inversion of Mr. Jerome's 'Passing of the Third Floor Back,' with a bad instead of a good preacher "interviewing" one by one the various persons of the drama. But there is little that is dramatic about his interventions. In fact, there is only one situation preparing all through the play, and that is one which comes at the end, but might just as well have come two acts earlier, for all the development of character or plot we get in the interval. It is the situation in which the lovers surrender themselves to an ecstasy of passion while the heroine's husband knocks vainly outside, and the Devil shouts in triumph over the accomplishment of his design. The latter has sundry minor schemes on hand: he eggs on the millionaire to fresh financial triumphs; he tries to debauch, by means of the model's glorification of the life of free love, the mind of the young girl; he puts into the head of a "smart" fool the idea of compromising this child; he throws the temptation of theft in the way of a woman gambler; and he plays generally on the foibles and vices, sometimes farcically represented, of the poor types of humanity he meets. But always he speaks and behaves without dignity or exaltation.

Within certain limits Mr. Hamilton's chief interpreter, Mr. Lyn Harding, is allowed to adopt his own lines. He does not give us a Devil with any authority, much less distinction. There is something "common" about his reading—something that suggests the villain of the penny novelette. Mr. Harding's gestures and poses all heighten, when they should modify, the sordidness of the play. As a mere elocutionary task his performance provokes admiration, but it possesses no other striking merit. Miss Alexandra Carlisle has one cry of the heart which thrills her audience at the end of the second act; and Miss Constance Hyem acts cleverly throughout as the model. Otherwise the interpretation does not call for comment—only broad effects are possible in the case of such melodramatic material.

It may be added that there is one scene, in which the artist is given to understand that the heroine is emulating Monna Vanna, that a Censor who banned M. Maeterlinck's drama, ought not to have passed.

KINGSWAY.—The Earth: a Play in Four Acts. By James Bernard Fagan.

MR. FAGAN is on the right road. He is resolved to put into English drama the life of our time, and he sees no reason why he should not find a subject in contemporary journalism. In language, therefore, that is crisp and incisive, with the help of characterization that up to a certain point is expressed in sure and telling strokes, he delivers himself of an indictment of the sensational press which has shaped itself on American models, and is (so he at least alleges) content to pander to the worst tastes and prejudices of the half-educated. He paints a portrait of a newspaper proprietor who allows no considerations to affect his policy except those of circulation, dividends, and advertisements; permits not the smallest degree of independence or conscientious scruple in his subordinates, tells his editors that the public want "dirt," and must have it; and gives orders for the "faking" inside his office of accounts of events happening thousands of miles away.

So far, though there may be exaggeration in particular points, there is nothing inherently impossible in his picture. Mr. Fagan's first mistake occurs when he supposes his Napoleon of the press to behave no less ignobly and unscrupulously in his personal than in his commercial capacity. We live in days of change, but it is still inconceivable that the owner of any number of journals should use information which he possesses of the secret vices of a statesman who is his enemy in public affairs, but his friend in private life, to force on this statesman alternatives which involve either his ruin or political dishonour. Again, Mr. Fagan's most dramatic scenes are not those strictly concerned with his story. Even the moment in which the statesman's mistress refuses to let her lover sacrifice his career, and defies the newspaper magnate to do his worst, is nothing like so human as that in which this autocrat is confronted with an employé who holds up to him the mirror of right and wrong. It is in fact in the setting of his play rather than in its particular theme, that the playwright scores. Still Sir Felix Janion, in his public aspect, is sketched with peculiar insight and satirical power—Mr. Norman McKinnel, by the way, realizes the man to perfection—and the play, which also numbers Miss Lena Ashwell and Mr. Allan Aynesworth among its interpreters, can be welcomed for the earnestness and sincerity with which it deals with an important phase of the conditions of our time.

VAUDEVILLE.—The Chorus Lady: a Comedy in Four Acts. By James Forbes.

THE way to obtain unalloyed pleasure out of this characteristically American play, and to get the best of Miss Rose Stahl's acting in it, would be to sit out the first two acts and leave the other two unseen. By so doing the playgoer would have to be content with hearing a story, as it were, only half-told, but he would carry with him, in respect of both the piece and its chief exponent, an impression, which would not be impaired, of extraordinary vitality and of a robust and abounding humour. The phase of life to which Mr. Forbes introduces us is that of the American chorus girl, behind the scenes and in her own home, and the dramatist has made a comprehensive and intimate study of his subject. He knows his type—or rather his types, for, like every other class, that of the chorus girl admits of considerable variety—uncommonly well. In the scene in the green-room we meet with eight or nine different sorts, not to mention the "property woman," and they are all carefully differentiated—the fast girl and the good girl, the loud type and the shy, the sleepy creature and the show beauty, the sentimentalist and the girl with a loud laugh. There they are to the life, revealing their foibles and their weaknesses, their love-stories or their ideals of love, and talking a jargon that is vigorous, expressive, picturesque, but, so far as London audiences are concerned, almost calls for a glossary, so racy is it of its native soil. The outstanding figure, however, of the play is the character which Miss Stahl represents with such breezy and homely vigour. The moment she enters, with her mincing walk and her affectations of speech and manner, quickly changed, under the influence of excitement, to the natural gait and tones and slang of a girl of the plebeian class, we recognize that we are in the presence of a woman of distinct personality and charm. Miss Stahl gives us the idea of a girl with a big heart, a shrewd wit, a common sense that the footlights and the temptations they bring have never been able to destroy, and at the same time an immense capacity for affection. Not all her stage experience has spoilt Patricia O'Brien, or prevented her from being the good angel of her family or responding to her lover's caresses with a delightful self-abandonment. And there is a saucy, unforced humour about the girl which simply compels laughter. So, thanks to Miss Stahl's genial talent, which at times almost recalls that of another famous American actress, Miss Ada Rehan, "Pat" appears during the first acts of the play. But, alas! Mr. Forbes will tell a story, and that story is of the stereotyped melodramatic kind. Patricia has a young sister, who takes to gambling and insists on going on the stage, though she is not of the right, level-headed type, and compromises herself by going to the rooms of a very shoddy Don Juan. And the heroine must needs rescue her from temptation, and let herself be supposed by her lover and mother to be the guilty party. So the actress is called upon for displays of sustained pathos and lachrymose emotion. It is not in such scenes that Miss Stahl shows to advantage. She can get a single note of pain or distress, but she has no faculty for the expression of prolonged unhappiness. Her voice becomes hard and metallic under such conditions, and it is obvious that she is essentially an actress of sprightly and mercurial temperament.

MR. JAMES WELCH has been continuing at the Coronet Theatre the remarkable run of 'When Knights were Bold.' He is genuinely humorous in his picture of the twentieth-century man suddenly cast into the chivalric world of Richard the Lion Heart, and we have seldom heard so much applause as the many jests of the play elicited. Such humour, like that of 'A Yankee at the Court of King Arthur' is not appreciated by everybody; but of its effects on the general playgoer there can be no doubt, and Mr. Welch's abundant cleverness is beyond question. The feminine members of the cast overdo their parts, and make too much noise—one of the common penalties of a long run, which leads to over-emphasis of effects.

SHAKESPEARE AT STRATFORD.

April 21, 1909.

THE Stratford-on-Avon performances began on Monday night with 'Julius Cæsar.' The house was not well filled, but perhaps this may be accounted for by the unexpected excitements of a by-election. There was, however, an appreciative and sympathetic audience. Mr. Murray Carrington made Cæsar too old, frail, and tremulous. There would have been no point in Cassius reminding Brutus that the man who did "bestride the narrow world like a Colossus" once failed in swimming, and once trembled in fever, if such signs were common in him, or the falling in the market-place was due to a "falling-sickness" which was known to ordinary men. In the murder scene he took too long to die; he staggered about bearing five mortal wounds, till Brutus tardily struck. The ingenuous nobility of Brutus was well represented by Mr. E. A. Warburton, and the more intricate character of Cassius found a fine exponent in Mr. Cyril Keightley. It is true that he had not the "lean and hungry look" distrusted by Cæsar, but he had the quick impulse to seize and turn to his advantage every chance to move and mould Brutus to his will. To this he added the rapid, natural enunciation of his words, unbroken by verse-pauses, which gave the sense of reality, and recalled Shakespeare's own advice not to mouth it, "as many of your players do." Mr. Benson himself took his favourite part of Mark Antony in effective style. The Calpurnia of Miss Helen Haye and the Portia of Mrs. Benson were good. Of the minor parts, no other stood out so clearly fresh as the Artemidorus of Mr. Worlock. The play as a whole was hardly so well set on the stage as it might have been, and, especially towards the end, in the battle scenes, left much to be desired.

On Tuesday afternoon a variety was introduced into the programme in a lecture in the Picture Gallery by Mrs. Leo Grindon on 'The Story and Poetry of "Cymbeline."' It was well thought out, and will doubtless be useful in view of the approaching performance of the play.

On the evening of Tuesday 'Much Ado about Nothing' was reproduced. Mr. Murray Carrington gave a lively representation of Don Pedro, and Mr. Arthur Goodsall a thoughtful picture of the unattractive villain Don John; while as Claudio Mr. F. G. Worlock played his ungracious part as graciously and effectively as was possible. Borachio too (Mr. G. Hannam-Clark), won sympathy by his dignified repentance. Mr. and Mrs. Benson played Benedick and Beatrice, the one at first rather indifferently, the other rather too actively, but they both warmed to their parts. The dancing at the ball was encored more than once; and the charming, flute-like voice of Balthazar (Miss Cissie Saumarez), especially in "Sigh no more, ladies," was keenly appreciated.

In the Dogberry scenes Mr. H. O. Nicholson took up his part with unexpected success, weighted though he was by the comparison with his lamented predecessor Mr. Weir. In the Verges of Mr. Harry Caine he had a good companion, and the examination scene was loudly applauded. Miss Olive Noble rendered Hero with dignified simplicity; and her father Leonato gave Mr. E. A. Warburton a chance of showing his varied powers.

On Wednesday afternoon 'Coriolanus' was performed, with Miss Geneviève Ward in the part of Volumnia, and on the same evening there was a departure from Shakespeare, to the less classical sphere of 'A Midnight Bridal' and 'The Belle's Stratagem.'

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—E. B. S.—J. E. . B.—E. H. B.—H. H. J.—A. H.—J. D. M.—H. B.—Received.

C. J.—Many thanks.

L. L. A. P.—M. C. D.—Not suitable for us.

WE cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
AUTHORS' AGENTS	482
BELL & SONS	508
BUSINESS FOR DISPOSAL	482
CATALOGUES	482
CHIATTO & WINDUS	511
CONSTABLE & CO.	488
DENT & CO.	486
DOVES PRESS	483
EDUCATIONAL	481
ENO'S FRUIT SALT	510
EXHIBITIONS	481
FINANCIAL REVIEW OF REVIEWS	510
HEINEMANN	486
HODDER & STOUGHTON	510
HUTCHINSON & CO.	509
JACK	487
LANE	486
LECTURES	481
LONGMANS & CO.	488
MACMILLAN & CO.	488, 512
MAGAZINES, &c.	483
MISCELLANEOUS	482
NOVELLO & CO.	511
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS	484
PRINTERS	482
PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS	481
SALES BY AUCTION	482
SANDS & CO.	483
SHIPPING	511
SITUATIONS VACANT	481
SITUATIONS WANTED	482
TYPE-WRITERS, &c.	482
WARD & LOCK	485

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY.

Fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

LONDON'S LURE. An Anthology of Prose and Verse Passages bearing on London. By HELEN and LEWIS MELVILLE. With Title-Page, Binding, and End-Papers designed by M. V. WHEELHOUSE.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY.

Crown 8vo, with 4 Coloured Plates and 24 other Illustrations, 7s. 6d. net.

FISH STORIES. Alleged and Experienced, with a Little History, Natural and Unnatural. By CHARLES FREDERICK HOLDER and DAVID STARR JORDAN.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY.

Fcap. 8vo, 1s. net.

THE WAY OF LIGHT, and other Verses. By the Rev. THOMAS J. HARDY, Author of 'The Gospel of Pain.'

JUST PUBLISHED, post 8vo, with 48 Illustrations and a Map, 7s. 6d. net.

ALASKA: the Great Country. By ELLA HIGGINSON.

In this volume Miss Higginson, whose writings are well known in America, tells the story of the growth of Alaska, for which at present little-known country she predicts a great future. The numerous illustrations are a special feature of the book.

FIFTH EDITION NOW READY.

Royal 16mo, cloth, 1s. net.

THYSIA. An Elegy in Forty-Five Sonnets.

"Sonnets which I hold to be of exquisite quality. They have that pathos inscribed on marble in the best Greek epitaphs."—Mr. FREDERIC HARRISON, in the Nineteenth Century, November, 1908.

JUST PUBLISHED.

Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

ATHLETIC GAMES IN THE EDUCATION OF WOMEN. By GERTRUDE DUDLEY, Director of the Women's Department of Physical Education, Chicago University, and FRANCIS A. KELLOR.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY. 8vo, 6s. 6d. net.

ECONOMICS. A Briefer Course. By HENRY ROGERS SINGER, Professor of Political Economy in Columbia University.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY. 8vo, 4s. 6d.

POLYGLOT PHRASES. Selected and Arranged by LEWIS NICHOLAS WORTHINGTON, M.A. (Yale), M.D.

BELL'S LITERATURE READERS.

Illustrated. 1s. each. NEW VOLUME.

THE LITTLE DUKE. By CHARLOTTE YONGE.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

MESSRS. HUTCHINSON & CO.'S NEW BOOKS

Richard Jefferies

His Life and Work

By EDWARD THOMAS

In cloth gilt and gilt top, 10s. 6d. net

With Photogravure Portrait and other Illustrations

"The mind and work of Jefferies can be portrayed, and Mr. Thomas has done it admirably, in a way not unworthy to rank with the spiritual self-revelation in his author's own beautiful 'Story of my Heart'" Times

"A conscientious, painstaking piece of work" Athenæum

King's Favourite

The Love Story of Robert Carr and Lady Essex

By PHILIP GIBBS

In cloth gilt and gilt top, 16s. net

With Photogravure Plate and other Illustrations

"There is matter in this volume for the making of many novels, but we doubt whether any of them, even if the work of a master hand, could prove more interesting than the plain historical narrative which Mr. Gibbs with much researchful learning and literary power has composed for our entertainment" Daily Chronicle

Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette

By Lieut.-Col. A. C. P. HAGGARD, D.S.O.

Author of 'Sidelights on the Court of France,' &c.

In 2 vols. cloth gilt and gilt top,

With Photogravure Plates and other Illustrations, 24s. net

"Of Col. Haggard's many books upon the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries in France this last will prove, perhaps, the most comprehensive. It is true to say that of the many accounts in French and English on Louis XVI.'s reign this book will rank among the most particular and detailed" Morning Post

Richard Savage

A Mystery in Biography

By STANLEY V. MAKOWER

Author of 'Perdita,' &c.

In 1 vol. cloth gilt and gilt top

With Photogravure and other Illustrations, 16s. net

"Savage is always interesting. The author has gathered together with considerable literary ability most of the material which throws light on the romance of his life and the age in which he lived" Scotsman

Sir Robert Hart

The Romance of a Great Career

Told by his Niece

JULIET BREDON

In cloth gilt and gilt top, 6s. net

"Perhaps this book takes us as near as we are ever likely to get to the reminiscences of Sir Robert Hart. Short of an autobiography there could not have been a more interesting account of Sir Robert's life than this by his niece. Rightly the outstanding note is the personal one, and that of Sir Robert Hart is here illumined by many an intimate touch of character, many an anecdote" Daily Chronicle

HUTCHINSON'S NEW 6/- NOVELS

KINGSMEAD

Baroness Von HUTTEN

"It stands by itself as a long story with a well-maintained charm—the charm of the society of delightful people" Times

OUR ADVERSARY

M. E. BRADDON

"The whole novel is the work of a master hand" Daily Telegraph

THE MYSTERY OF FRANCES FARRINGTON

ELIZABETH BANKS

A YOUNG MAN MARRIED

SYDNEY C. GRIER

AS IT HAPPENED

ASHTON HILLIERS

OTHER THINGS THAN LOVE

"HANDASYDE"

THE MYSTERY OF THE MYRTLES

EDGAR JEPSON

THE STRAW

R. RAMSAY

THE HOUSE CALLED HURRISH

RITA

A FALSE POSITION

Mrs. BAILLIE REYNOLDS

(New Edition)

THE THREE BROTHERS

EDEN PHILLPOTTS

"Mr. Phillpotts remains faithful to Dartmoor, and manages to keep his material and his methods as fresh as ever. It is a considerable feat that this, his latest novel of the district, should be in some ways more interesting than any of its predecessors." Athenæum

THE ROYAL END

HENRY HARLAND

"Will be undoubtedly welcomed and treasured by his admirers" Globe

ST. MARTIN'S SUMMER

RAFAEL SABATINI

THE ALTERNATIVE

A. F. SLADE

THE BARGAIN

THEODORA WILSON-WILSON

A SENSE OF HUMOUR.

BERYL FABER and COSMO HAMILTON

GREEN GINGER

ARTHUR MORRISON

[Third Edition]

A FETISH OF TRUTH

EILEEN FITZGERALD

A FLIGHT FROM SIBERIA

VACLAV SIEROSZEWSKI

AS AUTHORIZED TO BE USED BY BRITISH SUBJECTS.

NOW READY,

THE NATIONAL FLAG,

BEING

THE UNION JACK.

SUPPLEMENT TO

NOTES AND QUERIES

For JUNE 30, 1900,

Price 4d.; by post 4½d.

Containing an Account of the Flag,

Reprinted June, 1908, with

Coloured Illustration according to Scale.

JOHN C. FRANCIS & J. EDWARD FRANCIS,
Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

GENERAL INDEXES.

THE FOLLOWING ARE STILL IN STOCK:—

	£	s.	d.
GENERAL INDEX,
* FOURTH SERIES ..	3	3	0
GENERAL INDEX,
* SIXTH SERIES ..	0	6	0
GENERAL INDEX,
* SEVENTH SERIES ..	0	6	0
GENERAL INDEX,
* EIGHTH SERIES ..	0	6	0
* For Copies by post an additional Threepence is charged.
GENERAL INDEX,
† NINTH SERIES ..	0	10	6
With Introduction by JOSEPH KNIGHT, F.S.A.

† This Index is double the size of previous ones, as it contains, in addition to the usual Index of Subjects, the Names and Pseudonyms of Writers, with a list of their Contributions. The number of constant Contributors exceeds eleven hundred. The Publishers reserve the right of increasing the price of the volume at any time. The number printed is limited, and the type has been distributed.

JOHN C. FRANCIS & J. EDWARD FRANCIS,
Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

All about Investment

By H. LOWENFELD

5/- net
of all Bookstalls

To every one interested in investment we will send a copy of this most entertaining and educative book.

It explains in simple and forceful language, free from all technicalities, the science of safeguarding capital and increasing income. There is not a dull moment nor an abstruse point in its 288 pages.

It is yours for one week—free on approval.

If you find it all you need, remit its price. Otherwise return it. It costs you nothing to see it. We back our opinion of its value to you.

Coupon for Approval Copy

[Cut this out and send it with your name and address to Financial Review of Reviews, 2, Waterloo Place, London, S.W.]

[G.]

A NEW WORK BY
SIR. J. COMPTON-RICKETT, D.L. M.P.

Author of 'THE CHRIST THAT IS TO BE,'
'THE QUICKENING OF CALIBAN,' &c.

6s. Published to-day under the Title 6s.

ORIGINS AND FAITH.

HODDER & STOUGHTON, London, E.C.

YOUR BIRTHRIGHT IS HEALTH.

THE SCIENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

'Health is a Man's Birthright. It is as natural to be well as to be born. All pathological conditions, all diseases, and all tendencies to disease are the result of the transgression of physiologic and hygienic law. This is the science of health in a nutshell.'—DENSMORE.

Eno's Fruit Salt

IS NATURE'S ANTIDOTE FOR HUMAN ILLS
arising from the neglect or violation of her laws.

'Our Acts, our angels are, for good or ill, our fatal shadows that walk by us still.'

'And such is life, so gliding on, it glimmers like a meteor, and is gone.'

CAUTION.—Examine the capsule, and see that it is marked ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT.' Without it you have the sincerest form of flattery—IMITATION.

Prepared only by J. C. ENO (Limited), 'FRUIT SALT' WORKS, LONDON, S.E.

MR. SWINBURNE'S WORKS.

MR. SWINBURNE'S COLLECTED POEMS.

In 6 vols. crown 8vo, 36s. net the Set.

SELECTIONS FROM MR. SWINBURNE'S
WORKS. Fcap. 8vo, 6s.

THE QUEEN MOTHER; and ROSAMOND.
Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

ATALANTA IN CALYDON. Crown 8vo, 6s.

CHASTELARD: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 7s.

POEMS AND BALLADS. FIRST SERIES.
Crown 8vo, 9s.

POEMS AND BALLADS. SECOND SERIES.
Crown 8vo, 9s.

POEMS AND BALLADS. THIRD SERIES.
Crown 8vo, 7s.

SONGS BEFORE SUNRISE. Crown 8vo,
10s. 6d.

BOTHWELL: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 12s. 6d.

SONGS OF TWO NATIONS. Crown 8vo, 6s.

GEORGE CHAPMAN. (In Vol. II. of G.
Chapman's Works.) Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

ESSAYS AND STUDIES. Crown 8vo, 12s.

ERECHTHEUS: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A NOTE ON CHARLOTTE BRONTË. Crown
8vo, 6s.

A STUDY OF SHAKESPEARE. Crown 8vo, 8s.

MR. SWINBURNE'S TRAGEDIES.

In 5 vols. crown 8vo, 30s. net the Set.

SONGS OF THE SPRINGTIDES. Crown 8vo, 6s.

STUDIES IN SONG. Crown 8vo, 7s.

MARY STUART: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 8s.

TRISTRAM OF LYONESSE. Crown 8vo, 9s.

A CENTURY OF ROUNDELS. 4to, 8s.

A MIDSUMMER HOLIDAY. Crown 8vo, 7s.

MARINO FALIERO: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A STUDY OF VICTOR HUGO. Crown 8vo, 6s.

MISCELLANIES. Crown 8vo, 12s.

LOCRINE: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A STUDY OF BEN JONSON. Crown 8vo, 7s.

THE SISTERS: a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

ASTROPHEL, &c. Crown 8vo, 7s.

STUDIES IN PROSE AND POETRY. Crown
8vo, 9s.

THE TALE OF BALEN. Crown 8vo, 7s.

ROSAMOND, QUEEN OF THE LOMBARDS:
a Tragedy. Crown 8vo, 6s.

A CHANNEL PASSAGE. Crown 8vo, 7s.

LOVE'S CROSS-CURRENTS. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

WILLIAM BLAKE. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

THE DUKE OF GANDIA. Crown 8vo, 5s.

THE AGE OF SHAKESPEARE. Crown 8vo,
6s. net.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

TO BE PUBLISHED ON MAY 1, 1909, royal 4to, 350 pages, 42s. net.

PRICE TO SUBSCRIBERS PRIOR TO PUBLICATION. ONE GUINEA.

AN ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE OF THE MUSIC LOAN EXHIBITION

HELD UNDER THE PATRONAGE OF

HIS MAJESTY THE KING, HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN,

AND

THEIR ROYAL HIGHNESSES THE PRINCE AND PRINCESS OF WALES

BY THE WORSHIPFUL COMPANY OF MUSICIANS

AT FISHMONGERS' HALL JUNE AND JULY, 1904.

The Illustrations consist of 9 Photogravure Plates, 9 Full-Page Illustrations, and many Facsimiles, &c., incorporated in the Text.

This handsome Volume is divided into six main Sections:—

MUSIC-PRINTING
PRINTED MUSIC

INSTRUMENTS
PORTRAITS, &c.

MANUSCRIPTS (Music and Letters)
MISCELLANEOUS.

Every exhibit is not only fully and carefully described, but the copious notes freely scattered throughout the volume add to the interest of its subject-matter and increase the value of the book both as a treasured library possession and as a useful book of reference.

Illustrations—title-pages, instruments, portraits, &c.—and facsimiles form a most important and attractive feature of this Edition de Luxe Catalogue. The portraits include a photogravure reproduction of Hudson's full-length oil-painting of Handel, preserved at Gopsall and belonging to The Earl Howe; and among the well-executed facsimiles are autographs of Bach, Handel (a characteristic letter, of three quarto pages, written to Charles Jennens), Mendelssohn, Orlando Gibbons (the only known autograph of the composer), Henry Purcell, and others.

London: NOVELLO & COMPANY, LIMITED.

JUST PUBLISHED, royal 8vo, pp. xii-524, cloth gilt, price 12s. 6d. net.

THE KING'S MUSICK.

A Transcript of Records relating to Music and Musicians (1460-1700).

Edited by HENRY CART DE LAFONTAINE, M.A.,

Formerly Incumbent of Berkeley Chapel, Mayfair.

This interesting and informing volume has been compiled from the inexhaustible store of documents preserved at the Record Office. From that vast untitled field has been literally dug out a mass of information concerning the maintenance and ordering of musicians attached to the English Court between the years 1460 and 1700, an eventful period covering the reigns of the Tudor and Stuart kings. Moreover, the transcripts herein set forth in chronological order furnish many details of the lives of old-time musicians. Thus 'The King's Musick' is not only of interest to students of music, but throws fresh light upon an era of the art which is of great value to the historian of English music.

London: NOVELLO & COMPANY, LIMITED.

Shipping.

PLEASURE CRUISES.

From MARSEILLES.

Rail and Steamship Connexions from London.

No. 4.—MAY 21 to JUNE 12.

NAPLES, ALGIERS, LISBON AND LONDON.

Fares from 20 guineas.

SPITZBERGEN.

From LONDON and LEITH.

No. 5.—JULY 1 to JULY 27.

SPITZBERGEN, NORWAY, &c.

Fares from 30 guineas.

NORWAY.

From LONDON and LEITH.

No. 6.—JULY 29 to AUGUST 11.

No. 7.—AUGUST 13 to AUGUST 26.

THE NORWEGIAN FJORDS,

BY Fares from 12 Guineas.

P. & O. CRUISING YACHT "VECTIS."

NOTICE.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

THE VOLUME

JULY to DECEMBER, 1908,

WITH THE

INDEX,

Price 10s. 6d.,

IS NOW READY.

* * The INDEX separately, price 6d.;
by post, 6½d.

Also Cases for Binding, price 1s.;
by post, 1s. 2d.

JOHN C. FRANCIS & J. EDWARD FRANCIS,
Notes and Queries Office, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

A TONIC FOR THE FEET.—For all Relaxed, Tender, Swollen conditions of the feet, "PEDESTRIANE" gives instant relief. It allays inflammation and the painful smarting that keeps you in perpetual discomfort. A trial will convince. 1s. 3d. and 2s. 6d. post free.—MARSHALL & CO., 70A, Basinghall Street, E.C.

For Acidity of the Stomach.
For Heartburn and Headache.
For Gout and Indigestion.

DINNEFORD'S

MAGNESIA.

For Sour Eructations and Bilious Affections.

A Safe and most effective Aperient for regular use.

THE EVERSLEY SERIES.

GLOBE 8vo, CLOTH, 4s. NET PER VOLUME.

Matthew Arnold's Works. 8 vols.

Poems. 3 vols. | Essays in Criticism. Second Series.
Essays in Criticism. First Series. | American Discourses.
Letters, 1848-1888. Collected and Arranged by G. W. E. RUSSELL. 2 vols.

A Memoir of Jane Austen. By her Nephew, J. E. AUSTEN LEIGH. To which is added 'Lady Susan,' and Fragments of two other Unfinished Tales by Miss Austen.

The Eversley Bible. Arranged in paragraphs, with an Introduction by J. W. MACKAIL, M.A.

Vol. II. Deuteronomy—2 Samuel. | Vol. VI. Ezekiel—Malachi.
Vol. III. 1 Kings—Esther. | Vol. VII. Matthew—John.
Vol. IV. Job—Song of Solomon. | Vol. VIII. Acts—Revelation.
Vol. V. Isaiah—Lamentations.

 The Text is that of the Authorised Version.

Essays by George Brimley. Third Edition.

Calderon. Eight Dramas of Calderon freely translated. By EDWARD FITZGERALD.

Chaucer's Canterbury Tales. Edited by A. W. POLLARD. 2 vols.

Dean Church's Miscellaneous Writings. Collected Edition. 9 vols.

Miscellaneous Essays. | Dante, and other Essays.
St. Anselm. | Bacon. | Spenser.
The Oxford Movement. Twelve Years, 1833-1845.
The Beginning of the Middle Ages. (Included in this series by permission of Messrs. Longmans & Co.)
Occasional Papers. Selected from the Guardian, the Times, and the Saturday Review, 1846-1890. 2 vols.

Life and Letters of Dean Church. Edited by his Daughter, MARY C. CHURCH.

Lectures and Essays by the late W. K. Clifford, F.R.S. Edited by the late Sir LESLIE STEPHEN and Sir FREDERICK POLLOCK. Third Edition. In 2 vols.

Emerson's Collected Works. 6 vols. With Introduction by JOHN MORLEY, M.P.

Miscellanies. | Essays. | Poems.
English Traits and Representative Men.
The Conduct of Life, and Society and Solitude.
Letters and Social Aims.

Letters of Edward FitzGerald. Edited by W. ALDIS WRIGHT. 2 vols. New Edition.

Letters of Edward FitzGerald to Fanny Kemble, 1871-1883. Edited by W. A. WRIGHT.

More Letters of Edward FitzGerald. Edited by W. ALDIS WRIGHT.

Pausanias and other Greek Sketches. By J. G. FRAZER, D.C.L.

Goethe's Maxims and Reflections. Translated, with Introductions, by T. BAILEY SAUNDERS.

 The Scientific and Artistic Maxims were selected by Prof. Huxley and Lord Leighton respectively.

Thomas Gray's Collected Works in Prose and Verse. Edited by EDMUND GOSSE. 4 vols.

Poems, Journals, and Essays. | Letters. 2 vols.
Notes on Aristophanes and Plato.

J. R. Green's Works. 16 vols.

History of the English People. 8 vols. | Historical Studies.
The Making of England. 2 vols. | Oxford Studies.
The Conquest of England. 2 vols. | Stray Studies. Second Series.
Stray Studies from England and Italy.

Guesses at Truth. By TWO BROTHERS.

Earthwork out of Tuscany. Being Impressions and Translations of MAURICE HEWLETT, Author of 'The Forest Lovers.' Third Edition, revised.

R. H. Hutton's Collected Essays. 7 vols.

Literary Essays. | Theological Essays.
Essays on Some of the Modern Guides of English Thought in Matters of Faith.
Criticisms on Contemporary Thought and Thinkers. 2 vols.
Aspects of Religious and Scientific Thought. Edited by his Niece, ELIZABETH M. ROSCOE.
Brief Literary Criticism. Edited by his Niece, ELIZABETH M. ROSCOE.

The Choice of Books, and other Literary Pieces. By FREDERIC HARRISON.

The Meaning of History, and other Historical Pieces. By FREDERIC HARRISON.

Poems of Thomas Hood. Edited, with Prefatory Memoir, by the late CANON AINGER. In 2 vols. Vol. I. Serious Poems. | Vol. II. Poems of Wit and Humour. With Vignettes and Portraits.

Thomas Henry Huxley's Collected Works. 12 vols.

Method and Results. | Darwiniana.
Science and Hebrew Tradition. | Science and Education.
Science and Christian Tradition.
Hume. With Helps to the Study of Berkeley.
Man's Place in Nature, and other Anthropological Essays.
Discourses: Biological and Geological.
Evolution and Ethics, and other Essays. | Life and Letters. 3 vols.

French Poets and Novelists. By HENRY JAMES.

Partial Portraits. By HENRY JAMES.

Modern Greece. Two Lectures delivered before the Philosophical Institution of Edinburgh, with Papers on 'The Progress of Greece' and 'Byron in Greece.' By Sir RICHARD C. JEBB, Litt.D. D.C.L. LL.D. Second Edition.

Letters of John Keats to his Family and Friends. Edited by SIDNEY COLVIN.

Epic and Romance. By Prof. W. P. KER.

Charles Kingsley's Novels and Poems. 13 vols.

Westward Ho! 2 vols. | Yeast. 1 vol.
Alton Locke. 2 vols. | Hypatia. 2 vols.
Two Years Ago. 2 vols. | Poems. 2 vols.
Hereward the Wake. 2 vols.

Charles Lamb's Collected Works. Edited, with Introduction and Notes, by the late Rev. CANON AINGER, M.A. 6 vols.

The Essays of Elia.
Poems, Plays, and Miscellaneous Essays.
Mrs. Leicester's School, and other Writings.
Tales from Shakespeare. By CHARLES and MARY LAMB.
The Letters of Charles Lamb. Newly arranged, with Additions, 1904. 2 vols.

Life of Charles Lamb. By the late Canon AINGER, M.A.

Historical Essays. By the late J. B. LIGHTFOOT, D.D. D.C.L. LL.D.

The Poetical Works of John Milton. Edited, with Memoir, Introduction, and Notes, by DAVID MASSON, M.A. LL.D. 3 vols.

John Morley's Collected Works. 14 vols.

Voltaire. 1 vol. | Oliver Cromwell. 1 vol.
Diderot and the Encyclopædists. 2 vols. | Rousseau. 2 vols.
On Compromise. 1 vol. | Miscellanies. 3 vols.
Burke. 1 vol. | Studies in Literature. 1 vol.
The Life of Richard Cobden. 2 vols.

Science and a Future Life, and other Essays. By F. W. H. MYERS, M.A.

Classical Essays. By F. W. H. MYERS.

Modern Essays. By F. W. H. MYERS.

Records of Tennyson, Ruskin, and Browning. By ANNE THACKERAY RITCHIE.

Works by Sir John R. Seeley, Litt.D. 5 vols.

The Expansion of England. Two Courses of Lectures.
Lectures and Essays.
Ecce Homo. | Natural Religion.
Introduction to Political Science. Two Series of Lectures.

Shakespeare. By WALTER RALEIGH.

The Works of Shakespeare. With Short Introduction and Foot-notes by Prof. C. H. HERFORD. In 10 vols.

 The Plays may also be had in separate volumes, cloth, 1s. each; roan, gilt tops, 2s. each.

Works by James Smetham. 2 vols.

Letters. With an Introductory Memoir. Edited by SARAH SMETHAM and WILLIAM DAVIES. With a Portrait.
Literary Works. Edited by WILLIAM DAVIES.

The Works of Alfred, Lord Tennyson. Annotated by the Author. Edited by HALLAM, LORD TENNYSON. 9 vols.

Vol. I. Poems. | Vol. V. Idylls of the King.
Vol. II. Poems. | Vol. VI. Ballads and other Poems.
Vol. III. Enoch Arden. In Memoriam. | Vol. VII. Demeter and other Poems.
Vol. IV. The Princess. Maud. | Vol. VIII. Queen Mary and Harold.
Vol. IX. Becket and other Plays.

Selections from the Writings of Thoreau.

Essays in the History of Religious Thought in the West. By BROOKE FOSS WESTCOTT, D.D. D.C.L., Lord Bishop of Durham.

The Works of Wordsworth. Edited by Prof. KNIGHT. In 10 vols. Each volume contains a Portrait and Vignette etched by H. MANESSE. Poetical Works. 8 vols. | Journals of Dorothy Wordsworth. 2 vols.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4253.

SATURDAY, MAY 1, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

SIR JOHN SOANE'S MUSEUM.
13, Lincoln's Inn Fields, W.C.
INTERESTING HOUSE AND ART COLLECTION.
OPEN FREE, between 10.30 and 5, on TUESDAYS, WEDNESDAYS, THURSDAYS, and FRIDAYS to the end of AUGUST.

Lectures.

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN,
ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, W.

THIS DAY (SATURDAY), May 1, at 5 o'clock, ANNUAL MEETING of the Members.

TUESDAY NEXT, May 4, at 3 o'clock, Prof. SVANTE ARRHENIUS, D.Sc. Hon. F.C.S., FIRST OF TWO LECTURES on 'Cosmogonical Questions.' (The Tyndall Lectures.) Half-a-Guinea the Course.

SATURDAY, May 8, at 3 o'clock, Prof. WALTER RALEIGH, M.A., FIRST OF TWO LECTURES on (1) 'Edmund Burke'; (2) 'Burke's Prose.' Half-a-Guinea.

Subscription to all the Courses in the Season, Two Guineas.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.
UNIVERSITY COLLEGE.
MONUMENTAL PAINTING FROM GIOTTO TO MODERN TIMES.

Mr. ROGER E. FRY, B.A., will begin a COURSE OF SIX LECTURES on FRIDAY, April 30, at 4.30 P.M.
Fee for the Course, 12. 1s.
Separate Lectures, 5s.
Full particulars on application to the undersigned.

WALTER W. SETON, M.A., Secretary.
University College, London, Gower Street, W.C.

THE UNIVERSITY EXTENSION GUILD.—
TWO LECTURES ON PSYCHOLOGY, Prof. C. S. MYERS, at the UNIVERSITY OF LONDON, SOUTH KENSINGTON, FRIDAY, May 7, at 8.15 P.M., 'Memory.' FRIDAY, May 14, at 8.15 P.M., 'Illusions.' Single Lecture, 2s.; the Two Lectures, 3s. 6d. Members of the Guild, free.—Tickets may be obtained on application by post to the HON. SECRETARIES, University Extension Guild, 449, Birkbeck Bank Chambers, W.C.; or at the University on the Evening of the Lecture.

LONDON HOSPITAL MEDICAL COLLEGE
(UNIVERSITY OF LONDON).

A COURSE OF EIGHT LECTURES will be delivered by Mr. G. P. MUDGE, A.R.C.S. Lond. F.L.S., Lecturer on Biology, on TUESDAYS at 10.30 A.M. in the BIOLOGICAL THEATRE of the COLLEGE, commencing on TUESDAY, May 4, 1909. Subject:—'Experimental Evidence relating to Variation and Heredity and its bearing upon the Problems of Evolution.'

All Students of the University are free to attend. Members of the Profession will be admitted on presentation of their address cards.

MUNRO SCOTT, Warden.
Turner Street, Mile End, E.

Exhibitions.

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S
SPRING EXHIBITION OF PORTRAITS and LANDSCAPES by EARLY BRITISH and FOREIGN MASTERS is NOW OPEN.
SHEPHERD'S GALLERY, 27, King Street, St. James's.

THE LITTLE SALON.—Social, Literary, and Debating Circles, Afternoons and Evenings.
No Entrance Fee to Members joining at once.
Write DIRECTOR, Gallery van Brakel, 36, Albemarle Street, W.

Probident Institutions.

ROYAL LITERARY FUND.
(For the assistance of Authors and their Families who are in want).

Mr. ANDREW LANG

will preside at the 119th ANNIVERSARY DINNER on MAY 13 at the WHITEHALL ROOMS, HOTEL METROPOLE at 7 for 7.30 P.M.

LORD TENNYSON, Sir EDWARD CLARKE, K.C., and Mr. MAURICE HEWLETT will speak.

The Committee will be glad of an early reply from Ladies and Gentlemen who are willing to be Stewards.

Donations to the Chairman's List will be gratefully acknowledged on behalf of the Committee by the Secretary.

296, Vauxhall Bridge Road, S.W.

A. LLEWELYN ROBERTS.

ARTISTS' GENERAL BENEVOLENT INSTITUTION.

For the Relief of Distressed Artists, their Widows and Orphans.
President—Sir EDWARD J. POYNTER, Bart. P.R.A.

The ANNIVERSARY DINNER will take place at the WHITEHALL ROOMS, HOTEL METROPOLE, on WEDNESDAY, May 5, at 7.15 o'clock.

The Right Hon. H. H. ASQUITH, P.C. K.C. M.P., Prime Minister, in the Chair.

Dinner Tickets, including Wines, One Guinea.

Donations will be received and thankfully acknowledged by Sir ASTON WEBB, R.A., Treasurer.

ARTHUR S. COPE, R.A., Hon. Sec.

DOUGLAS H. GORDON, Secretary.

3, Charles Street, St. James' Square, S.W.

Educational.

LEATHERHEAD COURT, SURREY.
A London School in the Country for 45 Girls (Residents).

Principal—Miss TULLIS.

The School aims at an intellectual training suited to the individual, physical development on safe lines, and the cultivation of generous thoughts and pleasant manners.

UNIVERSITY OF DURHAM.

The EXAMINATION for SCHOLARSHIPS in CLASSICS, MATHEMATICS, and THEOLOGY COMMENCES at 9 A.M. on WEDNESDAY, June 16. For particulars apply to THE SECRETARY OF EXAMINATIONS, University Offices, Durham.

LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.—PROFESSIONAL
EXAMINATION.—The NEXT PROFESSIONAL EXAMINATION of the LIBRARY ASSOCIATION will be held JUNE 7-12, 1909, at the LONDON UNIVERSITY, SOUTH KENSINGTON, and at various Provincial Centres. Last date of entry, MAY 22.—Copies of the Syllabus, together with all details, can be obtained on application to ERNEST A. BAKER, M.A. D.Litt., Hon. Secretary, Education Committee, 24, Whitecomb Street, W.C.

WEYBRIDGE LADIES' SCHOOL, SURREY.

Miss E. DAWES, M.A. D.Lit. Lond., Classical Scholar, Girton. Refined Home. Thorough Education and Physical Care. Good Grounds. Position high, and one of the healthiest in England.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH, S.E.

F. W. AVELING, M.A. B.Sc.
Preparation for Universities and Professions.
Stress on Modern Languages and Science.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,

CIRENCESTER. (Founded 1845. Reorganized 1908.)
Patron—H.M. KING EDWARD VII.

Chairman—LORD MORETON.

For Landowners, Land Agents, Surveyors, Agriculturists, Intending Colonists, &c.

FARMING AND COLONIAL BRANCH.

ESTATE MANAGEMENT AND FORESTRY BRANCH.

For Prospectus of Curriculum, Fees, Entrance Exhibitions, Scholarships, Diplomas, &c., apply to THE PRINCIPAL.

NEXT TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, May 18.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE of SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTORS in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to

MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO.,

who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

Situations Vacant.

THE QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY OF BELFAST.

The BELFAST COMMISSIONERS, under the Irish Universities Act, 1908, will proceed at an early date to appoint to PROFESSORSHIPS in the following subjects:—

MODERN HISTORY.

ECONOMICS.

BOTANY.

FRENCH LANGUAGE and ROMANCE PHILOLOGY.

JURISPRUDENCE and ROMAN LAW.

and to READERSHIPS or LECTURESHIPS in the following subjects:—

ARCHAEOLOGY and ANCIENT HISTORY.

ENGLISH LANGUAGE.

CELTIC LANGUAGES and LITERATURE.

MORAL PHILOSOPHY and HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHY.

LOGIC and SCHOLASTIC PHILOSOPHY.

PHYSICS.

ORGANIC CHEMISTRY.

BIO-CHEMISTRY.

GEOLOGY and MINERALOGY.

Information as to Salary and other terms of these appointments may be obtained from

ARTHUR JAFFÉ, Secretary to the Commissioners.

(N.B.—Cavassing of individual Commissioners will be a disqualification.)

THE UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD.

PROFESSORSHIP OF ECONOMICS.

The COUNCIL will shortly proceed to the ELECTION of a PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS in the UNIVERSITY.—Applications must reach the Registrar, from whom further particulars may be obtained, not later than MAY 12, 1909.

W. M. GIBBONS, Registrar.

MCGILL UNIVERSITY, MONTREAL.

CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.

The GOVERNORS of MCGILL UNIVERSITY are prepared to receive applications for appointment to the STRATHCONA CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.—For all information apply to

W. VAUGHAN, Secretary

HABERDASHERS' ASKE'S SCHOOLS.

The SCHOOL GOVERNORS of the HABERDASHERS' ASKE'S HAMPTHEAD BOYS' SCHOOL invite applications for the post of HEAD MASTER, to take Office in SEPTEMBER, 1909. He must be a Graduate of some University within the British Empire. The Salary offered is about 700l. per annum.

No Residence provided.

Arrangements for Pension will be made.

Personal canvassing will disqualify.

Applications must be sent on or before SATURDAY, June 5, 1909.

Forms of Application, and further particulars, can be obtained from

R. J. ELLIS,

Aske's Hatcham School, Jerningham Road,

New Cross, S.E.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD.

APPOINTMENT OF ASSISTANT LECTURER IN HISTORY.

The COUNCIL are about to appoint an ASSISTANT LECTURER in HISTORY.

Applications must be sent in by May 29. Further particulars may be obtained from

W. M. GIBBONS, Registrar.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

CAMBRIDGE AND COUNTY SCHOOL OF ARTS AND CRAFTS.

A PRINCIPAL is REQUIRED who will either (a) devote the whole of his time to his duties, undertaking the General Direction of the School in Day and Evening Classes, and the Teaching of One Department, at a Salary of 300l. a year; or (b) devote part of his time to his duties, undertaking the General Direction of the School, with a limited amount of Teaching, preferably in the Building Department, at a Salary of 150l. a year.

It is proposed that the School shall include in its Prospectus the Work of a School of Art in accordance with the Regulations of the Board of Education, together with Building Subjects (including Building Construction, Builders' Quantities, Wood Carving, Plumbers' Work, Iron Work, Stone Cutting, &c.); Metal Work Subjects; Needlework Subjects; other Subjects (Shorthand, Book-Keeping, &c.); and probably Bookbinding.

Applications (15 copies), setting forth particulars of previous experience, together with copies of not more than three recent Testimonials, must be sent to the undersigned on or before SATURDAY, May 15, 1909, of whom any further information may be obtained.

AUSTIN KEEN, Education Secretary.

County Offices, Sidney Street, Cambridge,
April 20, 1909.

THE GOVERNORS of the THETFORD BOYS' GRAMMAR SCHOOL.

GRAMMAR SCHOOL invite applications for the post of HEAD MASTER. Duties to commence in SEPTEMBER NEXT. University Graduate. Secondary School experience. Salary 120l. per annum, with maximum Capitation fees of 3l. per pupil and a House rent free. No pension. Personal canvassing will disqualify.—Applications, with three Testimonials to be sent not later than MAY 5, to F. V. HOUGHEN, Clerk to the Governors, London Road, Thetford.

April 16, 1909.

WHITGIFT GRAMMAR SCHOOL, CROYDON.

Applications are invited for the post of CHIEF SCIENCE MASTER in this SCHOOL, vacant on the appointment of Mr. W. E. Cross to the Head Mastership of King's School, Peterborough.

Particulars may be had from THE HEAD MASTER.

CHESTER CITY AND COUNTY SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

WANTED, to commence duties in SEPTEMBER NEXT, a MASTER thoroughly experienced in teaching English, French, and Elementary Latin in Secondary Schools. A knowledge of Phonetics preferred. Salary 150l.

Applications to be forwarded, with two Testimonials, before May 31, 1909, to

J. DODD, Clerk to the Governing Body,

16, Corn Exchange Chambers, Chester.

KENT EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

DOVER MUNICIPAL SCHOOL OF SCIENCE, ART, AND TECHNOLOGY.

WANTED an ASSISTANT ART MASTER, who must have had good teaching experience. Initial Salary from 120l. to 150l. per annum, according to qualifications and experience. Particulars of the appointment may be obtained from the Head Master, Mr. W. H. EAST, who will also supply Forms of Application, which should be returned as early as possible to Mr. R. E. KNOCKER, Town Hall, Dover. Canvassing will be considered a disqualification.

By order of the Committee.

FRAS. W. CROOK, Secretary.

Caxton House, Westminster, S.W., April 19, 1909.

CITY OF LEEDS PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

The LIBRARIES COMMITTEE invite applications for the position of ASSISTANT LIBRARIAN. Previous experience in a Public Library and a knowledge of Cataloguing necessary. Commencing Salary 80l. per annum, rising by annual increments of 5l. to 100l. if services satisfactory. Applications, in Candidate's own handwriting, stating age, experience, and qualifications, accompanied by copies of not more than three Testimonials, to be delivered to the undersigned not later than SATURDAY, May 8.

THOMAS W. HAND, City Librarian.

Central Library, Leeds, April 20, 1909.

WANTED, an ASSISTANT ART MASTER for the SCHOOL OF ART at BURY ST. EDMUNDS.

The successful Candidate will be required to teach about Sixteen Hours per Week, mainly Elementary Subjects, the remainder of his time being devoted to private study. Preference will be given to Candidates with a thorough knowledge of one particular craft. Salary at the rate of 80l. per annum, together with Travelling (Locomotion) Expenses, and an allowance when out for the night on County Duty. Applications must be received on or before 10 A.M. on MAY 12, 1909, on the specified Form, which can be obtained from me, together with further particulars, on the receipt of a stamped addressed foolscap envelope.

FRED. R. HUGHES,

Secretary to the West Suffolk Education Committee.
Education Offices, Shire Hall, Bury St. Edmunds,
April, 1909.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—FORTH-

COMING EXAMINATION. JUNIOR APPOINTMENT in ADMIRALTY; EXAMINER, EXCHEQUER and AUDIT DEPARTMENT; and ASSISTANT SURVEYORSHIPS OF TAXES (18-19). JUNE 10. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received.—They must be made on Forms to be obtained, with particulars, from THE SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, Burlington Gardens, London, W.

COUNTY OF LONDON.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the undermentioned posts:—

(a) DRAWING MISTRESS (full time) at the COUNTY SECONDARY SCHOOL, SOUTH HACKNEY, at a fixed Salary of 150*l.* a year. To begin work in September next. Ability to teach Needlework and the adaptation of Art to Needlework is desirable, though ability to teach the former is not essential.

(b) DRILL AND GAMES MISTRESS (full time) at the COUNTY SECONDARY SCHOOL, KENTISH TOWN, at a fixed Salary of 130*l.* a year. To begin work in September next.

Applications to be made on Forms H.40 and H.428 respectively, to be obtained, together with particulars of the appointment, from the EDUCATION OFFICER, London County Council, Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C., to whom they must be returned not later than 11 A.M. on MAY 14, 1909, accompanied by copies of three Testimonials of recent date.

All communications on the subject must be endorsed "H.4" and a stamped addressed foolscap envelope must be enclosed.

Canvassing, either directly or indirectly, will be held to be a disqualification for employment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.
Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C.
April 28th, 1909.

JOURNALIST and AUTHOR requires the services (Afternoons only), of well-educated YOUNG LADY, competent Shorthand Typist, knowing French and German.—Box 1587, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

Miscellaneous.

SPANISH.—Thorough TUITION by SPANISH SCHOLAR (Englishman) of great distinction. Highest references.—Box 1589, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

MR. ERIC STUART BRUCE, M.A. Oxon, F.M., Met. Soc., Member of Council and late Honorary Secretary Aeronautical Society of Great Britain, Vice-President Aerial League of the British Empire, can accept ENGAGEMENTS for his successful LECTURE 'Airships, Balloons and Flying Machines.' Elaborate Experiments and Working Models.—For Prospectus, Terms, &c., address E. S. BRUCE, Esq., Airth, Sunningdale, Ascot.

OLD DEEDS and DOCUMENTS overhauled and the gist copied into Modern English. Strongroom for safe keeping. SEARCHES in Public and Private Records for DOCUMENTS to prove PEDIGREES and illustrate the History of FAMILIES, OLD HOUSES, and ESTATES.—GEORGE SHERWOOD, 227, Strand (by Temple Bar), W.C.

REGINALD GLENCROSS, M.A. LL.B. Cantab., undertakes GENEALOGICAL and RESEARCH WORK. Three years' experience in Ulster's Office, Dublin. Highest references. Terms moderate.—3, Chalonier Street, West Kensington.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

THE DAUGHTER of a well-known Literary Man is desirous of meeting with a LADY and GENTLEMAN to SHARE her HOUSE; or would take boarders. Rooms furnished or unfurnished. The House is situated on South Norwood Hill, five minutes from Norwood Junction Station, close to the Stanley Halls (where Concerts, Lectures, &c., are continually given), near the Public Library, and within a walk of the Crystal Palace, or One Station from it. Norwood is regarded as one of the healthiest places round London, and was at one time a well-known health resort. A good train service to London Bridge and Victoria.—Address C. M., Box 1562, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Partnership.

PARTNERSHIP.—A GENTLEMAN, of great experience in the Printing and Publishing Trades and of some Literary capacity, wishes to join going concern as ACTIVE PARTNER. Could invest 1,000*l.*—Address, in confidence, R. N. M. Box 1590, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Authors' Agents.

SUCCESS in PLACING MSS. DEPENDS on a Knowledge of the Market. Employ as Agents those who are themselves Authors, and understand the artistic and commercial value of Literary Work. Call or send for Prospectus.—WALTER M. GALLICHAH (Gallichan & Gasquoine), 183, Strand.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, 24, Paternoster Row.

Type-Writers, &c.

TYPE-WRITING, 9*d.* per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3*d.* per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272, Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9*d.* per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING 9*d.* per 1,000 words; Carbons 3*d.* French and German Type-writing 1*s.* per 1,000. Translations. Duplicating 3*s.* 100 Copies (quarto), 1*s.* per 1,000. Best work, accuracy, and promptitude.—G. WALKER, 14, Park Road, New Cross, S.E.

TYPE-WRITING.—The WEST KENSINGTON OFFICES. Authors' MSS., Translations, &c. Legal and General Copying. Private Dictation Room, Circulæ, &c. Duplicated. Usual Terms. References. Established sixteen years.—SIKES & SIKES, 223A, Hammersmith Road, London, W.

TYPE-WRITING.—AUTHORS' MSS. 8*d.* 1,000 words; with Carbon Copy, 9*d.*; Paragraphs and Essays, 600 words or less, 5*d.* MSS. fastened in covers.—GIRTON, 2, Grove Lane, Camberwell, S.E.

TYPE-WRITING.—AUTHORS' MSS. NOVELS, STORIES, TYPEWRITTEN accurately and expeditiously, 7*d.* 1,000 words; over 25,000, 6*d.* Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. Specialists in Literary Copying.—J. & H. E. KENNION, 18, Denbigh Road, East Ham.

TYPE-WRITING.—All kinds of TYPE-WRITING, SHORTHAND, and DUPLICATING WORK UNDERTAKEN. Sermons and Meetings Reported. Authors' MSS. from 10*d.* per 1,000 words. Special terms for Contracts and large quantities.—Miss MORGAN, Bush Lane House, Cannon Street, London, E.C. Telephone: 12137 Central.

TYPE-WRITING OF EVERY DESCRIPTION by EXPERT, 8*d.* per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies, 3*d.* per 1,000 words. Accuracy and prompt return guaranteed. Reliable References.—NORA DICKINSON, 1, Sackville Gardens, Ilford.

Printers.

FAMILY RECORDS, PEDIGREES, MEMOIRS, &c. PRINTED under Expert Supervision, and Searches made where MS. is incomplete. Write for Estimates and all Particulars.—GERRARDS, LTD. (The Westminster Press), Producers of Printing of Distinction, at 411A, Harrow Road, London, W.

Catalogues.

BERTRAM DOBELL, SECOND-HAND BOOKSELLER and PUBLISHER, 77, Charing Cross Road, London, W.C.
A large Stock of Old and Rare Books in English Literature, including Poetry and the Drama—Shakespeareana—First Editions of Famous Authors—Manuscripts—Illustrated Books, &c. CATALOGUES free on application.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.—Yellow Book, 13 vols. 2*l.* 10*s.*; Trigg's Art Garden Design, Italy, 3*l.* guineas for 2*l.* 10*s.*; E. Fitzgerald's Works, 7 vols. 3*l.* 3*s.*

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON, Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

CATALOGUE No. 50—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

BOOKS. BOOKS.—CLEARANCE CATALOGUE in all Branches of Literature post free. Catalogues may also be had of Ancient and Modern Mathematical Books. GALLOWAY & PORTER, Booksellers, Cambridge (Eng.).

MAGGS BROS., 109, Strand, London, W.C.
DEALERS IN RARE and VALUABLE BOOKS; PRINTS, AND AUTOGRAPHS.
CATALOGUES sent post free to all parts of the World
Export Orders Solicited.
Telegraphic and Cable Address: "Bibliolite, London."
Telephone: "Gerrard 4661."

THE following CATALOGUES of portions of E. H. BLACKWELL'S Stock are in active preparation, and will be issued shortly:—

CXXXII. EUROPEAN PHILOLOGY, including ANGLO-SAXON—Gothic—Old, Middle, and New English—British Dialects—Romance Languages, &c.

CXXXIII. HISTORY AND LITERATURE OF INDIA and THE FAR EAST, including interesting items from the LIBRARY of the late CUTHBERT SHIELDS, M.A. Oxon; Duplicates from an important Oriental Library, &c.

CXXXIV. BRITISH TOPOGRAPHY AND LOCAL HISTORY, containing about 2,000 items, many of exceptional interest,
50 and 51, BROAD STREET, OXFORD.

BOOKS AT SPECIAL PRICES.

CATALOGUE No. 364—MAY, 1909—NOW READY. CONTAINING MANY NEW AND ATTRACTIVE LINES IN PUBLISHERS' REMAINDERS.

WILLIAM GLAISHER, LTD., Remainder and Discount Booksellers, 265, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON (and 14, George Street, Croydon)
The Books are on view at both addresses.

Sales by Auction.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 13, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, VALUABLE BOOKS, including the LIBRARY of the late Mrs. BATHO, removed from Eastbourne, and other Properties, comprising well-bound Standard Works in all branches of Literature—Sets of Favourite Authors in the original cloth, in remarkably fine state—Hakluyt Society's Publications, 46 vols.—County Histories—a Collection of rare Sixteenth and Seventeenth Century Books in fine bindings—valuable First Editions of Modern Authors—Autograph Letters—Drawings and Engravings.

English and Foreign Coins and Medals.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 3, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ENGLISH and FOREIGN COINS, the Property of WALTER H. SPEKE, Esq., 11minster, Somerset; GREEK and INDIAN COINS, collected by Major MACKENZIE ELLIOT; a valuable COLLECTION of GREEK, ROMAN, BYZANTINE, ENGLISH and FOREIGN COINS in Gold and Silver, the Property of Dr. SOMERSHIELD; and other small Properties—Coin Cabinets, &c.

May be viewed Catalogues may be had.

Engravings.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 5, at 1 o'clock precisely, ENGRAVINGS (Framed and in the Portfolio), including the Property of A. W. CLIFFORD, Esq., of Chestal, Gloucestershire, comprising Engraved Portraits, principally of celebrated personages connected with Gloucestershire, by J. R. Smith, T. Watson, J. Condé, V. Green, R. Earlam, J. Smith, J. Faber, C. Turner, S. W. Reynolds, J. K. Sherwin, J. Ward, W. Ward, and others; SCRAP-BOOKS, containing Portraits, and a few ENGRAVINGS after OLD MASTERS, &c., the Property of FRANK FALKNER, Esq., of Bowdon, Cheshire, comprising fine Mezzotint and other Portraits after Sir J. Reynolds, G. Romney, Sir T. Lawrence, Sir P. Lely, and others, including Lady Taylor, by W. Dickinson, after Sir J. Reynolds—Lady Cockburn and Children, by C. Wilkin, after the same, proof before letters, &c.; other Properties, comprising FANCY SUBJECTS of the ENGLISH SCHOOL, some printed in Colours—Portraits by celebrated Engravers, after Sir J. Reynolds, Sir H. Raeburn, J. Russell, and others, including a few fine Proofs by Samuel Cousins, after Sir T. Lawrence, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

A Collection of Illuminated Manuscripts on Vellum, the Property of a Gentleman recently deceased.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 6, at 1 o'clock precisely, a COLLECTION of ILLUMINATED MANUSCRIPTS on VELLUM, the Property of an ENGLISH GENTLEMAN recently deceased, who lived abroad.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had; illustrated copies, 5*s.* each.

The valuable Collection of English Coins, the Property of the late F. G. HILTON PRICE, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 17, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the important and valuable COLLECTION of ENGLISH COINS in Gold and Silver, the Property of the late F. G. HILTON PRICE, Esq., Director of the Royal Society of Antiquaries, Fellow of the Royal Numismatic Society, &c. To which is added a small COLLECTION of ENGLISH and FOREIGN MEDALS, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Modern Books from the Library of a Gentleman, and other Properties.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on TUESDAY, May 4, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE MODERN BOOKS, including the Edinburgh Stevenson, 30 vols.—Editions de Luxe of Meredith, 32 vols. and Kingsley, 19 vols.—Large Paper Sets of Dumas' Novels, 60 vols. and Balzac's Human Comedy, 40 vols.—Vale Press Shakespeare, 39 vols.—Doves Press Bible, 5 vols.—Oriental Books and MSS.—an extensive and interesting Collection of Books relating to Scotland—Works on Natural History—Fur and Feather Series, Large Paper, 12 vols.—rare Coloured Sporting Plates by Alken—Jenkins' Naval and Martial Achievements, Coloured Plates, 2 vols.—Boydell's River Thames, 2 vols.—Topographical Books—Jefferys' American Atlas—Laws of Pennsylvania, 1714-21—Engravings, &c. Also the extensive THEOLOGICAL LIBRARY of the Rev. J. G. PILKINGTON, formerly Vicar of Holy Trinity, Paddington, comprising Library of the Fathers, 41 vols.—Ante-Nicene Library, 24 vols.—the Writings of Neale, Westcott, Lightfoot, Church, Liddon, Sadler, and many others. Commentaries and Church Histories—a few Early Printed Books—Works in General Literature, &c.

Catalogues on application.

Valuable Books from the Library of the late Sir MAURICE HOLZMANN, K.C.B. K.C.V.O., &c., removed from St. James's Palace (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION DURING MAY, CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS from the LIBRARY of the late Sir MAURICE HOLZMANN, K.C.B., &c., formerly Keeper of Records of the Duchy of Cornwall, comprising a remarkable and comprehensive Collection of Alpine Books and Works on Mountaineering, in English, French, and German—Fine Art Books and Works in General Literature, &c., mostly in handsome calf or morocco bindings by Riviere and others.

Catalogues are preparing.

Valuable Modern Library of the late J. H. RADFORD, Esq., of Yelverton, South Devon (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, DURING MAY, the VALUABLE LIBRARY of MODERN BOOKS of the late J. H. RADFORD, Esq., removed from Uppaton, Buckland Monachorum, near Yelverton.

Catalogues are preparing.

Estate of Rev. Prebendary J. H. STEPHENSON, deceased, Lympsham Manor, near Weston-super-Mare, Somerset.

LALONDE BROS. & PARHAM have been favoured with instructions to SELL by AUCTION, on the PREMISES, on TUESDAY, May 11, 1909, and Four Following Days, the ANTIQUE and MODERN HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE—a few fine Specimens of Early English Carved Oak—Grand Pianoforte (Broadwood)—Single Manual Pipe Organ—Invalid's costly Wheel Chair—valuable Oil Paintings attributed to Sir Joshua Reynolds (after Van Dyck), Rubens, Vickers, and Zuccheri School, Engravings, Prints, and other Pictures—Two valuable Panels of Embroidery—Two large Seventeenth-Century Carved Figures of Apostles (said to be from Bath Abbey)—Old Armour—Antique Ornamental China—Old Silver and Sheffield Plate—King Charles I. Handkerchief—Eric-a-Brac—Old Gold and Silver Coins, including Three Aureus of Nero and Tiberius.

Extensive LIBRARY of OLD and VALUABLE BOOKS, including Shakespeare's Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies, Second Impression 1632, Horæ Beatæ Mariæ Virgine, Fifteenth-Century, on Vellum, and Missale Hildensemense, 1499, and other rare Works.

On view the Monday preceding the Sale from 11 till 5, and the Auction will commence at 2 o'clock each day.

Illustrated Catalogues (price 6*d.* each, which must be remitted) are in course of preparation, and may be obtained of the Auctioneers, Weston-super-Mare.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, May 3, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late G. B. HENDERSON, Esq.

On WEDNESDAY, May 5, OLD ENGLISH SILVER PLATE, the Property of R. G. BEHRENS, Esq., and others.

On THURSDAY, May 6, OLD ENGLISH FURNITURE and PORCELAIN, the Property of R. G. BEHRENS, Esq., and OLD ENGLISH FURNITURE of A. A. HUDSON, Esq.

On FRIDAY, May 7, the COLLECTION of EARLY ENGLISH PICTURES of R. G. BEHRENS, Esq.; Pictures by Old Masters, and Works of the Early English School.

STEVENS'S AUCTION ROOMS,
Established 1760.

TUESDAY AND WEDNESDAY NEXT,
at half-past 12 o'clock each day.

A very important COLLECTION of WEAPONS, Wood and Ivory Idols, Shields, Spears, &c. Carved Fetish Figures—Ivory Masks—Chinese and Japanese Works of Art—Collection of Silver and Brass Ornaments—Carved Wood Furniture from the Indian Section of the Franco-British Exhibition, to be sold without reserve; also the usual Miscellaneous Assortment of Curiosities.

Mr. J. C. STEVENS will offer the above Property by AUCTION at his Rooms, 38, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

On view day prior to 4 and mornings of sale. Catalogues on application.

Magazines, &c.

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY AND AFTER. MAY.

SIX GERMAN OPINIONS ON THE NAVAL SITUATION. By Aeneas O'Neill.

THE DECLARATION OF LONDON. By Thomas Gibson Bowles.

THE ORIGIN OF THE REVOLT IN TURKEY. By Halil Halid Bey.

THE LAMBETH IDEAL OF REUNION. By the Rev. Canon Hensley Henson, D.D.

PRAYER-BOOK REVISION AND THE ORNAMENTS RUBRIC. By D. C. Lathbury.

WILLIAM BECKFORD'S ADVENTURE IN DIPLOMACY: AN UNPUBLISHED CORRESPONDENCE. By Lewis Melville.

THE AERIAL PERIL. By Capt. T. G. Tullech, late R.A.

DECENTRALISATION OF GOVERNMENT IN INDIA. By Sir Arundel Arundel, K.C.S.I., late Member of the Viceroy's Council.

THE END OF A LEGEND. By W. S. Lilly.

THE MISSING ESSENTIALS IN ECONOMIC SCIENCE. II. By W. H. Mallock.

IRELAND AND THE BUDGET. By T. M. Kettle, M.P.

STATE FEEDING OF SCHOOL CHILDREN IN LONDON. By Sir Charles A. Elliott, K.C.S.I.

POOR RELIEF IN THE DAYS TO COME. By Edith Sellers.

WHAT EVERY GERMAN KNOWS. By Austin Harrison.

THE "UNIFICATION" OF SOUTH AFRICA. By Sir Walter Peace, K.C.M.G. I.S.O., late Agent-General for Natal.

London: SPOTTISWOODE & CO., Ltd., 5, New Street Square.

THE CORNHILL MAGAZINE

For MAY. Price One Shilling.

Contents.

THE PALADIN. Chaps. 10-12. By Horace Annesley Vachell.

JARJAILLE OF ARLES. By Millicent Wedmore.

HISTORY AND CITIZENSHIP—A FORECAST. By A. L. Smith.

BETWEEN THE LIGHTS. By Perceval Gibbon.

TEN DAYS OF A FRONTIER SHOW.

PEOPLE WHO GO TO PLAYS. By Horace G. Hutchinson.

THE CHOICE. By Margaret Sherwood.

'THAT DAY AT NAVARINO.' By John Barnett.

JANE AUSTEN AT LYME REGIS. By Arthur C. Benson.

PRISCILLA OF THE GOOD INTENT. Chaps. 22-23. By Halliwell Sutcliffe.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO.
15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine Street, London, W.C., MAY 1, contains:—

ARCHITECTURE AT THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

PARIS IN THE HANDS OF THE SPOILER.

PLEBISCITE ON THE REGISTRATION OF ARCHITECTS

TOWN PLANNING ABROAD.

BUILDING TRADES EXHIBITION: NOTES AND

ILLUSTRATIONS.

DANGERS OF BREEZE CONCRETE (Society of Architects).

WARMING AND VENTILATION (Surveyors' Institution).

SOCIETY OF PAINTERS IN WATER-COLOURS.

ILLUSTRATIONS:

"WHITTINGTON"

LONDON AND COUNTY BANK, CHELSEA;

TRURO CATHEDRAL SCHOOL, CLOISTERS, AND

LIBRARY;

HOUSE, WEEK ST. MARY'S, CORNWALL.

JESUS HOSPITAL, BRAY.

From Offices as above (4d. by post 4½d.), at

Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all News-

agents.

[Magazines, &c., continued on p. 542.]

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS

THE LARGER CAMBRIDGE SEPTUAGINT being The Old Testament in Greek according to the text of Codex Vaticanus, supplemented from other Uncial Manuscripts; with a critical apparatus containing the variants of the chief ancient authorities for the text of the Septuagint. Edited by A. E. Brooke, B.D. and N. McLean, M.A.

Editions of the Septuagint

The smaller:
Crown 8vo, cloth
3 vols, 7s 6d each

The larger:
Demy 4to, paper covers
Vol I Part I, 7s 6d net
Part II, 12s 6d net

For many years past the Cambridge Press has had in preparation an edition of the Septuagint which endeavours to exhibit the text of one of the great uncial codices with a precision corresponding to present knowledge, together with a full apparatus of the variants of the other MSS.

The plan adopted has included the preparation of two editions, a smaller and a larger, with a common text, that of the Vatican MS. These editions differ in the extent of their critical apparatus. The smaller or manual edition—Dr. Swete's Old Testament in Greek (3 vols, cloth, 7s. 6d. each)—confines itself to the variations of a few of the most important uncial codices already edited in letterpress, facsimile, or photograph. The larger edition, necessarily the labour of many years, gives the variations of all the Greek uncial MSS., of select Greek cursive MSS., of the more important versions, and of the quotations made by Philo and the earlier ecclesiastical writers. Its object is to present clearly the evidence available for the reconstruction of the text or texts of the Septuagint.

Publication of the smaller edition began in 1887; the work has reached its third edition, and is recognised as the standard edition of the Septuagint in all countries. Publication of the larger edition has now commenced. Vol. I., to contain the Octateuch, will be published in four parts, of which Part I., containing Genesis, and Part II., containing Exodus and Leviticus, are now ready, price 7s. 6d. net and 12s. 6d. net respectively.

Subscriptions are received for Vol. I., the Octateuch, and subscribers will obtain each of the four parts at a reduction of one-fifth of the published price. A prospectus, with specimen page and order-form, will be sent post free on application.

MENDEL'S PRINCIPLES OF HEREDITY. By W. Bateson, M.A., F.R.S., V.M.H., Professor of Biology in the University of Cambridge.

Royal 8vo
With 3 Portraits
6 Coloured Plates
and 33 Figures
12s net

The object of this book is to give a succinct account of discoveries in regard to Heredity made by the application of Mendel's method of research. Chapters are given describing the indications of a Mendelian system of inheritance discovered in mankind, and the more obvious applications of Mendelism to practical breeding. Translations of Mendel's two papers, together with a biographical note, are appended. It is hoped that the coloured plates may enable those who have not seen Mendelian families of plants and animals to understand their principal features.

DARWIN AND MODERN SCIENCE. Essays in commemoration of the Centenary of the birth of Charles Darwin and of the fiftieth anniversary of the publication of 'The Origin of Species.' Edited by A. C. Seward, Professor of Botany in the University of Cambridge.

Royal 8vo
With 2 Portraits and 3 Plates
18s net

In the contributions to this memorial volume, some of the authors have more especially concerned themselves with the results achieved by Darwin's own work, while others pass in review the progress of research on lines which, though unknown or but little followed in his day, are the direct outcome of his work. Authors were asked to address themselves primarily to the educated layman rather than to the expert. It is hoped that the publication of these essays will serve the double purpose of illustrating the far-reaching influence of Darwin's work on the progress of knowledge and the present attitude of original investigators and thinkers towards the views embodied in Darwin's works.

TREES: A handbook of Forest-Botany for the Woodlands and the Laboratory. By the late H. Marshall Ward, Sc.D., F.R.S. Volume V. Form and Habit, with an appendix on seedlings.

Crown 8vo
With Illustrations
4s 6d net
Complete work
5 vols, 20s net

The four volumes previously published deal with Buds and Twigs, Leaves, Flowers and Inflorescences, and Fruits.

"A work that cannot fail to appeal to all who are interested in the trees and shrubs of our woodlands, and it ought to be no less useful to the professional forester."—Times.

"A work to be included in every country house library, or wherever trees and shrubs are admired."—Field.

GILES AND PHINEAS FLETCHER POETICAL WORKS. Edited by Frederick S. Boas, M.A. Volume II.

Crown 8vo
4s 6d net

The present volume includes the poems, original or translated, of Phineas Fletcher, which appeared in or after 1633. The minor poems, especially the poetical extracts from A Father's Testament, are reprinted for the first time in a thoroughly accurate form. In the preface and notes is given a full account of the manner in which Phineas Fletcher reproduced passages of his own in other works. In an appendix is printed Brittain's Ida, published in 1628, and ascribed on the title-page to Spenser. Prof. Boas has re-examined the question of the authorship of this poem in the light of the additional knowledge he has gained of Phineas Fletcher's methods of workmanship, and affirms that Grosart was right in assigning the work to him.

NOVATIANI ROMANAE URBIS PRESBYTERI DE TRINITATE LIBER. Novatian's Treatise on the Trinity. Edited by W. Yorke Fausset, M.A.

Crown 8vo
6s net

The interest of the treatise and its importance at the present day will hardly be questioned. It is at once the earliest systematic treatise on its subject, and the earliest monument of Roman theology, and it transports us to a critical period in the history of Christian thought. The editor's aim has been to provide an intelligible text, and in the commentary to make the treatise speak for itself, criticism and theological dissertation being reserved, in the main, for the introduction.

THE DIGEST OF JUSTINIAN translated by C. H. Monro, M.A.

Vols I and II
Royal 8vo
12s net each

The second volume of this work, containing Books VII. to XV., is now ready. The text followed is that of Mommson. The first volume, published some time since, gave Books I. to VI., with the matter that may perhaps be called Justinian's three prefaces, describing the scheme and occasion of the Digest as well as the Emperor's plan of education for legal students.

London, Fetter Lane: CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS: C. F. Clay, Manager.

PITMAN'S NEW BOOKS.

READY ON THURSDAY.

The First Volume in Pitman's
"ALL RED"
 Series.

THE
COMMONWEALTH OF AUSTRALIA.

BY

The Hon. B. R. WISE
 (formerly Attorney-General for New South Wales).

The new Series claims to give a full and accurate description of the British Empire as it is to-day. Each of the volumes will be plentifully illustrated, and contain good up-to-date maps.

In demy 8vo, cloth gilt, red edges, end papers,
 7s. 6d. net.

To be followed shortly by

THE DOMINION OF
 NEW ZEALAND.

BY

Sir ARTHUR P. DOUGLAS, Bart.

THE ENGLISH IN CHINA.

Being an Account of the Intercourse and Relations between England and China from the year 1600 to the year 1843, and a Summary of later Developments.

By J. BROMLEY EAMES, M.A. B.C.L.

Of the Middle Temple, Barrister-at-Law, Professor of Law in the Imperial Tientsin University 1898 to 1900, Legal Adviser to the Tientsin Provisional Government, 1901.

In demy 8vo, cloth gilt, with Maps and Illustrations, gilt top, 20s. net.

NATIVE LIFE IN EAST AFRICA.

The Results of an Ethnological Research Expedition.

By Dr. KARL WEULE.

Translated, with an Introduction, by ALICE WERNER, Author of 'The Native Races of British Africa.' In royal 8vo, cloth gilt, with 196 Illustrations, Map, 12s. 6d. net.

"Readers will see for themselves some of the entertaining and instructive qualities of this book full of the fascinating results of a keen observation; and is, in addition, beautifully and, at times, humorously illustrated."—Daily News.

AROUND AFGHANISTAN.

By Major DE BOUILLANE DE LACOSTE

With a Preface by M. GEORGES LEYGUES. Translated from the French by J. G. ANDERSON. With 113 Illustrations and 5 Maps.

In super-royal 8vo, cloth gilt, 10s. 6d. net.

"A simple and animated diary by an experienced Asiatic traveller, with a copious, varied, and interesting series of photographs."—Times.

PITMAN'S NEW BOOKS.

SIR CHARLES SANTLEY'S
 REMINISCENCES OF MY LIFE.

In demy 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, with 16
 Illustrations, 16s. net.

"The happy and humorous note largely predominates in a book which will delight the countless admirers of our first vocalist-knight."—World.

MUSICAL MONSTROSITIES.

BY

C. L. GRAVES.

With over 90 Illustrations by GEORGE MORROW.

In crown 8vo, 230 pp. 1s. net.

The most amusing skit since 'If.'

THE INNER LIFE OF THE NAVY.

BY

LIONEL YEXLEY

(Editor of 'The Fleet').

In demy 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, with 18 Illustrations, 10s. 6d. net.

Mr. Yexley deals in his book with some matters of great importance at the present time, viz:—

ADMIRALTY NEGLECT.

METHODS OF SHIP'S POLICE.

THE NAVAL UNIFORM, AND HOW TAXPAYERS' MONEY IS WASTED.

NAVAL GRIEVANCES.

THROWING AMMUNITION OVER-BOARD.

HOW CANTEENS ARE RUN.

&c. &c. &c. &c.

NONCONFORMITY AND POLITICS.

BY

A NONCONFORMIST MINISTER.

In crown 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 3s. 6d. net.

"One of the best and most impressive volumes of controversy that has been issued for some years. The spirit of the book is admirable, and the candour is equal to the spirit."—Methodist Recorder.

THE PRACTICAL WISDOM OF THE BIBLE.

Edited, with an Introduction,

By J. ST. LOE STRACHEY,
 Editor of the Spectator.

In demy 16mo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 2s. 6d. net;
 leather, 3s. 6d. net.

"If Mr. Strachey's work does nothing more than draw attention to the incomparably rich vein of wisdom which runs through the various books of which the Bible is made up, not only the Church, but all whose faith is founded on the Scriptures, will owe him a debt of gratitude. ... No one, after reading the elegant and carefully produced volume, can doubt that Mr. Strachey has done a good work in a thoroughly good manner."—Standard.

PITMAN'S NEW BOOKS.

ANNE OF GREEN GABLES.

By L. M. MONTGOMERY.
 5th IMPRESSION. 6s.

"Destined to live as long as 'Alice in Wonderland.'"—World.

A

FRIAR OBSERVANT.

By FRANCES M. BROOKFIELD,
 Author of 'My Lord of Essex.' 6s.

"It is wonderfully vivid—an admirable piece of observant particulars.....this exceedingly clever narrative,.....full of stirring and dramatic episodes,well written, and in many respects a novel and remarkable achievement."—Globe.

FRANCE OF THE FRENCH.

By EDWARD HARRISON BARKER.

In imperial 16mo, cloth gilt, with 32 Full-Page Plate Illustrations, gilt top, 6s. net.

"This is a volume which really deserves its title. From family life to science and invention, and from statesmen and politicians to musicians and singers, it deals with pretty well everything that should be known before an estimate of any country can fairly be formed."—Glasgow Herald.

Uniform with

ITALY OF THE ITALIANS.

By HELEN ZIMMERN.

L O N D O N.

PASSED AND PASSING.

With 70 Illustrations.

By HANSLIP FLETCHER.

With Notes by various Authors.

In demy 4to, cloth gilt, gilt top, 21s. net.

"Within the covers of this handsome and most happily conceived volume the artist has furnished forth a wholly delightful panorama of metropolitan buildings of historic or architectural interest which have either disappeared within recent years or at the present moment are marked for demolition. In the great library of literature which our capital has inspired one might search in vain for a more charming book."—World.

READY ON MAY 20th.

BODY AND SOUL.

By PERCY DEARMER, M.A.

A Treatise on the Christian Practice and Doctrine of Faith Healing.

In crown 8vo, cloth gilt, gilt top, 6s. net.

MAKERS OF NATIONAL HISTORY

Edited by W. H. HUTTON, B.D.

Each volume is in crown 8vo, cloth gilt, with Frontispiece, 3s. 6d. net

CARDINAL BEAUFORT. By L. B. RADFORD, D.D.

VISCOUNT CASTLEREAGH. By ARTHUR HASSALL, M.A.

ARCHBISHOP PARKER. By W. M. KENNEDY, M.A.

Ready Shortly.

FRANCIS ATTERBURY. By CANON BEECHING.

Other volumes in preparation.

SIR ISAAC PITMAN & SONS, LTD., 1, Amen Corner, London, E.C., will be pleased to send on application a copy of their complete Illustrated Spring List.

HARPER'S LIBRARY OF LIVING THOUGHT

Fcap. 8vo, gilt tops, &c., per vol. cloth, 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. 6d. net.

"Short studies on great subjects by distinguished living men." — Standard.

"Not reprints of the classics, but the work of living writers." — Evening Standard.

IMPORTANT NEW VOLUMES

SIR OLIVER LODGE THE ETHER OF SPACE

Illustrated.

[Now ready.]

Sir Oliver Lodge here advocates the view which makes the ether the substratum of all matter; not only all-pervading, but massive and substantial beyond conception—the most substantial thing, perhaps the only substantial thing, in the material universe.

THE ORIGIN OF THE NEW TESTAMENT

By Prof. WM. WREDE.

[Now ready.]

The result of latest research into the origin of the twenty-seven writings which constitute the New Testament, and into the circumstances in which they were formed into one whole.

CHRISTIANITY AND ISLAM

By Prof. C. H. BECKER.

[Now ready.]

A study of the similarities, differences, and the interaction of ideas between the two religions; it discusses also the possibility of a Moslem expansion.

PROF. S. ARRHENIUS

THE LIFE OF THE UNIVERSE

2 vols. Illustrated.

[Ready immediately.]

A critical account of the various conceptions of the evolution of the universe from the earliest times to the present day.

A. C. SWINBURNE

THREE PLAYS OF SHAKESPEARE

"Splendid incidental finds of poetic gold." — Manchester Guardian.

"Contains criticisms of the deepest significance." — Glasgow Herald.

LEO TOLSTOY

THE TEACHING OF JESUS

"Applies spiritual principles to daily life." — Globe.

W. M. FLINDERS PETRIE

PERSONAL RELIGION IN EGYPT BEFORE CHRISTIANITY

"Suggestive and thought-provoking, a real contribution to the study of comparative religion." — Methodist Recorder.

Please write for Descriptive Leaflet of this Series, announcing forthcoming Works by Sir William Crookes, Prof. R. Seeberg, Theodore Watts-Dunton, &c.

NEW 6/- NOVELS KATRINE

BY

ELINOR MACARTNEY LANE,

Author of 'Nancy Stair,' 'The Mills of the Gods,' &c.

A fine thoughtful story, showing love as the moving force in the career of a great musician.

THE PLANTER

BY

HERMAN WHITAKER.

A thrilling story of the Indian Slavery in Mexico of to-day. It recalls 'Uncle Tom's Cabin,' with its high purpose and vivid presentation.

WALLACE RHODES

BY

NORAH DAVIS.

Though unconventional and startling in plot, the story is clean and straightforward throughout, while its development is dramatic and exciting.

READY IMMEDIATELY.

HARPER'S MACHINERY BOOK FOR BOYS

BY

J. H. ADAMS. 6s.

Large crown 8vo, Profusely Illustrated, uniform with 'Electricity Book for Boys,' 'Outdoor Book for Boys,' &c.

HARPER'S MAGAZINE

MAY, 1909

EDWIN A. ABBEY, R.A.

Illustrations to Shakespeare's 'Henry V.'

With Comments on the Play by F. WARRE CORNISH.

MARK TWAIN.

By A. HENDERSON and A. B. PAINE.

THE CHEMICAL INTERPRE-TATION OF LIFE.

By Prof. R. K. DUNCAN.

ENGLISH CAPITALS OF INDUSTRY.

By WM. DEAN HOWELLS.

TWO NATURALISTS IN VENEZUELA:

By C. W. and M. B. BEEBE.

7 Complete Stories

By JUSTUS MILES FORMAN,
ALICE BROWN, &c.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED THROUGHOUT.

HARPER & BROTHERS, 45, Albemarle Street, London, W.

MR. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

With an Introductory Chapter by
KING PETER OF SERBIA.

SERBIA BY THE SERBIANS.

Compiled and Edited by ALFRED STEAD,
Author of 'Japan by the Japanese.'
Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

* * This work, written by the leading Servian authorities on the plan of Mr. Stead's previous volume, 'Japan by the Japanese,' by giving an authoritative record of the various branches of Servian national life, will be of exceptional value to readers who follow closely the trend of events in Central Europe.

WE TWO IN WEST AFRICA.

By DECIMA MOORE and Major F. GORDON
GUGGISBERG, C.M.G. R.E.

With Map and many Illustrations from Photographs and Drawings. 1 vol. demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

"The book is extremely well written; it is full of light and shade, of humour and bright word pictures, and at the same time of valuable information."—Standard.

DAYS IN HELLAS.

By MABEL MOORE,
Author of 'Carthage of the Phœnicians.'
Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

"Observant, sympathetic, and humorous, she gives a most readable account of the modern Greeks, their life and habits, and of her own travel adventures."—Times.

RECOLLECTIONS OF BARON DE FRÉNILLY, PEER OF FRANCE (1768-1828).

With a Portrait. Demy 8vo, 10s. net.

"It is the testimony of an eye-witness to great happenings—full of vivacity, brilliant characterization, extraordinarily alive."—Nation.

A NEW VOLUME OF "LITERATURES OF THE WORLD." GERMAN LITERATURE.

By CALVIN THOMAS, LL.D.
Large crown 8vo, 6s.

FOR NATURE LOVERS.

WILD FLOWERS OF THE BRITISH ISLES.

Illustrated and Written by H. ISABEL ADAMS, F.L.S.
With 75 Coloured Plates. 1 vol. 30s. net.

"She has pictured her examples with delicacy and grace, also with due regard to detail. The plates show not only the flower but also the leaf and stem, and often the root."—Athenæum.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

AN INCOMPLEAT ETONIAN.

By FRANK DANBY,
Author of 'Pigs in Clover' and 'The Heart of a Child.'

"A brilliant picture of certain kinds of society, a clever analysis of certain kinds of men and women, a graphic and picturesque style, a story which engrosses us—these are the points which make it a remarkable piece of work."—Daily Telegraph.

FRATERNITY.

By JOHN GALSWORTHY, [2nd Imp.
Author of 'The Man of Property' and 'The Country House.'

"There are many things in this book that are unforgettable; there are whole chapters that are masterpieces of delicate and restrained workmanship."—Standard.

TREASURE TROVE.

By Mrs. DAWSON SCOTT,
Author of 'The Story of Anna Beames.'

PETER HOMUNCULUS.

By GILBERT CANNAN. [Next week.

UNCLE GREGORY.

By GEORGE SANDEMAN.

"Wholly delicious. The characters stand out in clear-cut individuality and most convincing vitality."—Outlook.

WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford Street, W.C.

Vol. II. No. II.

Monthly 2/6

ENGLISH REVIEW.

CONTENTS FOR MAY.

1. Modern Poetry
"ALGERNON CHAS. SWINBURNE"
STURGE MOORE
DOLLIE RADFORD
OSMAN EDWARDES
2. Norman Douglas
The Isle of the Sirens
3. Dostoévsky
An Honest Thief
4. Joseph Conrad
Some Reminiscences
5. W. H. Hudson
Goldfinches at Ryeme Intrinsica
6. Wyndham Lewis
The Pole
7. Perceval Gibbon
Afrikander Memories
8. Baron I. von Aschendorf
The Nature of a Crime
9. Gertrude Bone
An Experience
10. Stephen Reynolds
The Holy Mountain

THE EDITORIAL WILL DEAL WITH CURRENT EVENTS

AND THERE WILL BE

A SPECIAL ARTICLE

BY THE

President of the United States

ON THE

PANAMA CANAL AND ITS CRITICS

AND ONE ON

THE YOUNG TURKS.

By H. M. W. Brailsford.

DUCKWORTH & CO. Henrietta Street, W.C.

MR. JOHN LONG'S NEW BOOKS

THE ONLY ENGLISH LIFE OF CHARLES THE SECOND'S FAVOURITE MISTRESS

BRITTANY TO WHITEHALL

Life of Louise Renée de Kéroualle,
Duchess of Portsmouth

By Mrs. COLQUHOUN GRANT

With Photogravure Portrait and other Rare
Portraits and Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

The Bookman says:—"From Brittany to Whitehall came the lovely maid-of-honour who was to serve France's interests while delighting an English king; and as interesting and full of incident as a novel is this life-story of the celebrated Louise Renée de Kéroualle. The beautiful Breton girl, mistress of King Charles II., and afterwards Duchess of Portsmouth, was unlike many of the Sovereign's favourites, for she was of ancient and noble birth. Mrs. Grant has presented a moving and vivid picture of the Breton girl's loveliness and dignity, loveliness, and power."

THE LIFE OF THE 'PRINCE OF SPORTING WRITERS'

THE MAGIC OF SPORT:

Mainly Autobiographical

By NAT GOULD

With Photogravure Portrait and over 50 Illustrations of Notable Sportsmen, Horses, and Places.

Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

The Field says:—"There is no better-known novelist at the present day than Nat Gould. 'The Magic of Sport' is full of interest from start to finish, and at times one follows the course of the history almost greedily. The book should appeal not only to those who follow racing, but to the community at large."

The World says:—" 'The Magic of Sport' is an indispensable addition to every sportsman's bookshelves."

JOHN LONG'S POPULAR NOVELS

Mr. John Long is now publishing the following New Novels, and large supplies are with the Libraries and Booksellers throughout the United Kingdom

SIX SHILLINGS EACH

THE GIRL IN THE BLUE DRESS

RICHARD MARSH

SATAN, K.C.

MARIE HARVEY

STEPHEN THE MAN

HENRIETTA HEILGERS

THE VEILED LADY

FLORENCE WARDEN

THE FOUNTAIN OF BEAUTY

L. T. MEADE

BIDDY THE SPITFIRE

JOHN LANGFIELD

POMP AND CIRCUMSTANCE

DOROTHEA GERARD

NOBLESSE OBLIGE

M. E. FRANCIS

THE GREATER POWER

HAROLD BINDLOSS

THE MEMBER FOR EASTERBY

JAMES BLYTH

HILARY THORNTON

HUBERT WALES

A FORSAKEN GARDEN

JESSIE AINSWORTH DAVIS

THE THRESHOLD

WINEFRIDE

TRAFFORD-TAUNTON

WHO SHALL HAVE HER?

JOHN CAVE

GOD'S GOOD WOMAN

ELEANORE S. TERRY

JOHN LONG,

12, 13, 14, Norris Street, Haymarket, London.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S NEW BOOKS

Messrs. METHUEN have just published, or will publish immediately, the following books:—

- ENCHANTERS OF MEN, by ETHEL COLBURN MAYNE, contains vivid studies of twenty-three beautiful, witty, and fascinating women. The book is finely illustrated, and is 10s. 6d. net.
- THE BRETONS AT HOME, by FRANCES M. GOSTLING, is a charming book, descriptive of Breton peasant life, with its rich harvest of legend and history. It is profusely illustrated in colour and from photographs, and is 10s. 6d. net.
- A SUMMER IN TOURAINE. By FREDERIC LEES. With 12 Illustrations in Colour by MAXWELL ARMFIELD and 87 from Photographs. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. This magnificently illustrated book is a complete and absorbing description of France's most delightful province.
- The Sixth and last volume of MY MEMOIRS, by ALEXANDRE DUMAS. Crown 8vo, 6s.
- IN A GERMAN COLONY, by B. PULLEN-BURRY, with 8 Illustrations, crown 8vo, 5s. net, is now ready, and gives a full account of life and manners in New Britain, recently colonized by Germans.
- WALKS IN PARIS, by GEORGES CAIN, translated by A. R. ALLINSON and abundantly illustrated, demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net, is a book indispensable to all visitors to Paris. It is a delightful medley of description, gossip, and antiquarian lore.
- DANTE IN ENGLISH LITERATURE is Dr. PAGET TOYNBEE'S new book. It is a most elaborate account of the connexion of Dante with English literature, quoting all the references to the great poet from Chaucer to the death of Cary in 1844. It is a novel and most interesting chapter in literary history. Demy 8vo, 2 vols., 21s. net.
- CRIMINAL TYPES IN SHAKESPEARE, by AUGUST GOLL, and translated by Mrs. CHARLES WEEKES, crown 8vo, 5s. net, is one aspect of Shakespeare's psychology. The book reviews the great criminals of the plays, and shows how Shakespeare, by his genius, was fully up to the modern standard of criminal psychology.

GENERAL LITERATURE

- NAPOLÉON'S MARSHALS. By R. P. DUNN-PATTISON. With 20 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.
"Written with the most admirable balance of narrative and appreciation. The whole band stand clearly and dramatically defined—a marvellous galaxy of military talent."
Pall Mall Gazette.
"This well-illustrated book has been sympathetically, yet judiciously, compiled."
Daily Chronicle.
"Mr. Dunn-Pattison writes with wonderful moderation and fairness, and always comes out right in his judgment."
Scotsman.
- THE BLUE BIRD: a Fairy Play in Five Acts. By MAURICE MAETERLINCK. Translated by ALEXANDER TEIXEIRA DE MATTOS. Fcap. 8vo, deckle edges, 3s. 6d. net.
"We remain spellbound by the charm of the play. It will haunt its readers for many a day."
Times.
"This play will be read with the keenest delight."
Bystander.
"Beautiful fancies, charming imagery, the touch of the poet and the painter's brush are all revealed in this most fragile and delightful piece of imaginative work."
Globe.
"We congratulate Mr. de Mattos on his admirable translation of this remarkable play."
Liverpool Post.
- GALICIA: the Switzerland of Spain. By ANNETTE M. B. MEAKIN. With 105 Illustrations and a Map. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.
A complete description of a little-known but lovely province, full of historical, artistic, and antiquarian interest.
"Wonderfully comprehensive and valuable."
Glasgow Herald.
"It is a fascinating country, and Miss Meakin's is a fascinating and extremely well-written book."
Observer.
- A HOLIDAY IN CONNEMARA. By STEPHEN GWYNN, M.P. With 16 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.
"The book gives a vivid impression alike of scenery and society in Connemara."
Standard.
"A sunny human book, full of pretty word pictures, and studded with natural stories. Everywhere the book is touched with sympathy and insight."
Daily Telegraph.
- THE COMPLETE HOCKEY PLAYER. By EUSTACE E. WHITE. With many Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 5s. net.
"As an up-to-date and readable work upon the game this book has no equal at the present time."
Scotsman.
- THE TRIALS OF FIVE QUEENS. By R. STORRY DEANS. With 12 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.
A book dealing with the trials of Mary, Queen of Scots, Anne Boleyn, Katherine of Aragon, Marie Antoinette, and Queen Caroline.
"A book of marked biographical and historical value."
Daily Graphic.
"The author has put forward a plain story, and has told it remarkably well."
Morning Leader.
"The author, by his sympathy and his careful collation of all the facts bearing upon his subject, has fashioned a volume of absorbing interest."
Globe.
- TRAGEDY QUEENS OF THE GEORGIAN ERA. By JOHN FYVIE. With 16 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.
Biographical sketches of all the most prominent English tragedy actresses, from Madame Barry down to the majestic Siddons.
"Mr. Fyvie's work is sound throughout, and is not marred by the vulgarity of extravagant enthusiasm."
Morning Post.
"This is thoroughly interesting, and will have many charms for all who are interested in the stage."
World.
- A HISTORY OF ENGLISH LAW. By W. S. HOLDSWORTH, D.C.L. With a Plan. Vols. II. and III. In 4 vols. demy 8vo, each 10s. 6d. net.
The first volume of this History dealt with the beginnings of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, and Ecclesiastical Law—which make up the Common Law of the present day. In these volumes the detailed history of these branches of law is traced.
"Mr. Holdsworth covers an extent of ground that no preceding writer has covered. It is a valuable history of English law, and is bound to receive a place among the authoritative works on legal history."
Scotsman.
"The volumes are a worthy testimonial to the author's learning, industry, and research. A scholarly and exhaustive treatise."
Glasgow Herald.
- GEORGE SELWYN AND THE WITS. By S. PARNELL KERR. With 16 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.
"Mr. Kerr's book is written with quite unusual style, comprehension, and vivacity."
Observer.
"The author revives for us, in a particularly vivid manner, that narrow circle in which Selwyn lived."
Scotsman.
"This excellent study of the life and times of Selwyn throws a fuller light on a most interesting and humorous personality."
Glasgow News.

FICTION

TO BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY.

- SET IN SILVER. By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON, Authors of 'The Lightning Conductor.' With a Frontispiece in Colour by ARTHUR H. BUCKLAND, and other Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.
In this new novel, which describes a motor tour through England, Mr. and Mrs. Williamson again are faithful to the motor-car, into which they pack their characters, and from which are caught those glimpses of England which they give so alluringly.
- BARBARY SHEEP. By ROBERT HICHENS, Author of 'The Garden of Allah.' Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.
- DEEP SEA WARRIORS. By BASIL LUBBOCK. With 4 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.
- THE SQUIRE'S DAUGHTER. By ARCHIBALD MARSHALL, Author of 'Many Junes.' Crown 8vo, 6s.
- GALATEA OF THE WHEATFIELD. By M. E. FRANCIS (Mrs. Blundell), Author of 'Hardy-on-the-Hill.' Crown 8vo, 6s.
- AN HONEST MAN. By R. H. BRETHERTON, Author of 'The Mill.' Crown 8vo, 6s.
- THE BISHOP AND THE LADY. By MARTIN LUTRELL SWAYNE. Crown 8vo, 6s.
- WATCHERS BY THE SHORE. By J. E. PATTERSON. Crown 8vo, 6s.
- THE LIGHTNING CONDUCTOR. By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON. Crown 8vo, 1s. net.

RECENTLY PUBLISHED

- THEIR OXFORD YEAR. By OONA H. BALL, Author of 'Barbara Goes to Oxford.' With 16 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.
- THE LOVE-STORY OF ST. BEL. By BERNARD CAPES. Crown 8vo, 6s. [Second Edition.
"A fine piece of craftsmanship, full of colour and thrilling."
Sketch.
"A romance of romances. Not for one moment does the interest flag; the story is told with the most fascinating skill."
Bystander.
"An original work, romantic and loving. Mystery, passion, romance, the book is full of them all."
Times.
"Mr. Capes is at his best in this rich and powerful book."
Morning Leader.
- KATHERINE THE ARROGANT. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Peggy of the Bartons.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Fourth Edition.
"Bright, and smart, and witty, and full of amusing situations."
Morning Post.
"Mrs. Croker is always amusing; her theme is made fresh and vivid, and Katherine herself is delightful."
Standard.
"The charm is the tenderness of the human touch."
Liverpool Post.
- MY LADY OF SHADOWS. By JOHN OXENHAM, Author of 'The Gate of the Desert.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Third Edition.
"Wholesome and invigorating from first to last."
Scotsman.
"An intensely interesting story, whose characters are charmingly drawn."
Liverpool Post.
"Just a simple story, the work of a master story-teller, and full of charm."
Sheffield Independent.
- THE STORY OF VIRGINIA PERFECT. By PEGGY WEBLING, Author of 'Blue Jay.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Third Edition.
"Here is a book that the New Year will find hard to beat, welcome as the aconite and snowdrop, full of tears and laughter and true human things."
Morning Post.
"The book is gracefully written and is full of humour."
Daily Mail.
"There is a charm and a freshness about Miss Webling's style that is infinitely refreshing after a course of machine-turned fiction."
Onlooker.
"Miss Webling is a writer of whom we have heard before, and of whom we shall hear again. She tells her story charmingly, and it is very nearly perfect. Miss Webling—please go on."
Daily Graphic.
- THE GIFTED FAMILY. By BARRY PAIN, Author of 'Lindley Kays.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Fourth Edition.
"A delightful novel, interesting from the first page to the last.....Kindly and humorous. I repeat that this is a delightful book."
Punch.
"A delightful mixture of laughter and tears."
Onlooker.
"Mr. Barry Pain has a remarkable command of all the leading motives of fiction, and his book is full of good things."
Pall Mall Gazette.

MACMILLAN'S NEW BOOKS.

VOL. II. JUST PUBLISHED.

A Catalogue Raisonné of the Works of the Most Eminent Dutch Painters of the Seven- teenth Century.

Based on the Work of John Smith, by C. HOFSTEDE DE GROOT. Translated and Edited by EDWARD G. HAWKE. In 10 vols. 8vo, 25s. net each.

Vol. II. THE WORKS OF AELBERT CUYP and PHILIPS WOUWERMAN.

SECOND AND CHEAPER IMPRESSION.

The Provinces of the Roman Empire from Cæsar to Diocletian.

By THEODOR MOMMSEN. Translated with the Author's Sanction and Additions by Prof. WILLIAM P. DICKSON, D.D., LL.D. With 10 Maps. In 2 vols, 8vo, 21s. net. [Tuesday.]

The text of this second impression has been revised throughout by Prof. Haverfield, who has added a new appendix on Roman Britain.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

THE WHITE SISTER

A Story of Rome.

By the late F. MARION CRAWFORD. [Tuesday.]

GERVASE.

By MABEL DEARMER.

Author of 'The Alien Sisters,' &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

NEW BOOK BY THE WRITER OF 'CONFESSIO MEDICI.'

Faith and Works of Christian Science.

Extra crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

Dante's Inferno, Purgatorio, and Paradiso.

Translated by EDWARD WILBERFORCE. 3 vols. Globe 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

Studies in Mystical Religion.

By RUFUS M. JONES, M.A. D.Litt., Haverford College, U.S.A. 8vo, 12s. net.

The Story of the Great Lakes.

By Prof. EDWARD CHANNING and MARION F. LANSING. With Maps and Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s. 6d. net.

The Earth's Bounty.

By KATE V. SAINT MAUR. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

The Laws of Friendship, Human and Divine.

By HENRY C. KING. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.
[Haverford Library Lectures.]

Modern Thought and the Crisis in Belief.

By R. M. WENLEY, D.Phil. LL.D., &c. Crown 8vo, 6s. 6d. net.

NEW VOLUME COMMENCES WITH THE MAY NUMBER.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

Illustrated. Price 1s. 4d. Annual Subscription, 16s.

BEAUVAIS: the Magnificent Fragment. By ELIZABETH ROBINS PENNELL. Pictures by JOSEPH PENNELL.

TWO GREAT SPANISH PAINTERS: Sorolla and Zuloaga. By CHRISTIAN BRINTON.

BIG GAME IN EAST AFRICA. By EDGAR BEECHER BRONSON.

And numerous other Stories and Articles of General Interest.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

Swan Sonnenschein & Co., LTD.

SOME EDUCATIONAL WORKS.

LATIN.

FIRST LATIN READER. By DIX. 2s.

SECOND LATIN READER. By DIX. 1s. 6d.

THIRD LATIN READER. By DIX and HUNTER SMITH. 2s.

KEYS TO ABOVE, 4s. net, 5s. net, and 6s. net.

FOURTH LATIN READER (LIVY). By NICOL. 2s.

ORA MARITIMA. By Prof. E. A. SONNENSCHN. 2s.

PRO PATRIA. By Prof. E. A. SONNENSCHN. 2s. 6d.

CICERO—PRO MILONE. By FAUSSET. 1s. 6d.

—AD ATTICUM. By BROWN. 1s. 6d.

—PRO LEGE MANILIA. By HUNTER SMITH. 1s. 6d.

ENGLISH-LATIN GRADUS. By WOODHOUSE. 3s.

SEYFFERT'S DICTIONARY OF CLASSICAL ANTIQUITIES. Edited by SANDYS and NETTLESHIP. 21s.

GREEK.

FIRST GREEK READER. By SANDYS. 2s. 6d.

THE GREEK WAR OF INDEPENDENCE. By CHAMBERS. 3s.

ÆSCHYLUS.—PROMETHEUS BOUND. By HAINES. Illustrated. 2s. 6d.

FRENCH.

FIRST FRENCH READER. By MORICH. 2s.

SECOND FRENCH READER. By BARBIER. 2s.

THIRD FRENCH READER. By BARBE. 2s.

PREPARATORY FRENCH COURSE. By ZWEIFEL. 1s. 6d.

BEGINNER'S BOOK IN FRENCH. By DORIOT. 1s.

ADVANCED FRENCH COMPOSITION. By BERTHON and ONIONS. 2s. 6d.

IDIOMATIC PHRASES. By LATHAM. 1s.

FRENCH SONGS AND VERSES. By MIDDLETON. 1s.

COMMON-SENSE METHOD OF TEACHING FRENCH. By CARNIE and POOLEY. Part I. 1s.; Part II. 2s.; Memory Exercises, 1s.

GERMAN.

FIRST GERMAN READER. By E. A. SONNENSCHN. 1s. 6d.

SECOND GERMAN READER. By MACGOWAN. 2s.

THIRD GERMAN READER. By FIEDLER. 2s.

FOURTH GERMAN READER. By ROUTH. 2s.

KEYS TO ABOVE, 4s. net, 6s. net, and 6s. net.

GERMAN CHRONICLES OF WAR. By ARCHENHOLTZ. 2s. 6d.

DER ARME HEINRICH. 2s. 6d.

GERMAN HISTORICAL READER. LANGHANS. 2s. 6d.

SHORT STORIES. By REINICH. 2s.

DIE VIERZEHN NOTHELFER. 1s. 6d.

GERMAN FOR THE ENGLISH. By A. SONNENSCHN. 2s. 6d. net.

GERMAN THROUGH ENGLISH. By A. SONNENSCHN. 2s. 6d. net.

STORM'S IMMENSEE. 1s. 6d.

ENGLISH.

ENGLISH EXAMPLES AND EXERCISES. Part I. (Accidence), 1s.; Part II. (Analysis and Syntax), 1s. M. A. WOODS and A. J. COOPER.

STEPS TO ENGLISH PARSING. Part I. (Elementary), 1s. 6d.; Part II. (Further Exercises), 1s. 6d. E. M. RAMSAY and E. L. RAMSAY.

WORD FORMATION. By RITCHIE. 9d.

SHAKESPEARE'S PLAYS. (DYCE'S Edition with Notes.) 1s. net each Play.

PRACTICAL ESSAY WRITING. By HOLMES-FORBES. 1s. 6d.

GEOMETRY.

ELEMENTS OF PLANE GEOMETRY. Part I. 2s. 6d.; Part II. 2s. 6d.; together 4s. 6d.

ELEMENTARY GEOMETRY. By ELLIOTT. 2s.

INDUCTIVE GEOMETRY. By NESBITT. 1s. 6d.

GEOMETRY FOR THE KINDERGARTEN. PULLAR. 3s.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO., LTD.,
25, High Street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

THE BOOK OF THE HOUR.

TURKEY IN REVOLUTION.

By CHARLES RODEN BUXTON.

With a Map and 33 Illustrations. 7s. 6d. net.

The Nation says:—"This book of Mr. Buxton's is the first full and consecutive narrative of the miracle which has appeared, so far as we are aware, in any Western language, and it meets with admirable tact the needs of its readers. ... He has succeeded in conveying a fascinating and moving impression of a rare and historic experience."

The Bookman says:—"A very definite value is attached to this timely volume, for the author of it—a keen student of the East and Eastern affairs—had the good fortune to be in Turkey both shortly before and shortly after the Revolution, and his pages are as stirring as scenes upon a stage. To read these tumultuous chapters is to realize what Turkey has gone through, it is to see a country under the heel of a tyrant, and again to see her mad with joy and relief from pain.... Whatever our own judgments or shade of politics, we can only gain good from this enthusiastic and graphic account of a fiery piece of history."

T. FISHER UNWIN.

THE PLACE OF ANIMALS IN HUMAN THOUGHT.

By COUNTESS MARTINENGO-CESARESCO. With Photogravure Frontispiece and 33 other Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 12s. 6d. net.

This is probably the most comprehensive work that has yet appeared on the conceptions of animals manifested in the speculations of primitive man, and in the great religions of the world. Among the subjects treated are: Soul Wandering as it Concerns Animals; the Greek Conception of Animals; Animals at Rome; Plutarch the Humane; the Faith of Iran; Zoroastrian Zoology and The Hebrew Conception of Animals.

The book, while it is the outcome of years of study and research, will appeal not only to folk-lorists and students of religion, but to the general reader, particularly if he be a lover of animals.

T. FISHER UNWIN.

BAEDEKER'S GUIDES

ARE NOW PUBLISHED BY Mr. T. FISHER UNWIN.

THE BURIED CITY OF KENFIG.

By THOMAS GRAY. With a Map and Illustrations. Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

There is a fascination about a lost town. This work is an attempt to snatch from the past, hidden in the mists of ages, something about the town of Kenfig in South Wales, long since covered up by the sand-fiend.

Very little was known of this buried town until recently, when Miss Talbot had the large collection of documents, which belonged to Margam Abbey, in her possession, inspected and catalogued by Dr. de Gray Birch, LL.D. F.S.A. In the light of these monastic documents this book on Kenfig has been chiefly written.

T. FISHER UNWIN.

THE "CHATS" SERIES.—NEW VOLUME.

CHATS ON ENGLISH EARTHENWARE.

By ARTHUR HAYDEN, Author of 'Chats on English China,' 'Chats on Old Prints.' With a Coloured Frontispiece and 80 Full-Page Plates. Large crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net. A Companion Volume to 'Chats on English China.'

This practical guide deals with the rise and progress of earthenware in England. The illustrations include typical examples of Delft ware of Lambeth, Bristol, and Liverpool, the rare and beautiful productions of John Dwight, M.A., of Oxford and Master-Potter of Fulham, the red ware of the mysterious Dutchmen the Brothers Elers, the much-esteemed salt-glazed ware, Whieldon, Wedgwood, Leeds, Swansea, old Staffordshire figures and Toby jugs, old blue printed ware, lustre ware, and late Staffordshire ware, including Mason's Ironstone and the middle Victorian potters.

A detailed Table shows the possessor of old earthenware how to identify his specimens, and over 200 marks are given. With Lists of Prices, Glossary, Bibliography and hints as to Forgeries, and suggestions throughout as to the best means of collecting with profit, the volume is a thoroughly reliable working handbook for all who are interested in old English earthenware.

T. FISHER UNWIN.

M.A.B. (Mainly About Books).

The APRIL issue contains a description of the Ordnance Survey and its work and the story of 'Baedeker's Guides.' A copy will be sent post free to any address on application.

T. FISHER UNWIN, 1, Adelphi Terrace, London.

SATURDAY, MAY 1, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
THE GOSPEL AND HUMAN NEEDS	521
GAMBETTA DEPICTED BY HIMSELF	522
THE LINGUISTIC SURVEY OF INDIA	523
SIR JOHN MACDONALD	524
NEW NOVELS (When a Woman Woos; The Road of No Return; The Story of Hauksgarth Farm; The Half Moon; Kingsmead; A Fair Refugee; The Show Girl; Render unto Cæsar)	525-526
SCOTTISH HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY	526
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (Problems of the Middle East; Kuropatkin on the Japanese War; Glimpses of the Twenties; Oh Christina; Historical Publications relating to Canada; The Ideas of a Plain Country Woman; Le Socialisme conservateur ou municipal)	527-528
SONGS OF CYMRU, BY A. P. GRAVES; WHITLEY STOKES; AMATEUR PRINTING; BOSWELL'S 'DORANDO'	529
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	529
LITERARY GOSSIP	531
SCIENCE—DU CANE GODMAN ON THE PETRELS; BIRDS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND; WAYSIDE AND WOODLAND FERNS; ALPINES AND BOG-PLANTS; THE MINERAL KINGDOM; ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP	532-534
FINE ARTS—THE ROYAL ACADEMY; MR. WILSON STEER'S PAINTINGS; MR. ROGER FRY'S PAINTINGS AND DRAWINGS; OTHER EXHIBITIONS; SALES; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS	534-537
MUSIC—SAMSON ET DALILA; FAUST; MADAMA BUTTERFLY; ANALYSIS OF THE EVOLUTION OF MUSICAL FORM; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	537-538
DRAMA—COLONEL SMITH; THE CONQUEST; SHAKESPEARE AT STRATFORD	538-539
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	540

LITERATURE

The Gospel and Human Needs. By John Neville Figgis. (Longmans & Co.)

DR. FIGGIS has written Hulsean Lectures which not only attracted an unusual amount of attention when they were delivered, but which, when published, prove to be also a distinct and interesting contribution to modern Christian apologetic. They will naturally be compared with the Bampton Lectures to which, three years ago, Mr. Peile attracted a large audience in the sister University; and no one who has read the two books will doubt that Dr. Figgis is much the more original and cogent. Mr. Peile's book suffered inevitably by the space given to practical difficulties, for which, in the end, no solution was, or indeed could be, offered, except the agelong answer of the Christian life itself. Dr. Figgis endeavours to strike out a new line of defence, which has in it a distinct note of defiance. "The claim of the Gospel," he says, "is not so much to solve problems as to come near to human lives"; Mr. Peile never seemed quite clear about the problems, and was perhaps a little reluctant to fall back wholly upon the solution of life.

Again, Dr. Figgis is rather declaratory than controversial. He sets out objections, it is true; but his method is generally to meet them not so much with argument as with a flat assertion of the contradictory or a bold denial of their force. Perhaps the reason for this manner of apologetic is to be found in a passage in his last lecture:—

"Controversy may sometimes reassure Christians assailed by many perplexities. It may help to determine men on the brink of faith to take the final plunge. It may now and then cause fair-minded unbelievers to look at facts they had left out of account.

Or it may insinuate here and there a seed which after experience may render fruitful. But it is vain and even silly to expect to convince men of the need of a Saviour who are as yet untroubled by conscience."

This view accounts at once for the nature and the limits of Dr. Figgis's book. He addresses himself mainly to those who look at religion, to some extent at least, from the same standpoint as he does himself.

The main thought of his four lectures may be said to be the reassertion of the supernatural in a materialistic age. He will have nothing to do with the apology which minimizes the superhuman nature of the Christian revelation or its expression in the life of Christ and the Church. Thus, first, asserting that the force of the Christian Gospel depends on the very characteristics which awake hostility and arouse criticism, he emphasizes the miraculous as exhibiting the truth of God "as not Himself entangled in the endless chain of natural causes," and as thereby being "so uplifting and exhilarating a force." In the second lecture his point is that the notion of mystery in religion, and thus the Christian doctrines of the Trinity and the sacraments, which are "repugnant to the rationalist temper," yet "come home to the religious sense, conscious of the vastness of the order of the world, and feeling instinctively that the threads even of this life pass far out beyond our understanding." Thirdly, he asserts the inadequacy of the idealist attitude, and the power of the historical as appealing to "the plain man," concrete, particular, personal. And at the end, while fully admitting the difficulties of the idea of forgiveness in any scheme of thought—indeed, perhaps not only glorying in, but even somewhat exaggerating, them—he proclaims, with obvious sincerity and force, that "these very difficulties, the hardness of pardon, the knowledge that it is undeserved, are what endear the Cross to the mind of the sinner." Dr. Figgis, in fact, does not so much concern himself with the difficulties of thought as with the needs of life. At the same time he is very far indeed from ignoring philosophic objections. The striking force of his book is largely due to the fact that he feels them acutely. But he is equally convinced that the objection to an historical religion is one which is equally strong "against any system which gives reality to the individual life." The Christian system meets more needs, and contains more facts, than any other. We have at the present day to emphasize, not the likeness, but the unlikeness, of Christianity to its rivals. And it will outlast all criticism because—taking up Mr. Bernard Shaw's challenge, he repeats—it "fits the facts." It is only to the religious, he asserts, that the Gospel appeals at all: "It makes no attempt to appeal to the non-religious, if there be such."

This is a brief view—perhaps as inadequate as it is summary—of the main thought of these lectures; but to many readers the attraction of the book will lie as much in the expression as the thought. The style is sharp, quaint, vivacious, full of illustration and epigram, full of vivid personality and humour, sometimes playful, sometimes severe. It is the book of a man who has very real and wide learning, and has also a human sympathy as real and as wide. He is an historian. He insists on the evidential value of the survival of the Church, and the increasing volume of Christian experience. But no less he is ready to take up the most modern philosophers, and to toss and gore them, too. He is as much of a critic as he is an apologist. Perhaps at times he is too severe a critic: Dr. E. A. Abbott, for example, does not deserve the sharpness of tone with which his honest and conscientious, however inadequate, work is met. But it is the vividness and "actuality" of allusion throughout the book which give it its remarkable freshness, and a place apart from ordinary apologetic, as a book which every intelligent person should be glad to have read.

Where excellence lies so much in detail it is impossible for a reviewer to convey an adequate impression of a book. One could only quote epigrams which, divorced from their context, would seem monotonous in their very brilliancy. Let us note rather a few minor points, and that mainly with a view to the second edition which a work so attractive in manner, and so original in position, is sure speedily to obtain. There are dangers, we all know, in epigram; and now and then—not often—Dr. Figgis might do well to revise his antitheses. We do not think that "the sublime madness of the faith" goes so far as to bid us "worship a babe, a carpenter, and a criminal." Christians worship Christ because he is their Lord, not because He was once a babe; a carpenter indeed we are led by one (and probably authentic) reading to believe that He was, but the fact has no special relation to His religious claim; a criminal—it is surely the whole point of the Christian belief—He was not. We doubt if theologians will accept as accurate the statement that "the Eternal Spirit" is "veiled in symbol in the Eucharist."

The sermons added to the lectures sometimes repeat the same ideas and even phrases. At other times they attempt new subjects which we should like to see Dr. Figgis treat at greater length; for instance, in a too brief sermon on the 'Need of Authority in the Church,' the preacher is so much occupied with Romanism that he never really says what, in his opinion, the authority of the Church is. Again, when he asserts the essential difference (e.g., p. 149) of Christianity from other religions, one cannot but be struck by the fact that (if we are not mistaken) so important a book of modern apologetic never mentions 'The Golden Bough' at all. Is it not an exaggeration to say (p. 156) that Christ—Dr. Figgis has just been speaking of Newton and Shakespeare—"alone can give distinction to commonplace things"? Surely this is true of many poets and men of science, and conspicuously true of those whom Dr. Figgis has just named. And—though we can only mention the subject briefly—we are by no means satisfied with the author's view of Bishop Butler (in an Appendix on 'The New Theology and Bishop Butler'). He seems, for the moment, to forget that in the 'Analogy' Butler never tried to prove Christianity to be true; and we are by no means sure that there does not lie a more real help to Christians in the eighteenth-century philosopher's view of the supernatural as relative to man's knowledge of the works of God than in that which proclaims it so triumphantly as a distinction and a contrast. But these are points on which we should be glad to see Dr. Figgis develop his views at greater length. We should be glad, too, to see him not only express satisfaction that the ideals of Bismarck and Goethe were obviously not Christian, but also discuss what was the attitude of these two great men to the Christian faith. If we mistake not, he could find something worth saying on the point.

There are not a few signs that the lectures were prepared for the press with some haste, and we cannot endorse the gratitude which the author expresses to the friend who revised the proof-sheets. His name we will not mention, though he is, we suggest, the critic who believed (see Preface) that miracles were a hindrance to faith, and whose influence is responsible for the frequent use of the word "boggle," as a verb and a noun, in the book. Many errors have been allowed to remain. A sentence like the following (p. 48) needs considerable revision:—

"I imagine that, however devout he may be, the attribute of the English officer or professional man would be much less hostile to the Faith than it is in France"; and it takes some time before one can understand this (p. 92):—

"In a world in which we are to be trained to virtue through freedom and love is the highest virtue, suffering, alike to resist temptation and to embody the giving-ness of love, is inevitable."

On p. 60, last line, the article has dropped out; on p. 117 "burk" should be "burke"; on p. 151, "antipodes," surely "antithesis." Dr. F. W. Bussell is quoted as "G. Bussell" (p. 172); from p. 184 the copy that reached us is completely muddled, as regards head-line and pagination, and in consequence the notes are very difficult to fit to the text. But all these things can be easily set right; and we should be glad to see so striking a book free even from trivial faults.

Gambetta par Gambetta. Edited by P. B. Gheusi. (Paris, Société d'Éditions littéraires [Ollendorff].)

THE memory of Gambetta has gained by the picture of him presented in such histories, by opponents of his policy, as that of M. Hanotaux. Gambetta had the reputation of being an unwilling writer, and many, even among his friends, were amazed at the mass of letters—mostly, though not all, genuine—which appeared in two recent rival publications. All the while there existed a far larger number of family letters giving a fuller and a more wholesome impression of Gambetta's life before the war of 1870, in the shape of outpourings of the heart to father, mother, and that aunt whose long care for the young Gambetta made her the friend of all his supporters. The present volume comes from the family, and, admirable in tone, will now be read along with the better among the later letters—unfortunately published first. No sufficient reason is suggested for the long concealment of the papers now at last before us. The letters were obviously not written for the world; but, if such letters are ever to be given to the public, these might be, and might have been many years ago, with no effect other than that of creating a perfect picture of the man as he lived and suffered.

One generally knows the worst, and often much more than the worst, about public men, especially in France during periods of revolution when politics meant life or death. Gambetta was "the Mirabeau" of the last years before the war and fall of the Second Empire. His oratory was styled with truth "un tonnerre nouveau," and he himself "le Tombeur de l'Empire." French wrestlers, coming from Arles and Nîmes, and recalling by their build and features the professional gladiators of Rome, produce from time to time among them one as conspicuously superior in brute strength and in success to all the others of his day as is the leading toreador of Madrid to his Spanish rivals. Such a champion is called "le Tombeur." Gambetta's "volcanic oratory" gave him a similar supremacy, in the Parisian world, the Bar and politics, between 1866 and 1870. Admirers who belonged to all schools of thought and held all except Napoleonic opinions, from Berryer among monarchists to the extreme Republicans, had no suspicion of the tender and sentimental nature that underlay the vehemence of the Tribune. For ten years the young man had been writing with his very blood in terms such as few sons ever made use of towards a (very ordinary) father. He tells from week to week the hopes with which his soul was animated, and the suffering—reaching at times almost to the point of starvation—that he underwent in Paris.

Until Gambetta's mother packed off the famous aunt to live with him, and that lady—"de bronze"—settled down with grim determination to the task of keeping house in face of debt and without an income, Gambetta was as "disorderly" as his worst reputation. On the other hand, the story of subsequent ill-gotten affluence vanishes into smoke. The legend will not survive the weekly revelations of his budget, even during and after the days of supreme power. Gambetta ended his war-dictatorship as much on the wrong side financially as he began it. He lived well upon his salary during those subsequent years in which he governed France as the "occult dictator," from the Palais Bourbon; but he spent it as he went along, and was helped by his family, out of their small means, to the trifling sums by which, to the last, he failed to balance his accounts.

In the present volume there is little about the statesman and little about public affairs. Its contents should be combined with the genuine among the other letters, and the history of Gambetta's life as related by M. Joseph Reinach among friends, and by the regular historians among outsiders, in order to obtain that final picture for which the materials are now ready.

Gambetta's family were more Italian than the world had realized: even more Italian than the Bonapartes were Corsican. After the naturalization of Gambetta, his new French citizenship did not prevent his repeated assertion of his Italian nature and Italian feelings. He writes as a patriot of two peoples united in a common Roman civilization. The form, at first, was turgid. The sentiments are simple, but the pen is dipped in Gascon ink and carries the writer into mixed metaphor, while his sentences are packed too full of allusion to allow us to mention style. Like many of the descendants of the coasting sailors of the Genoese Republic, the Gambettas of the village of Celle-Ligure were republicans, and Gambetta's father—a timid, moderate shopkeeper, terrified at his son's occasional violence, and at rumours of an imaginary atheism—was as firmly republican as his illustrious son.

Writing of the Empire in his twentieth year, when he had been in Paris as a student for thirteen months, Gambetta describes the Orsini attempt, and draws a magnificent portrait of Mazzini, adding:—

"La logique chez l'homme est si différente, d'après l'élection du principe, que la canonisation chez un tel peut marcher de front avec sa guillottinade."

Then he comes back to the coup d'état and the fate of the French republicans:—

"Entendez-vous la note lugubre? C'est toute une élite de jeunesse qui râle sur le trottoir, les cheveux dans la boue, la bouche souillée de poudre et de sang français,—1852!"

In the following passage of the same letter Gambetta finds one good point in Louis Napoleon: that fatalistic courage which, unfortunately for France, did not negative the most hopeless indecision. He says that any one can be calm in face of danger, "but after—when the man has escaped, and he is there, safe!" He finds Orsini still more brave, for Louis Napoleon had only been in the castle of Ham: "Si on l'avait mis dans les donjons de Mantoue, il est à parier qu'il y serait encore." Political assassination was not, however, in Gambetta's line; and even in this outbreak of enthusiasm he shows it by an offensive epithet.

The Athenæum commented not long ago on a statement in a recent history that Gambetta knew nothing of art. It is worth noting in support of our opinion that as early as his twentieth year he displays in several letters considerable knowledge of some branches of the fine arts, and in almost all a deep sense of scholarship, combined with a fixed intent—such as that of Keats—to possess himself of the spirit of the ancient past.

After his call to the Bar Gambetta has fine passages on eloquence and on ambition. Here is one :—

“Pourquoi te le cacher à toi, mon bon père ? L'ambition me dévore ; peut-être ne suis-je que le jouet de mon orgueil ? Mais, après tout, l'ambition n'est pas un crime. L'orgueil est une force et, avec le travail pour levier et l'épée du besoin, que ne peut un jeune homme ardent, honnête et qui a toute la vie de son père pour exemple ? Aussi, je surabonde de courage et d'amour filial pour toi et pour vous tous que j'embrasse.”

Here is another :—

“Rien n'exalte comme la lutte, parce que rien n'est plus suave que le triomphe. Le triomphe ! C'est là le mot talisman qui chasse le sommeil, avive les forces, multiplie et trempe l'esprit des jeunes gens. La victoire ! rien que ce mot et cette idée, il y en a assez pour vous changer un nain en géant. C'est presque toucher la palme de la main que de la désirer avec tant d'ardeur.”

It is curious to note that Gambetta foresaw the Ollivier ministry and “l'Empire libéral” more than five years in advance, and a little later (in March, 1865) wrote of M. Ollivier : “If the Empire takes him, the Empire is far gone.” Exactly a year before the beginning of the war Gambetta was at Ems, and notes that the King of Prussia, afterwards the first German Kaiser of the present Constitution, had asked after the health of the distinguished young French deputy. A year later, to the very July day, King William was again at Ems, pursued by the French Ambassador in the “interview” of which Bismarck altered the official account from “a message of peace” into “the trumpet call.” The answering blast of France was blown too late, when Gambetta alighted from his balloon.

Linguistic Survey of India.—Vol. IX. Indo-Aryan Family Central Group.—Part II. Specimens of the Rājasthānī and Gujarātī. Edited by G. A. Grierson. (Calcutta, Government Printing Office.)

THIS volume of the Linguistic Survey of India deals with Rājasthānī and Gujarātī. Of these the latter will be a familiar term to many of our readers, but not so the former, which has, indeed, been invented for the purposes of the Linguistic Survey. In old times the various dialects of Rājasthān, the country of the Rajputs, were included by Europeans under the general name of Hindi. Nevertheless, the Serampore missionaries were aware of the existence of many of the dialects and sub-dialects classified by Dr. Grierson under the head of Rājasthānī, for they translated the Bible into six of them.

Of literature there is abundance in Rājasthānī, but little is known about it. There are the old bardic histories embodied in Tod's ‘Rājasthān,’ but probably few Europeans, except the enthusiastic author of that romantic book, have studied them. As for the ‘Prithirāj Rāsau’ of Chand Bardāi, which at one time attracted much attention, great doubts have been thrown upon its authenticity, and the only part as yet published is written in an old form of Western Hindi.

Dr. Grierson justifies the invention of a new class-name to designate the languages of the Rajputs by an elaborate comparison of the grammar of the principal dialects of Rājasthānī with that of the dialects of Western Hindi, its nearest linguistic neighbour on the east, and also with that of Gujarātī. He considers that the Rājasthānī dialects, so far from being dialects of Western Hindi, ought rather, if they must be included under some hitherto acknowledged language, to be classed as dialects of Gujarātī. To begin with, they agree in giving to the letter v, not a sound resembling that of the English b, as is common in Western Hindi, but one intermediate between v and w, so that Dr. Grierson writes in the present volume v before i and e, and w before the remaining vowels. In the inflexion of nouns they differ from Western Hindi, and agree with Gujarātī. Moreover, in the formation of the personal pronouns, and in the conjugation of the verb, they either take an independent line, or agree with Gujarātī. In one important point, the formation of the present definite, Rājasthānī agrees with Gujarātī in adopting a principle which is altogether foreign to the genius of Western Hindi. On the whole, his conclusion is that the Rājasthānī dialects form a group among themselves, differentiated from Western Hindi on the one hand, and Gujarātī on the other. Geographically these dialects may be classified as those of the West, of the Central East, of the North-East, and of the South-East.

Of these the most important, from a practical point of view, is the Western dialect, known as Mārṇārī. It is spoken by more than six millions, and is the only dialect that has a considerable recognized literature, though this literature has been, as yet, but insufficiently studied. The Mārṇārīs are known as merchants all over Hindustan. Indeed, the Mahājānī character, much used for correspondence and mercantile documents, is, according to Dr. Grierson, the Mārṇārī current script, which has been carried, in the course of trade, to the remotest parts of India :—

“Its illegibility, owing to the omission of the vowels, has given rise to numerous stories. One of the best known is of the Mārṇārī merchant who went to Delhi. Thence his clerk wrote home ‘Bābū ajmēr gayō barī bahī bhēj-dījē, the Babu has gone to Ajmer, send the big ledger.’ This, being written without vowels, was read by its recipient, Bābū āj margayo, barī bahū bhej dijē, the Babu died to-day, send the chief wife—apparently to perform his funeral obsequies !”

In a variant of this story, which we have heard or read somewhere, and which came from Gujarāt, the recipient, a relation, was comforted by a bystander, who pointed out to him that the letter could not be intended to convey bad news, as the envelope did not exhibit the superscription usual in such cases : “Strip and read.” Accordingly he was enabled to spare his tears and his raiment.

One interesting point in Mārṇārī is that it has a regularly inflected passive voice, formed by adding īj to the root of the primitive verb. It is pointed out that these passives have always a kind of potential sense, like the potential passive formed by adding ā to the root in the languages of Hindustan proper. It is an axiom of philology that more importance is to be attached in the classification of languages to the grammar than the dictionary ; but in view of Dr. Grierson's previous remarks, it is interesting to learn that the Mārṇārī vocabulary is nearer that of Gujarātī than that of Hindi.

Though Mārṇārī is, in some respects, the most important language of Rājasthān, we find in the present volume the Central Eastern dialect, of which Jaipurī is taken as the standard, treated at greater length. This is due to the fact that the materials for its study are more numerous, owing to the labours of the Rev. G. Macalister, who was employed by the Maharaja of Jaipur to conduct a special linguistic survey of the State. So important does Dr. Grierson consider the services rendered by this gentleman to linguistic science, that he acknowledges his indebtedness to him in connexion with Rājasthānī in a special note prefixed to the present volume, coupling his name with that of the Rev. G. P. Taylor, from whom he has derived valuable help in the section of the volume dealing with Gujarātī.

Jaipurī, though belonging to the east of Rajputana, is nearly allied to Gujarātī. The following points seem worthy of notice. In pronunciation there is a frequent interchange of the vowels a and i. As regards consonants, aspiration is commonly omitted. In the nouns there are occasional occurrences of a neuter. In other respects there are wide divergences from the system followed in Hindustani. With regard to verbs, it may be observed that in Jaipurī the old simple present is used both as a present and a subjunctive, whereas in Hindustani it has lost its original meaning, and is now used solely as a present subjunctive. The future has two forms. One is based on the analogy of the Hindustani future, lā or lo being substituted for gā. The second form has sy or si for its characteristic letter, and is the direct descendant of the old S'aurasenī Prakrit future. The past tenses of transitive verbs are constructed passively, as in Hindustani, but in Jaipurī the agent takes no termination ; while the termination nai, corresponding to the Hindustani ne, is used to denote the accusative. Thus the Jaipurī wo ghorā-nai māryo is the equivalent of the Hindustani us-ne ghore-ko mārā (he struck the horse). Hāraufī (one of the dialects into which, as well as Jaipurī, the Serampore missionaries translated the Bible) differs very little from Jaipurī. The same may be said of Ajmerī and Kishangarhī, the other two Central Eastern dialects.

North-Eastern Rājasthānī is represented by two dialects, Mēwātī and Ahīrwātī, the language of the Ahīrs. The former shows Rājasthānī fading off into the Braj Bhākhā dialect of Hindi. Ahīrwātī is the connecting link between Mēwātī and the Bāngarū dialect of Western Hindi. Neither of these dialects appears to possess any literature. Mēwātī is properly the language of Mēwāt, the country of the Mēos, but its boundaries are really more extensive. It is the language of the whole of the State of Alwar, of which only a portion is Mēwāt. The declension of nouns closely follows that of Jaipurī, but in the pronouns and verbs there is a resemblance to Western Hindi. The Ahīrs or Hīrs, the Abhīras of Sanskrit literature, are recorded on the stone pillar at Allahabad (fourth century A.D.) as having been vanquished by Samudragupta, of the imperial Gupta dynasty. Dr. Grierson knows of no works written in Ahīrwātī, and of no previous account of the language. In its grammar it differs but little from Mēwātī.

The two dialects of the South-East are Mālvi and Nimādī. Mālvi is strictly the language of Mālwa. It is spoken in the Mālwa tract, i.e., in the Indore, Bhopal, Bhopawar, and Western Mālwa Agencies of Central India. It represents Rājasthānī merging into Bundēlī and Gujarātī. The grammar agrees, on the whole, with that of Jaipurī and Mārwarī. Nimādī is spoken in the Nimar district of the Central Provinces, and in the adjoining portion of the Bhopawar Agency of Central India. It has, to a certain extent, been influenced by the Bhīl languages and by Khāndesī. The above summary does scant justice to the exhaustive analysis by which the dignity of Rājasthānī has been asserted and its territory demarcated.

In passing from Rājasthānī to Gujarātī we are concerned not with a newly discovered linguistic group, but with a long-established language. The word Gujarātī means the vernacular language of Gujarāt, and this name accurately connotes the area in which it is spoken. It is used in the province so called, and also in the peninsula of Kathiawar. It is the court and business language of Cutch, and has even extended a short distance into Sind. Gujarāt is the country of the Gurjaras, a host of Asiatic nomads who, like the Huns, invaded India in either the fifth or sixth century of our era. From the Punjab and the United Provinces they seem to have passed through Rajputana to Gujarāt. Mr. Vincent Smith tells us that the famous Parihār clan of Rajputs is only a section of the Gurjaras, and related to the plebeian Gūjars, an agricultural and pastoral caste numerous in Upper India. We learn from the same authority that Rajputana was governed for centuries by Gurjaras, whose capital was at Bhilmāl, some fifty miles to the north-west of Mount Abū; and in the ninth century the Gurjara king of Bhilmāl conquered Kanauj, and transferred the seat of his government to that city. It is, perhaps, not too daring a supposition if we conjecture that the Gurjara invasion from Rajputana accounts for the great similarity between Rājasthānī and Gujarātī. However, the Gurjaras were by no means the only settlers in Gujarāt. Dr. Grierson dwells on the fact that the rich soil of Gujarāt has always attracted immigrants, and shows that it has been peopled by a very colluvies gentium.

Gujarātī is exceptional in possessing a series of documents which enable us to connect it with its immediate parent, the Nāgara form of S'aurasena Apabhramsa, which was known to the grammarian Hemachandra, who flourished in the twelfth century A.D. Two hundred years after his death we find a grammar of Sanskrit written in Gujarātī vernacular :

"Fifty years afterwards Gujarātī literature commences with the poetry of Narsingh Mētā. We have thus a connected chain of evidence as to the growth of the Gujarātī language from the earliest times. We can trace the old Vedic language from Prakrit down to Apabhramsa, and we can trace the development of Apabhramsa from the verses of Hemachandra, down to the language of a Parsi newspaper. No single step is wanting. The line is complete for nearly four thousand years."

The grammar of Sanskrit written in the Gujarātī vernacular, referred to above, was published by the late Mr. H. H. Dhruva in 1889. He was, apparently, under the impression that he was publishing a Gujarātī grammar. In these circumstances it is not surprising to read that the original is carelessly printed. As a Sanskrit grammar it is of small value; but by means of the explanations written in the vernacular, Dr. Grierson has been able to reconstruct the grammar of old Gujarātī, as it was between the time of the grammarian Hemachandra and Narsingh Mētā. He has thrown the results of his investigations into the form of an appendix, which bids fair to prove very useful to any students who may take up the old bardic histories, to a certain extent utilized by Forbes in his 'Rās Mālā.'

At present the only true dialectic variation in Gujarātī consists in the difference between the speech of the educated and uneducated. It is generally asserted that the Parsis and Musulmans speak special dialects, and Mr. St. Clair Tisdall has given a specimen of Parsi Gujarātī in the chrestomathy appended to his simplified Gujarātī grammar; but the difference appears to consist principally in the vocabulary, which borrows freely from Persian and Arabic. However, we are told that, as a matter of fact, most Musulmans speak Hindustani.

It follows, therefore, that the specimens of Gujarātī from various localities, which Dr. Grierson has printed, must, as a rule, be taken to represent the speech of villagers and uneducated people. This is, however, not true of the Nāgarī dialect, which is Gujarātī with a large infusion of Sanskrit words. This fits in well with the fact already mentioned, that, according to Dr. Grierson, the literary form of the Apabhramsa, from which Gujarātī is descended, was in old times known as the Nāgara Apabhramsa. Indeed, some scholars maintain that the Devanāgarī character owes its name to having been the form of script used by this caste, in contradistinction to the ordinary Gujarātī character.

We have already mentioned some points in which Gujarātī resembles Rājasthānī. One is the use of the neuter gender, which is sporadic in Western Hindi, is found to be more and more frequent in Rājasthānī as we go westward, and is established in Gujarātī. In both Gujarātī and Rājasthānī the suffix do, changing in the feminine and neuter to dī and dū respectively, is added to nouns. This is a direct survival from the parent Apabhramsa. In the declension of nouns Gujarātī and Rājasthānī agree in having the nominative singular of strong masculine a-bases ending in ō. Gujarātī has also a peculiar use of the past tenses of transitive verbs, which Dr. Grierson has noted in Rājasthānī, but in no other Indian dialect. It seems unnecessary to multiply instances. A fairly careful perusal of this volume will probably convince most students that Rājasthānī and Gujarātī have not been connected without good reason.

The special excellence of the Linguistic Survey of India may be said to consist in its healthy freedom from dogmatism. The Director takes particular pains to furnish his readers with facts, which enable them to test his conclusions. The present volume shows the same fine insight and persevering industry which have characterized its predecessors. It does credit to the enlightened liberality of the Government of India, as well as to the collaborators who, under the able guidance of Dr. Grierson, have contributed to the success of this great scientific undertaking.

Sir John A. Macdonald. By George R. Parkin. (T. C. & E. C. Jack.)

THE "Makers of Canada" Series has included some names whose title to rank as such may fairly be questioned; but, if ever a man deserved to be called the maker of his country, it was the statesman of whom his leading opponent said, at the time of his death, that his life from the date he entered Parliament was the history of Canada, associated as he was with all the events which brought Canada from the position of two small provinces, having nothing in common but their allegiance to the British Crown, to that of the Dominion of to-day. No doubt the fact that Sir John Macdonald's life was so closely bound up with that of Canada causes special difficulties to a biographer; but the present volume is mainly concerned with his public doings, and does not add much to our knowledge of his private character. Nevertheless its appearance is well justified. Mr. Pope's authoritative 'Memoirs,' though of great interest, are too long for the ordinary reader; the last years of Macdonald receive inadequate treatment, and the tone is that of a strong partisan, all who ventured to oppose his master and leader being treated with scant respect. In the present volume, on the other hand, an admirable proportion is maintained in the treatment of the different periods; and the editors have been singularly fortunate in obtaining the services of a writer who, like Dr. Parkin, is inspired by the conviction which was at the bottom of Macdonald's political belief, shining clear and steadfast amidst all the opportunism and cynicism of his party manœuvres, that loyalty to Canada and loyalty to the Empire were not incompatible, and that in their reconciliation and service lay the whole duty of the Colonial statesman and citizen.

The scope of his book allows Dr. Parkin to brush aside the moral shortcomings and inconsistencies which, if ever the vie intime of Macdonald is worthily treated, will afford interest to the psychologist. In the brief references to such matters Dr. Parkin extenuates nothing, though of course he does not set down anything maliciously. His business is with the larger issues, the wider atmosphere, in which the statesman moved who, more than any one else, embodied the spirit and purpose of the Canadian people. Even in such a survey all is not to be admired in this very human hero. No attempt is made to deny that the conscience of the country was rightly shocked by the revelations in connexion with the Pacific Railway and the general election of 1872. At the same time who can deny the justice of the apologia which, in his final summing-up, Dr. Parkin makes for Macdonald's methods of politics?

"Are we to throw the blame upon the men who manipulate the constituency, or shall we equally blame the constituency which lends itself wittingly and willingly, nay eagerly, to temptation? In these matters to apologize for Macdonald is to arraign the general condition of Canadian politics.... It is doubtful whether it can honestly be said that Macdonald ever vigorously used his great influence to combat this evil, or even thought that the contest was one that he was called upon to wage. A statesman of higher ideals might have done so. He accepted men at their own valuation, and the world as he found it. But it was admitted on all hands that if he was ready to offer corrupt inducements to others, he remained incorrupt himself. 'These hands are clean,' he said with dramatic earnestness after the Pacific scandal, and his protestation was believed by the Canadian people so far as any suspicion was concerned that he had made mean gains or been actuated by petty personal motives in what he had done."

But if in the field of political morality Macdonald was no idealist, he yet, as has been already intimated, carried along with him certain leading ideas to which he remained faithful throughout his political peregrinations. He never wavered in his loyalty to the Empire, and he never wavered in his belief in the future of Canada. Compare his first and his last political address, and one is impressed, behind the covering of party rhetoric, by the ring of keen Imperial loyalty. It is so obvious now to prophesy smooth things for the future of the great Dominion that we are apt to forget that, as recently as 1891, a leading Canadian statesman could denounce the "national policy" as having "left us with a small population, a scanty immigration, and a North-West empty still; with enormous additions to our public debt and yearly charges, an extravagant system of expenditure, and an unjust and oppressive tariff."

But for the faith and hope that were in Macdonald, it is very doubtful whether the Canadian Pacific Railway would have ever come to its difficult birth, or, if it had finally been made, would not have come too late to prevent Western Canada from being a portion of the United States. Macdonald apparently knew little of trade questions, and adopted the "national policy" on political rather than on economic grounds; and, merely judging the question from this point of view, he would be a bold man who should say that he was wrong. Be this as it may, the successful statesman must needs be an optimist; and because Macdonald believed, with his whole heart and mind, in the future of Canada, therefore the new nation now coming to life will always hold his name in special honour.

It only remains to add that the manner and style of the volume are worthy of its subject; but is it clear that the proposal of President Jackson, with regard to the Maine boundary, was really one which could ever have been followed by practical results? And, after the labours of Dr. Ganong, is it not rather late in the day to sneer at "the timidity of Lord Ashburton"?

NEW NOVELS.

When a Woman Woos. By Charles Marriott. (Eveleigh Nash.)

MR. MARRIOTT seems to have reached his level, and each new novel he publishes confirms him in his place. It is not so high a place as some of the admirers of 'The Column' prophesied for him, but he has vastly improved since he wrote his first book. He has no great aptitude for form or plot, but he seems to go upon the sound principle of working out a character in a certain atmosphere. The only danger against which a writer should guard in doing so is the risk of leaving the tale in the air. There is an amorphousness about 'When a Woman Woos' which might have been averted with a little care. Also, we note a provincially of tone to which we have referred before. On the other hand, Mr. Marriott has always sympathy and atmosphere and sincerity.

The Road of No Return. By A. C. Inchbold. (Chatto & Windus.)

MRS. INCHBOLD'S principal characters are Russian reformers of the present century, who, for various reasons, travel to the Holy Land. When the story opens the heroine is the nominal wife of a patriot who has been sentenced to exile for ten years; and her own acquittal, due indirectly to the eager sensuality of a Chief Commissioner, is followed by a visit from this functionary, whom she nearly kills in defence of her honour. The passport of a dead woman enables her to leave Russia, and, in company with a superstitious villager, she makes a pilgrimage which brings her under the happy influence of a disciple of Tolstoy. Her husband, who is imprisoned despite the terms of his sentence, consents, without abandoning his patriotic projects, to become a monk of the Orthodox Church, and his marriage is consequently annulled. The part of the story dealing with Palestine is particularly good, considerable skill being shown in keeping to a Russian point of view. The touching aspect of Russian pious credulity is admirably shown in one episode; but so able a writer should refrain from stretching the "long arm of coincidence."

The Story of Hauksgarth Farm. By Emma Brooke. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

THE effects which the author has aimed at are of that large, simple order which precludes any intricacy either in plot or characterization. The scene is laid in a remote district of Westmorland, and the actors, strictly limited in number, are for the most part representatives of the hardy agricultural class of some eighty years ago. A high standard of excellence is required to achieve success in a narrative framed on such lines, and it is therefore no small praise to Miss Brooke to say that she has at least escaped failure. Her writing is vigorous, and her conception of character powerful; and the passionate scenes are handled with restraint and artistic feeling, though they lack the touch of mastery which imposes full conviction. Every now and then a slight excess of vehemence, a simplicity that impresses one as studied, a small incongruity in thought or phrasing, momentarily disturb the spell. But the novel is a fine piece of work; its interest is well sustained, and its atmosphere is throughout wholesome and bracing.

The Half Moon. By Ford Madox Hueffer. (Eveleigh Nash.)

MR. HUEFFER has followed up his trilogy with another historical novel of a slightly later period in the days of James I.—that time of oppression and unrest which drove explorers overseas to the New World in search of freedom of thought and action. It is always somewhat difficult in a story that purports to deal with real personages to differentiate between fact and fiction, and perhaps the most attractive portion of this book is its strong archæological element. The characters, for all the author's straining after a certain archaic forcefulness, are shadowy and unconvincing; the thumb-nail sketch of Henry Hudson, the great navigator, is drawn with better effect than the rest. But Anne Jeal, the singularly malevolent young lady who melts a waxen man to the hurt of the obdurate hero, is merely a violent marionette. The descriptive passages relating to old Rye have atmosphere and charm.

Kingsmead. By Baroness von Hutten. (Hutchinson & Co.)

A READER wants a rather long memory to "carry forward" people from one novel and one generation to another. The author asks us to make the effort. We dimly recall a certain Tommy, an eater of bread-and-jam, and between whiles the utterer of quaint childish remarks. He has now developed into Lord Kingsmead, the whimsical, undersized hero of the present story. His principal reason for existence is seemingly to be the good genius of a newly enriched family who have bought his ancestral hearth. This family (with the exception of the daughter, who is more individual) is treated rather conventionally and not very amusingly. The humours of the old husband and wife and their language are forced and spasmodic. But again some individuality is shown, of an uncomfortable kind, in an enigmatical lady. We were, like the hero, taken in by her. This youth is almost too sentimental, and at the same time too playful and managing. At twenty-three he tries his 'prentice hand at match-making. The good-natured plotting and repartee between him and the fat duchess he enlists in his service (she, too, came out of another story) are not quite good enough for the purpose, which appears to be a display of vivacity.

A Fair Refugee. By Morice Gerard. Illustrated. (Hodder & Stoughton.)

THE flight of "the little Viscountess," Marie de Masseine, from the Jacobin butcheries of 1793, which made her an orphan, is impressive from its accessories, which involve a shipwreck on the Cornish coast and her settlement among the rural scenes and people there. Some stirring incidents occur when the squire and the rector, terrors to evildoers, organize their campaign against the wreckers; but the chief interest lies in the love-story, which is well done. The author's style is rather amateurish, but the characterization is clear.

The Show Girl. By Max Pemberton. Frontispiece by Cyrus Cuneo. (Cassell & Co.)

MR. PEMBERTON tells in letters the story of an idle Englishman's love for a Parisian dancer, virtuous amid doubtful associates, and of mysterious parentage. A hypocritical clergyman's hunger for income at the hero's expense provides some cheap amusement; and an impulsive Irishman is an attractive figure. The melodramatic part of the tale, which includes a murder, is only moderately interesting.

Render unto Cæsar. By Mrs. Vere Campbell. (Mills & Boon.)

THE inspiration of a born storyteller and regrettable weakness in construction produce a queer effect in this novel. It opens with a question of choice between family and mankind: will Gregory Champion adhere to the anti-Plutocratic principles of his friend Ancram, or will he gratify his mother, his father's friend, and the clerk of his father by developing the business of juggling with capital? Gregory goes over to Mammon, and marries an unscrupulous beauty, who later prefers Ancram to him, and arouses his fierce jealousy. Four of the female and one of the male characters are noticeably well drawn, but the story offends by awakening an intellectual curiosity without satisfying it. The financial part is deficient in details, which might have shown more imagination than the luridly melodramatic episode wherein two of Mrs. Campbell's puppets die.

SCOTTISH HISTORY AND BIOGRAPHY.

No writer knows more about the great family with which Byron claimed kinship than Mr. J. M. Bulloch. We therefore welcome his Gay Gordons (Chapman & Hall) as the work of an author who goes to original sources for his material and is not content to use scissors and paste on the material of his predecessors. Mr. Bulloch tells us that this book was "really begun in boyhood," which is to say some twenty years ago, when he was a youth in that Aberdeen at whose Grammar School Byron received a material part of his education. The encyclopædic task of detailing the complete history of the Gordons has been undertaken by Mr. Bulloch for the New Spalding Club. Here he has simply turned aside for a moment, as it were, to furnish the general reader with "some strange adventures" in the history of various members of the widely distributed family, from the time of Lady Catherine Gordon, who married Perkin Warbeck, down to the present day. He has omitted such well-known figures as General Patrick Gordon of the Russian Army, Lord George Gordon, and Chinese Gordon; and he reserves the fascinating personality of Jane Maxwell, Duchess of Gordon, "for another occasion."

Twenty-two figures or episodes remain, and each of these is treated in a fresh way, with much new detail. We learn all about Admiral Thomas Gordon, the Governor of Kronstadt, who was hand in glove with the Jacobites; about Lady Catherine Gordon, who married a Pole, and became the ancestor of the last King of Poland; about the assassination of Wallenstein by Col. John Gordon, who belonged to the same family as Byron's mother; about the elopement of Lord William Gordon with Lady Sarah Bunbury; about the extraordinary abduction of Mrs. Lee, "the female infidel," by two brothers Gordon, one of whom was a parson; and about a great many more Gordons and Gordon escapades. The adjective "gay" as applied to the family is clearly, on Mr. Bulloch's showing, no misnomer. He would fain discredit the romantic story of how Lady Jane, the famous Duchess, kissed a regiment into being. There must have been some foundation for a statement which has been persistently repeated for over a hundred years; and we are not inclined to follow Mr. Bulloch in giving up the tradition simply because there is no authentication of it in the family papers. Mr. Bulloch has, wisely perhaps, avoided citing authorities, but his work is a careful historical study notwithstanding its romantic and popular interest. There are a number of illustrations and a satisfactory Index.

The Douglas Cause. Edited by A. Francis Steuart. (Hodge & Co.)—Great as was the issue at stake in this famous suit, the intense interest it excited must be ascribed mainly to the fact that each of the two litigants was able to put forward so strong a case. The first Duke of Douglas died in 1761, and the title and estates passed to his nephew, the son of his deceased sister Jane. The trustees of the boy Duke of Hamilton at once raised an action on his behalf as nearest heir male, and, when this claim had been repelled, they instituted another on the ground that the person calling himself Archibald Steuart or Douglas was not Lady Jane's son. In the Court of Session, which delivered judgment in 1767, Hamilton won his case by the Lord President's casting vote; but two years later the decision in his favour was reversed, with only five dissentients, by the House of Lords, after a whole day's debate, in which lay and law peers alike took part.

Readers of this book, which contains all the Scottish judgments and the speeches of Lords Camden and Mansfield, may find it easier to account for the dubiety of the Court of Session than the certainty of the Lords. Lady Jane was forty-eight years old when she secretly married Colonel (afterwards Sir John) Steuart, and went abroad with him disguised as one of her footmen; and fifty when she claimed to have become the mother of twins. Her capacity to have children, and the appearance, if not the fact, of pregnancy, were indeed proved; but the doubts originally suggested by her age found fresh support in a long train of "obscurity and concealment and want of truth." Leaving their maidservants at Rheims, she and her husband set out, very unseasonably, for Paris; and there the birth was said to have taken place, not at the inn to which they had been directed and whither they had gone, but in so obscure a retreat that neither house, landlady, nor accoucheur could subsequently be traced. Contradictions, false statements, letters purposely misdated, and even forged, added new grounds of suspicion; and it was proved that at this time two French children were stolen by foreigners. Lord President Dundas went so far as to say that in the whole story of the alleged birth he had failed to find "one unsuspecting circumstance"; and we recall a statement in Carlyle's 'Autobiography' that he and Adam Ferguson were "the only two of our set of people"—i.e., the literati of Edinburgh—"who favoured Douglas." Nevertheless, the Lords may have been justified in accepting as conclusive the facts emphasized by Mansfield and Lord Chancellor Camden—that Lady Jane was entirely devoted to the children, that the death of one of them hastened her own, that both parents solemnly acknowledged them at death, and that one was "the finished model" of Steuart, the other of his wife. The editor has summarized the history of the case in a useful Introduction, and some interesting private letters will be found in the Appendix. There are many portraits and illustrations.

The Scottish Staple at Veere. By John Davidson and Alexander Gray. (Longmans & Co.)—This work opens with the observation that, "notwithstanding the violent changes in Scottish history, there is much to indicate that the Scottish character is in reality more conservative than the English, and, where possible, clings more tenaciously to the forms of the past." Perhaps even the judicial and parliamentary systems need not have been excluded from the scope of this remark; for the Lords of Council and Session are, as the name implies, a venerable, if not an ancient body; and, though the Scottish Parliament passed away in 1707, the feudal character of its representation survived intact till 1832. Doubtless, however, it is a more striking fact that so mediæval an institution as the Scottish Staple at Campvere, or, as we now call it, Veere, should have continued till it was abolished by the Dutch Revolutionary Government in 1799.

In the third section, which is almost entirely the work of Mr. Gray, the nature of this institution is analyzed with remarkable thoroughness and precision. Unlike its namesake in English history, which was intended not to restrict, but to concentrate, foreign trade with a view to the easier collection of revenue, the Scottish Staple was the outcome of a system which confined oversea commerce to the merchant guilds of burghs holding of the Crown; and consequently it was regulated, not by the Government, but by the Convention of Royal Burghs, "the oldest representative body in Europe." On the other hand, though a group of privileged traders, it was not a company, and had both a broader and a higher status than the English Merchant Adventurers, for it represented as much of the nation as could legally participate in foreign trade; and as the royal burghs alone sustained the fiscal burdens of that traffic, it was brought into intimate relations with the State. So close, indeed, was this connexion that the Conservator of Scottish privileges at the Staple port was ultimately appointed not by the Convention, which, however, still claimed the right, but by the Crown; he was required to enforce commercial and even religious laws, and became in fact "His Majesty's Agent and Counsel" in the Low Countries. As head of the Scottish colony, he had the rights of jurisdiction formerly exercised by European consuls in Japan, and was expected to supervise the personal demeanour of his countrymen—to see, for example, that they observed the Sabbath, and did not compromise the dignity of their nation by appearing in their "evil worst clothes," or by carrying home their own purchases from market. The disposal of imported goods was entrusted to factors, who were forbidden—with no great success—to trade on their own account; and the merchants who frequented the port were required to reside in an inn known as the Conciery House, where they had the benefit of untaxed liquor. The Conservator's salary was discontinued in 1803; but the office survived as an honorary sinecure till 1847. Mr. Gray has derived much of his information from the municipal archives of Belgium and Holland.

Readers of this exhaustive treatise will appreciate the loss to scholarship which was involved in Prof. Davidson's untimely death. The Preface leaves us in doubt how far he had proceeded with his task; but we gather that he had written, at least in outline, the introductory and historical sections, and accumulated materials covering the whole field. The work is comprehensively planned, Mr. Gray having succeeded in preserving uniformity of style. It is, however, too often overburdened with unimportant, though not irrelevant, detail; and, having no table of contents and only an imperfect Index, is a mine of information not easily tapped.

Men of the Covenant. By Alexander Smellie. 2 vols. (Melrose.)—Half-a-dozen impressions have not exhausted the popularity of this work, and it now appears in the dignity of an édition de luxe, with a number of new portraits and sketches. From the literary point of view the honour is not undeserved. Dr. Smellie writes in a manner which is singularly appropriate to the dreamy and plaintive character of his book; picturesque diction and felicity of phrase are not wanting; and his pages are studded with allusions which bear witness to wide reading and a cultivated taste. The book, however, can be commended only for its style. To the present reviewer it is one of several indications that men who in times not remote would have been stern Presbyterians have faded, in the milder atmosphere of our own day, into sentimentalists who rear their palace of illusions on the shifting sands of historical research. Such a man—the most liberal of his type—was the late Dr. Watson, whose 'Scot of the Eighteenth Century' was reviewed in these columns on November 23rd, 1907; and such another is Dr. Smellie. One can hardly call him a partisan, for he is never dogmatic or controversial or bitter; but he has steeped his senses too deep in popular tradition to take an impartial view of history.

His book is one-sided in scope as well as in spirit. His "Men of the Covenant" are not drawn from the host which fought and conquered under that banner, but have been selected from the faithful few who persisted in the struggle after their symbol had been discarded and proscribed; and it is impossible to present a truthful account of the Covenanters when we regard them merely as victims, and not also as instruments of persecution. In a brief prologue the earlier history of the Covenant is indeed summarized. Here we are told that Scotland, at a time when the great bulk of the clergy were convinced Episcopalians, was "thirled to Calvinistic Presbyterianism"; and the Covenanters, when they had just subverted the constitution of Parliament, are described as jealous guardians of the King's "authority." Except for some perfunctory obeisance to the principle of toleration, Dr. Smellie's admiration of his heroes knows no bounds. The subscribers of the Solemn League ought not to have resorted to coercion; but "the ends which they sought"—the conversion of England from Episcopacy to Presbytery—"were sublime and sacred."

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MR. ANGUS HAMILTON, whose previous writings on Korea and Afghanistan have been noticed by The Athenæum, now publishes through Mr. Eveleigh Nash Problems of the Middle East. In this volume he writes concerning the Young Turks, the Baghdad Railway, our interests in the Persian Gulf, the Turkish railway through Arabia, and Japanese action in Korea. The most valuable part of the book is that upon the Baghdad Railway, and we commend the careful survey of Mr. Angus Hamilton upon a subject which he has considered with less partiality than most British writers. In his strictures on our agreement with Russia Mr. Angus Hamilton shows a nervousness about Afghanistan which will be weakened by study of the pages devoted by General Kuropatkin to the same subject. Mr. Hamilton is also more alarmed than seems to us reasonable about our position on the Persian Gulf. He exaggerates the difficulties with Germany which await us when the Baghdad Railway reaches the Turco-Persian frontier at the head of the Gulf. When, indeed, the railway makes its appearance on or near the Gulf, it will not be German, and it will be British, in a strategic sense. How a war could be waged with such a line of communications may be asked, with the certainty that the reply of any competent strategist must be that suggested by the pages of General Kuropatkin. Mr. Angus Hamilton believes in "keys." We are well aware that distinguished soldiers have given countenance to the "key" doctrine; as, for instance, in the case of "Herat, the key to India." The fact is, however, that such keys were never of the importance often attributed to them, and that modern changes have in no direction been more marked than in the diminution or suppression of the value of "keys" and fixed defences, and in the advance in favour of the field armies and the fleet. The non-strategic portion of Mr. Angus Hamilton's volume may be commended, especially that dealing with the Baghdad Railway in its commercial and narrowly political aspects.

STUDENTS of war and politics will welcome the appearance, in two volumes, of a translation by Capt. A. B. Lindsay of General Kuropatkin's The Russian Army and the Japanese War. The writings of the former Russian Minister of War, afterwards Commander-in-Chief in Manchuria, resemble those of Clausewitz in their repetitions and absence of arrangement. Just as the best translations of Clausewitz in French and English form wholly different works of high value, so the present book differs widely from Continental attempts to put Kuropatkin's views before the world. We have nothing but praise for the fashion in which, under the editorship of Major Swinton, Mr. John Murray issues these two volumes. In the Preface translator and editor frankly state the difficulties which have faced them in accomplishing their task. Kuropatkin was, we think, the best Minister of War, not excepting the more famous Miliutin, that Russia has ever found. From the days when as a young officer in Central Asia, Kuropatkin became known to Eugene Schuyler and other travellers, he was the hope of the Russian army. Col. Kireëff, the brother of Madame Novikoff, was a splendid soldier, but even more a great Slavophil politician; and Skobelev was too theatrical to be trusted. Kuropatkin, as Minister of War, made a profound impression on the best officers of the French Staff when he went to Paris to discuss strategic plans. Unlike most leading soldiers, Kuropatkin is too modest; and throughout his writings, as in his Orders of the Day addressed to the army during the Japanese War, has always been inclined to depreciate his own competence. Kuropatkin visited Japan before the war, and reported to the Emperor of Russia the excellence of the Japanese army and the folly of the Russian military attachés who had told their War Office what the Court wished to hear. In one matter only are we inclined to differ from his criticism. He believes that the older Japanese generals were not, as the Russian Staff had thought, unworthy of command in modern war. We have on a previous occasion called attention to the hints of the British officers attached to the Japanese forces, from which it appears that the Japanese possessors of the great war-names exalted by the newspapers were in fact generals of the bow-and-arrow type; brave patriots knowing exactly what to say in General Orders and in official Prayers, and having sufficient sense to allow management by young staff officers who modestly effaced themselves. It is not necessary that we should repeat the painful proof of the hopeless folly of the Russian counsels. The suppression in Russia of Kuropatkin's book is explained by his allusions to the pressure on the Emperor exercised by Bezobrazoff through the Grand Dukes. Moreover Kuropatkin asserts that the Emperor himself was a shareholder in the famous timber concession, the protection of which was the immediate cause of war. Incidentally Kuropatkin helps the "pacifists" of Europe by demonstrating the impossibility of a Great Power sitting down under the loss of European territory. He also shows that at no time could Russia have gone to war with England without risk even greater than that which she encountered in the case of Japan. Again, the Russian strategist teaches a useful lesson to France and to ourselves in his proof of the overwhelming importance of clear decision as to relative expenditure by each Power upon its armies and its fleets. Kuropatkin explains the advantage of sea transport against land transport by long lines such as our Canadian Pacific or the Russian Trans-Siberian railways; and he reassures India as regards the possibility of European Powers carrying on war with communications depending on such lines as the Trans-Caspian, the Baghdad, or the Arabian routes. No opponent of Russian policy has ever given an account of Russian international perfidy more depressing than is Kuropatkin's of the breach of pledge in the matter of the evacuation of Manchuria. Autocracy itself is hard hit by his elaborate proof of the fashion in which the Russian Emperor's firm intention, repeatedly expressed, to avoid war with Japan, was over-ruled "by his principal subordinates." The views of Mr. Spenser Wilkinson as to how great empires should sit down and count the cost before they go to war are powerfully supported by Kuropatkin in his description of "our ignorance of Japan's readiness for war, and her determination to support her contentions with armed force. We ourselves were not ready to fight, and resolved that it should not come to fighting. We made demands, but we had no intention of using weapons to enforce them—and, it may be added, they were not worth going to war about. We always thought, moreover, that the question whether there should be war or peace depended upon us."

As regards the actual fighting Kuropatkin's views may be briefly summarized by quotation:—

"There was in all ranks a great dearth of men of strong military character, with nerves tough enough to enable them to stand the strain of an almost continual battle lasting for several days. It is evident that neither our educational system nor our national life during the last forty to fifty years has been of a nature to produce men of strong independent characters, or more would have appeared in our army when wanted. Now the Tsar has given us the blessing of freedom."

Kuropatkin often alludes to the importance of the moral factor in modern wars, and names our South African campaign as one of the two which form an exception to his rule that the side with the strongest moral force (in this case, he thinks, the Boers) must undoubtedly prevail. He goes on to describe in the Russian Army

"the disgraceful conditions under which both men and officers were often taken prisoner.....There is only one thing which justifies capture—the fact of being wounded. All those who surrender when they have not been wounded should be tried by court-martial for not fighting to the last.....Commandants of fortresses who surrender them..... officers in command of units that lay down their arms, should be considered as forfeiting all rights, and should be condemned to be shot without trial."

Glimpses of the Twenties, by William Toynbee (Constable & Co.), is a readable, but superficial survey of the reign of George IV. Mr. Toynbee deals freely in scandal, and is no believer in elevated motives; but he has a good general knowledge of the period, and if many of his stories are old, they bear re-telling. He puts the case for George IV. with skill, without laying sufficient stress, perhaps, on the King's inveterate disingenuousness. A character of much more solid worth was Lord Liverpool, who, though destitute of showy qualities, showed unfailing tact and a considerable grasp of affairs. We agree with Mr. Toynbee that, had Liverpool been really the "arch-mediocrity" of Disraeli's gibe, he would never have kept, not only a Government, but also a party together during many momentous years. These "glimpses" do no more than justify their title; but, if their aim is modest, they certainly hit the mark.

Oh! Christina. By J. J. Bell. (Hodder & Stoughton.)—Mr. Bell's companion portrait to 'Wee Macgregor' is strong in local colour, and the humours of a marked Glasgow dialect. Scotophobes and other dull folk are warned off, but most people will, we think, appreciate the sterling and winning character that underlies the little rough husk of the Glasgow "keelie" of twelve. Christina is an orphan when she comes into the life of her gentle and "genteel" middle-aged aunt, who has been bred in the east-windy, west-endy city of Edinburgh. Miss Purvis keeps a fancy store and toyshop on the west coast, and cherishes an attachment for a middle-aged commercial traveller. Christina's too energetic efforts to extend the business and promote the love-affair lead to many humorous scenes; and there is nearly a tragedy when she almost kills her aunt by overturning the hair-oil ("Spirit of Love") which the child has bought as a philtre.

An annual volume which we have learnt to expect, Review of Historical Publications relating to Canada, by Prof. G. M. Wrong and Mr. H. H. Langton, reaches us from Messrs. Morang & Co. of Toronto. The first section, dealing with the political questions involved in the relations of Canada to the United Kingdom and the Empire, is of unusual importance. Both as regards the treaty-making power, and more recently, in respect of contribution towards the Navy, debates have taken place in the Dominion Parliament in which the future has been surveyed with boldness, but without decision. The view at one time espoused in Australia by Mr. Deakin and other statesmen, modified in the case of the Commonwealth by reflection and by time, is now dominant in Canadian thought. Many Imperialists of the Dominion have come to take a constitutional line not wholly dissimilar from that of French-Canadian politicians formerly accused of disloyalty and separatism. The "allied-nation" theory, pointing towards a mere personal union between independent crowns, worn by the King of England, Emperor of India, and reviving Sir Walter Raleigh's Virginian dream, attracts the authors of several of the books reviewed. Mr. Ewart, an eminent King's Counsel in an essay on 'The Kingdom of Canada,' supports this title, at one time recommended by Sir John Macdonald. Asserting that Canada is now virtually independent, Mr. Ewart thinks that the use of the kingly title would put an end to the idea that the status of Canada in the Empire is inferior to that of the United Kingdom. In expressing dissent from the tone of Mr. Ewart's attacks upon Mr. Chamberlain and the Lord Chief Justice of England, the editors admit the great value of a volume sound, they seem to think, in doctrine, although ungenerous towards Great Britain. We fail to understand how it is possible to concede to Canada the support of the Imperial Navy and of our full strength in war, if Canada is to obtain so complete a freedom as to be unpledged to join in "British wars." Sir Wilfrid Laurier's position is that maintained by Pennsylvania and others among the American Colonies from time to time in the eighteenth century. A refusal to pledge in advance aid to the mother-country in her wars is not, of course, inconsistent with the existence of a technical state of war in which a Dominion will confine herself to resisting when she is attacked. In the case, however, of a great war with a naval coalition it would be impossible to prevent the treatment of Canada by belligerents as an enemy, and to obtain for her any vestige of the neutral favoured position. Among French essays upon Canada the editors note an attempt on the part of several writers to put forward the Province of Quebec as a field for French emigration. This year's 'Review of Historical Publications relating to Canada' does not contain so much archæology and such interesting matter relating to the early history of the American Indians as did previous volumes; but this is, of course, mere accident, and there is no trace of falling-off in a book which is a credit to the Dominion and all concerned.

The Ideas of a Plain Country Woman. By the Country Contributor. (Constable & Co.)—In a preface by Mr. E. Bok we are told that the papers written for The Ladies' Home Journal by "A Country Contributor," and presumably incorporated in the volume under consideration, "have been more widely read, and are to-day more popular, than the writings of any single contributor to the magazine." Without being in any way remarkable, the little book is pleasant enough after a bright, chatty fashion, plentifully besprinkled with anecdote, and rich in that profusion of small details perennially dear to the feminine heart. Moreover, the writer displays a liberal proportion of "horse-sense," together with a lively appreciation of the blessings of things as they are. Her lot, she tells us, was cast on the ragged edge of a little Indiana town, and, in spite of poverty and an undomestic husband, it would appear to have been singularly happy. House-cleaning, sewing, cooking, the duty and pleasure of work, the pleasure and duty of idleness—all is fish that comes to her optimistic net. To "scare up something for dinner" is good; so are "Easter flowers blooming, and blessed robins hopping about." The author has a fine intolerance of any other sort of existence than her own. On the whole, these brisk little essays may be summed up as the exposition of a hearty, wholesome, self-assertive personality—one who has lived, laughed, loved, and liked life well.

PROF. ANDRÉ MATER, of the new University of Brussels, is responsible for a volume entitled Le Socialisme conservateur ou municipal, published by MM. V. Giard & E. Brière of Paris. In its more than 600 pages will be found an enormous mass of matter dealing with every branch of municipal activity; but the Index is conspicuously defective, and the book would be improved by rearrangement. M. Mater is a supporter of the Collectivism of the towns, and in his Introduction and Conclusion gives for his faith non-political reasons similar to those commonly expressed by Bailies of Glasgow and other Conservative councillors of our great cities. In the body of his work, however, Prof. Mater traces the history of the village community and the developments of modern Socialistic ideas in a different fashion; so that the volume as a whole will fail to carry conviction to those classes on the Continent to whom it is addressed. Incidentally there is an interesting history of the doctrine of betterment and of the theory of the single tax. Traces of these supposed modern principles are found by our author in the local laws and the edicts of the King's Council of the ancien régime in France; and he shows that some of the most advanced among the laws of Napoleon were mere codifications of ancient usage. The extent to which taxation on improved land values has been carried in Germany is startling, if we are to trust the statistics here quoted from French economists. The local income tax is very high in the Prussian towns, and we are amazed to read that the tax on the increased value of town lands forms 36 per cent of the revenues of Berlin, and 61 per cent of those of Altona. The Bibliography appended, and the foot-notes, do something to make up for that extraordinary imperfection of the Index to which we have called attention.

SONGS OF CYMRU.

(After Ceiriog's 'Alun Mabon'.)

Songs of Cymru, through the years
Sounding still upon our ears;
Gay or grieving, loud or low,
Down the mountain wind they go;
Songs the old folk ever sung
Round the hearth when we were young.

Songs of love that set the leaves
Sighing round our cottage eaves;
Fragments fierce of battle tunes
Tempest-flung across the dunes;
Psalm and hymn the Cymro hears
In the music of the spheres!

Still the mountains stand rockfast,
Still around them roars the blast;
At the blueing of the day
Still outpours the pastoral lay;
Underneath the frowning scaur
Still the daisy lights her star;
But the sun and moon behold
Other shepherds than the old.

Over cottage, church, and grange
Steals the silent hand of Change;
Like the ocean's ebb and flow,
Generations come and go.
Life's tempestuous struggle o'er,
Alun Mabon is no more;
But unto the dear old tongue
Still the dear old songs are sung.

ALFRED PERCEVAL GRAVES.

WHITLEY STOKES.

OTHERS than myself will, I feel sure, think that the obituary notice in your last number does scant justice to the unique character of the late scholar's achievement. It was of a twofold character. He was the ablest of the successors of Zeuss in the task of establishing Celtische Philologie (which means so much more than Celtic philology) upon a rigidly scientific basis. In addition he did more than any other man to make Irish mediæval literature accessible to the world at large by providing texts, edited with the utmost accuracy, and translations equally admirable for their faithfulness and their literary quality. Thanks to him the earliest remains of Irish Christian literature, accompanied with a wealth of explanatory and auxiliary comment, are available in his editions of the Patrician 'Corpus,' and of the 'Félire.' The most archaic fragments of Irish pre-Christian myth and saga are accessible in his editions of the 'Dinnshenchas,' and the 'Coir Anmann.' The imrama literature, perhaps the most characteristic and influential branch of Irish fiction, was revealed by his editions of 'Maoldun' and the minor imrama. In the 'Battle of Moytura' he has given us what is almost the solitary remnant of Irish mythic history before it suffered a process of Christianizing euhemerism. To him we owe it that we can consult one of the oldest and most interesting of native chroniclers, Tigernach. In the 'Death of Cuchulinn' and in 'Bruden dá Derga' he made accessible the most noble episode of Irish heroic epos, and what is in many respects the most valuable text of the epic literature for the student who wishes to understand its nature and development. In works like the 'Amra' attributed to Dallan Forgaill, and the 'Dialogue of the Two Sages,' he (and he alone could have done it), interpreted texts which are of first-class importance to the student of the historical development of Irish letters; and in his editions of the oldest glossaries he provided material of even greater importance for the historian and the folk-lorist. The rich series of small historico-heroic cycles assigned to periods dating from the fourth century B.C. ('The Destruction of Dind Rig'), to the fourth century A.D. (the tales connected with Nial of the Nine Hostages and his kin) were all sampled by him. To him is due the largest collection of native hagiology of the later mediæval period. Finally, in the somewhat thankless task of editing and translating the texts translated or imitated from classical or Romance models, he has provided most valuable material for the exact study of Irish lexicology, literary history, and style in the eleventh to the fourteenth centuries.

It was Whitley Stokes's practice to provide the texts he issued with valuable indices illustrating their Realien as well as their linguistic features. An analytic digest of this material would yield a basis upon which many outline chapters of a sketch of Irish culture could for the first time be reared.

It was his supreme merit, from the point of view of the lover of literature, that by his example he banished the inferior Johnsonese in which, prior to him, the native literature had, with few exceptions, been presented to the English reader. His style was simple, strong, vivid, and picturesque, doing full justice to the literary quality of his originals, and yet representing them faithfully and accurately. If it were necessary to choose between the body of texts which he has edited and rendered, and the texts due to all other scholars working during his lifetime, the choice of the instructed student would be in his favour.

ALFRED NUTT.

AMATEUR PRINTING.

The King's School, Ely, Cambs, April, 1909.

I SHOULD feel grateful if any of the readers of The Athenæum could supply me with the titles, &c., of any books printed by the authors at their own private presses. I propose to issue a bibliographical clue to as many privately printed books as I can hear of; and it is my wish to include only such as have been set up and printed by amateur printers, without professional assistance. Replies should be sent direct to the King's School, Ely. E. H. BLAKENEY,

Hon. Sec., Amateur Printers' Association.

'DORANDO: A SPANISH TALE.'

The Signet Library, Edinburgh, April 15, 1909.

I HAVE been interested in the correspondence in your columns on this subject. The rarity of the work appears to have been greatly exaggerated by writers on Boswell. Mr. W. Keith Leask in his 'Life of Boswell' in the 'Famous Scots Series' says "no copy of this forlorn hope of the book-hunter has ever been found"; and Mr. Augustine Birrell in his essay on 'Boswell as Biographer' in 'In the Name of the Bodleian,' &c., gives expression to the same statement, adding that he does not, however, despair of reading 'Dorando' before he dies! Your correspondents have traced copies of each of the three editions published in 1767, and it may interest students of Boswell to know that there is a copy of the first edition in this Library. The volume is a small quarto, and has the same imprint as is quoted by Mr. J. T. T. Brown in your issue of March 27th for the second edition. The height of the volume (letterpress) is 21.2cm.

I understand there is also a copy in the Edinburgh University Library.

It may be of further interest to students of Boswell to know that the Signet Library contains his pamphlet entitled 'The Essence of the Douglas Cause,' also published by Wilkie in 1767; and 'The Speeches, Arguments, and Determinations of... the Lords of Council and Session in Scotland upon that Important Cause,' &c., by a Barrister at Law, Lond., 1767; and a reprint of the same, entitled 'A Summary of the Speeches, Arguments,' &c., Glasgow, 1767.

JOHN MINTO.

 We cannot publish any more correspondence on Boswell's book, the rarity of which has clearly been over-estimated.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Bigg (C.), The Origins of Christianity, 12/6 net. Edited by T. B. Strong.
Faith and Works of Christian Science, by the writer of 'Confessio Medici,' 3/6 net.
Gogery (D.), Ceylon Buddhism, 10/6 net. Collected writings, edited by A. S. Bishop.
Haldeman (L. M.), Christian Science in the Light of Holy Scripture, 5/ net.
Hibbert Journal, April.
Johnston (C. N.), St. Paul and his Mission to the Roman Empire. The volume seeks to interest men and women in the story of the great Apostle.
King (H. C.), The Laws of Friendship, Human and Divine, 5/ net. The Haverford Library Lectures.
Knight (Prof.), Things New and Old, 5/ net. Sunday addresses delivered at Thornton Castle and elsewhere.
Patterson (Rev. M. W.), A History of the Church of England, 7/6 net.
Rogers (A.), Prophecy and Poetry, 4/6 net. Studies in Isaiah and Browning. The Bohlen Lectures for 1909.
Stone (H. M.), The Witness of the Heart, and other Sermons, 4/6 net.
Trumper (Mrs. J.), The God of the Bible, 2/6 net.
Wenley (R. M.), Modern Thought and the Crisis in Belief, 6/6 net. The Baldwin Lectures, 1909.
Whittaker (T.), The Origins of Christianity, 2/6 net. With an outline of Van Manen's analysis of the Pauline literature. Second Edition, with an appendix on Galatians.

Law.

- Bryan (J. W.), Development of the English Law of Conspiracy. One of the Johns Hopkins University Studies.
Stephenson (C. H. S.), A Study of the Law of Mortgages, 7/6 net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Hampshire, painted by Wilfrid Ball, described by Rev. Telford Varley, 20/ net.
Hayden (A.), Chats on English Earthenware, 5/ net. With a coloured frontispiece and 150 illustrations, and tables of over 200 marks.
Konody (P. G.), Brockwell (M. W.), and Lippmann (F. W.), The National Gallery, Part XI, 1/ net. With illustrations in colour.
Liverpool University, Annals of Archaeology and Anthropology, Vol. I. Edited by J. L. Myers in collaboration with F. P. Barnard, R. C. Bosanquet, and others. Issued by the Institute of Archaeology.
Nevill (Ralph), British Military Prints. Contains 146 illustrations.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Allen (I. S.), The Garden of Love, and other Poems, 3/6 net.
Cameron (W. J.), Poems, 3/6 net.
Goll (August), Criminal Types in Shakespeare, 5/ net. Authorized translation from the Danish by Mrs. Charles Weekes.
Jameson (G. M.), A Garland of Pansies, 1/
Middleton (T.) and Rowley (W.), The Spanish Gipsie, and All's Lost by Lust, 2/6 net. Edited by Edgar C. Morris. One of the Belles-Lettres Series.
Monroe (Anita), A Rosary of Sonnets, and other Poems, 1/
Nichols (W. B.), Date Lilia, 1/ net. An elegy on Swinburne.
Otway (T.), The Orphan, and Venice Preserved, 2/6 net. Edited by Charles F. McClumpha. Another of the Belles-Lettres Series.
Shakespeare for Home Reading: Hamlet, and As You Like It, 1/ each. Edited by K. Ilarvey.
Shelley (P. B.), Select Poems, 2/6 net. Edited, with introduction and notes, by George E. Woodberry. Also in the Belles-Lettres Series.

Taylor (Maurice), Songs of Solitude, 3/6 net. A collection of verse.

Toynbee (Paget), Dante in English Literature from Chaucer to Cary (c. 1380-1844), 2 vols., 21/ net. With introduction, notes, biographical notices, chronological list, and general index.

Music.

Graves (C. L.), Musical Monstrosities, 1/ net. Illustrated by George Morrow.

Rix (F. R.), A Manual of School Music in Elementary Grades, 4/6 net. For supervisors and class teachers.

Songs and other Shadow-Pictures for the Child-World: Verses by R. Butler, Music by J. L. Gaynor, 4/ net. Illustrated.

Songs of the Child-World: Words by A. C. D. Riley, Music by J. L. Gaynor. Nos. 1 and 2, 5/ each.

Bibliography.

Classified Catalogue of Works published by Longmans, Green & Co.

Classified List of Smithsonian Publications available for Distribution, March, 1909.

Philosophy.

Cronin (Michael), The Science of Ethics: Vol. I. General Ethics, 12/6 net.

Nietzsche (F.), Beyond Good and Evil, 3/6 net. Translated by Helen Zimmern, with an introduction by Thomas Common.—The Birth of Tragedy; or, Hellenism and Pessimism, 2/6 net. Translated by William Haussmann, with biographical introduction by Mrs. Förster-Nietzsche, the philosopher's sister.—Thoughts out of Season: Part I. David Strauss, the Confessor and the Writer, Richard Wagner in Bayreuth, translated by Anthony M. Ludovici; Part II. The Use and Abuse of History, Schopenhauer as Educator, translated by Adrian Collins, 2/6 net each.

Ridsdale (A. C.), Modern Metaphysical Philosophy, 3/ net.

Stewart (J. A.), Plato's Doctrine of Ideas, 6/ net.

Political Economy.

Chomley (C. H.) and Outhwaite (R. L.), The Essential Reform: Land Values Taxation in Theory and Practice, 1/ net.

Meyer (Mrs. C.) and Black (C.), Makers of our Clothes, 5/ net. A case for Trade Boards. The results of a year's investigation into the work of women in London in the tailoring, dressmaking, and underclothing trades.

Socialism and National Minimum, by Mrs. S. Webb, Miss B. L. Hutchins, and the Fabian Society, 6d. net. In the Fabian Socialist Series.

History and Biography.

American Historical Review, April. Edited by J. Franklin Jameson and others.

Callender (G. A. R.), Sea Kings of Britain: Albemarle to Hawke, 3/6. Short lives of great admirals, with maps and plans.

Channing (E.) and Lansing (M. F.), The Story of the Great Lakes, 6/6 net. With maps and illustrations, a portrait of La Salle following the frontispiece.

Conway (Moncure D.), The Life of Thomas Paine, Part I., 6d.

Eames (J. Bromley), The English in China, 20/ net. An account of the intercourse and relations between England and China from 1600 to 1843, and a summary of later developments.

English Historical Review, April, 5/

Gray (Thomas), The Buried City of Kenfig, 10/6 net. History of a buried town, Margam Abbey, and other records. Illustrated.

Hawker (G.), The Life of George Grenfell, Congo Missionary and Explorer, 6/ net. With photogravure portrait, maps, and illustrations from photographs.

Lubbock (P.), Samuel Pepys, 3/6. With 9 illustrations. One of the Literary Lives Series.

Lyte (Sir H. C. Maxwell), A History of Dunster and of the Families of Mohun and Luttrell, 2 parts, 30/ net. Illustrated.

Myers (Jack M.), The Story of the Jewish People, Vol. I., 1/6 net. A history of the Jewish people since Bible times, with maps and numerous illustrations, and a prefatory note by the Chief Rabbi.

Thomas (C.), A History of German Literature, 6/

Geography and Travel.

Cain (Georges), Walks in Paris, 7/6 net. Translated by Alfred Allinson. Contains a frontispiece in colour by Maxwell Armfield, and 118 other illustrations and plans.

Directory of the Chief Industries of India, Ceylon, and the Straits Settlements, 1909, 9/ net.

Floating Hotel, No. I., May, 3d. A monthly magazine devoted to travel by sea.

Mann (A.), Yachting on the Pacific, 6/. Contains also notes on travel in Peru, and an account of the peoples and products of Ecuador.

Pullen-Burby (B.), In a German Colony; or, Four Weeks in New Britain, 5/ net. With 8 illustrations and 2 maps.

Thacker's Calcutta Directory, City and Suburbs, 1909, 7/6 net.

Vaile (P. A.), Y: America's Peril, 6/ net. Some account of the American as he impressed the author.

Walker (H.), Stamford, with its Surroundings, 1/ net. Including an account of Burghley House and Park, with a special chapter on the churches of Stamford by E. W. Lovegrove. Illustrated with photographs.

Sports and Pastimes.

Kennel Encyclopædia: Vol. III., Part 2—O—R., 5/ net.

Nisbet's Golf Year-Book, 1909, 2/6 net. Edited by John L. Low.

Vaile (P. A.), Modern Golf, 7/6 net. Illustrated.

Education.

Allen (J. W.), The Place of History in Education, 5/ net.

Spiller (Gustav), Report on Moral Instruction (General and Denominational), and on Moral Training in the Schools of Austria, Belgium, the British Empire, &c., 3/6 net.

Philology.

Arthur (C.) and Ginever (I.), Hungarian Grammar, 4/6 net.

Ciceronis Orationes. Edited by A. Curtis Clark. One of the Scriptorum Classicorum Bibliotheca Oxoniensis. Eight of Cicero's Orations are included.

Dalbiac (Lilian), Dictionary of Quotations: German, 3/6 net. With indexes of authors and subjects. New Edition.

School-Books.

Cavers (F.), Botany for Matriculation, 5/6. University Tutorial Series.

Edwards (W.), Notes on British History: Part I. Pre-historic Times to Richard III., 1485; Part II. The Beginning of Modern History, 1485-1600, 2/ net each.

Deal with the leading events of European history, the great events of the Middle Ages, and the geographical discoveries of the sixteenth century.

Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, and Philemon, 1/6 net. Edited by W. K. Lowther Clarke. Part of the Cambridge Bible for Schools.

Fisher (Emma), Dornröschen: ein Märchenspiel in vier Scenen, 6d. net.

Franks (C.), French Nouns Coupled, 2/. An easy means of fixing their gender.

Hugo (Victor), Selected Poems, 2/6. Edited, with introductions and notes, by A. Schinz. One of Heath's Modern Language Series.

Reichenbach (Mathilde), Das Rothkäppchen: Spiel in fünf Scenen, 6d. net.

Reinhard (P. B. et Ph.), First Lessons in French, 1/6. Adapted for the use of English pupils by Grace Sandwith.

Sudermann's Johannes: Tragödie in fünf Akten und einem Vorspiel, 1/6. Edited, with introduction and notes, by F. G. Schmidt. Another of Heath's Modern Language Series.

Science.

Antimony: its History, Chemistry, Mineralogy, &c., by Chung Yu Wang, 12/6 net. Illustrated.

Armstrong (Prof. H. E.), Low-Temperature Research at the Royal Institution, 1900-7.

Badgley (W. F.), Heat and other Forces, 5/ net.

Coburn (F. D.), Swine in America, 12/6 net.

Crabtree (Harold), An Elementary Treatment of the Theory of Spinning Tops and Gyroscopic Motion, 5/6 net.

Finn (F.), Wild Beasts of the World, Part 13, 1/ net. With illustrations in colour by L. Sargent, C. E. Swan, and W. Austen.

Garrod (A. E.), Inborn Errors of Metabolism, 3/6 net. The Croonian Lectures, 1908.

Godman (F. du Cane), A Monograph of the Petrels (Order Tubinares), Part IV. With hand-coloured plates by J. G. Keulemans.

Hay (J.), Graphic Methods in Heart Disease, 7/6 net. One of the Oxford Medical Publications.

Hunter (W.), Severest Anemias: their Infective Nature, Diagnosis, and Treatment, Vol. I., 10/ net.

Johnston (J.), Wastage of Child Life, as exemplified by Conditions in Lancashire, 6d. net. In the Fabian Socialist Series.

Lane (C. B.), The Business of Dairying, 6/6 net.

Lane (W. A.), The Operative Treatment of Chronic Constipation, 2/6 net.

Lea (F. C.), Hydraulics, 15/ net. For engineers and engineering students.

Louis (H.), The Dressing of Minerals, 30/ net. Illustrated. Nature Book, Vol. II., 12/ net. Illustrated. For review of Vol. I. see Athen., Dec. 12, 1908, p. 765.

O'Toole (I.), Tables of Seamless Copper Tubes, 3/6 net.

Shelford (F.), Pioneering, 3/ net.

Smith (J. Walker), Dustless Roads: Tar Macadam, 10/6 net.

A practical treatise for engineers, surveyors, and others.

Still (G. F.), Common Disorders and Diseases of Childhood, 15/ net. Another of the Oxford Medical Publications.

Taylor (W. T.), Stationary Transformers, 6/6 net.

Van Slyke (L. L.) and Publow (C. A.), The Science and Practice of Cheese-Making, 9/ net.

Ward (H. Marshall), Trees: Vol. V. Form and Habit, 4/6 net.

A handbook of forest-botany for the woodlands and the laboratory, with an appendix on seedlings. Illustrated. For notice of Vol. III. see Athen., Aug. 26, 1905, p. 280.

Warning (Eug.) and Vahl (M.), Ecology of Plants, 8/6 net.

An introduction to the study of plant-communities, prepared for publication in English by Percy Groom and I. B. Balfour.

Whitelocke (R. H. Anglin), Sprains and Allied Injuries of Joints, 7/6 net. Also in the Oxford Medical Publications.

Wright (H. J. and W. P.), Beautiful Flowers and How to Grow Them, Part 12, 1/ net. With illustrations in colour.

Juvenile Books.

Brown (Rev. C.), The Children on the King's Highway, 2/6.

Talks with young people on the second part of 'The Pilgrim's Progress,' with full-page illustrations by Harold Copping.

Litchfield (May), Floral Fairy Tales for Little Folk: No. I. A Wild Rose, 1/ net. Illustrated by W. N. Shillingford.

Fiction.

Bendall (Gerard), The Old Home, 6/

Cleeve (Lucas), The Arbitrator, 6/

Cotton-Walker (Frances M.), Cloister to Court, 3/6. Tells the life of Princess Charlotte of Bourbon, youngest daughter of the Duc de Montpensier, from her entrance as an unwilling postulant into the Convent of Jouarre (of which she eventually became Abbess) to her escape and subsequent marriage with William the Silent, Prince of Orange, and Founder of the Dutch Republic.

Crawford (F. Marion), The White Sister, 6/. The scenes are laid in Rome, and the heroine is Angela, the beautiful daughter of the Prince Chiaramonte, an aristocratic old adherent of the clerical party, "more Papist than the Pope."

Doyle (Mina), The Story of Felicity, 6/. With a frontispiece by R. Easton Stuart.

Garnett (Mrs. R. S.), The Infamous John Friend, 6/. The story of a spy.

Gould (Nat), The Jockey's Revenge, 2/. One of the author's many sporting stories.

Griffiths (Major Arthur), A Woman of Business, 6d. New Edition.

Halifax (R.), The Shadow of Mayfair, 6/. A story of political crime.

Harvey (Marie), Satan, K.C., 6/

Heilgers (H.), Stephen the Man, 6/. Has to do with the jealousy existing between the wife and the former mistress of "a whisky lord."

Loken (Henri), Raveltoft, 6/. A story of the Orkneys.

Marsh (Frances), The Iron Game, 6/. A story of the Franco-Prussian War, founded partly on historical works, and partly on personal narratives of friends who served on battle-fields, in the streets of Paris, or by tending the wounded.

Meade (L. T.), The Necklace of Parmona, 6/. Illustrated by A. Forestier.

Pugh (L.), Peter Vandy, 6/. A biography in outline.

Tearle (Christian), Holborn Hill, 6/. A story of Nelson's day.

Vachell (H. Annesley), An Impending Sword, 2/6 net. An adventure by the sea.

Watson (Helen H.), The Captain's Daughter, 6/. A tale of homely life in a scholastic set.

Wood (M.), The Riddle, 1/. A story concerned with religion.

General Literature.

Andujar (Manuel), Spain of To-day from Within, 3/6 net. Illustrated.

Brontë Society Transactions, Part XIX. Contains report of proceedings at Sheffield and Harrogate, papers read before the Society, and the Fifteenth Annual Report.

Christian (E. B. V.), Leaves of the Lower Branch, 6/ net. Sketches of the attorney as depicted in literature, and of the work done in literature by solicitors. The sketches range from a humorous defence of Dodson & Fogg to more serious studies in books. Illustrated.

Clausewitz (General Carl von), On War, 7/6 net. Translated by Miss Maguire, with Notes by T. Miller Maguire.

Clough (E. M. O.), The South African Parliamentary Manual, 15/ net.

Cobden-Sanderson (T. J.), Credo, 21/. One of the Doves Press productions.

Curzon (Lord), Principles and Methods of University Reform, 2/6 net. A letter addressed to the University of Oxford.

Dickinson (G. A.), Your Boy: his Nature and Nurture, 3/6. Chapters on boys and the best way of training them.

Edinburgh Review, April, 6/. Includes articles on Halley's comet, Carducci's poetry, Pragmatism, and 'Two Canadian Poets.'

Fogarty (Elsie) and Nankivell (Amy), Monologues for Recitation, 6d. net.

Forbes (Athol), The Romance of Smuggling, 2/6

Hart's Annual Army List, 1909, 21/

Higgins (P.) and Conolly (F. V.), The Irish in America, 6d. Part of the Irish Library.

Jones (S.), The Town Councillor's Handbook, 2/6 net.

Kelly's Directory of the Engineers and Iron and Metal Trades and Colliery Proprietors, 30/

Kelly's Directory of the Watch and Clock Trades, 20/

St. Maur (K. V.), The Earth's Bounty, 7/6 net. An account of life and work on a small farm. With many illustrations from photographs.

Munro (W. B.), The Government of European Cities, 10/6 net. The purpose of the volume is to explain, in a general way, the structure and functions of city government in three European countries, and to contrast these, wherever they may be appropriately compared, with the structure and functions of city government in the United States.

Paine's Political Writings during the American and French Revolutions, 6d. Edited, with an introduction, by H. P. Bradlaugh Bonner.

Servia by the Servians, 12/6 net. Edited by Alfred Stead, with a map. A collection of articles from authoritative sources.

Skot (Bob), A Brief Account of Gypsy History, Persecutions, Character, and Customs, 2/6 net. With examples of gypsy melodies.

Pamphlets.

Nansen (Dr. Fridtjof), Science and the Purpose of Life, 1d. An address delivered before the Social and Political Education League.

FOREIGN.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Lesage (L.), Souvenirs du vieux Paris, 6fr.

Vesly (L. de), Les Fana: petits Temples gallo-romains de la Région Normande, 6fr.

Poetry and Drama.

Borodine (Myrrha), La Femme et l'Amour au douzième Siècle d'après les Poèmes de Chrétien de Troyes, 5fr.

History and Biography.

Dino (Duchesse de), Chronique de 1831 à 1862: Tome II. 1836-40, 7fr. 50. Edited by Princess Radziwill. For review of Vol. I. see Athen., Dec. 12, 1908, p. 759.

Geography and Travel.

Marc (Lieut. L.), Le Pays Mossi: Le Pays et les Peuples de la Partie centrale de la Bouche du Niger, 6fr.

Radet (E.), En Sicile: quelques Impressions d'Art et de Nature, 4fr.

Education.

Dugas (L.), Le Problème de l'Éducation, 5fr.

Fiction.

Bricon (É.), Les Anxiétés de Thérèse Lesieure, 3fr. 50. Told in the form of letters.

General Literature.

France (Anatole), Le génie latin, 6fr. An allocation at the Sorbonne on April 3. Limited edition.

Pamphlets.

Ulaszyn (H.), An die Leser des Archivs für slavische Philologie.

Valori (Elena), 'Il Vaso di Basilico' e la Novella di Lisabetta da Messina: Keats e Boccaccio. Reprinted from the Rivista delle Biblioteche e degli Archivi.

 All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

A SHORT memoir of Sir Redvers Buller, by Mr. Lewis Butler, late captain in the King's Royal Rifle Corps, will be published immediately by Messrs. Smith & Elder. Mr. Butler has elaborated the work from the memoir which he contributed to the 'Chronicle' of the Rifle Corps, having had access to a considerable number of private documents. The book contains three portraits of Buller, and a facsimile of a letter he wrote to his wife on his entry into Ladysmith.

'A MINSTREL IN THE SOUTH' is the title of the volume of short poems by Miss Millicent Wedmore, which the same firm are about to issue. Although the gay verses called 'Jarjaille of Arles,' which appear in the new number of The Cornhill, will be included, the greater number of the thirty poems are of a more serious kind.

MESSRS. METHUEN have arranged with Sir Harry Johnston to publish in the course of the present year a work entitled 'The Negro in the New World.' The book will be the result of Sir Harry's recent journeys in the United States, West Indies, and Tropical America, some episodes of which have been described in The Times; but it will attempt to treat the question of the present position and future of the negro and "coloured" man in the New World more scientifically than was possible in the pages of a newspaper. The book will be copiously illustrated by a selection from the mass of photographs and drawings which Sir Harry Johnston brought back from America.

THE longest article in the forthcoming Classical Review will deal with 'The Teaching of Latin and the Fundamental Conceptions of Syntax,' and is by Dr. W. H. Russell, Inspector of High Schools, Cape Colony. Mr. Edmunds contributes a restoration of the new fragment of Alcæus: and Mr. T. Rice Holmes brings forward weighty reasons in favour of Wissant as Cæsar's starting-point for the invasion of Britain, as against Boulogne, which he had previously favoured. The information collected in Capt. Desbrière's work on Napoleon's plans for the invasion of England has compelled Mr. Holmes to reconsider the whole question.

A CONCORDANCE to Wordsworth, prepared by Prof. Lane Cooper of Cornell University, with the assistance of several collaborators, and under the auspices of the Concordance Society, will probably be ready for publication by July 1st, though no steps have yet been taken to secure a publisher. The text selected is that of the Oxford 'Wordsworth,' edited by Mr. Thomas Hutchinson, supplemented by the editions of Mr. Nowell Smith and Prof. Knight. The general plan is that of the concordance to Gray, noticed by us on February 27th.

WE regret to notice the death on Monday of Dr. Marcus Dods, Principal of the United Free Church College, Edinburgh, since 1907. After a period spent in commercial life, he studied for the ministry of the Free Church, and from 1864 until 1889 was minister of Renfield Free Church, Glasgow, when he was appointed Professor of New Testament Theology in the Free Church College. Later he was appointed Principal of the same College, and retired from the duties recently owing to failing health. He was a contributor to 'The Encyclopædia Britannica' on theological subjects, to the Expositor, Bookman, and British Weekly, and the list of volumes he wrote on Biblical subjects is long.

THE death is also announced, in his sixty-sixth year, of Mr. Charles Warren Stoddard, since 1889 Professor of English Literature in the Catholic University, Washington. He was born at Rochester, New York State, in 1843, and became in turn actor and journalist. For seven years he was travelling correspondent of The San Francisco Chronicle, five of which were spent in the South Seas. Prof. Stoddard's publications included several volumes of poems, a book on 'The Lepers of Molokai' (1885), 'Lazy Letters from Low Latitudes' (1894), 'A Cruise under the Crescent from Suez to San Marco' (1898), and 'For the Pleasure of his Company' (1903).

IN accordance with the Irish Universities Act of last year, the Belfast University Commission will proceed to elect at an early date Professors in Modern History, Economics, French and Romance Philology, Jurisprudence and Roman Law, and Botany. A number of Readerships or Lectureships will also be created in English, Archæology, Celtic, two sections of Philosophy and of Chemistry, Physics, and Geology and Mineralogy. Information concerning these posts may be had from Mr. Arthur Jaffé, Secretary to the Commissioners.

A BUST of the poet Mangan, the work of Mr. Oliver Sheppard, will be unveiled in Dublin next Monday, the anniversary of the poet's birth. It has been erected by the National Literary Society of Ireland, and will occupy a site in St. Stephen's Green Park.

MM. GOUPIL & CIE. are preparing an elaborate edition of Anatole France's 'Vie de Jeanne d'Arc' in four volumes, which will be provided with numerous illustrations. The first volume is expected to appear in September next.

At the recent Council meeting of the Canterbury and York Society, with Mr. Justice Joyce in the chair, the Archbishop of York accepted the joint presidency of the Society. Mr. Herbert Chitty was appointed Hon. Treasurer in the place of the late Mr. Hilton Price. The vacancy on the Council was filled by the appointment of Mr. R. C. Fowler of the Public Record Office. Mr. Fowler has made considerable progress with the transcript of Bishop Baldock's register, 1306-13, the first of the London series. Instalments of the registers of Archbishop Pecham and Archbishop Parker will shortly be issued.

THE 195,250 francs paid last Saturday at the Hôtel Drouot for the Vicomte de Janzé's copy of Molière's 'Œuvres,' 1773, seems to be the highest price ever paid at auction for a printed book. This edition is undoubtedly the most beautiful of all the many issues of Molière, and contains thirty-three original drawings in sepia for the illustrations.

CRITICISM of one's own forthcoming work by telegram (republished in facsimile) is a recent form of advertisement. The work in question is described as "best tale I have done so far." Inspired paragraphs have made this announcement hardly convincing, for we seldom hear of an author's latest work which is not also his best.

THE REV. J. O. BEVAN has just written a work on 'The Genesis and Evolution of the Individual Soul,' which Messrs. Williams & Norgate will be publishing early this month. The author adopts a scientific method, so far as it is applicable, and boldly attacks the problems of individuality and immortality.

MR. JOHN LANE will publish in the course of next week 'Joan of the Hills,' a novel by Mr. T. B. Clegg, who is known as an Australian writer. The present story opens in London, but Mr. Clegg is soon back in Australia, describing life on a remote station in the bush.

A TABLET is to be erected, at the end of this month, to Mrs. Piozzi, better known as Johnson's Mrs. Thrale, in Tremeirchion Church, where she was buried in 1821. Its erection is due to Mr. O. B. Fellowes, whose grandfather was her executor.

THE monthly meeting of the Board of Directors of the Booksellers' Provident Institution was held on the 15th inst., when 125*l.* was voted for the relief of members and their widows. Three new members were elected; and donations from the Society for Promoting Christian Knowledge, Mr. John Murray, and Mr. A. H. Hallam Murray were received.

WORCESTERSHIRE is to be the subject of the next volume in Messrs. Black's series of Colour Books. The county is one of singular interest, both in scenery and historic associations. Mr. A. G. Bradley is responsible for the text, and Mr. Thomas Tyndale for the illustrations.

MR. FOSTER FRASER's new book 'Quaint Subjects of the King' describes the varied and strange tribes which inhabit the most distant parts of the Empire. The work is illustrated with 77 reproductions from photographs, and will be published by Messrs. Cassell immediately.

RECENT Government Papers of interest to our readers are: Accounts of the Lord High Treasurer of Scotland, Vol. VIII., 1541-6 (10*s.*); Statistical Report of the University of Edinburgh (2*d.*); Annual Report of the Registrar-General on Births, Deaths, and Marriages, Scotland, 1908 (7*d.*); and Return showing Money spent in the Erection of New Buildings and Extension of Existing Buildings for National Museums (½*d.*).

SCIENCE

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

A Monograph of the Petrels (Order Tubin-ares). By F. Du Cane Godman. Illustrated by J. G. Keulemans. Parts I. and II. (Witherby.)—The Order Tubinares has in recent years been inseparably associated with the name of the late O. Salvin, and the present ambitious work owes its inception to the synopsis published by him twelve years ago. The magnificent series of coloured plates already in preparation has been finished under the direction of the President of the British Ornithologists' Union, and the outcome is a monograph to be completed in five parts. It is stated that the edition will be strictly limited to 225 copies. Few, indeed, are able to make a first-hand study of this fine order of oceanic birds, which for the most part approach the coasts only when casually driven there under stress of weather or for the purposes of nidification; even in the breeding season their crepuscular habits leave a great deal to mere conjecture.

In the first part Dr. Du Cane Godman enters on his subject without a single introductory remark of any sort on the general characteristics of the Order, and questions of classification are only dealt with as they arise. Throughout he is a model of lucidity and conciseness, but his account often appears meagre for a work of such importance, and one thinks of what a writer like the late Rev. H. A. Macpherson would have made of the subject. The author has in all debatable cases availed himself of the opportunity to make exhaustive comparisons of specimens in the British Museum and in the Rothschild collection. He emphasizes the fact that petrels vary greatly in dimensions, and in the absence of definite specific characters he is unwilling to recognize separate forms on the strength of differences in measurements. Thus he identifies Oceanodroma socorroensis with O. monorhis, and shows in passing that the specific name of the latter is founded upon a misconception, there being really nothing abnormal about the nostrils. Again, he doubts whether O. beali can be regarded as distinct from O. leucorrhœa. The nestling of this species is described as being covered with long "sooty-brown" down, a statement already disputed by Mr. Macpherson, who says "not sooty....but delicate grey." The close supervision under which Mr. Keulemans's striking illustrations have been coloured by hand is indicated by notes in two places to the effect that a light-brown wing-patch is not sufficiently pronounced in the picture. No one can fail to be struck by the wonderful painting of the birds themselves, the characteristically sober tones of ashy-brown, sooty-black, dusky-grey, plumbeous, and the like being blended with exquisite delicacy; the effect is, however, slightly spoilt at times by the cruder colouring of the conventional background.

The genus Puffinus, dealt with in Part II., provides several problems which, despite much recent addition to our knowledge, do not as yet admit of any but a tentative solution. On such points the author's close reasoning always carries conviction, and his wonderful grasp of the complexities of the subject excites our warm admiration. Recognizing the responsibility of forming a decision upon contentious matters, he tabulates the fullest data available, together with the views of other well-known authorities, but leaves us in no doubt about his own opinion, even when he appears to accept the validity of a species somewhat against his better judgment. In the main he adheres to the sound principle "majus et minus non variant speciem," but on the strength of Lieut. Boyd Alexander's observations we find P. edwardsi consistently distinguished from the larger P. kuhli, to which, however, it is so closely allied that a separate plate in this instance is not considered necessary. The little dusky shearwater, on four occasions obtained on our shores, has been the subject of some controversy, and identified first as P. obscurus and then as P. assimilis; Dr. Godman, who traces with a masterly hand the distinctive characteristics of this and half a dozen of its close relatives, labels it without hesitation P. bailloni. Regarding the sooty shearwater (P. griseus) and the great shearwater (P. gravis), which both occur in British waters, the fact is alluded to that the former was long mistaken for the young or a dark form of the latter. The Manx shearwater—known even to Willughby as P. anglorum—no longer appears in the historic breeding-grounds. This phenomenon, for which there are some compensations in the direction of other colonies, is barely referred to by Dr. Godman. It was explained, even in the seventeenth century, as the result of systematic eviction by puffins, though it has been found that on Skomer Island, off the Welsh coast, the two species will actually inhabit the same burrows. Gätke, commenting on a similar disappearance in Heligoland, suggested that the failure of some favourite food-supply might be accountable for it. Part II. concludes with an interesting account of the so-called "mutton bird," and the great slaughter carried on annually at its breeding quarters in the Antipodes.

Twenty hand-coloured plates are given, and one and all are in every respect worthy of a notable work. They may, indeed, be called, without exaggeration, magnificent.

Birds of Great Britain and Ireland. By Arthur G. Butler. Vol. II. (Caxton Publishing Company.)—In our review of the first volume of this book we called attention to the fact that, so far as the letterpress and the plates of the eggs were concerned, it was little more than a reissue of a portion of 'British Birds with their Nests and Eggs.' Moreover, in view of the "special offer" freely circulated by the publishers, wherein it was definitely stated that the work was "entirely new and written up to date," it seemed fair comment to point out that Dr. Butler had observed a discreet and nearly unbroken silence regarding the numerous important records of the last dozen years. The author now expresses surprise that he should have been considered remiss in this respect: having two other books on hand at the same time, he found no leisure for "ferreting out" such particulars; but in the present volume he proceeds under protest to remedy this deficiency to a great extent. This is certainly as it should be. Aviculturists will again find in these pages many practical hints on the treatment of birds in confinement. The real value of the book, however, lies, as we pointed out before, in the admirable plates of birds, which do Mr. Grönvold the greatest credit. The colours are almost without exception extraordinarily true to nature, and are a triumph of reproduction. In most instances the effect is somewhat marred by the bird's eye being a trifle jaundiced, and the majority of the nests are rendered in so perfunctory a manner as to be unconvincing. That inveterate jerry-builder the house sparrow would hardly recognize his model tenement as it has been figured, nor, we suspect, would Dr. Butler himself, being an authority on nests.

Wayside and Woodland Ferns. By Edward Step. (Warne & Co.)—People have various ways of showing their interest in hardy ferns. The most common way has been to make collections in a garden or herbarium. For such purposes woodlands and waysides have been ruthlessly ransacked. Many collectors either do not know the cultural requirements of the specimens they remove, or are careless in respect to their future welfare. The plants are gathered at all seasons, often when the new fronds have developed in spring, and they are torn up with little or no root. Therefore a very small proportion ever succeed in establishing themselves again in the soil. It is not to such collectors that the author appeals, and we are glad to note that in some cases of very rare species he has refrained from stating the exact habitat. But the genuine fern-lover is told how to remove plants in such a manner that they will live after transplantation; whilst in the case of rare species he is exhorted to spare the plant, and take only a fruiting frond that he may raise plants from the spores.

The text appeals to the uninitiated as well as those who have some experience. The introductory chapter explains the characteristics that distinguish ferns from flowering plants. There are sixty-seven half-tone reproductions of photographs taken by the author, and coloured figures of every species, from drawings by Miss Mabel E. Step. These coloured plates serve to show the structural characters, while the photographs illustrate the different species growing in natural surroundings. We commend the work to all interested in the subject.

Alpines and Bog-Plants. By Reginald Farrer. (Arnold.)—The author of 'My Rock-Garden' (reviewed in Athenæum Feb. 15, 1908) may be congratulated on so soon issuing another work on alpine plants. His writings are full of interest, although occasionally marred by a somewhat dogmatic style. The earlier book dealt with specialities rather than a general collection of plants for the rock garden, and in the Preface to the present volume Mr. Farrer states that it contains "all the treasured rarities and delights which pressure of space forbade me to include in its predecessor." He relates the actual behaviour of many species in his own well-stocked garden and nursery, and these details have all the value of first-hand observations. His enthusiasm for certain plants and frank dislike of others are stated with candour. Thus we read of the "dull desolation of Labiatae," and are told that "weeds are the Compositae, one and almost all." Even the snowdrop is described as "rather cold and dreadful." No one but a specialist knows the numerous difficulties encountered in the effort to keep alive many alpine species in our own damp and comparatively sunless climate. He is baffled repeatedly by the idiosyncrasies of a troublesome plant, but may find that his failure is due to some circumstance capable of being rectified. The author's hints on cultural details that have contributed to success will thus be most helpful. He is never happier than when describing his experience in collecting plants, and the chapter on 'A Collecting Day above Arolla' is one of the best. We note a slip in regard to Rosa gigantea, the giant of this genus, which Sir George Watt first discovered in Manipur. This shy species has flowered indoors, not at Syon House, but at Albury Park. Blooms were exhibited from the latter garden at a meeting of the Royal Horticultural Society on February 28th, 1905.

We have nothing but praise for the illustrations, which are reproductions from photographs taken in the author's own garden.

The Mineral Kingdom. By Dr. Reinhard Brauns. Translated, with Additions, by L. J. Spencer. Part I. (Williams & Norgate.)—'Das Mineralreich,' by Prof. Brauns of Bonn, is a beautifully illustrated work on minerals, which has acquired much popularity in Germany, and is now being translated, with additions bringing it up to date, by Mr. L. J. Spencer of the British Museum. As the translator is a thorough master of the subject, his version may be relied on for accuracy, whilst, to judge from the first part, it may be equally recommended for its diction. Mr. Spencer is well known as the translator of Max Bauer's 'Edelsteinkunde'—a work with which that of Dr. Brauns may in many respects be fitly compared. Both are handsome volumes appealing to persons of education without special scientific training, and both rely largely for success on the profusion and fidelity of the illustrations. Dr. Brauns in putting forth a popular introduction to the study of minerals never loses sight of the practical or economic side of the subject. Instead of following an ordinary system of classification, based on chemical and crystallographic characters, he sorts his minerals into groups which will engage the attention of special readers: the group of ores, for example, will attract the miner and metallurgist; that of rock-forming minerals will interest the petrologist, geologist, and architect; whilst the section on precious stones will appeal mainly to the jeweller, the lapidary, and the lover of the beautiful. It is a pity that an outline of crystallography has necessarily to be placed in the forefront of any work on minerals, since this is just that part of the subject which is likely to repel the general reader at starting. Dr. Brauns, however, touches the subject with a light hand. It is difficult to say too much in praise of most of the coloured illustrations in the work, especially as attempts to depict minerals have often proved far from satisfactory. The plates make Dr. Brauns's volume exceptionally useful to teachers and students; but, excellent as the illustrations may be, the student must not rest content until he has seen and handled the minerals themselves. The English edition of this book is, we believe, printed in Germany, and is being issued in parts, of which twenty-five will complete the work.

ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES.

MR. LOVETT figures in Folk-Lore a number of amulets collected by him from costers' barrows in London, and compares them with similar objects procured from Rome and Naples. He also figures and describes some primitive tallies and turf dials in use among the shepherds on the South Downs.

The extra volume issued by the Folk-lore Society to its members for 1908 is a collection of the folk-lore of Lincolnshire made by Mrs. Gutch and Miss Mabel Peacock. It is larger and more comprehensive (occupying 437 pages) than the collections for other counties already issued by the society, and contains a store of information that may be useful to the members of the Royal Archaeological Institute when they visit Lincoln in July.

Mrs. B. H. Cunnington, who has been exploring Knap Hill Camp in Wiltshire, points out in Man a peculiar feature in the entrenchments. The ditch and rampart are interrupted at unequal distances by a number of level paths forming a solid gangway or causeway into the interior of the camp. Mrs. Cunnington makes the ingenious suggestion that these causeways may have been left as platforms from which to enfilade the ditch.

In a quarry at Eragny (Seine-et-Oise) M. Laville found remains of five or more marmots, similar to a fragment of a skull of a marmot from Karlstein in Bohemia, now in the collection of the School of Mines at Paris. In a communication to the Society of Anthropology of Paris he stated that the type resembled more that of the Polish marmot, or bobac, than that of the Alpine marmot, and that it might have belonged to a late prehistoric period.

Upon the occasion of the display by a young Cephelonian lady, Mlle. Urania Diamandi (sister of the well-known calculator M. Pericles Diamandi), at a meeting of the same Society, of her powers as a mental calculator, M. L. Manouvrier has founded a study of the problems of visual memory, coloured visualization, and mental calculation, which occupies nearly 60 pages of the Bulletins et Mémoires of the Society. Several schemes of number-form (as defined by Mr. Francis Galton) drawn by her illustrate the paper.

Dr. Deyrolle exhibited to the same Society an instrument for cutting rice in use among the Man peoples of Upper Tonkin, which resembles others from the peninsula of Malacca. The use of it by Europeans is difficult, on account of the different shape of our fingers from those of the native peoples.

Dr. Huguet called the attention of the Society to a translation, recently published by Father Giacobetti at Wargla, of a manuscript written in 1678, entitled 'Kitab en-Nasab,' containing genealogies of the Caliphs, a legend of the foundation of the city of Fez, definitions of the various classes of nobility, and other matter of interest.

The Rev. J. H. Weeks's notes in Folk-Lore on some customs of the Lower Congo people include an account of a custom by which the evils of slavery seem to be somewhat mitigated. A slave badly treated by his master may offer himself to a neighbouring chief who, if he accepts, kills a goat, which the slave and chief eat together. The former master is entitled to the ordinary market value of his slave, upon payment of which the slave is virtually free, but generally becomes a faithful follower of the chief with whom he has eaten the goat, and is thenceforth called "Nkombo," or goat.

Dr. J. W. W. Crawford contributes to Man an account of the life and works of the medicine man of the Kikuyu tribe of East Africa. He has two names: one for his office of fortune-teller or prophet, another for that of priest and physician, to which he is supposed to be called by God in a vision.

Mr. Edge-Partington cautions collectors and others against forged New Zealand antiquities. He is informed by Mr. Turnbull, of Wellington, that a great number of greenstone objects, made by a clever workman from good patterns, are in circulation there, and hard to detect.

SOCIETIES.

GEOLOGICAL.—April 7.—Prof. W. J. Sollas, President, and afterwards Mr. H. W. Monckton, V.P., in the chair.—Mr. B. R. Lucas was elected a Fellow.—The President announced that the Daniel-Pidgeon Fund for 1909 had been awarded to Mr. A. M. Finlayson, who proposes to undertake researches on the genesis of the sulphidic ores.—The following communications were read; 'On Overthrusts at Tintagel, North Cornwall,' by Mr. H. Dewey,—'The Lahat "Pipe": a Description of a Tin-Ore Deposit in Perak, Federated Malay States,' by Mr. J. Brooke Scrivenor,—and 'On the Sculptures of the Chalk Downs in Kent, Surrey, and Sussex,' by Mr. George Clinch.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—St. George's Day.—Annual Meeting.—Dr. C. H. Read, President, in the chair.—Messrs. A. H. Lyell and J. E. Pritchard were appointed Scrutators, and the Rev. E. S. Dewick and Mr. H. B. Wheatley Assistant Scrutators, of the ballot.—Mr. H. A. Tipping was admitted Fellow.—The President delivered his annual address, containing the usual notices of deceased Fellows, and passing under review the chief incidents connected with the Society during the past year.—The following were declared duly elected President, Council, and officers of the Society for the ensuing year. President, Dr. C. H. Read; Treasurer, Dr. P. Norman; Director, Sir Edward W. Brabrook; Secretary, C. R. Peers, other members of Council, Sir Lawrence Alma Tadema, W. Paley Baildon, the Rev. E. S. Dewick, L. L. Duncan, Dr. A. J. Evans, E. H. Freshfield, W. Gowland, Sir R. R. Holmes, Sir H. C. Maxwell Lyte, R. G. Rice, Sir Owen Roberts, Max Rosenheim, H. W. Sanders, J. H. Etherington Smith, Reginald A. Smith, Emery Walker, and H. B. Walters.

ENTOMOLOGICAL.—April 7.—Dr. F. A. Dixey, President, in the chair.—Mr. R. Shelford exhibited a case containing examples of mimetic Oriental Orthoptera and Hemiptera.—Mr. H. M. Edelsten exhibited ova of Tapinostola fulva (in situ) laid within the curled leaf of Carex paludosa; also a photograph of the anal segments of the female showing the earlier appendages, from the ventral side.—The discussion on the similar species P. argus and P. argyrognomon was resumed and concluded.

Mr. H. St. J. Donisthorpe read a paper 'On the Origin and Ancestral Form of Myrmecophilous Coleoptera.'—Mr. W. L. Distant communicated a paper on 'Rhynchota Malayana.'—Mr. J. E. Collin communicated a paper by Mr. Wesché 'On the Antennæ of Diptera, and the Present Classification of the Nemocera, with Two Subsidiary Sections bearing on the Latter Subject.'—Mr. G. A. K. Marshall read a paper entitled 'On Reciprocal Mimicry: a Rejoinder to Dr. F. A. Dixey.' Mr. C. J. Gahan, Mr. S. A. Neave, Mr. Tutt, Mr. W. E. Sharp, and Prof. Hudson Beare took part in the discussion that followed.

ROYAL METEOROLOGICAL.—April 21.—Mr. H. Mellish, President, in the chair.—Mr. Baldwin Latham read a paper on 'Percolation, Evaporation, and Condensation,' in which he gave the results of the observations he had carried out at Croydon on these subjects during the last thirty years. Two percolation gauges were used, both of which were exactly a superficial yard in area, and contained a cubic yard of natural soil, one of chalk and the other of gravel. The average annual amount of percolation through the chalk gauge was 10.84 in., and through the gravel gauge 10.34 in. The average yearly rainfall was 25.46 in. It appears that the rate of percolation is governed by the rate of rainfall, for when once the gauges have become sensitive, by being thoroughly wetted, the rate at which rain percolates depends entirely on the quantity of rain immediately falling.

A paper on 'The Meteorological Conditions in the Philippine Islands, 1908,' by the Rev. José Algué, S.J., Director of the Philippine Weather Bureau, was read by the Secretary. The year 1908 was one of extraordinary meteorological conditions. Heavy floods occurred, and frequent violent cyclonic storms passed over or affected the Archipelago. The author stated that out of the fourteen typhoons of extraordinary intensity which have occurred during the past twenty-nine years, five occurred in 1908, the most violent being those of September 23rd, October 13th, and December 5th.

INSTITUTION OF CIVIL ENGINEERS.—April 20.—Mr. J. C. Inglis, President, in the chair.—The paper read was 'The New York Times Building,' by Mr. C. T. Purdy.—The Council reported that they had recently transferred nine gentlemen to the class of Members, and that four candidates had been admitted as Students. The monthly ballot resulted in the election of two Members and eight Associate Members.

ROYAL ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—April 20.—Prof. W. Ridgeway, President, in the chair.—Mr. Walter MacClintock gave a paper, illustrated by a long series of lantern-slides, on the Black-foot Indians of Montana. Mr. MacClintock has an intimate acquaintance with these Indians, having been adopted as son by Mad Wolf, one of the chiefs. The Indians were shown in their great summer encampment on the plains, and views were given of many of the lodges. These are all painted with various symbols, the heavens being usually shown at the top of the lodge, and the earth at the bottom, with various sacred animals in the middle. One of the lodges was adorned with a pictorial description of the owner's victories and achievements, as also was the chief's war-horse. Views were shown of the interiors of some of the lodges. The great feature of the summer camp is the sun ceremony, for the tribe believes that it is descended from the sun and moon, whose grandchild, the son of the morning star, was sent down to earth. A spotless woman is the chief of the festival, and on arriving at the chosen place, she, with her attendants and priests, fasts and prays for four days, during which the other inmates of the camp amuse themselves with mimic warfare and games. On the third day the woman proceeds to a spot already selected and offers a meat offering of buffalo tongues. On this spot the sun tent, a simple erection of poles, is raised, and after it has been blessed by the holy woman, it becomes the central point of all the subsequent ceremonies. These consist of games, acting, and the recitation of their deeds of valour by the chiefs. The ceremonies conclude by the chief priest wishing the tribe prosperity during the coming year.

ROYAL HISTORICAL.—April 22.—Archdeacon Cunningham, President, in the chair.—Messrs. F. J. Collinson and J. L. Deacon were declared elected Fellows.—The Secretary read a paper, by Miss L. de Alberti and Miss Chapman, on 'The Inquisition in the Canaries and English Traders there in Elizabeth's Reign.' The writers pointed out that during the war time even English trade did not cease with the Canaries, and that Englishmen were continuously resident in the islands, little harassed by the Inquisition except in cases of suspected apostasy from Romanism or of proselytizing. Sir J. K. Laughton and the President spoke upon the subject of the paper.

MATHEMATICAL.—April 22.—Sir W. D. Niven, President, in the chair. The following papers were communicated: 'The Principles of the General Theory of Integral Functions,' by Mr. F. Tavani; 'The Equations of Electrodynamics and the Null Influence of the Earth's Motion on Optical and Electrical Phenomena,' by Mr. H. R. Hassé; 'The Solution of a Certain Transcendental Equation,' by Mr. G. N. Watson; 'The Physical Applications of Certain Conformal Transformations of a Space of Four Dimensions, and the Representation of a Space Time Point by means of a Sphere,' by Mr. H. Bateman; 'Some Criteria for the Residues of Eighth and other Powers,' by Mr. A. E. Western; and 'On the Discontinuities of a Function of One or more Real Variables,' by Dr. W. H. Young.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Royal Institution, 5.—General Monthly. — Surveyors' Institution, 7.—Junior Meeting. — Society of Engineers, 7.30.—'The Influence of Rainfall on the Design of Sewers,' Mr. C. A. Battiscombe. — Aristotelian, 8.—'The Satisfaction of Thinking,' Dr. G. R. T. Ross.
- TUES. Society of Arts, 8.—'Aerial Flight,' Lecture II., Mr. F. W. Lanchester. (Cantor Lecture.) Royal Institution, 3.—'Cosmogonical Questions,' Lecture I., Prof. S. Arrhenius. (Tyndall Lecture.) — Anthropological Institute, 8.15.—'A Note on a Stone on the Rock of Cashel' and 'Some Irish Stone Circles,' Mr. A. L. Lewis.
- WED. Archaeological Institute, 4.30.—'Prehistoric York, Durham, and Manchester,' Prof. W. Boyd Dawkins; 'The History of Gunpowder and of the Hand-Gun,' Mr. R. C. Clephan. — Entomological, 8. — Society of Arts, 8.—'English Furniture Design and Construction,' Mr. P. A. Wells.
- THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'Aspects of Applied Aesthetics: (III.) Art and Ethics,' Mr. J. Paterson. — Royal, 4.—Election of Fellows. — Institution of Electrical Engineers, 8.—'The Theory and Application of Motor Converters,' Mr. H. S. Hall.
- Linnean, 8.—'On some Zonitæ from Queensland and the New Hebrides,' Mrs. Leonora J. Wilmore; 'The Ecological Relations of the Tiger-Beetles,' Dr. V. E. Shelford. — Chemical, 8.30.—'Affinity Constants of Hydroxyl- and Alkoxyl-Acids,' Mr. A. Findlay, Mr. W. E. S. Turner, and Miss G. E. Owen; 'The Absorption Spectra of the Nitrates in relation to the Ionic Theory,' Mr. E. C. C. Baly, Miss K. A. Burke, and Miss E. G. Marsden; 'The Chlorination of Acetanilide,' Messrs. W. J. Jones and K. J. P. Orton; and other Papers.
- Society of Antiquaries, 8.30.—'The Early Topography of the Town of Ludlow,' Mr. W. H. St. John Hope.
- FRI. Geologists' Association, 8.—'The Lower Chalk of Lincolnshire,' Rev. C. R. Bower and Mr. J. R. Farmery. — Philological, 8.—'On the P Words I am Editing for the Society's Oxford Dictionary,' Sir J. A. H. Murray.
- Royal Institution, 9.—'Campaign against Malaria,' Major R. Ross.
- SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'Edmund Burke,' Prof. W. Raleigh.

Science Gossip.

THE moon will be full at 8 minutes past noon (Greenwich time) on the 5th inst., and new at 1h. 42m. in the afternoon on the 19th. She will be in perigee on the evening of the 16th, and in apogee on that of the 28th. Occultations of ω Geminorum and of κ Virginis will take place on the evenings of the 22nd and 31st respectively; the former from 9h. 12m. to 10h. 2m., and the latter from 8h. 44m. to 10h. 4m. Mercury ζ will be at greatest eastern elongation from the sun on the 20th, and will be visible in the evening during the second half of the month, situated in the eastern part of Taurus. Venus will begin to be visible in the evening towards the end of the month, also in Taurus but to the west of Mercury. Mars is moving easterly in Aquarius, and rises a little earlier each morning. Jupiter is nearly stationary in Leo, and sets soon after midnight at the end of the month; he will be in conjunction with the moon on the 26th. Saturn is still in Pisces, and rises earlier each morning—about 2 o'clock at the end of the month.

Six more small planets are announced as having been photographically discovered at the Astrophysical Institute, Königstuhl, Heidelberg; two by Prof. Max Wolf on the 9th and 15th ult. respectively, and four by Herr Kopff—one each on the 8th and 9th, and two on the 11th.

CONTINUING her examination of photographic plates obtained by M. Blazko at the Moscow Observatory, Madame Ceraski has detected two new variable stars, in the constellations Gemini and Triangulum respectively. The brightness of both these stars appears to be about the tenth magnitude at a maximum; that of the former sinks below $12\frac{1}{2}$, and of the latter to about $11\frac{1}{2}$, at a minimum. The periods of both are probably some months in duration: of the latter perhaps $8\frac{1}{2}$. They will be reckoned in a general list as var. 7, 1909, Geminorum and var. 8, 1909, Trianguli respectively.

WE have received the Annual Report of the Director (Mr. C. Michie Smith, F.R.S.) of the Kodaikānal and Madras Observatories for 1908. The Director resumed charge in January of that year, and the Assistant Director (Mr. Evershed) was absent after July on special leave. The principal part of the astronomical work relates to solar physics, and there were only 20 days in the year during which no solar observations could be made, whilst exceptionally fine weather prevailed in November. Photographs of the sun were taken with the Dallmeyer photoheliograph on 338 days, as against 339 in the preceding year, the worst month for the purpose being October, when six days were missed. The sun's disk was examined for spots and faculae every morning that the weather permitted, and these phenomena registered by projection. Solar prominences were recorded visually on 310 days, as against 305 in 1907. The spectroheliograph was in use throughout the year; and observations with an Angström pyrheliometer were begun in February, and continued on all suitable days afterwards. A new scheme has been devised for determining the amount and period of variation in the solar radiation, which will be independent of all other methods yet in use, and free from many of the uncertainties attending them. There was a considerable fall in sunspot activity for the year under report, there having been only 262 new groups, with a daily average of 3.9, as against 301 and 4.6 in the preceding year. On four days the sun's surface was quite free from spots at the time of observation, but some large spots were noted on various occasions, and four large groups appeared in January and February. The greatest proportion of activity has been in the southern hemisphere. Prominences have on the whole been very numerous, and some of them remarkable, particularly a large one on February 18th, a very high one on August 13th, and another which underwent remarkable changes on December 27th.

WITH regard to the meteorology of the year, the mean temperature was $56^{\circ}2$, or $0^{\circ}1$ below the average; the highest reading was $75^{\circ}2$ on April 25th, and the lowest $38^{\circ}0$ on December 10th. The rainfall was nearly normal, but its distribution was peculiar, being largely in excess in February and October, and deficient in May, November, and December: the heaviest fall on one day was 2.38 inches, on February 24th.

THE observatory at Madras continued to be under the immediate superintendence of Mr. R. L. Jones, Deputy-Director. The mean temperature there was above the average in nine months of the year; the highest shade reading recorded was $109^{\circ}6$ on April 26th and May 30th, the lowest $60^{\circ}8$ on January 20th. The rainfall for the whole year was 55.97 inches, and the greatest fall on one day was 7.28 inches, on October 23rd. Mr. Michie Smith visited Madras in November, and superintended the erection of the new dome for the 8-inch equatorial. Seismology was regularly carried on at Kodaikānal, and a large number of earthquakes recorded—no fewer, indeed, than 67 in the course of the year.

IN the April number of The National Review Mr. Harold Russell has a capable article on the cuckoo. A fact upon which he lays needed emphasis is that, contrary to the general impression, the vast majority of cuckoos' eggs are not imitations of the nest-owner's eggs, though undoubtedly so in rare instances. This is doubly interesting, for here, presumably, we see natural selection slowly evolving a habit beneficial to the race. The advantage derived from the superficial resemblance in old and young to a hawk is less obvious. Mr. Russell does not touch on this, though he refers to the still lingering tradition that cuckoos turn into hawks in winter.

FINE ARTS

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

(First Notice.)

WE have pleasure in recording, as a first impression, that there are this year more good pictures (of a modest order) than is usual at Burlington House. The exhibition is made up for the most part, one fancies, of portraits and landscapes, with but a small sprinkling of works of an imaginative character. The power of producing a tolerably agreeable rendering of anything that will keep still to be painted is possessed by not a few contemporary artists, and their rather fragmentary studies—realistic in aim, but tactfully and cautiously modified by a certain negative feeling after the qualities of good design—have their interest. The greater part of what is praiseworthy at the Academy is of this order, and we shall consider it on a later occasion. In our first notice it seems suitable to deal with such occasional essays in the higher walks of art as are to be found on the walls.

Few even of the ostensibly imaginative subjects can claim such a position, most of them being merely illustrative in intention. Mr. Herbert Draper's Ulysses and the Sirens

(206) is a typical example. A similar bid for popular success mars the President's Brewing a Storm (115), in which the ominous gathering-up of an irresistible weight of water at the mouth of a cave affords a motive which might well be awe-inspiring. One can fancy what it would have been in the hands of the Turner of the 'Shipwreck' period. In the hands of Sir Edward Poynter the majesty of the theme is somewhat sacrificed to the desire to emphasize its realistic basis. This leads him to multiply the lines of his design for mere purposes of detail, and to introduce theatrical figures which detract from its seriousness. Even so, one feels the presence of a draughtsman, though probably of one more likely now to be successful with landscape than with figure painting, in which, while he has the advantage of a basis of exact training, he seems incapable of escaping from academic correctness into the region of free self-expression.

To move freely in these fields of imaginative figure design seems a gift few painters here possess. The art has, in fact, two exponents. Mr. Charles Sims has for the last two years delighted us with his lightly blown fancies, but is in the present show something of a disappointment. Mr. John Sargent, on the other hand, appears this year with a fine and impressive design, which sheds a new light on his powers, and forces us to realize that in him the British School has an even more valuable asset than we had hitherto supposed.

Mr. Sargent has made previous essays in monumental painting, experimenting in two extremes, neither of them successful. The large filling for an arch in the Boston Library shown here some years back was an orgy of weird mystification. He did not pursue it, but in his series of the Hebrew Prophets for the same Library fell back on the discreet literalism which might be expected of a capable portrait painter on whom an unsuitable task had been foisted. He might well pause at the sight of these widely different solutions of the problem of decoration to ask himself whether indeed there was for him no other alternative. Israel and the Law (446) shows that he has found one. He no longer, as in his first essay, encrusts his wall with a pompous display of archaic symbols appealing, by their mystic associations, to that love of strange idols which is characteristic of a certain side of modern decadence. His work is painting, and modern painting, but it no longer reminds us, as did the Hebrew Prophets, of the presence of the paid model posing in drapery. Indeed, if we have a fault to find, it is that Mr. Sargent has not sufficiently utilized his wide knowledge of human character. His design is admirably knit and compact, but a little lacking in definite significance, and by this we do not wish to imply a desire that he should endow his figures with those distinguishing attributes dear to the Pre-Raphaelite masters of allegory. We regret that he has not used certain generalized differentiations of character to emphasize the symbolic significance of the disposition of his figures. To explain the criticism we must be permitted for once one of those tedious attempts at verbal description which, when applied to Old Masters, constitute so large a part of the art-literature of to-day.

The design consists of a sculptural group, the contours of which closely follow the lunette in which it is set. In the centre a draped and hooded figure of gigantic proportions is seated sufficiently low down to offer a mass rather widespread for its height. The head is supported on the right hand; the right elbow rests on the knee.

The left arm passes between the knees to hold a scroll which crosses the front of the picture just above the ankles of the central figure. Crouching in the shadow between the knees of that figure, and behind the scroll, is a boy facing to the beholder's left, who holds up his fingers to make some mystic sign; while on either side of the central personage are three seated figures (like the boy, smaller in scale) who hold swords. They are ranged one behind the other, the front one nearest the centre, so as to turn the corners of the group and lead the eye to the back.

The design has thus a centre, a sub-centre, and two wings. The head of the central figure falls forward, so that we see no face, but a pool of shadow beneath the hood. We have no quarrel with this device as such, for art cannot express the unspeakable, but its suggestiveness depends on the manner in which it is led up to. It may be a confession of impotence, or, as the culminating point in a sequence of ideas, a jumping-off point for the beholder's imagination. Let us try the natural way to establish such a sequence in a composition like Mr. Sargent's.

The design is sufficiently symmetrical for any departure from symmetry to strike one, and the primal modification established by the position of the arms of the principal figure—made more important by their being the only parts of it undraped—thus influences the whole composition. The almost upright line of the supporting arm to the spectator's left is balanced by an upright tendency in the right-hand group, in which are two vertical lines of sheathing swords. The more sloping direction of the arm on the other side is balanced by a like tendency in the left-hand group—an admirable movement of falling line. By such architectonic treatment and the binding influence of the drapery and scrolls, the two side groups are intimately connected with the principal figure, and consequently a broad distinction of character in the two groups (becoming less noticeable in the receding figures) would seem to merge in the mystery of the central figure. We submit that the difference of dominating line of the two groups should be bound up with a difference of character, and we cannot but count it a misfortune that these side figures—above all, the front one on each side—should be identical in type and singularly insignificant, so that their difference of pose appears arbitrary. The boy crouching in the shadow is individualized in lively fashion, but, left thus without support, he contrasts baldly with the emptiness above him.

The close drapery of the figure is a true enough symbol of divine law. It at once conceals and reveals. The boy crouched beneath it, blindly making his superstitious sign, may be taken as typifying vitality uninformed by experience: to him authority is essential. The figures outside—dependent, yet mysteriously bound up with the figure beneath the cloak—should surely represent some two great types—antagonistic yet each essential—of the freethinking human soul: Nietzsche and Schopenhauer, let us say, the will to live and the negation of the will to live, since on one side the swords are sheathing.

We would not be understood to dictate the literary meaning which should be read into Mr. Sargent's design, but we submit that in such a symmetrically unsymmetrical design there is an essential want of logic in making the two side figures most differing in pose identical in character, particularly when the rather individualized minor central figure contrasts with a blank space which may be either flatly nothing or mysteriously "all." If the individuality of the youth was developed in divergent directions by the side figures, which in their turn tended to assimilate in character as they recede, we might feel that in bending beneath the law he but obeyed his own dual nature mysteriously united. The group is formed on a line starting from the centre, dividing to right and left, and sweeping backwards; and while we feel this line as implied sculpturally, it needs but a slight adornment of character to make the untutored observer watch its unfolding as he might watch a vital process.

We have analyzed somewhat at length Mr. Sargent's decoration, because serious work in this branch of art is both rare and welcome, and this capable example risks neglect for no better reason than that its leading note of pink (no doubt excellent for the place for which it is destined) is somewhat discordant in the Royal Academy. Mr. Sargent also sends a number of studies of the same model in the same shawl called Cashmere (496). They are deftly painted, and united into the semblance of a picture with extreme cleverness. We trust, however, that his decoration may be taken as inaugurating a serious attempt at pictorial structure of a severer character. His portraits are not so good as those he has previously done, and Sir W. Q. Orchardson's Mrs. Moss Cockle (31) is the most magisterial example of the sort in the present exhibition.

PAINTINGS BY MR. P. WILSON STEER.

SOME such occasion as this collection at the Goupil Gallery was necessary to enable us to realize the full stature of Mr. Steer. In a mixed exhibition his work assuredly was never likely to be overlooked, but impressed one rather by brilliance than by the delicate fragrance and unfailing sense of beauty which mark Mr. Steer as one of the finest artists of his day, with a place already secure in the history of English art. The very wealth of interest in his pictures tells against them in a show of mixed work. They look a little "busy," and ask to be displayed, as here, with that reasonable relief of bare space around them which is proper to such passionately wrought jewels of colour. If he has to choose between decorative quiet and full-blooded vivacity, Mr. Steer always selects the latter.

In the first of the two rooms in which the present collection is displayed Mr. Steer is represented by a series of sketches painted in very various moods. They are rather slight, rather vehement, and convey a somewhat restless impression. Walking into the inner room, however, where hangs a series of important pictures, we find ourselves under the spell of a very magician. In this land of enchantment the air is heavily charged with romance—in part, it is true, the romance of traditional art, evoking souvenirs of Constable, Monticelli, and Fragonard; but to a degree rare in painting of so poetic a quality, instinct with immediate and contemporary reality. Corfe Castle (16), the centre of this imposing display, has a grandiose and epic quality which justifies its prodigious range of colour. The artist has indeed lavished upon it an immense wealth of orchestration, but it is because he is bursting with the magnificence of his theme. In this crowding luxuriance of scale after scale of colour we find no redundancy, no repetition, only the prodigality of a generous nature, which compels enthusiasm. To have painted such a picture as this ranks the artist amongst the masters, and justifies praise in which critics of experience are but rarely able to indulge.

It must be admitted that we have been disposed to resist as long as possible Mr. Steer's claim to such rank. The technique he often adopts appears to us in itself detestable, based in part on the desire for intrinsic brilliance which comes of competitive exhibition-painting, in part on the need for the clash of violent contrasts to mask the imperfect fusion of an impulsive and piecemeal execution. To attain unity at all his work often needs to be veiled by a sheet of glass; nor can it be denied that it usually gains by being surrounded by flamboyant masses of burnished gilding which in themselves are distressing objects enough.

Yet these, after all, are but the standards of the time, and to conform to them is but to have the spirit of the age. Within these limits no other living Englishman is so successful as Mr. Steer. Of the special beauties of this kind of painting, its gleam of broken surface, the fantastic inventiveness of its varied touch, he has an unfailing sense, so that in the whole room there is no passage of poor colour or of tired handling; while he makes it the medium for creating visions of beauty so entrancing that to depreciate them on mere grounds of purism would argue a lack of poetic sense. Here, if anywhere, are the crown and justification of such a technique. Nor can it be denied that the one picture in the room (No. 24, The Blue Sash) in which he conforms to the traditions of figure painting is relatively a failure. A certain fury of production seems necessary to awaken his finer imaginative powers, and in three out of the four remaining figure pictures in this gallery (Nos. 15, 17, 21) he shows an astonishing power of endowing his vehement impasto with qualities of draughtsmanship not only strong, but also tender and subtle. Besides these we must single out for special praise, even in this fine collection, the captivating originality of The Picnic (19), and note how a work like No. 14, whose first aspect is a little obvious, is eloquent of the artist's close sympathy with nature. The subtle forms of the winding valley are here rendered with masterly delicacy and precision in terms of evanescent vaporous air.

PAINTINGS AND DRAWINGS BY MR. ROGER FRY.

THE work of Mr. Roger Fry at the Carfax Gallery has a special interest for readers of The Athenæum, and displays the advantages Mr. Fry the painter has gained by the wide knowledge of Mr. Fry the critic. Far less than Mr. Steer is this artist the victim of the accident by which he was born in this generation. Fastidiously, from many sources, he distils a personal view of nature which attests his insight into the conditions—and limitations—of pictorial effectiveness.

These limitations he is almost too prudently studious in observing, and indeed the artist who, serving a term as art-critic, is brought face to face with the multitudinous and miscellaneous output of modern painters, almost inevitably comes to distrust exuberant productiveness, and determines to confine his own ambitions within modest limits—to survey jealously his own work before publication. This is a danger if it damps the painter's enterprise; and while it cannot fairly be said that Mr. Fry lacks enterprise in the kind of work he attempts—witness his essays in imaginative design (Nos. 9 and 16, for example)—yet we feel that his excursions are consciously limited in their range. Thus he usually works on a basis of half-tone, as in the excellent Durham (18); and when, occasionally, he uses more positive colour he gets from it a change of aspect for his drawing rather than an extension of its range. Yet after all the critic who, even at the cost of disaster, risks sometimes a longer flight, stands to gain thereby a greater personal insight into the conditions of aerial navigation.

OTHER EXHIBITIONS.

AT the Leicester Galleries is a collection of water-colours by Miss Ruth Dollman which have the smallness of form and prettiness of colour most popular in this medium. While, however, their purpose is thus obviously imitative, they show considerable cleverness, and occasionally, as in the cornfield and headland of No. 47 (Ripe, near Ditchling), an isolated passage of painting in which the imitative keenness is rewarded by a brilliant rendering of detail very rarely successfully handled by painters. The beflowered foreground in Over the Hills and Far Away (30) is only a little inferior to this; and Sussex by the Sea (33) is technically very dexterous.

Mr. Arnesby Brown in the next room is better informed, but less individual. He possesses at his fingers' ends all the information on landscape which is more or less common property to-day, but little ambition after great beauty in any direction. Space forbids our doing justice to the characteristic preface wherein Mr. Lewis Hind recommends Mr. Brown to the public.

At the Mendoza Gallery Mr. Louis Kronberg, of Boston, U.S.A., unwisely styled by his compatriots the Degas of America, shows little gift for handling the ballet subjects he has chosen. One pastel, however, Richard Mansfield as Baron Chevalier (4), if somewhat laboured in execution, is a sincere and observant piece of portraiture.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE sold on April 20th the following engravings. After Reynolds: Mrs. Montague, by J. R. Smith, 25*l.*; Lady Louisa Manners, by V. Green, 39*l.*; Duchess of Rutland, by the same, 42*l.*; Mrs. Sheridan as St. Cecilia, by W. Dickinson, 68*l.* After Hoppner: Rusticity, by S. W. Reynolds, 48*l.* Cries of London, after Wheatley: Do you Want any Matches? by A. Cardon, 26*l.*; Turnips and Carrots, by T. Gauguin, 48*l.*

On Saturday, April 24th, Constable's picture of Yarmouth Jetty, with boats, figure, and cart, the property of the late Prof. B. Bertrand, fetched 1,449*l.*

On Monday last Messrs. Christie sold the following pictures, the property of Mr. Harold Rathbone: A. Hughes, The Pained Heart, 210*l.* E. Fortescue Brickdale, The Little Foot-Page, 157*l.* Ford Madox Brown, "Take your Son, Sir!" unfinished, 105*l.* Albert Moore, Marble Benches, 147*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

THE arrangements of the Slade School of Art, University College, London, include six lectures on the history of art by Mr. Roger Fry, dealing with 'Monumental Painting from Giotto to Modern Times.' The lectures are being delivered on Fridays, and began yesterday with a discussion of early Christian and Byzantine work. Particulars of the course can be obtained from Mr. W. W. Seton, Secretary, University College, Gower Street, W.C.

THE sum required to secure Lord Leighton's picture 'The Death of Brunelleschi' for the permanent collection in Leighton House is 250*l.* Donations amounting to 208*l.* have already been given, and it is hoped that the purchase may be concluded this month. Donations should be addressed to the Hon. Treasurer, Leighton House, 12, Holland Park Road, Kensington, W., or to Messrs. Drummond, 49, Charing Cross,

S.W. Leighton House, where the picture is on view, was reopened to the public last Wednesday.

THE early work by Rembrandt, signed and dated 1627, which was recently discovered in London, forms the photogravure frontispiece to the May number of The Burlington Magazine, and is described by Mr. Claude Phillips. The bearing of the American tariff upon modern painting is discussed by the editor, who also contributes a note upon works by Harpignies and Mr. A. E. John. Mr. Roger Fry has a first article on the early English portraiture at the Burlington Fine-Arts Club; while the illustrated contributions of Mr. R. L. Hobson on early Chinese porcelain, Mrs. Herringham on Oriental carpets, and Mr. G. F. Hill on Italian medals are continued. The newly discovered "Leonardo" is compared by Mr. H. F. Cook with other examples of the design from English collections, and three views are given of the remarkable wax bust in the collection of Mr. Murray Marks, which is the nearest analogy in sculpture at present known. Mr. W. G. Rawlinson, in a long letter, defends his method of classifying the states of engravings; while shorter notes deal with Conrad Witz (Dr. Wilhelm Suida), Reynolds's 'Snake in the Grass,' Macrino d'Alba (Dr. G. B. Rossi), a picture by Giovanni Bellini (Mr. F. Mason Perkins), the art of J. Alden Weir (Mr. Kenyon Cox), and some German portraits bearing on the Hofer centenary (Mr. W. A. Baillie-Grohman).

AN exhibition of water-colours and miniatures was opened last week in Dublin. The artists exhibiting are Miss Gibson, Miss Irwin, Miss Clara Irwin, and Miss J. French.

A CORRESPONDENT writes:—

"The third annual exhibition of the Young Irish Artists' Society is now being held in Dublin. It represents the achievements of the more adventurous of the younger Irish artists, and is interesting as showing the influences at work in forming a native school of painting in Dublin. A great diversity of method and a sincere personal expression are characteristic of the exhibition as a whole. In landscape, the work of Mr. Leech and of Miss Eva Hamilton stands first in accomplishment; while amongst the portraits shown those by Miss Clara Marsh are the most harmonious and suggestive."

THE most recent additions to the National Gallery of Ireland include a bronze bust of the late Denis O'Sullivan, by Mr. Derwent Wood; two small wax busts of Kemble and Mrs. Siddons, by a contemporary Irish wax-modeller; a self-portrait of a little-known painter of the thirties, E. L. Cazneau; and a flower piece by James Holland.

THE well-known military painter Louis Henry Dupray, who died last week at the age of sixty-four, was a native of Sedan, and derived a large share of his artistic fame from his pictures of the great war which resulted in the downfall of the Second Empire. He studied under Léon Cogniet and Pils, obtaining medals at the Salon in 1872 and 1874. He was a member of the Société des Artistes Français, and exhibited two pictures at last year's Salon.

THE death is also announced of Madame Léon Bertaux, the sculptor, a member of the "grand jury" of the Société des Artistes Français, and one of the founders of the Union des Femmes Peintres et Sculpteurs de Paris. Madame Bertaux was born in Paris eighty-three years ago, and died at her Château de Lassay at Saint Michel de Chavaignes (Sarthe). She won several medals at the Salon, notably in 1864, 1867, 1873, and 1889.

THE obituary of last week further includes M. Ceramano, the last survivor of the Barbizon School. A pupil of Charles Jacque, he made, like his master, a special feature of pictures of sheep and farmyard scenes. He was born in Belgium eighty years ago, and had lived at Barbizon (where he died) for upwards of forty years.

ONE of the choicest series of portraits in crayons of French celebrities of the sixteenth century ever offered for public sale will come under the hammer at the Georges Petit Gallery, Paris, on Monday next.

THE Madonna by Giovanni Bellini stolen in Holy Week from the church of S. Maria dell' Orto at Venice has been traced to the porter of the Hospital Umberto I., in the vicinity of the church. Numerous arrests have been made, for Sfriso, the porter, appears to have been only one of a gang, and the picture had been consigned to his care as the man most likely to be able to dispose of it at a good price. Fortunately he took into his confidence Sacconi, the porter of the Gallery of Modern Art in the Palazzo Pesaro, who promised to secure a desirable purchaser, and immediately communicated with the police. Signor Salvadori, who started the subscription to offer a reward for any information which might lead to the recovery of the picture, was at once informed, and agreed to play the part of a wealthy Englishman desirous of purchasing the picture. Accompanied by Sacconi, he proceeded to the Hospital, and after paying down 500 lire, and writing a cheque for 49,500 lire, secured the picture, and carried it off in his gondola. The vendor was arrested with his accomplices that evening.

THE first instalment of the Dublin Georgian Society's publication is approaching completion, and the Committee hope to send it to the subscribers in the course of this month. It contains about a hundred illustrations with explanatory text.

THE small palace at Tiefurt, famous as the home of the Duchess Anna Amalie of Saxe-Weimar, and the meeting-place of many distinguished men, is to be restored to the condition in which it was at the time of Goethe. The furniture and other articles which were there before 1807 have been placed in their original position, as indicated by the old inventories.

WE regret to hear that a movement is being initiated by the new Rector of Ludlow for the removal from the parish church of the fine rood-screen, with the returned stalls against it, which still occupies its original position under the eastern arch of the central tower. It is devoutly to be hoped that influential representations will prevent any such proceeding.

EXHIBITIONS.

- SAT. (May 1).—Mr. James Paterson's Water-Colours, Mr. W. B. Paterson's Gallery.
— Pencil Society's Point Drawings, Private View, New Dudley Gallery.
— Royal Academy, 141st Exhibition, Private View.
TUES. Alpine Photographs, Alpine Club.
THURS. Engravings of Military and Naval Officers and Statesmen of the Eighteenth and Early Nineteenth Centuries, Private View, Mount Street Galleries.
— Mr. Baragwanath King's Water-Colours of the Highlands of Scotland, Private View, Mount Street Galleries.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

COVENT GARDEN.—Saint-Saëns's Samson et Dalila. Faust. Madama Butterfly.

DR. CAMILLE SAINT-SAËNS, who was present at the performance of his 'Samson et Dalila' at Covent Garden on Monday evening, the opening night of the season, no doubt thought of the rendering of that opera sixteen years ago in the same building. It was then, of course, given in oratorio fashion, and though he actually came to London to superintend the rehearsals, he was apparently dissatisfied, and returned suddenly to Paris before the performance. Portions of the opera have often been heard on the concert platform, but it was decidedly interesting to hear the music with its proper surroundings. The stately choruses in the first act lose little, if anything, apart from the stage, while the latter does not materially enhance the effect of the beautiful music assigned to Dalila; moreover the betrayal of Samson, as related in the book of Judges, which would have formed a strong dramatic ending to the act, is feebly set forth in the libretto. On the other hand, the third act imperatively demands the stage. The music of the Philistines, so different from that of the Hebrews in Act I., shows power of characterization; the Bacchanalian Dance in the temple of Dagon is most effective; while the dignity and restraint displayed in Samson's final appeal for strength to crush his haughty enemies are impressive.

'Samson et Dalila' has always, by those who are acquainted with Saint-Saëns's many operas, been spoken of as his masterpiece for the stage. The only other work of the kind with which we are acquainted, 'Henri VIII.,' given some years ago at Covent Garden, is less interesting; while 'L'Ancêtre,' performed there in 1904, was merely entitled a "poème lyrique." Anyhow 'Samson et Dalila' offers signal proof of the composer's gifts. He does not seek to mystify or surprise; he belongs to what may now be called the old school. When he wrote the work in question, Wagner's power was at its zenith, and it is probable that the use of certain leading themes was specially due to that influence; in other respects, however, the composer shows no intention of imitating Wagner; moreover, of leading themes the Bayreuth reformer was not the inventor. One cannot but admire the direct appeal of the French music; its skill, yet simplicity; and, throughout, the masterly orchestration.

To judge the work fairly, it must be remembered by whom and when it was written. Saint-Saëns, a sharp-sighted critic as well as clever composer, naturally recognized the genius of Wagner, but 'Samson et Dalila,' produced when Wagner's 'Ring' was attracting special notice, served as a kind of protest against the reformer's art-theories. In addition, it came out at a time when politics, which have so often affected the course of art, perhaps increased the composer's honest reluctance to accept Wagner's form of music drama.

The performance on Monday evening was very good. Madame Kirkby Lunn, who was in fine voice, rendered justice to the Dalila music, while M. Fontaine impersonated Samson with skill and tact; his voice, however, was not sufficiently resonant. M. Frigara proved a sound conductor. The staging of the piece was excellent, and the final scene in the temple of Dagon most skilfully contrived.

Gounod's 'Faust' was given on Tuesday evening. There were some good points about Madame Edvina's impersonation of Marguerite, but M. Fontaine's singing of the Faust music was not altogether satisfactory. M. Frigara conducted. As this year is the jubilee of the production of the opera at the Théâtre Lyrique, Paris, it ought to have been given with a really strong cast.

On Wednesday 'Madama Butterfly' was given with Mlle. Destinn in the title-rôle, and her singing and acting were superb. Signor Leliva made a first appearance as Pinkerton. He sang intelligently and in tune, but his voice did not harmonize properly with Mlle. Destinn's. Madame Lejeune was an excellent Suzuki, and Signor Sammarco as Sharpless most satisfactory. Signor Campanini conducted with great tact.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

Analysis of the Evolution of Musical Form. By Margaret H. Glyn. (Longmans & Co.)

—The object of this volume, viz., to apply the evolutionary principle to practical music, is commendable, and the growth of the scale, the gradual enlargement of key conception, and the development of form are all described and discussed in an interesting manner. Yet though the scheme is excellent, many statements are open to question, and at times the author does not express herself with the clearness which the subject demands. Rhythm is declared to be the "essential motive power" in music; and of its three characteristic qualities, the pulsative has produced the time-system of music; the circling refers to tonality; while the undulating or free is somewhat vaguely described as a "movement to be found in all the outlines [i.e., of time, pitch, force, and colour], culminating in the climaxes of great musical works." This undulating or "wave" rhythm, we are told elsewhere, consists of hastening and slackening of speed, of rise and fall of pitch, and of an increase and decrease in intensity.

Having thus briefly described the argument, we now refer to certain statements and opinions. Already in the Introduction comes the startling statement that "the theory of an abstract musical form in which to train composers is false to the true nature of the art." Later we are told that the sonata and kindred cyclic forms lack "undulating rhythm." It is consoling, however, to learn that "the normal walks of cyclic usage are still open," although the "general trend of musical evolution is in the direction of continuity." The latter statement is true enough, and in their desire to escape from certain conventions some modern composers go to the opposite extreme, and their continuity becomes nebulous. The sonata-form was used by Beethoven, who avoided conventions to be found in Haydn and Mozart, or rather his genius led him instinctively to do so, and widen the form. So it is with modern composers. If instinctively they are led, as Liszt was, we believe, when writing his B minor Pianoforte Sonata, to modify form, no fault can be found with them; but deliberately to cast aside forms used by great masters, and trust to free form, would prevent many from maturing their gifts. The author tells us that the symphonic poem, or "half-way house," as she describes it, "has grasped something of the general principles of free rhythm, but it lacks sufficiently strong idiomatic development, the free generation of ideas." By "idiomatic development" the author means, as we learn from the chapter on 'General Principles,' the development of an "important initiative idea"; so if that be lacking, it is the fault, or rather the misfortune, of the composer. While on the subject of form, our author gives a specimen analysis of a movement in sonata-form—Exposition, Free Fantasia, and Recapitulation, with mention of subjects, bridge-passages, and coda, and the number of bars occupied by each; but she complains that it conveys "as much idea of the character of the movement as might be gained of the aspect and style of a house by a careful counting of the bricks in its several walls." Such a formula, however, makes no pretence to describe the character of the music. Of this a student can judge by playing or listening to the movement, or his teacher might describe it to him by word of mouth.

In the chapter 'Counterpoint v. Chord-Conception,' after stating that counterpoint is the science of intervals, our author speaks of the grand chord-successions in Palestrina's 'Missa Papæ Marcelli' or Bach's B minor Mass, compositions which, "though theoretically contrapuntal, owe all their emotional effect to their essential harmonic basis, originally unobserved [the italics are ours]. To us who think in chords as if by nature, it is impossible to realize the theory of music without them, but that chord-theory was at that time unknown is an incontestable fact."

As regards Bach, the Cantor Johann Crüger in his 'Synopsis Musices,' already published at Berlin in 1624, speaks of that most compendious and very easy way of composing, "qua nimirum ad Fundamentum prius substratum et positum reliquæ superiores modulationes adjici possint." And then the rules of thorough-bass which Bach wrote in the 'Anna Magdalena Clavierbuch' of 1725 show that Bach thought of music vertically as well as horizontally.

There are other statements in the volume open to exception, but let us call attention to a few of its good points. The author rightly believes that rhythmic feeling should be first developed in children, for "analytical instruction, however important, is not the beginning of knowledge." And again:—"Our own indigenous folk-art should form the backbone of elementary education." In Part I. the chapters on Time, the Evolution of the Scale, the Compound Standard of Tonality, and Asiatic Tonality are particularly interesting. The numerous music illustrations in the Appendix, too, deserve note. A book such as the present, which sets one thinking, is valuable, even though one cannot agree in all points with the writer.

Musical Gossip.

MAX REGER, whose name is more familiar in England than his music, will appear at two concerts at Bechstein Hall, on the 10th and 14th inst., when the programmes, entirely devoted to his works, will include the String Trio (Op. 77b) and the Pianoforte Trio (Op. 93), the String Quartet in D minor (Op. 74), and the Variations and Fugue on a Beethoven Theme for two pianofortes (Messrs. Max Reger and Richard Buhlig).

THE HANDEL SOCIETY will give an interesting concert at Queen's Hall on the 18th inst. Sir Charles H. Parry will conduct his 'Ode to Music,' and Sir Charles V. Stanford his 'Last Post'; moreover, the programme will include Brahms's 'Triumphlied' for double chorus and orchestra, which, so far as can be ascertained, has not been heard in London since it was given under the direction of Mr. Henschel, at the old St. James's Hall, on December 2nd, 1879.

A NEW opera entitled 'Mietje,' by the Dutch composer Benoit Hollander, will be performed at the Hampstead Conservatoire under the auspices of the London Academy of Music. The work will be produced under the direction of Mr. Henry Beauchamp, and staged by Mr. Charles Fry.

THE death is announced of Heinrich Conried, who, born in 1855, was for a time theatrical manager and actor in Austria. In 1878 he went to America, and succeeded Maurice Grau as manager of the Metropolitan Opera-House, New York, where, on December 24th, 1903, 'Parsifal' was produced for the first time outside Bayreuth.

THE dress rehearsal at the Paris Opéra of 'Bacchus,' the new opera by MM. Massenet and Catulle Mendès, is fixed for to-morrow, and the production for Wednesday next.

THE performances of Russian opera to be given at the Paris Châtelet this month will include operas by Glinka, Borodine, and Rimsky-Korsakoff. Mesdames Lipkovska, Litvinne, and Petrenko, and MM. Chaliapine, Smirnoff, Danaeff, Davidoff, Kastorski, and Charonoff, will be the principal members of the company.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN.	Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
—	Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
—	Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
MON.-SAT.	Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
MON.-SAT.	Italian Opera, 8, Coronet Theatre.
	(Wed. and Sat., Matinées, 2.30.)
MON.	Mr. Sascha Colbertson's Orchestral Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Solly String Quartet, 3.30, Bechstein Hall.
—	Dresden String Quartet, 8.15, Bechstein Hall.
TUES.	Miss Kate Flinn's Concert, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	Grand Widor Concert, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Miss Estella Rosetti's Vocal Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.
—	Miss Vera Bianca's Vocal Recital, 8, Steinway Hall.
—	Mr. Macmillan's Violin Recital, 8.15, Queen's Hall.
WED.	Messrs. Ysaye and Fugno's Violin and Pianoforte Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.
—	Mr. Wilton Cole's Recital, 8, Steinway Hall.
—	Madame Alice Esty's Song Recital, 8.15, Bechstein Hall.
THURS.	Miss Leginska's Recital, 3, Aeolian Hall.
—	Miss Jolanda Mero's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	Signor Busoni's Pianoforte Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.
—	Miss Anita Rio's Vocal Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
FRI.	Miss Emma Davidson's Song Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	Miss Tora Hwass's Pianoforte Recital, 3.15, Aeolian Hall.
—	Misses McDonald and Madeleine Booth's Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.
—	Mrs. Kennedy-Fraser's First Concert, 8, Steinway Hall.
SAT.	Mrs. Kennedy-Fraser's Second Concert, 3, Steinway Hall.
—	M. Frederic Lamond's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
—	Miss Isobel Stuckey's Vocal Recital, 8, Steinway Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

ST. JAMES'S.—Colonel Smith: a Light Comedy in Four Acts. By A. E. W. Mason.

THIS is a bright and engaging little piece—little notwithstanding its four acts—but Mr. Mason would have bettered its chances if he had made up his mind whether he intended it as a comedy or a farce. As it is, he hesitates between the two styles, alternates purely farcical episodes with scenes that are charged with a certain amount of emotion, and so leaves his audience rather confused as to his intentions, and allows it too much time to reflect on the thinness and extravagance of his plot. His leading idea strongly resembles that of 'The Importance of Being Earnest'; here, as in that quaint play, we have a character inventing an imaginary person in order to escape from an embarrassment, and being involved consequently in a ridiculous quandary. But Oscar Wilde recognized that such a theme could only be treated in the spirit of farce. Mr. Mason has not neglected in his story the possibilities of grotesque developments; he has matched the original deception with another, and brought together his heroine and his hero —both of whom act an imposture—at most delightful cross-purposes; but he has relied mainly, in his efforts to render their encounters piquant, on an appeal to old-fashioned sentiment.

The author starts his play with rather an elaborate exposition of the humiliating situation in which his heroine, Celia Faraday, finds herself—a girl who, with sisters married or engaged, seems drifting on towards the fate of an old maid, and is regarded by her family and their men-friends as already "on the shelf." In a moment of exasperation she invents a lover, and creates excitement in the home circle by declaring that she is engaged to a Col. Smith, now abroad on active service. They insist on her writing him a love-letter there and then, and she humours them, intending to destroy it; but to her dismay it is sent to the post. So far we have the beginnings of what might become a wildly hilarious farce. Mr. Mason, however, prefers that his Col. Smith—for of course there is such a man in the Army—shall treat the joke seriously, chivalrously, sentimentally. When this officer comes home, he is naturally resolved to have a meeting with his audacious correspondent; but he determines to assume a false name. His task is rendered easier by the fact that Celia, discovering the monster that she has created mightily inconvenient, has killed her lover by announcing his death in the newspapers; so the real Col. Smith can pretend to be a brother officer who watched the gallant soldier's last moments, and brings home relics as keepsakes for the bereaved sweetheart—among them a heavy gold watch with chain attached, which she is to wear round her neck. All this sham pathos, and the visitor's obstinacy in remaining in the heroine's society and demanding her attention for reminiscences of the colonel's exploits, make excellent fooling; and Mr. Mason, who should know something of politics by this time, has another element of fun at hand in the pictures he provides of the fuss of an electoral campaign and the droll suggestions he makes as to how to win an election. But the essence of the play consists of its love-scenes, and these, though they are at once charming and laughable, are not played fast enough to make spectators forget that both parties are shameless hypocrites.

The play furnishes a triumph for Mr. Alexander's light-comedy methods. There is an easy masterfulness, a well-bred persistence, a good-humoured malice, about his Col. Smith which makes this soldier a most agreeable acquaintance. Miss Irene Vanbrugh has fewer opportunities, but is throughout sympathetic in the part of Celia.

LYRIC.—The Conquest: a Play in Three Acts. By George Fleming.

IN 'The Conquest' the note of sincerity is entirely lacking. When the Royalist Duchesse de Langeais and the Republican Col. Armand de Montriveau first meet, the lady figures as a spoilt coquette who enjoys her power over men and uses it capriciously and heartlessly, even to the point of wagering that she will capture their affections; while the soldier is shown deprecating, humble, almost boobyish in his attempts to please her. When we next see them the Duchess has become languishing and gentle, and a new tone creeps into her lover's speeches. He becomes suspicious and exacting; he is furious on learning that he has been made the subject of a wager; and when he discovers his Duchess—innocent of real offence—in another man's arms, he vows a terrible revenge. He has her kidnapped and taken to his rooms, and there again he appears in a new light, as an implacable and cruel executioner of what he calls justice. He proposes to punish her by branding her on the forehead, and so stamping her as his property; and she—the beauty so proud and dainty in the first act—is now transformed into an amorous hysterical creature who welcomes the idea of bearing his brand before the world, because it will testify to her affection for him. The fierceness of his anger is disarmed, but he refuses to believe any of her protestations, and leaves her sobbing and abased on the floor. Three years pass, and we find the Duchess a novice preparing to take the veil, and acting the penitent till her lover once more arrives on the scene—this time remorseful, loud in declaration of his love, and distracted when he is told by the Mother-Superior of the convent that "Sister Teresa" is dead. He insists on seeing her body, and the Duchess is brought in on a bier, over which the soldier raves in a delirium of grief and threatens to kill himself, till the lady rises from her supposed death-bed and flings her arms round his neck.

Such is the preposterous story. The fortunes of the play were scarcely improved by a mistake made in the casting of the heroine's part. Miss Maxine Elliott is an actress with an attractive stage-presence, but she has no capacity for suggesting the manner of the grande dame. She was fairly effective, however, in the later passages of the drama. Mr. Waller looked picturesque in Napoleonic uniform, but could not reconcile the audience to the inconsistencies of the hero.

SHAKESPEARE AT STRATFORD.

ON Wednesday afternoon, April 21st, Miss Geneviève Ward appeared as Volumnia in 'Coriolanus.' This old favourite excelled herself in her part. Mr. Benson is always popular, but that night he produced a finer Coriolanus even than usual, though he lost some power in two passages through the monotonous rise and fall of his voice. The Menenius Agrippa of Mr. H. O. Nicholson was delightful; and the two Tribunes of the people, Mr. E. A. Warburton and Mr. Murray Carrington, made themselves sufficiently objectionable in their parts to excuse Coriolanus anything. The crowds were realistic enough to wake Rome, though one missed the mellow voice of the late Mr. Weir as the First Citizen.

The evening of Wednesday saw an unusual combination. A little melodrama, 'A Midnight Bridal,' had been dramatized from Mr. Halliwell Sutcliffe's story by Mrs.

F. R. Benson and Mr. H. O. Nicholson. Improbable as the incidents are, even for Scotland, there were some good situations in the piece, which is dated 1749, four years after Culloden. The performers filled their parts satisfactorily, but the chief event was the reappearance of Miss Elinor Aickin as a nurse.

After a ten minutes' interval the piece of the evening, 'The Belle's Stratagem,' opened. It somewhat resembles 'The Country Girl' of last season, but it gave opportunities of wilder mirth, approaching farce, of a very different nature from that of Shakespeare. Mr. Benson appeared as Doricourt, doing two exhausting parts in one day, and made the latter even more exhausting than he need have done. His acrobatic madness kept the audience in a roar. Mrs. Benson as Letitia Hardy, in assuming her gaucherie in order to disgust Doricourt, was also a little extravagant, especially in the matter of sweetmeats. Little Flutter was rendered by Mr. H. O. Nicholson with an inimitable combination of nature and art. Saville (Mr. F. G. Worlock) made a pleasing friend, guardian, and anti-plotter; and Courtall, the heavy villain of the piece, played by Mr. Murray Carrington, became, when his villainy was frustrated, as dancing mad as Mr. Benson. The prettiest scenes were the two minuets gracefully performed by the chief characters. Miss Olive Noble rendered Lady Frances Touchwood with dignity and grace; and Mrs. Rackett had a lively exponent in Miss Helen Haye. It was wonderful that many of the performers should act so freshly in two plays (some of them in three) in one day.

The special performances began on the forenoon of Thursday, April 22nd, with four of the long cycle of the Chester Mystery Plays. These were not performed in the ancient manner, on movable wagons in the open air, but much of the old-world atmosphere was retained. They were given in the ancient Guildhall where Shakespeare might have seen them performed in his youth (though they were strictly forbidden after he came to dwell at New Place, over the way). The end furthest from the door was slightly raised, and the walls hung with painted cloths; while a little recess, curtained off, did for the stable and manger. Entrances and exits were made through the hangings, or by the door opening into the Pedagogue's Court. The costumes were superintended by Miss Jennie Moore, with careful attention to ancient use. The Biblical story, arranged on simple lines (it is supposed by Ralph Higden in the fourteenth century), was given in episodes: 'The Salutation Play,' 'The Shepherds' Play,' 'The Kings' Play,' and 'The Slaying of the Innocents.' No names of performers were supplied, and the whole was given in a reverent spirit.

Seldom could the action be said to rise much above posing and declamation; but a true dramatic effect was gained when the quarrel among the Shepherds preceded the angelic announcement of "Peace upon earth, and goodwill to man"; and the Herod of 'The Kings' Play' and 'The Slaying of the Innocents' was forcible. The compiler made him a Mohammedan, a tyrant, a blasphemer, a ranter; but he was, after all, a real man, and, as such, was the original of the strong characters of the sixteenth century, who led up to Marlowe's 'Tamburlaine.' Mr. Arthur Goodsell deserves great credit for his arrangement of the plays, and the occasional vocal music by unseen performers.

On the same evening 'Hamlet' was acted, the name part being taken by Mr. Matheson Lang, who gave a carefully studied rendering. There was a good deal of cutting, some of it regrettable. Mr. Lang has not fettered himself wholly by conventional notions of the part, and has suggested some new points in his rendering. He seems to act up to the conception that Hamlet's madness, at first put on as a veil, became a real infliction. His elocution was fresh, varied, and impressive.

Miss Margaret Halstan made a charming Ophelia, and in the mad scene with her flowers was especially touching. Mr. H. O. Nicholson as Polonius, and Mr. F. G. Worlock as Laertes acted skilfully. Gertrude the Queen was played by Miss Helen Haye with some dignity, but no originality. Mr. Nicholson was resuscitated from the slain Polonius to reappear as the Gravedigger. That did not suit his humour or his voice so well. Mr. Murray Carrington was Horatio and rendered that pleasant part effectively. The house was better filled than at the previous performances.

On Friday evening, the Birthday, for the revival of 'Cymbeline,' the house was filled in every corner. The title-rôle was filled by Mr. E. A. Warburton effectively. Imogen was well sustained by Miss Margaret Halstan. The guileful Queen and stepmother was acted skilfully by Miss Helen Haye. Of the four chief male parts, Mr. H. O. Nicholson played Cloten so pleasantly and humorously as to cause regret for his decapitation. Posthumus Leonatus was performed by Mr. Benson himself, who did not seem so much at ease in this part as he is wont to be. Iachimo, the villain of the play, was rendered by Mr. Cyril Keightley impressively. The Pisanio of Mr. Murray Carrington showed careful insight. Guiderius and Arviragus (Mr. F. G. Worlock and Mr. Guy Rathbone) made a good pair of brethren for Imogen, but their chant over her dead body might have been considerably improved.

The play was a little hurried, for there is generally some speechmaking on the stage after the acting is over on the Birthday. On this occasion the Mayor came on the stage, and cordially welcomed the visitors, chief among whom was the American Ambassador; warmly thanked Mr. Benson for all he had done for Shakespeare and the Memorial Theatre; and expressed the regret of himself and of Stratford at the loss of their old friend Mr. Weir. He also alluded to the great loss the Memorial Committee had sustained by the death of Mr. Charles Flower. Mr. Benson in his peasant's dress replied suitably.

On Saturday Mr. Benson had an unusually heavy day, taking two principal parts, both strenuous. In the afternoon he performed King Henry V., a part he delights in, with all the enthusiasm of the youthful King. The Fluellen of Mr. Moffat Johnston had a humour of its own, but it did not carry the audience away as it was wont to do in this theatre. The Pistol of Mr. E. A. Warburton was rather heavy, and the character of Nym hardly gave Mr. H. O. Nicholson his chance. Charles VI. of France was creditably represented by Mr. F. G. Worlock, and Lewis the Dauphin by Mr. Murray Carrington. But the palm must be given to the performers on the English side as actors as well as soldiers. Katharine was rendered brightly by Miss Olive Noble; and Mrs. Quickly is one of Miss Elinor Aickin's special parts. Miss Leah Hanman gave a delightful performance of the sprightly boy. The play was well set on, and the battle scene represented by a tableau vivant.

In the evening Mr. Benson performed Richard III. He somewhat exaggerates the bodily defects of Richard to harmonize with the scorn of his enemies, and he shows how these defects had somewhat moulded his character. Mr. H. O. Nicholson did the best he could for Edward IV.; and Mr. Otho Stuart interested the audience with his rendering of the unfortunate Duke of Clarence. Mr. Murray Carrington made the Duke of Buckingham rather too fresh and ingenuous to be "the other self" of such a one as Richard III. The "little princes" always evoke sympathy, but the younger, Richard, Duke of York, is made the more attractive in the representation by Miss Hanman. None of the other actors attained special success. The group of unfortunate royal ladies had all some claim to distinction.

The work of the second week began with 'The Merchant of Venice.' Those who knew Mr. Ainley was coming down to play in it expected he would be the Bassanio, but he took Shylock. Made up massively, he acted the Jew thoughtfully, without exaggeration, and without ranting. Mr. Murray Carrington's Antonio was exceptionally fine. Mr. Cyril Keightley played the penniless lover with personal charm. Miss Constance Collier was Portia. The play was well set on, though somewhat over contracted, even in some of the favourite scenes. 'The Belle's Stratagem' was repeated in the evening.

'Macbeth' was down for Tuesday afternoon, to be played "in curtains" by Mr. Arthur Bouchier and Miss Violet Vanbrugh; but through some alteration in Mr. Bouchier's other arrangements this performance fell through.

'Richard II.' was the piece for the evening, in which the title-rôle is one of Mr. Benson's special studies. The rest of the company played well up to him.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—S. L. P.—E. D.—F. P.—C. J. F.—E. H. B.—Received.

J. O. (N.S.W.).—Not suitable for us.

WE cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

NO notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

WE do not undertake to give the value of books, china, pictures, &c.

THE ATHENÆUM,

PRICE THREEPENCE.

Is published every FRIDAY in time for the Afternoon Mails. Terms of Subscription, free by post to all parts of the United Kingdom: For Six Months, 7s. 6d.; for Twelve Months, 13s. 3d. For the Continent and all places within the Postal Union: For Six Months, 9s.; for Twelve Months, 16s., commencing from any date, payable in advance to

JOHN C. FRANCIS,

Athenæum Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
AUTHORS' AGENTS	514
BELL & SONS	540
BISHOP'S VARALETTES	542
BLACKWOOD & SONS	543
CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS	515
CATALOGUES	514
CHIATTO & WINDUS	544
DUCKWORTH & CO.	518
EDUCATIONAL	513
EXHIBITIONS	513
FOULIS	543
HARPER & BROS.	517
HEINEMANN	518
INSURANCE COMPANIES	542
LECTURES	513
LONG	518
LONGMANS & CO.	540
MACMILLAN & CO.	520
MAGAZINES, &c.	515
METHUEN & CO.	519
MISCELLANEOUS	514
MURRAY	543
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS	543
PARTNERSHIP	514
PITMAN & SONS	516
PRINTERS	514
PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS	513
SALES BY AUCTION	514
SHIPPING	542
SITUATIONS VACANT	513
SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE	541
SONNENSCHNEIN & CO.	520
TYPE-WRITERS, &c.	514
UNWIN	520

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

NOW READY, fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

LONDON'S LURE. An Anthology of Prose and Verse Passages bearing on London. By HELEN and LEWIS MELVILLE. With Title-Page, Binding, and End-Papers designed by M. V. WHEELHOUSE.

NOW READY, crown 8vo, with 4 Coloured Plates and 24 other Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

FISH STORIES. Alleged and Experienced, with a Little History, Natural and Unnatural. By CHARLES FREDERICK HOLDER and DAVID STARR JORDAN.

NOW READY, fcap. 8vo, 1s. 6d. net.

THE WAY OF LIGHT, and other Verses. By the Rev. THOMAS J. HARDY, Author of 'The Gospel of Pain.'

JUST PUBLISHED, post 8vo, with 48 Illustrations and a Map, 7s. 6d. net.

ALASKA the Great Country. By ELLA HIGGINSON.

In this volume Miss Higginson, whose writings are well known in America, tells the story of the growth of Alaska, for which at present little-known country she predicts a great future. The numerous illustrations are a special feature of the book.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY.

Post 8vo, 352 pp., 8s. net.

THE FRESHWATER AQUARIUM AND ITS INHABITANTS. By OTTO EGGELING and FREDERICK EHRENBURG.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY.

8vo, 14s. net.

CHAPTERS OF OPERA. Being Historical and Critical Observations and Records concerning the Lyric Drama in New York, from its Earliest Days down to the Present Time. By HENRY EDWARD KREHBIEL, Musical Critic of the New York Tribune.

NOW READY, 8vo, 6s. 6d. net.

ECONOMICS. A Briefer Course. By HENRY ROGERS SEAGER, Professor of Political Economy in Columbia University.

NOW READY, 8vo, 4s. 6d.

POLYGLOT PHRASES. Selected and Arranged by LEWIS NICHOLAS WORTHINGTON, M.A. (Yale), M.D.

BELL'S LITERATURE READERS.

Illustrated. 1s. each. NEW VOLUME.

THE LITTLE DUKE. By CHARLOTTE YONGE.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS,
York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

Messrs. Longmans & Co.'s LIST.

Memoir of George Howard Wilkinson, Bishop of St. Andrews, formerly Bishop of Truro and Vicar of St. Peter's, Eaton Square. By ARTHUR JAMES MASON, D.D. With Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo, 28s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"One of the most interesting biographies published for a long time."—Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette.

"Who can study this honest, simple portraiture, drawn so faithfully in the volume before us, without being confirmed in his allegiance to the Anglo-Catholic position, without renewed confidence and assurance that God is with the Anglican Church? 'By their fruits ye shall know them.' That the English Church can and does produce saints is not to be denied in view of the inner character, spiritual vision, moral earnestness, and unaffected piety of men of the fashion of Bishop Wilkinson."—Guardian.

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION IN ONE VOLUME, WITH A SUPPLEMENTARY CHAPTER.

Industrial Efficiency: a Comparative Study of Industrial Life in England, Germany, and America.

By ARTHUR SHADWELL, M.A. M.D. Crown 8vo, 6s. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

"The most valuable and suggestive contribution to the burning question of international competition in industry that has yet been written."—Chamber of Commerce Journal.

The Springs of Helicon: a Study in the Progress of English Poetry from Chaucer to Milton.

By J. W. MACKAIL, M.A. LL.D., Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"These studies of Professor Mackail are a distinct contribution to the literature of criticism."—Yorkshire Post.

"Dr. Mackail's book runs to 200 pages, but they are 200 pages of pure delight."—Christian World.

A History of the Church of

England. By the Rev. M. W. PATTERSON, Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Oxford, Examining Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Exeter. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

Pastor Ovium: the Day-Book of a Country Parson. By JOHN HUNTLEY SKRINE. Crown 8vo, 5s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"There is not a single essay which does not contain suggestive and stimulating thought. Needless to say, all are written with the lucidity and point for which Mr. Skrine is so well known."—Church of Ireland Gazette.

An Elementary Treatment of the Theory of Spinning Tops and Gyroscopic Motion.

By HAROLD CRABTREE, M.A., Assistant Master at the Charterhouse, Godalming. With numerous Illustrations. 8vo, 5s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.) (On Monday next.)

The Science of Ethics.

By the Rev. MICHAEL CRONIN, M.A. D.D., Ex-Fellow Royal University of Ireland, Professor Clonliffe College, Dublin. Vol. I., General Ethics, 12s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

The Curious Case of Lady Purbeck: a Scandal of the XVIIth Century.

By the Author of 'The Life of Sir Kenelm Digby,' 'The Life of a Prig.' 8vo, 6s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

* * This is an account of the scandal and trial of the daughter of Sir Edward Coke, who married Sir John Villiers, created Lord Purbeck.

"A very vivacious tale.... Well worth telling when the writer possesses such a gift of crisp and precise English."

"Well worth reading."—Truth. Spectator.

"This fascinating volume."—Saturday Review.

"Attractive as romance and fascinating as history."

"A racy account."—Times. Daily Telegraph.

"Might almost be taken for romance."—Daily Chronicle.

"Highly diverting to read."—Evening Standard.

"This well-written book."—Queen.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

SOCIETY FOR PROMOTING CHRISTIAN KNOWLEDGE.

TISSOT'S ILLUSTRATED OLD TESTAMENT AND THE LIFE OF OUR SAVIOUR JESUS CHRIST.

With Notes and Explanatory Drawings by J. JAMES TISSOT. With over 750 Compositions illustrating the Work. In Four Volumes. Imperial 4to. Published at 12l. 12s., and now offered for a limited time at 4l. 4s. complete.

THE OLD TESTAMENT IN THE LIGHT OF THE HISTORICAL RECORDS AND LEGENDS OF ASSYRIA AND BABYLONIA.

By T. G. PINCHES, LL.D. M.R.A.S. Third Edition, Revised. Demy 8vo, cloth boards, 7s. 6d.

"Dr. Pinches has spared no pains to give us a really good book for popular use, and it will no doubt take its place as the standard manual on the subject."—Church Times.

TYPICAL ENGLISH CHURCHMEN.

Second Series.—Contents:—

JOHN WYCLIF. By the Rev. J. N. FIGGIS.

WILLIAM OF WYKEHAM. By W. A. SPOONER, D.D., Warden of New College, Oxford.

WILLIAM COURTENAY. By the Rev. Canon SCOTT-HOLMES.

CARDINAL BEAUFORT. By the Rev. L. B. RADFORD.

CUTHBERT TUNSTALL. By G. H. ROSS-LEWIN, M.A.

STEPHEN GARDINER. By JAMES GAIRDNER, C.B. Demy 8vo, cloth boards.

ORDINATION PROBLEMS.

Reordination and Ordination "Per Saltum" and Home Reunion. By JOHN WORDSWORTH, D.D., Bishop of Salisbury. Small post 8vo, cloth boards, 2s.

THE SYRIAC CHURCH AND FATHERS.

A brief review of the subject. By the Rev. DE LACY O'LEARY, B.D. Crown 8vo, cloth boards, 2s.

A short history of the Church in Syria and of its leaders during the first centuries of the Christian Era.

RATIONAL NECESSITY OF THEISM.

By the Rev. A. D. KELLY, M.A. Small post 8vo, cloth boards, 2s.

Deals with the Agnostic position and with the common objections to Theism.

THE USE OF DANTE AS AN ILLUSTRATOR OF SCRIPTURE.

By the Rev. Sir JOHN C. HAWKINS, Bart. Fcap. 8vo, cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

CHRISTIANITY AND HUMAN THOUGHT.

Being a Paper read before a Joint Meeting of the Clergy of the Deanery of St. John's and the Rural Deanery of Selkirk, January 13th, 1908, by the Rev. J. O. MURRAY, M.A. Small post 8vo, cloth, 6d.

EGYPT AND WESTERN ASIA IN THE LIGHT OF RECENT DISCOVERIES.

By L. W. KING, M.A. F.S.A., and H. R. HALL, M.A., of the British Museum. Containing 100 Plates and Illustrations. Small 4to, cloth boards, 10s.

"In a sumptuous volume of 470 pages Messrs. King and Hall inform the lay reader of the more important additions which have been made to our knowledge of the ancient East in the course of the last few years. The book we have read with the keenest interest."

Guardian.

SCANDINAVIAN BRITAIN (Early Britain Series).

By W. G. COLLINGWOOD, M.A. F.S.A. With Chapters introductory to the subject by the late F. YORK POWELL, M.A., sometime Professor of History in the University of Oxford. With Map. Fcap. 8vo, cloth boards, 3s. 6d.

DO WE BELIEVE?

The Law of Faith Perfected in Christ. Four Lectures delivered in St. George's, Windsor, by the Right Rev. A. BARRY, D.D. D.C.L. Small post 8vo, cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

ENGLISH CHRISTIANITY IN ITS BEGINNINGS.

By the Rev. E. H. PEARCE. Small post 8vo, cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

THE "HIGHER CRITICISM" AND THE VERDICT OF THE MONUMENTS.

By the Rev. Prof. A. H. SAYCE. Seventh Edition, Revised. Demy 8vo, cloth boards, 5s.

THE ARCHÆOLOGY OF THE CUNEIFORM INSCRIPTIONS.

Rhind Lectures by the Rev. Prof. A. H. SAYCE. New Edition, Revised. Demy 8vo, cloth boards, 5s.

LITERARY CRITICISM AND THE NEW TESTAMENT.

(Manchester Cathedral Lectures, 1907.) By the Rev. R. J. KNOWLING, D.D., Canon of Durham, and Professor of Divinity in the University of Durham, Fellow of King's College, London. Small post 8vo, cloth boards, 2s.

THE LETTERS OF ST. PAUL TO CORINTH.

By the Rev. DAWSON WALKER, M.A. D.D. Small post 8vo, cloth boards, 1s. 6d.

THE DOCTRINE OF THE VIRGIN BIRTH: A Critical Examination of the Evidences for.

By THOMAS JAMES THORBURN, M.A. LL.D. Crown 8vo, cloth boards, 2s. 6d.

ALCUIN OF YORK.

By the Right Rev. G. F. BROWNE, D.D. D.C.L., Bishop of Bristol. Illustrated. Small post 8vo, cloth boards, 5s.

BRITISH WILD FLOWERS IN THEIR NATURAL COLOURS AND FORM.

Text by Prof. HENSLOW. With over 200 Coloured Illustrations drawn from, and of the size of, the Natural Plant. The Artist, G. LAYTON, obtained the Medal from the Horticultural Society for these Drawings. Large crown 8vo, cloth boards. (In the press.)

The special merit of these Illustrations is their being true to Nature in colour, and as near as possible in size.

THE S.P.C.K. ENCYCLOPÆDIC DICTIONARY.

THE CHEAPEST COMPREHENSIVE DICTIONARY IN THE WORLD.

Now enlarged by a SUPPLEMENTARY VOLUME, making Eight Volumes in all.

A work of reference to the Words in the English Language, with a full Account of their Origin, Meaning, Pronunciation, and Use. Consisting of 6,110 pages, imp. 8vo. It contains over 200,000 words, and is illustrated by Coloured Plates and over 3,000 Wood Engravings and Diagrams. Invaluable for the Home, the College, and the School. In EIGHT VOLUMES, cloth, 35s.; half bound, 42s. SUPPLEMENTARY VOLUME separately, cloth, 10s. 6d.; half bound, 12s.

CHEAP RE-ISSUE OF ILLUSTRATED HANDBOOKS OF ART HISTORY OF ALL AGES AND COUNTRIES.

Edited by Sir E. J. POYNTER, P.R.A., and Prof. ROGER SMITH, F.R.I.B.A.

Large crown 8vo, cloth boards, each 2s. 6d.

ARCHITECTURE: CLASSIC AND EARLY CHRISTIAN.

By Prof. T. ROGER SMITH and JOHN SLATER, B.A.

ARCHITECTURE: GOTHIC AND RENAISSANCE.

By Prof. T. ROGER SMITH and Sir EDWARD J. POYNTER, P.R.A.

SCULPTURE: EGYPTIAN, ASSYRIAN, GREEK, AND ROMAN.

By GEORGE REDFORD, F.R.C.S.

SCULPTURE: GOTHIC, RENAISSANCE AND MODERN

By LEADER SCOTT.

PAINTING: GERMAN, FLEMISH, AND DUTCH.

By H. J. WILMOT BUXTON, M.A., and Sir EDWARD J. POYNTER, P.R.A.

PAINTING: ENGLISH AND AMERICAN.

By H. J. WILMOT BUXTON, M.A., and S. R. KOEHLER.

WATER-COLOUR PAINTING IN ENGLAND.

By G. R. REDGRAVE.

PAINTING: CLASSIC AND ITALIAN.

By Sir EDWARD J. POYNTER, P.R.A., and PERCY R. HEAD, B.A.

PAINTING: SPANISH AND FRENCH.

By GERARD SMITH.

LONDON: NORTHUMBERLAND AVENUE, W.C.; 43, QUEEN VICTORIA STREET, E.C. BRIGHTON: 129, NORTH STREET.

Magazines, &c.—continued.G A L I C I A

THE SWITZERLAND OF SPAIN

By ANNETTE M. B. MEAKIN

With 105 Illustrations and a Map.

Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

"Wonderfully comprehensive and valuable."

Glasgow Herald."Miss Meakin shows a complete mastery of her subject."—Glasgow News.

"It is a fascinating country, and Miss Meakin's is a fascinating and extremely well-written book."

Observer."Here we have the practised author, able to detect at a glance the materials fit for her purpose."—Yorkshire Daily Post."Miss Meakin is at her best when she is telling us what she saw, and then her best is decidedly good."—Times Literary Supplement."There is a very fine, a very original, and a very accurate chapter upon Pedro de Mezonzo's Salve Regina, the like of which has not appeared in any other work."—Morning Post.

METHUEN & CO. 36, Essex Street, London, W.C.

THIS DAY IS PUBLISHED.

In 2 royal 8vo vols. price 2l. 2s. net.

THE SCOTTISH GREY FRIARS.

BY

WILLIAM MOIR BRYCE.

With Photogravures, Plates, and Illustrations throughout the Text.

Volume I. HISTORY.

Volume II. DOCUMENTS.

WILLIAM GREEN & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

BY DR. GEORGE PARKIN.

JUST OUT.

SIR JOHN A. MACDONALD.

By GEORGE R. PARKIN, C.M.G. LL.D.

In 1 vol. cloth, 8vo, 380 pages, with Frontispiece,
12s. 6d. net."Dr. Parkin writes straightforwardly in simple language, and has, moreover, the faculty of giving all that is essential to know of the various important questions of the day in small compass without loading the picture with unnecessary detail."—Times."It is well that a writer so admirably equipped as Dr. Parkin should have been entrusted with this monograph about one of the greatest statesmen of the Dominion. Sir John Macdonald represented better, perhaps, than any other man the aspirations of Canada, and the story of his public life is in itself a history for almost half a century of that country."—Standard."It is with this breadth and in this spirit that Mr. Parkin has treated his subject, and the result is a volume possessing every quality of Imperial interest."—Outlook."It would be strange if a book which has Sir John Macdonald for its subject, and Dr. George Parkin for its author, did not prove to be of more than ordinary interest."—*British Empire Review.*London: Published by T. C. & E. C. JACK,
16, Henrietta Street, W.C.; and Edinburgh.THE BRITISH EMPIRE:

Its Past, its Present, and its Future.

Edited by A. F. POLLARD, M.A.

Pp. 896, 5s. net.

Fifteen Special Contributors, and over a Hundred Authorities in all parts of the Empire have collaborated in its production.

LEAGUE OF THE EMPIRE,
Caxton Hall, Westminster; and all Booksellers.

IN THE PRESS.

SANGIMIGNANO DI VAL D'ELSA,

IN TUSCANY.

An Art-Historical Monograph.

BY

JEAN CARLYLE GRAHAM and ELIZABETH M. DERBISHIRE.

With 27 Pen-and-Ink Drawings, many hitherto Unpublished Documents from Tuscan State Archives, a Bibliography, and numerous Copyright Photographs of Frescoes.

ERMANON LOESCHER & CO. (W. Regenberg), Rome.

Shipping.PLEASURE CRUISES.

From MARSEILLES.

Rail and Steamship Connexions from London.

No. 4.—MAY 21 to JUNE 12.

NAPLES, ALGIERS, LISBON AND LONDON.

Fares from 20 guineas.

SPITZBERGEN.

From LONDON and LEITH.

No. 5.—JULY 1 to JULY 27.

SPITZBERGEN, NORWAY, &c.

Fares from 30 guineas.

NORWAY.

From LONDON and LEITH.

No. 6.—JULY 29 to AUGUST 11.

No. 7.—AUGUST 13 to AUGUST 26.

THE NORWEGIAN FJORDS,

BY

Fares from 12 Guineas.

P. & O. CRUISING YACHT "VECTIS."Insurance Companies.ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS, SICKNESS, EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY, BURGLARY, AND
FIDELITY GUARANTEE RISKS

INSURED AGAINST BY THE

RAILWAY PASSENGERS ASSURANCE CO.

Capital (fully subscribed), £1,000,000. Claims paid, £5,600,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

A. VIAN, Secretary.

EVERY MAN

Whose estate will be liable for duty should read

A POPULAR FALLACY.

Sent post free on application to the

NATIONAL PROVIDENT
INSTITUTION

FOR MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.

48 Gracechurch Street, London.

DO YOUR FEET ACHE? If so, use Marshall's Foot Tonic, "PEDESTRIAN." For all relaxed, swollen, tender conditions its action is simply magical; it cools, comforts, and enables the foot to resist boot pressure. A trial will convince. 1s. 3d. and 2s. 6d. per bottle, post free.—MARSHALL & CO., 70A, Basinghall Street, E.C.HIGHEST AWARDS.

CORK, 1883. LIVERPOOL, 1886. PARIS, 1886. ADELAIDE, 1887.

PARIS, 1889. CHICAGO, 1893. PARIS, 1900. ST. LOUIS, 1904.

FRANCO-BRITISH, 1908.

OLD BUSHMILLS.

Have you tried this—the Prize-Winning Whisky?

From all Wine Merchants.

Address of nearest Agent sent on application.

"OLD BUSHMILLS" DISTILLERY CO., LTD.,
20, Mark Lane, E.C.HOW GOUT INVADES THE SYSTEM.*THE IMPORTANCE OF ANALYSING ONE'S FEELINGS.

AN irrefutable fact is that uric acid, which causes gout, has so many veiled forms of presenting itself that gouty ailments, though unsuspected, are so common as to cause a preponderating percentage of the ills with which suffering humanity is afflicted.

To name a few of the commoner ills which are caused by uric acid, there are gout, rheumatic gout, and gouty rheumatism, which are characterized by extremely severe pain, inflammation, stiffness, and swellings, chiefly in the joints; gouty eczema, an obstinate affection of the skin; lumbago, persistent and intense pain in the loins; sciatica, which sets up acute pain from the hips down the thighs to the knees, and often causes lameness; stone and gravel, caused by crystalline uratic deposits, and giving rise to agonising pains and often prostrating illness; and neuritis, which from a numbness or tingling in the muscles of the arm develops into very severe pain.

That feeling of lassitude and incapacity for work which one is so apt to attribute to a mere sluggish condition of the liver, and that exhausted feeling of mind and body which one associates with nothing more serious than a "run down" condition, are each signs by which the gouty habit manifests its presence in its early stages.

We invariably find that the gouty subject is liable to "come-and-go" pains, flatulence, heartburn, and other dyspeptic symptoms, while more unmistakable signs of the advancing menace of gout are irritation and burning of the skin, and small lumps on the arms, ankles, finger joints, eyelids, or outer rim of the ear.

THE IDEAL REMEDY.

Relief from the symptoms we have detailed may be had temporarily by various remedies, but if permanent benefit is to be obtained—and, what is more important, if serious gouty ailments are to be avoided—it is absolutely imperative to employ a uric acid eliminant.

As an active and effective uric acid eliminant, Bishop's Varalettes have the power of going to the very root of the evil in all gouty cases.

To those not well who have vainly tried various means of regaining health, we say: Analyse your feelings carefully now—ascertain if the description of the early gouty signs such as we have detailed above fits your case, and if it does—if you do have acidity, heartburn, flatulence, "come-and-go" pains, &c.—assume that you are a gouty subject, take Bishop's Varalettes for a time, and at the end of it you will be agreeably surprised at the difference in yourself.

To the unfortunate victim of any gouty ailment—no matter what stage it may have reached—we say: Start taking Bishop's Varalettes to-day, and you will obtain genuine relief, because it will result from the rational process of eliminating the very substances which cause your suffering.

Bishop's Varalettes may be used indefinitely with no ill effects. They are taken in any beverage, dissolve instantly with brisk effervescence, and are quite tasteless. Of all chemists, 1s., 2s. 5s. (25 days' treatment), or direct from the sole makers, address below.

A BOOKLET ON GOUTY AILMENTS.

Bishop's Varalettes are taken in half a tumblerful or more of water at meals or other convenient times. They dissolve rapidly, with brisk effervescence, and make a tasteless but bright and sparkling draught.

The gouty subject can avoid much suffering by a knowledge of certain facts about his complaint contained in our booklet. It contains an authoritative dietary, telling what to eat, drink, and avoid, and how to secure immunity from gouty troubles. A copy will be sent, post free, on application for Booklet V. to Alfred Bishop, Ltd., Manufacturing Chemists (Est. 1857), 48, Spelman Street, London, N.E.

Bishop's Varalettes may be had of the leading chemists in every country. Our principal general Agents abroad are:—
AUSTRALIA.—Potter & Birks, 1½, Macquarie Place, Sydney, N.S.W.INDIA.—Mr. W. Moore, c/o Grindlay Groom & Co., Bombay.
UNITED STATES.—Lehn & Fink, 120, William Street, New York.

SPAIN.—Foye y Gimenez, Calle Gerona, 4 pral, Barcelona.

FRANCE.—Roberts et Cie, 5, Rue de la Paix, Paris.

RUSSIA.—Mr. F. Bremmel, Serpoukhovskaya Street, 17, St. Petersburg.

Oxford University Press.

PRINCIPLES AND METHODS OF UNIVERSITY REFORM.

Being a Letter addressed to the University of Oxford,
By LORD CURZON OF KEDLESTON.
8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

COMPLETION OF THE WORK.

THE IMPERIAL GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

NEW EDITION.

In 26 vols. 8vo, cloth, 5l. net; morocco back, 6l. 6s. net.
The 4 vols of 'THE INDIAN EMPIRE' separately, 6s. net each in cloth, or 7s. 6d. net with morocco back; the Atlas separately, 15s. net in cloth, or 17s. 6d. net with morocco back.

Vol. I. DESCRIPTIVE.
Vol. II. HISTORICAL.
Vol. III. ECONOMIC.
Vol. IV. ADMINISTRATIVE.
Vol. V-XXIV. ALPHABETICAL GAZETTEER.
Vol. XXV. INDEX.
Vol. XXVI. ATLAS.

Each Volume contains a Map of India specially prepared for this edition.

THE ENGLISH FACTORIES IN

INDIA. By W. FOSTER. 8vo. (Published under the Patronage of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council.) Vol. III., 1624-1629, 12s. 6d. net.
Previously Published.—Vol. I., 1618-1621, 12s. 6d. net.
Vol. II., 1622-1623, 12s. 6d. net.

ON THE GRAMMAR OF ROWING.

Three Lectures by E. WARRE. 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.
Clarendon Press Catalogue (160 pages) post free on application.

London: HENRY FROWDE,
Oxford University Press, Amen Corner, E.C.

NIETZSCHE

"The most remarkable writer of Europe for a generation."

NEW AND COMPLETE EDITION OF WORKS.

THOUGHTS OUT OF SEASON. Vol. I.
With Preface and Introduction to Series.
230 pp. 2s. 6d. net. [Ready.]

THOUGHTS OUT OF SEASON. Vol. II.
214 pp. 2s. 6d. net. [Ready.]

THE BIRTH OF TRAGEDY. With Biographical Introduction by the Philosopher's
Sister. 230 pp. 2s. 6d. net. [Ready.]

THUS SPAKE ZARATHUSTRA. With
Introduction and Commentary. 650 pp.
6s. net. [Ready in May.]

BEYOND GOOD AND EVIL. With
Introduction. 276 pp. 3s. 6d. net. [Ready.]

THE FUTURE OF OUR EDUCATIONAL INSTITUTIONS. 2s. 6d. net. [Ready in May.]

To be published in the Autumn:—

HUMAN - ALL - TOO - HUMAN. 2 vols. each 5s. net.

THE GAY SCIENCE. 6s. net.

THE WILL TO POWER. Vol. I. 5s. net.

A Complete List of NIETZSCHE Literature post free from

T. N. FOULIS, 21, Paternoster Square, E.C.

JUST PUBLISHED.
THE REALITIES OF WAR.
READ

THE GREEN CURVE, And other Stories.

By OLE-LUK-OIE. 6s.

The author of these stories has the true prophetic gift; his vivid pictures of what modern warfare means in no way outrage the bounds of possibility. He shows as what a terrible toll the conditions of modern warfare will levy on combatants and non-combatants alike. "Ole-Luk-Oie's" story 'The Kite,' when it first appeared in Blackwood's Magazine, was at once accepted as a masterpiece of descriptive writing.

SIDE TRACKS AND BRIDLE PATHS.

By LIONEL JAMES ("The Intelligence Officer"),
Author of 'On the Heels of De Wet.' Illustrated. 6s.
Mr. James has used his wide travels to the best advantage. In this book he covers ground in Persia, India, Russia, South Africa, Germany, Turkey, and England.

"The book has a welcome up-to-dateness, and provides a very readable volume of varied adventure, observation, and anecdote."—Observer.

"Characterized by the masterly grasp of the subject, the same terse and forceful expression of the author's meaning, that went so far to give to his earlier books the success they achieved."—Scotsman.

THE SHORT CUT TO INDIA.

The Record of a Journey along the Route of the Baghdad Railway.

By DAVID FRASER, Author of 'A Modern Campaign' and 'The Marches of Hindustan.'

With 83 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

"A most readable book."—Times.
"Should be read widely."—Morning Post.

THE ENGLISHWOMAN IN INDIA.

By MAUD DIVER, Author of 'Captain Desmond, V.C.'
5s. net.

There are few qualified to write with greater authority upon Indian life than Mrs. Maud Diver, the popular novelist, author of 'Captain Desmond, V.C.' &c. In her new book she details with much skill and in a most interesting manner the scope of the Englishwoman's life in India as Maid, Wife, Mother, Hostess, and Housekeeper, and its duties in contact with Eastern Womanhood and Female Medical Aid. The second portion of the book is devoted to sketches of the lives of the Pioneer (native) women of India.

THE PLACE OF HISTORY IN EDUCATION

By J. W. ALLEN,
Formerly Brakenbury Exhibitioner, Hulsean Professor of Modern History at Bedford College, University of London.
5s. net.

A brilliant attempt to frame a theory and to define a system of education, and a discussion of the place of history in this ideal. History as a science is examined, and contrasted with history as a pageant, and a basis of reconciliation found in the realization by each of what is irrelevant to its purpose. That will lay the foundation of sound thinking. Concludes with an illustration, in three summary treatments of the Reformation, of the adoption of unscientific standpoints, bringing out the kind of differences in the presentation of correlated facts that may be made by an alteration of the point of view.

SURE TO BE WIDELY READ AND DISCUSSED.

6/- NOVELS. 6/-

THE NEW JUNE. By HENRY NEWBOLT.
CECILIA KIRKHAM'S SON. By Mrs.
KENNETH COMBE.

"The most brilliant of all the Magazines."

READ IN

BLACKWOOD for MAY.

NAVAL DEFENCE BY PANIC.
By an Admiral of Fifty-One Years' Service.

Other Contents.

A MAN'S MAN. Chapters 1-3. By Ian Hay, Author of 'The Right Stuff.'
SIR JOHN ARDAGH. By General the Right Hon. Sir
Henry Brackenbury, G.C.B.
THE YEAR ROUND IN NORTHERN NIGERIA. By
W. B. Thomson.
SIR JOHN SINCLAIR AND ARTHUR YOUNG. By A. T. S. Goodrick.
A WINTER VENTURE. By X.
THE ADMIRABLE CRICHTON. By Charles Whibley.
AN ANGLO-INDIAN WORTHY.
SIR HUGH THE PALMER. By Henry Newbolt.
MUSINGS WITHOUT METHOD:—Relics of the Saints—
A Modern Pilgrimage—The Body-Snatcher Abroad—The Strike at Ruskin College—Les Disciplines de la France
—The Triumph of the Second-Rate.
IN MEMORY OF SWINBURNE. By Alfred Noyes.
THE COUP D'ETAT IN TURKEY.
THE PARLIAMETARY SITUATION.

WM. BLACKWOOD & SONS,
Edinburgh and London.

Mr. Murray's New Books.

KUROPATKIN'S SUPPRESSED MEMOIRS

ENTITLED

THE RUSSIAN ARMY AND THE JAPANESE WAR.

With Maps and Illustrations. 2 vols. Demy 8vo, 28s. net.

THE LIFE OF MAJOR-GENERAL SIR JOHN ARDAGH.

By his Wife, SUSAN, COUNTESS OF MALMESBURY
(LADY ARDAGH). With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

THE BANCROFTS.

Recollections of Sixty Years. By Sir SQUIRE and LADY
BANCROFT. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

ESSAYS OF POETS AND POETRY.

Ancient and Modern. By T. HERBERT WARREN, Vice-Chancellor of Oxford and President of Magdalen. Demy
8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

SIX OXFORD THINKERS:

GIBBON, NEWMAN, FROUDE, CHURCH, MORLEY,
PATER. By ALGERNON CECIL, M.A. (Oxon), of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

THE ANNALS OF TACITUS.

BOOK XI.-XVI. An English Translation, with Introduction and Notes and Maps. By GEORGE G. RAMSAY, Litt.D. LL.D. Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

This volume is a continuation of that published in 1904 containing a translation of the first six books.
The aim of the writer has been to present a version of Tacitus which shall satisfy scholars by strict fidelity to the original, and at the same time enable the English reader to dismiss from his mind the idea that he is reading a translation.

HORACE A. VACHELL'S NEW NOVEL. AN IMPENDING SWORD.

By the Author of 'Brothers,' 'The Hill.' 2s. 6d. net.

NOW READY. THE CENTENARY NUMBER. THE QUARTERLY REVIEW.

No. 419. APRIL. 6s.

THE CENTENARY OF TENNYSON. By Emile Faguet, of the Académie Française.

THE CENTENARY OF DARWIN.

I. EVOLUTION AND THE CHURCH.

II. EVOLUTIONARY ETHICS. By Prof. Sorley.

III. PRAGMATISM: THE EVOLUTION OF TRUTH.
By H. V. Knox.

THE ESSENTIALS OF GREAT POETRY. By Alfred
AUSTIN, Poet Laureate.

THE REMAINS OF ANCIENT PAINTING. By H.
STUART JONES. Illustrated.

OVID AND SHAKESPEARE'S SONNETS. By Sidney
Lee.

EARTHQUAKES AND THEIR CAUSES. By C. Davison,
F.G.S.

A CENTURY OF ENGLISH MUSIC. By J. A. Fuller-Maitland.

INNOCENT THE GREAT. By W. Barry, D.D.

THE REFORM OF THE POOR LAW.

THE MEANING OF MODERNISM. By Prof. Inge.

MR. LOWELL ON ENGLISH PARTY GOVERNMENT.
By Prof. Dicey.

THE MEMOIRS OF MADAME DE BOIGNE. By P. F.
Willert.

THE NEAR EASTERN QUESTION.

I. AUSTRIA-HUNGARY. By A. R. Colquhoun.

II. THE TURKISH EMPIRE. By G. F. Abbott.

LORD MORLEY AND INDIAN REFORM.

UNION IN SOUTH AFRICA.

THE CENTENARY OF THE 'QUARTERLY REVIEW.'
Illustrated.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street, W.

FROM CHATTO & WINDUS'S LIST.

A STIRRING TALE OF MODERN PALESTINE.

CROWN 8vo, 6s.

NOW READY.

THE ROAD OF NO RETURN.

By A. C. INCHBOLD,

Author of 'Under the Syrian Sun,' 'Lisbon and Cintra,' 'Phantasma,' 'Princess Feather,' &c.

FIRST REVIEWS.

"Mrs. A. C. Inchbold has given us something fresh and strong, and altogether most welcome in 'The Road of No Return.' It is a fine romance in a modern setting, with a background which is beautifully portrayed."

Liverpool Daily Post.

"Mrs. Inchbold opens up a field almost hitherto untouched in fiction. The colouring of her novel is rich, fresh, and impressive. This is a sound and unusual piece of work."—Morning Leader.

"The story will be found full of action and pregnant with thought.....It is a moving tale the book unfolds, and the reader whose sympathy is not stirred by it must be very hard of heart."—Scotsman.

"The story is well put together, and the human and humanitarian interests carefully balanced.....The contrast between the lovers has a quality that is almost Shavian.....Mrs. Inchbold has evidently an intimate experience of Russian life and character."—Manchester Guardian.

"The fortunes of a couple of high-souled enthusiasts form the foundation upon which a remarkable fictional superstructure is raised.....Mrs. Inchbold's characterization is admirable, and the glimpses of Palestine contained in these illuminative pages will be eagerly appreciated."—East Anglian Times.

A Castle of Dreams. By Netta Syrett. 6s.

Author of 'The Child of Promise,' 'Anne Page,' &c.

"A Castle of Dreams' is a charming story."—Morning Post.

The June Princess. By Constance Smedley. 6s.

Author of 'An April Princess.'

"There is a great charm in the book."—Standard.

The Merry Heart. By Frank A. Swinnerton. 6s.

"The book holds the reader's interest strongly throughout, and the dénouement is startling and unexpected."—Sheffield Telegraph.

The Painted Mountain. By Peter Lauristoun. 6s.

"The novel is able and thoughtful to a degree."—Globe.

Idolatry. By Alice Perrin. 6s.

"Idolatry' is a real triumph."—Times.

[Third Impression.]

Julian Revelstone. By Justin McCarthy. 6s.

[Second Impression.]

"A charming tale, pleasantly told."—Daily Chronicle.

A Question of Means. By M. B. Cross. 6s.

[Second Impression.]

"This is a quite admirable novel."—Daily Telegraph.

The Rogue of Rye. By W. Willmott Dixon. 6s.

"Here is an excellent tale."—Daily Telegraph.

London: CHATTO & WINDUS, 111, St. Martin's Lane, W.C.

Professor Holmes's New Book.

NOTES ON THE SCIENCE OF PICTURE MAKING.

By C. J. HOLMES, M.A.,

Slade Professor of Fine Arts in the University of Oxford.

With a Photogravure Frontispiece, demy 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 7s. 6d. net.

"Prof. Holmes has done a remarkable and original thing: he has applied commonsense to the arts of design in an appropriate way.....Our author keeps constantly before him the painter's actual problem; almost all that he says is for use in the studio, and we may fairly add that since Reynolds's discourses the student has never had put before him such a fruitful and suggestive guide to his endeavours."—Athenæum.

A SHORT HISTORY OF OUR OWN TIMES.

From the Accession of Queen Victoria to that of King Edward VII.

By JUSTIN MCCARTHY,

Author of 'The Larger History of Our Own Times.'

A NEW EDITION, enlarged, crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

Also a SCHOOL EDITION, post 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d.

THE SULTAN AND HIS SUBJECTS.

By RICHARD DAVEY.

With Photogravure Portrait. Demy 8vo, cloth, 7s. 6d. net.

"One of the best books ever written on Turkey."—Saturday Review.

"The best book on Turkey that has yet appeared.....a book that goes to the root of the political troubles in Turkey."—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE WORKS OF

ALGERNON CHARLES SWINBURNE. COLLECTED POEMS.

In 6 vols. crown 8vo, 36s. net the Set.

TRAGEDIES.

In 5 vols. crown 8vo, 30s. net the Set.

Complete Catalogue of Mr. Swinburne's Works post free on application.

NEW MEDICI PRINTS

WILL BE ISSUED DURING MAY.

ITALIAN SERIES.

No. XV. TITIAN
" XVI. CARPACCIO
" XIX. RAPHAEL
" XIV. MANTEGNA

Bacchus and Ariadne
Vision of S. Ursula
Madonna della Colonna
Madonna, Child, and Cherubim

Gallery.

London ...
Venice ...
Berlin ...
Milan ...

Colour Surface.

25 by 23 ...
27 by 26½ ...
22 by 16½ ...
20½ by 16½ ...

Price.

*25s. 0d. net
*25s. 0d. "
17s. 6d. "
17s. 6d. "

ENGLISH SERIES.

Eng. III. HOPPNER
" IV. ROMNEY

Countess of Oxford
Lady Hamilton with a Goat

London ...
" ...

19½ by 15½ ...
25 by 20 ...

†12s. 6d. "
†21s. 0d. "

NATIONAL PORTRAIT SERIES.

N.P.S. II. Unknown

William Shakespeare

Stratford ...

18 by 13½ ...

†12s. 6d. "

FLEMISH SERIES.

Fl. VI. VERMEER
" VII. TERBORCH
" VIII. Q. MATSYS
" III. FRANZ HALS

The Pearl Necklace
The Concert
The Magdalen
A Family Group

Berlin ...
" ...
Antwerp ...
London ...

21½ by 18 ...
21¾ by 17¼ ...
17¾ by 11¾ ...
24¾ by 14¾ ...

†15s. 0d. "
†15s. 0d. "
†17s. 6d. "
*21s. 0d. "

* Postage of Prints STARRED, 9d.; of all others, 6d. (three or less in parcel).

† Signifies that prices will be raised on publication.

List post free. The COMPLETELY ILLUSTRATED CATALOGUE, with particulars of Annual Subscription, Frames, &c., Three Stamps.

THE MEDICI SOCIETY, LTD., 1B, Albemarle Street, Piccadilly, London, W.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4254.

SATURDAY, MAY 8, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

Probident Institutions.

ROYAL LITERARY FUND

(For the assistance of Authors and their Families who are in want).

The 119th ANNIVERSARY DINNER will be held on THURSDAY May 13, at the WHITEHALL ROOMS, HOTEL METROPOLE, at 7 for 7.30 p.m.

ANDREW LANG, Esq. D.Litt. in the Chair.

Stewards.

Mrs. E. A. Abbey.
Madame Albanesi.
S. Cameron Alexander, Esq.
Miss M. Allan.
Edward Arnold, Esq.
J. B. Atlay, Esq.
Thomas G. Bain, Esq.
Mrs. Mary M. Banks.
J. M. Barrie, Esq.
Mrs. Russell Barrington.
Mrs. Sacheverell Bateman.
Sir Alfred Bateman, K.C.M.G.
The Earl Bathurst, C.M.G.
Otto Beit, Esq.
Lady Bell.
Richard Bentley, Esq. V.P.S.A.
W. D. Black, Esq.
James H. Blackwood, Esq.
William Blackwood, Esq.
Mrs. L. Brackenbury.
The Lady Brassey.
The Lord Brassey, G.C.B.
Curtis Brown, Esq.
Sir Henry Bulwer, G.C.M.G.
The Very Rev. The Dean of Canterbury.
J. B. Capper, Esq.
John B. Carrington, Esq.
Valentine Chisol, Esq.
J. Stewart Clark, Esq., of Dundas.
The Right Hon. Arthur Cohen.
K.C.
Nathaniel L. Cohen, Esq., L.C.C.
W. P. Courtney, Esq.
T. F. Dillon Coker, Esq., F.S.A.
Walter D. Cronin, Esq.
J. W. Cross, Esq.
William G. Crum, Esq.
The Hon. Mr. Justice Darling.
Gerald Duckworth, Esq.
The Hon. Mrs. Alfred Felkin
(Ellen Thorneycroft Fowler).
J. Ferguson, Esq., C.M.G. (of Ceylon).
His Grace the Duke of Fife, K.T.
G.C.V.O.
W. Warde Fowler, Esq.
John Galeworthy, Esq.
Sir H. A. Giffard, K.C.
Sir Thomas Glen-Coats, Bart. M.P.
The Rev. J. Gow, Litt.D. Head Master of Westminster.
Peter Graham, Esq. R.A.
William Fillerby Green, Esq.
William H. Hadow, Esq. Mus.Bac.
Miss Beatrice Harraden.
Anthony Hope Hawkins, Esq.
John J. Haworth, Esq.
Maurice H. Hewlett, Esq.
Miss Eleanor Hull.
George Jamieson, Esq. C.M.G.
Miss Margaret Knowles.
Sir R. Hamilton Lang, K.C.M.G.
The Marquess of Lansdowne, K.G.
Robertson Lawson, Esq.
Mrs. W. E. Hartpole Lecky.
The Rev. A. G. L'Estrange.
Lady Lindsay.
Charles J. Longman Esq.

T. Norton Longman, Esq.
Colonel Sir Fitzroy D. Maclean, Bart. K.C.B.
Campbell D. Mackellar, Esq.
James MacLehose, Esq.
Frederick Macmillan, Esq.
Maurice Macmillan, Esq.
J. MacWhirter, Esq. R.A.
Laurie Magnus, Esq.
C. Brinsley Marlay, Esq.
Sir Theodore Martin, K.C.B.
K.C.V.O.
A. E. W. Mason, Esq. M.P.
J. Frank Mathieson, Esq.
W. B. Maxwell, Esq.
Sir Henry C. Maxwell-Lyte, K.C.B. F.S.A.
Mrs. Townshend Mayer.
Miss Annette M. B. Meakin.
Claude G. Montefiore, Esq.
John G. Moubay, Esq.
John Murray, Esq. F.S.A.
Ernest Myers, Esq.
T. P. O'Connor, Esq., M.P.
Henry Oppenheim, Esq.
Mrs. Henry Parker.
The Lady Algernon Percy.
The Master of Peterhouse.
J. S. Phene, Esq., LL.D. F.S.A.
L. Owen Pike, Esq.
Sir Francis S. Powell, Bart., M.P.
W. D. Rannie, Esq.
Mrs. George Riggs (Kate Douglas Wiggin).
Charles Robert Rivington, Esq., F.S.A.
Sir Clifton Robinson, C.E.
The Marquess of Salisbury, C.B.
Sir David L. Salomons, Bart.
Leopold Salomons, Esq.
Sir Felix Schuster, Bart.
Charles Scribner, Esq.
Mrs. F. G. Smart.
Reginald J. Smith, Esq., K.C.
The Hon. W. F. D. Smith, M.P.
W. Hugh Spottiswoode, Esq.
E. Fraser Stanford, Esq.
William Stebbing, Esq.
Sir Edward D. Stern.
Mrs. S. Arthur Strong.
J. Struthers, Esq. C.E.
Mrs. McDonald Stuart.
Alfred Sutro, Esq.
Lady Sutton.
Lady Tennant.
Mrs. K. C. Thurston.
Lady Trevelyan.
George Macaulay Trevelyan, Esq.
T. Fisher Unwin, Esq.
Sir Robert Usher, Bart.
Horace A. Vachell, Esq.
A. W. Verrall, Esq., Litt.D.
Henry Wagner, Esq.
Mrs. Humphry Ward.
Sir Philip H. Waterlow, Bart.
H. G. Wells, Esq.
Graeme A. Whitelaw, Esq.
Geoffrey Williams, Esq.
Robert Younger, Esq., K.C.

A donation of Ten Guineas constitutes the donor a Life Member of the Fund. Donations to the Chairman's list will be gratefully acknowledged on behalf of the Committee by the Secretary.

A. LEWELYN ROBERTS,
40, Denison House, 296, Vauxhall Bridge Road, S.W.

Exhibitions.

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S
SPRING EXHIBITION OF PORTRAITS AND LANDSCAPES
by EARLY BRITISH and FOREIGN MASTERS is NOW OPEN.
SHEPHERD'S GALLERY, 27, King Street, St. James's.

Educational.

SOMERVILLE COLLEGE, OXFORD.—
RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP.—An ELECTION will be held this Summer to a RESEARCH FELLOWSHIP of the annual value of 120l. for Three Years. Candidates must send their Names, Three References, and a Statement of their proposed Research before MAY 15, to Miss H. DARBISHIRE, Somerville College. The Fellowship is open to all Women who (i.) have resided two years in Oxford and obtained Honours in some University Examination by October 1 next, or (ii.) have taken Honours at Cambridge or Trinity College, Dublin. Further conditions can be learnt on application to Miss DARBISHIRE.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held on JUNE 23, 24, and 25 to FILL UP NOT LESS THAN SEVEN RESIDENTIAL and TWO NON-RESIDENTIAL SCHOLARSHIPS and also some EXHIBITIONS. For particulars apply by letter to THE BURSAR, Little Dean's Yard, S.W.

LIBRARY ASSOCIATION.—PROFESSIONAL
EXAMINATION.—THE NEXT PROFESSIONAL EXAMINATION of the LIBRARY ASSOCIATION will be held JUNE 7-12, 1909, at the LONDON UNIVERSITY, SOUTH KENSINGTON, and at various Provincial Centres. Last date of entry, MAY 22.—Copies of the Syllabus, together with all details, can be obtained on application to ERNEST A. BAKER, M.A. D.Litt., Hon. Secretary, Education Committee, 24, Whitcomb Street, W.C.

LEATHERHEAD COURT, SURREY.

A London School in the Country for 45 Girls (Residents).
Principal—Miss TULLIS.
The School aims at an intellectual training suited to the individual, physical development on safe lines, and the cultivation of generous thoughts and pleasant manners.

UNIVERSITY OF DURHAM.

The EXAMINATION for SCHOLARSHIPS in CLASSICS, MATHEMATICS, and THEOLOGY COMMENCES at 9 A.M. on WEDNESDAY, June 16. For particulars apply to THE SECRETARY OF EXAMINATIONS, University Offices, Durham.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH, S.E.

F. W. AVELING, M.A. B.Sc.
Preparation for Universities and Professions
Stress on Modern Languages and Science.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE,

CIRENCESTER. (Founded 1845. Reorganized 1908.)
Patron—H.M. KING EDWARD VII.
Chairman—LORD MORETON.
For Landowners, Land Agents, Surveyors, Agriculturists, Intending Colonists, &c.
FARMING AND COLONIAL BRANCH.
ESTATE MANAGEMENT AND FORESTRY BRANCH.
For Prospectus of Curriculum, Fees, Entrance Exhibitions, Scholarships, Diplomas, &c., apply to THE PRINCIPAL.
NEXT TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, May 18.

THE DOWNS SCHOOL, SEAFORD, SUSSEX.

Head Mistress—Miss LUCY ROBINSON, M.A. (late Second Mistress, St. Felix School, Southwold). References: The Principal of Bedford College, London; The Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE OF SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTORs in England or abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.
Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

Situations Vacant.

THE ROYAL HIGH SCHOOL OF EDINBURGH.

RECTORSHIP.

The EDINBURGH SCHOOL BOARD invite applications for the vacancy in the RECTORSHIP of the ROYAL HIGH SCHOOL OF EDINBURGH. Salary 700l., rising by 25l. per annum, at the discretion of the Board, to 900l. per annum. Candidates must be Graduates (with First-Class Honours) of a British University. The successful Applicant will be expected to enter on duty on OCTOBER 1 next, and, if necessary, to assist in making the arrangements connected with opening of Session. Applications and Testimonials (22 copies of each, which will not be returned) must be lodged with the undersigned on or before MAY 22.

G. W. ALEXANDER, Clerk to the Board.
School Board Offices, Castle Terrace, Edinburgh.
April 28, 1909.

THE HIGH SCHOOL OF GLASGOW.—

RECTOR.—The SCHOOL BOARD of GLASGOW invite applications for the position of RECTOR. Applicants should be Graduates with Honours, of a University in the United Kingdom, and must not exceed 50 years of age. Salary from 650l. to 750l., according to qualifications and experience. Applications, with twenty copies of Testimonials, must be lodged with the undersigned on or before FRIDAY, May 21. Canvassing, direct or indirect, will disqualify.—J. CLARK, Clerk, School Board Offices, 129, Bath Street, Glasgow.

THE QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY OF BELFAST.

The BELFAST COMMISSIONERS, under the Irish Universities Act, 1908, will proceed at an early date to appoint to PROFESSORSHIPS in the following subjects:—

MODERN HISTORY.
ECONOMICS.
BOTANY.
FRENCH LANGUAGE and ROMANCE PHILOLOGY.
JURISPRUDENCE and ROMAN LAW.

and to READERSHIPS or LECTURESHIPS in the following subjects:—

ARCHAEOLOGY and ANCIENT HISTORY.
ENGLISH LANGUAGE.
CELTIC LANGUAGES and LITERATURE.
MORAL PHILOSOPHY and HISTORY OF PHILOSOPHY.
LOGIC and SCHOLASTIC PHILOSOPHY.
PHYSICS.
ORGANIC CHEMISTRY.
BIO-CHEMISTRY.
GEOLOGY and MINERALOGY.

Information as to Salary and other terms of these appointments may be obtained from

ARTHUR JAFFÉ, Secretary to the Commissioners.
(N.B.—Canvassing of individual Commissioners will be a disqualification.)

HABERDASHERS' ASKE'S SCHOOLS.

The SCHOOL GOVERNORS of the HABERDASHERS' ASKE'S HAMPTHEAD BOYS' SCHOOL invite applications for the post of HEAD MASTER, to take Office in SEPTEMBER, 1909. He must be a Graduate of some University within the British Empire. The Salary offered is about 700l. per annum. No Residence provided.

Arrangements for Pension will be made.
Personal canvassing will disqualify.
Applications must be sent on or before SATURDAY, June 5, 1909.
Forms of Application, and further particulars, can be obtained from R. J. ELLIS,
Aske's Hatcham School, Jerningham Road,
New Cross, S.E.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

McGILL UNIVERSITY, MONTREAL.

CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.

The GOVERNORS of MCGILL UNIVERSITY are prepared to receive applications for appointment to the STRATHCONA CHAIR OF ZOOLOGY.—For all information apply to W. VAUGHAN, Secretary

UNIVERSITY OF ST. ANDREWS.

CHAIR OF CHEMISTRY IN THE UNITED COLLEGE, ST. ANDREWS.

The UNIVERSITY COURT of the UNIVERSITY OF ST. ANDREWS invite applications for the PROFESSORSHIP in CHEMISTRY in the UNITED COLLEGE, UNIVERSITY OF ST. ANDREWS, rendered vacant by the resignation of Prof. Thomas Purdie, B.Sc. Ph.D. LL.D. F.R.S.

The Candidate appointed will be required to conduct, in the United College, St. Andrews, Theoretical and Practical Classes in Chemistry qualifying for Graduation in Arts, Science, and Medicine during the Winter and Summer Sessions, and also to direct and superintend Research Students.

The Candidate appointed will enter on the duties of the Professorship on October 1, 1909.

The applications, which should be accompanied by twenty printed or typewritten copies of the letter of application and relative Testimonials, must be lodged on or before MAY 31, 1909, with the undersigned, from whom further information regarding the duties and emoluments of the Chair may be obtained.

ANDREW BENNETT, Secretary and Registrar.
The University, St. Andrews, April 28, 1909.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD.

PROFESSORSHIP OF ECONOMICS.

The COUNCIL will shortly proceed to the ELECTION of a PROFESSOR OF ECONOMICS in the UNIVERSITY.—Applications must reach the Registrar, from whom further particulars may be obtained, not later than MAY 12, 1909.

W. M. GIBBONS, Registrar.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD.

APPOINTMENT OF ASSISTANT LECTURER IN HISTORY.

The COUNCIL are about to appoint an ASSISTANT LECTURER in HISTORY.

Applications must be sent in by May 29. Further particulars may be obtained from

W. M. GIBBONS, Registrar.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

CAMBRIDGE AND COUNTY SCHOOL OF ARTS AND CRAFTS.

A PRINCIPAL is REQUIRED who will either (a) devote the whole of his time to his duties, undertaking the General Direction of the School in Day and Evening Classes, and the Teaching of One Department, at a Salary of 300l. a year; or (b) devote part of his time to his duties, undertaking the General Direction of the School, with a limited amount of Teaching, preferably in the Building Department, at a Salary of 150l. a year.

It is proposed that the School shall include in its Prospectus the Work of a School of Art in accordance with the Regulations of the Board of Education, together with Building Subjects (including Building Construction, Builders' Quantities, Wood Carving, Plumbers' Work, Iron Work, Stone Cutting, &c.); Metal Work Subjects; Needlework Subjects; other Subjects (Shorthand, Book-Keeping, &c.); and probably Bookbinding.

Applications (15 copies), setting forth particulars of previous experience, together with copies of not more than three recent Testimonials, must be sent to the undersigned on or before SATURDAY, May 15, 1909, of whom any further information may be obtained.

AUSTIN KEEN, Education Secretary.
County Offices, Sidney Street, Cambridge,
April 20, 1909.

GOOLE SECONDARY SCHOOL.

APPOINTMENT OF HEAD MASTER.

The GOVERNORS of the above SCHOOL intend to proceed to the appointment of a HEAD MASTER, to begin work in SEPTEMBER NEXT.

Candidates must hold a Degree (preferably in Honours) from a University in the United Kingdom or British Possessions. Previous Secondary School experience is essential, and the possession of a Teaching Diploma will be an advantage.

The initial Salary will be 350l. per annum.

Applications, accompanied by not more than three recent Testimonials should be made not later than JUNE 9, 1909, upon a Form of Application which may be obtained from

W. T. SILVESTER, Clerk to the Governors,
10, Victoria Street, Goole.

HEAD MASTER WANTED.

The GOVERNORS of the DRAX SCHOOLS require HEAD MASTER for Read's School, Drax, near Selby, Yorkshire. Must be over 25 and under 45, and Graduate of some University in the United Kingdom. Salary 100l. per annum and capitation payment of 3l. a head in addition to charges for Boarders. New buildings erected to accommodate about 45 Boarders. Very good Residence provided. Healthy country place; railway station. Duties to commence with SEPTEMBER Term. Applications and copies of two Testimonials to be sent prior to MAY 22 to

E. & T. CLARK, Solicitors.
Snaith, Yorkshire.

WHITGIFT GRAMMAR SCHOOL, CROYDON.

Applications are invited for the post of CHIEF SCIENCE MASTER in this SCHOOL, vacant on the appointment of Mr. W. E. Cross to the Head Mastership of King's School, Peterborough. Particulars may be had from THE HEAD MASTER.

CHESTER CITY AND COUNTY SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

WANTED, to commence duties in SEPTEMBER NEXT, a MASTER thoroughly experienced in teaching English, French, and Elementary Latin in Secondary Schools. A knowledge of Phonetics preferred. Salary 150*l*. Applications to be forwarded, with two Testimonials, before May 31, 1909, to

J. DODD, Clerk to the Governing Body,
16, Corn Exchange Chambers, Chester.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—FORTH-COMING EXAMINATION.—ASSISTANT in the ROYAL OBSERVATORY, EDINBURGH (21-30), MAY 27. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received. They must be made on Forms, to be obtained, with particulars, from THE SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, Burlington Gardens, London, W.

WANTED, an ASSISTANT ART MASTER for the SCHOOL OF ART at BURY ST. EDMUNDS. The successful Candidate will be required to teach about Sixteen Hours per Week, mainly Elementary Subjects, the remainder of his time being devoted to private study. Preference will be given to Candidates with a thorough knowledge of one particular craft. Salary at the rate of 80*l*. per annum, together with Travelling (Locomotion) Expenses, and an allowance when out for the night on County Duty. Applications must be received on or before 10 A.M. on MAY 12, 1909, on the specified Form, which can be obtained from me, together with further particulars, on the receipt of a stamped addressed foolscap envelope.

FRED. R. HUGHES,
Secretary to the West Suffolk Education Committee,
Education Offices, Shire Hall, Bury St. Edmunds,
April, 1909.

HACKNEY METROPOLITAN BOROUGH COUNCIL. PUBLIC LIBRARIES.

The BOROUGH COUNCIL are prepared to receive applications for the appointment of a MALE LIBRARY ASSISTANT, with previous experience in PUBLIC LIBRARY WORK. Salary 60*l*. per annum, rising from April 1, 1911, by annual increments of 5*l*. to a maximum of 120*l*. per annum.

The appointment will be subject to the terms of the Council's Superannuation Act, under the conditions of which a percentage amount will be deducted from the Salaries.

Form of Application may be obtained from the undersigned at the Town Hall, Hackney, on any week day within office hours.

Applications, endorsed "Male Library Assistant," accompanied by three recent Testimonials, must be delivered to the undersigned not later than 5 o'clock p.m. on MAY 13, 1909.

W. A. WILLIAMS, Town Clerk,
Town Hall, Hackney, May 5, 1909.

COACH in CLASSICS for Indian Civil Exam. Two hours twice weekly. Near Streatham district preferred.—Terms, &c., to T. G. RUTHERFORD, 16, Thornton Avenue, Streatham, S.W.

Situations Wanted.

LADY TYPIST, with long and varied experience, requires SECRETARIAL POST, Literary preferred. No Languages, but thorough English training.—Miss U. 4, Highcroft Road, Hornsey Rise, N.

Miscellaneous.

MISS BIRNIE PHILIP has been engaged for some time past in Collecting and Arranging for Publication, in accordance with his expressed wishes—the CORRESPONDENCE of the late Mr. J. McNEILL WHISTLER.

She feels that there may be Letters available which have not yet been sent to her, and she desires to say that if there are any such she will be glad to make use of them if they are forwarded to her within a reasonable time.

Any Letters which may be sent to Miss R. BIRNIE PHILIP at 103, Albert Bridge Road, S.W., will be taken care of and returned so soon as copies have been made of them.

SPANISH.—Thorough TUITION by SPANISH SCHOLAR (Englishman) of great distinction. Highest references.—Box 1589, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

MR. ERIC STUART BRUCE, M.A. Oxon, F.M., Met. Soc., Member of Council and late Honorary Secretary Aeronautical Society of Great Britain, Vice-President Aerial League of the British Empire, can accept ENGAGEMENTS for his successful LECTURE 'Airships, Balloons and Flying Machines.' Elaborate Experiments and Working Models.—For Prospectus, Terms, &c., address E. S. BRUCE, Esq., Airth, Sunningdale, Ascot.

TRANSLATIONS, FRENCH and SPANISH. Careful, accurate work guaranteed. Moderate Terms.—M. B. 73, Merton Hall Road, Wimbledon, S.W.

TRANSLATIONS FROM THE GERMAN. Literary, Technical, and Commercial, at moderate Rates.—VAUX, 4, Craigdale Road, Romford, Essex.

TO SOLICITORS, EXECUTORS, ANTI-QUARIES.—OLD DEEDS and DOCUMENTS overhauled and the gist copied into Modern English. Strongroom for safe keeping.—GEORGE SHERWOOD, 227, Strand (by Temple Bar), W.C.

ACCURATE RESEARCH and GENEALOGICAL WORK undertaken by R. M. GLENCROSS, M.A. LL.B. Advice also supplied to Persons drawing up their own Pedigree. Excellent Testimonials.—3, Chalonier Street, West Kensington.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B. Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

PRIVATE SOCIAL TOURS FOR GENTLE-WOMEN.—AUSTRIA, JUNE 17. Including Vienna, Budapest, the Danube, and beautiful Salzkammergut District. Succeeding Tours—Switzerland, Holland, Italy. References exchanged. Programmes from Miss BISHOP, 27, St. George's Road, Kilburn, London.

GENTLEMAN requires MANUSCRIPTS (Scientific) to be TYPEWRITTEN.—Offers to A. W., Box 1592, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

TRAINING FOR PRIVATE SECRETARIAL WORK AND INDEXING.

THE SECRETARIAL BUREAU,
32A, CONDUIT STREET, BOND STREET, LONDON, W.

Founded 1895. Telephone: 2426 GERRARD.

MISS PETHERBRIDGE (Nat. Sci. Tripos).

EMPLOYED BY THE INDIA OFFICE AS—Indexer of the East India Company's Records, the new edition of the Imperial Gazetteer of India; Dutch and Portuguese Translator.

The Drapers' Company's Records Catalogued and Arranged. The Library of the Rt. Hon. W. H. Long M.P., Catalogued and Arranged.

INDEXER OF—The Records of the County Borough of Cardiff; The Warrington Town Records; The Blue Books of the Royal Commissions on: London Traffic, The Supply of Food in Time of War, Motor Cars, Canals and Waterways, Coast Erosion, Shipping Rings; and of the Committees on International Exhibitions, National Guarantee for War Risks of Shipping, Oriental Studies; The Minutes of the Education Committee of the Somerset County Council.

MISS PETHERBRIDGE trains from Three to Six Pupils every year for Private Secretarial and Special Indexing Work. The training is one of Apprenticeship, Pupils starting as Junior Members of the Staff and working up through all the Branches. It is practical, on actual work, each Pupil being individually coached. The training consists of Indexing—which includes Research Work and Precise Writing—Shorthand, Type-Writing, Stenotypy, and Business Training.

THE TECHNIQUE OF INDEXING. By MARY PETHERBRIDGE 2s. 6*d*. post free

THE DAUGHTER of a well-known Literary

Man is desirous of meeting with a LADY and GENTLEMAN to SHARE her HOUSE; or would take boarders. Rooms Furnished or Unfurnished. The House is situated on South Norwood Hill, five minutes from Norwood Junction Station, close to the Stanley Halls (where Concerts, Lectures, &c., are continually given), near the Public Library, and within a walk of the Crystal Palace, or One Station from it. Norwood is regarded as one of the healthiest places round London, and was at one time a well-known health resort. A good train service to London Bridge and Victoria.—Address C. M., Box 1562, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Type-Writers, &c.TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated

Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS,

ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9*d*. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING 9*d*. per 1,000 words; Carbons

3*d*. French and German Type-writing 1*s*. per 1,000. Translations. Duplicating 3*s*. 100 Copies (quarto), 1*s*. per 1,000. Best work, accuracy, and promptitude.—G. WALKER, 14, Park Road, New Cross, S.E.

TYPE-WRITING.—All kinds of TYPE-WRIT-

ING, SHORTHAND, and DUPLICATING WORK UNDER-TAKEN. Sermons and Meetings Reported. Authors' MSS. from 10*d*. per 1,000 words. Special terms for Contracts and large quantities.—Miss MORGAN, Bush Lane House, Cannon Street, London, E.C. Telephone: 12137 Central.

TYPE-WRITING, 9*d*. per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3*d*. per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272, Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING.—AUTHORS' MS. 8*d*. per

1,000 words. Legal and Technical Work. Translations. Accuracy and Dispatch.—E. RISDON, 28, Cobham Road, Kingston-on-Thames.

TYPE-WRITING OF EVERY DESCRIPTION

by EXPERT, 8*d*. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies, 3*d*. per 1,000 words. Accuracy and prompt return guaranteed. Reliable References.—NORA DICKINSON, 1, Sackville Gardens, Ilford.

TYPEWRITING, from 7*d*. per 1,000 words, carefully and quickly done on good paper. References to leading Publishers.—Miss G. BLAXELLE, King-Potter, Clements & Co., Ltd., 56, Ludgate Hill, E.C.

TYPEWRITER.

KINDLY NOTE CHANGE OF ADDRESS.

MISS E. M. TIGAR,
10, MAITLAND PARK VILLAS, Haverstock Hill, N.W.

Authors' Agents.THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879.

The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGESS, 24, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and

Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Larner's personal supervision.—23, 29, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

Printers.IF YOU WRITE THE MEMORIALS OF YOUR

FAMILY, we will PRINT and PUBLISH them for you, under Expert Supervision, at the very Lowest Rates. Searches made where MS. is incomplete.—GERRARDS, LTD. (The Westminster Press), 411A, Harrow Road.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD

FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Catalogues.

TO BE ISSUED ON OR ABOUT MAY 15.

SALE CATALOGUE, No. 51.

1,500 ITEMS AND EVERY ITEM A BARGAIN.

Both our shelves and our floors are overcrowded, and a space must be made for new purchases. The plan, therefore, of ruthlessly marking down, irrespective of cost, profit, or market value, has been adopted, and we can say absolutely:

EVERY ITEM IS A BARGAIN.

W. HEFFER & SONS, Booksellers, Cambridge.

CATALOGUE of FRENCH BOOKS, at greatly reduced prices. I. PHILOSOPHY. II. RELIGION. III. HISTORY. IV. POETRY. DRAMA. MUSIC. V. BEAUX-ARTS. VI. GEOGRAPHY. VII. MILITARY. VIII. FICTION. IX. GENERAL LITERATURE.

DULAU & CO. 37, Soho Square, London, W.

FIRST EDITIONS of MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. CATALOGUES issued and sent post free on application. Books Bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE

BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.—Yellow Book, 13 vols. 2*l*. 10*s*.; Trigg's Art Garden Design, Italy, 3*l*. guineas for 2*l*.; E. Fitzgerald's Works, 7 vols. 3*l*. 3*s*.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors

and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON, Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 18, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

CATALOGUE No. 50—Drawings by Turner,

Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

BOOKS AT SPECIAL PRICES.

CATALOGUE No. 364—MAY, 1909—NOW READY.

CONTAINING MANY NEW and ATTRACTIVE LINES IN PUBLISHERS' REMAINDERS.

WILLIAM GLAISHER, LTD.,

Remainder and Discount Booksellers,
265, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON (and 14, George Street, Croydon)
The Books are on view at both addresses.

Sales by Auction.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSES. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE

will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on TUESDAY, May 11, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including the Property of the late A. B. HILL, Esq., The Hawthorns, Clapham Park, S.W.; the Property of WILLIAM TAYLER, Esq., Osborn Nursery, Hampton, Middlesex; the Property of C. T. OWEN, Esq., and other Properties, comprising Historical and Biographical Works, Sporting Books, Natural History and Botany, French Illustrated Works, Theology, Poetry, Fine Art, Books of Travel, First Editions of American Authors and Americana, extra-illustrated Books relating to the Drama, &c.—Works illustrated by Geo. Cruikshank, Leech, &c.—A large Collection of Chap Books, many with Coloured Frontispieces by Rowlandson and the Cruikshanks; Martial Achievements, Large Paper—and other Coloured Plate Books, &c.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

Engravings.

MESSES. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE

will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on FRIDAY, May 14, at 1 o'clock precisely, valuable ENGRAVINGS (Framed and in the Portfolio), including the Property of a GENTLEMAN, comprising a Collection of Engraved Portraits by C. Turner, many in proof state—Mezzotints after Rembrandt, by R. Houston, W. Pether, R. Earlom, J. McArdell, and C. H. Hodges, mostly brilliant Proof Impressions—Portraits and Fancy Subjects after G. Morland, Sir T. Lawrence, J. Constable, Sir J. Reynolds, &c., the Property of a LADY, comprising Military and other Costumes, Aquatints in Colours, Drawings, &c.—other Properties, comprising Fancy Subjects, Portraits, Sporting Prints, &c., some printed in Colours.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Collection of English Coins, the Property of the late F. G. HILTON PRICE, Esq.

MESSES. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE

will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 17, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the important and valuable COLLECTION of ENGLISH COINS in Gold and Silver, the Property of the late F. G. HILTON PRICE, Esq., Director of the Royal Society of Antiquaries, Fellow of the Royal Numismatic Society, &c. To which is added a small COLLECTION of ENGLISH and FOREIGN MEDALS, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 20, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, VALUABLE BOOKS and ILLUMINATED and other MANUSCRIPTS, comprising Selections from the Libraries of the late VISCOUNT BRIDPORT, the late C. L. HIGGINS, Esq. (of Turvey Abbey, Beds), L. B. BARRETT, Esq. (of Stevenston, Berks), and others, comprising a fine Series of Books Bound by Clovis Eve—a unique Caxton Volume, containing five of his Westminster productions in the Original Binding—Caxton's Ryal Book, and productions of other Early English Printers—Illuminated Horse and other Early Manuscripts—Early Printed Service Books—rare Works relating to America—an important Series of Nelson Documents (1795-1805)—and numerous other valuable items.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Valuable Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 13, and Following Day at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, comprising a copy of the excessively rare Collection of Roses from Nature, by Mary Lawrence, 1799—Ireland's Napoleon, Coloured Plates by Cruikshank, 4 vols.—Original Issue of Browning's Bells and Pomegranates, 1841, and other First Editions—A small Collection of Rare Early Printed Books, including Catonis Ethica, J. Zainer, Ulm, 1475—Paraldus Summa de Virtutibus, Basle, 1475—Liber Intrationum, Pynson, 1510, and others from the German, French, and English Presses—Early Luther Tracts—Taverner's Bible, 1551—Boccaccio The Decameron, First English Translation, 2 vols. in 1, 1620-25—Burton's Anatomy of Melancholy, First Edition, 1621, and other Books in Old English Literature—White's Selborne, First Edition—Fielding's Works, 16 vols.—The Editions de Luxe of Lamb, 12 vols., Meredith, 32 vols., and Oscar Wilde, 14 vols.—Standard Works in History, Travel, and General Literature—Autograph Letters, &c.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Valuable Books from the Library of the late Sir MAURICE HOLZMANN, K.C.B. K.C.V.O., &c., removed from St. James's Palace (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION DURING MAY, CHOICE and VALUABLE BOOKS from the LIBRARY of the late Sir MAURICE HOLZMANN, K.C.B. &c., formerly Keeper of Records of the Duchy of Cornwall, comprising a remarkable and comprehensive Collection of Alpine Books and Works on Mountaineering, in English, French, and German—Fine-Art Books and Works in General Literature, &c., mostly in handsome calf or morocco bindings by Rivière and others.

Catalogues are preparing.

Valuable Modern Library of the late J. H. RADFORD, Esq., of Yelverton, South Devon (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, DURING MAY, the VALUABLE LIBRARY of MODERN BOOKS of the late J. H. RADFORD, Esq., removed from Uppaton, Buckland Monachorum, near Yelverton, comprising the Edinburgh Stevenson, 34 vols.—a large collection of the Works of Modern Writers, many First Editions—Fine-Art and Illustrated Books—Belles-Lettres and Modern Poetry, the whole in excellent condition—also a few Mezzotint Engravings by Cousins after Reynolds.

Catalogues are preparing.

STEVENS'S AUCTION ROOMS. Established 1760.

TUESDAY and WEDNESDAY NEXT, at 1 o'clock.

BRITISH and FOREIGN LEPIDOPTERA, including some well-known Collections; a FURTHER PORTION of the valuable COLLECTION of COLEOPTERA formed by C. H. SCHILL, Esq.; also several well-made Cabinets.

Mr. J. C. STEVENS will offer the above Property at his Rooms, 33, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

On view Monday prior 10 to 4 and mornings of Sale. Catalogues on application.

TUESDAY, May 18, at half-past 12 o'clock.

ETHNOGRAPHICAL CURIOS from all parts—Chinese and Japanese Works of Art—China—Plated Goods—Paintings—and Miscellaneous Property.

Mr. J. C. STEVENS will offer the above Property by AUCTION at his Rooms, 33, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION, at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 20, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, VALUABLE BOOKS, including the LIBRARY of the late Mrs. BATHO, removed from Eastbourne, and other Properties, comprising well-bound Standard Works in all branches of Literature—Sets of Favourite Authors in the original cloth, in remarkably fine state—Hakluyt Society's Publications, 46 vols.—County Histories—a Collection of Sixteenth and Seventeenth Century Books in fine bindings—valuable First Editions of Modern Authors—Autograph Letters—Drawings and Engravings.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square:—

On TUESDAY, May 11, and WEDNESDAY, May 12 (at 1 o'clock), the COLLECTION of OLD ENGLISH PORCELAIN and FURNITURE of the late Dr. W. O'NEILL.

On WEDNESDAY, May 12 (at about half-past 1 o'clock), PORCELAIN and OLD ENGLISH FURNITURE of the late G. B. HENDERSON, Esq., and from various Private Sources.

On THURSDAY, May 13, and FRIDAY, May 14 (at 1 o'clock), the COLLECTION of PICTURES and DRAWINGS of the late Right Hon. Sir J. C. DAY.

On MONDAY, May 17, and TUESDAY, May 18 (at 1 o'clock), the COLLECTION of ETCHINGS and ENGRAVINGS of the late Right Hon. Sir J. C. DAY.

On FRIDAY, May 21 (at 1 o'clock), the COLLECTION of highly important PICTURES of E. H. CUTHBERTSON, Esq.

ARTIST'S HOUSE.—Very picturesque.—FOR SALE by AUCTION MAY 13. Church Stretton, Salop. Lovely Hill Scenery; Healthy; near Church. Three Reception, eight Bed-rooms; much old Oak Carving; Stabling; Motor House; newest Sanitary Arrangements.—Apply Mr. G. H. MORGAN, Solicitor, Shrewsbury.

For Magazines, &c., see p. 548.

SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LTD.

NEW AND CHEAPER ISSUE, 5 vols, demy 8vo, navy blue cloth gilt, gilt top, price 2l. 12s. 6d. net.

CAPTAIN MAHAN'S FAMOUS SEA POWER BOOKS.

Comprising:—

THE INFLUENCE OF SEA POWER UPON HISTORY, 1660-1783. With 25 Charts of Great Naval Battles.—THE INFLUENCE OF SEA POWER ON THE FRENCH REVOLUTION AND EMPIRE, 1793-1812. With 13 Maps and Battle Plans. 2 vols.—THE INFLUENCE OF SEA POWER IN ITS RELATIONS TO THE WAR OF 1812. With Maps and Plates. 2 vols.

In this Edition the Volumes are not sold separately.

NOW READY, crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, illustrated, price 7s. 6d. net.

UNTRAVELLED BERKSHIRE.

By L. S.

NOTE.—Not merely the lovers of Berkshire, but those who are fond of the peace and sights and sounds of country life, will delight in this book. With the authoress we spend many a summer day among the fir-trees, crossing commons, taking our siesta under the great trees, passing through delightful old-world gardens to visit ancient cottages or manor houses.

Crown 8vo, cloth gilt, fully illustrated, price 6s. net.

THE STORY OF THE SUBMARINE.

By Col. C. FIELD.

A popular history. In this important work Col. Field traces the history of the submarine from the very beginning of things to the present time. (First edition nearly exhausted.)

Crown 8vo, cloth, illustrated, Coloured Frontispiece, price 6s.

IN THE SHADOW OF PA-MENKH.

By DORA LANGLOIS.

Although the work of Dora Langlois is reminiscent of Jules Verne and of Rider Haggard, it is quite personal and original. Adventure, mystery, love, cunning, greed, bravery, and many another element are seen at work in this truly moving tale.

Demy 8vo, cloth, extra gilt, gilt top, bevelled boards, price 7s. 6d. net; in white buckram, 10s. 6d. net.

Topographical Edition of R. D. BLACKMORE'S

LORNA DOONE:

A Romance of Exmoor.

Known as the "Doone-Land Edition." 600 pages, 50 Illustrations, and 2 Maps. Introduction and Notes by H. SNOWDEN WARD, and Illustrations by Mrs. CATHERINE WEED WARD.

Crown 8vo, cloth, price 6s. net.

GEORGE BAXTER, Colour Printer.

His Life and Work.

A Manual for Collectors. By C. T. COURTNEY LEWIS. 32 Illustrations. In the above book every known Baxter Print is described and priced.

Crown 4to, handsome cloth binding, gilt edges, price 10s. 6d. net.

LACIS:

Practical Instructions in Filet Brodé or Darning on Net.

By CARITA.

Fully illustrated with Patterns and Working Drawings.

Demy 8vo, cloth, with Coloured Frontispiece and 10 Plates, price 4s. 6d. net.

MOSSES AND LIVERWORTS.

An Introduction to their Study, with Hints as to their Collection and Preservation.

By T. H. RUSSELL, F.L.S.

With Illustrations from original Microscopical Drawings.

Prospectus on application.

London: SAMPSON LOW, MARSTON & CO., LTD., 100, Southwark Street, S.E.

Demy 8vo, 480 pp., cloth, price 10s. 6d. net. Illustrated.

SWIMMING

Theory, Practice, History, Biography, Bibliography (English, French, German, Italian, Spanish, &c.).

WITH 126 ILLUSTRATIONS.

By RALPH THOMAS.

On its receipt, this book was at once placed on the reference shelves of the Reading Room at the British Museum. It is in all the large public libraries, some have bought two copies.

OPINIONS OF EXPERTS.

From Mr. WILLIAM HENRY, Royal Life Saving Society: joint author of the Badminton volume Swimming.—"I congratulate you upon the publication of your splendid work. It contains a greater amount of information than has ever before been collected on the subject. It dispels many crank ideas and supplies the facts which were so much needed. We now have something we can refer to and rely upon."

From Mr. WILLIAM WILSON, of Glasgow, author of 'The Swimming Instructor.'—"Your PROSPECTUS is in itself a bit of swimming literature well worth keeping. Your book is undoubtedly a great work, combining as it does the history and bibliography of the art with so much biography and the critical and technical details of ordinary and advanced strokes, methods, styles, &c."

PRESS NOTICES.

Academy.—"I am not a swimmer, but I have very much enjoyed [this book]. Quite amazing is Mr. Thomas's learning... of the profoundest interest. Personally I am most delighted with the typographical eccentricities... they are simply delightful... is in some respects a model for future bibliographers."

Athenæum.—"Admirable exposition of the theory and practice of swimming."

Birmingham Daily Post.—"Indicates the lines on which further improvements are to be sought, and urges reforms he considers necessary."

Bookman.—"For instruction and amusement would be hard to surpass... the volume is one not to be passed over by any one."

Bookseller.—"The author, whose own knowledge of the subject is remarkable, having received the assistance of a number of distinguished scholars and swimmers of all countries, the result is a work both scientific and amusing, which appeals not only to swimmers and those interested in them and their deeds and 'records,' but to book-lovers and bibliographers as well... One has, however, only to glance through the thirty-six pages of the index to see the wide range taken. The book is quite a marvel of painstaking erudition... and the printing and presentment unexceptionable."

Daily Telegraph.—"The author has a happy knack of sprinkling a work of reference with entertaining matter... in the course of the labour which went to the building up of this work."

Field.—"His motto should be Spartan nactus es, hanc exorna, and he has certainly carried it out to perfection... Whatever he has touched he has certainly left in a fair way towards final settlement. [With reference to] Beowulf, or when he imputes to the translators of the Bible an erroneous indication of the breast-stroke in the expression 'spreadeth forth his hands to swim,' he may appear to be guilty of over-refining, but he is always candid and honest in his quest of truth. The comparison of the different methods of life-saving that have from time to time been put forth ought to be of great practical value, showing, as it does, how they have been confused with one another, and how much still remains to be done in the way of scientific observation and experiment."

Fortnightly Review.—"A new era in the literary annals of natation is marked by the appearance of a voluminous work on the science and business, as distinguished perhaps from sport, of swimming—a labour of years which must take a very different rank from cheap handbooks written hurriedly to order."

Lancet.—"No better present could be given to the young."

Law Notes.—"That part of the book on the resuscitation of the apparently drowned is of importance to lawyers, who are wont to rely on Taylor for their guide. As to this Mr. Thomas says, 'Take, for example, an early edition of Taylor's "Medical Jurisprudence," which has been a legal text-book since 1844, and see how he flounders about in a mire of ignorance when writing of resuscitation.' But it appears that the modern [works] only command a little more respect from Mr. Thomas... It must be the greatest pleasure to him to see that his book has been received with universal commendation by the press."

Morning Post.—"He does not hesitate at what some might regard as dangerous ground, as, for instance, when he impugn the Royal Humane Society's method of resuscitation, and the attitude of the medical profession towards the question."

Notes and Queries.—"Conscientious and thorough... notes are supplied on the progress of swimming during four centuries, upon the breast-stroke, the side-stroke, the ancients as swimmers, the different forms of swimming in various countries, the method of Bernardi, swimming on horseback, &c.... Beowulf's stroke is, of course, commemorated, and Mr. Thomas gives a new translation of his famous lines descriptive of swimming in the sea. Here we take leave of this entertaining and useful volume, which we commend warmly to our readers. When once begun the perusal is not readily abandoned."

JUST PUBLISHED, 3s. 6d. net.

THE WEAVERAND THE WAY OF LIFE*A Book of Allegories on the Poetry of Life

BY

JOHN W. DEKAY

The Weaver said:—"Out yonder in the great city, which to us is only a murmur brought by the west wind, men give their lives in getting what they do not want and keeping what they never need. Even the noblest among them who do not seek to get or keep the treasures of the world prize more than all else the judgment of the world and seek through all their lives, as you have sought, to have immortality at the hands of the world. More than all else they want to be remembered by the world. But I, here at the loom, have learned from my lilies, which are beautiful, and my tangled ends of threads, which, to me, are not beautiful, that it does not matter that the world said nothing about us before we were born, and that it does not matter what the world says about us after we are dead; and if it says nothing about us, that too does not matter. All that is beautiful is beautiful, whether it is praised or blamed."

A. L. HUMPHREYS,
187, Piccadilly, London, W.

MILLS & BOON'S
6/- FICTION.

NOW READY.

ELISABETH DAVENAY

CLAIRE DE PRATZ

THE STAIRWAY OF HONOUR

MAUD STEPNEY RAWSON

HOLBORN HILL

CHRISTIAN TEARLE

THE CAPTAIN'S DAUGHTER

HELEN H. WATSON

MEMOIRS OF A BUCCANEER

ROBERT WILLIAMS

FOR CHURCH & CHIEFTAIN

MAY WYNNE

ARROWS FROM THE DARK

SOPHIE COLE

THE END AND THE BEGINNING

COSMO HAMILTON

READY SHORTLY.

THE FIRST LAW

LADY TROUBRIDGE

MISS PILSBURY'S FORTUNE

C. R. SHAND

THE VEIL

E. S. STEVENS

MILLS & BOON, LTD., 49, Whitcomb Street, W.C.

Magazines, &c.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine Street, London, W.C., MAY 8, contains:—
THE ROYAL ACADEMY.
A PROFESSIONAL DIPLOMA.
ARCHITECTURE AT THE ROYAL ACADEMY.—II.
INSTITUTE OF ARCHITECTS: REPORT OF THE COUNCIL.
BRUGES AND ITS NEIGHBOURHOOD (Architectural Association).
THE HONOR OAK RESERVOIR (with Illustrations).
INSTITUTE OF MUNICIPAL ENGINEERS.
ILLUSTRATIONS:
ELECTRICAL LABORATORY, OXFORD (two Illustrations);
COMPETITION DESIGN FOR GLAMORGAN COUNTY HALL.
PEMBRIDGE CHURCH, HEREFORDSHIRE: AS RESTORED.

From Offices as above (4d., by post 4½d.), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all News-agents.

ROYAL STATISTICAL SOCIETY.

GENERAL INDEX TO THE JOURNAL.
Part V. Vols. LI. to LXXI. 1888 to 1908. Price 3s. 6d.
ROYAL STATISTICAL SOCIETY.
9, Adelphi Terrace, Strand, London, W.C.

NOW READY, Price One Shilling and Sixpence net.
STUDIES IN THE NEW TESTAMENT, EXPOSITORY AND PRACTICAL.

Comprising:—
BRIEF NOTES ON THE PARABLES AND MIRACLES OF OUR LORD.
NEW TESTAMENT CHRONOLOGY.
GEOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY OF PLACES NAMED.
APPENDIX ON SOME EUROPEAN TRANSLATIONS OF THE BIBLE.
With 5 Maps.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S. Associate of King's College, London, Lay Reader in the Diocese of Southwark.

London:
SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster Row.

Situations Vacant—continued.COUNTY OF LONDON.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the post of ASSISTANT MISTRESS, specially qualified in Mathematics, at the COUNTY SECONDARY SCHOOL, PECKHAM, SUMNER AVENUE, S.E. A knowledge of Music would be an additional recommendation.

The successful Applicant will be required to commence work in SEPTEMBER NEXT. The Salary attaching to the post is 120l. rising by annual increments of 10l. to a maximum of 220l.

Applications should be made on Form H. 40, to be obtained, together with particulars of the appointment, from THE EDUCATION OFFICER, London County Council Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C., to whom they must be returned not later than 11 A.M. on SATURDAY, May 22, 1909, accompanied by copies of three Testimonials of recent date. All communications on the subject must be endorsed "H. 4," and must be accompanied by a stamped addressed foolscap envelope.

Canvassing, either directly or indirectly, will be held to be a disqualification for employment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.
Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C.
May 6, 1909.

Shipping.PLEASURE CRUISES.

From MARSEILLES.

Rail and Steamship Connexions from London.

No. 4.—MAY 21 to JUNE 12.

NAPLES, ALGIERS, LISBON AND LONDON.

Fares from 20 guineas.

SPITZBERGEN.

From LONDON and LEITH.

No. 5.—JULY 1 to JULY 27.

SPITZBERGEN, NORWAY, &c.

Fares from 30 guineas.

NORWAY.

From LONDON and LEITH.

No. 6.—JULY 29 to AUGUST 11.

No. 7.—AUGUST 13 to AUGUST 26.

THE NORWEGIAN FJORDS,

BY

Fares from 12 Guineas.

P. & O. CRUISING YACHT "VECTIS."

A TONIC FOR THE FEET.—For all Relaxed, Tender, Swollen conditions of the feet, "PEDESTRIAN" gives instant relief. It allays inflammation and the painful smarting that keeps you in perpetual discomfort. A trial will convince. 1s. 3d. and 2s. 6d. post free.—MARSHALL & CO., 70A, Basinghall Street, E.C.

For Acidity of the Stomach.

For Heartburn and Headache.

For Gout and Indigestion.

DINNEFORD'SMAGNESIA.

For Sour Eructations and Bilious Affections.

A Safe and most effective Aperient for regular use.

YOUR BIRTHRIGHT IS HEALTH.THE SCIENCE IN A NUTSHELL.

'Health is a Man's Birthright. It is as natural to be well as to be born. All pathological conditions, all diseases, and all tendencies to disease are the result of the transgression of physiologic and hygienic law. This is the science of health in a nutshell.'—DENSMORE.

Eno'sFruit*Salt

IS NATURE'S ANTIDOTE FOR HUMAN ILLS
arising from the neglect or violation of her laws.

'Our Acts, our angels are, for good or ill, our fatal shadows that walk by us still.'

'And such is life, so gliding on, it glimmers like a meteor, and is gone.'

CAUTION.—Examine the capsule, and see that it is marked ENO'S 'FRUIT SALT.' Without it you have the sincerest form of flattery—IMITATION.

Prepared only by J. C. ENO (Limited), 'FRUIT SALT' WORKS, LONDON, S.E.

THE HOUSE OF CASSELL.

The Nature Book.

Profusely illustrated from PHOTOGRAPHS and a Series of COLOURED PLATES. Vols. I. and II. now ready. 12s. each net.
"Will form a veritable treasure house to all who love wild Nature and would read of her ways."—Westminster Gazette.

Quaint Subjects of the King. By JOHN FOSTER FRASER.

With 77 Reproductions from Photographs. 6s.
Telling in a bright and chatty manner about the quaint subjects of the King, with true stories as thrilling as in any novel, bringing stay-at-homes to realise how varied and strong are the tribes over which his Majesty rules.

Every-day Japan. By ARTHUR LLOYD, M.A.

Written after Twenty-Five Years' Residence and Work in the Country. With an Introduction by COUNT TADASU HAYASHI.
With 8 Coloured Plates and 96 Reproductions from Photographs. 12s. net.
"Gives a very complete idea of every-day life, the curious customs, and startling contrasts of modern Japan."—Standard.

Byways of Collecting. By ETHEL DEANE.

With 73 Illustrations. 7s. 6d. net.
"The pages are full of shrewd hints and fine illustrations, and they show the way to other people intent on acquiring rare and beautiful objects without straining the resources of even a modest purse."—Standard.

Royal Academy Pictures and Sculpture, 1909.

Complete Volume, paper covers, 3s. net; cloth, 5s. net.
Cassell's 'Royal Academy Pictures and Sculpture' is unquestionably the leading and most sumptuous record of the Royal Academy exhibits.
"A model of chasteness and artistry as well as utility."—Daily Chronicle.

Familiar Swiss Flowers. By F. E. HULME, F.L.S. F.S.A.

With 24 COLOURED PLATES. Series I. 1s. net.
"Every one will be glad to find a book which teaches so much about Alpine and other plants."—Ladies' Field.

George Borrow: the Man and His Work. By R. A. J. WALLING.

With Portrait of George Borrow by HENRY PHILLIPS. 6s. net.
"Mr. R. A. J. Walling had a great opportunity, and has made good use of it.....A very readable book."—Daily Chronicle.

Napoleon and His Fellow Travellers. By CLEMENT SHORTER.

With Frontispiece in Colours and 3 Photogravure Plates. 12s. net.
"A fascinating picture ofNapoleon's life, which enables us to realise something of his greatness."—Westminster Gazette.

Little People. By RICHARD WHITEING. With Portrait of the Author in Rembrandt. 6s. net.

"A sympathetic study of the minor characters of the world's stage.....Its earnestness allows nevertheless of humour and some caustic thrusts at modern ways of living and thinking."—Methodist Recorder.

The Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew. By W. J. BEAN. Historical and Descriptive.

Cloth, gilt back, 20s. net. Large-Paper Edition, limited to 100 copies, 3l. 3s. net.
"We know of no book relating to nature study to equal Mr. Ward's work, and we heartily recommend it to all who are interested in plant life and desire to obtain accurate information relating to the many and varied forms in a manner which renders the study a pleasant one."—Gardener's Magazine.

Life Histories of Familiar Plants. By JOHN J. WARD.

Popular Accounts of their Development, Habits, and General Phenomena. With Rembrandt Frontispiece and numerous Illustrations reproduced from Photographs and Photomicrographs taken by the Author. 6s.
"Of world-wide interest and imperial importance.....a more authoritative description of the plants could not have been written."—Nation.

Lord Beaconsfield and other Tory Memories. By T. E. KEBBEL.

Popular Edition. With Portrait Frontispiece. 6s. net.
"The tone of his book is consistently genial, as its style is scholarly and graceful."—Darlington and Stockton Times.

The Book of Ceylon. By HENRY W. CAVE, M.A. F.R.G.S.

With Illustrations from Photographs by the Author, and including 6 Maps and Plans and Coloured Frontispiece. Cloth gilt, 12s. net. Also in Three Sections, cloth gilt: No. 1, 4s. net; No. 2, 6s. net; No. 3, 4s. net.

A History & Description of the Old French Faïence

By M. L. SOLON. Containing 24 Plates in Colour, full-size Reproductions of Marks, numerous Illustrations in Black and White, and Preface by WM. BURTON, F.C.S. Cloth gilt, gilt top, 30s. net. Limited Edition.

A History and Description of Italian Majolica.

By M. L. SOLON. Containing 24 Coloured Plates and numerous Half-Tone Illustrations. Preface by WM. BURTON, F.C.S. Cloth gilt, gilt top, 42s. net. Limited Edition.

English Earthenware and Stoneware.

By WM. BURTON, F.C.S. With 24 Plates in Colours, 54 Plates in Black and White, and numerous Reproductions of the various Marks. Cloth gilt, gilt top, 30s. net. Limited Edition.

Porcelain: a Sketch of its Nature, Art, and Manufacture.

By WM. BURTON, F.C.S. With 50 Full-Page Plates. Cloth gilt, 7s. 6d. net.

FICTION.

By Max Pemberton.

THE SHOW GIRL. With Frontispiece in Colours. 6s.

"Characterised throughout by a lightness of style and motive which will at once arrest and hold the attention.....The characters.....are one and all natural and convincing."—World.

"Related with great skill and without a dull page.....Mr. Pemberton's new novel is certain to make him many new friends."—Daily Express.

By Joseph Hocking.

THE SWORD OF THE LORD. With Frontispiece in Colours. 3s. 6d.

"The incidents of those stirring times at Wittenberg, when Luther was fighting the Papacy, are treated with practised skill and no little power."—Liverpool Daily Courier.

"Teems throughout with interest."—Dundee Advertiser.

Double Bonds.

By FLORINDA McCALL. With a Frontispiece in Colours. 6s.

"A novel worth reading. In happiness and misery alike Silver Mackay grips our sympathy throughout."—Times.

"She has a natural and pleasing style, and the heart interest is strong."—Morning Leader.

The Circular Staircase.

By MARY ROBERTS RINEHART. With a Frontispiece in Colour and 5 Half-Tone Plates. 6s.

"Well and spiritedly told.....Written in a lively, attractive strain that softens any too gruesome effects, and keeps the attention on the swift changes of situation and the swift manipulation of each telling scene and incident."—Globe.

The Ghost Kings.

By H. RIDER HAGGAAD. With 8 Illustrations. 6s.

The Virgin in Judgment.

By EDEN PHILLPOTTS. With Frontispiece in Colours. 6s.

Mad Barbara.

By WARWICK DEEPING. With Frontispiece in Colours. 6s.

Ships of Desire.

By KATE HORN. With Frontispiece. 6s.

The Cairn of the Badger.

By MADGE BARLOW. With Frontispiece in Colours. 6s.

The Golden Precipice.

By H. B. MARRIOTT WATSON. Frontispiece in Colours. 6s.

THESE BOOKS CAN BE OBTAINED AT ALL LIBRARIES AND BOOKSELLERS'.—NEW AND COMPLETE LIST FREE ON APPLICATION.

CASSELL & CO., LTD., La Belle Sauvage, LONDON, E.C.

MACMILLAN'S NEW BOOKS.

Greek Architecture.

By ALLAN MARQUAND, Ph.D. L.H.D., Professor of Art and Archaeology in Princeton University. Illustrated. Extra crown 8vo, 10s. net.
[Handbooks of Archaeology and Antiquities. May 1h.]

SECOND AND CHEAPER IMPRESSION.

The Provinces of the Roman Empire from Cæsar to Diocletian.

By THEODOR MOMMSEN. Translated with the Author's Sanction and Additions by Prof. WILLIAM P. DICKSON, D.D. LL.D. With 10 Maps. In 2 vols. 8vo, 21s. net.

The text of this second impression has been revised throughout by Prof. Haverfield, who has added a new Appendix on Roman Britain.

The Novels of Henry James.

Édition de Luxe. In 24 vols. 8vo, 8s. 6d. net each.
Vol. XVI. THE AUTHOR OF BELTRAFFIO. THE MIDDLE YEARS. GREVILLE FANE. and other Tales.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

THE WHITE SISTER

A Story of Rome.

By the late F. MARION CRAWFORD.

GERVASE.

By MABEL

DEARMER.

Author of 'The Alien Sisters,' &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.
World.—"An extremely interesting and cleverly worked-out story, which at the outset may be pronounced to be the very best Mrs. Dearmar has written."

NEW BOOK BY THE WRITER OF
'CONFESSION MEDICAL'

Faith and Works of Christian Science.

Extra crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

Dante's Inferno, Purgatorio, and Paradiso.

Translated by EDWARD WILBERFORCE. 3 vols. Globe 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

Studies in Mystical Religion.

By RUFUS M. JONES, M.A. D.Litt., Haverford College, U.S.A. 8vo, 12s. net.

POCKET EDITION OF THE ENGLISH MEN OF LETTERS.

Edited by JOHN MORLEY. 1s. net each.

BURNS. By Principal SHAIRP.
BYRON. By JOHN NICHOL.
CARLYLE. By JOHN NICHOL.
CHAUCER. By Dr. A. W. WARD.
COLERIDGE. By H. D. TRAILL.
Others to follow.

NEW SHILLING EDITIONS OF POPULAR BOOKS.

Cloth, 1s. net each.

By Mrs. ALEXANDER.

Her Dearest Foe. Look Before You Leap.

By RHODA BROUGHTON.

Red as a Rose is She. Not Wisely but Too Well.

By MARY LINSKILL.

Clevedon. In Exchange for a Soul.

By Mrs. J. H. RIDDELL.

George Geith. Berna Boyle. Susan Drummond.

THE SONG BOOK.

Selected and Arranged by JOHN HULLAH.

THE JEST BOOK.

Selected and Arranged by MARK LEMON.

A BOOK OF WORTHIES.

Gathered from the old histories and now written anew.
By CHARLOTTE M. YONGE.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

Messrs. Longmans & Co.'s LIST.

* * * Vols. I., II., III., IV., V., VII., X., XI., and XII. are now ready, 7s. 6d. net each.

THE POLITICAL HISTORY OF ENGLAND.

Vol. IX. From the Accession of Anne to the Death of George II. (1702-1760).

By I. S. LEADAM, M.A.

With 8 Maps. 7s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

The Gospel and Human Needs:

Being the Hulsean Lectures for 1908-9.

With Additions. By JOHN NEVILLE FIGGIS, Litt.D., of the Community of the Resurrection, Mirfield. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"A book which every intelligent person should be glad to have read."—Athenæum.

Memoir of George Howard Wilkinson, Bishop of St. Andrews. By ARTHUR JAMES MASON, D.D. With Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo, 28s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"One of the most interesting biographies published for a long time."—Evening Standard and St. James's Gazette.

The Dawn of the Catholic

Revival in England, 1781-1803. By the Right Rev. MONSIGNOR BERNARD WARD, With 38 Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo, 25s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"If the book meets its full share of what fortune owes it, it will find a place in the libraries of every priest and most intelligent laymen."—Catholic Times.

A History of the Church of England. By the Rev. M. W. PATTERSON, Fellow and Tutor of Trinity College, Oxford, Examining Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Exeter. 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

Prophecy and Poetry: Studies in

Isaiah and Browning. The Bohlen Lectures for 1909. By the Rev. ARTHUR ROGERS. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

Industrial Efficiency: a Comparative Study of Industrial Life in England, Germany, and America. By ARTHUR SHADWELL, M.A. M.D. Crown 8vo, 6s. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

"The book is perhaps the most interesting political, social, and economic study produced of recent years..... There is scarcely a question confronting the England of to-day on which it does not shed valuable light."

Daily Mail.

The Human Species: Considered

from the Standpoints of Comparative Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, and Bacteriology. By LUDWIG HOPF. With Illustrations. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"The book is a rich mine of information. Since the appearance of Huxley's 'Man's Place in Nature' no book has given such a clear and systematic account of the bodily peculiarities of man, nor a more balanced estimate of his position in the animal kingdom."—Glasgow Herald.

The Minnesingers. By JETHRO BITHELL,

M.A., Lecturer in German at the University of Manchester. Vol. I. TRANSLATIONS. Royal 8vo, 5s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"The book would please any devoted reader of love-poetry, and its notes, packed with concise and well-digested erudition, give it a peculiar value for English students of German literature."—Scotsman.

Polly Winford. By EYRE HUSSEY, Author

of 'Miss Badsworth, M.F.H.' Crown 8vo, 6s. (Inland postage 4d.)

"Mr. Hussey's book is extremely cheerful..... It is this air of good spirits that carries the reader through—it is, in fact, the people and their pleasant out-of-doors humour rather than the things that they do that gives the book its charm."—Standard.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
39, Paternoster Row, London, E.C.

J. M. DENT & CO.'S BOOKS.

THE LIFE AND TIMES OF MASTER JOHN HUS.

By COUNT LUTZOW, Hon.D.Litt. Oxon., Ph.D. Prag. Medium 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

Contains a Map, 4 Photogravures, and many other interesting reproductions from old prints and paintings.

BEETHOVEN'S LETTERS.

Critical Edition, containing over 1,100 Letters, with Explanatory Notes by Dr. ALF. CHR. KALISCHER. Translated, with Preface, by J. S. SHEDLOCK, B.A. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 21s. net.

Daily Telegraph.—"It is hardly too much to state that here we have the final word on Beethoven, the best of all studies of the man and his innermost self."

RICHARD WAGNER.

By HOUSTON STEWART CHAMBERLAIN. Translated from the German and Revised by G. AINSLIE HIGHT. With Photogravure Frontispiece and many Illustrations. Crown 4to, 10s. 6d. net.

Times.—"A book of deep interest and great weight."

A NEW LIGHT ON THE RENAISSANCE.

By HAROLD BAYLEY. Super-royal 8vo, 12s. 6d. net. Over 400 Illustrations.

THE OLD MASTERS.

100 Examples of their Work reproduced in Colour, with Notes on the Pictures and the Painters. 2 vols. royal 4to (13 by 10½ in.), 21s. net.

TALES FROM SACCHETTI.

Translated from the Italian by MARY G. STEEGMANN. Introduction by Dr. GUIDO BIAGI. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

Athenæum.—"For Miss Steegmann's translation of more than eighty of Sacchetti's tales we have nothing but praise. It is an excellent piece of work."

A POCKET LEXICON AND CONCORDANCE TO THE TEMPLE SHAKESPEARE.

Prepared by MARIAN EDWARDES. Illustrated. Cloth, 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. net.

Consists of various readings and interpretations of words and phrases, including the latest contributions given in the Oxford Dictionary. The Glossary is accompanied by a Concordance; and illustrations from authentic sources have been introduced as a necessary means of understanding words referring to dress, armour, &c.

JUSTICE AND LIBERTY.

By G. LOWES DICKINSON, Author of 'The Meaning of Good,' 'Letters of John Chinaman,' &c. Small crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

Times.—"The last section of his book, on the relation of ideals to facts, is a passionate appeal not only to beauty, but to truth, and is in every way worthy to be read and pondered."

NEW POOR LAW OR NO POOR LAW.

Being a Description of the Majority and Minority Reports of the Poor Law Commission. With an Introductory Note by Canon BARNETT. 1s. net.

NEW THINGS AND OLD IN SAINT THOMAS AQUINAS.

A Translation of various Writings and Treatises of the Angelic Doctor. With an Introduction by H. C. O'NEILL. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

CALVIN IN HIS LETTERS.

By Rev. HENRY F. HENDERSON, M.A., Author of 'Erskine of Linlathen,' 'The Religious Controversies of Scotland.' Crown 8vo, 1s. 6d. net.

LES CLASSIQUES FRANÇAIS.

Edited by H. WARNER ALLEN.

A Series in the Original French. Photogravure Frontispiece. Pott 8vo, cloth, 1s. 6d. net per vol.; limp lambskin, 2s. 6d. net.

NEW VOLUME.

JULIE; OU LA NOUVELLE HÉLOÏSE

Par JEAN JACQUES ROUSSEAU. Préface de FRANK A. HEDGCOCK.

A full List of the Volumes may be had post free on application.

Prospectuses post free on application

J. M. DENT & CO.
Bedford Street, London, W.C.

SATURDAY, MAY 8, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
FRESH LEAVES AND GREEN PASTURES	551
SOCIAL LIFE AT ROME IN THE AGE OF CICERO ..	552
CARLYLE'S LOVE LETTERS	553
THE DECLARATION OF INDULGENCE, 1672	554
NEW NOVELS (Our Adversary; Dromina; The Mantle of Ishmael; Priscilla and Charybdis; The Trickster; A Question of Means; Olive in Italy; Love and Battles; A Fetish of Truth; The Lure of the Mask; Inez the King's Page; The Leveller)	555-559
BIBLIOGRAPHY	556
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (The Government of European Cities; Paul Verlaine; Nelson's Reprints; The Blue Lagoon; The Library; Authors' and Printers' Dictionary)	558-559
UNPUBLISHED DOCUMENTS CONCERNING THE NON-JURORS; A LETTER OF JOHNSON; SALE ..	559-560
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	560
LITERARY GOSSIP	561
SCIENCE—MR. SODDY ON THE INTERPRETATION OF RADIUM; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP	562-564
FINE ARTS—THE ROYAL ACADEMY; THE PENCIL SOCIETY; SOME CHURCHES OF SOUTH-EAST DEVON; SALES; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS ..	564-568
MUSIC—DIE WALKÜRE; PAGLIACCI; TRAVIATA; LUCIA; ZAZA; M. WIDOR'S ORCHESTRAL CONCERT; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK ..	568
DRAMA—AN ENEMY OF THE PEOPLE; ONE OF THE BEST; AN ACTOR'S STORY; THE GREEN-ROOM BOOK; SHAKESPEARE AT STRATFORD; GOSSIP ..	569-570
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	570

LITERATURE

Fresh Leaves and Green Pastures. By the Author of 'Leaves from a Life.' (Eveleigh Nash.)

THE Frith memoirs continue to expand. The veteran Academician's daughter—who still preserves a rather futile incognito—having devastated her London friends and acquaintance in her amusing 'Leaves from a Life,' now carries her raids into the country, and especially into the "island" of Purbeck, with which she has been connected for half a century. Judging from the impressions produced by her revelations of London life, we can easily believe that she "must have been," as she admits, "a regular 'dispensation' to the place." Mr. Stephen Gwynn, in his latest book, describes himself and his fellow Nationalist members as "militant insects"—we fancy he means white corpuscles—who perform a useful, if annoying mission in destroying noxious political bacilli. The author of 'Fresh Leaves,' evidently played a similar part in the quiet, sleepy old world into which like a torpedo she plunged on her marriage.

"I hit out right and left, and made as much mischief and so many enemies—for which I did not care one jot—that I can only compare those first years to the time spent by a wounded animal in a trap."

She "swore and declared" that she would not submit to the dictation of "the County." Though profoundly happy in her life-companion,

"I do not think any one was ever so miserable in the whole world as I was when I had been married about a couple of years and understood what I had let myself in for. As long as I could get about with my husband and we were left alone, things were right enough, but when I became a mother my life was one long nightmare."

The simple fact was that the sudden change from a remarkably vivacious household and all the varieties of London amusements to the deadly quiet of domestic routine in a peculiarly old-fashioned, Tory, and Churchy society was like a header into a wintry sea. A Liberal, she "could not away with" the domination of the squires; and to her capacious theological toleration—a more graceful way of expressing intolerance—the rule of the Church was even worse. The "beloved old Rector" notwithstanding, she was never fond of parsons, of whom "I think the less said the better"; and she tells with relish the familiar story of the rector "who used to climb to where he could see the kitchen-chimneys of seven small manor-houses smoking on Sunday, and used to claim his dinner where much smoke promised a lordly feed." Possibly the clergy might retort that a lady who writes of "the Second Commandment" as the one relating to the observance of the Sabbath is hardly a competent authority on matters ecclesiastical. But the author has now repented of her rebellion:—

"I was too young to know the perfect passion old people have for any association. . . . I could see nothing good in old ways, which appeared merely out-of-date nuisances to me; and above all I was appalled by the manner in which every single thing I did, and indeed things which I did not do, were discussed, gossiped over, and talked about, till I felt as if I lived under a microscope with the eye of a fiend. . . . I should much like to know why we one and all of us learn everything in life just too late to be of the smallest use."

The changing views of experience, however, have not prevented her from giving an exceedingly piquant, yet unmistakably true picture of county and county-town life as it was forty or fifty years ago. She writes as she talks, we imagine, in a clever, rambling, illogical way, with the "weirdest" (to use her favourite adjective) punctuation and amazingly constructed sentences. But all her vagaries of style and exaggerations do not spoil her book.

The picture is depressing, because it is all vanished now, and the death of a town, or the disappearance of a venerated class, is at least as pathetic as the death of a man. The seven county families, including, it seems, all Mr. Hardy's "Group of Noble Dames," who "ruled the place, all more or less kind, if they had their own way"—where are they now? The old estates are let to shooting tenants; the old manor houses have become farmers' dwellings, or schools; the old rectories are in the occupation of "casuals" who use them for summer holidays; the old squires, who used to ride to elections at the head of their well-mounted obsequious tenant farmers, are dead and gone; and even in the town, where there once were a score of families worth visiting, "there are only about four people who could by the utmost stretch of courtesy be called gentlefolk." The writer, it will be perceived, is as candid as ever.

"Personally, I bitterly regret the passing of the old Squire. True, when he was bad, he was very, very bad, as the poet hath it; but when he and his were good, their goodness was wide-reaching, and the whole country-side was the better for their kindly if autocratic care."

There is in these 'Leaves' a sufficiently lurid account of the "very, very bad" squire, who, in addition to rather rampant habits, had some delicate fancies, such as keeping his mausoleum warmed ready for his reception, and drilling his game-keepers to carry his coffin with even step, so that he should not be jolted on his last journey. His conduct, however, reduced his elderly daughter to the melancholy occupation of "winding all the clocks to mark the passing of the sorrowful hours, so that they should never be an instant different from each other"—as perfect a suggestion of dreary misery as can well be conceived. There is another story of the squire on the bars up the chimney, to evade an intrusive husband, which is more cheerful. But the general obliteration of the old ways touches the author deeply, and she says, truly enough, that it is not at all certainly "a good thing to have known a place and people for so many, many years as I have done."

"The Time-spirit has jogged their arms, and reminded them that they are now but survivals of a time when a man could do as he liked with his own. So, as the beautiful silence is broken by gramophones and motor-horns, and the exquisite cliffs deformed by obtrusive buildings, the manor turns its back on all, and the old inhabitants are off. If they cannot rule, they will abdicate, despite the fact that at least a hundred people will be miserable for their departure, and another village will be left derelict, because, the head once gone, there is no one to keep things together in the good old way. It is sad to see the death of an era, and I doubt if anything will replace the real 'County' folk, who are rapidly ceasing to exist. I liked their calm benevolence myself, admired their absolute certainty of their superiority to the rest of the world, and if I laughed at them, their queer garments, their hideous furniture, and their assumption, I should not do so now. I should not have done so had I understood them and known how they loved their own people and land. Tyrants, maybe, now and then; still, they tried to do their best, and I for one mourn over their rapid passing."

But the author does not confine her chronicles to the "county": she has a vivid picture of the old town life, where the furniture was not always hideous, and where a Sèvres tea-service, "the fellow of which was made for Marie Antoinette," Crown Derby and Worcester dinner china, and Charles II. silver were not unknown, though their value was. The life was not intellectual:—

"The women talked of their nurseries, their gardens, their poultry, and their neighbours, but quite in a different way from the manner in which they discuss these matters now. The children were not examined critically and scientifically; tempers were tempers, and not nerves; heredity had not come into sight."

Gurgling "moderators" with colza oil restricted evening occupations, and "save-alls" were used for economy of candle-ends. "The housewives of that day were actual slaves, first to the men of the house, and afterwards to their 'things,' which they washed up themselves.

"Not one of the gentlemen was ever either willing or able to join the ladies after dinner. The ladies saw each other home; if fine, with pinned-up skirts, goloshes on their feet, knitted shawls and clouds tied over their curls, and immense cloaks over all. If wet, they departed in relays in 'the brougham from the Bear,'" for all the world like the ladies of 'Cranford' or 'Emma': indeed, the author herself, in her garrulity, though not in humility, sometimes reminds us of Miss Bates. One had to be denominational in such a society, and we can sympathize with the new-comer of whom the godly old lady said, "'If only she were a Christian I could love her,' when she heard that I did not take in the Sunday magazines." There was another wonderful old lady—"I was one of twenty-one, my dear"—who never was known to sit in an easy chair, as indeed none of our grandmothers ever did if they had any self-respect. There was also an ungodly young woman, who played ball with her rolled-up handkerchief in the family pew; but she had soon to be "removed"; whilst another of the inhabitants had a trick of dropping asafœtida down the letter-box of a lady whom she disliked. Chapel manners were as remarkable as those in the funny old church under the "beloved Rector." One deacon let down the chandelier with a run, and scattered the candles, and the congregation, to spite his colleague; and a wealthy man, being (justly) rebuked for putting a penny in the soup-plate, came next Sunday with a double handful of coppers, which he smashed down with such energy that the plate was broken, and the collection dispersed in all directions, to the profit of sundry small boys.

The book is full of delightful glimpses of manners, good and bad; but we cannot quote more. We can only refer to the spirited account of elections in the old days, the night funerals of the great families, the custom of telling the master's death to the "charming" bees, the manner of curing whooping-cough by a hair from the cross on a donkey's back, the customs and privileges of the marble-quarrymen on Easter Monday, and the mode of paying bills in kind. There was at least one admirable trait of country society in those times:—

"There were three subjects which were never discussed in my early days, and I cannot but think this silence was a wise thing. They were the state of one's purse, the state of one's body, and the state of one's soul."

It was a sound rule. And so we leave a most entertaining book.

Social Life at Rome in the Age of Cicero.
By W. Warde Fowler. (Macmillan & Co.)

As we might expect from the author's previous work, he has given us a very readable as well as learned monograph on an attractive subject. The only drawback is that there are already many studies on it. The age of which he writes is known to us better than any other period in antiquity, by reason of the mass of extant materials. Cicero in his speeches as well as his letters, is a perfect mine of well-known information. Hence the province of a new essay on the subject is rather to dispose the materials suitably than to make discoveries. Gaston Boissier is the model for our recent writers on Roman life, and hence it may be that Mr. Warde Fowler fails to pay due attention to Cicero's relations with his Greek friends—a topic which Boissier forgot or ignored. The index to the present book is bad, yet, even so, the fact that there is only a single reference following the word "Grecks" tells its tale. This is the more regrettable as we would gladly have learnt whether Greek and Roman life agreed on many social points or not. In one of the cases where our author does compare them, he is clearly wrong as to the Greeks. "The Italians," he says, "like the Greeks, were then as now almost entirely vegetarians; cattle and sheep were used for the production of cheese, leather, and wool, or for sacrifices to the gods; the only animal commonly eaten was the pig." In this passage he assumes that what was sacrificed to the gods was not eaten, whereas victim was a common word for meat as opposed to game, of which he says not a word. As a matter of fact, too, the present Italians can hardly be called "almost entirely vegetarians," the use of fowl and lamb in its season being universal among them.

It is in his analogies that we find the author sometimes faulty for want of a clear vision of all the circumstances. Thus when he says that Varro, as a youth, seldom got a bath, and was made to learn to ride bareback, "which reminds us of the life of a young Boer in the Transvaal," the unwary reader might imagine that Varro was kept from riding on a saddle, and with stirrups, like the young Boer. But this would be a grave mistake, as the Romans only had saddle-cloths in contrast to bare backs of horses. Again, he reminds the student that "the Roman satirists are not deriding the average life [but the grave vices] of the citizen, any more than the artists who make fun of the foibles of our own day in the pages of Punch." Now this is exactly what Punch does, and is the reason why it has a permanent value as a record of society. Moreover, even Horace, though, of course, he scourges vices, also ridicules ordinary foibles; nor is the fierce and often coarse rhetoric of Juvenal the type of average Roman satire.

Here is another trifle requiring correction: "Fisheating only came in towards the end of the Republican period; and then only as a luxury for those who could afford to keep fish-ponds on their estates." But what about the sea? Were the piscosi mœnia Bari provided with fish-ponds? or did not the population, as it now does, devote itself to seafishing, and selling fish cheap? Mr. Warde Fowler says rightly that the Romans, like the Greeks, were busy much earlier in the morning than we are, and he acutely gives as one cause the imperfect lighting of their houses, which made bookwork of any kind at night difficult. But when he talks of we, he might have added that modern Italians still observe the same fashion. On clear nights, especially at the full moon, the market at Genoa is in full swing at 3 A.M. Most of the Genoese, too, live in huge insulae, which seem analogous to those of Rome.

We make these criticisms of detail because we have found the book excellent reading, and have noticed in it much that will be new to readers, and seems to us eminently true. What does the average student know of the splendid Turia? and what can be better than this? "In Roman eyes law was rather the source of morality, than morality the cause and the reason of law." Indeed, the whole chapter on religion is full of valuable ideas, some of which the author has taken, with due acknowledgment, from the masterly book of Wissowa on the subject.

In any work on this period the author's estimate of Cicero must colour all his views, and on this matter we find Mr. Warde Fowler reasonable and temperate, so that we are ready to accept as perfectly sound his picture of the great orator. Among the piquant traits of the picture are the relations of the novus homo, however superior in learning, intellect, or even official rank, towards the old nobility, with whom he never became really at ease. The only point that puzzles us is the author's account of the vast sums that Cicero spent, although he had no hereditary fortune, and never made more than a moderate income. Mr. Fowler says the simple fact is that Cicero was regarded as an honest man, who would always pay the interest on his debt, and that, if hard pressed, he had dozens of rich friends who would accommodate him with a new loan. But surely the process of plunging deeper into debt, in order to pay interest on a previous borrowing, is not the act of an honest man, nor would any sensible capitalist trust a debtor of this kind for one moment. Such conduct must presently end in bankruptcy. The picture of a public man always "hard up" (we use Mr. Fowler's phrase), and running constantly to new creditors to get him out of difficulties, could only seem reasonable to a college don who was a child in financial matters.

We will conclude with a far larger and more serious question—that of slavery and its effect upon Roman society. Our author has followed the prevailing fashion of setting down the practice of keeping slaves as a great cause of cruelty and hardness of heart in the upper classes. He thinks the first amelioration was due to Christianity. We are not convinced by his arguments. Cruelty to animals is not in any sense the result of intimacy with, and despotic control of, animals. Modern critics have been unduly biased by the only familiar example in modern civilized life, that of the United States of America. But there the profound contrast of race produced a contempt for the slave (in spite of Christianity) which the Roman could not feel for his Greek or Syrian servant. How little the average condition of slaves can have shocked even the best people appears from the fact that early Christianity did not attack the institution, that St. Paul sends back a runaway slave to his master with no outburst against slavery, and that he habitually calls himself the slave of Jesus Christ. We do not for a moment mean to defend slavery; we only assert that many a society is good in spite of grievous flaws, just as many a tyrant has been both just and humane, though he held the life and property of his subjects under his absolute control.

The Love Letters of Thomas Carlyle and Jane Welsh. Edited by Alexander Carlyle. 2 vols. Illustrated. (John Lane.)

As every one who is interested in biography or pure literature is interested in the letters of Carlyle and Jane Welsh, the volumes just published by Mr. Lane were secure of an eager welcome whenever they appeared. They have not wholly escaped, however, the fate which commonly befalls the progeny of parturient mountains: they are not what Horace would have expected them to be; they are anything but small, yet they are disappointing.

Carlyle was never great as a letter-writer in the way that Charles Lamb and Mérimée were great: they had genius for letter-writing; he was a man of genius who wrote letters—letters that have, at times, the strength and personal quality of a fine essay, but never the charm of familiar correspondence. In these early days his mind is as undeveloped as his style; he is crude, awkward, over-emphatic; apter at catching the faults than the excellences of the eighteenth-century prose writers. That one should write to please rather than to improve one's correspondent was an idea which seems hardly to have occurred to him:—

"When I sit down to write Letters to people I care anything for, I am too apt to get into a certain ebullient humour, and so to indite great quantities of nonsense, which even my own judgment condemns—when too late for being mended."

That is his own admission. Here is a specimen of his solemn admonitions to his future wife:—

"I very much approve your resolution to exercise your powers in some sort of literary effort; and I shall think myself happy, if by any means I can aid you in putting it in practise. There is nothing more injurious to the faculties than to sit poring over books continually without attempting to exhibit any of our own conceptions. We amass ideas, it is true; but at the same time we proportionally weaken our powers of expressing them; a power equally valuable with that of conceiving them, and which, tho' in some degree like it the gift of Nature, is in a far higher degree the fruit of art, and so languishes more irretrievably by want of culture," &c.

Even when writing to a lady with whom one is on the most delicate terms such austerity is excessive, especially when it runs into a dozen pages. Carlyle is at his best when describing people, and it is to be regretted that his editor, out of respect for the memory of Campbell's widow and others long since deceased, has felt obliged to suppress more than one passage in which contemporaries are freely handled. He is at his worst when writing, and generally complaining, about himself; and, like the majority of people who take themselves very seriously, most amusing when unconsciously so. In the October of 1824 he visited Paris and told Miss Welsh what he thought of it:—

"[I am] daily growing more and more contemptuous of Paris, and the manière d'être of its people. Poor fellows! I feel alternately titillated into laughter and shocked to the verge of horror at the hand they make of Life.... Their houses are not houses, but places where they sleep and dress; they live in cafés and promenades and theatres; and ten thousand dice are set a-rattling every night in every quarter of their city. Every thing seems gilding and fillagree, addressed to the eye, not to the touch."

Jane Welsh, on the other hand, had a genuine gift for writing letters; her genius is small, but undeniable. She is, however, far too conscious of her own superiority; not only was she the beauty, she was also the Muse of the village; had she been less vain, she must have been unnatural. Yet, under all her pert provincialism, we can detect that mysterious quality which distinguishes the good letter-writer. She writes to please two people—her correspondent and herself; she has no need, therefore, to canvass general truths, but can afford to be personal and charming. Her artful wit gives pith and moment to the most trivial enterprises, and turns domestic projects into adventures of high romance. She never makes great things small by declamation; she prefers to make small things great by insinuation. Her friend is assumed to be interested in all that concerns herself, so she is not afraid to be intimate; and a correspondent both clever and intimate is one of those things that make life precious. In a word, her letters (which, to our disappointment, occupy a bare third of the two volumes, and towards the end are disastrously affected by the style of her lover) succeed in giving a whimsical view of her ordinary and external life, viewed from standpoints above and beyond the reach of externals—the head and the heart. Her account of the affair with Mr. Dugald G—is, in its way, a little masterpiece, but too long for quotation. We select a shorter specimen of her style:—

"Such a week I spent in Galloway! There was no amusement within doors, and the weather precluded the chance of finding any without. 'Cœlebs in Search of a Wife' was the only book in the house, and even that was monopolised by a young lady who came to my Uncle's (I strongly suspect) on Cœlebs' errand. The rest of us had no weapon of any sort to combat time with, and for four whole days I sat counting the drops of rain that fell from the ceiling into a bowl beneath, or in burbling the chain of my watch for the pleasure of undoing it. 'Oh Plato! what tasks for a philosopher!' At length in a frenzy of ennui I mounted a brute of a horse that could do nothing but trot, and rode till I was ready to drop from the saddle—just for diversion. I left my companions wondering when it would be fair; and when I returned they were still wondering. How very few people retain their faculties in rainy weather!"

We can hardly make evident by quotation the difference between the letters of a genius and one who had a genius for letter-writing; the reader, however, who will be at pains to take Lamb's correspondence from the shelf and compare his letters with those of Mrs. Carlyle will no doubt discover what it is that they both possess and Carlyle lacks. You may think of Carlyle writing his 'Frederick' in a tail-coat, or whatever costume you prefer, and feel sure, if your mind be not too literal, that his letters were written in the same full dress. Far pleasanter would it be to imagine Jane Welsh, coming home from a rout, slipping a gay dressing-gown over a satin petticoat, and gossiping till the fire burnt low. In his most playful moments Carlyle kept one eye on "the eternities"; Jane in her most solemn never lost sight of the comic spirit.

The volumes before us are well printed on good paper, and without they are embellished by a device—two hearts, stamped in gold, linked with a golden ring, and supported by a plump little cupid; the same device is repeated on the title-page in mauve. Trifles may be significant; whether this symbol was suggested by the editor, or whether the editor was influenced by it, are questions deserving thought. Turning to matters less subtle, we wish that Mr. Alexander Carlyle had not found it necessary to rake up the ashes which reticence had allowed to grow cold. Also, we wish that he had adopted some other policy towards Jane Welsh; the pin, even between deft fingers, is an ignoble and unattractive weapon. In his notes he contrives a small and unpleasant sensation (vol. i. p. 319) which would be more effective were it supported by anything better than a piece of gossip, for which no authority is given, and the doubtful interpretation of one passage in a letter. We are grateful to him, however, for translating all the Latin, French, German, Italian, and Scotch words, and for several touches of unconscious humour, of which the following is a pleasant example:—

"Pen (from Penfillan, home of Miss Welsh's paternal grandfather) was her pet name used to distinguish her from the Welshes of her maternal grandfather's household, especially from her mother's younger sister, whose name was also Jeannie Welsh. Conscious of procrastinating too long in writing, Miss Welsh here sportively enlarges Pen not into Penfillan, but into Penelope, the name of Ulysses' faithful wife, who put off so long the hateful task of choosing a husband from the wasteful and riotous horde of suitors assembled in her house during Ulysses' protracted absence. See Homer's 'Odyssey.'"

The Declaration of Indulgence, 1672: a Study in the Rise of Organized Dissent. By Frank Bate. With Introduction by C. H. Firth. (Liverpool, University Press.)

IN this diploma study Mr. Bate presents us with a work of genuine merit, for which students of the unequal contest between Church and Dissent during the first twelve years of Charles II., and of the King's relations with both, may well be grateful. Mr. Bate does not remake history, in the sense of contradicting or essentially modifying views hitherto accepted; on the contrary, his minute and impartial investigation virtually confirms the accuracy of these views, and for the student confirmation is as valuable as refutation. The general historian of the years which saw the question settled up to the present day as to what was to be Church and what was to be Nonconformity will recognize that he is now able to base his own survey upon a foundation which may be regarded as secure.

That there should be so little which needs substantial correction in the broad views hitherto entertained is certainly remarkable when we consider that all serious accounts, contemporary with the conflict or immediately subsequent to its close, were written under the influence of triumph or a keen sense of injury; and when we consider further the wealth of material which has become available since any specialized study of the subject was undertaken. Besides modern histories and biographies, Mr. Bate has had at his command the Reports of the Historical Manuscripts Commission and the Calendars of Domestic State Papers in the Record Office; the Western MSS. in the Bodleian; the numerous collections published by local or religious historical societies; and a vast array of controversial pamphlets, letters, and songs, illustrative of the temper of parties. Of all these Mr. Bate has availed himself to the best purpose, with an industry which can be fully appreciated only by those who have essayed a similar task. But, besides industry, his work displays both impartiality and detachment of mind. If we have the impression that his private sympathies are with Nonconformity, it is not because of opinions expressed in his book, but because no Churchman is likely to examine very closely into a story which, judged by a liberal code of Christian ethics, could scarcely be regarded by him with satisfaction. Mr. Bate recognizes that, in an age when the idea of toleration was still struggling to secure its hold upon life, Nonconformists could expect nothing but persecution when the Church which they had long kept under heel should in her turn be triumphant; he recognizes also that this persecution was stretched by Clarendon, under the eager impulse of Parliament, and especially by Sheldon, to its furthest possible limits; but that, grievous as was the distress actually caused, it was—to the infinite chagrin of most of the prelates—greatly moderated, not only by the constant endeavour of the King, up to 1673, to evade the penal Acts, but also by the reluctance of the Justices of the Peace to put these Acts into drastic operation among people in whose midst they lived. He sees that Parliament should not be inconsiderately condemned for harshness, nor Sheldon for his heavy and unrelenting hand, nor Charles for his abuse of the prerogative in his attempts to escape from the fetters which Parliament had forged. As Prof. Firth says in the deeply interesting Introduction in which he gives his benediction to this and all similar essays:—

“Looking at the fifteen years of ecclesiastical history narrated by Mr. Bate from this general point of view, we shall not be inclined to wonder that the Nonconformists were persecuted, or that it was difficult for them to obtain the toleration which seems to the twentieth-century reader an elementary and self-evident natural right. Nor shall we be inclined to blame too harshly the unwisdom of the Parliament, which, after all, could not be much wiser or more humane than the men it represented, nor to condemn those statesmen who attempted to establish some measure of religious freedom by means of the prerogative instead of by means of Parliament.”

With the view held by Mr. Bate of the position of the King we are in entire agreement. He is convinced that Charles was not a Catholic, but that

“the Declaration of Indulgence was the natural outcome of his consistent policy, to secure a reasonable toleration for Roman Catholics, to whom he felt in honour pledged, and incidentally for Protestant Dissenters, for whose sufferings he, in reality, cared little”; and that, in any case, “despite the apparently damning evidence afforded by the Secret Treaty of Dover,” he had no intention of imposing Catholicism upon the people. Mr. Bate indeed, in this phrase, shows that he, like many others, has misread the Treaty of Dover, which not only does not contain any “apparently damning evidence” of such an intention, but does contain phrases which, by implication, absolutely preclude it. Charles knew as well as most people what was possible.

Except that we see no justification for saying that Shaftesbury “changed his convictions,” there is but one other statement in the book with which we cannot agree. Mr. Bate says that Charles came back “untrammelled by conditions.” To ourselves it is plain that if ever a king were restored upon sufferance, it was he; and he frankly admitted it. The Declaration from Breda contained the conditions; and one of them was the absolute recognition of the supremacy of Parliament as to the great outstanding question of the settlement of religion. From this he only momentarily escaped.

The clearness of our conceptions is blurred by the phrase “the Restoration of Charles II.” It obscures the fact that the real and primary restoration was that of Parliament, which indeed implied the other, since, as Clarendon pointed out, Parliament and King were co-ordinated in the English mind. Charles was, up to his great coup of 1681, in the determined grip of Parliament, and, had he lived a year longer, would undoubtedly have been in its grip again. The whole of his reign was a running fight with the alliance between Parliament and Church, in which, except for the short intervals secured by evasion, he was continually worsted. For if the Restoration meant the restoration of Parliament, which had been dragooned by Cromwell, it meant even more the restoration of the Church, which had been humiliated by the Commonwealth. From the moment that the alliance was completed at the assembling of the second Parliament Charles found himself confronted and thwarted by a jealous and minatory, not a submissive, Church. His grandfather, while still King only of Scotland, was never forced to listen to sterner or more confident rebuke from Andrew Melville than he himself received from Sheldon. At that prelate's bidding the idea of comprehension faded away, and the relative positions of Church and Dissent were settled as they are settled now. Comprehension gone, there followed the fight for toleration, which is Mr. Bate's theme.

Through the whole story—the persecution which preceded the “Clarendon Code,” the Clarendon Code itself, the breathing spaces when Parliament was not sitting and Charles could have his way, up to his unconditional surrender when he cancelled the Declaration of 1672—Mr. Bate takes us in great detail, but with a wise avoidance of unnecessary matter. The peculiar value of his narrative lies in his continual illustration from particular cases. Thus we are not merely told that the Corporation Act was rigidly enforced, but we hear how

“in Liverpool, Thomas Blackmore, Thomas Williamson, Ralph Massam, Edward Williamson, Gilbert Formby, and Richard Percivall, all of whom had occupied the civic chair during the Commonwealth, were removed from the office of aldermen. The town-clerk and seven councillors were also ejected from office.”

So, again, we obtain some idea of one of the effects of the Act of Uniformity not anticipated by its framers—the degradation of the personnel of the Church—in the following complaint of Seth Ward:—

“Some of the most populous and considerable places in my diocese have stood void ever since Aug. 24, '62, and there is hardly one parish [in a certain district].... where I have not met with complaint either that they have no minister or a pitiful ignorant one, or the minister hath complained for want of sufficient maintenance.”

Still more convincing is the excellent ballad quoted from Lewis Griffin's ‘The Asses Complaint against Balaam’ (p. 34), for which we must refer the reader to Mr. Bate's text. How little all availed to bring back the erring flock to the fold may be seen in the complaint of members of Parliament in 1668 that many parsons had altered the words of the Liturgy from “as many as are here present” to “as few as are here present”; and the failure of the second Conventicle Act, with its ferocity and its shameless encouragement of informers, extreme and widespread as was the suffering caused, may be seen in Seth Ward's complaints to Sheldon that he was being continually foiled by the reluctance of magistrates and constables to carry out the law.

We cannot follow Mr. Bate through his admirable account of the results of the Declaration of Indulgence and of the renewal of persecution which followed its cancelling; but we will quote the passage which sums up the permanent effects of the two years' breathing-space which the Declaration afforded:—

"The Declaration of Indulgence and the licences it had created were things of the past. But not the King himself could stay the movements he had started. Reresby, looking back upon the Declaration, and noting its effects, wrote: 'All sectaries now publicly repaired to their Meetings or Conventicles; nor could all the Laws afterwards, and the most rigorous executions of them, ever suppress these separatists, or bring them to due conformity. In the returns sent in answer to the enquiries of Archbishop Sheldon in 1675, it is asserted that many left the Church upon the Indulgence, who before did frequent it.' A large number who till 1672 had held consistently before themselves the possibility of comprehension abandoned it to set up churches and congregations definitely separated from the Church of England. Families who had hitherto submitted their infants for baptism in the established Church now brought them to their own pastors. Ordinations among Presbyterians, not held since the Restoration, were performed once more. A vast number of dissenting congregations, existing even to this day, date their formation and continuous life from Charles II.'s Declaration of Indulgence.

"What the Nonconformist bodies gained the Church to some extent lost. Piteous indeed are the complaints of bishops, clergy, and their agents. 'The Churches are not so well filled lately as they were, and seducers are many and busy.' 'I have spent above 40*l.* of my own Estate, to no purpose, so stiff is the Opposition of the Party, and so little the assistance of them above me, and as for my Equals, many of them have been my bitterest opposers. So that for the future I must be as moderate as the rest upon pain of being Ruined.' Desperate efforts were made for 'a generall reduction from Schisme to the Church,' but with little effect. Nonconformists had been given a start which even the persecution of 1682 could not reduce."

The appendixes to this volume are of great interest, and the most interesting is that which contains the list of licences which followed the Declaration, derived from the 'Calendar of Domestic State Papers, 1672-3.' From it we can gain some idea of the extent of Nonconformity. Thus in Devonshire there were no fewer than 108 separate congregations, in London 103, in Somerset 82, in Yorkshire 81. Altogether there were 1,483 in England. Doubtless many of these were small, but it is certain that many more numbered their hundreds. And the next fact is that Presbyterianism accounted for the great majority. It is needless to remark that this did not mean Scotch Presbyterianism—that imperium in imperio, with its machinery of private tyranny which never existed or could exist in England; it was merely Presbyterian doctrine, with so much of church polity as local circumstances allowed.

We wish that Mr. Bate had found time to explain some curious features in the distribution of the various sects. Why, for example, was the complexion of Worcestershire Presbyterian, while that of Gloucestershire was Congregational? Why, to take the Eastern Counties, were Lincolnshire and Cambridgeshire Baptist, while Bedfordshire and Norfolk were Congregational, and Suffolk and Essex Presbyterian? Similar contrasts exist elsewhere, and it would be interesting to know the particular influences which led to them.

We congratulate Mr. Bate upon what we imagine to be his first published work. It displays great and well-directed industry; it is, as we have said, agreeably impartial in tone; and it is written without undue emphasis, and with an effective simplicity of style. It is not without good reason that his study has earned the warm commendation of Prof. Firth.

NEW NOVELS.

Our Adversary. By M. E. Braddon. (Hutchinson & Co.)

THIS novel shows less unity of purpose than is usual with Miss Braddon. Many loose threads are left about, and give an impression of having been sometimes forgotten by the author herself. We have, for example, at least two mysteries—a case of impersonation and an all but illegal marriage—which are not fully explained, and seem to have little bearing on the action. There is no apparent reason, moreover, why the ex-clerical hero's doubts concerning the personality of a devil should play any part in the "good old-fashioned love-story" of his courtship. The music-hall singer to whom, as an incarnation of evil, the title in some degree refers, is well imagined and well drawn.

Dromina. By John Ayscough. (Arrow-smith.)

"THIS is not an historical novel, or even an unhistorical one," remarks Mr. Ayscough somewhere in the middle of his book, and in a sense the statement is true. The narrative is not sufficiently connected: its separate parts do not cohere to form an organic whole. The historic element provided in the character of a legitimate Louis XVII., son of Marie Antoinette, and his pretensions to the throne of France, promises at one point to form the main theme of the story; but the interest is quickly turned in another direction, and in the latter portion of the book an entirely new plot and milieu are introduced, somewhat to the disturbance of the reader. However, one may be well content to condone the structural weaknesses of 'Dromina' for the sake of its individual beauties—its fresh scenes, original characters, shrewd and delicate observations, and unforced wit. Above all, one must recognize its special distinction—a power of spiritual perception which enables the author to deal convincingly with supernatural experience.

The Mantle of Ishmael. By J. S. Fletcher. (Eveleigh Nash.)

MR. FLETCHER handles capably his melodramatic material, and the more or less idle reader will follow his story with interest. We are introduced to a fashionable doctor in Harley Street, who shows himself at last as the head of an organization more powerful, and more modern in its methods, than the brigand limited liability company in 'Le Roi des Montagnes.' In true melodramatic fashion, all the good people finish on one yacht, and all the bad on another; but the ending is skilfully worked out.

Priscilla and Charybdis. By F. Frankfort Moore. (Constable & Co.)

IN his latest novel Mr. Frankfort Moore seems consciously to attack the rigidity of Church marriage law. The "knot" of the story—as the reader discovers long before the author informs him—is the appearance of a rascally Enoch Arden, who does not scruple to make things unpleasant for the two charming persons who have married during his post-convict wanderings in Canada. The first two-thirds of the book, while quiet, offer two characters, as real as they are uncommon, the last third, while crammed with incident, is not spoilt by it, and shows the author's capacity for dealing with incidents that trench on the melodramatic. The dialogue is bright and clever.

The Trickster. By G. B. Burgin. (Stanley Paul & Co.)

NEITHER in construction nor characterization is this story a good specimen of Mr. Burgin's work. Lady Selina Archdayne marries a man for whom she has no affection, merely because another whose wife she desires to be, goes away to India without confirming her well-founded belief that he loves her. The reticent lover returns, of course, and the conventional story, with an ugly incident here and there, proceeds to its obvious close. None of the characters, except, perhaps, the little daughter of the ill-assorted pair, has the quality of life.

A Question of Means. By Margaret B. Cross. (Chatto & Windus.)

THIS is a well-written story telling of a beautiful girl. Two men are in love with her—one wealthy, the other the reverse. The girl marries the poor man, and the story pictures their married life. The cares of a family and the "question of means" make that life at times almost a tragedy. To add to the irony of the situation, the poor husband is in the employment of the rich man, who grows wealthier and becomes a famous politician. He cannot forgive the struggling couple who are in his power. In the end we are shown that "means" are not everything. The story, with its note of scorn for ostentatious wealth and its grasp of things that really matter, bears distinct marks of ability.

Olive in Italy. By Moray Dalton. (Fisher Unwin.)

THIS "first novel" shows the influence of Ouida in a certain deliberate painfulness not effaced by its happy ending. The heroine is an orphan who earns her livelihood in Siena as a teacher of English, in Florence as a lady's companion, and in Rome as an artist's model. A famous pianist falls in love with her on the first page of the second chapter, but before they marry she endures hunger, temptation, and fear. The villain is an unconvincing Italian prince whose ruthless sensuality almost culminates in murder. The minor characters are well drawn and interesting, and the local colouring is picturesque and vivid. Considerable power is shown in the invention and treatment of the incidents attending the suicide of an Italian girl. One or two suave and gracious bits of conversation suggest that the author might successfully appeal to the public without having recourse to melodrama.

Love and Battles. By Frank Sidgwick. (Melrose.)

IF the author's powers of construction had not been so inferior to his sense of character, this unconventional story would have been of exceptional merit. Tony Barclay, sentimentalist and philanderer, is a vivid and interesting figure, self-centred, yet good-natured, eager in search of happiness, yet too unstable to grasp it. His school and college friends, and his numerous relatives, are drawn with a swift and intimate touch. A lack of movement and cohesion is the principal defect of the book; most of the characters have too little connexion with the central idea. The book is, however, one of great promise.

The Lure of the Mask. By Harold MacGrath. Illustrated by H. Fisher and Karl Anderson. (Stead's Publishing House.)

THE excitement and satisfaction of successful pursuit are communicated to the reader of this prettily illustrated story. The hero is a rich American who falls in love with a woman's voice, which he hears outside his window in New York after midnight. By an indiscreet advertisement he makes the acquaintance of the singer, who does not, however, permit him to see her face, and sails for Europe before he knows her name. The European travel, which supplies the author with many incidents, is vivacious; and an Italian, whose revenge confers accidentally a great benefit on the hero, is a pathetic and dignified figure. Artificiality of plot may claim to be art in a tale of this kind, and the only defect is a stiltedness which takes the place of wit in one or two passages of fantastic comedy.

A Fetish of Truth. By Eileen Fitzgerald. (Hutchinson & Co.)

THIS is the story of a "good" millionaire, who makes a bad beginning by purchasing another man's introduction to a firm in America. The man, like himself, is named Allardyce, but is a wastrel, not a workman. He dies violently before he gets the introduction back; so Stephen, his personator, gets his place, and makes a huge fortune. The best thing he does leads to his temporary undoing. He has charged himself with the care of the other man's children. When he returns to England and marries a lady of birth, this causes complications. Lady Ruth believes that he has lied to her, and he returns in despair to America, which introduces us to the earthquake at San Francisco. The "Society" part of the story is well written, and involves a realistic counterplot.

Inez the King's Page. By Arthur Maltby. (Woodhouse & Co.)

WE suppose that there will never be an end to romances in which the woman dons the doublet. The most perplexing point about them is that the lady is able to avoid the detection of her sex in the most difficult circumstances. Inez is the morgantic wife of Philip, consort of Mary of England, and she passes as Philip's page. Mr. Maltby's version of history is audacious and astonishing; but we find a certain life and vigour in the story which goes some way to put it above the general level of such romances. Incident follows incident, and intrigue intrigue, in a way, that suggests adaptation for the stage.

The Leveller. By Alexander McArthur. (Stanley Paul & Co.)

"I HAVE never known a novelist who could write intelligently on music," says Anton Rubinstein in the present novel, concerning Tolstoy and the 'Kreutzer' Sonata. The author, however, makes good use of the selections played by the master in the tour de force whereby he delivers a beautiful Jewess, his pupil, from condemnation as an anarchist. Apart from this incident, the interest centres in the relations of the lovers, the Orthodox Count and the Jewish musician. The Count has an uncle, a high minister of State, also an ambitious mother, while Pobyedonostseff looms in the background; and the obstacles to his union with Rubinstein's pet pupil may be imagined. These are surmounted with ingenuity. The author knows something of the Russia of the time, and has a good, if American, style.

BIBLIOGRAPHY.

Chaucer: a Bibliographical Manual. By Eleanor P. Hammond. (Macmillan & Co.)—This is a good and careful piece of work, so good as to render not inappropriate to the author's labour the quotation from Dante on the title-page—"Il lungo studio e il grande amore";—so careful, that no important contribution to the study of Chaucer is left unnoticed. Miss Hammond's book is intended presumably rather for consultation than continuous reading, and a simple plan is, therefore, essential to its utility. This she has found, and supplemented by a good Index; there is little difficulty in finding the place of any statement in it. The work is divided into seven chapters—'The Life,' 'Complete Works,' 'Canterbury Tales,' 'Other Works,' 'Pseudo-Chaucerian Pieces' (among which the 'Romaunt of the Rose' is included), 'Linguistics,' and 'Bibliographical Notes.' Each of these chapters is subdivided fully: thus the first deals in order with 'The Legend of Chaucer,' 'The Appeal to Fact,' and his portraits; that on 'The Works' with (a) 'The Canon of Chaucer,' (b) 'Chronology,' (c) 'Sources,' (d) 'Editions of Collected Works.' Under this system the same statement has sometimes to be made in two places in different connexions, but this is no great disadvantage.

There can be no doubt that Miss Hammond's book must speedily find its way into the library of every institution concerned with the advanced study of English, and this being so we will pay her the compliment of devoting the remainder of our space to the correction of one or two misunderstandings of fact or errors of judgment. The most serious of these, in our opinion, is the author's adherence to the order of 'The Canterbury Tales' in the Ellesmere MS. One understands, of course, the attraction of a neatly rounded-off text for a scholar, but its very excellence should have rendered it suspicious when we remember we are dealing with a work left unfinished by its author. As a matter of fact, most competent scholars are, we believe, agreed that the Ellesmere MS. is an edited text, and that its order was rearranged for fairly intelligent and obvious reasons, but that this rearrangement could not have been due to Chaucer. A simple proof of this is the placing of the four modern instances at the end of 'The Monk's Tale,' thus destroying the link between 'The Monk's Tale' and 'The Nun's Priest's Prologue,' to establish which Chaucer had been at the pains to write twenty new lines. Another is the insertion of the discarded Host stanza after 'The Clerk's Tale,' superseded by 'The Merchant's Prologue.' The most rational thing which we can do, therefore, is to take the latest version from Chaucer's hand, i.e., Harley 7334, for the order of the tales, and, in a noticeable number of cases where it agrees with the Hengwrt, its readings, clearly better than those of the Ellesmere.

Another error of judgment is the slight notice taken of the argument of Lowes for the date of 'Troilus.' He not only "argues for 1382," but also proves it to the mind of most of those who know Chaucer best. The line "Right as our firste lettre is now an A" is a meaningless disfigurement, unless it refers to the coronation of Anne of Bohemia in January, 1382. It is needless to recall to any student of ornament the custom of using initial letters of a name as a decorative element at the time, notably in the case of Richard her husband. The discussion of other debatable points would need more space for treatment than our columns permit.

The paragraph quoted in the text as to the authorship of the illustrations of Burne-Jones for the Kelmscott 'Chaucer' is misleading. The artist did not make "a series of rough pencil notes suggesting the subjects and the composition." The subjects and composition were settled in conversation between Morris and Burne-

Jones, who thereupon made a wash-drawing. This drawing was turned into line by Mr. Catterson Smith, and corrected and worked on where necessary by the artist. It was then cut on wood by Mr. Hooper, the borders being designed for the drawing by William Morris. To say that "artistically Burne-Jones had very little to do with it" is as unjustifiable a comment as that Titian, Reynolds, or Rossetti had very little to do with their paintings, because much of the more mechanical part of the work was done by assistants, artists themselves. As to the variation of price, the huge sums asked for the Kelmscott 'Chaucer' were entirely due to the speculation of the booksellers, and it is selling now at nearly three times its published price. A slip occurs in the notice of Prof. Child, where it is stated that he "gave the money to begin the labours of the Chaucer Society." This is a confusion arising from the fact that he gave 50*l.* towards the 100*l.* that had to be paid for leave to print the Percy Folio MS. The New Shakspeare Society and the Ballad Society have long ceased to exist.

The author's account of libraries is rather defective. For example, she says of the "Royal" Collection in the British Museum: "It was not until the accession of the Georges that the purchasing of books became a matter of personal interest to the sovereign." One of the sights of the Museum is a case of books from the library of Henry VII., the name of whose librarian is known; and the Royal library contains books of every English king from his time to George II. The abbreviation "Reg." stands not for Regum, but Regia. The usual unjust aspersions on Bagford are repeated, though it was shown some time ago that his collection was formed from booksellers' waste. Bagford was not a buyer of books on commission, but a shoemaker, and such another enthusiast as the "musical small coals man," his contemporary. Ward's 'Catalogue of Romances' is not "incomplete," but "in progress." The third volume is expected from the Department early this year. "Tregentil Chaucer" is not the name of a scribe, but a descriptive adjective; and "Nicholas plenus amoris" is Nicholas Fullalove. "The question of Chatterton's real sources has not yet been fully answered," "nor has the problem of his attempt to imitate Early English grammar received attention," because, in the first place, Chatterton was a great and original genius, who needed nothing more than vague suggestions for a base to his poems; and in the second he has not enough system on which to found a grammar: his usage varies from page to page. The article on Lydgate in the 'Dictionary of National Biography' was written not by Mr. Pollard, but by Mr. Lee; and Dr. Furnivall's contributions to the notes to Prof. Skeat's 'Chaucer' might have been mentioned. To the novels in which Chaucer appears 'In Chaucer's Maytime' may be added. A line has been reduplicated on p. 505. In conclusion, we can only repeat our warm appreciation of this most important book.

A Bibliography of the Writings of Alfred, Lord Tennyson. Vol. II. (Printed for private circulation.)—Mr. Wise has added to his admirable bibliography of Tennyson, to the first volume of which we paid a full tribute last year (Athen., Sept. 26, p. 359), a second, including notices of 'Pirated Issues,' 'Collected Editions,' 'Complete Volumes of Biography and Criticism,' and an 'Alphabetical List' of all Tennyson's published and privately printed poems. The last is very useful as giving a short guide to the complicated appearance and reappearance of many poems and pieces (1) in print, (2) in a volume, (3) in a collective edition. Lord Tennyson has made some statements concerning four doubtful pieces, which settle the matter authoritatively, and are printed in 'Notes' at the end of the volume.

This volume, like its predecessor, is a model of careful industry and research which leaves virtually nothing to be done by successors. The Complete One-Volume Edition in green cloth boards, which is, perhaps, the best known to-day, was published in 1894; in the 1895 issue of this 'Kate' was first reprinted; and later issues have also an Index to 'In Memoriam,' and another to 'Songs.' It resembles in type and appearance the earlier Collected Edition of 1884 onwards, but can be easily recognized by the fact that the last poem is 'Crossing the Bar.'

The list of volumes of 'Biography and Criticism' is remarkably complete, so far as English writing is concerned, including with the first volume of Mr. Wise's own work no fewer than 111 volumes.

The once anonymous 'Tennysonian' is now described as the work of R. H. Shepherd. It includes a quotation of our own review of 'Timbuctoo' in 1829, which spoke of "poetry by a young man, and that where we should least expect it—namely, in a prize poem. These productions have often been ingenious and elegant, but we have never before seen one of them which indicated really first-rate poetical genius, and which would have done honour to any man that ever wrote. Such, we do not hesitate to affirm, is the little work before us."

We notice one foreign book only, 'An Essay on Tennyson's "Idylls of the King,"' by Dr. Albert Hamann, which is one of the "Wissenschaftliche Beilage zum Programm der Luisenschule," Ostern, 1887. More essays of the sort could be added, e.g., 'A Study on Tennyson's "Idylls of the King,"' by L. Dhaleine, a thesis for the Doctorate of the University of Paris (Bar-le-Duc, 1905). There is not, however, much of novelty, as a rule, in these dissertations. A solid contribution of more worth on a side of Tennyson hardly yet noticed in England is 'Tennysons Sprache und Stil,' by Dr. R. Dyboski, one of the "Wiener Beiträge zur englischen Philologie," 1907. It contains a careful and thorough analysis of Tennyson's language.

A Gypsy Bibliography. By George F. Black. (Privately printed.)—This is a preliminary issue, in a tentative form, of a bibliography, of which the aim has been to give a complete account of the literature relating to the gipsies. It has no pretensions to being exhaustive, and the compiler, whose address is the New York Public Library (Lenox Library Building), would be glad to receive additions, corrections, and notes on the nature and value of the contents. To compile a work of this description is a task of considerable difficulty, as many papers of importance are only to be found in foreign journals, and to collect the whole of these scattered issues would involve almost superhuman powers. A careful scrutiny of the work has assured us that these difficulties have been met with much success, and so far as English gypsy literature is concerned, we can detect the omission of no contributions of real importance.

We think it would increase the utility of the work, from the student's point of view, if the compiler were to add an Introduction, giving a résumé of the progress of gypsy scholarship from the date when a real scientific interest began to be taken in this remarkable people, together with an analytical list of the principal works on the subject, grouped under the three headings of history, language, and manners and customs. Under the scheme of the bibliography, treatises of the highest importance are intermingled with ephemeral magazine and newspaper articles, and works of fiction in which a member of the tribe may play only a subordinate part. The investigator who looks to a bibliography for guidance in his studies will find the method employed by the compiler a little confusing, unless he is assisted in the manner which we have suggested. There are also a few faults in arrangement which we think could be easily remedied. All books and articles relating to the same subject should be placed under one heading. For instance, under 'Canning, Elizabeth,' we find cross-references to 'Fielding, H.,' and 'Full, A.' On turning to the latter entry, we find the pamphlet entitled 'A Full and Authentic Account of the Strange and Mysterious Affair,' &c. Such a heading as 'Full' is not fitted for scientific bibliography. A large number of pamphlets connected with this mysterious case seem to have escaped the notice of Mr. Black.

Index to 'Book-Prices Current' for the Second Decade, 1897-1906. By William Jaggard. (Elliot Stock.)—In our notice (Athen., July 13, 1901) of the first volume of Mr. Jaggard's most useful 'Index to "Book-Prices Current"' we ventured to express the hope that the second would be "a little less behind time," and we congratulate the compiler on having taken the hint. His present volume is only two years, instead of five, behind the annual issue of 'B.-P.C.' We should imagine that this big book of over 1,000 double-column pages, with its 100,000 entries, must have taken at least a year to see through the press. We do not envy Mr. Jaggard his task, but we may be permitted to assure him that, if the compilers of bibliographical books of reference are ever ranked in a list of honour, the names of Slater and Jaggard will take precedence of those of (say) Dibdin and Lowndes.

The first Index volume has proved of great utility, but it falls far short of the high standard reached in the second, not so much because there are nearly three times as many pages in the latter, as because Mr. Jaggard, doubtless profiting from daily experience, has more fully grasped the essentials of a good Index. To hundreds of anonymous and pseudonymous entries he has added the real names of the authors, whilst the names of editors, collaborators, composers, translators, and principal artists are also indexed; and even these welcome features do not exhaust the many improvements introduced into the new volume. The scheme of the whole and some of the leading features are sketched in the lengthy Introduction.

One of the most welcome additions is the extensive list of the collectors and owners of the chief libraries and parcels of books of which the sales are reported in 'Book-Prices Current' from 1887 to 1906. This section is capable of considerable amplification, as some of the identities of anonymous owners were revealed in our own reviews of 'Book-Prices Current.' The sale in December, 1905, of Sir Henry Irving's books was only the residue of that energetic collector's literary treasures: there was a two days' sale of the choicer portion of his collection at Messrs. Christie's on February 21st and 22nd, 1899, here indexed under "Dramatic and Miscellaneous Collection." It was well known at the time to whom the collection belonged, and the ownership is distinctly stated in a note to the 'B.-P.C.' report of the later sale. The 1902 sale of

Mr. J. T. Bell of Glasgow is duly entered, but nothing is stated to associate Mr. Bell's ownership of the "Library of Economic, Historical, and General Literature" sold at Messrs. Hodgson's in 1904, and reported in 'B.-P.C.' of that year, pp. 482-524. The name was revealed in the press at the time. The "Library of an Italian Collector" ('B.-P.C.,' 1901, 697-717) was formed by Signor Pirovano, and some of the choice books in this sale, it may be here mentioned, were purchased for the British Museum. The "Library of a Nobleman" ('B.-P.C.,' 1895, 440-49) was that of Lord Lisburne. Admiral F. M. "Maxe" (p. 13) in the list of owners should, we think, be Maxse. Mr. H. Yates Thompson was the owner of the collection of MSS. and printed books sold at Messrs. Sotheby's on May 14th, 1902 ('B.-P.C.,' 468-71). Mr. Alfred Crampon, whose fine library was sold in 1896, is here called "Crampton," but the error is primarily Mr. Slater's. Lest future bibliographers should be misled, it may be pointed out that the Augustin Daly Sale in London in 1901 included only a small selection from his extensive library, which was dispersed in New York in 1900 (see Athen., March 24, 1900). Some other annotations suggest themselves in turning over Mr. Jaggard's list of owners, and several additional names might be affixed to anonymous properties: the ownership of the "Library of an Irish Journalist" ('B.-P.C.,' 1894, 492-500) was no secret at the time, nor was that of another important anonymous sale of the same year.

We have left ourselves little or no space to deal with the Index proper; and in truth there is very little fault to find with it. The Christian name of Mr. Dennis (p. 178), one of the editors of the Aldine edition of the British poets, is readily obtainable. The Chevalier D'Eon and D'Eon de Beaumont (p. 322) are two entries of the same eccentric character. Mr. Jaggard has made one entry do for the Dumas of 'Monte Cristo' and his son, the author of 'La Dame aux Camélias.' Mr. W. H. K. Wright was the editor of The Western Antiquary (p. 1025). Such flaws, however, are probably inevitable in so large a collection of detailed matter, and will not seriously affect the value of Mr. Jaggard's Index as a work of reference.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

We are disappointed with a volume on The Government of European Cities, by Dr. W. B. Munro, a professor in Harvard University (New York, the Macmillan Company). He has limited his book to three European countries: "France, Prussia, and England," but travels to some degree from Prussia into Germany as a whole, and from England into Scotland. Dr. Munro does not seem to have kept clearly before him the difference of law and practice between Prussia and many of the States of the German Empire, or between England and the rest of the United Kingdom. The other defect noticeable in the book, which has, however, features of interest, is the general avoidance of the subject of local taxation, upon which (after all) municipal government rests.

To explain the first of our two objections, we may point out that in the very beginning of the second chapter, 'The Government of Prussian Cities,' the first marginal note is "Growth of German Cities," and the reference of the paragraph is to "The German Empire." Yet the city-state of Hamburg (to give but a single instance) is not sufficiently described, and it is difficult to compare or contrast Berlin with the other cities of the empire without developing an account of local taxation and showing the extent to which income-tax and taxation of increment values have contributed to the municipal progress here described. The view of comparative defects in the cities of the United States is deprived of value by the absence of facts respecting sources of local taxation.

When we come to the third chapter, 'The Government of English Cities,' the limitations of the book are prominently brought out in the first statement that, "of all the countries of Europe, England presents the most interesting field for the study of city government and administration." Two reasons are given for this opinion: the first, the continuity of municipal history; and the second, "the phenomenon of urban concentration." The continuity of municipal history is marked in Germany, as regards the Hanse Towns at least; and Australia displays the phenomenon of urban concentration in a degree far higher than that yet reached in Europe. The narrowness of the author's field prevents his giving sufficient attention to the success of municipal activity in Glasgow, and makes him omit references to the distinction between the duties of the Local Government Board in England and the narrow restriction of the functions of that department in the other portions of the United Kingdom. American students, to whom the volume is no doubt specially addressed, and readers in general, will fail to grasp the fact that local government in Scotland differs in many essential respects from that of England, and that the Local Government Board of Ireland is a wholly distinct department from "The Local Government Board."

At a moment when the whole subject of the relations between local and Imperial finance is specially prominent in this country, we deeply regret that Dr. Munro has not turned his trained mind, or at least his trained pen, towards the elucidation of difficult and interesting problems. A footnote refers us, no doubt, to Glasgow; and we do not for a moment suggest that the author is not well aware himself of the effect of the limitation which he has chosen for his chapters. It is the practical defect in his book to which alone we direct attention. Compared with these main criticisms, all other points which we might notice are unimportant. It is necessary to caution the reader against the belief that "urban" in England means towns, in the same sense as elsewhere. Many really rural areas in England are technically urban; and some boroughs, on the other hand, include vastly more rural population than is proportionately the case with others. The grant of charters to boroughs is not, as the author thinks, by the Cabinet rather than by the Privy Council; but the Privy Council when conferring charters acts formally on the advice received from the Local Government Board, or corresponding Scotch and Irish departments in some cases, and the Home Office in others. In one of the few passages in which he alludes to the levying of local taxes the author assumes that in England rates are levied upon the rental value, if at all. The plan is not so simple as in his words it seems, and is in fact different as between the three kingdoms, and far from uniform in England. It is not the case that France "has had no important foreign influx." The foreign population of Paris, of the Department of the Nord, and of the Department of the Bouches du Rhône is enormous; and the author's argument is vitiated by circumstances which books of reference—not to name census statistics—prominently display.

One difficulty in perusing Dr. Munro's pages is caused by the use of American technical terms, and the employment of one word for many varying things in the United States, England, Scotland, and France respectively. The statement that "lodgers," instead of being "listed from the assessment rolls," are able to be upon the register if they "present applications for enrolment" is misleading. Lodgers, in the English sense, are not on the municipal register. In Scotland the term "lodger" has a different meaning. So with "franchises." The author uses the term in its American sense, by which it includes, for example, many tramway enterprises. In France the use of the word is again wholly different from either the American or the English. Dr. Munro's account of the Poor Law Unions is also, we think, confused, and it is not the case, as his words suggest, that boroughs are generally groups of Unions, where they are not comprised in a single Union with identical boundaries.

Paul Verlaine: his Life—his Work. By Edmond Lepelletier. Translated by E. M. Lang. (Werner Laurie.)—We gave a long notice of M. Lepelletier's life of his friend when it appeared a few years ago, and are glad to see that it has been translated. The English version is fluent and agreeable to read, except for some obvious Gallicisms. We regret, however, that it has been found necessary, "for purposes of space," to abridge the original, for in a book which is largely an apologia phrasing is of importance, and the translator's omissions seem to us arbitrary. Why, for instance, omit the words "chez le beau-père" before "rue Nicolet" on p. 16? It is said in the same paragraph that Rimbaud took Verlaine wandering in the Ardennes, England, and Belgium. Why should the first be omitted? The translator lacks education. We can hardly expect, perhaps, to see Aulus Gellius and the title of his book taken out of their French forms; but "les cosinus" translated "cosinus"; "Comme le sol à Antée" rendered "like Anthea and the earth" instead of Antæus; and the heroic Theban band massacred at "Cheronesus," for "Chéronée," are surprising. We get in the translation several pictures of Verlaine's odd head, two of his son, and one of M. Lepelletier. The book would be more satisfactory, for the English reader at any rate, if it included a good selection of the fine verse which gave Verlaine a reputation in spite of his disorderly career.

MESSRS. NELSON & SONS continue to publish excellent books in their two wonderfully cheap series of general books and fiction. In the former Sir Auckland Colvin's The Making of Modern Egypt, The Life of Lord Russell of Killowen, and Mr. Birrell's Selected Essays are all good reading in their several ways; Mr. Birrell, indeed, can fairly claim to be the most agreeable writer of the day on literary topics. In the preface to this selection, made by his friend Mr. John Buchan, he observes that "circulation is an author's life," and "the old claim of authors for perpetual copyright" a dream. That may be so. But at any rate a more than usually literary Government might do something to improve the present state of the copyright law.

The Blue Lagoon (Fisher Unwin) is attractively pictured on the paper cover of a cheap edition. Those who are led to investigate its contents will find a strange and in many ways delightful book.

MR. PLOMER has had the good fortune to discover, and publishes in the April number of The Library (Moring), two important documents for the early history of English printing. They give not only the number printed in an edition, but also the published prices of some half-dozen of Pynson's rare books, and in addition the prices of other English books in the market at the time. The comparison of these prices with the sizes of the books does not throw any clear light on the way they were arrived at; thus the 'Donatus,' 'Accidence,' and 'Doctrinale' elementary grammar books, are sold at a penny each, being presumably a single sheet, and a penny a sheet was, we know, the recognized official payment for Government printing in the sixteenth century. The Bartholomew Anglicus is priced at 10s., and has 480 leaves, and the Æsop, 142 leaves at 3s. 4d., is also concordant. But 'The Golden Legend' of Caxton has 446 leaves, and is priced at 24s., and 'The Canterbury Tales' (either 323 leaves or 153, according to the edition) at 5s. Pynson's own books are priced lower still. Bibliographers will doubtless come to some conclusion on the questions raised by this interesting find.

Miss Lee's summary of 'Recent Foreign Literature' notices some interesting features in contemporary German development. Mr. Hessels begins an article on 'The So-called Gutenberg Documents,' on which we reserve an opinion till the remainder appears. Mr. Pollard writes on 'The Arrangement of Bibliographies' from the standpoint of one who has had to deal with the subject practically. Mr. Ballinger concludes his striking series of articles on 'A Municipal Library and its Public' by a tribute to the committee whose confidence enabled him to try many important experiments and to make the Cardiff Library such a valuable factor in the life of the community. His articles should be read by every Library Committee in the kingdom. Mr. Scholderer writes on 'The Development of Shakespeare's Fools'; and Mr. Wm. Jaggard contributes to the discussion of the dates in Shakespearean quartos some notes on the watermarks and ornaments of other volumes from the Jaggard Press.

We commend to all concerned with the correction of the press a new shilling edition of the Authors' and Printers' Dictionary, by Mr. F. Howard Collins (Frowde), a sound guide which has been carefully revised.

UNPUBLISHED DOCUMENTS CONCERNING THE NONJURORS.

THE following documents, which are in the Library of St. John's College, Oxford, have never yet been printed. They relate to the terms of reconciliation between the "Usagers" and "Non-Usagers," about which Lathbury ('History of the Nonjurors,' 1845, pp. 368-81) is extremely vague: he uses phrases like "it appears," "it seems," "the disputes must have subsided," and the like, which show that he had not seen the documents. And Overton ('The Nonjurors,' p. 306) can only say that the two parties united again "about 1731." What is now printed gives the facts for the first time.

The first document is addressed "To the Rev^d Dr Brett at Spring Grove, near Ashford in Kent," and reads thus:—

R. REV^d AND DEAR SIR,

Yours of the 6th instt. came safe to my hands, whose contents nothing surprised me, as I had seen them in another to Mr Wright. I am indeed very much concerned, that I can make no farther concessions than those already signed, except as to making both the articles correspond by the words agree without any farther directions, which we have already done in these terms. V. We agree to consecrate &c. (etc.). More particularly I must adhere to what I have ever requir'd, a private mixture, for let Mr L. or Mr C. think, or express themselves as they please, they must know from the paper laid before them, that this was then only desir'd, and I know the consequences of omitting this material Term will be very dangerous and even Mr L. etc. will improve this omission to their advantage. Conformable to this notion I ever yet have, and must continue still to act, and for the truth of this I need but appeal to Mr Gordoun and Mr Smith. I dont indeed take aright the force of your motives to me as to this compliance being a defence against the insults offer'd us [? as] those we are convinc'd we dont deserve, and as long as we act conformable to this scheme we shall have reason to support our courage to despise them. The consequences of Mr Arch being not introduced into, or not consulted about this affair I am not fearful of, as he is a Governor of another Church (if not, as some say, remov'd) and therefore has nothing to do with us, and his interfering formerly was, most think, the source of this unhappy division, and as such I must desire to be excus'd from any more than a civil correspondence with him. This R. Rev^d and dearest Sr you have tho' in short, yet as full as possible the opinion of

Yours most affecty

R. R.

9 April, 1732.

It is throughout in the handwriting of Dr. Richard Rawlinson, who had been consecrated bishop in 1728.

The result of this letter is embodied in the formal document which follows, and which also is now printed for the first time:—

London. April the 17th 1732.
The Instrument of Union.

Whereas, an unhappy misunderstanding has happen'd between us the Sufferers in one Common Cause for Conscience Sake, concerning the Communion office in the Establish'd Liturgy, therefore that for the future an exact Uniformity may be observ'd among us, We do make the following Declarations and Agreement, viz.

I. We declare, that tho' the words "militant here in Earth" shall always be used as part of the Title of the Prayer for the whole State of Christ's Church: yet the following words in the last Clause of that Prayer, "That we with them may be partakers of thy heavenly Kingdom" shall be understood to be the same in sense with these words in the Burial Office, "That we with all those that are departed in the true faith of thy Holy Name may have our perfect Consummation and Bliss both in Body and Soul in thy eternal and everlasting Kingdom."

II. We declare, the Church appointing the Priest to place so much bread and wine as is sufficient upon the Table, and afterwards in the following Prayer to beseech God to accept our Oblations, intends that he should both acknowledge God to be the Sovereign Donour of those good Creatures to us, and also offer them in order to the Sacrificial Ministration, according to the Institution of Jesus Christ in Remembrance of his Death and Passion.

III. We declare, that in the Prayer of Consecration, the Church in that Petition "Hear us, O merciful Father, we most humbly beseech thee, and grant that we receiving etc." intends to bless, that is, to pray to God to bless and sanctify by his Holy Spirit the elements before offer'd.

IV. We agree, that a little Water shall always be privately mix'd with the Sacramental Wine, before it be placed upon the Altar.

V. We agree...to consecrate at first rather more than is sufficient for all the Communicants, that there may never be any need of a Second Consecration.

And we being satisfy'd with the Promises and Declarations made and signed by the Right Reverend Mr Hen. Gandy, Dr Richard Rawlinson & Mr George Smith, do readily and cheerfully return to full Communion with them, and do faithfully promise to lay aside the Office we now use from and after the first of Sept^{ber} next ensuing, in the year of our Lord one thousand seven hundred and thirty two; and to administer the holy Eucharist according to the Form prescribed in the Establish'd Liturgy of the Church of England.

THO. BRETT, LL.D.
THO. BRETT, A.M.

Sic subscribitur
HEN. GANDY.
RICH^d RAWLINSON.
RICH^d RAWLINSON,
Proc. GEO. SMITH.

The document which ended the strife was submitted to Bishop Smith, who then wrote:—

Burn Hall June 2 1732.

I having receiv'd a very particular account of the Instruments of Union lately sign'd by the Rev^d Mr Gandy, Dr Brett, and Dr Rawlinson, and also by Dr Rawlinson in my name and by direction from me: This is to certify, that I heartily approve of Dr Rawlinson's setting my name to them, and congratulate the Church and my Collegues on this happy occasion. And I desire that this my Certificate of my full consent to w^t is agreed upon may be lodg'd in the same hands with the Instruments.

Witnesses my Hand,

G. SMITH.

Thus ended the controversy, and for the remainder of its chequered existence the little Nonjuring body was one—though indeed Bishop Blackbourne is said to have remained apart till his death in 1741.

The conclusion was not, as has commonly been represented, a submission of the Non-Usagers. Dr. Overton, for example, states what proves to be exactly the reverse of the truth. The New Communion Office was given up, and the whole body returned to the Book of Common Prayer. I will only add that the terms of agreement show a real unity of belief (as has, indeed, often been asserted rather than proved) between the Nonjurors of 1732 and the Tractarians of a century later.

W. H. HUTTON.

A LETTER OF JOHNSON.

Oxford.

THE following is a copy of a genuine autograph letter of Dr. Samuel Johnson. The original belongs to Lieut.-Col. Congreve, V.C., D.S.O., by whose kind permission I offer this transcript for publication. The letter is addressed to "Mr. Congreve of Ch: Church, Oxford, by London." It is written on the square-shaped paper of its time which carries a water-mark: a crown over an anchor with cable. The last page is used, as the custom then was, for the address of the correspondent. The seal is of red wax, and bears the impression of a man's bust in profile—a contemporary, the wig, coat, and cravat being quite discernible, yet a bad impression, almost a caricature and much broken: might it be of Sir Joshua Reynolds? Perhaps some may be able to say whether the portrait of that great painter and friend of Dr. Johnson was engraved on signet rings, or whose effigy it is more likely to be.

It is difficult to be certain whether the name of the person to whom the answer is to be addressed is Whitby or Whilby. From the study of Dr. Samuel Johnson's handwriting I incline to Whitby. Neither Repington or Repington, nor Whitby or Whilby, occurs in Boswell's 'Life,' but there is no doubt that the former is the Gilbert Repington who, according to Foster's 'Alumni Oxonienses,' vol. iii., was son of Gilbert Repington of Tamworth, and matriculated at Christchurch, December 7th, 1734.

Great Haywood June 25th 1735.

DEAR SIR

The Excess of Ceremony with which You are pleas'd to address an old Acquaintance I should fear would have portended no great Sincerity to our future Correspondence, had You not taken care by a very important kindness to obviate the omen. Our former familiarity which You show in so agreeable a Light was embarrass'd with no forms, and we were content to love without complimenting each other. It was such as well became our rural Retreats, shades unpolluted by Flattery and falsehood! thickets where Interest and Artifice never lay conceal'd! To such an acquaintance I again invite you, and if in your early Life you received any pleasure from my conversation shall now expect You to repay it by a frank and unreserv'd communication of yr Judgement, reflexions, and opinions. Solitude is certainly one of the greatest obstacles to pleasure and improvement, and as he may be justly said to be alone, who has none to whom he imparts his thoughts, so he, who has a friend, though distant, with whom he converses without suspicion of being ridicul'd or betray'd, may be truly esteem'd to enjoy the advantages of Society.

It is usual for Friends that have been long separated to entertain each other at their first meeting, with an account of that interval of Life which has pass'd since their last interview, a custom which I hope you will observe, but as little has happen'd to me that You can receive any pleasure from the relation of, I will not trouble you with an account of time not always very agreeably spent, but instead of past disappointments shall acquaint You with my present scheme of Life.

I am now going to furnish a House in the Country, and keep a private boarding-school for Young Gentlemen whom I shall endeavour to instruct in a method somewhat more rational than those commonly practised which you know there is no great vanity in presuming to attempt. Before I draw up my plan of Education, I shall attempt to procure an account of the different ways of teaching in use at the most celebrated Schools, and shall therefore hope You will favour me with the method of the Charter-house, and procure me that of Westminster.

It may be written in a few lines by only mentioning under each class their Exercise and Authors.

You see I ask new favours before I have thank'd You for those I have receiv'd, but however I may neglect to express my gratitude, be assur'd I shall not soon forget my obligation either to Mr Reppington, or Yourself.

I am,

Dear Sir,

Your humble Servant,

SAM: JOHNSON.

Be pleased to direct to me at Tho Whitby's Esqr of Great Haywood near Lichfield.

J. SCHOMBERG.

SALE.

MESSRS. HODGSON'S sale last week included the following from the Blofeld Collection:—Arnold's Chronicle, first edition (1502), 60*l*. Liber Custumarii, a fifteenth-century MS. on vellum, 30*l*. Wallis's London's Armory, 1677, 12*l*. 5*s*. A seventeenth-century MS. copy of Great Britain's Treasure, by Sir Nicolas Halse, 10*l*. Boccaccio's Decameron, 5 vols., 1757-61, 18*l*. Dugdale's Monasticon Anglicanum, 8 vols., 17*l*. 10*s*.

Other properties included: King Glumpus, in the original wrappers, 1837, 96*l*. Fifteenth-century Horæ on vellum, 32*l*. Editio princeps of Euclid, 23*l*. Ptolemy, Venice, 1511, 21*l*. Two Tracts on the Indian Wars, 1676, 30*l*. Wood's New England's Prospect, 1635, 24*l*. The two days' sale realized over 2,000*l*.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Archibald (G. Hamilton), The Sunday School of To-morrow, 1/6 net.
Becker (C. H.), Christianity and Islam, 2/6 net. Translated by the Rev. H. J. Chaytor. In Harper's Library of Living Thought.
Church Socialist Quarterly or Optimist, April, 6*d*. net. Edited by Rev. Samuel Proudfoot. Deals largely with social questions.
Compton-Rickett (J.), Origins and Faith, 6*l*. An essay of reconciliation.
Nevill (Rev. S. Tarratt), Spiritual Philosophy, 1/6 net. Two lectures delivered in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, Dunedin, N.Z.
Novatian's Treatise on the Trinity, 6*l* net. Edited by W. Yorke Fausset.
Quin (Malcolm), Aids to Worship, 1/ net. An essay towards the positive preservation and development of Catholicism.
Ste. Marie Henriette le Forestier D'Osseville: Life, 5/ net. Translated from the French by W. A. Phillipson.
Seabury (W. J.), Memoir of Bishop Seabury, 10/6 net. Illustrated.
Westminster New Testament: Thessalonians and Corinthians, 2/ net. With introduction and notes by the Rev. R. Mackintosh.
Wrede (Dr. W.), The Origin of the New Testament, 2/6 net. Translated by James S. Hill. Another of Harper's Library of Living Thought.

Law.

Monro (C. H.), The Digest of Justinian, Vol. II., 12/ net.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- 'Black and White' Royal Academy and New Gallery Pictures and Sculpture for 1909, 1/
Cerceau (J. A. du), French Châteaux and Gardens in the Sixteenth Century, 25/ net. A series of reproductions of contemporary drawings, selected and described, with an account of the artist and his works, by W. H. Ward.

Character Sketches, by Mac, 5/ net.

Royal Academy Pictures and Sculpture, 1909, 3/ net.
Simpson (Harold), The Seven Stages of Golf, pictured by G. E., 2/6 net.

Wallace Collection, 6*d*. Illustrated.

Whiting (Lilian), Paris the Beautiful, 10/6. Contains 27 illustrations.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Bancroft (Marie and Squire), The Bancrofts, 15/ net. Recollections of sixty years, with portraits and illustrations.
Bennett (A.), Cupid and Cominonsense, 2/6 net. A play in four acts, with a preface on the crisis in the theatre.
Bridge (F. M.), The Don of Aquadulce, 2/6 net. A Spanish comedy, music by W. Parratt.
Euripides, Iphigenia at Aulis, 1/. An abridged acting edition for University College, Cardiff, edited by G. Norwood.
Garnett (Edward), The Feud, 1/ net. A play in three acts.
Griffiths (E. M.), With Club and Caddie, 2/6 net. Verses and parodies, with a few by M. G., B. G., and L. C. H. G.
Hardy (T. J.), The Way of Light, and other Verses, 1/6 net.
Melville (Helen and Lewis), London's Lure, 3/6 net. An anthology in prose and verse.
Rikoff (Edith), Bits of Glass, 1/. Miscellaneous and love poems and fragments of passion, written between the ages of 10 and 19.
Shakespeare's Comedies, Histories, and Tragedies: a facsimile of the Second Folio.
Titterton (W. R.), River Music, and other Poems, 1/6 net.
Tucker (S. M.), Verse Satire in England before the Renaissance, 1 dol. net. An essay concerned with the historical study of literature and the evolution of literary types.
Warren (T. H.), Essays of Poets and Poetry, Ancient and Modern, 10/6 net.
Young (Ruth), The Philanthropists, and other Poems, 1/ net.

Music.

Illustrated Catalogue of the Music Loan Exhibition, by the Worshipful Company of Musicians, at Fishmongers' Hall, June and July, 1904, 42/ net.

Bibliography.

- Descriptive Catalogue of the Early Editions of the Works of Shakespeare preserved in the Library of Eton College, 3/ net. A careful description of several important editions.
Royal Statistical Society: General Index to the Journal, Part V., 1888 to 1908, 3/6

Philosophy.

Kelly (M.), Kant's Philosophy as rectified by Schopenhauer, 2/6

Political Economy.

- Bridgman (R. L.), The Passing of the Tariff, 3/6 net.
Chapman (S. J.) and Hallsworth (H. M.), Unemployment, 2/ net. The results of an investigation made in Lancashire, and an examination of the Report of the Poor Law Commission.
Conant (C. A.), A History of Modern Banks of Issue, 3 dols. With an account of the economic crises of the nineteenth century and the crisis of 1907. Fourth Edition, revised and enlarged.
Open Review, May, 6*d*. net. Advocates extension of banking facilities, &c.
Raffety (F. W.) and Sharp (W. H. C.), The Nation's Income, 2/ net. An outline of national and local taxation.
Seager (H. R.), Economics: Briefer Course, 6/6 net.
Wilson (W. Lawler), The Menace of Socialism, 6/ net. A history of the movement both in England and abroad, and a forecast of its developments, with 10 diagrams.

History and Biography.

- Ardagh (Major-General Sir John), Life, by his Wife, 15/ net. With portraits, and illustrations from drawings by Sir John.
Bryce (W. Moir), The Scottish Grey Friars: Vol. I., History, Vol. II., Documents, 42/ net. Illustrated.
Cecil (Algernon), Six Oxford Thinkers: E. Gibbon, J. H. Newman, R. W. Church, J. Anthony Froude, W. Pater, and Lord Morley of Blackburn, 7/6 net. This book is an attempt to treat an idea or chain of ideas which exercised a profound influence upon the nineteenth century.
Foster (W.), The English Factories in India, 1624-9, 12/6 net. A calendar of documents in the India Office, &c.
Harper (C. G.), The Tower of London, Fortress, Palace, and Prison, 7/6 net. Illustrated chiefly from photographs by W. S. Campbell.
Jewish Historical Society of England: The Jubilee of Political Emancipation.
Lützow (Count), The Life and Times of Master John Hus, 12/6 net. The volume contains a map, four photographs, and many reproductions from old prints and paintings.
McMillan (Margaret), The Bard at the Braes, 3*d*. A sketch of incidents in the land agitation in Skye.
Mayne (Ethel C.), Enchanters of Men, 10/6 net. Concerns twenty-three women, divided into sections headed 'The Royal Mistress,' 'The Courtesan,' 'The Royal Lady,' 'The Star,' and 'The "Egeria".'
Milton Memorial Lectures, 1908, read before the Royal Society of Literature, 6/ net. Edited, with an introduction, by Percy W. Ames.
Mommson (Theodor), The Provinces of the Roman Empire from Caesar to Diocletian, 2 vols., 21/ net. Translated by W. P. Dickson, with 8 maps by Prof. Kiepert.
Murray (Henry), A Stepson of Fortune, 10/6 net. Memories, confessions, and opinions.
Political History of England: Vol. IX., from the Accession of Anne to the Death of George II., 1702-60, by I. S. Leadam, 7/6 net.
Staley (Edgumbe), Famous Women of Florence, 10/6 net. With 9 illustrations.
Turquan (Joseph), The Love Affairs of Napoleon, 12/6 net. Translated by J. Lewis May, with numerous portraits.
Twenty-Five Years' Soldiering in South Africa, by a Colonial Officer, 14/ net. A personal narrative.
Wise (Hon. B. R.), The Commonwealth of Australia, 7/6 net. This is the first volume of the "All-Red" Series, dealing with the parts of the British Empire beyond seas. The object of the series is two-fold—to give a trustworthy account of the various countries described, and to deepen the sense of the greatness and importance of our Imperial interests. With illustrations, maps, &c.

Wyllie (H. C.), The Sherwood Foresters—Nottinghamshire and Derbyshire Regiment, 5/ net. Regimental Annual.

Geography and Travel.

- Cullen. Booklet published by the District Council. Devonport. Published by the Corporation.
Gostling (Frances M.), The Bretons at Home, 10/6 net. The story of a journey through Brittany, with the thoughts and memories which such a journey suggests. Has 12 illustrations in colour by G. Fenty Lescure and 32 other illustrations, with an introduction by Anatole le Braz.
Grogan (E. S.) and Sharp (A. H.), From the Cape to Cairo, 1/ net. Describes the first crossing of Africa from South to North.
Higginson (Ellis), Alaska, the Great Country, 7/6 net. Contains several illustrations.
Kephart (H.), The Book of Camping and Woodcraft, 4/ net. A Guide-book for those who travel in the wilderness, with 16 illustrations. Second Edition.
Kirkcudbright. Published by the Burgh Council.
Mumun (A. L.), Five Months in the Himalaya, 21/ net. A record of mountain travel in Garhwal and Kashmir, with illustrations and maps.
To and Fro Route Directory, May, 6*d*. Gives a series of routes in London.
Untravelled Berkshire, by L. S., 7/6 net. Illustrated from photographs by Walton Adams.

Sports and Pastimes.

- Henshall (J. A.), Favourite Fish and Fishing, 3/6 net. With 36 illustrations.
Hodgson (W. Earl), An Angler's Season, 3/6 net.
Holder (C. F.) and Jordan (D. S.), Fish Stories, Alleged and Experienced, with a Little History, Natural and Unnatural, 7/6. Illustrated.
Warre (Edmund), On the Grammar of Rowing, 2/6 net. Three lectures.

Education.

- Binns (C. L.) and Marsden (R. E.), Principles of Educational Woodwork, 5/ net. A handbook for teachers and others interested in education, illustrated with numerous drawings.
Johns Hopkins University Circular, No. 3.
Laurie (S. S.), Institutes of Education, 6/6. Comprises an introduction to rational psychology. Third Edition.
Quick and Dead, 1/6. A striking little book addressed to teachers, by two of them.

Folk-lore.

Gutch (Mrs.) and Peacock (Mabel), Examples of Printed Folk-lore concerning Lincolnshire, 15/ net. From Vol. V. of County Folk-lore.

Philology.

- Ebe Erhunmu Oghe Iko, 10*d*. Portions of the Book of Common Prayer in Ado.
Iwe ise ti Ekwari Sekiri, 6*d*. Portions of the Book of Common Prayer in Shekiri.
Maclear (Rev. G. F.) and Rowling (Rev. F.), Ekitabo Ekitageza Ebyafa Mu Biro Ebyendagano Empya, 10*d*. New Testament history in Luganda.
Marzubán-Náma, 8/. A book of fables originally compiled in the dialect of Tabaristán, and translated into Persian by Sa'du 'd-din-i-Warāwini, the Persian text edited by Mirzá Muhammad ibn 'Abdu 'l-wahháb of Qazwin. Vol. VIII. of the E. J. W. Gibb Memorial.
Ramsay (G. Gilbert), The Annals of Tacitus, Books XL-XVI., 15/ net. An English translation, with introduction, notes, and maps.
Swahili, First English Reader, 3*d*.
Worthington (L. N.), Polyglot Phrases Collected and Arranged, 5/. Contains over 2,600 phrases, rendered in French, English, Italian, and German.

School-Books.

- Bailey (L. H.), Beginners' Botany, 3/6
Caesar, De Bello Gallico, Liber I., 9*d*. Edited by E. S. Shuckburgh, with vocabulary.
Edwards (G. M.), Colloquia Latina, 9*d*. Adapted from Erasmus, with vocabulary.—Horatius, and other Stories, 9*d*. Adapted from Livy, with vocabulary.—Phaethon, and other Stories from Ovid, 1/6. Edited with notes and vocabulary.
Rippmann (Walter), The Fairy Tales of Master Perrault, 9*d*. With vocabulary.
Souvestre's Le Serf, 9*d*. Edited by A. R. Ropes, with vocabulary.
Stewart (R. Wallace), An Elementary Text-Book of Physics: Part III., Light, 3/6 net. With 142 illustrations.
Walters (J. Stuart), Episodes en Action, 1/4. French scenes for the classroom, with a phonetic transcript.

Science.

- Bennett (Victoria E. M.), Lectures to Practising Midwives, 4/ net.
Boole (M. E.), Philosophy and Fun of Algebra, 2/ net.
Brauns (Dr. R.), The Mineral Kingdom, Parts 2-5, 2/ net each. Translated, with additions, by L. J. Spencer, with 91 plates (73 of which are coloured) and 275 text-figures. For notice of Part I., see last week's Athen., p. 533.
Browne (J. Crichton), Parsimony in Nutrition, 3/.
Cesaresco (Countess E. Martinengo), The Place of Animals in Human Thought, 12/6 net. Contains 34 illustrations.
Darwin and Modern Science, 18/ net. Essays in commemoration of the centenary of the birth of Darwin and the fiftieth anniversary of the publication of 'The Origin of Species,' edited by A. C. Seward.
Everyday Uses of Portland Cement, 2/6 net.
Finot (Jean), The Philosophy of Long Life, 7/6 net. Translated by Harry Roberts.
Groth (Dr. L. A.), Welding and Cutting Metals by aid of Gases or Electricity, 10/6 net.
Hasib (Hassan Chevky), Al Hay'at al-Kashfiyah Li Hal mushkilat al-Bariyah, 2/6 net. Being revelations of 'Abdullah Al-Sayid Muhammad Habib concerning the Creation and the Sidereal Universe, translated from the Turkish by M. A. Chevky. New Edition.

Herman (Otto) and Owen (J. A.), Birds Useful and Birds Harmful, 6/ net. With illustrations by T. Csörgey.
 Job (H. Keightley), The Sport of Bird-Study, 7/6 net. This book is in "story form," and shows how pleasure and adventure may be found in becoming thoroughly acquainted with the birds of any ordinary country town. Profusely illustrated with photographs from life by the author.
 Lodge (Sir Oliver), The Ether of Space, 2/6 net. Illustrated. In Harper's Library of Living Thought.
 Parkes (Louis C.), House-Drainage, Sewerage, and Sewage Disposal in Relation to Health, 2/6 net.
 Seton (E. Thompson), The Biography of a Silver-Fox; or, Domino Reynard of Goldur Town, 5/ net. Contains over 100 illustrations.
 Sternberg (C. H.), The Life of a Fossil-Hunter, 6/6 net. An autobiography, full of adventures, with an introduction by Henry F. Osborn. Illustrated.
 Turner (G. C.), Graphical Methods in Applied Mathematics, 6/
 West (C. Ernest) and Scott (Sydney R.), The Operations of Aural Surgery, together with those for the Relief of the Intracranial Complications of Suppurative Otitis Media, 7/6 net.

Juvenile Books.

Cassell's New Fairy Book, 6d. With numerous illustrations.
 Fairy Tales in other Lands, 6d. With 8 illustrations.
 Feun (G. Manville), Steve Young; or, The Voyage of the Hvalross to the Icy Seas, 5/
 Reynard the Fox, 6d. In words of one syllable, with 8 illustrations.
 Stories of the English, by F., 5/ net. Written originally for the author's little daughter, with 50 illustrations.

Fiction.

Ball (Oona H.), Their Oxford Year, 6/. A professor at Harvard, lately married to a Canadian lady, takes his wife to live in Oxford, so that she may see something of his old University and his friends; she describes her adventures to her grandfather in Canada. The book contains 16 illustrations.
 Brooks (A. Mansfield), Somes House, 3/6
 Burmester (Frances G.), Davina, 6/. A present-day story of character and incident.
 Cannan (Gilbert), Peter Homunculus, 6/
 Cleeve (Lucas), The Mascotte of Park Lane, 6d. net. Popular Edition.
 Davis (Norah), Wallace Rhodes.
 Downes (Marion), Swayed by the Storm, 6/
 Everett-Green (Evelyn), A Queen of Hearts, 6/
 Finding of Mercia, by Cassius Minor, 3/6 net. With introduction by H. N. Robbins.
 Gratacap (L. P.), The Evacuation of England. The evacuation is brought about by a twist in the Gulf Stream.
 Gull (C. Ranger), Back to Lilac Land, 6d. net. A theatrical novel. New Edition.
 Haig (J. C.), In the Grip of the Trusts, 1/ net. A story of 1914.
 Halidom (M. Y.), A Son of Desolation, 6/
 King, The, and Isabel, by the Author of 'The Adventures of John Johns', 6/
 Lawrence (C. E.), Much Ado about Something, 6/. The scene is laid in London, and the treatment is modern, but the leading idea is of fairies coming to London.
 Mellor (Dora), Beauty Retire, 6/. An historical romance.
 Oppenheim (E. Phillips), Jeanne of the Marshes, 6/. Recounts the villainy of a stepmother, and is illustrated by C. E. Brock.
 Orzy (Baroness), The Scarlet Pimpernel, 6d. net. New Edition.
 Prague (J.), Delusion, 6/
 Rice (Alice H.), Mr. Opp, 6/. An American mixture of humour and sentiment. Illustrated.
 Sutcliffe (Halliwell), Priscilla of the Good Intent, 6/. A romance of the grey fells which has been appearing in The Cornhill.
 Townley (Houghton), The Bishop's Emeralds, 6d. net. New Edition.
 Turner (R.), Uncle Peaceable, 6d. net. New Edition.
 Wells (H. G.), Love and Mr. Lewisham, 7d. net. New Edition. For former notice see Athen., June 23, 1900, p. 779.
 Whitaker (Herman), The Planter, 6/. Describes what befalls a clever Yankee on a rubber plantation, and includes a man-hunt, business piracy, and the lure of beautiful women.
 Williamson (C. N. and A. M.), Set in Silver, 6/. A story of romance and motor travel, with 12 illustrations.

General Literature.

Boyle's Court Guide, May, 5/ net.
 City of London Directory, 1909, 12/6
 DeKay (John W.), The Weaver and the Way of Life, 3/6 net. Brief sketches and allegories.
 English Church Pageant Handbook, 6d. net. Fully illustrated.
 Fraser (J. Foster), Quaint Subjects of the King, 6/
 Royal Blue Book, Court and Parliamentary Guide, May, 5/ net.
 Shelley (H. C.), Literary By-Paths in Old England, 10/6 net. Illustrated.
 Stock Exchange Ten-Year Record of Prices and Dividends: No. 3, 1899-1908. Compiled by F. C. Mathieson & Sons.
 Territorial Year-Book, 1909, 1/. A handbook for the Territorial soldier and the citizen, containing an account of the origin, organization, and progress of the Territorial force and its place in national defence.
 Webster's Royal Red Book, May, 5/ net.
 Wilkinson (W. C.), Some New Literary Valuations, 6/ net. An attack on the poetic reputation of Matthew Arnold and others.
 Williams (Ernest E.), The House of Lords and Taxation, 6d. net. Reprinted from The Fortnightly Review for April.

Pamphlets.

Alderson (A. W.), The Fatal Flaw in the Constitution and the Great "Race" Fallacy, 6d. Deals with Dutch and English in South Africa.
 Barker (J. Ellis), 'The Daily Express' 101 Points against Free Trade, 1d.

Barnes (G. N.), Henry George, 1d. — Karl Marx, 1d.
 Charlesworth (S.), Sin: its Psychology, 1d. net.
 How to Employ the Symbol "ea," Issued by the Simplified Spelling Society.
 McMillan (Margaret) and Sanderson (A. Cobden), London's Children: How to Feed and How not to Feed Them, 1d.
 Smith (H. Preserved), The Prophets of Israel as Social Reformers, 1d. net.
 Snowden (Philip), A Few Hints to Lloyd George, 1d.
 Travers (C.), God, Man, and the Universe, 1d. net.

FOREIGN.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Brahm (A. de), La Peinture au Musée Carnavalet, 3fr. 50.
 Marcel (P.), Charles le Brun, 3fr. 50. In Les Maîtres de l'Art.
 Spiegelberg (W.), Die demotischen Papyrus der Musées royaux du Cinquantenaire. An account by the Professor of Egyptology at Strasburg of various papyri at Brussels.

Philosophy.

Pillon (F.), L'Année philosophique, 1908, 5fr.

History and Biography.

Gunnell (Doris), Stendhal et l'Angleterre, 6fr. An expansion of a thesis offered for the Doctorate at the Sorbonne.
 Kropotkin (P.), La Grande Révolution, 1789-93, 3fr. 50. Part of the Bibliothèque historique.
 Mévil (A.), De la Paix de Francfort à la Conférence d'Algésiras, 3fr. 50.

Education.

Faure (A.), L'Individu et les Diplômes, 3fr. 50. A sort of sequel to the author's previous work, 'L'Individu et l'Esprit d'Autorité.'

Philology.

Bulletin international de l'Académie des Sciences de Cracovie, Classe de Philologie: 1908, No. 10; 1909, No. 1 et 2.

Science.

Bulletin international de l'Académie des Sciences de Cracovie, Classe des Sciences mathématiques et naturelles: 1909, Nos. 1 and 2.

Fiction.

Arosa (P.), Mémoires d'une 50 H.P. The story of a motor-car.
 Le Febvre (Y.), Les Féodaux, 3fr. 50. A tale of the eleventh century.
 O'Monroy (R.), L'Irrésistible Amour, 3fr. 50.

* * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

IN her 'Life of Friedrich List, and Selections from his Writings,' which will be published by Messrs. Smith & Elder on the 18th, Miss Margaret E. Hirst republishes for the first time List's 'Outlines of American Political Economy,' and includes some other important (translated) pieces. Miss Hirst has had access to an important collection of List's papers and manuscripts among the municipal archives at Reutlingen, his native town, and from these and other sources she has been able to give a full account of a leading advocate of Protection. Miss Hirst's brother, Mr. F. W. Hirst, the editor of The Economist, supplies an Introduction to the volume.

PROF. ARCHIBALD of Brown University, Providence, U.S.A., has been for some years actively engaged in collecting information concerning Margaret Gordon, the first love of Carlyle, by many proclaimed to be the original of Blumine, who afterwards became Lady Bannerman. Mr. Archibald has been fortunate enough to obtain the use of a very beautiful miniature of her, made at the time of her correspondence with Carlyle. This will be reproduced in the book, which is shortly to be published by Mr. John Lane.

AN attractive announcement by Messrs. George Allen is 'Irish People in Irish Places,' by Miss Jane Barlow, with twenty-five illustrations by Mr. E. J. Sullivan.

MR. UNWIN will publish shortly, in his "Sociology Series," a volume by Mr. W. Bolland, entitled 'The Railways and the Nation: Problems and Possibilities.' Its main purpose is to call attention to the possibilities of improvement by a more scientific administration of British railways.

MESSRS. BLACKWOOD will publish immediately a volume of 'Studies in European Philosophy,' by Dr. James Lindsay, author of 'Recent Advances in Theistic Philosophy of Religion' and other works. The volume will include subjects selected from ancient, mediæval, and modern philosophy, and critical surveys of philosophical developments in the leading countries of Europe.

THE original edition of Dr. Rice Holmes's 'Cæsar's Conquest of Gaul' has been for some months out of print. A revised edition will be published in the autumn by the Delegates of the Clarendon Press.

DR. RICE HOLMES writes:—

"The announcement in last week's Athenæum of my article in the forthcoming number of The Classical Review is somewhat misleading. My conclusion that Cæsar started from Boulogne in 55 B.C. remains undisturbed: the article is concerned with Portus Itius. It is based upon information which, after a long search, I found before the publication of 'Ancient Britain,' but after all the sheets had been printed; and it shows that Boulogne, with all its superior advantages, had, for the expedition of 54 B.C., one drawback, which may have been damning."

WE only hear this week of the death on March 31st. of the Rev. William Francis Henry King, whose name deserves record for the sake of his excellent dictionary of 'Classical and Foreign Quotations,' the third edition of which, published in 1904, is now out of print. Mr. King was at first a clergyman of the Church of England, and, on becoming a Roman Catholic, published a defence of his change in 'The Church of my Baptism.' He was an accomplished scholar and a frequent contributor to Notes and Queries. His loss is deeply felt by many friends.

THE LONDON SHAKESPEARE COMMEMORATION LEAGUE held a special meeting on Monday evening to discuss 'What Shakespeare thought of Women.' The speakers were Mrs. Stopes, Miss S. E. S. Mair, Miss Spurgeon, Prof. Gollancz, Mr. William Poel, and Mr. John Munro. The discussion brought out some new points concerning Shakespeare's views of women, and a general belief that such women did exist in his day, or he would not have pictured them.

At the summer meeting of the English Association, to be held at University College, Gower Street, on Friday evening, June 11th, Mr. Sidney Lec will lecture on 'The Impersonality of Shakespeare's Art.' Mr. A. H. D. Acland will preside, and there will be an informal reception after the lecture.

MESSRS. CASSELL are publishing on the 21st 'Daphne; or, Marriage à la Mode,' by Mrs. Humphry Ward. The author's recent visit to the United States has led to a description of American society and its present laxity of regard for the marriage bond.

WE are sorry to notice the death this week of Mr. Horace St. George Voules. He worked with Messrs. Cassell, and started The Echo for them in 1868, being concerned in its management and editing till 1876. In this year he arranged with Mr. Labouchere to start Truth, on which he remained ever since, doing the sole editing for several years. Mr. Voules is credited with a chief hand in that persistent exposure of all sorts of swindlers which has always been an admirable feature of our contemporary.

THE ENGLISH GOETHE SOCIETY held a successful soirée on Tuesday last in the Medical Hall, Chandos Street. The entertainment, which included recitations from the poet's work, and some singing and violin playing, was decidedly attractive, but should have begun earlier. Several portraits of Goethe and other exhibits concerning his circle were on view.

THE Society has of late years extended its scope, so as to include embodiments of German culture, besides Goethe, and is now vigorous and doing useful work. It is in connexion with the Goethe-Gesellschaft of Weimar, and a special visit to that city is to take place shortly.

OFFICES have now been assigned to the Royal Commission on University Education in London, and the Joint Secretaries should be addressed at 12, Queen Anne's Gate, S.W.

THE death was announced in Aberdeen last Sunday, in his seventy-sixth year, of the Very Rev. John Marshall Lang, D.D., Chancellor and Principal of Aberdeen University since 1900. Dr. Lang held in turn various appointments as a clergyman of the Church of Scotland, the most important being that of the Barony Church, Glasgow, in succession to Dr. Norman McLeod. He travelled extensively in the United States and Australia, and lectured on pastoral theology before the four Scottish universities, his Rhind, Baird, and St. Giles' Lectures being published. Among his works are 'Heaven and Home,' 'Life: is it Worth Living?' 'The Last Supper of Our Lord,' and 'Homiletics in St. Luke's Gospel.'

THE authorities at the Bibliothèque Nationale of Paris are collecting all the "pièces judiciaires" of such famous cases as that of the Diamond Necklace and so forth. When the work of collection is finished, a catalogue, expected to extend to seven volumes, will be compiled under the direction of M. Marchal, the Keeper of the Printed Book Department. This publication will greatly facilitate the researches of students.

THE Académie française on Friday in last week awarded the Grand Prix Gobert, of the value of 9,000 francs, to M. Fortmat Strowski for his 'Histoire du Sentiment religieux en France au dix-septième Siècle.' The balance of this Prix (1,000 francs) has been given to M. Nouaillac for his work on 'Villeroy.' The Prix Théroutanne, of the value of 4,000 francs, has been divided among M. Caudrillier, author of 'La Trahison de Pichegru' (who gets 1,000 francs), and six others.

THE award of the Prix Bordin, intended for "les meilleurs travaux sur le moyen âge et la Renaissance," was announced on Saturday last. Portions of 1,000 francs each go to Dom Henri Quantin for his 'Martyrologes historiques du moyen âge,' and to M. Albert Vogt for his 'Basile I^{er}'; whilst M. Wartmann and M. Perdrizet have each been awarded 500 francs for their historical researches. The Prix is in the gift of the Académie des Inscriptions.

MISS BIRNIE PHILIP has been engaged for some time in collecting for publication the correspondence of Whistler, in accordance with his wishes. As there may be letters available which have not yet been sent to her, she will be glad to make use of any such, if they are forwarded within a reasonable time to her at 103, Albert Bridge Road, S.W.

THE well-known German publisher Albert Langen, the founder of the comic paper Simplicissimus, died on the 30th ult., aged forty. He was married to a daughter of Björnson.

RECENT Parliamentary Papers of interest to our readers are: Annual Report of the Deputy Keeper of the Public Records (1d.); Report on the Finances, Administration, and Condition of Egypt and the Soudan (8½d.); and Annual Statistical Report of the University of St. Andrews (2d.).

SCIENCE

The Interpretation of Radium. By Frederick Soddy. Illustrated. (John Murray.)

MR. SODDY's book is certainly timely. A few years ago, the clatter with which the discovery of radium was greeted in the daily Press had not died down, and any attempt to make the scientific value of the researches of M. Curie and his wife intelligible to the general public would have been lost in the cloud of baseless speculations to which they gave rise. In a few years to come, on the other hand, the observed facts of radio-activity will, if they continue to increase at the present rate, have become so numerous that the new science will require a long apprenticeship, together with considerable acquaintance with entropy and other problems of energetics undreamed of by the general public. But at the present day, when the shrewd conjectures with which Mr. Soddy and other pioneers greeted the birth of the study of radio-activity have become ascertained facts, and we are still privileged to witness a new science in the making, we are free from most of these disadvantages, and there is much to be said for the author's dictum that it is our duty to acquaint ourselves with the chief teachings of the new phenomena. For these reasons the book is very welcome.

The theory of radium which Mr. Soddy here puts forth is the disintegration hypothesis which Prof. Rutherford and he in England, and Dr. Gustave Le Bon in France, were the first to formulate. According to this, the highly radio-active substances, uranium, thorium, radium, and actinium—and there seems every probability that the list will some day be extended so as to include all matter—are in a state of constant, if very slow, disintegration, their atoms perpetually giving way or dissociating by the emission of "rays," or streams of particles flung off with enormous energy. Yet the size of these particles is so infinitesimally small that they pass unnoticed, and it is only when the speed with which they are put forth exceeds five thousand miles per second that we have any means of detecting them. Moreover, their emission does not end the process of disintegration, which continues by a series of explosions at certain well-defined and characteristic periods, until the parent substance becomes transformed, as Mr. Soddy well puts it, "by cascade" into something different from what it was originally. Even now we are not sure that all the stages in this process have yet been discovered; for, whereas Mr. Soddy here treats the transformation of uranium into uranium X—as he was justified in doing when he wrote—as a direct change without intermediate step, M. Jacques Danne has within the last few weeks announced the discovery of a substance which he proposes to call radio-uranium, and which must be interposed between the two forms of uranium last mentioned. At the other end of the scale, most physicists have for some time inclined to the belief that lead was the element towards which the radio-active substances were gradually tending, and that on reaching it they would, so far as terrestrial conditions are concerned, obtain rest from what the Orphics called "the ceaseless round of changing existences." This was borne out by the fact that, until lately, lead appeared in all mineral ores possessing radio-active properties. But now Mr. Soddy reminds us of the discovery of a mineral called autunite, which contains uranium, but no trace of lead; and from this he proposes to conclude his provisional series of the transformations of radium with "Radium F" or what Madame Curie called, on its first discovery, polonium. This polonium, however, is itself radio-active, and produces a steady stream of Alpha particles. Into what then is it transformed? No alternative to lead has so far been proposed, and it is evident that, so far as our knowledge of the possibilities of radium is concerned the end is not yet.

The proofs of this theory Mr. Soddy gives in the volume before us in a series of well-considered experiments, which, if not exactly within the reach of all, can be repeated by any one who can borrow a few milligrammes of radium and a little simple apparatus. Most of them are—in principle at any rate—too well known to need redescription, and in any case yield in interest to the consequences of the new view of matter, on which Mr. Soddy dwells with an insistence by no means inadequate to its importance. The energy stored up within the atom and set free on its dissociation is so enormous, when compared with other sources of energy, that, could we make use of it, we should certainly never think of having recourse to any other. In the one feature of heat alone, the tiny quantities of radium that we are able to separate from their native ores emit enough to keep them at a temperature of 2° or 3° above that of neighbouring objects for a term that Mr. Soddy puts at 2,500 years. Such a force, if at the disposal of man, would give him a weapon far superior to any with which he has yet been equipped for the conquest of nature, and would place him in a position which Mr. Soddy rightly compares to that of primitive man when he first discovered the means of producing fire. For energy is to the industrial world of the present day the one and only thing to be desired, and if, to use Mr. Soddy's words,

"it were possible artificially to disintegrate an element with a heavier atom than gold and produce gold from it, so great an amount of energy would probably be evolved that the gold in comparison would be of little account. The energy would be far more valuable than the gold."

Or we may take Dr. Le Bon's calculation that the amount of energy stored up within a pellet of bronze weighing one gramme could produce work equal to that required to propel a goods train along a line exceeding four and a half times the circumference of the earth. But all this energy is at present rendered useless to us by the fact that we cannot accelerate or retard, according to Mr. Soddy, by a single second the rate of its radiation. Whether we shall ever be able to do so is still uncertain, although Mr. Makower's experiments—the validity of which, denied in some quarters, is still maintained by him—offer one solution of the problem.

Another consequence to which Mr. Soddy addresses himself is the transmutation of the chemical elements. This may, in fact, be said to be already within our power; for, accepting, as it seems we must, Prof. Rutherford's proof that the Alpha particle shot off by radium is really an atom of helium, we have here a perfect case of the transformation of one element into another. Argument from analogy is proverbially unsafe, but this is hardly likely to be an isolated case in nature; and even if Sir William Ramsay's further experiments in this direction turn out to be ineffectual, there seems every hope that other instances of transmutation will yet come to light. If the means of controlling such changes were ever put within the reach of man, it might not indeed put an end, as some have thought, to the difference between rich and poor; but it would certainly upset our present standards of value, and open out a new future to the human race. Even more contrary to our present ideas of matter is Prof. Bragg's theory—here quoted with approval, though not unqualified assent—that the Alpha particles do in effect pass through the atoms of all other matter as if they were not there, which Mr. Soddy thinks is the same thing as asserting that two atoms can occupy the same space at the same time. In this respect also the last word has probably not yet been said.

In some other and more mystical speculations of Mr. Soddy we must decline to follow him. Speaking to a Scottish audience—the foundation of the book was a course of popular lectures delivered at Glasgow—he thought it advisable to suggest that "primitive" man may once have known a great deal more than his successor of to-day, and that the Fall of Man may be no mere legend. His view is that man, if armed with the powers just sketched, "may have made the world a Garden of Eden," explored at will "more favourable worlds" than this, and performed other prodigies, and yet have lost all this qualified omnipotence by "a single mistake." As these suggestions seem to depend upon a belief in the vast antiquity of notions like the Elixir of Life, the Philosopher's Stone, and other common change of charlatans in historic times, we feel inclined to reply to Mr. Soddy "Ne sutor ultra crepidam," and to inform him that these ideas are not really old, as such things go, their origin being well known to archaeologists. But a shorter argument may perhaps be more convincing, and it is plain that such ideas come naturally into the mind of man at all ages when he is speculating on things beyond his ken. When Winwood Reade, some forty years ago, at the close of his study of universal history, looked into the future of humanity, he saw, with the eye of unfaith rather than faith, a vision of man's successor himself creating worlds like the Jehovah of Genesis, and visiting other planets in airships. This, however, did not mean that he was reproducing a "primitive tradition" of what had been in the past, or that he possessed any superhuman insight into the course of cyclical change, but simply that he was giving reins to his imagination along the road that he conceived to be marked out by the teachings of history.

We have said enough to show how deeply interesting is Mr. Soddy's book, even to those who are not expert in its subject. There only remains to be pointed out some small slips which are probably to be attributed to the carelessness in preparation which is perhaps inseparable from the occupations of an ardent experimenter. Some of these seem to be due to the lectures having been in the first instance delivered extempore instead of read, and to a shorthand report of them having been afterwards used without correction. To this one is inclined to attribute an awkward misuse of the past tense, as in the sentences "It was [our italics] the duty of every educated man to make himself aware of the chief bearings of these conclusions," and "In a few years the elementary principles of radio-activity would be taught in all schools as belonging to the very beginnings of physical science." When we read that "if the half of a grain of pure radium, which is in this room to-night, were divided equally among every human being at present alive in the world, and one such portion were returned to us, it would prove sufficient...."

we see the lecturer's meaning, but cannot congratulate him on the way he expresses it. "To the electrical test the α rays are immensely more effective," "Most of those who are in possession of radium hardly dare ever expose it to the air," are other instances of infelicities of diction; while when Mr. Soddy says that "uranium does not generate any emanation," and suggests that the place of radium in the Periodic Table is assured, he is perhaps more dogmatic than he should be. If, as seems likely, the book becomes a standard work on the subject, these trifling faults may be worth correction.

SOCIETIES.

ZOOLOGICAL.—April 27.—Prof. E. A. Minchin, V.P., in the chair.—The Secretary read a report on the additions to the menagerie during March.—Mr. H. F. McShane exhibited a series of lantern-slides of animals living in the Society's gardens.—Prof. Minchin exhibited specimens of a tick which causes an African relapsing fever in man.—Mr. R. H. Burne exhibited a series of specimens from the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons, showing (1) the different mechanisms for the movement of the nictitating membrane, (2) the coarse anatomy of the tapetum lucidum, (3) the organ for elevating the eyes in the plaice.—Mr. R. I. Pocock exhibited photographs of the two races of Burchell's and Wahlberg's quagga recently imported from Zululand by Herr Reiche.—A paper was presented by Dr. T. A. Chapman, entitled 'A Review of the Species of the Lepidopteran Genus Lycænopsis, Feld (Cyaniris aut. nec. Dalm.), on Examination of the Male Ancillary Appendages.'—Mr. F. E. Beddard read two communications: 'On some Points in the Structure of Galidia elegans, and on the Postcaval Vein in Carnivora,' and 'On the Postcaval Vein and its Branches in Certain Mammals.'—A paper was received from Dr. R. W. Shufeldt 'On the Comparative Osteology of the Passerine Bird Arachnothera magna,' the communication being based on material supplied from the Prosectorium of the Society.

MICROSCOPICAL.—April 21.—Mr. E. J. Spitta, V.P., in the chair.—A large binocular microscope with accessories, presented to the Society by Lord Edmund Spencer Churchill, was described by Mr. Rousselet as being one of Ross's best. Made in 1888, it was a fine microscope, and would be very valuable to the Society.—Mr. Edward Heron-Allen read an interesting paper 'On the Recent and Fossil Foraminifera of the Shore Sands of Selsey Bill, Sussex,' illustrated by about fifty excellent lantern-slides.—Mr. E. J. Sheppard read a paper 'On the Disappearance of the Nucleolus in Mitosis,' the subject being illustrated by photographs and drawings on the board, and by four examples exhibited under microscopes.—The following were elected Ordinary Fellows: Messrs. B. Hobson Hoole, C. R. Mapp, and A. J. Shearsby, and the Rev. F. W. Walter.

ROYAL INSTITUTION.—May 1.—Annual Meeting.—Sir James Crichton-Browne, Treasurer and V.P., in the chair.—The Annual Report of the Committee of Visitors for the year 1908, testifying to the continued prosperity and efficient management of the Institution, was read and adopted; and the report on the Davy-Faraday Research Laboratory of the Royal Institution, which accompanied it, was also read. Forty-eight new members were elected in 1908.—The following gentlemen were unanimously elected as officers for the ensuing year: President, the Duke of Northumberland; Treasurer, Sir J. Crichton-Browne; Secretary, Sir W. Crookes; Managers, Sir T. Barlow, W. P. Beale, H. T. Brown, Sir H. B. Buckley, C. Hawksley, Dr. D. W. C. Hood, A. B. Kempe, Lord Kinnaird, Sir Francis Laking, H. F. Makins, G. Matthey, Rudolph Messel, Sir J. Fletcher Moulton, Sir A. Noble, and the Hon. L. W. Rothschild; Visitors, Dr. W. A. Brailey, A. N. Butt, J. M. Davidson, R. T. Glazebrook, J. W. Gordon, Dr. J. D. Grant, Major-General Sir Coleridge Grove, C. E. Groves, J. List, Sir Philip Magnus, R. Mond, Col. Sir F. Nathan, the Hon. C. A. Parsons, J. Swinburne, and A. J. Walter.

May 3.—The Duke of Northumberland, President, in the chair.—Dr. H. S. Collier, Mr. J. B. Kennedy, Prof. H. A. Miers, Mr. T. P. Warren, and Sir Almroth E. Wright were elected members.—The Chairman announced that he had appointed the following Vice-Presidents for the ensuing year: Dr. D. W. C. Hood, Mr. A. B. Kempe, Sir Francis Laking, Mr. G. Matthey, Sir J. Fletcher Moulton, Sir A. Noble, Sir J. Crichton-Browne (Treasurer), and Sir W. Crookes (Honorary Secretary).

SOCIETY OF ENGINEERS.—May 3.—Mr. C. A. Battiscombe read a paper on 'The Influence of Rainfall on the Design of Sewers.'

FOLK-LORE.—April 21.—Mr. C. J. Tabor in the chair.—Miss L. Eckenstein read a paper, which she had previously given at the International Congress of Religions at Oxford, entitled 'Personal Amulets (European).' Miss Eckenstein supplied a detailed account of the nature and use of a large number of European amulets and charms, drawing her material mainly from Germany and Italy. She contended that pendent amulets were used almost exclusively by men, whilst beads or perforated stones were peculiar to women. The wide vogue of the red-coloured amulets she ascribed to their relation to the blood of the sacrificial victim. Her theory as to the connexion of the use of amulets with the alter ego, and with the desire to transfer evil to the unsuspecting and the innocent, was criticized by Dr. Hildburgh, who illustrated his arguments by a number of Neapolitan amulets from his collection, and by Mr. A. R. Wright and Mr. Lovett, who also exhibited many interesting examples.

PHYSICAL.—April 23.—Dr. C. Chree, President, in the chair.—A paper by Prof. W. H. Bragg and Mr. J. L. Glasson, 'On a Want of Symmetry shown by Secondary X-rays,' was read by Prof. Bragg. A paper entitled 'Transformations of X-rays' was read by Mr. C. A. Sadler.—A paper on 'The Theory of the Alternate-Current Generator,' by Prof. Lyle, was read by Dr. Russell.—Prof. L. R. Wilberforce exhibited a galvanometer of the Broca pattern suitable for general use in elementary laboratories.

CHALLENGER.—April 28.—Prof. d'A. W. Thompson in the chair.—Mr. C. Tate Regan was elected a Fellow.—Mr. S. W. Kemp read a paper on 'Photophores in Decapoda.' While many Decapods emit a luminous secretion from various glands, photophores are at present known only in five species of the three genera, Sergestes, Acanthephyra, and Hoplophorus: in all of these an intensely blue pigment is associated with the organs; in one of them this pigment is situated in the corneal lens, in the others in the (presumably) light-producing cup of cells which lies immediately behind the lens; the general body-pigment is absent where they occur. The organs increase in number with age, and exhibit morphological stages. They are placed much as in Euphausiids.

Prof. d'A. W. Thompson described a new method of plotting currents from observations of drifters, used by the Scottish Fishery Board in the international study of the North Sea. On a large chart divided into squares of 1° lat. by ½° long. all low observations were recorded by arrows of true direction and proportionate length; the "resultants" of the arrows, calculated for each square, showed a uniform cyclonic current from Shetland down and across the North Sea up to Norway, in concentric belts round the area of dead water which had been shown to exist by the observations of a previous year.

BRITISH NUMISMATIC.—April 28.—Mr. W. J. Andrew, President, in the chair.—The following were elected to membership: the Royal Institution of Cornwall, the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York, Sir W. W. Portal, the Rev. Caesar Caine, and Messrs. W. Dale, C. G. Moritz, and W. W. C. Wilson.—Mr. Henry Laver contributed a paper on 'The Coinage of Prasutagus,' in which he contrasted that king's reputation for great wealth with the absence of his name from coins of the Iceni. In view of the fact that many uninscribed coins in hoards found in Suffolk and Norfolk are of the reduced weight characteristic of British coins in the time of Claudius, he judged it right to assign some of these uninscribed coins to Prasutagus, Claudius's contemporary.

Mr. Shirley Fox gave an address 'On the General Principles of Mediæval Numismatics.' Taking as his text a passage in the late François Lenormant's introduction to 'La Monnaie dans l'Antiquité' which warns students to beware of accumulating details of little meaning, while ignoring questions of vital importance, Mr. Fox remarked that there was no standard work dealing with English numismatology on these lines. After referring to the methods of preparing dies, he explained how different in general effect these might appear, although produced from identical punches, and gave a demonstration of this by means of duplicate sets of papers cut to represent the punches used to make up the head and bust of an Edward penny. By adjusting these differently he produced the presentment of two coins varying considerably in style and appearance, although the component parts employed were identical in form. Mr. Fox further referred to the great importance of "mules" and the many deductions and inferences to be drawn from them, and to the information to be obtained by close study of the various punches used in making dies. He cited and exhibited certain coins of the last issue of Richard II. upon which a broken I punch was to be traced not only on the half groat and penny, but also on the halfpenny, which should therefore be assigned to the same issue as the larger coins.

In addition to the coins referred to, Mr. Fox exhibited pennies of the Edwards; and Mr. A. H. Baldwin new silver and copper coins for Cyprus with the bust of Edward VII. Mr. Wells exhibited a silver ring of ancient Irish workmanship.

FARADAY.—April 27.—Dr. V. H. Veley in the chair.—A paper entitled 'Experiments on the Current and Energy Efficiencies of the Finlay Electrolytic Alkali-Chlorine Cell,' by Messrs. F. G. Donnan, J. T. Barker, and B. P. Hill, was read in abstract by Prof. Donnan.—Dr. J. J. Fox read a paper 'On the Coefficients of Absorption of Nitrogen and Oxygen in Distilled Water and Sea-Water, and of Atmospheric Carbonic Acid in Sea-Water.'—Dr. Percy E. Spielmann read a paper 'On the Electromotive Force of Certain Platinum Compounds, with Special Reference to the Oxygen-Hydrogen Gas Cell.'

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Society of Arts, 8.—'Aerial Flight,' Lecture III., Mr. F. W. Lancaster. (Cantor Lecture.)
— Surveyors' Institution, 8.—'Quantity Surveyors: a Review of their Legal Position,' Mr. A. B. Howes.
TUES. Geographical, 8.30.—'The Western Pacific,' Sir E. F. Im Thurn.
Royal Institution, 3.—'Cosmogonical Questions,' Lecture II., Prof. S. Arrhenius. (Tyndall Lecture.)
— Asiatic, 4.—Annual Meeting.
— Colonial Institute, 8.—'Imperial Emigration and the Problems connected with It,' Dr. R. Arthur.
— Zoological, 8.30.—'On Hitherto Unrecorded Specimens of Equus quagga, 'Differentiation of the Three Species of Zebras,' and 'On a Portion of a Fossil Jaw of one of the Equidae,' Prof. W. Ridgway; 'On a New Race of Deer from Sze-chuen,' Mr. R. Lydekker; 'The Batrachians and Reptiles of Matabeleland,' Mr. E. C. Chubb.
WED. Geological, 8.
— Society of Arts, 8.—'The Principles of Heredity as applied to the Artificial Production of New Forms of Plants and Animals,' Prof. A. Dendy. (Aldred Lecture.)
THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'Newfoundland,' Lecture I., Mr. J. G. Millais.
— Royal, 4.30.
— Society of Arts, 4.30.—'Some Phases of Hinduism,' Mr. Krishna Gobinda Gupta.
— Institution of Electrical Engineers, 8.—'Economics of Medium-Sized Power Stations,' Mr. A. J. J. Pfeiffer.
— Society of Antiquaries, 8.30.
FRI. Astronomical, 5.
— Physical, 8.—'On a Bifilar Vibration Galvanometer,' Mr. W. Duddell; 'Effect of Temperature on the Hysteresis Loss in Iron in a Rotating Field,' Messrs. W. P. Fuller and H. Grace; 'On a Method of Testing Photographic Shutters,' Messrs. A. Campbell and T. Smith.
— Royal Institution, 9.—'Solar Vortices and Magnetic Fields,' Prof. G. E. Hale.
SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'Burke's Prose,' Prof. W. Raleigh.

Science Gossip.

MR. D. W. HORNER's suggestive booklet on Observing and Forecasting the Weather was noticed in The Athenæum of Nov. 16, 1907, and we are glad to see a second edition (Witherby & Co.), which has several improvements. The author is full in his description of cloud-formations, and the cautions necessary in predicting a change of weather from them. He quotes a number of old sayings from a book by Mr. Richard Inwards, entitled 'Weather Lore,' which first appeared in 1893. It is probably not commonly known how many of these owe their origin to, or at least are first to be found in, Tusser's 'Five Hundred Points of Good Husbandry,' published in 1573.

MR. LYNN has issued (through Messrs. Bagster) a sixth edition of his Astronomy for the Young, in which the elementary facts of the science are set forth in language adapted to juvenile readers.

WE have received Nos. 13 and 14 of Vol. I. of the Publications of the Allegheny Observatory of the University of Pittsburgh. They contain papers by Mr. Robert H. Baker on the orbits of the spectroscopic components of a Lacertæ (discovered to be a spectroscopic binary by Frost and Adams in 1903), with a resulting period of 2.6164 days, and by Mr. Frank Schlesinger on the errors in photographic positions caused by observing through glass, found to be virtually negligible.

A SMALL volume containing the Results of the Meteorological and Magnetical Observations obtained at Stonyhurst College during 1908 has been published, with the Report and Notes of the Director, Father Sidgreaves. The year, he states, was "on the whole a mild and quiet" one, the mean temperature being only 0.4° above the average. July was the warmest month, and January the coldest. The highest reading of the barometer was 30.305 inches, on February 6th; the lowest 28.289, on December 11th. The mean temperature of the year was 47.2°; the highest reading 83.2°, on July 2nd; the lowest 16.1°, on December 30th. The rainfall amounted to 48.319 inches; the greatest in one day was 1.580, on November 21st. During the last sixty-one years the highest recorded temperature at Stonyhurst was 89.0°, on July 20th, 1901; and the lowest 4.6°, on January 15th, 1881. The greatest rainfall in one year was 62.093 inches, which was in 1866; the least was little more than half of this, 31.250 inches, in 1887. An examination of sixty years' observations of the magnetographs in connexion with solar influence exhibits many recurrences of disturbances at 24-hour intervals, and shows that over 70 per cent of all disturbances occurred between the Greenwich hours 7 P.M. and 3 A.M., with a maximum frequency between 9 and 11 P.M. The solar surface was observed for spots and faculae on all available days, on one only of which it was entirely free from spots. Comet Morehouse (c, 1908) was photographed on every available night from September 29th to November 29th.

PROF. C. D. PERRINE of the Lick Observatory (discoverer of the sixth and seventh satellites of Jupiter and of several comets) has been appointed to succeed the late Dr. Thome as Director of the Argentine National Observatory, Cordoba. He will take with him a new meridian circle of 7½ inches aperture, constructed by Messrs. Repsold.

MR. MURRAY's spring list includes 'A History of Gardening in England,' by the Hon. Mrs. Evelyn Cecil; and an essay by Sir George Sitwell entitled 'On the Making of Gardens.'

FINE ARTS

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

(Second Notice.)

THE principal contribution by Mr. Charles Sims to this year's exhibition, The Night Piece to Julia (3), is very clever technically, but suffers from undue acceptance of the ideals of the decorator of chocolate boxes, the group of cupids in the centre of the picture being particularly typical of a prettiness to which Mr. Sims has sunk on several previous occasions. Since, however, as he has as repeatedly recovered himself, we may hope that this is but another momentary lapse. Even with this blemish, its bold inventiveness separates his picture from the imitative paintings around it, which look like the work of photographers rather than designers.

While almost all the exhibitors at the Academy may be said thus to lack free inventiveness, they divide rather definitely into two classes. Painters of the first class select subjects which have for the general public the attraction of the unexpected. They paint people in strange clothes doing unusual things, but paint them in as literal a fashion as possible, so as to approximate to the illuiveness of Madame Tussaud's historical groups. These painters are still present every year in considerable numbers, because they are valuable to an exhibition dependent in part on "gate money"; but while present they are critically negligible. Their day is past; and every year it will be more difficult for one of the useful band to gain election into the ungrateful body which prospers by their attractiveness.

The other class of painter chooses by preference an everyday subject which he is able to realize before him for purposes of study; but he is really less of a photographer than the other, because he at least attempts to make a scheme of his own of the colour of the subject. Such men, whose ideal of form is largely photographic, but who cautiously approach the art of design (as, indeed, Mr. Sims first approached it) from the side of colour, constitute the bulk of the better painters of the day. Notwithstanding all that is said about the unjustly depreciatory criticism of modern art (there are rumours of a Society of Artists being formed to combat it), the painting of such artists as Signor Mancini (175) and Mr. Hornel (630), Mr. Bertram Priestman (681) and Mr. William Wells (61), was singled out by the press for commendation at minor exhibitions for many years during which it was snubbed by the Royal Academy. The pictures which give to the present show a slightly deceptive air of superiority to recent Academy exhibitions are of a sort that might have adorned these walls any time in the last ten years. We are accustomed to them, but we are not quite accustomed to them on the line at Burlington House, and the first feeling is naturally one of pleasure in registering this advance. It may be doubted, however, whether either the individual painters in the majority of cases, or in general the kind of painting which they stand for, have improved in quality in the period of probation during which rejection or skying has been their lot in the great spring exhibition of British art. There is a tendency for official recognition to come to a man or a movement only when staleness has set in and the first zest departed, and this being the case, we cannot count it a misfortune that a certain section of the press should err, if at all, in the opposite direction. Year after year we find the great official exhibitions occupied by virtually the same work. Experiment and originality are kept severely in their place in unfashionable galleries, and exhibitions held in unseasonable months. Is it any wonder that critics, if they are at all optimistic about the state of British art, incline to take an interest in what is going on behind the barrier—among the second-class painters?

This year appears to mark the Academy's promotion from this class of a type of painter not hitherto recognized as respectable. The man with a lively sense of colour-structure, but a rather literal ideal in form, naturally tends to find the latter uninteresting, and accordingly a little to neglect it, and for some years past a school of naturalistic painters (James Charles in his later work may be taken as an example) have attained some degree of self-expression by sacrificing nicety of drawing to a full-blooded and thoroughly structural use of colour. A very beautiful little picture by Mr. H. S. Tuke (Leafy June, 568) is one of the best examples in the present exhibition, and as fine a thing as he has done. For all its apparent looseness, it is much more highly organized than the more ambitious, but piecemeal productions from which we hope he is now emancipated, and it is probably with pictures on this scale that he will be most successful—a scale which forbids that parade of literal draughtsmanship which is his besetting weakness. In Mr. Hornel's The Chase (630) we find not merely the subordination of the element of form which Charles showed in his later work—this feature is noticeable too in the picture of Mr. Tuke's just mentioned—but also a positive blindness to subtleties of drawing; and this, in a less degree, is seen also in Mrs. Knight's The Beach (439). It is the hall-mark of the later exponents of a school which includes painters of figure and landscape, and even portraits; for nothing stands still in this world, and the power of imitative draughtsmanship, when harnessed to a more creative use of colour, must either take on something of the vital power of its partner or decay. The Academy seem to have adopted the school at the moment when the latter alternative was being generally enforced, and to have failed to secure Mr. Steer, the principal exception to the rule.

Amongst the landscape painters, such as Mr. Bertram Priestman and Mr. Hughes-Stanton, we find the sense of form become sluggish, and concerned with little more than establishing the nature of their subject-matter—that this is a tree, and that a rock. In their smaller pictures the difficulty of making even this clear with such clumsy tools as hog-hair brushes gives their draughtsmanship rather more intensity—the interest of adroit manipulation which forbids repetition; see Mr. Stanton's small Noon, Pas de Calais (475); but in his larger St. Jean, near Avignon (448), as in Mr. Priestman's Valley of the Wharfe (681), the touch is otiose, and much of the detail only a sort of mechanical orchestration. Other painters of a similar order who remain in the easier bounds of the small canvas are Mr. Samuel Reid (Pond Lilies, 495) and Mr. E. King (Harlech Castle, 498) among landscape painters, and Mr. A. Colley (34) and Mr. Patrick Adam (417) in a couple of clever interiors. Mr. George Henry's Lady Binning (404) and The Countess of Ronaldshay (408) are examples of a like systematic sacrifice of draughtsmanship to the easy and direct statement of a colour-scheme which in the domain of portraiture tends to give a look of insincerity. Mr. Aiken's Charles Stewart, Esq. (729), is a more successful, more intellectual experiment in the same line; and Mr. J. J. Shannon also inclines to a like sacrifice in his rather handsome Anthony Leyland Prinsep, Esq. (447), which is reminiscent at once of Mr. Charles Shannon and of Mr. Steer; while even Mr. Seymour Lucas (Walter Hill, Esq., 66) seems to have been a little infected by the rage for a powerful colour-scheme at all costs. Of the danger to portraiture of such a policy carried to its extreme Signor Mancini is a striking example. It cannot be denied, however, that his child's portrait, Elizabeth Williamson (175), looks very well here, and that the rather flimsily painted head, thanks to a certain delicacy of expression, dominates the whole.

The pictures we have been noticing are not, perhaps, all of them what would be called works of the first importance, but it is the presence of so many of them, and in such prominent positions, which gives to this year's Academy a flavour of freshness. It is no longer exceptional to find colour capably handled. The exhibition is certainly the better for this, even if a certain price be paid for such an advantage. But we contend that, if the choice had been made earlier, the price would have been less heavy. Mr. Clausen's work remains almost intact from that earlier day. His drawing has not entirely freed itself from the trammels of realism, but, owing to a curious and rare conscientiousness, it has not deteriorated. Mr. William Wells we take to be a younger painter. His picture The Pilot's Lass (61), if inferior to 'The Orchard Gate' shown at the Suffolk Street Galleries a couple of years back, has still a direct, vivid quality which recalls the earlier, lighter work of James Charles. Another little picture which achieves brilliance of colour without the looseness which nowadays generally accompanies it is When the Year is Young (253), by Mr. H. Mitton Wilson. It recalls a little (though wrought on dry, "shorter" texture of paint) the work of Mr. Lorimer, who this year, as always when he is represented at the Academy, shows one of the most accomplished pictures on the walls, September (197). Here the trail of sunlight across the cabbage field appears to us an error of judgment, making a crude gash in the smooth continuity of the modelling; but the pale hollyhocks form a beautiful leading passage of colour, and the nice gradation of delicate impasto throughout the picture is a triumph of unobtrusive and brilliant execution. Two other painters whom we have previously had occasion to praise highly are Mr. George Lambert and Mr. Festus Kelly. The latter is something of a disappointment, as he has entangled Mrs. Bendixson (332) in a welter of obtrusive furniture. Mr. Lambert in Mearbeck Moor, Yorkshire (431), however, if not attaining the beauty of his distinguished portrait group of two years back, handles his familiar subject-matter of a couple of figures, a pony, and some hills with considerable blunt authority.

THE PENCIL SOCIETY.

WE think an exhibition of pencil drawings rather a good idea, if the works be selected with some severity of taste. Too many of those hung in the Dudley Gallery are exhibitions of mere virtuosity, and the simple sufficiency of Mr. J. A. Shepherd's animals, with which the exhibition opens, emphasizes the luxuriance of some of the other contributors. Mr. Douglas Almond's street scenes, however, are pleasantly and delicately executed; and one or two of Mr. Gillett's drawings—Mayday (16) and Maundy Thursday (12)—are shrewdly handled. Contemporary life offers a better inspiration to the latter artist than "costume-subjects."

SOME CHURCHES OF SOUTH-EAST DEVON.

IV.

THE rather fine though squat tower of Seaton church has been strangely disfigured by the advice of some architect, who has cleared out all the squared putlog holes made by the original builders for the scaffolding beams; it now presents an unsightly pock-marked appearance. Some of the townsfolk are actually proud of this disfigurement, and are credulous enough to believe the impossible tale that these holes are defensive, and were at one time manned by archers! Some of these holes, like others I have examined both in the West of England and in East Anglia, were carefully squared and lined by the original builders; this elaborate treatment doubtless arose in part from the long time scaffolding had often to stand in mediæval days, owing to the series of years during which the slow building of a tower was carried out. The mediæval architects seem also to have left those holes well defined, so that they could readily be cleared out for use when future repairs or repointing became necessary. Some of these holes are also cleared out in the smaller towers of Venn Ottery and Newton Poppleford, where none of the parishioners, so far as I could gather, imagine them to be beautiful, or of defensive design. This is good news, for there is hardly a tower in the district that could not be disfigured like that of Seaton by the opening of scaffolding holes.

The central towers of Axminster, Honiton, Colyton, and Shute—or at all events all those parts that rise above the rest of the church—are of fifteenth-century date. A well-designed octagonal lantern rises from amid the battlements and pinnacles of Colyton tower.

There are noteworthy points of fifteenth-century church architecture in addition to the towers. At Branscombe there is in the chancel an excellent Perpendicular east window of five lights, the date of which can be determined within a few years. The large terminals of the outer hoodmould bear the arms of the See of Exeter, and a saltire, which was the arms of Bishop Neville, who held the bishopric from 1435 to 1465. At the same date the parish authorities gave a cradle or waggon roof to the nave; among the bosses at the intersection of the timbers the saltire again appears.

In several cases in this district restoring architects have avoided the mistake—made generally throughout Cornwall—of removing the whitewashed plaster (the usual original method) from the squares of the waggon roofs and substituting deal or other boarding. In the general absence of clerestory windows, the light colour of the plaster is required to show up the carving of the intersecting roof-timbers. Talaton affords an unfortunate instance of the effect of clearing out the plaster.

The cruciform church of St. Michael, Honiton, owes most of its beauty to another bishop of the Western see of a later date—Peter de Courtenay, successively Bishop of Exeter and Winchester, who died in 1491. The Courtenay shield appears on the capitals of several of the piers, as well as on the noble rood-screen. The arcades dividing the chancel and its aisles are of Henry VIII. date; on the pier capitals are scrolls bearing the legend "Pray for y^e soulls of John Takell & Jone hys wyffe."

The large church of Colyton in its general features is of the Perpendicular period. The vast nine-light window that fills up the whole of the west end of the nave is carried down to the ground, and has a doorway enclosed within it. It is peculiar, and after a fashion impressive, but certainly neither dignified nor commendable. The south elevation, broken by porch and transept, is the best part of the exterior. The arches that separate the chancel from its aisles are much enriched. The best work of this period in the church of Axminster is the richly ornamented parapet of the north aisle.

At Woodbury, in addition to the fine tower, there is much good later work in the Perpendicular style. This is particularly the case with the north aisle, where the series of large windows must have given considerable scope for the prevalent taste in memorial painted glass. The arcade separating this aisle from the nave has good clustered piers, with delicately foliated capitals. Somewhat similar good arcades may be noted at Payhembury, Shute, and East Budleigh, and in a few other churches. The late south arcade of Feniton church bears the arms of Malherbe and Ferrers on the capitals of the piers. Two most beautiful and elaborate Perpendicular arches divide the aisles from the transepts at Sidbury: that on the north is carved with palm branches, and that on the south with vine-leaves and grapes. Awliscombe has an exceptionally beautiful five-light window, with niches in the jambs, in the south transept; this, as well as the porch with a stone groined roof and two doorways, was erected by Thomas Chard, the last abbot of Ford.

A considerable number of the fonts of this part of Devonshire are of fifteenth-century date; such are the octagonal fonts of Axminster, East Budleigh, Kilminster, Littleham, Offwell, Payhembury, Shute, Sidbury, Widworthy, and Woodbury. These are all fairly good, well-carved examples of the period, though lacking the stateliness of East Anglian fonts of the like date. Littleham is of peculiar design, and has the saltire on each panel (the church is dedicated to St. Andrew and St. Margaret); Woodbury has details of groined roofs reproduced in the shaft panels; whilst Sidbury font is remarkable for having one of the bowl panels mutilated for the insertion of a sixteenth-century lock. Feniton font may be added to the small group of fonts of which Youlgreave (Derbyshire), Sutton Bonington (Notts), and Odiham (Hants) are the most remarkable examples, which have a projection on the bowl; in this case the bracket doubtless served as a rest for the chrismatory.

With regard to later fonts, it may be here remarked that the plainly panelled font of Newton Poppleford, with a squared shaft, appears to be of 1660 date. Branscombe has an inferior small font and shaft, which seems to be of the later Hanoverian period; in the diminutive bowl, which seems sufficiently inadequate, rests a damaged white pudding basin, which, I gathered, has been in continuous use for at least forty years.

A particular feature of the later church architecture of this district should not be overlooked. The same is to be found in one or two of the churches on the south coast of Cornwall, as in the fine nave of Fowey. I refer to the absence of all capitals in the spring of the arch—a somewhat lazy fashion, doubtless introduced from the other side of the Channel, where the custom is sufficiently common. This continuous condition of the arches is to be noted, for instance, in the chancel arch and the north arcade of Seaton; in the chancel arches of Salcombe Regis, Axmouth, and Harpford; and in the tower arches of Offwell and Southleigh.

Brief comments have already been made on the woodwork of screens, benches, altars, tables and pulpits. It remains to mention the older altar-rails and certain galleries. Woodbury possesses highly remarkable late Elizabethan altar-rails of a most substantial character, ornamented at the ends and central opening with bulbous knobs. At Branscombe the altar-rails are noteworthy both in their character and arrangement. They are of spiral design, a style that came in with the Restoration of 1660. They are to be noted also at the four adjacent North Devon churches of Bradworthy, Milton Damerel, Parkham, and West Putford. A similar pattern is to be found at Sidbury. The Branscomb rails are now three-sided, but up to about the middle of last century they were four-sided, allowing the communicants to kneel all round the holy table. The places where the stanchions of the westernmost rails formerly stood, about 40 inches further west than the present arrangement, are still obvious in the pavement; and the rails of the east side are now against the east wall. It is exceedingly curious that such a Puritanical arrangement should have been effected in post-Commonwealth times. The very few other instances (only two, I believe, are now standing) of four-sided rails are of earlier date. The holy table of Branscombe has spiral legs corresponding to the rails. At East Budleigh the altar-rails are of a small spindle character and closely set. They appear to be, together with the panelling of the sacrarium and the panelled altar, of Hanoverian date.

Branscombe church also possesses a singularly fine piece of late Elizabethan carving in the front panelling and balustrade work of a west gallery, to which access is gained by an outer flight of steps leading to a small Tudor doorway. This gallery, which is supported by well-turned oak pillars with moulded capitals, is 7 ft. 6 in. wide, accommodating two rows of seats, with a slight organ projection in the centre. It now stands 12 ft. 7 in. away from the west wall, the intervening space being filled with steeply sloping children's seats of a much later date. The existence of this gallery is threatened at the approaching restoration of this church, but it would be positively wrong to remove it (as hardly anything decent of Elizabeth's long reign is extant either inside or outside our churches), and all that should be done is to replace it against the west wall. Mr. Micklethwaite was wise enough, in 1884-5, to leave the well-painted west gallery front of Sidbury church; it bears the date of 1754, with the initials Nicholas Warren of Mincombe, one of the then churchwardens. At Rockbeare the Jacobean front of the old west gallery has been worked up into a screen between the new vestry and organ chamber.

Good or noteworthy interior details are not nearly so numerous as in some neighbourhoods. Squints to obtain a view of the high altar may be noticed in various churches, as at Axminster, East Budleigh (through the rood stairway), Harpford, Seaton, Sidbury, and Woodbury. There are three well-canopied sedilia of late thirteenth-century date at Axminster; and the head of a single trefoil-headed sedile has just been brought to light in Branscombe chancel. At Littleham there is a double piscina which is doubly remarkable: it is exceptionally placed in the east wall of the chancel, whilst one of the two drains is of circular shape and the other square. A holy-water stoup is to be noted in the angle of Offwell porch, and another inside the south doorway of Payhembury. Old wall-paintings are well worth examination at the churches of Sidbury and Axmouth. Why will church writers insist on giving such paintings the inaccurate name of frescoes? Mediæval glass may be noted at Northleigh; interesting heraldic glass (of seventeenth century and later) at Shute; and some small fragments at Offwell. At the last church there are many pieces of carved woodwork, chiefly of seventeenth-century date; but they all appear to be foreign and of comparatively late introduction. In the vestry window of the rebuilt church of Sidmouth is an interesting Trinity symbol. On the south side of the chancel roof of Buckerell there is a portion of a highly ornamental piece of lead guttering, circa 1500, a most unusual relic.

The monuments of these churches are fairly numerous and important. As to recumbent effigies, there is one of a priest in eucharistic vestments, with feet on a lion, within a founder's niche in the north wall of the chancel of Axmouth, of fourteenth-century date; the upper part of the tomb has been obviously used for the Easter Sepulchre rites. The local suggestion that this is an effigy of a prior of Lodres, Dorset, to which house the advowson and rectory belonged, is strange; there is no symbol of a superior of a religious house, and a prior would naturally desire interment within his own precincts. In Axminster chancel are two stone effigies. One of these, of thirteenth-century date, represents a lady with wimple of vowed widowhood, holding between her hands a small figure of the Virgin and Child; it is said to represent Alice (Briwere), wife of Reginald de Mohun, lord of the manor of Axminster. The other is a priest, and possibly represents Gervase de Prestaller, the first vicar. In the nave of Ottery St. Mary are the effigies of a knight and his lady, members of the Grandison family, brought here from Kent by Bishop Grandison about 1360. In the north transept of Widworthy is the fine effigy of a knight in bascinet, camail, and hauberk of mail, bearing on his left arm a shield with the arms of Prouz; it is of late Edward III. date.

On the south side of Feniton chancel is a chest tomb with quatrefoil panels, having a full-sized cadaver in an open shroud, tied at the head and feet. In the chancel of Colyton is the celebrated and beautifully wrought canopied tomb with effigy to a lady of the Courtenay family. It is popularly supposed to represent Margaret, daughter of William, Earl of Devon, and Katharine his wife, seventh daughter of Edward IV., who was choked by a fishbone in 1512. This statement was unfortunately perpetuated in brass by a former vicar, and still more unfortunately confirmed in 1907, when a youthful crowned Madonna-like head was given to the figure by a "restorer." This restoration led to an animated and conclusive correspondence in The Times. The arms over the tomb show that it is that of Margaret Beaufort, wife of Thomas, sixth Earl of Devon, or of one of her daughters. In the chancel chapels are some very costly seventeenth-century monuments of the Pole and Yonge families.

At Gittisham are the kneeling effigies of Henry Beaumont, 1591, and his wife Elizabeth. The Farway effigies have been already named. At Woodbury, to the north of the altar, is a tomb supporting the effigies of a knight in late plate armour and his wife; they probably represent Sir Thomas Prideaux (1640) and Jean his wife. A highly remarkable seventeenth-century tomb occurs at the east end of the south aisle of Musbury. The monument is divided into three compartments, in each of which appears the effigies of man and wife kneeling at a desk: they represent John Drake (of Ashe), 1558, and Amy his wife; Sir Bernard Drake, 1586, and Gertrude his wife; and John Drake, 1628, and Dorothy his wife. In the north chapel of Shute church are many monuments of the Pole family; the most remarkable is an outstanding statue on a pedestal of "Sir William Pole, Bart., Master of the Household to her late Majesty Queen Anne of ever Glorious Memory. Dyed 31 Decemb^r, 1741, aged 63." It is a fine piece of white marble statuary over life size, but looks strangely incongruous in a village church. Graceful Sir William is represented in court dress and long curled wig, holding his wand of office.

Destructive "restoration" has perhaps not raged here during the last half century with quite so much severity as in Cornwall and in certain other parts of England; but its place has been taken by the complete uprooting of old church fabrics. The following are those of this district which have been swept out of being, with the dates of their upheaval in chronological order: Sowton, 1845; Bicton, 1851; Farringdon, 1871; Otterton, 1871; and Rousdon, 1872. In several other cases the tower was too substantial to warrant the expense of removal, but all the rest of the old fabric was destroyed; this occurred at Whimble, 1845; Clyst St. George, 1852; Sidmouth, 1860; Lympstone, 1864; Topsham, 1869; and Newton Poppleford, 1875.

With regard to open churches, it is a pleasure to be able to state that a considerable and increasing number are open during daylight for use by the parishioners or inspection by visitors. Among those in which there was no necessity to search for the key, and where the inhabitants were evidently pleased to be able to state that "our church is always open," were Awliscombe, Axminster, Clyst St. Lawrence, Colyton, East Budleigh, Harpford, Honiton, Littleham, Lympstone, Newton Poppleford, Offwell, Salcombe Regis, Seaton, Shute, Sidbury, Talaton, Topsham, and Woodbury. Widworthy was equivalent to being open, for the key hangs up in the porch. There are several others, I believe, in like condition, but my notes on this point are imperfect.

Ottery St. Mary cannot be included in this list, because it is now one of three or four churches in England where the money-changer's table is close to the entrance, and a definite sum insisted upon before admission can be gained. This unfortunate and possibly illegal arrangement was not in vogue on two previous occasions, many years ago, when I visited this great church. Ottery St. Mary has not been referred to previously in these notes, for this important collegiate foundation can scarcely be looked upon as a parish church. There is much thirteenth-century work left, as is well known, of the church consecrated by Bishop Branscombe in 1260, and still more of the date when it was made a collegiate foundation by Bishop Grandison in 1337. The design of this fabric is obviously copied from Exeter Cathedral, each transept being crowned with a tower. The north aisle, with its beautiful fan-traceried vaulting, is of Henry VII. date. This church was unfortunately and too generously restored about 1850, when the levels were much altered. The costly font is an eyesore, and the colouring of much of the vaulting garish. The great stone screen of the Lady Chapel is the most remarkable feature of the interior, and the series of carved consecration crosses of the exterior.

J. CHARLES COX.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE sold on April 30th the following pictures, the property of the late Right Hon. James A. Campbell: J. Maris, Amsterdam, 1,260*l.*; A Fisher-Woman and Child by the Seashore, 220*l.* S. Ruysdael, A River Scene, with numerous boats, and figures drawing a net, 325*l.*

The following were sold by order of the trustees of the late James A. Garland of New York. Drawings: J. L. Gérôme, The Discussion, 52*l.* A. de Neuville, Destroying Communications, 399*l.* Pictures of Continental Schools: J. Breton, Le Goûter, three peasant-women in a harvest field, eating their midday meal, 2,835*l.* C. F. Daubigny, Les Bords de l'Oise, a village with a church on rising ground, 913*l.*; The Haunt of the Herons, several herons in a marsh in the foreground; a punt, near some trees, on the left, 315*l.* N. Diaz, The Forest of Fontainebleau: Autumn, 441*l.* J. L. Gérôme, The Saddle Bazaar, Cairo, 420*l.* C. Troyon, Cattle in a River, 2,677*l.*; Cattle in a Pasture, 2,625*l.*; Peasants and Sheep, 451*l.* English School: Sir L. Alma Tadema, Springtime, 945*l.* Erskine Nicol, Yours to Command, 325*l.*

The following were from various properties. Drawings: Turner, Ingleborough from Hornby Castle, 1,365*l.* A. Mauve, Towing Horses on a Dyke, 89*l.* W. Collins, Cromer Sands, 110*l.* J. Phillip, The Early Career of Murillo, 54*l.* J. Stark, near Thorpe Common, 63*l.*

Pictures: J. Sustermans, Johannes Bapta Guelph, 120*l.* N. Diaz, In the Forest of Fontainebleau, 262*l.* H. Harpignies, A River Scene, with a weir, cottage, and figures, 105*l.*; A Hill-side at Herrison, 157*l.*

On the same day Messrs. Christie sold the pictures of the Barbizon and Dutch Schools belonging to Heer J. H. van Eeghen of Amsterdam: Benjamin Constant, The Empress Theodora 378*l.* E. Delacroix, The Sacking of the Harem, 231*l.* J. Dupré, La Symphonie, 840*l.* J. B. Jongkind, Rotterdam Harbour, 399*l.* J. Maris, Woody River Scene, 315*l.* J. F. Millet, La Cardeuse, 1,050*l.* A. Neuhuys, Preparing the Meal, 840*l.* T. Rousseau, The Great Oak, 682*l.* A. Vollon, The Windmill, 136*l.*

Messrs. Hodgson sold on the 30th ult. the following art books: Engraved Works of Sir Thomas Lawrence, 1834, 95*l.* Boydell's Shakespeare Gallery, 19*l.* 5s. Engravings by Piranesi, 5 vols., 24*l.* The Houghton Gallery, 2 vols., 25*l.* 10s. Caricature Magazine, 4 vols., 37*l.* Buek's Views in England and Wales, 4 vols., 31*l.* Luxembourg Gallery, 1710, in old French morocco, 17*l.* 5s. Coronation of Louis XV., 1722, bound by Padeloup, 29*l.* 10s.

Fine-Art Gossip.

THE DUKE OF NORFOLK has handed over his Holbein portrait of the Duchess of Milan, for many years on view in the National Gallery, to Messrs. Colnaghi with a view to its sale. It is, as usual, destined for the United States. A month's grace has been allowed, however, for the purchase of the picture by the nation, and the Treasury will contribute 10,000*l.* if "an appeal is made to the public, and a generous response is received." Mr. Sidney Colvin announced at a meeting on Wednesday last of the National Art Collections Fund that not less than 70,000*l.* would be needed.

MESSRS. GEORGE ALLEN will publish shortly 'The "Lewis Bequest" at the National Gallery,' by Mr. M. W. Brockwell, with Preface by Sir Charles Holroyd.

WE are sorry to notice the death of Mr. Frank Dillon on Sunday last. Born on February 24th, 1823, he was the youngest son of Mr. John Dillon, of the firm of Morrison, Dillon & Co., and was born in London. He was educated at Bruce Castle School, and after passing through the Academy schools he was for a time the pupil of James Holland. Both great worshippers of Turner, they visited his studio in Queen Anne Street together. One day finding themselves alone there, they ventured, with the aid of a wetted handkerchief, to verify the fact of the use of water colour in the skies of Turner's oil pictures. Mr. Dillon was a frequent exhibitor at the Academy, and an original member of the old Dudley Gallery Society. He subsequently joined the Royal Institute of Painters in Water Colours. From 1850, for more than half a century, he visited most parts of Europe; in 1854-5 he was in Egypt; he passed more than a year in Japan (1876-7); and later visited Morocco and Spain.

MR. DILLON was interested in all subjects connected with the preservation of ancient buildings—especially the remains of Arab art in Cairo. Before this task was taken up by the Government, he with some others formed a small committee, and was instrumental in restricting the wholesale destruction that in the seventies and eighties was going on in Egypt.

THE LOUVRE has acquired, at the price of 120,000 francs, a complete series of twelve enamels by the Limousin craftsman Monvaerni, who was the first to sign Limoges enamels. Until the present purchase Monvaerni was entirely unrepresented in the French national collection. The new acquisitions will shortly be exhibited to the public.

A LARGE fresco of the Madonna and four saints has come to light in the church of S. Francesco at Arezzo. In the lower part of the fresco are depicted various episodes from the legends of the saints represented. The painting has been identified with one mentioned by Vasari, and ascribed by him to Pari Spinelli.

THE VILLA MALCONTENTA near Fusina, built by Palladio, and once the property of the Foscari family, has recently been acquired by Signor Minerbi of Venice, who has had the good fortune to discover a large fresco hidden by whitewash on the wall of the great central hall. The villa had for many years been empty, and the rooms are in a ruinous condition. Further frescoes have now been freed from the falling whitewash, and may prove to be works of Paolo Veronese and his school. The owner considers the large fresco of the central hall to be an undoubted work of the master himself, and it is said to contain many fine figures, and colouring of admirable quality. The remainder Signor Minerbi attributes to pupils of Paolo Caliari. It will be interesting to learn how these newly discovered works compare with the frescoes of the Villa Maser near Asolo, and other authentic works of similar character executed by Paolo Veronese in villas of the Venetian country.

THE REV. E. J. WATSON WILLIAMS has written a monograph in connexion with a Hampshire church which dates from about 1000 A.D., entitled 'Odd Tit-bits from Tichborne Old Church Books.' It will be published immediately by Mr. Elliot Stock.

SOME of the newspapers are alarmed at the prospect of the town of Athens being spoiled by a Prussian architect. It should not be assumed that Athens as a city represents Greek art. The dominant architecture of Athens is Bavarian. The long reign of a Bavarian king caused the employment of Munich architects, and, whether their success is due to merits less conspicuous in Munich or to the improvement due to the Southern sun, no one denies that many of the public monuments of Athens are attractive, and that the effect as a whole is good. Bavarian architecture as judged at Athens, and in some degree at Munich, is undoubtedly superior to that of modern Germany as viewed in Berlin.

THE opening of the Ulster Heraldic Museum, Dublin, by the Lord Lieutenant on April 29th, marks the inauguration of the first public institution of its kind in the three kingdoms. It owes its existence to the energy and enthusiasm of the present Ulster King-of-Arms, Capt. Neville R. Wilkinson. In view of the comparatively short time during which he has been forming the nucleus of his collection, a very satisfactory start has been made.

EXHIBITIONS.

SAT. (May 8).—Mr. Henry Bishop's Paintings, 'The Colour of Tangier,' Goupil Gallery.
TUES. Mr. Anton van Welie's Portraits and Paintings, Private View, Goupil Gallery.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

COVENT GARDEN.—Die Walküre. Pagliacci. Traviata. Lucia.

AT Covent Garden, between 'Madama Butterfly' on Wednesday and 'Cavalleria Rusticana' and 'Pagliacci' on Friday evening last week, came Wagner's 'Die Walküre' under the direction of Dr. Hans Richter. The contrast was striking, and it enabled one to appreciate the genius of Wagner. Puccini, Mascagni, and Leoncavallo all possess dramatic instinct, but their works pale when placed side by side with the finest section of the 'Ring.' Miss Van Dresser proved a sympathetic Sieglinde, and Madame Saltzmann-Stevens as Brünnhilde again displayed her vocal and histrionic gifts to advantage. Madame Kirkby Lunn impersonated Fricka, and Mr. Walter Hyde Siegmund, and both with success. The orchestral playing was very fine.

In the 'Pagliacci' performance mentioned above M. Leliva, who appeared also in 'Madama Butterfly,' sang well as Canio, but his rendering of the part was not striking.

In 'Traviata' and again in 'Lucia di Lammermoor,' on Saturday and the following Monday, Madame Tetrassini won her usual triumph. On both nights she was nervous, but only at first. She does not, indeed, appear to have quite shaken off the cold from which she suffered at New York. Her audiences, however, were not disposed to be critical.

CORONET.—Zaza. By Leoncavallo.

LEONCAVALLO'S 'Pagliacci' was produced seventeen years ago with a favour which has been fully maintained. The work offers another proof that a good libretto counts for much in the success of an opera. Since 1892 the composer has written several works for the stage; not one of these, however, has rivalled 'Pagliacci' in popularity. 'Zaza,' produced at Milan in 1900, has been given at Paris and in Germany, but it had not been heard in London until yesterday week, when it was performed by the Italian company which began a short season at the Coronet Theatre, Notting Hill, on the previous Monday evening.

The story of Berton and Simon's play lends itself fairly well to operatic treatment. Leoncavallo's music, with the exception of a few touches, echoes of 'Pagliacci,' is, however, very conventional. Besides, the work is unduly spun out. Of the performance we cannot say much that is good. Signora de Restie, who impersonated Zaza, has a good voice, which she does not use to the best advantage, but there was life and earnestness in her singing; while Signor Ciccolini as Dufresne displayed a strong tenor voice. Signor Wehils, the conductor, was careful and tactful, but the playing of the orchestra was not all that could be desired.

QUEEN'S HALL.—M. Widor's Orchestral Concert.

M. CHARLES MARIE WIDOR, who gave an orchestral concert on Tuesday afternoon, enjoys a deservedly high reputation as an organist. He is also an accomplished musician, and in 1896 succeeded Dupont as Professor of Composition at the Paris Conservatoire. His works are numerous, one of the best being the ballet 'La Korrigane.' His programme on Tuesday included a Symphonie, No. 3 in G (Op. 69) for organ (soloist, Mr. Arthur Mason) and orchestra. Of M. Widor's talent and skill in orchestration there is no question; his music, however, conveys the impression that it is the outcome of mature thought rather than of strong inspiration. The solo part of a pleasing 'Fantaisie' for pianoforte and orchestra (Op. 62) was well rendered by Madame Olga Samaroff. M. Widor is a sound, experienced conductor. The concert ended with his 'Bacchanale' from 'La Nuit de Walpurgis,' which was dedicated to the London Philharmonic Society, and produced at one of its concerts in 1888 under the composer's direction.

Musical Gossip.

SIGNOR BUSONI gave the first of three recitals at Bechstein Hall last Saturday afternoon. Regarded alike from the intellectual and the technical standpoint, his performances of Beethoven's Sonatas in E major (Op. 109) and c minor (Op. 111) were completely satisfactory. He also played three of his effective transcriptions from Bach, and further illustrated his powers by a masterly rendering of Brahms's Variations on a theme of Paganini.

AT their second recital at Queen's Hall next Wednesday MM. Ysaye and Pugno will perform a Sonata in E by Sylvio Lazzari, a native of Tyrol, who studied under César Franck. He has written a music drama, 'Armor,' produced at Prague in 1898; also orchestral and chamber music. The programme also includes César Franck's Sonata in A.

THE death is announced of Julius Hey at the age of seventy-seven. On Wagner's recommendation he was appointed Professor of Singing at the Munich School of Singing established in 1867. In 1886 was published his great method of singing, 'Deutscher Gesangsunterricht.'

THE DRESDEN QUARTET (Herren Emil Steglich, Bruno Eichhorn, Arthur Eller, and Joh. Fleischer) gave two concerts of chamber music at Bechstein Hall on April 30th and May 3rd. They introduced a String Quartet and a String Trio by A. M. Barton, but neither work showed character. A Quartet in c sharp minor (Op. 66, No. 3) by Felix Draesecke, though well written, proved rather dry. He is now seventy-four years old, and has composed many works, but his music is little known in England.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN. Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
— Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
— Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
MON.-SAT. Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
MON.-SAT. Italian Opera, 8, Coronet Theatre. (Wed. and Sat. Matinees, 2.30.)
MON. Misses F. Monteith and Myra Hess's Violin and Pianoforte Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
— Misses E. Wynne-Agabeg and Muriel Scott's Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
— Miss Gail Gardner's Vocal Recital, 3.15, Æolian Hall.
— Mr. Spencer Dyke's Violin Recital, 8.15, Steinway Hall.
— Miss Vera Jacques's Pianoforte Recital, 8.15, St. James's Hall.
— Mr. Max Reger's Concert, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
— Miss Alice Verlet's Operatic Recital, 8.30, Queen's Hall.
TUES. Miss Alys Bateman's Concert, 3, Æolian Hall.
— Madame Haas's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
— Miss Elena Gerhardt's Vocal Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.
— M. Sergei Kussewitzky's Symphony Concert, 3.15, Queen's Hall.
— Madame Bokken-Lasson's Song Recital, 8.15, Bechstein Hall.
— Miss Christine Hawkes's Concertina Recital, 8.30, Steinway Hall.
— Mr. J. Campbell McInnes's Vocal Recital, 8.30, Æolian Hall.
WED. Madame Conti's Vocal Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
— Messrs. Ysaye and Pugno's Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.
— Madame Le Mar's Vocal Recital, 3.15, Æolian Hall.
— Miss Eva K. Lissmann's Vocal Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.
— Zimbalist's Orchestral Concert, 8.15, Queen's Hall.
— Miss G. Lonsdale's Vocal Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
THURS. Mr. Hubert Bromilow's Song Recital, 3.15, Æolian Hall.
— M. Busoni's Pianoforte Recital, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.
— Miss Jolanda Merò's Pianoforte Recital, 3.15, Steinway Hall.
— Miss May Muckle's Cello Recital, 3.15, St. James's Hall.
— Philharmonic Concert, 8, Queen's Hall.
— Miss Florence Shee's Vocal Recital, 8, Steinway Hall.
FRI. Mr. Max Reger's Second Concert, 3, Bechstein Hall.
— M. Scriabine's Concert, 3.15, St. James's Hall.
— Misses Matilde Verne and G. Wietrowetz's Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
SAT. Mr. Wilhelm Backhaus's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.
— Mrs. Eeles's Concert, 3, Steinway Hall.
— M. Godowsky's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
— Miss Marie Hall's Violin Recital, 3, St. James's Hall.
— Mozart Society, 3, Portman Rooms.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

HIS MAJESTY'S (AFTERNOON THEATRE).—
Ibsen's 'Enemy of the People.'

It might seem curious that the least characteristic of Ibsen's social plays is the chief one which remains in the repertory of an English theatre; but there are special reasons why this, from the first a favourite with audiences, should appeal to our playgoers. 'An Enemy of the People' is a satirical comedy, the rhetoric of which is directed against the tyranny of the "compact majority," and that is not entirely a disqualification with English folk, who rather enjoy being abused if they are also diverted. What, however, gives this drama a better chance of pleasing the majority in a London playhouse than most of its author's works is its possession of just the qualities these often lack. Its humour is genial, its action is breezy and buoyant, and its hero, opposed though he is to the society in which he lives, is no morbid egoist, no intellectual anarchist, determined to obtain scope for his personality at other people's expense, as are many of Ibsen's protagonists, but a man who is only uncompromising in his philanthropy. Dr. Stockmann, the medical officer of a little Norwegian health-resort, finds that the very waters on which his town prides itself, and by which it lives, are being polluted, and his childish belief in the goodness of human nature receives a shock when every vested interest in the town rises up against him on his proposing to make his discovery public. The atmosphere of the play is of course one of parochial politics, but thanks to the sunniness of his temper there is nothing petty or mean about Stockmann's struggle with his environment. This is the sort of man who likes a fight, and only learns his strength under pressure of opposition. He shoulders his way so goodnatureedly through his enemies that even at the height of the story, in the scene of the town meeting, in which he is foiled at every turn and goaded into a furious indictment of the stupidity of the majority, he affords an impression of victory rather than defeat.

Such a hero, the cheerful, indomitable fighter, always delights Englishmen of every class, and it was amusing at His Majesty's to note the zest with which the "intellectuals" of the Afternoon Theatre read romance into their Ibsen. The acting justified their enthusiasm. For once Mr. Tree associated himself directly with the enterprise with which he has throughout been connected as manager. His Dr. Stockmann has always been among his happiest studies of character, and the Society was fortunate in persuading him to repeat under its auspices a performance full of high spirits, and declamatory vigour. Mr. Louis Calvert provides just the right kind of foil in his stolid, ruthless Burgomaster; while Miss Beatrice Forbes-Robertson lends a pretty touch of earnestness to Petra, the doctor's loyal daughter.

Mr. Robson is inclined to emphasize too much the humours of the trimming newspaper publisher Aslaksen, but otherwise our only complaint is that the pace of the acting is rather slow. Even the scene of the meeting, capitally though it is stage-managed, loses a little of its effectiveness through over-elaboration of detail.

ALDWYCH.—Revival of 'One of the Best': a Drama in four Acts. By Seymour Hicks and George Edwardes.

It is thirteen years since this piece was first presented, and its revival recalls the great days of melodrama, when William Terriss was the idol of pit and gallery at the Adelphi. The play is an adaptation of the Dreyfus affair prepared by Mr. Seymour Hicks and Mr. Edwardes. There is one scene in it which is of exceptional poignancy—that in which the hero is stripped piece by piece of his decorations, and reveals only by a slight quiver of his muscles now and then the agony of his humiliation. Even the least imaginative of playgoers ought to grasp the tragic import of such a moment. The mere fact that the play contains this single situation justifies its reproduction. The situation proves as impressive as ever at the Aldwych, though it is Mr. Ainley now who figures as Lieut. Keppel. We do not get from him that fervour in declamation, and heartiness of manner which recommended Mr. Terriss as a stage hero. His are quieter methods, though, as his predecessor did, he makes the most of the scene of degradation.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

An Actor's Story, by Bransby Williams (Chapman & Hall), is a good-humoured, but somewhat amateurish record of the author's career. The actual writing is above the level of such books, perhaps because the author had in youth a taste for dead languages; but some vagueness and repetition might have been saved by competent revision. A good many compliments of the journalistic sort are paid to various people prominent in the acting world. We find, however, real feeling in the account of J. L. Toole, for whom the author, an admirable mimic, revived the voices of old friends.

Mr. Williams is best known as a "Dickens actor," making up from the novels and delivering monologues in character. He has, however, a wide range besides as an "impersonator," and the book shows clearly his admirable versatility, and presence of mind in face of sudden demands. He has been much imitated in his Dickensian parts, the idea of which did not, of course, begin with him. Jennie Lee had a great reputation as Jo of 'Bleak House' before he was heard of; but he has genuine reason to complain of the "imitatorum servum pecus." There are at present, it appears, "sixteen men and one woman who impersonate Dickens characters." Several excellent photographs are provided of the author's own successes in this line. Sydney Carton he has continued to play weekly for over twelve years, and began his monologue before 'The Only Way' and other versions from 'The Tale of Two Cities' became known. He started by acting in working-men's clubs and institutes at a few shillings a week.

Mr. Williams has won success in the United States, and thinks highly of the experience gained by "stock companies" there:—

"Each member gets to know the ways of the other, and all play together, gaining a most harmonious whole—and we in England call 'stock' old-fashioned, and pooh-pooh it! But, at any rate, America is training more actors in experience than we can ever hope to do under our present long-run and touring system. Here we have men who have played one part for years, and nothing else. There you find them playing a different part weekly, and becoming experienced in every way."

The Green-Room Book for 1909, edited by Mr. John Parker (Sealey Clark & Co.), is the fourth issue of a year-book of the stage which has already earned our regard for its accuracy and fullness. It is a very satisfactory record of the plays and players of to-day, the matter outside the main alphabetical index being carefully compiled. In 'Footlight Families' Mr. Bulloch has made a striking record of hereditary aptitude. The plenitude of photographs which marked an earlier issue has disappeared. We cannot say that we are sorry, for the stage is already over-advertised in this way, and we see no reason for the repetition of familiar faces in a work of reference, except the gratification of abundant vanity.

SHAKESPEARE AT STRATFORD.

ON Tuesday, April 27th, Mr. Benson performed Richard II., one of his special parts, bringing out suggestively the luxury and imprudence of the youthful king, and his weak, yet poetic sensitiveness. This play has been so often given at Stratford on these occasions that there is no need to say anything about its general production.

On Wednesday afternoon Mr. Forbes Robertson and his company came down, and gave 'The Passing of the Third Floor Back.' There is just a suggestion of the didactic manner of the old morality in Mr. Forbes Robertson's leading character, who turns sordid spirits to a better life. This piece was to have been preceded by the scene in 'Henry VIII.' in which Buckingham goes to the scaffold, but it was wisely postponed to the end, so as to link it with the Shakespearian repertory. Mr. Forbes Robertson represented Buckingham impressively; the others formed the audience for what was virtually a recitation. At the close he was urged to make a speech in his own person, and he thanked those present for the welcome given to him and his company, who were exceedingly glad to return to Stratford. Then he defined what he considered to be the grand work of Mr. Benson, who was not only himself a great exponent of Shakespeare, but also the head of a school which had produced many brilliant young actors.

In the evening there was a performance of 'King John,' with Mr. Benson in the title rôle. It is difficult to rouse any enthusiasm in this unequal and ungracious part, but Mr. Benson did the best that could be done, catching his gleams of courage and tenderness. The little prince was well rendered by Miss Leah Hanman. Robert Faulconbridge was freshly acted by Mr. Vickers Smith, and made distinctly humorous. Mr. Cyril Keightley looked the very person for the part of Philip Faulconbridge, and forgot no point. The Archduke of Austria on this occasion was handed over to Mr. Murray Carrington, Philip of France to Mr. Hannam Clark, and Lewis the Dauphin to Mr. F. G. Worlock, who all showed careful study of parts which do not give much opportunity for striking action.

Elinor, the mother of King John, was represented by Miss Elinor Aickin in a milder and more lovable manner than is usual in this part. Constance was performed by Mrs. Benson with considerable feeling and little of the usual exaggeration; and Blanch by Miss Olive Noble in a simple and gracious manner.

On Thursday, April 29th, 'Cymbeline' was repeated, but there is nothing to add to our former remarks. A Shakespeare Costume Ball in the evening varied the presentation of plays.

The Friday performance was again 'The Merchant of Venice,' altered only by Mr. Benson taking the part of Shylock, whom he made ravenous and bloodthirsty enough.

May Day afternoon saw a repetition of the grim history of King John, but the evening was made lively by 'The Merry Wives of Windsor.' Sir John Falstaff was creditably essayed by Mr. Hannam Clark. His voice, however, was hardly mellow enough; nor was the conception of "the humour of it" rich enough for this popular part. Shallow was rendered rather insufficiently by Mr. Wilson; but the Slender of Mr. H. O. Nicholson was good. The jealous Ford of Mr. E. A. Warburton, and the merrier Page of Mr. Murray Carrington, were a suitable contrast. Though Mr. Benson, as Dr. Caius, dressed up fittingly and gave the true French accent in his dialogue, the part was really torn to tatters—to very rags. As Sir Hugh Evans Mr. Rathbone was rather under the mark in his Welsh characteristics. Bardolph, Pistol, and Nym have but few chances in this play, but those they have were not fully taken up.

Miss Elinor Aickin was brightly got up as Mrs. Quickly, and fitted herself well to her part. Mrs. Ford was played by Mrs. Benson, and Mrs. Page by Miss Helen Haye. They had a lively laughing time of it throughout, but Mrs. Benson somewhat overdid the action and the merriment. Anne Page was represented by Miss Olive Noble in a fresh and natural manner; and Miss Hanman made a mirthful Robin, boy to Falstaff.

The midnight scene in Windsor Park was very prettily staged, and the dancing was excellent, but of a nature rather fitted for pantomime than a Shakespearian play.

The third week opened with 'Henry IV., Part I.,' on the afternoon of May 3rd, in which Hotspur was played bravely by Mr. Lewis Waller, Henry IV. by Mr. E. A. Warburton, and Prince Hal by Mr. Benson himself. In the evening 'Twelfth Night' was cast for the ordinary company; and on Tuesday afternoon a repetition of 'Hamlet.' On Tuesday evening Part II. of 'Henry VI.' was performed. In this history Mr. Benson played Cardinal Beaufort; Mr. E. A. Warburton, Jack Cade; Mrs. Benson, Queen Margaret; and Miss Helen Haye the Duchess of Gloucester. On Wednesday there was a repetition of 'Cymbeline,' and on Thursday was produced the modern play of 'Richelieu.' 'Much Ado about Nothing' was announced for Friday afternoon; and 'The Belle's Stratagem' to be repeated in the evening. This afternoon is to see a repetition of 'Cymbeline'; and to-night the season closes with 'The Taming of the Shrew.'

Dramatic Gossip.

MR. NORREYS CONNELL, who has been acting as manager of the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, for the past month, has accepted the post of director in the place of J. M. Synge. A new one-act play by him, 'Time,' was recently performed in the theatre. It is an allegorical fantasy, and might be described as a modern morality play. The scene is on a high road leading to Rome, and there are three characters—an artist, a young girl, and Time.

At the same theatre there was produced last week a new play by Lord Dunsany, 'The Glittering Gate.' The action of the play takes place in Purgatory. The two characters, who were burglars during their earthly existence, succeed in opening the glittering gate, only to find, to their disappointment, a heaven full of stars. The dialogue is characterized by ironic humour, and the author in this quaint fantasy shows not a little dramatic skill. The piece was well staged, and the parts were admirably filled by Mr. Norreys Connell and Mr. O'Donovan.

THE THEATRE OF IRELAND SOCIETY produced two new plays last week in Dublin. One, 'The Shuiler's Child,' by Mr. Seumas O'Kelly, is the story of a child deserted by its parents, and taken from the workhouse to nurse in a farmer's house. The part of the "Shuiler" was capably filled by Miss Moira Walker; and Miss Nelly O'Brien, as Mary O'Hea, the foster-mother, acted with much dignity and feeling.

In the second piece, 'The Gomeril,' Mr. Rutherford Mayne has produced a humorous study of Ulster life, which owed much of its success to the clever acting of Miss Nora Fitzpatrick as the elderly spinster who was to have provided the Gomeril with a bride.

FOLLOWING up the success which attended the representation of Molière's 'Médecin malgré lui' and Racine's 'Plaideurs' two years ago, Mrs. J. G. Frazer's French Dramatic Society proposes to give Molière's 'L'Avare' at the Guildhall, Cambridge, on Tuesday and Thursday next. There will be four performances, two in the afternoon and two in the evening. At the evening performance 'L'Avare' will be preceded by the 'Jean Marie' of M. André Theuriet, a short play in verse. Most of the company will be French.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—R. W.—MacA.—W. M.—G. F. C.—Not suitable for us. G. C. M. C.—Handed over. F. W.—Too late for notice.

ERRATUM.—P. 522, col. 1, in first quotation for "attribute" read attitude.

WE cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

WE do not undertake to give the value of books, china, pictures, &c.

THE ATHENÆUM,

PRICE THREEPENCE.

Is published every FRIDAY in time for the Afternoon Mails. Terms of Subscription, free by post to all parts of the United Kingdom: For Six Months, 7s. 6d.; for Twelve Months, 15s. 3d. For the Continent and all places within the Postal Union: For Six Months, 9s.; for Twelve Months, 18s., commencing from any date, payable in advance to

JOHN O. FRANCIS,

Athenæum Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, London, E.C.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
ALLEN	571
AUTHORS' AGENTS	546
BELL & SONS	570
CASSELL & Co.	549
CATALOGUES	546
DENT & Co.	550
EDUCATIONAL	545
ENO'S FRUIT SALT	548
EXHIBITIONS	545
HUMPHREYS	548
LONGMANS & Co.	550
LOW	547
MACMILLAN & Co.	550
MAGAZINES, &c.	548
MILLS & BOON	548
MISCELLANEOUS	546
PRINTERS	546
PROVIDENT INSTITUTIONS	545
SALES BY AUCTION	548
SHIPPING	548
SITUATIONS VACANT	545
SITUATIONS WANTED	546
SMITH, ELDER & Co.	572
TYPE-WRITERS, &c.	546

MESSRS. BELL'S BOOKS.

JUST PUBLISHED, post 8vo, with 48 Illustrations and a Map, 7s. 6d. net.

ALASKA: the Great Country. By ELLA HIGGINSON.

In this volume Miss Higginson, whose writings are well known in America, tells the story of the growth of Alaska, for which at present little-known country she predicts a great future. The numerous illustrations are a special feature of the book.

NOW READY, fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

LONDON'S LURE. An Anthology of Prose and Verse Passages bearing on London. By HELEN and LEWIS MELVILLE. With Title-Page, Binding, and End-Papers designed by M. V. WHEELHOUSE.

NOW READY, crown 8vo, with 4 Coloured Plates and 24 other Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

FISH STORIES. Alleged and Experienced, with a Little History, Natural and Unnatural. By CHARLES FREDERICK HOLDER and DAVID STARR JORDAN.

NOW READY, fcap. 8vo, 1s. 6d. net.

THE WAY OF LIGHT, and other Verses. By the Rev. THOMAS J. HARDY, Author of 'The Gospel of Pain.'

JUST PUBLISHED, post 8vo, 352 pp., 8s. net.

THE FRESHWATER AQUARIUM AND ITS INHABITANTS. By OTTO EGGELING and FREDERICK EHRENBURG.

JUST PUBLISHED, 8vo, 14s. net.

CHAPTERS OF OPERA. Being Historical and Critical Observations and Records concerning the Lyric Drama in New York, from its Earliest Days down to the Present Time. By HENRY EDWARD KREHBIEL, Musical Critic of the New York Tribune.

BOHN'S LIBRARIES.

"The new series of Bohn's Libraries, on which judicious bookbuyers have long learned to keep a careful eye."—Athenæum.

This well-known Series now includes upwards of 800 Volumes of Standard Works in English Literature, and Translations from the Classics and all the Modern Languages on

HISTORY	SCIENCE
BIOGRAPHY	NATURAL HISTORY
ARCHÆOLOGY	PHILOSOPHY
THEOLOGY	POETRY
TOPOGRAPHY	ART
ANTIQUITIES	FICTION

With Dictionaries and other Books of Reference. Price 3s. 6d. or 5s. per Volume (with exceptions).

A Detailed Catalogue of the Libraries will be sent on application.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York House, Portugal Street, W.C.

COMPLETION OF THE GREAT RUSKIN.Monthly Subscription of £1 obtains the Set

THE WHOLE OF RUSKIN'S WORKS are now FOR THE FIRST TIME OBTAINABLE in a COMPLETE, UNIFORM, ANNOTATED, ILLUSTRATED, and INDEXED EDITION.

This has just become possible through the completion of

THE LIFE, LETTERS,
AND WORKS OF RUSKIN

Edited by E. T. COOK and ALEXANDER WEDDERBURN

VOLUMES 36 AND 37 JUST PUBLISHED

THE LETTERS OF RUSKIN

In addition to numerous unpublished letters to his father and mother, these Volumes include letters of Ruskin to:—

Sir Henry Acland, Dr. John Brown, Rawdon Brown, the Brownings, Burne-Jones, Carlyle, Froude, Mrs. Gaskell, Kate Greenaway, Holman Hunt, Lord Leighton, H.R.H. Prince Leopold, Dean Liddell, Sir Oliver Lodge, Cardinal Manning, Stacy Marks, Mary Russell Mitford, William Morris, Lord and Lady Mount Temple, F. W. H. Myers, Charles Eliot Norton, F. T. Palgrave, Coventry Patmore, George Richmond, Samuel Rogers, Dante Rossetti, Sir John and Lady Simon, Spurgeon, Harriet Beecher Stowe, Tennyson, Thackeray, G. F. Watts, and many other Correspondents.

VOL. 36 contains 720 pages, 25 Plates, & 4 Facsimiles of MSS.

,, 37 ,, 756 ,, 12 ,, 20 ,, ,,

*The FINAL Volume, consisting of a COMPLETE BIBLIOGRAPHY, A CATALOGUE OF RUSKIN'S DRAWINGS, and AN INDEX to the WHOLE WORK, will necessarily take many more months to prepare. As the INDEX is calculated to contain over 100,000 REFERENCES, no definite date can be fixed for the publication of this volume.*Its inclusion will make this more than ever THE ONE*REFERENCE AND LIBRARY EDITION OF RUSKIN'S WORKS

with about 1800 Illustrations, including all RUSKIN'S PUBLISHED DRAWINGS and many that have HITHERTO REMAINED UNPUBLISHED.For fuller particulars of this magnificent Edition in Thirty-eight Volumes for £42 the Set, or in monthly instalments, see Prospectus.*WAX.

By G. SOMES LAYARD.

340 pages, crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"The high spirits in which the book is written is no small part of its charm.... told with unflagging vivacity.... Mr. Layard is an engaging writer.... The heroine is very natural."

THESE LITTLE ONES

By E. NESBIT. Scenes and Pictures from the Drama of the Child's World. With 10 Illustrations by SPENCER PRYSE.

Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. net.

SCOTSMAN.—"A book that should please both young readers and old."

DAPHNE IN FITZROY STREET

By E. NESBIT.

420 pages, crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

DAILY TELEGRAPH.—"A story easily and pleasantly told.... instinct with charm and so well inspired. The author is gifted with the ability of sketching diverse people in a way that makes them real."

EVERSLEY GARDENS AND OTHERS

By ROSE G. KINGSLEY. With 2 Pictures in Colour and 16 other Full-Page Illustrations, and Reminiscences of CHARLES KINGSLEY.

Second Edition.

Crown 8vo, cloth, gilt top, 6s. net.

PALL MALL GAZETTE.—"The book is fresh and vigorous, full of enthusiasm, thoroughly up to date, stimulating, and suggestive."

AN ARTIST'S GARDEN

Tended, Painted, and Described by ANNA LEA MERRITT. With 16 Full-Page Illustrations in Colour by the Author, specially mounted.

Demy 4to, cloth, designed cover, gilt top, 2ls. net.

GLOBE.—"Pictures riotous in colour.... chatty letterpress.... just the sort of book to make glad the heart of the amateur."

THE POCKET MAETERLINCK

Foolscap 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d., leather, 3s. 6d. gilt top, net per vol.

THE LIFE OF THE BEE
THE TREASURE OF THE HUMBLE
WISDOM AND DESTINY

And Two Volumes of PLAYS.

STANDARD.—"The volumes are in good taste, well printed, and exactly fitted to the requirements of a pocket edition."

THE ETCHED AND ENGRAVED WORK OF FRANK SHORT

Edited, with Appreciation, by E. F. STRANGE, 220 copies (numbered) for sale.

Arnold hand-made paper, demy 8vo, uncut, 2ls. net.

This work includes a full list of all Mr. Short's Engravings, &c., in their various "states," together with several unpublished RUSKIN letters.

MORNING POST.—"Mr. Strange has completed his task in a most satisfactory manner. A splendid memorial of Mr. Short's etched and engraved work... will be of great service to STUDENT and COLLECTOR."

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S NEW BOOKS.

MEMOIR OF THE LATE GENERAL THE RIGHT HON. SIR HENRY REDVERS BULLER, G.C.B. P.C. V.C., &c.
On MAY 11, with 3 Portraits and a Facsimile Letter. Demy 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

SIR REDVERS BULLER. By Lewis Butler.

Reprinted, with Additions, from the King's Royal Rifle Corps Chronicle.

READY MAY 18.

Small demy 8vo, 9s. net.

THE ENGLISH WOMAN. Studies in her Psychic Evolution.

By DAVID STAARS. Translated and Abridged by J. M. E. BROWNLOW.

READY MAY 18, large post 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

THE LIFE OF FRIEDRICH LIST. And Selections from his Writings.

Including the Outlines of American Political Economy.

By MARGARET E. HIRST, late Scholar of Newnham College, Cambridge. With an Introduction by F. W. HIRST, Editor of the Economist.

THE IMMORTALS' GREAT QUEST.

Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

By the Rev. J. W. BARLOW, Ex-Vice-Provost of Trinity College, Dublin.

Contemporary Review.—"An astonishingly clever book; clever in its conception of a Utopia, still more clever in the vividness with which this strange Hesperian world is brought before us."

With 8 Illustrations, large post 8vo, 6s. net.

LEAVES OF THE LOWER BRANCH:

THE ATTORNEY IN LIFE AND LETTERS.

By E. B. V. CHRISTIAN, Author of 'A Short History of Solicitors.'

Scotsman.—"Mr. Christian ransacks literature with no little learning.....He studies the attorney as the butt of humorists.....An interesting and diverting book."

READY MAY 18.

A MINSTREL IN THE SOUTH.

Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

By MILLICENT WEDMORE, Author of 'Essays and Verses.'

ON MAY 26.

Large post 8vo, 6s. net.

A THREE-FOOT STOOL. By E. Wright.

Experiences of ranching, with stories told over the fire, and some verses.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

THE FLYING MONTHS. By Frances M. Peard.

Times.—"A novel of incident and character.....A chronicle which always pleases, and keeps us alive with new scenes and new characters."

Liverpool Daily Post.—"One of the best novels of the year, with a beautifully happy ending."

Scotsman.—"Cleverly written and distinguished by some good descriptive work and characterization.....The plot is ingeniously worked out.....Miss Peard has achieved another success."

PRISCILLA OF THE 'GOOD INTENT.' By Halliwell Sutcliffe.

[Just published.]

DAVINA.

By FRANCES G. BURMESTER. [Just published.]

THE WOODEN HORSE.

By HUGH S. WALPOLE. [Ready May 11.]

RE-ISSUE OF THE

DICTIONARY OF NATIONAL BIOGRAPHY.

Edited by LESLIE STEPHEN and SIDNEY LEE. IN TWENTY-TWO VOLUMES.

Cloth, gilt top, 15s. net each; half-morocco, marbled edges, 21s. net each.

Vols. I.-XIV. now ready. Vol. XV. (OWENS-POCKRICH) ready May 10, and a Volume will be issued each month until the completion of the Edition in December, 1909.

Times.—"We all use the Dictionary, and few, if any of us could now do without it."

Country Life.—"This magnificent book of reference is absolutely essential to any well-equipped library."

* * Prospectus, with Specimen Pages, post free on application.

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO. 15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4255.

SATURDAY, MAY 15, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

Lectures.

ROYAL INSTITUTION OF GREAT BRITAIN, ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, W.

TUESDAY NEXT, May 18, at 3 o'clock, Prof. JOHN GARSTANG, M.A., FIRST OF TWO LECTURES on 'The Hittites.' 1. 'Monuments of Egypt and Asia Minor.' 2. 'Recent Discoveries in Asia Minor and Northern Syria.' Half-a-Guinea the Course.
SATURDAY, May 22, at 3 o'clock, W. H. R. RIVERS, Esq. M.D. F.R.S., FIRST OF TWO LECTURES on 'The Secret Societies of the Banks' Islands.' Half-a-Guinea.

THE BRITISH ACADEMY.

THE SCHWEICH LECTURES ON BIBLICAL ARCHAEOLOGY.

The Rev. R. H. KENNETT, B.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University of Cambridge, Fellow of Queens' College, Canon of Ely, will deliver THREE PUBLIC LECTURES ON FRIDAYS, May 28, June 4, and 11, at 5 o'clock, in THE THEATRE, BURLINGTON HOUSE, BURLINGTON GARDENS, W. (Vigo Street), on 'The Composition of the Book of Isaiah in the Light of Archaeology and History.'
The Lectures are open to the Public free, and without invitation.

BRITISH SCHOOL OF ARCHAEOLOGY IN EGYPT.

A FREE PUBLIC LECTURE on the PALACE OF APRIES, and other Discoveries, 1909, will be given by Prof. FLINDERS PETRIE, F.R.S., at UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, GOWER STREET, on MAY 20, at half-past 2 o'clock.

Societies.

ROYAL HISTORICAL SOCIETY. (Incorporated by Royal Charter.)

AN ORDINARY MEETING will be held at 7, SOUTH SQUARE, GRAY'S INN, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 20, at 5 p.m., when Prof. C. H. FIRTH, LL.D. V.P. R.Hist.S., will read a Paper on 'Later Tudor Ballads.'
H. E. MALDEN, Hon. Sec.

THE FOLK-LORE SOCIETY.—The NEXT MEETING of the SOCIETY will be held at 22, ALBEMARLE STREET, PICCADILLY, on WEDNESDAY, May 19, at 8 p.m., when a Paper, entitled 'Bantu and Arab Elements in Swahili Folk-Lore,' will be read by Miss A. WERNER.

F. A. MILNE, Secretary.

11, Old Square, Lincoln's Inn, W.C.

THE ROYAL GEOGRAPHICAL SOCIETY.

The ANNIVERSARY MEETING of the SOCIETY for the Election of President and Council, &c., will be held in the THEATRE, BURLINGTON GARDENS, on MONDAY, May 24, at 3 p.m., the PRESIDENT in the Chair. The ANNUAL DINNER of the Society will be held in the Evening of the Anniversary Meeting at the HOTEL METROPOLE, WHITEHALL ROOMS, WHITEHALL PLACE, S.W., at 7 p.m. for 7.30. Dinner charge 12. 18. Friends of Fellows are admissible to the Dinner. Applications for Tickets should be made to the CHIEF CLERK, 1, Savile Row, Burlington Gardens, not later than MAY 23.

C. F. CLOSE, } Hon.
D. A. JOHNSTON, } Secretaries.
J. S. KELTIE, Secretary.

1, Savile Row, Burlington Gardens, W.

Exhibitions.

EXHIBITION OF PICTURES by JOHN HOPPNER, R.A., in aid of King Edward's Hospital Fund.—MESSRS. PAUL & DOMINIC COINAGHI & CO. have the honour to announce that they have NOW ON VIEW a SELECTION OF PICTURES by JOHN HOPPNER, R.A.—Admission, including Catalogue, One Shilling.—13 and 14, Pall Mall East, S.W.

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S SPRING EXHIBITION of PORTRAITS and LANDSCAPES by EARLY BRITISH and FOREIGN MASTERS is NOW OPEN. SHEPHERD'S GALLERY, 27, King Street, St. James's.

Educational.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held on JUNE 23, 24, and 25 to FILL UP NOT LESS THAN SEVEN RESIDENTIAL and TWO NON-RESIDENTIAL SCHOLARSHIPS and also some EXHIBITIONS. For particulars apply by letter to THE BURSAR, Little Dean's Yard, S.W.

LEATHERHEAD COURT, SURREY. A London School in the Country for 45 Girls (Residents). Principal—Miss TULLIS.

The School aims at an intellectual training suited to the individual, physical development on safe lines, and the cultivation of generous thoughts and pleasant manners.

UNIVERSITY OF DURHAM.

The EXAMINATION for SCHOLARSHIPS in CLASSICS, MATHEMATICS, and THEOLOGY COMMENCES at 9 A.M. on WEDNESDAY, June 16. For particulars apply to THE SECRETARY OF EXAMINATIONS, University Offices, Durham.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE OF SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTORIALS in England or Abroad are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.
Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH, S.E.

F. W. AVELING, M.A. B.Sc.
Preparation for Universities and Professions.
Stress on Modern Languages and Science.

EDUCATION IN GERMANY.

Fräulein BLUTH, Kapellenstr. 58, Wiesbaden, late of St. George's High School, Edinburgh, and Fräulein L. BLUTH, late of St. Elphin's Clergy Daughter School, Warrington, RECEIVE a LIMITED NUMBER OF GIRLS for BOARD and EDUCATION. Good Music. Commodious House, with every modern comfort, latest Sanitary Arrangements, and large Garden. Terms 90l. Highest references to Parents of former Pupils: Mrs. Turner, 1, College Gardens, Dulwich Village, London, S.E.; Dr. J. Ritchie, 22, Charlotte Square, Edinburgh; G. Paul, Esq., Friarton Grove, Dundee; and others.
Fräulein Bluth will be in London, Edinburgh, and Dundee in June for personal interviews with Parents.

ROYAL AGRICULTURAL COLLEGE, CIRENCESTER. (Founded 1845. Reorganized 1908.)

Patron—H.M. KING EDWARD VII.
Chairman—LORD MORETON.
For Landowners, Land Agents, Surveyors, Agriculturists, Intending Colonists, &c.
FARMING AND COLONIAL BRANCH.
ESTATE MANAGEMENT AND FORESTRY BRANCH.
For Prospectus of Curriculum, Fees, Entrance Exhibitions, Scholarships, Diplomas, &c., apply to THE PRINCIPAL.
NEXT TERM BEGINS TUESDAY, May 18.

Situations Vacant.

UNIVERSITY OF ST. ANDREWS.

EXAMINERS.

The UNIVERSITY COURT of the UNIVERSITY of ST. ANDREWS invites applications for the appointments of ADDITIONAL EXAMINERS for GRADUATION in the following Subjects:—

FACULTY OF MEDICINE.—PATHOLOGY.
FACULTY OF ARTS.—(a) MENTAL PHILOSOPHY (Logic and Metaphysics and Moral Philosophy). (b) FRENCH.
FACULTIES OF MEDICINE AND SCIENCE.—PHYSIOLOGY.
FACULTIES OF ARTS, SCIENCE, AND MEDICINE.—CHEMISTRY.

The Persons to be appointed to these Examinerships will hold Office for a period of Three Years from JANUARY 1, 1910, except in the case of the French Examinership, where the appointment (being interim) runs from the date of appointment to December 31, 1910.

Applications are also invited for the appointment of an ADDITIONAL EXAMINER for the PRELIMINARY EXAMINATIONS AND BURSARY COMPETITION in MODERN LANGUAGES (French and German). The Person appointed to the last-mentioned Examinership will hold Office for One Year from FEBRUARY 1, 1910, and will act as a Representative of the University on the Joint Board of Examiners of the Scottish Universities. The appointment may be renewed for a Second Year.

Applications, with twenty copies of Testimonials (printed or type-written), must be lodged, on or before SATURDAY, June 19, 1909, with the undersigned, from whom further information regarding the duties and emoluments of the vacant Examinerships may be obtained.

ANDREW BENNETT, Secretary and Registrar.
The University, St. Andrews, April 28, 1909.

THE HIGH SCHOOL OF GLASGOW.—

RECTOR.—The SCHOOL BOARD of GLASGOW invite applications for the position of RECTOR. Applicants should be Graduates, with Honours, of a University in the United Kingdom, and must not exceed 50 years of age. Salary from 650l. to 750l., according to qualifications and experience.—Applications, with twenty copies of Testimonials, must be lodged with the undersigned on or before FRIDAY, May 21. Canvassing, direct or indirect, will disqualify.—J. CLARK, Clerk, School Board Offices, 129, Bath Street, Glasgow.

HABERDASHERS' ASKE'S SCHOOLS.

The SCHOOL GOVERNORS of the HABERDASHERS' ASKE'S HAMPTHEAD BOYS' SCHOOL invite applications for the post of HEAD MASTER, to take Office in SEPTEMBER, 1909. He must be a Graduate of some University within the British Empire. The Salary offered is about 700l. per annum.

No Residence provided.
Arrangements for Pension will be made.
Personal canvassing will disqualify.
Applications must be sent on or before SATURDAY, June 5, 1909.
Forms of Application, and further particulars, can be obtained from R. J. ELLIS,
Aske's Hatcham School, Jerningham Road,
New Cross, S.E.

HEAD MASTER WANTED.

The GOVERNORS of the DRAX SCHOOLS require HEAD MASTER for Read's School, Drax, near Selby, Yorkshire. Must be over 25 and under 45, and Graduate of some University in the United Kingdom. Salary 100l. per annum and capitation payment of 3l. a head in addition to charges for Boarders. New buildings erected to accommodate about 45 Boarders. Very good Residence provided. Healthy country place; railway station. Duties to commence with SEPTEMBER Term. Applications and copies of two Testimonials to be sent prior to MAY 22 to E. & T. CLARK, Solicitors.
Snaith, Yorkshire.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—FORTH-

COMING EXAMINATION.—ASSISTANT in the ROYAL OBSERVATORY, EDINBURGH (21-30), MAY 27. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received. They must be made on Forms to be obtained, with particulars, from THE SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, Burlington Gardens, London, W.

CIVIL SERVICE COMMISSION.—FORTH-

COMING EXAMINATION. JUNIOR APPOINTMENT in ADMIRALTY; EXAMINER, EXCHEQUER and AUDIT DEPARTMENT; and ASSISTANT SURVEYORSHIPS OF TAXES (18-19). JUNE 10. The date specified is the latest at which applications can be received.—They must be made on Forms to be obtained, with particulars, from THE SECRETARY, Civil Service Commission, Burlington Gardens, London, W.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD.

APPOINTMENT OF ASSISTANT LECTURER IN HISTORY. The COUNCIL are about to appoint an ASSISTANT LECTURER in HISTORY.

Applications must be sent in by May 29. Further particulars may be obtained from W. M. GIBBONS, Registrar.

CITY OF LIVERPOOL.

EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

LIVERPOOL COLLEGIATE SCHOOL, SHAW STREET.

The COMMITTEE invite applications for the post of SENIOR MATHEMATICAL MASTER at the above SCHOOL.

High Academic qualifications and experience in teaching are essential, and preference will be given to Candidates who are qualified to undertake the Mathematical Work in connexion with applied Mechanical Science.

Salary to be at the rate of 250l. per annum.
For further particulars and Forms of Application apply to JAMES G. LEGGE, Director of Education, 14, Sir Thomas Street, Liverpool, with whom applications must be lodged not later than WEDNESDAY, May 26, 1909.

EDWARD R. PICKMERE,
Clerk to the Local Education Authority.

COUNTY OF LONDON.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the post of ASSISTANT MASTER specially qualified in Mathematics and English at the HACKNEY DOWNS SCHOOL (formerly the Grocers Company's School). The School is a first-grade Secondary School. The successful Applicant will be required to commence work in SEPTEMBER NEXT. The Salary attaching to the post is 150l. a year, rising by annual increments of 10l., subject to satisfactory service, to a maximum of 300l.

Applications should be made on Form H. 40, to be obtained, together with particulars of the appointment, from the EDUCATION OFFICER, London County Council, Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C., to whom they must be returned not later than 11 A.M. on MONDAY, June 7, 1909, accompanied by copies of three Testimonials of recent date. All communications on the subject must be endorsed "H.4." and must be accompanied by a stamped addressed foolscap envelope. Canvassing, either directly or indirectly will be held to be a disqualification for employment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.
Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C.
May 12, 1909.

UNIVERSITY OF MANCHESTER.

HALL OF RESIDENCE FOR WOMEN STUDENTS,
ASHBURN HOUSE, MANCHESTER.

The COUNCIL invites applications for the temporary post of ASSISTANT WARDEN for the Session 1909-10. Salary 75l., with Board and Residence. Apply before MAY 22 to the Hon. Sec., Mrs. H. CARPENTER, 11, Oak Road, Withington, Manchester. University Graduate preferred.

THE HIGHER EDUCATION BOARD OF THE EASTERN DISTRICT (ISLE OF MAN).

ART MASTER WANTED for the DOUGLAS SECONDARY SCHOOL, to commence duties immediately after the Summer Vacation in SEPTEMBER NEXT.

Minimum Salary, 125l. per annum.
Additional Salary may be paid for Work in connexion with Evening Classes in Art which may be established by the Board.

Art Master's Certificate or equivalent qualification essential.
Applications, stating age, address, and full particulars as to training and experience, accompanied by copies of three Testimonials, to be forwarded to the undersigned on or before MAY 28, 1909.

T. R. LEWIN, Clerk of the Board.
Town Hall, Douglas.

COVENTRY EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

MUNICIPAL SCHOOL OF ART.

The COMMITTEE invite applications for the post of ASSISTANT MISTRESS of the COVENTRY MUNICIPAL SCHOOL OF ART.

Commencing Salary 85l. per annum.
The Lady appointed must have had experience in a School of Art and be prepared to assume the duties of her Office early in SEPTEMBER NEXT. She must be qualified to teach Art Needlework.

Particulars of the duties and conditions of the appointment may be obtained from the undersigned, to whom applications, on the special forms provided for the purpose, must be returned not later than SATURDAY, June 5, 1909.

Canvassing, directly or indirectly, will be considered a disqualification.

FREDK. HORNER, Secretary
Education Office, Coventry, May 10, 1909.

GIRLS' COLLEGIATE SCHOOL, PIETERMARITZBURG, NATAL.

WANTED, to begin work on AUGUST 1, a SIXTH FORM MISTRESS, with Special Subjects, Mathematics and Botany, for Cape Matriculation Examination. Salary 110l., 120l., and 130l., for three successive years, with Board and Residence. Holidays included if desired. Passage out paid. The School is a Boarding and Day School under a Committee.

Apply, by letter, with copies of Testimonials (which will be returned after the appointment is made), names of personal Referees and full particulars as to age, religious denomination, qualifications, and experience to Mrs. STEWART, care of Miss Walker, St. George's Training College, 5, Melville Street, Edinburgh.

THE

AUTOTYPE COMPANY,

74, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON.

MONOCHROME COPIES

By the PERMANENT AUTOTYPE CARBON PROCESS OF PICTURES BY OLD MASTERS from the Principal Collections of Note.

NUMEROUS EXAMPLES OF WORKS BY MODERN ARTISTS.

THE AUTOTYPE COMPANY'S PROCESSES OF PERMANENT PHOTOGRAPHIC REPRODUCTIONS are extensively employed by the Trustees of the British Museum, the Local Government Board, many of the Learned Societies, and leading Publishers.

Copies of Coins, Seals, Medals, MSS., Drawings, Engravings, Art Objects, Microscopic Works, &c.

For Limited Editions the Autotype Processes of Book Illustrations are cheaper than any existing methods of Block Reproductions, and yield infinitely superior results.

Inquiries are invited from those requiring Book Illustrations of the very highest quality.

SPECIMENS AND ESTIMATES SUBMITTED.

THE AUTOTYPE FINE ART GALLERY,
74, NEW OXFORD STREET, LONDON, W.C.

Open free daily, 10 to 6.

SCHOLASTIC.—SEPT. VACANCIES.—(a) English, History, Latin, 1207. res., or 1607. non-res., rising to 1707. and 2007. resp. (b) Classics to Matric., and Games. Continental School. Excellent opportunity for learning French practically. 607. res. Immediate application desired. Many other Sept. vacancies.—BIVER & CO., 122, Regent Street, W. (Est. 1854.)

LECTURERS who are qualified to give popular and instructive LECTURES to SCHOOL AUDIENCES on Literary, Scientific, and other Subjects should apply to Messrs. TRUMAN & KNIGHTLEY, Ltd., Educational Agents, 158-162, Oxford Street, London, W.

Situations Wanted.

TO PUBLISHERS.—ART EDITOR of extremely successful Publications could undertake MANAGEMENT of the ART DEPARTMENT of a PUBLISHING HOUSE or of a Serial or Magazine.—K., care of Peter Harper, 29, New Bridge Street, E.C.

TO PUBLISHERS.—ADVERTISER seeks RE-ENGAGEMENT. Experienced in every Branch. Well versed in Current, Standard, and Classical Literature, Production, Distribution, Advertising, Travelling, Town and Country, &c.—NEMO, Box 1593, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

WANTED, the TEMPORARY or PERMANENT CHARGE of a LIBRARY by a Member of the Library Association, having two years' experience in various departments of work with an eminent Bibliographer. Bibliographical Catalogues and Museum Work undertaken. Also the making of a Library, if wanted, and some Secretarial Work. Highest recommendations from various sources.—M. D., 13, Clavering Avenue, Barnes.

Miscellaneous.

LITERARY TRANSLATIONS FROM GERMAN AND FRENCH.—Good work guaranteed.—F. GILLON, Schoolhouse, Amisfield, Dumfries, Scotland.

TRANSLATIONS, FRENCH and SPANISH.—Careful, accurate work guaranteed. Moderate Terms.—M. B., 53, Merton Hall Road, Wimbledon, S.W.

REGINALD GLENCROSS, M.A. LL.B. Cantab., undertakes GENEALOGICAL and RESEARCH WORK. Three years' experience in Ulster's Office, Dublin. Highest references. Terms moderate.—3, Challoner Street, West Kensington.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

PRIVATE SOCIAL TOURS FOR GENTLE WOMEN.—AUSTRIA, JUNE 17. Including Vienna, Budapest, the Danube, and beautiful Salzkammergut District. Succeeding Tours—Switzerland, Holland, Italy. References exchanged. Programmes from Miss BISHOP, 27, St. George's Road, Kilburn, London.

EXTENSIVE COLLECTION OF POST-ROMAN PHOTOGRAPHS. Plans and Views, Secular and Ecclesiastical, TO BE DISPOSED OF.—ARCHITECT, Deacon's, Leadenhall Street, City.

LITERARY, SCIENTIFIC, and other SELECT SOCIETIES can obtain exceptionally convenient ROOMS in a handsome Building in main thoroughfare (W.C. District) close to Two Tubes, &c., with use of well-furnished Committee Room and large Council Chamber; light refreshments can also be provided on the Premises. A Royal and other Societies have permanent homes in the Building.—Apply HENRY H. COLLIER & MADGE, Estate Agents, 69, Fleet Street, E.C.

THE DAUGHTER of a well-known Literary Man is desirous of meeting with a LADY and GENTLEMAN to SHARE her HOUSE; or would take boarders. Rooms Furnished or Unfurnished. The House is situated on South Norwood Hill, five minutes from Norwood Junction Station, close to the Stanley Halla (where Concerts, Lectures, &c., are continually given), near the Public Library, and within a walk of the Crystal Palace, or One Station from it. Norwood is regarded as one of the healthiest places round London, and was at one time a well-known health resort. A good train service to London Bridge and Victoria.—Address C. M., Box 1562, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Type-Writers, &c.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING 9d. per 1,000 words; Carbons 3d. French and German Type-writing 1s. per 1,000. Translations. Duplicating 3s. 100 Copies (quarter), 15s. per 1,000. Best work, accuracy, and promptitude.—G. WALKER, 14, Park Road, New Cross, S.E.

TYPE-WRITING, 9d. per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272, Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street, Adelphi, W.C.

TYPE-WRITING of EVERY DESCRIPTION by EXPERT, 8d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000 words.—Accuracy and prompt return guaranteed. Reliable References.—NORA DICKINSON, 1, Sackville Gardens, Ilford.

TYPE-WRITING of EVERY DESCRIPTION carefully and promptly executed at home (Remington, Brief), 7d. per 1,000. Cambridge Local.—Miss N. McFARLANE, 11, Palmeira Avenue, Westcliff, Essex.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, 24, Paternoster Row.

Sales by Auction.

The valuable Collection of English Coins, the Property of the late F. G. HILTON PRICE, Esq.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 17, and Two Following Days, at 1 o'clock precisely, the important and valuable COLLECTION of ENGLISH COINS in Gold and Silver, the Property of the late F. G. HILTON PRICE, Esq., Director of the Royal Society of Antiquaries, Fellow of the Royal Numismatic Society, &c. To which is added a small COLLECTION of ENGLISH and FOREIGN MEDALS, the Property of a GENTLEMAN.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 20, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, VALUABLE BOOKS and ILLUMINATED and other MANUSCRIPTS, comprising Selections from the Libraries of the late VISCOUNT BRIDPORT, the late C. L. HIGGINS, Esq. (of Turvey Abbey, Beds), L. B. BARRETT, Esq. (of Steventon, Berks), and others, comprising a fine Series of Books Bound by Clovis Eve—a unique Caxton Volume, containing five of his Westminster productions in the Original Binding—Caxton's Ryal Book, and productions of other Early English Printers—Illuminated Horæ and other Early Manuscripts—Early Printed Service Books—rare Works relating to America—an important Series of Nelson Documents (1795-1805)—and numerous other valuable items.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 20, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, including the LIBRARY of the late Mrs. BATHO, removed from Eastbourne, and other Properties, comprising Library Sets of Standard Works—Favourite Editions of the Poets, &c., in Sets, in remarkably fine state—Valuable First Editions—Collection of Sixteenth and Seventeenth Century Works and Plays in fine bindings—Hakluyt Society's Publications, 46 vols.—County Histories—Curtis's Flora Londonensis—Stuart and Revett's Antiquities of Athens—Lord Burleigh's Copy of Erasmus's Testament—Original Water-Colour Drawings by Philz—Autograph Letters and Documents, &c.

STEVENS'S AUCTION ROOMS. Established 1760.

TUESDAY, May 18, at half-past 12 o'clock.

CARVED ORIENTAL FURNITURE—Porcelains—Bronzes—Ivories—Indian Brass Work—Antique Watches—Japanese Carvings—Colour Prints—Bronzes and Curios from Benin, New Caledonia and the Hebrides and Miscellaneous Property.

Mr. J. C. STEVENS will OFFER the above Property by AUCTION at his Rooms, 53, King Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

On view day prior 10 to 4, and morning of Sale. Catalogues on application.

Law Books—Mahogany Bookcases—Engravings, &c.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 19, at 1 o'clock, LAW BOOKS, including the Law Reports in all the Courts from 1865 to 1875, 96 vols.—a Set of the Law Journal Reports, from 1869 to 1909, 107 vols., half roan, &c., and another Series from 1853 to 1880, 74 vols.—The Law Times Journal and Reports, 1850-1880—Text-Books, &c.—also several elegant Mahogany and Walnut Glazed Bookcases—a Winged Mahogany Bookcase, fitted with Sliding Drawers—Useful Shelving, &c.—Framed Engravings and Oil Paintings.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Valuable Miscellaneous Books.

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 20, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE MISCELLANEOUS BOOKS, comprising Pyne's Royal Residences, 3 vols., Jenkins's Martial Achievements, Orme's Military and Naval Anecdotes, Ackermann's Oxford University, 2 vols., and other rare Books with Coloured Plates—Hasted's History of Kent, Best Edition, 4 vols.—a Set of the Archaeologia Cantiana, 28 vols., 1853-1906—Smith's Catalogue Raisonné, 9 vols.—Grote's Greece, Best Edition, 12 vols.—Pickering's Aldine Poets, 31 vols. (including the Chaucer), and other Sets in calf and morocco bindings—Wordsworth's Poems, First Collected Edition, 2 vols.—Egan's Life in London, 1821—Lever's Day's Ride, 2 vols., 1863—Carlyle's French Revolution, 3 vols., and other First Editions—The Gadshill Edition of Dickens, 34 vols.—Standard Works in Natural History, &c.

Catalogues on application.

Valuable and choice Books from the Library of the late Sir MAURICE HOLZMANN, K.C.B. K.C.V.O. (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 26, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE BOOKS from the LIBRARY of the late Sir MAURICE HOLZMANN, K.C.B. K.C.V.O., formerly Keeper of the Records of the Duchy of Cornwall (removed from St. James's Palace, and sold by order of the Executors under the will of the late Owner), comprising a remarkable and comprehensive COLLECTION of ALPINE and MOUNTAINEERING BOOKS, including a Set of the Alpine Journal, 24 vols., 1864-1909—The Writings of Eminent British Climbers in the Alps, the Himalayas, and other parts of the World—The Original Folio Editions of Lory's Voyage Pittoresque de l'Oberland Bernois, Large Paper, and Souvenirs de la Suisse, with Coloured Plates—Early and Scarce Books relating to Switzerland—Jahrbuch des Schweizer Club, 44 vols., 1864-1908—L'Etude des Glaciers, par Dollfus-Ausset, 10 vols., and many other Works on the Alps and Switzerland, in German and French—Scarce Pamphlets, &c.—also a few BOOKS on ART, including the First Edition of Crowe and Cavallasse's History of Painting, 5 vols., the whole in excellent condition, and many in Bindings by Riviere—a Collection of Reproductions from the Old Masters, Framed and Glazed.

Catalogues on application.

The Valuable Modern Library of the late J. H. RADFORD, Esq. (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 27, at 1 o'clock, the VALUABLE LIBRARY of MODERN BOOKS of the late J. H. RADFORD, Esq., removed from Uppaton, Buckland Monachorum, near Yelverton, S. Devon (by order of the Executors), comprising a Set of the Edinburgh Stevenson, with the Life and Letters, 33 vols.—Modern Poetry and Belles-Lettres—First Editions of George Eliot, Meredith, Hardy, Morris, Swinburne, Oscar Wilde, and others—Books illustrated by Aubrey Beardsley—Art Monographs—a Set of the Studio, and other Fine-Art Periodicals—the Kelmscott Press Golden Legend, 13 vols.—Claude's Liber Veritatis, 3 vols.—Hayley's Life of Romney—Books with Woodcuts by Bewick—a few Engravings by Cousins after Lawrence and others.

Catalogues on application.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE, MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, May 17, and TUESDAY, May 18, the COLLECTION of ETCHINGS and ENGRAVINGS of the late Sir JOHN CHARLES DAY.

On WEDNESDAY, May 19, the LAUDERDALE COLLECTION of OLD FRENCH and ENGLISH SNUFF BOXES.

On THURSDAY, May 20, OLD BEAUVAIS and BRUSSELS TAPESTRY, the Property of a RUSSIAN GENTLEMAN of TITLE, and fine Porcelain and Furniture from various sources.

On FRIDAY, May 21, the COLLECTION of highly-important PICTURES of E. H. CUTHBERTSON, Esq., who is leaving his residence, Bushey House, Bushey, Herts.

Magazines, &c.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine Street, London, W.C., May 15, contains:—

- ARCHITECTURE AT THE PARIS SALON.
- THE NEW CHARTER OF THE INSTITUTE OF ARCHITECTS.
- ARCHITECTURAL ASSOCIATION: THE ANNUAL DINNER.
- REPORT OF THE ROAD CONFERENCE.
- THE QUANTITY SURVEYORS' ASSOCIATION.
- CORRESPONDENCE ON REGISTRATION OF ARCHITECTS.
- REVIEWS OF BOOKS (Monthly Supplement).
- ILLUSTRATIONS:
 - LATE RENAISSANCE CHURCHES OF LONDON.—V. ST. GILES-IN-THE-FIELDS;
 - THE LIBRARY, UNIVERSITY COLLEGE OF SOUTH WALES;
 - REBUILDING OF NETHER SWELL MANOR, GLOUCESTERSHIRE;
 - SOME ARCHITECTURAL EXHIBITS AT THE PARIS SALON.

From Offices as above (4d., by post 4½d.), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all News-agents.

[For Catalogues and Printers see p. 598.]

Shipping.PLEASURE CRUISES.

From MARSEILLES.

Rail and Steamship Connexions from London.

No. 4.—MAY 21 to JUNE 12.

NAPLES, ALGIERS, LISBON AND LONDON.

Fares from 20 guineas.

SPITZBERGEN.

From LONDON and LEITH.

No. 5.—JULY 1 to JULY 27.

SPITZBERGEN, NORWAY, &c.

Fares from 30 guineas.

NORWAY.

From LONDON and LEITH.

No. 6.—JULY 29 to AUGUST 11.

No. 7.—AUGUST 13 to AUGUST 26.

THE NORWEGIAN FJORDS,

BY Fares from 12 Guineas.

P. & O. CRUISING YACHT "VECTIS."

THE NEW PENCARBON—LETTERS COPIED
WHILE WRITING. Ordinary Pen, Ink, and Paper are used.
1s. 6d. per Dozen Sheets, 8 in. by 10 in.—HACON & GRINAWAY,
Queen Street, Cardiff.

Insurance Companies.

HOLIDAY SEASON.

ACCIDENTS OF ALL KINDS, SICKNESS,
EMPLOYERS' LIABILITY, BURGLARY, AND

FIDELITY GUARANTEE RISKS

INSURED AGAINST BY THE

RAILWAY PASSENGERS' ASSURANCE CO.

Capital (fully subscribed), £1,000,000. Claims paid, £5,600,000.

64, CORNHILL, LONDON.

A. VIAN, Secretary.

EVERY MAN

Whose estate will be liable for duty should read

A POPULAR FALLACY.

Sent post free on application to the

NATIONAL PROVIDENT

INSTITUTION

FOR MUTUAL LIFE ASSURANCE.

48 Gracechurch Street, London.

HIGHEST AWARDS.

CORK, 1832. LIVERPOOL, 1838. PARIS, 1886. ADELAIDE, 1837.

PARIS, 1839. CHICAGO, 1893. PARIS, 1900. ST. LOUIS, 1904.

FRANCO-BRITISH, 1903.

OLD BUSHMILLS.

Have you tried this—the Prize-Winning Whisky?

From all Wine Merchants.

Address of nearest Agent sent on application.

"OLD BUSHMILLS" DISTILLERY CO., LTD.,
20, Mark Lane, E.C.

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESSTHE CAMBRIDGE HISTORY OF ENGLISH LITERATURE.

Edited by A. W. Ward, Litt.D., F.B.A., Master of Peterhouse, and A. R. Waller, M.A.
Vol. III. Renascence and Reformation.

Royal 8vo
buckram
9s net
half-morocco
15s net

"This rich composite history of English literature is a real service to English scholarship. It presents us with the first adequate treatment of many neglected parts of our literary history, and it throws new light on many old themes.....The editors deserve all thanks, and the critic who feels inclined to quarrel with this point or that in their methods or conclusions will be humiliated and silenced when he remembers that this is the first attempt by a body of scholars to tell the story of our literature on a scale worthy of its greatness"—Saturday Review.

DARWIN AND MODERN SCIENCE. Essays in commemoration of the centenary of the birth of Charles Darwin and of the fiftieth anniversary of the publication of 'The Origin of Species.' Edited by A. C. Seward, Professor of Botany in the University of Cambridge.

Royal 8vo
With 2 portraits and 3 plates
18s net

At the suggestion of the Cambridge Philosophical Society, the Syndics of the University Press decided in March 1908 to arrange for the publication of these Essays. The authors were asked to address themselves primarily to the educated layman rather than to the expert, and it was hoped that the publication of the essays would serve the double purpose of illustrating the far-reaching influence of Darwin's work on the progress of knowledge, and the present attitude of original investigators and thinkers towards the views embodied in Darwin's works. Some of the authors have more especially concerned themselves with the results achieved by Darwin's own work, while others pass in review the progress of research on lines which, though unknown or but little followed in his day, are the direct outcome of his work.

MENDEL'S PRINCIPLES OF HEREDITY. By W. Bateson,

M.A., F.R.S., V.M.H., Professor of Biology in the University of Cambridge.

Royal 8vo
3 portraits
6 coloured plates
and 33 figures
12s net

"Prof. Bateson's treatise on 'Mendel's Principles of Heredity' will rank as one of the most important biological publications of the year, for it constitutes the only authoritative work that aims at something approaching a comprehensive and complete outline of the most absorbing problem of modern biology."—Standard.

"Mendel's work has been too much neglected; and any book which serves to confirm its enduring value and extend the application of its principles deserves a welcome from all earnest students of science. Prof. Bateson's exposition of Mendelism, a work everywhere well founded in original researches upon the lines laid down by the great Austrian naturalist, is such a book. It gives a succinct, yet full, account of discoveries in regard to heredity made by the application of Mendel's methods of research."—Scotsman.

A GRAMMAR OF THE OLD TESTAMENT IN GREEK

ACCORDING TO THE SEPTUAGINT. By H. St. John Thackeray, M.A.

Vol. 1. INTRODUCTION, ORTHOGRAPHY, AND ACCIDENCE.

Crown 8vo
8s net

The Septuagint, in view both of the period which it covers and the variety of its styles, ranging from the non-literary vernacular to the artificial Atticistic, affords the most promising ground for the investigation of the peculiarities of the Hellenistic or "common" language. It has been the aim of the author to produce a complete Grammar, the first portion of which is here published.

HORAE SEMITICAE No. VIII. Codex Climaci Rescriptus.

Fragments of Sixth Century Palestinian Syriac Texts of the Gospels, of the Acts of the Apostles, and of St. Paul's Epistles. Also fragments of an Early Palestinian Lectionary of the Old Testament, &c. Transcribed and edited by Agnes Smith Lewis, M.R.A.S., Hon. D.D., LL.D., Ph.D.

Crown 4to with 7 facsimiles
10s 6d net

The present volume does something towards filling up a gap in Christian Aramaic literature. The version of the New Testament which it represents was that adopted by the Orthodox, or Malkite party, which separated from the great Monophysite Church at the Council of Chalcedon in A.D. 451. The underscript of a portion of the MS. is Palestinian Syriac, which expert opinion assigns decidedly to the sixth century, and it is considered to be the finest specimen extant.

LATIN AND ENGLISH IDIOM. An Object Lesson from Livy's

Preface. By H. Darnley Naylor, M.A., Trinity College, Cambridge, Professor of Classics in the University of Adelaide.

Crown 8vo
2s

"Mr. Naylor... has produced a very useful little book, which should be in the hands alike of teachers and of learners. In parallel columns he sets forth the differences between Livy's idiom and ours, and his notes on the differences are such as will attract attention."—Guardian.

THE TEACHING OF MODERN FOREIGN LANGUAGES AND

THE TRAINING OF TEACHERS. By Karl Breul, Litt.D., Ph.D., Cambridge University Reader in Germanic. Fourth edition, revised and enlarged.

Crown 8vo
2s 6d net

Although only a short space of time has elapsed since the publication of the third edition of this book, the necessity for the preparation of a fourth edition has already arisen and this gratifying fact has encouraged the author to revise it again very carefully and to increase it not inconsiderably, in the hope that it may once more prove useful to many students and teachers.

NOTES AND DOCUMENTS RELATING TO WESTMINSTER ABBEY.

No. 1. The Manuscripts of Westminster Abbey. By J. Armitage Robinson, D.D., Dean of Westminster, and M. R. James, Litt.D.

No. II. Flete's History of Westminster Abbey. Edited by J. Armitage Robinson, D.D.

Royal 8vo
5s net each

These two volumes are the first of a series of studies bearing on the history of Westminster Abbey. The first volume, as its title indicates, deals with the manuscripts of the Abbey, and the second is devoted to the work of John Flete, a monk of the house from 1420 to 1465, the only medieval writer who attempted a history of the Abbey.

London, Fetter Lane: CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS: C. F. Clay, Manager

MACMILLAN'S LIST.

Oxford Lectures on Poetry.

By A. C. BRADLEY, LL.D. Litt.D., formerly Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford. 8vo, 10s. net. [Tuesday.]

Greek Architecture.

By ALLAN MARQUAND, Ph.D. L.H.D., Professor of Art and Archaeology in Princeton University. Illustrated. Extra crown 8vo, 10s. net. [Handbooks of Archaeology and Antiquities.]

Artemis to Actæon, and other Verse.

By EDITH WHARTON, Author of 'The House of Mirth,' &c. Extra crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

The Poems and Sonnets of Louise Chandler Moulton.

Comprising 'Swallow Flights,' 'In the Garden of Dreams,' 'At the Wind's Will,' &c. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

THE WHITE SISTER

A Story of Rome.

By the late F. MARION CRAWFORD.

Gervase.

By MABEL DEARMER, Author of 'The Alien Sisters,' &c. Crown 8vo, 6s.

NEW BOOK BY THE WRITER OF 'CONFESSION MEDICI.'

Faith and Works of Christian Science.

Extra crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

The Oldest English Epic.

BEOWULF, FINNSBURG, WALDERE, DEOR, WIDSITH, and the German HILDEBRAND. Translated in the Original Metres with Introductions and Notes by FRANCIS B. GUMMERE. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

THE GLOBE LIBRARY.

Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. each. The Volumes marked * are also issued in green leather limp, full gilt backs and gilt edges, 5s. net each.

- *BOSWELL'S LIFE OF JOHNSON.
- *THE POETICAL WORKS AND LETTERS OF ROBERT BURNS.
- *WORKS OF GEOFFREY CHAUCER.
- *COWPER'S POETICAL WORKS.
- ROBINSON CRUSOE.
- *DRYDEN'S POETICAL WORKS.
- *THE DIARY OF JOHN EVELYN. With Introduction and Notes by AUSTIN DOBSON.
- THE CHRONICLES OF FROISSART.
- *GOLDSMITH'S MISCELLANEOUS WORKS.
- HORACE'S WORKS. Rendered into English.
- *THE POETICAL WORKS OF JOHN KEATS.
- MORTE D'ARTHUR.
- *MILTON'S POETICAL WORKS.
- *PEPYS'S DIARY.
- *POPE'S POETICAL WORKS.
- *THE POETICAL WORKS OF SCOTT.
- *THE COMPLETE WORKS OF WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE.
- *SPENSER'S COMPLETE WORKS.
- *THE POETICAL WORKS OF ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON. Also in full gilt, gilt top, crown 8vo, 4s. 6d.
- VIRGIL'S WORKS. Rendered into English.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

"By far the most scholarly

ONE VOLUME BIBLE DICTIONARY

yet produced in English-speaking countries, perhaps it may be said in the world, is that edited by

DR. JAMES HASTINGS.

It is a very fine achievement, worthy to stand beside his larger Dictionaries."—CHRISTIAN WORLD.

One Thousand Pages, with Maps, &c.

In cloth binding 20s. net.
In half-leather 25s. net.
Complete Prospectus free.

New Vol. "International Theological Library."

THE CHRISTIAN DOCTRINE OF GOD.

By Prof. W. NEWTON CLARKE, D.D. (Author of 'An Outline of Christian Theology,' now in its Seventeenth Edition). 10s. 6d.

THE BACKGROUND OF THE GOSPELS;

Or, Judaism in the Period between the Old and New Testaments.

By W. FAIRWEATHER, D.D., Kirkcaldy. 8s. net.

THE PAULINE EPISTLES.

By ROBERT SCOTT, D.D., Bombay. New Vol. "The Literature of the New Testament" Series. 6s. net.

OUTLINES OF INTRODUCTION TO THE HEBREW BIBLE.

By A. S. GEDEN, D.D., Wesleyan College, Richmond. With Illustrations. 8s. 6d. net.

THE TESTS OF LIFE:

A Study of the First Epistle of St. John.

By Rev. ROBERT LAW, B.D., Edinburgh. The Kerr Lectures. 7s. 6d. net.

BIBLICAL CRITICISM AND MODERN THOUGHT;

Or, the Place of the Old Testament Documents in the Life of To-Day.

By Prof. W. G. JORDAN, D.D., Queen's University, Canada. 7s. 6d. net.

THE GREEK & EASTERN CHURCHES.

By Principal W. F. ADENEY, D.D., Manchester. "International Theological Library." 12s.

A HANDBOOK OF CHRISTIAN ETHICS.

By Prof. J. CLARK MURRAY, LL.D., Montreal. 6s. net.

THE BIBLE OF NATURE.

By Prof. J. ARTHUR THOMSON, M.A., University of Aberdeen. 4s. 6d. net.

THE RELIGIOUS TEACHERS OF GREECE.

Gifford Lectures. By the late JAMES ADAM, Litt.D., Cambridge. Edited, with a Memoir, by his Wife, ADELA MARION ADAM. 10s. 6d. net.

THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOD

And its Historical Development.

By Prof. H. M. GWATKIN, D.D., Cambridge. Second Edition. 2 vols. 12s. net.

THE GOSPEL HISTORY AND ITS TRANSMISSION.

By Prof. F. C. BURKITT, D.D., Cambridge. Second Edition. 6s. net.

THE BIBLE: its Origin and Nature.

By the late Principal MARCUS DODS, D.D., Edinburgh. 4s. 6d. net.

HASTINGS'

ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF RELIGION & ETHICS

"In the best sense of the term this is a weighty piece of work, and one that demands serious consideration from whatever aspect it may be approached. It is a work that for scholarship and all-round reliability will take its place among standard works of the kind."—Daily Chronicle.

VOL. I. NOW READY.

In cloth binding 28s. net.
In half-morocco 34s. net.

Each Volume will be issued in Twelve Monthly Parts at 2s. 6d. net each. Parts 1-7 of Vol. I. ready.

Full Prospectus of this great work free.

T. & T. CLARK, 38, George St., Edinburgh.
14, Paternoster Sq., London.
London Agents: SIMPKIN, HAMILTON & CO., LTD.

Oxford University Press.

THE SIKH RELIGION:

its Gurus, Sacred Writings, and Authors. By M. A. MACAULIFFE. 6 volumes, 8vo, 3l. 3s. net. [Immediately.]

COMPLETION OF THE WORK.

THE IMPERIAL GAZETTEER OF INDIA.

NEW EDITION.—In 26 vols. 8vo, cloth, 5l. net; morocco back, 6l. 6s. net.

The Four Volumes of 'THE INDIAN EMPIRE' separately, 6s. net each in cloth, or 7s. 6d. net with morocco back; the Atlas separately, 15s. net in cloth, or 17s. 6d. net with morocco back.

Each volume contains a Map of India specially prepared for this Edition.

Standard.—"A work of which British geography may justly be proud.....The book gains much by its excellent indexes."

THE ENGLISH FACTORIES IN INDIA.

By W. FOSTER. 8vo. (Published under the patronage of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council.) Vol. III., 1624-1629, 12s. 6d. net.

Previously published:—Vol. I., 1618-1621, 12s. 6d. net. Vol. II., 1622-1623, 12s. 6d. net.

HISTORICAL PORTRAITS.

RICHARD II. TO HENRY WRIOTHESLEY, 1400-1600. THE

LIVES by C. R. L. FLETCHER. THE PORTRAITS chosen by EMERY WALKER. With an Introduction on the History of Portraiture in England. With 103 Portraits, crown 4to, 8s. 6d. net. The Portraits separately, in envelope, 4s. 6d. net.

Spectator.—"In every way a most interesting book."

THE ORIGINS OF CHRISTIANITY.

By the late C. BIGG. Edited by T. B. STRONG. 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

PLATO'S DOCTRINE OF IDEAS.

By J. A. STEWART. 8vo, 6s. net.

SWINBURNE.

A Lecture delivered before the University by J. W. MACKAIL. 8vo, 1s. net.

ON THE GRAMMAR OF ROWING.

Three Lectures by E. WARRE. 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

Times.—"Dr. Warre has done a service to all who have the interest of English rowing at heart. His little book may be heartily commended to all rowing men, and particularly to those who are entrusted with the responsibility of coaching."

A VINDICATION OF WARREN HASTINGS.

By G. W. HASTINGS. 8vo, 6s. net.

Morning Post.—"Mr. Hastings's book is clear, it is concise, it is able, and it is not too much to say—it is convincing."

CLARENDON PRESS CATALOGUE (160 pp.) post free on application.

London: HENRY FROWDE, Oxford University Press, Amen Corner, E.C.

SATURDAY, MAY 15, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
A PLURALISTIC UNIVERSE	577
LAUZUN, COURTIER AND ADVENTURER	578
NOTES FROM SOTHEBY'S	579
BISHOP WILKINSON	580
NEW NOVELS (Peter Vandy; Gervase; The Flying Months; Queen Kate; The White Sister; Treasure Trove; The Story of Thyra; A Comedy of Ambition; Other Things than Love; The Old Home; La Caverne)	580-581
FRENCH HISTORY AND TRAVEL	582
WOMEN OF NOTE	583
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (Passing English of the Victorian Era; Hungary and the Hungarians; The Old Man in the Corner; War Songs; These Little Ones; Camp-Fires on Desert and Lava; Verbum Sempiternum; Printers' Pie)	584-586
A LETTER OF JOHNSON; APPROPRIATING TITLES; JOHN MOUNTGOMERY AND THE LONDON MARCHING WATCH	586
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	586
LITERARY GOSSIP	587
SCIENCE—THE JUDGMENT OF PARIS ASTRONOMICALLY CONSIDERED; ZENOGRAPHICAL FRAGMENTS; THE RAILWAY LOCOMOTIVE; ORDNANCE SURVEY MAP OF COLCHESTER; THE ROYAL SOCIETY'S CONVERSAZIONE; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP	589-591
FINE ARTS—THE MONUMENTS OF CHRISTIAN ROME; THE ROYAL ACADEMY; OTHER EXHIBITIONS; ARCHÆOLOGICAL NOTES; SALES; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS	591-594
MUSIC—MONLEONE'S CAVALLERIA RUSTICANA; M. KUSSEWITZKY'S CONCERT; MM. YSAÏE AND PUGNO'S RECITAL; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	594
DRAMA—REVIVAL OF HENRY IV., PART I.; LOVE WATCHES; SHAKESPEARE AT STRATFORD	595-596
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	596

LITERATURE

A Pluralistic Universe. By William James. (Longmans & Co.)

WHEN Prof. William James came to Oxford to deliver these Hibbert Lectures, he had a twofold task before him. He must address himself to Manchester College the fortunate beneficiary of the Hibbert Trust. At the same time he must not fail to speak the appropriate word to the University of Oxford, to which the adjacent doors of Manchester College lay hospitably open. Now the College is a theological foundation; whilst the University is, one might almost venture to say, pre-eminently a philosophic body. With consummate art, therefore, the lecturer weaves a double thread right through the texture of his discourse. There is a discussion of Theism for the College; and for the University there is a criticism of Absolutism, since that, in one or other of its forms, appears to be the philosophic interest still regnant in its midst. Just as, however, the influx of academic visitors, if we are rightly informed, was, physically, the cause of a migration from the College Library to the University Examination Schools, so, logically, the theme of Absolutism was bound in the long run to crowd out and displace the strictly theistic problem. After all, Prof. James is a philosopher by profession, and, even if philosophy and theology are destined to coincide in the end, under existing conditions to be a master in one is scarcely to speak with full authority in regard to the other. Thus we are treated to what is substantially a disquisition, on the shortcomings of Absolutism, as compared with Pragmatism, in all respects, though notably in respect of its failure to provide Theism with a satisfactory foundation.

The philosophy of the absolute stands logically for the complete ascendancy of what Prof. James calls "the all-form." It holds to an order of explanation according to which "all" both predetermines and finally justifies "each." Theologically, this amounts to Pantheism. Orthodox theology has for long been waging a steady, yet, perhaps, a losing, fight with various forms of pantheistic heresy, whether due to the formal and æsthetic appeal of philosophic Monism, or to the mystical experiences of the religious consciousness:—

"Those of us who are sexagenarians have witnessed in our own persons one of those gradual mutations of intellectual climate, due to innumerable influences, that make the thought of a past generation seem as foreign to its successor as if it were the expression of a different race of men. The theological machinery that spoke so livingly to our ancestors, with its finite age of the world, its creation out of nothing, its juridical morality and eschatology, its relish for rewards and punishments, its treatment of God as an external contriver, an 'intelligent and moral governor,' sounds as odd to most of us as if it were some outlandish savage religion. The vaster vistas which scientific Evolutionism has opened, and the rising tide of social democratic ideals, have changed the type of our imagination, and the older monarchical theism is obsolete or obsolescent. The place of the divine in the world must be more organic and intimate. An external Creator and his institutions may still be verbally confessed at Church in formulas that linger by their mere inertia, but the life is out of them, we avoid dwelling on them, the sincere heart of us is elsewhere."

Now Prof. James is himself fully prepared to acquiesce in the bankruptcy of the old-fashioned dualistic theology. In his favourite phrase, it is not "intimate" enough. It cultivates in the worshipper a general habit of wariness, not one of trust. But Pantheistic Absolutism does at least provide the required intimacy. It bids us yield ourselves to the all-embracing clasp of the universe. Prof. James, however, offers us the alternative of another "intimate" species of spiritualism, namely, one less monistic and more pluralistic in form. Philosophically considered, it is a radical empiricism, which maintains the integrity of "the each form" in face of the logical claim of the all to absorb or transcend the "eaches." Let us regard it for a moment under this aspect, before proceeding to consider its theological bearing.

The old Empiricism, according to Prof. James, was no better than the Absolutism it sought to refute, because its sole weapon of attack was "the intellectualist logic":—

"Both sides treat it as authoritative, but they do so capriciously: the absolutists smashing the world of sense by its means, the empiricists smashing the absolute—for the absolute, they say, is the quintessence of all logical contradictions. Neither side attains consistency. The Hegelians have to invoke a higher logic to supersede the purely destructive efforts of their first logic. The empiricists use their logic against the absolute, but refuse to use it against finite experience. Each party uses it or drops it to suit the vision it has faith in, but neither impugns in principle its general theoretic authority."

The new Empiricism, on the other hand, expressly rules out logic from lordship over the whole of life, though allowing it a wide range of departmental authority. Prof. James is content to refer us to Prof. Henri Bergson for the technical justification of his position. Put shortly, the gist of the contention is that the function of the intellect is practical rather than theoretical. Sensible reality in all its confusing detail proves in practice unmanageable; so we select aspects, transform them into hard-and-fast concepts, and, by establishing relations between these on the strength of their intrinsic values, and regardless of the context from which they have been freed, provide ourselves with symbolic representations whereby we may control the sensible reality that is yet to be. These representations are not the concrete facts. They are the counters, not the hard cash, of life. They yield "knowledge about" merely; not "knowledge of," that is, "insight into." In fine "thought deals solely with surfaces."

Prof. James rejoices in categories of homely brand. In a former work minds were classed as tender or tough. Here we have philosophies distinguished as thin or thick. One whole lecture is devoted to Hegel, and another to Fechner, with the object of illustrating this fundamental difference of quality. Hegel and the Hegelians are "thin, abstract, indigent and threadbare"; theirs is a "starving, schoolroom aspect." Very refreshing by contrast is the "thickness" of Fechner. For him the earth on which we live must have its own collective consciousness. So must each sun, moon, planet; so must the whole solar system have its own wider consciousness, in which the consciousness of our earth plays one part. And Fechner would have us pray to the earth, as being man's own special guardian angel.

Without exactly endorsing these highly Gothic fantasies of the Leipsic sage, Prof. James does all he can to make us feel the thickness of reality. Intellectualism names, conceptualizes, symbolizes, takes a surface view. To reach the inwardness of reality, to "fathom" it—partially at all events, and with the hope of taking deeper and ever deeper soundings—is the feat of insight which the new Empiricism sets itself to accomplish. Its starting-point is that of what is coming to be known as "personal idealism":—

"The only way in which to apprehend reality's thickness is either to experience it directly by being a part of reality one's self, or to evoke it in imagination by sympathetically divining some one else's inner life."

The first way whereby we "immediately experience" the inner nature of reality may pass muster, though there are obvious difficulties about speaking of "one's self" in this connexion. But what about the other way? How can we "concretely divine" what is some one else's, and as such shut up in a reality of its own? If we assume that this is done by analogy, we surely are falling back on the use of the thought that but deals with surfaces. Or does Prof. James declare for an immediacy of revelation, as it were? If so, he has left the nature of the process somewhat vague.

It remains to glance at the theological implications of the position. One thing is clear. Religion, being empirical, is experimental; its method is the method of trial and error. We must seek in order to find, and must expect to find gradually. It is not so clear, however, how "intimacy" is to be established between God and man. Suppose that we fathom ever so deeply the reality that is our very own, namely, our selfhood with all its subliminal possibilities, yet in a pluralistic scheme of things the "others" remain eternally other. "Not if you throw over the logic of identity" is presumably what Prof. James would reply. Alas! to "divine concretely" seems to us no more than to employ analogy tinged with emotion. And immediacy of revelation seems to be rejected after all; for Prof. James concludes:—

"In spite of rationalism's disdain for the particular, the personal, and the unwholesome, the drift of all the evidence we have seems to me to sweep us very strongly towards the belief in some form of superhuman life with which we may, unknown to ourselves, be co-conscious. We may be in the universe as dogs and cats are in our libraries, seeing the books and hearing the conversation, but having no inkling of the meaning of it all."

Quite so. But is this "intimacy"?

Lauzun, Courtier and Adventurer. By Mary F. Sandars. 2 vols. (Hutchinson & Co.)

ANTONIN NOMPAR DE CAUMONT, DUC DE LAUZUN, the favourite of Louis XIV., the suitor and probable husband of Mlle. de Montpensier, the antagonist of Louvois and Madame de Montespan, the rescuer of Mary of Modena, is a subject tempting to a biographer not less on account of his perplexing psychology than by reason of his romantic career. His power of attracting women, his astounding impudence and genius for intrigue, were in singular contrast with his low stature, ugliness, and occasional fits of absolute loss of self-control. La Bruyère, after dwelling upon the romantic nature of his career and his power of imposing himself upon his contemporaries, gives up "Straton" as an enigma. Saint-Simon certainly did not overshoot the mark when he described his connexion as "one of those prodigies of fortune and singularity who arouse curiosity in people of their own time as well as in those who follow."

The attractive pen of the late Arvède Barine has traced the story of that remarkable tragi-comedy, the courtship of Lauzun and the Grande Mademoiselle, with its dénouement disastrous for both parties, and their final separation. We gather that the author of the present work had some help from her brilliant French contemporary; we wish that she had caught some of her spirit and literary charm. Miss Sandars is loose and discursive, somewhat prone to repetition, and has little distinction of style, though her narrative is in general clear, and her judgment, when she exercises it, far from faulty. When she comes to what Madame de Sévigné calls "the second volume" of Lauzun's life, she is on comparatively untrodden ground, and for her account of the Irish expedition she has utilized new material. She has ransacked to some purpose Ravaillon's 'Archives de la Bastille' and the records of the French War Office for her interesting narratives of her "little man's" imprisonments; and she has eked out the story of his love-affairs and relations with the King and Madame de Montespan from Bussy-Rabutin's scandalous chronicles and extensive correspondence, though apparently conscious of the rather ambiguous historical value of such publications as the 'Histoire amoureuse' and 'La France galante.' She notes that Saint-Simon, writing long after the event, has misdated the imprisonment of the then Marquis de Puyguilhem in the Bastille (1665) by five years. The real reason of this imprisonment was the rivalry between the King and his favourite for the affections of the Princesse de Monaco, but the official explanation was the resentment shown by Puyguilhem as colonel-general of dragoons when one of his officers was censured. The arrest, which followed the celebrated scene when the King threw his cane out of the window, made a sensation throughout Europe only less than that caused some years later by the withdrawal of the royal sanction of the Lauzun-Montpensier marriage.

The author is of opinion that the Princess of Monaco (Madame de Sévigné's "Le Torrent"), who was a member of the Gramont family in which Lauzun had been brought up, was the only woman whom he ever loved. There seems to have been no ground for the prevalent rumour which coupled his name with that of La Vallière, though Mlle. de Montpensier professed to be jealous of her. Whether or no the would-be Duc de Montpensier had been ever "passionately in love," as we are told he was, we cannot believe that there was much chivalry in the nature of the man who could crush a woman's hand with his heel (which was Lauzun's way of revenging his unrequited affection for his early lady-love). On a survey of his career one can only conclude that the "strong strain of knight-errantry" which "ran through his character" was confined chiefly to the love of adventure. His championship in later years of the queen of James II. is the single fact which seems to contradict this, unless it be the tender repentance which Saint-Simon tells us he showed for the way in which he had behaved on a certain occasion in his old age to his young (second?) wife, the sister of the memoir-writer's own spouse. Lauzun seems to have had singular relations with Madame de Montespan, between whom and himself there was perpetual warfare for the favour of the King, varied by periods of alliance founded upon a kind of mutual attraction and supposed common interest. The man was ultimately outwitted in the war of intrigue; but there seems a probability that it was the advice of her future supplanter, then Madame Scarron, which decided the mistress ultimately to use her influence against the Montpensier match and so to bring about Lauzun's ruin. The Grande Mademoiselle herself, when her promised bridegroom was in prison at Pignerol, kept up relations with Madame de Montespan, and, despite the infamous spoliation which had been the price of Lauzun's release, even sent for her on her death-bed.

"A very shady intrigue" undoubtedly it was by which Lauzun was induced, after much resistance, to purchase his release. He had to resign the Grande Mademoiselle's gift of her property in favour of the mistress's eldest son; and there never could have been any question of a public marriage between the Duchess and the Gascon adventurer, after the Grand Monarque had banned it in the face of Europe. So far there cannot be said to have been, as the author appears to think, any deception. Cumulative indirect evidence seems to favour the hypothesis of the private marriage which, in common with Arvède Barine, she is inclined to accept. That there was ever any issue, however, is highly improbable: the story of the old lady at Eu cannot be treated with much seriousness.

No reason need be urged for questioning Miss Sandars's opinion that the years of semi-disgrace which Lauzun passed between the day of his release from Pignerol and his return to France with the deposed Queen of England and her son were even more bitter to him than his period of captivity. The English expedition was an undertaking very well suited to the peculiar qualities of a courtier who excelled in devising expedients and was resolute in carrying through his purposes; but his conduct of the command which was afterwards entrusted to him in Ireland showed that he had no genius for generalship to counterbalance his lack of experience in war, even if it did not reveal something akin to cowardice in a man who had hitherto enjoyed a reputation for great personal courage. Lauzun at last obtained his dukedom, but he never regained his cherished captaincy of the guards; and his various attempts to reconquer the confidence of the King were, despite his enjoyment of the grandes entrées, pathetic failures. One of the last of these attempts was his marriage at sixty with the fifteen-year-old daughter of the Maréchal de Lorges, the lady's relatives being tempted by the offer to take their younger daughter without a dowry. Louis XIV. only consented to sanction it on the express condition that Lauzun's father-in-law should never approach him upon public affairs. The King hoped that the Marshal would never repent of having admitted his own former favourite into his family. "M. de Lauzun's marriage has surprised us," was the comment of Madame de Sévigné.

The bridegroom lived some thirty years longer, surviving his adored master and the Regent Orleans. He died almost in the odour of sanctity; but his position well-nigh to the last had been that of a sort of Court jester, who, as in his early days of royal favour, inspired fear rather than any kindlier feeling. Several anecdotes of Lauzun's practical jokes have been culled by the author from Saint-Simon's writings, such as that of his inducing Marshal Tessé to appear before the King in a grey hat (a colour which was the Grand Monarque's special aversion) on his appointment as colonel of dragoons; and his recital on his death-bed, in presence of his presumptive heirs, of a mock petition to Heaven, offering his wealth for devotion to charitable purposes as expiation for a misspent life. The story goes that a few months before his death the old man of ninety was seen breaking-in some colts in the Bois de Boulogne!

We cannot help thinking that more should have been made of so promising a subject than has been achieved here. Apart from lack of concentration and arrangement, insufficient attention has been paid to proof-reading and syntax, both of which are increasingly neglected by the modern author. The year 1696 is referred to as belonging to the eighteenth century, and we get Gallicisms like "the Marshal of Berwick." Why is the Constable Colonna who married Marie Mancini described as though he were a Frenchman? The printing of an undeciphered letter from Louvois to Lauzun when in Ireland may serve to amuse a stray reader or two.

Notes from Sotheby's. By Frank Karslake.
(Karslake & Co.)

MR. KARSLAKE'S "compilation of 2,032 notes from catalogues of book sales which have taken place in the rooms of Messrs. Sotheby, Wilkinson & Hodge between the years 1885-1909" is full of variety, covering almost every phase of book-collecting. Messrs. Sotheby's catalogues are compiled with care and special knowledge, and no bibliography of rare books can be approximately complete without an examination of them. It is, however, the peculiar fate of catalogues to disappear, and in a few years they become exceedingly difficult to obtain. The necessity for preserving such records has, however, almost ceased since the appearance twenty-two years ago of 'Book-Prices Current,' which gives in a compact and methodical form, with indexes, the chief features of thousands of catalogues issued since 1886. Rooms in modern houses are not adapted for large libraries, and sale catalogues rapidly outgrow their allotted space.

We are glad, therefore, that Mr. Karslake has rescued so much bibliographical matter from oblivion; his volume will form a most handy appendix to 'Book-Prices Current,' in the earlier volumes of which very few notes were reprinted. The use of a réchauffé such as this, however, depends largely on the editor's selection. It is certain that only a small proportion of the valuable notes from the F. S. Ellis Sale in 1885 to the Amherst Sale just terminated can be included in a volume of 392 pages. The omissions must be exceedingly numerous, and of serious importance to many collectors. In some cases also the annotations appended to different examples of the same edition of a rare book differ greatly in value. Of which of these annotations has Mr. Karslake availed himself? On the first page of his 'Notes' we come across an entry which proves that his compilation is not necessarily either comprehensive or entirely satisfactory. The note to the first book of arithmetic ever printed, "Incommencia una Practica... chiamata vulgarmente larte de Labbacho," printed at Treviso in 1478, extends to only three lines. This copy is stated to have been sold on May 21st, 1906, lot 2; but it is not recorded in 'Book-Prices Current,' for the simple reason that the sale arranged for that and the following days consisted of the Fisher Library, sold privately en bloc. The note is inadequate, and cannot be compared with the full and interesting one appended to the Wodhull copy sold in January, 1886—a long note which the extreme rarity of the book fully warranted.

The copy of the very rare Norwich-printed book "Belijdenisse des Gheloofs der Kerchen in Switzerlandt," 1568, here recorded (p. 36) as sold on July 3rd, 1899, appears to be the Amherst copy which came up in December last—curiously enough, this is also not recorded in 'Book-Prices Current.' Probably there are other omissions, and we are glad that Mr. Karslake, whatever his shortcomings, has gone to the fountain-head for his inspiration, and not contented himself with getting it at second-hand. Of the many Bible annotations, that of the North American Indian version by John Eliot, Cambridge (Mass.), is one of the longest and most interesting. The copy here described sold in 1902 for 370*l*. It was thrown out of the Bodleian Library over forty years ago as a duplicate, and, finding its way to America, was bought by Mr. J. T. Bruce for 100*l*. in 1863. It has appeared four times in American sale-rooms, and was the property of an American collector when it was sold at Messrs. Sotheby's in 1902 for much less than the amount (580*l*.) paid for the Hardwicke copy in 1888.

There is a long note to Tycho Brahe's 'Astronomiæ Instauratæ Mechanica,' 1602, a volume "of the very first importance to students of Shakespeare, because it contains what Prof. S. Arthur Strong believed to be the original source from which Shakespeare took the names of Rosencrantz and Guildenstern, the two Danish courtiers found in 'Hamlet.'" There is a reference to a long account of this volume in The Athenæum, No. 3997.

The writer of the note makes out a good case in favour of the book having been seen by Shakespeare, but it should be pointed out that 'Hamlet' had been "diuerse times acted by his Highnesse seruants in the cittie of London, as also in the two Vniuersities of Cambridge and Oxford, and elsewhere," before it was printed in 1603, and it may therefore have been written before Brahe's book was published.

Only one entry appears under Browning's name, 'Pauline, a Fragment of a Confession,' first edition, 1833. Mr. Karslake appears to have lost, or omitted to take, the date of the sale of this particular copy, since he marks it "date unknown." Perhaps we can help him. The copy with the interesting autograph note which he quotes was lot 33 in the Crampton Sale at Messrs. Sotheby's in June, 1896, and reappeared (lot 12) in Mr. Stuart M. Samuel's sale on July 1st, 1907: on the first occasion it sold for 145*l*., and on the second 225*l*. We think "only three or four copies known" a misleading statement, for at least eight are known, and there are probably others to be unearthed. The entry of the first edition of Bunyan's 'Pilgrim's Progress,' 1678, sold on May 6th, 1901, calls to mind the sensational price (1,475*l*.) which the little book fetched on that occasion. Capt. Holford's is, we believe, the only other perfect copy known.

A good many omissions will be detected by any expert turning over the pages of this volume. We have FitzGerald's 'Euphronor,' but not the famous Omar Khayyam 'Rubáiyát,' with the story of the consignment of the remainder of the first edition to Mr. Quaritch's twopenny box. The copy of Blaikie and Gosse's 'Madrigals, Songs, and Sonnets,' 1870, here recorded, was fished out of a sixpenny box in Holywell Street by the present writer, and by him sent to Messrs. Sotheby's, where it realized two guineas. Mr. Karslake devotes nearly one and a half columns to Goldsmith's 'Prospect of Society,' 1763, "unique, and unknown to all Goldsmith's biographers and editors": he should have rounded off the entry by stating that the 16 pages of 'The Prospect of Society' are in fact numbered proof-sheets containing the greater part of 'The Traveller,' in sections of about 36 lines each, set up in reverse order, so that lines 1-42 are lines 353-400 of the published edition, and so on throughout. It should also have been stated that 'The Prospect of Society' was discovered by Mr. Bertram Dobell, who reprinted it in 1902, and sold the original in March of that year at Messrs. Sotheby's, whence it passed into the British Museum. There is a "note" of over two pages (made up from correspondence on the subject in The Athenæum) attached to the copy of Gray's 'Elegy' sold on March 17th, 1902. Montaigne is another author the entries of whose books are extensively annotated. Shakespeare has but six pages. We should have thought that at least ten times that amount of space would have been desirable, and there is no reference to Mr. Loveday's copy of 'The Passionate Pilgrim,' 1612, which Messrs. Sotheby sold privately in September, 1907, for 2,000l.

We might, however, fill columns with comments on these 'Notes.' Mr. Karslake's book will be found useful if consulted with discrimination. There are a few misprints; e.g., "Granville Library" (p. 5) should be Grenville. The "wooden" frontispiece of the book is hardly an adornment.

Memoir of George Howard Wilkinson, Bishop of St. Andrews. By Arthur James Mason. 2 vols. Illustrated. (Longmans & Co.)

GEORGE HOWARD WILKINSON, in his first curacy as in the bishoprics he afterwards held, was an organizer and a preacher. His father wished him to take holy orders, but was haunted by a fear that the hair on his lip, which the young man wore after returning from a long tour, indicated that he had given up the thought of being ordained. "You dear dad, I will take it off at once," he said; and the biographer adds, "It was his form of receiving the tonsure."

Before his ordination Wilkinson was married, and in his description of his first house we have a glimpse of a fashion of a bygone day: "Our house was so small that Aunt Lily had to take off her crinoline in the passage and hang it up." After holding a curacy in St. Mary Abbots, he was appointed to the vicarage of Seaham Harbour by the Marchioness of Londonderry. One of his curates, describing at a later time the work of the vicar, writes:—

"We should certainly not have classed ourselves with 'Evangelicals,' though no one could preach justification by faith and the necessity of conversion more fully than Mr. Wilkinson and his curates. The Prayer Book doctrine of Baptismal Regeneration was not only firmly held, but boldly proclaimed in all its practical bearings from the pulpit."

From Seaham Harbour Wilkinson removed to Bishop Auckland, on the presentation of the Bishop of Durham. Unfortunately for his peace of mind, though his ministry among the people was eminently successful, the vicar was suspected by the Bishop of Ritualism, and, in connexion with a question of church extension, his conduct was described by that prelate, apparently unjustly, as "jesuitical." Fortunately, on the other hand, he did not require to resign the living without any call to new work, as he was offered the Perpetual Curacy of St. Peter's, Great Windmill Street, near Piccadilly Circus. Describing one of Wilkinson's publications, 'How to Begin a New Life,' Dr. Mason says:—

"It consists of instructions given in the parish schoolroom, intended to meet the wants of anxious inquirers after peace with God. The idea, to him, was no novelty, for both at Seaham and at Auckland arousing sermons in Church were followed up by plain familiar teaching in the schoolroom, where any one, either before or after the address, might speak to the clergy of spiritual difficulties and receive individual help."

In 1868 Wilkinson began street preaching in London. He afterwards was informed that the remark was made: "I hear you have got a Puseyite at the church. He goes through the street singing hymns."

St. Peter's was attended by many who were glad to leave fashionable churches. "Lord Derby," we are told,

"was frequently there; and still more frequently his great political antagonist, Mr. Gladstone. A tablet is now to be seen in the south aisle of the church, which gives an extract from a letter of Archbishop Tait's, in which the Archbishop mentions that going one Sunday morning to St. Peter's he found Mr. and Mrs. Gladstone enjoying, like himself, the quiet of the unpretending little sanctuary."

High churchman though he was, Wilkinson was offered the living of St. Peter's, Eaton Square, by the Bishop of London, and accepting it he made it and himself famous. Mr. George Russell has given us this graphic description of the situation:—

"In the year 1870 a flame of religious zeal was suddenly kindled in the West End of London... The Church in the Belgravian district was as dry as tinder; it caught fire from Mr. Wilkinson's fervour, and the fire soon became a conflagration... In all my experience of preaching (which is long, wide, and varied) I have never seen a congregation dominated by its minister so absolutely as the congregation of St. Peter's was dominated by Mr. Wilkinson. I say 'congregation' advisedly, for I should think that at least half the seatholders belonged to other parishes. The smartest carriages in London blocked the approach to the church. The great dames of Grosvenor Square and Carlton House Terrace rubbed shoulders with the opulent inhabitants of Tyburnia and South Kensington, Cabinet Ministers fought for places in the gallery, and M.P.s were no more accounted of than silver in the days of Solomon."

After some years the Bishop of London offered Wilkinson the position of suffragan bishop with work in the East End, but medical advice prevented the change to the proposed sphere of labour, and also to a canonry at Durham. On the elevation, however, of Bishop Benson to Canterbury, Wilkinson was appointed, on the recommendation of Gladstone, to Truro; and it is interesting to note that in 1885 Lord Salisbury offered him the See of Manchester. In Truro, as in the minor charges, there was religious fervour, and the Bishop was the spiritual force of the diocese. Bishop Benson had begun the erection of the Cathedral, which is often described as his creation; but Dr. Mason assures us that "the greater part of the labour of building, furnishing, and endowing it—so far as it is endowed—devolved upon Bishop Wilkinson." Recognizing the value of women's work, he established in Truro a Sisterhood, or, rather, transferred it from his former parish. He himself described it. "The plan of the Sisterhood," he said,

"is very simple. The Bible as interpreted by the Prayer Book in its obvious meaning is their standard. Loyal submission to their Bishop is their guiding principle. While it is my duty, as their Father in God, to guard them from all mere idle curiosity, every detail of their Rule will be gladly shown to any who are interested in their life. At present they are working in the schools, visiting the sick, and helping, so far as they are able, all who need their assistance."

Severe illness led to the resignation of Truro; and after a visit to South Africa, which aided his restoration to health, he accepted a bishopric in the Episcopal Church in Scotland—that of St. Andrews, Dunkeld, and Dunblane, in succession to Charles Wordsworth. In the course of time, when a vacancy occurred, he was elected Primus. The Episcopal Church in Scotland is small in numbers, and a bishop's influence in a diocese and on the whole community is of necessity limited. Bishop Wilkinson, however, made his presence felt in his Church, and his deeply religious spirit was shown in the very prominent part he took in negotiations for the promotion of Christian unity. Thanks pre-eminently to his influence, a day was set apart for prayer in the Scottish churches for unity; but after the intercessions, misunderstandings arose on account of his refusal to join in a united service in an Established Church in Perth. He was willing to pray at one time, but not in one place, with Presbyterians; and he endeavoured to make plain his position in the statement, "Intercommunion is the end for which we are working and praying, not the point from which we start."

The last meeting which the Bishop attended was that of the Representative Church Council. After speaking impressively on the subject of the Clergy Sustentation Fund, he sat down, and immediately afterwards was seen to sink back in his chair. The end came at once, and he died working for his Church. Wilkinson was great neither as an ecclesiastical statesman nor as a scholar. He was, however, a man of fervent piety, who by his life and preaching exercised an extraordinary influence.

The biographer, Dr. Mason, deserves to be praised for his admirable work. The narrative is always clear and never dull, and he allows the man of the book to reveal himself. He should have known, however, that the Episcopal Church is not the Church of Scotland, and that there is no Primus of Scotland, as he should have known that Gawain Douglas was not the first Scottish poet.

NEW NOVELS.

Peter Vandy. By Edwin Pugh. (C. H. White.)

THIS story is both clever and unpleasant; yet it testifies to powers of observation and reflection which claim a more dignified appellation. Peter Vandy, the self-made plutocrat, represents an ambitious and striking essay in characterization. He stands alone in the book, for the other men, including the narrator, are scarcely more than shadows, and the women, good and bad, are alike negligible. To a certain extent, we believe in the strange mixture of elevation and meanness which makes up Peter's character; but the climax seems to us wholly unconvincing.

and it is brought about by methods more appropriate to a Sunday-school magazine than to high-class fiction.

Gervase. By Mabel Dearmer. (Macmillan & Co.)

THE theme of Mrs. Dearmer's latest novel is virtually the evolution of an ascetic. The moral and spiritual development of her hero, while fairly convincing, leans so near to the abnormal as to alienate our sympathies and sometimes our interest. The author has been at some pains to show us the influences, hereditary and educational, that mould this young man's character and consequent behaviour, but we cannot find the picture attractive. Indeed, there are passages where the warring forces of fanaticism and passion do not please us. However, the story as a whole is ably written; all the subsidiary characters are good, while the dialogue is fresh and natural, and sometimes witty.

The Flying Months. By Frances M. Peard. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

THIS volume, in spite of its name and some good passages, goes heavily. Everything turns on what seems to us a stupid central motive—the desire of the hero to clear himself from a half-suspicion of illegitimacy. To prove his case, he and some of the principal characters migrate to Italy, and thence to India. As they journey East the tedium increases; yet the women rivals in the affections of the young man have some human traits. The author brings in some other persons in England. They never fall into line at all, but remain a superfluous and not intrinsically interesting accompaniment to the main theme.

Queen Kate. By Charles Garvice. (Hodder & Stoughton.)

MR. GARVICE knows exactly how to cater for the tastes of his admirers. They like a plot unfettered by the probabilities of life, and he is lavish in his invention of coincidences; they demand a plentiful supply of sentiment, and he is careful to see that the most exacting of them shall not be disappointed; they dearly love a titled character, and many a coronet glistens in his pages. Kate Ammondale, a well-bred, high-spirited girl—is she not the daughter of a baronet?—feels compelled to marry Capt. Brendon, who has failed to win her affection, because she overhears her father, an inveterate and unsuccessful gambler, say to him, "We are playing for Kate." This is the improbable incident upon which Mr. Garvice's latest novel turns. Not, of course, until the close of the story, when Kate, banished from her ancestral home, has become the greatest prima donna of the age, and her husband, long separated from her, has developed into a duke, is she allowed to learn that "the stake was her portrait, and not herself."

The White Sister. By F. Marion Crawford. (Macmillan & Co.)

RIGHTLY to praise this novel from a vanished hand demands a preliminary depreciation of its plot. The precipitate taking of the veil by a young lady on believing the false rumour of her lover's death is stale. Yet it is precisely the antiquity of Marion Crawford's theme which compels one to recognize with pleasant surprise the quickening power of his pen. While indulging in artifices of stage-carpentry which would discredit a beginner, he rescues his characters from the imminent danger they incur of stiffening into marionettes, by an atmosphere of spirituality. Saracinesca reappears in the story, and at the end acts as fairy godfather.

Treasure Trove. By C. A. Dawson-Scott. (Heinemann.)

THIS readable volume completes the trilogy entitled 'Some Women' with a study in heredity. The heroine is a matron whose father had been, unknown to her, imprisoned for embezzlement. A burglar having in his flight forgotten to take out of her house some stolen jewellery which he had deposited there while attempting to purloin her silver, she is confronted with a temptation to which she succumbs, and pretends that her dead mother had given the jewellery to her. Her moral sense revives, however, when her son, a stockbroker, whose position in the commercial world was acquired with her ill-gotten treasure, incurs loss of reputation by posing under an alias as a client of his firm. The work contains interesting and well-contrasted characters, and the instances of heredity provided are ably selected and chronicled.

The Story of Thyrsa. By Alice Brown. (Constable & Co.)

THIS is an attractive and, in a measure, original story. The background—an unsophisticated New England district—is drawn sympathetically and surely, and the two sisters who sustain the principal parts have a fresh and life-like charm. The hero on the other hand, is over-perfect, and the villain incredibly villainous. The plot, besides, has some incoherence and many improbabilities—in particular, the initial error of the heroine, unlikely, it seems to us, in view of her character and training.

A Comedy of Ambition. By Adam Gowans Whyte. (Melrose.)

THE career and partial disillusion of an earnest young politician, who was originally designed for the Church, but finds himself in disagreement with its formulas, is the subject of this novel. If, as seems likely, it is a first attempt at novel-writing on the author's part, we find in it considerable promise. The thin thread of the story is excessively long drawn out, and we must own to being wearied by its prolixity; while its episodic tendency weakens the interest. On the other hand, the characterization is mostly good, and the treatment fresh and unconventional. The author also shows a pleasant quality of fancy and a nice sense of humour. We trust that in his next work he will resist the temptation to overcrowd the canvas.

Other Things than Love. By Handasyde. (Hutchinson & Co.)

THE writer who chooses to be known as "Handasyde" has a remarkable gift of sympathetic narration. She has also a power, rare in these days, of rendering emotional passages effective and natural. Miss Broughton has, or had, this faculty to perfection. This story, like the author's previous novel, is distinguished by its clever characterization, its smartness of dialogue, and its ease. The only fault we have to find with it is that the reader's interest never leaves the woman who is dead when the story opens for the woman who figures as the real heroine. The latter is life-like, but not specially attractive. On the other hand, the hero, "Lord Gee-Gee," in the jargon of the section of society this story deals with, is an excellently composed and sympathetic person. "Handasyde" has no reason to disguise herself.

The Old Home. By Gerard Bendall. (Alston Rivers.)

IT is difficult to understand whether Mr. Bendall has written his book as an elaborate joke, or whether he is serious. If it be a joke, it is rather ponderous and lengthy. If it be seriously designed, it is an amazing production. The characters in it move and talk as if they were in the pages of Miss Austen, but they entirely lack the reality of her figures. There is a great deal of kissing in the book and a good deal of talk about marriage. The husband of one of the characters dies, and two months later another character says to the widow: "It may be that you have wondered that, as our relations and companionship were so happy, I have not proposed marriage before this"! There are even more astonishing sentiments than this.

La Caverne. By Ray Nyst. (Brussels, the author, Rue Vautier, 46; London, Nutt.)

FROM Æsop to Mr. Kipling men have delighted to write of the days when the animals talked. Now, with a turn of the wheel, comes a romance of the days when men were dumb—and mere animals. Here we have the blessed-savage theory reappearing in literature under the ægis of the science of anthropology; for in order, as we gather, to popularize the study of primitive man, M. Nyst has written a romance of the man-ape, and taken for his hero our nude, indomitable ancestor, club in hand—"l'homme tertiaire, encore velu, muet et quelque peu arboricole." In his life and struggles in the prehistoric forests M. Nyst would have us see nothing but what is beautiful and heroic. We confess that we find the crude details of maternity and other physical functions, which fill these pages, singularly disagreeable.

FRENCH HISTORY AND TRAVEL.

Of the multitude of unnecessary books printed nowadays, France has been a most fruitful subject in the last four or five years of entente cordiale. Volumes of this sort have, as a rule, one common characteristic: the mark of headlong speed in preparation, with its inevitable results. The Third French Republic, by Frederick Lawton (Grant Richards), is no worse and no better than a dozen others recently published. It is not easy to see for whose use the author designs it. It cannot be for students, as the book is inaccurate and incomplete. Nor does it possess compensating qualities for the general reader, being slipshod in style and barren in ideas. Its opening sentence warns off the serious student with the remarkable statement that "no sooner had the great Revolution overthrown the Monarchy than Talleyrand proposed to establish an elementary school in every commune," in which he was opposed by "the bishops." That a writer on French history should imagine that Talleyrand was discussing education with "the bishops," or with anybody else, after August 10th, 1792, is odd. When the writer gets to his own period there is little sign in his pages of his "having lived for the last twenty years in France." He cannot spell the name of the present Prime Minister or of General de Galliffet; Gondinet becomes "Goudinet," and Boutmy "Boutry"; he writes "Gare de Lyons," "Duc de Rochefoucauld," "marquetterie," and "female figurants"; familiar Parisian monuments are disguised as the "Palais des Machines" and "the Sacré Cœur Cathedral at Montmartre"; he imagines that the loge of an actor at the Français is a "private box" instead of a dressing-room; and he adopts the un-French practice of prefixing "Monsieur" en toutes lettres to the name of almost every man he mentions.

The author borrows largely from M. Hanotaux, acknowledging his debt only in two paragraphs, and follows the French with a closeness inadvisable even in an avowed translation. "738 représentants se réunissaient dans la grande salle de l'Opéra du Château de Versailles" is rendered "the Assembly, 738 in number, met in the huge opera-hall of the Castle"—"opera-hall" is hardly English, and the word "castle" is never applied by English writers to Versailles, while one word which is a free translation, "huge," is a misdescription of the meeting-place of the National Assembly. 'La France Contemporaine' is not a safe work thus to use except for a well-informed writer who can recognize its minor inaccuracies; but when our author leaves it he falls into greater errors or furnishes a very incomplete narrative of events. He speaks of "Louis-Philippe's son the Comte de Paris"; he gives the Legitimist pretender the impossible appellation of "Henri de Chambord." He says that the Constitution voted in February, 1875, "created a senate of 300 members elected by the Councils General"—a bad blunder, the Senate of 1875 having had only 225 elective members, and of the electors, then as now, the members of the Conseils Généraux formed a small minority; he attributes too many (89) departments to France, and too few (11) ministries to the Presidency of M. Grévy; he thinks that "a considerable event in the history of French revolutionary Socialism was the foundation of the Intransigent newspaper by Henri Rochefort"; he refers to "the vice-Chairman of the Deputies," meaning, presumably, one of the four vice-Presidents of the Chamber, and describes the highest grade of the Legion of Honour as that of "Grand Commander"—a rank which does not exist. He says: "After paying official visits to the Courts of Denmark and England, the Czar arrived with his bride in Paris on the 10th of October" (1896). The date was October 6th; the Tsarina was not a bride, but the mother of a daughter born in 1895; and, what is more important, the previous visits were not official, the Russian sovereigns coming to France from a private visit to Queen Victoria at Balmoral. In 1902 Mr. Lawton cites as one of "the chief items of the year" in France "a welcome" given to Sir Wilfrid Laurier; but the "welcome" was of such meagre quality that it caused the Canadian Premier to give up a projected tour in France. The book professes to be a history of the Third Republic down to 1908, but the chief legislative event of this century, the passing of the Separation Law in 1905, is scarcely mentioned, not one of its provisions being noted, and about as much space being given to it as to a railway accident mentioned on another page. The literary section of the volume is in all respects better than the much longer part describing the political history of the Republic. It contains some sound and acute criticisms which deserve a worthier setting.

Mr. Frederic Lees publishes, through Messrs. Methuen & Co., A Summer in Touraine, with illustrations, those in colour being ascribed to Mr. Maxwell Armfield. In a Dedication, which stands for Preface, the author explains that he searched in vain for any book that would give him what he wanted "for the proper understanding of the châteaux of the Loire." He "found.... many books on Touraine,....all....defective. Some were incomplete....Others....either too technical or too diffuse." But the present volume is hardly what tourists need. To begin with, it is cumbersome, and if, starting in a 60 H.-P. motor, they take a library, they may be tempted to possess themselves of the original authorities. If, on the other hand, they "travel light," we see no reason why they should prefer the large volume of Mr. Lees to the two small ones of Mr. Theodore Cook, for example—to name a work with similar object. Our author, it will be noticed, alludes to "the châteaux of the Loire." Most such volumes fail to give the historic houses, whatever their architectural interest or their beauty, which lie outside the district called "Touraine" by some stretching of the term. Authors, as a rule, fail, from lack of knowledge of the development of French domestic architecture and the art of the Renaissance, to see with instructed eyes, and to call attention to the right things in the right fashion. Mr. Lees is hard on Louis XI., the employer of Jean Fouquet and of Michel Colomb, and the King under whom the French Renaissance, through the school of Tours, took shape. We should have thought it unnecessary to tell us that "critical comparison between French châteaux and Italian palaces shows that they could not be the work of men of the same nationality....The former....were not built by Italians," and "France owes much less to Italy than has been hitherto claimed." The School of Fontainebleau owed indeed much to Italy; but it is the glory of the French Renaissance that it was at its best before the reign of Fontainebleau arose. To Flemish art, introduced through Burgundy, and the School of Dijon, the spirit of the French Renaissance is now traced; and the pages of Mr. Lees lead us to fear that he went to Touraine without that general knowledge which should have been the foundation of a book instructing others.

Tourists now mostly visit the great houses of the Loire by motor, and, seeing châteaux not included in "Touraine" volumes, need some further expansion of the limits covered by such books. Let us take an example from both ends. On the west, Angers attracts students of history and of the picturesque, and its "black" wall-towers stand much as they did when the armies of Shakespearean imagination held parley between the battlements and the plain. A little further down the stream, and less far from its banks than are several of the castles about which Mr. Lees writes, is to be found one of singular architectural interest and beauty, not included in any of the touring volumes. At Walsh-Serrant the Duc de la Trémoille shows guests a staircase similar to, and as beautiful as, that glory of the Paris Renaissance—"l'Escalier Henri II." of the Louvre. There is a doubt, however, in each case as to the real architect, and tradition ascribes the Serrant staircase to Philibert de l'Orme. Mr. Lees names the Walshes, but not those through whom Serrant descended to the family whose second title, Prince de Tarente, is one of the most curious of France by its associations. He also names the château of Serrant itself, but without any reference to its situation or its nature. It was outside his subject, he may reply. That is so, but he includes Jarzé and Le Lude, both of them far enough afield. If we look towards the east, or upstream, we have the Orléannais and places of the exceptional charm of Sully, more closely connected with the romance of history than almost any château of Touraine.

The volume of Mr. Lees has interest, of course. It is impossible to give excellent photographs of the great houses and write about their history without at least yielding to readers the charm that comes from a reminder of all that has most touched them in French history. We are glad that he tells us much of Rochecotte, the favourite home of the Duchesse de Dino before she relapsed into the frigidity of her German Court. The author went to Rochecotte, oddly enough, because his companion, caring for Dutch pictures, wanted to see that portion of the Biron collection from Mittau which was brought to Rochecotte by Madame de Dino during the quarter of a century that she possessed the place. Her goods have been divided between Castellanes, Radziwills, and others; but Rochecotte with all its memories remains. Mr. Lees might have quoted Madame de Dino's own accounts of Rochecotte, both from her letters and the first volume of her 'Chronique.' He names a visit paid from Valençay in which she brought the old Talleyrand with her; but she preferred her solitary escapes from Valençay and the society of the abominable Montrond, and in some of her letters revels in the freedom she enjoyed. Mr. Lees tells us of George Sand visiting Chenonceaux. It is a pity that he had not come across Madame de Dino's full account of how she showed one of her châteaux to George Sand, Alfred de Musset, and their dishevelled band of friends. The great Courlander was, no doubt, as polite, when caught by the tourists, as she describes herself; but, although she was burning with desire to see the famous lovers and to be admitted for an instant to Bohemian society, they were too much for her nerves, and the account she gave them of the art objects and of the rooms was marked, perhaps, by a dignity worthy of the head housekeeper at Hampton Court. "A sort of cousin of ours, you know," the Duchesse called George Sand in this letter, with an allusion to Maurice de Saxe.

Among a few small errors, one, not to be ascribed to the author, who prints the word correctly in every other case, seems to make "Danois" of that Bastard of Orleans whose name reminds the old of the worst tune and the worst verses ever adopted for national use. The Second Empire could not do otherwise than take from the Emperor's mother "le brave et beau Dunois" of the 'Partant pour la Syrie' of Queen Hortense. An allusion to Madame de Sévigné, by the slip of "former" for "latter," makes our author seem to assert that the great lady married her son-in-law, the Comte de Grignan. The château in which Madame de Sévigné was born—the house of her grandmother Sainte-Chantal—Bourbilly, is somewhat like Ussé, of which we have an excellent photograph in these pages. The château of Grignan, in which she kept house for her daughter during a great part of her life, is of equal interest, but differs from the houses in Touraine by reason of its mountain site.

The editor of The Journal of John Mayne (Lane), Mr. John Mayne Colles, the grandson of the author, has been well advised to give to the public this diary kept "during a tour on the Continent upon its reopening after the fall of Napoleon, 1814." Its interest is of a particular kind. Although it was written at a most important moment in the history of Europe, among scenes in which stupendous events had recently occurred, there is very little trace to be found in its pages of the French Revolution or of the Napoleonic "épopée." The ruins of Chantilly, passed on the way to Paris; "the sad signs of the Austrian retreat," in 1814, noticed between Dijon and Nogent on the way back; Lucien Bonaparte and Cardinal Fesch ("who was within arm's length of the papal crown"), seen in the distance in Roman society; and the Murats (at the San Carlo at Naples with the Princess of Wales)—these are almost the only indications noted of the great drama which for twenty-five years had filled the countries traversed, and of which the epilogue was beginning on the very day when, in March, 1815, the traveller's "feeling of happiness to be in my own country again" was counteracted by the tortures of "the rack at the custom-house" and by being "cheated at our inn more than we had ever been in France or Italy."

The editor disclaims all historical or political importance for his grandfather's journal. It is true that its interest is of a very different order from that of the 'Letters to Ivy' of Lord Dudley, who was in Rome at the same time as Mayne and frequented some of the same society. But the one was a trained politician of high intelligence, interested primarily in the international issues of the downfall of Napoleon; the other was a commonplace English gentleman, who, though the son of an Irish judge, regarded everything, as his editor points out, in an "attitude uncompromisingly British." Consequently the journal is an interesting human document, revealing the état d'âme of a British tourist of insular limitations who drove through France and Italy at the conclusion of the great war which had ended in a manner favourable to our national complacency, whereof he possessed a large share. The narrative, moreover, though unexciting, is both vivacious and vivid, giving an excellent picture of the charm of travel a hundred years ago, while not disguising its minor discomforts. The mild and placid chronicle does not lend itself to quotation. An example of the traveller's humour occurs at Sion, where he found "the remnant of an old custom-house book, the title of which gave us a hearty laugh, coming in our way so happily just after the payment of so exorbitant a price for breakfast. The title was 'Liste des Impositions en France.' If the list was complete, it must needs have formed a huge volume."

Among the busts at Fontainebleau he finds "one of Marlborough," and adds solemnly "whose name is wrong spelled—I think, 'Malbrook.'" One point it would be interesting, and possible, to verify. At the end of the first stage from Abbeville he gave the postilion, who was a Bonapartist, a louis to change bearing the effigy of Louis XVIII., which the postboy treated with disrespect. This was in August, 1814, and if the incident is true, the new coinage must have got rapidly into circulation.

The editor's notes to the volume are very sparse, and might have been improved. Several contemporary prints illustrating places passed on the journey are highly interesting. This cannot be said of some of the portraits. There is one of the sister-in-law of John Mayne, who is never mentioned in the journal, and the likeness is evidently after a photograph taken at least sixty years later than 1814. There is also a bad print of Mlle. Mars, whose name is mentioned, but only as many others are.

M. Georges Cain is by far the best of guides to Old Paris, and the royal personages are to be envied to whom custom attaches him when the Marais has to be shown for the Republic. The Director of Carnavalet is, no doubt, aware of a fact revealed by the publication of the second volume of the Duchesse de Dino's 'Chronique,' that after Talleyrand's death that lady, who had become Duchesse de Talleyrand, but was living in various palaces of her German principalities, all but purchased Madame de Sévigné's famous town house. Paris is to be congratulated on having obtained so perfect a home for its museum. Messrs. Methuen & Co. publish Mr. Alfred Allinson's translation of M. Cain's Walks in Paris as an illustrated volume. Not long ago we noticed the appearance of a translation of another series of essays from M. Cain's pen; and it is unnecessary for us to do more than say once again that all M. Cain writes about Paris is worthy of introduction to English readers. They must not expect to find now in existence all the remains of famous houses here described. The French original was written several years ago, at the moment when the life of some of the old houses was nearing its end. We believe, for example, that even Madame Récamier's last home, the Abbaye, of which we have illustrations as well as letterpress, is now gone.

WOMEN OF NOTE.

THE careers of women like Madame du Barry and Lola Montez have long attracted the general reader. The Suffragettes may share in the honour of creating the present vogue enjoyed by lives of ruling women of many kinds. Not long ago The Athenæum suggested that some writer fond of research in feminine history might do well to select those "two Dorothys" who ruled us here between them for many years—the Duchesse de Dino and Princess Lieven—as the joint subjects of an interesting book. Miss Ethel

C. Mayne in Enchanters of Men (Methuen & Co.) has not taken either of these ladies, both of whom deserve the title better than many of those included among "Royal mistresses" and "Egerias" here portrayed. Miss Mayne has some qualifications for her task. It is impossible to read her chapters on Diane de Poitiers, Gabrielle d'Estrées, Ninon de Lenclos, and Sophie Arnould without seeing that she has more right to be treated as an original writer than have many who lightly enter on a similar undertaking. On the other hand, we must be forgiven for saying that her style stands in need of purification. Why she should have selected that terrible wife of Balzac, Madame Hanska, and the wife of Heine as typical "Egerias," we do not know. Menken we should hardly have classed as an Egeria, but there can be no doubt that it was right to put her in the volume. No one who remembers the best among "the last of the Bohemians" can doubt that the real interest taken in the career of Menken, circus rider and poet, by Joseph Knight and Tom Purnell, was deserved by the strong personality of one of the most miserable of afflicted women. Grisi, Taglioni, and Jenny Lind were all of them known as old ladies to so many living men that it is difficult for their elders to see in those respectable dames "enchanters of men," if indeed Grisi ever enchanted any one—even Mario; or the Swedish paragon any, except by her voice alone. Taglioni no doubt had once ruled the fast men of Europe, but the aged governess—already then for a generation a member of a family usually remarkable for its French provincial virtues—la Comtesse Gilbert des Voisins, used to be present at London dinner parties of the sixties and seventies, without her hostess being able to persuade the other guests that the prim lady could possibly have anything in common with that dancer of whom they had read in history. Miss Mayne quotes Chorley in The Athenæum on Taglioni and Malibran, as well as about Grisi, and in each case his view was, we think, sound, though in two cases questioned. By Taglioni and Malibran all were charmed. Grisi's case was far more doubtful, and there were ups and downs in the excellence of her singing, duly noted by our critic.

One of the many peculiarities of Miss Mayne's style is the turning of French idioms into phrases that are not English. Thus we find "Male chroniclers...reduced to the secular masculine device of waving helpless hands." Her use of English idiom itself is far from pleasant, as witness "Madame Arnould kicked against the cosy pricks." It is useless to multiply citation of such points, for we are certain that Miss Mayne can find them for herself. The practice of using such words as "indemnity" and "definitely" in their French senses grows apace, unfortunately.

The second volume of Duchesse de Dino, Chronique, by Princess Radziwill (Paris, Plon), is not equal in importance to the first, and is, as we foretold, far less interesting to English readers than the first half of that first volume, giving experiences as French ambassador in London, duly quoted by us in our article of 12th December last. The main defect of the editorship of the 'Chronique' lies in the absence of references to the many published letters in which Madame de Dino has described the same events in almost the same words. There is room for a book on the Duchesse de Dino's life where we might have brought together for us everything that has been printed from her admirable pen. Above all, the perfect letters entombed in the ponderous volumes of the Baron de Barante should be combined with the 'Chronique,' the second volume of which consists indeed largely, not of a diary, but of another set of similar letters to another French diplomatist. The title-page again states that the volume contains a biographical index. This is so, and it is different from that given in the first volume; but neither of these so-called indexes gives any references to pages or letters, and their utility is, therefore, not great.

We give a list of the most suggestive references to British affairs and those of the French Court contained in the second volume. Each time that Madame de Dino writes from her own place, Rochecotte, she contrasts its charm with that of her London world, and still more with the horrors of her Paris life. To the latter she applies a phrase in recent times attributed to Lord Rosebery as regards riding in Hyde Park, for she finds herself, at the Rue Saint-Florentin, "the prey of every bore in Europe." She is pleased that London as well as Paris should see the list of a proposed Cabinet presented to the King of the French when he was unable to obtain a Government from Thiers and the rivals of that "little man." There figure, as Prime Minister, Madame Adélaïde; as Minister of Foreign Affairs, Madame de Dino; of the Interior—i.e. Police—Madame de Boigne; and of War, Madame de Flahaut; the last two appointments being a piece of Madame de Dino's spite, evidently added by herself. Up to Talleyrand's death Madame de Dino's pretty pen did not lose its occasional dip in vitriol. At the end of a letter from Valençay, in a paragraph written to defend Princess Lieven against the Emperor of Russia, who did not like the Guizot liaison, there comes a line asking why people "worry Madame de Lieven. Can it be because they suspect that she is just a little bit of an intriguer? How right the English are to put among the best qualities that of keeping quiet!" Madame de Dino for two or three years lost her heart to Tocqueville, and she sent old Talleyrand to vote for her young hero at the Institut, where at this first attempt he did not get in. Meantime she tells us that, instead of enjoying the spring day at Rochecotte or at Valençay, she had to drive, "en voiture fermée, au bois de Boulogne avec Mme. de Lieven, quelle chute!" But the real interest of the anecdote lies in Tocqueville's call to explain that he was much annoyed that Cousin had put him up without his knowledge. Tocqueville

"ne se soucie pas, lui, petit-fils de M. de Malesherbes, de siéger à côté de conventionnels, car cette Académie est, en général, fort mal composée."

Of a letter from Mrs. Norton to Ellice to be communicated to "the Continent" the Duchess writes:—

"J'en ai lue; elle ressort, de cette vilaine histoire, pure comme Desdemona, s'il faut l'en croire; je le veux bien, cela m'est égal. Le tout me paraît bien vulgaire et de bien mauvais genre."

Next comes a similar communication from Lady Jersey, with a copy of her correspondence with Lady Pembroke, and the Duchess complains: "Elle veut aussi que M. de Talleyrand lise tous ces factums." Princess Lieven stays at Valençay, and is bored by Talleyrand's illness, but, after changing her room twice, decides to come back to "le lit de Mme. de Staël. Lady Holland ne nous aurait pas donné plus de peine." We may refer readers to the terrible portrait of Lady Holland drawn by Madame de Dino in the first volume. The deepest of Madame de Dino's contempts was reserved for the son of her old friend Queen Hortense, and on the occasion of the Strasburg "attempt," as afterwards on that of Boulogne, she expresses the wish that he should be sent to the United States or confined for life in a fortress. Balzac's visit to Rochecotte was a disaster. Madame de Dino was as anxious to see him as she had been to see George Sand; but the result was the same. She thought him disgustingly vulgar, and, having been forced by rain to let him stay to dinner, found that his conversation consisted in relating "de lui-même mille choses aux quelles je ne crois nullement." In May, 1837, Madame de Dino gives Lord Conyngham's account of the blunder made by the Duchess of Kent in asking Lord Grey to dinner on the same night as Lady Jersey, when Lord Grey told Sir J. Conroy that he declined to take Lady Jersey in to dinner. A few days later an account is given of the Drawing-Room, when, on the unexpected arrival of the Duchess of Kent with Princess Victoria, the King embraced the latter, without looking at her mother, and then sent the Lord Chamberlain to turn out the Duchess. The result was a correspondence of which copies were sent to all the members of the Cabinet. Immediately afterwards it is noted that Madame de Flahaut was trying to drive the Granvilles out of Paris. When William IV. died and Princess Lieven comes to manage the French Embassy as the permanent guest of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, there is an account by the Princess of the fight over the diamonds in the possession of the young Queen, but left by Queen Charlotte's will to the Crown of Hanover.

There are fewer errors in the present than in the former volume, but some of the English—as, for example, at p. 258—is much mauled, and some of our titles have proved a stumbling-block. A lady mentioned as a daughter of the British Ambassador in Paris, and referred to as "Lady Charlotte Granville," must, we think, be Lady Georgiana Leveson-Gower, who, however, was already at that date the wife of Mr. Fullerton—in other words, the excellent and well-known novelist.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

MR. J. REDDING WARE says in the Preface to his Passing English of the Victorian Era: a Dictionary of Heterodox English, Slang, and Phrase (Routledge):—

"Here is a numerically weak collection of instances of passing English. It may be hoped that there are errors on every page, and also that no entry is 'quite too dull.'"

We find a good deal of Early and Mid Victorian slang which will be strange to the modern generation, and we compliment the author on his industry, and on giving exact references in many cases for his quotations. But we must seriously complain of the inadequacy of the etymologies offered. It seems that the 'New English Dictionary,' Prof. Skeat's 'Etymological Dictionary,' and other works of authority have been published in vain. When their results are all ignored by the journalist, he has the excuse that he has no time to be accurate, though he might as well use a few good books of reference instead of press cuttings. But a book, as a fairly permanent record, ought to aim at a higher standard of accuracy. The majority of the papers here quoted make no attempt to correct popular misconceptions of English derivations. Some of the references—such as "See Grego" under 'Æstheticism'—are alike obscure and unnecessary. Common meanings of "beef," as of "blood," "No. 1," and other phrases, are ignored. Other omissions concern "Hunger-marchers" (a very recent invention), "Not 'arf" and "Not cricket," "smug," and "stony" [broke]. We find "Pecksniffian" and "Podsnappery," but not "Pickwickian." However, one volume of 271 pages cannot hold everything, and the compiler has given us a great deal in his space.

Occasionally he goes out of his way for strange explanations. Thus "Still as a mouse" is explained: "Quite still. But a mouse is never still! Good example of a bad translation. No doubt from the half-Dutch Court of William III." "Als stille als in mee hose," is then suggested, with an alternative "Still as Amos"! The "mouse" is English, not translated. Tom Bertram said to Fanny in 'Mansfield Park,' concerning her acting in the play "It will not much signify if nobody hears a word you say, so you may be as creepmouse as you like."

No one can accuse Mr. Ware of being a gambler on the turf, for he thinks that 'T and O' is a brief form of 2 to 1! A glance at The Sportsman any day in the week would probably show the real meaning, which is "Taken and offered." It is only fair, however, to say that in various forms of special slang Mr. Ware is well instructed.

Hungary and the Hungarians. By W. B. Forster Bovill (Methuen & Co.)—Insufficient to remedy a real want as Mr. Bovill's book may be in some respects, his statements are trustworthy as a rule; and whilst his inclination impels him to portray the literary and artistic associations of Hungary, the more valuable portion of his book is that relating to contemporary mercantile matters. The politician, too, will find much desirable information between the covers of this volume; but intending travellers, or would-be pioneers of commercial undertakings, may safely ignore the introductory, oft-told tale of 'The Glowing Past,' and the imaginative conclusions on 'The Future of Hungary.'

Whatever travellers with unlimited time or purses may discover out of the way of beaten tracks, the ordinary tourist must no longer look for Oriental apathy and quietude in the cities of the Magyar, for, as Mr. Bovill points out,

"to-day one of the finest narrow-gauge electric tramway systems in the world interlaces Budapest at every point, and travelling is not only rapid, but inexpensive. It must not be forgotten that Budapest boasts of having the first tube-railway, and although travelling is not so luxurious underground as in London, it is a most serviceable system, seeing that it touches just those streets outside the radius of the street tramways."

Those who rush to Budapest with excursion tickets, or in motors, know little of the land and its people:—

"Visitors to Budapest must not imagine for a moment that.....they have seen Hungary and the Hungarians. What they have seen is a cosmopolitan city with an English flavour about it... but Hungary and the Hungarians they have not seen. These are beyond beaten tourist tracks in the region of the hills, and on the great plain."

"If you want to see Hungary and the Hungarians," says Mr. Bovill, "begin where I did, away in the Carpathians"; and, although travellers generally end their tour where this one began his, the story of his journey will be found useful. After due allowance for Mr. Bovill's ultra-romantic style, his description of the various races he went amongst and their methods of life will be found highly interesting and unconventional. The finest spots in the Carpathians are becoming the resorts of fashionable invalids, and they and their inhabitants will soon lose their national characteristics, so that it is well that observant travellers like Mr. Bovill should record what they see before it is too late.

Those who are familiar with the picturesque garbs of the various races dwelling within the Magyar dominions will thoroughly appreciate the author's desire that some prominent person in Hungary, the land of gorgeous garments, should be found, to promote a society for the preservation of national costumes. Unfortunately, at any rate for artists and travellers, the gaudily coloured garbs are doomed. Change is passing over the lands under the sway of the Magyars, and all their peoples are being rapidly influenced by the desire to become as other men are. Nor can "the generosity of nature, tenacity of friendship, combined with an enormous capacity for enjoyment," which Mr. Bovill considers "the trinity of virtues" characterizing the Magyar people, for long withstand the strain put upon them by constant communication with neighbouring nations. The Magyar is adopting our methods of sport. Cricket and golf still wait to be introduced, but football and lawn tennis now approach a good standard.

In the course of his erratic wanderings Mr. Bovill visited Kassa, and what attracted his notice in this busy, prosperous city was an industrial institution for the reformation of young criminals:—

"The spaciousness of the place makes its appeal to the juvenile consciousness. There is an entire absence of anything resembling a house of detention. It is the sanatorium idea. They are ill, and must wait and be cured. Residents in the colony are not called prisoners, but boarders, and they are grouped in families. In the boys' home each head of a family has twenty-four foster children to father, and he has constantly to exercise the duties of a parent toward them, teaching them to be forbearing, kind, and courteous to each other."

The success of the experiment is unprecedented, as is proved by the statistics adduced. As Mr. Bovill points out, "we have nothing in England comparable with this system, and have much to learn from it," although, it may be noted, somewhat similar methods of reclaiming juvenile offenders have, from time to time, been placed before British administrators. At Kassa

"everything is done to render the life of the child not penal, but pleasant. They have their games, bands, and swimming school, and may even visit their parents occasionally.....In the workshops the most up-to-date machinery and methods are employed. The boys are allowed to earn wages, thus stimulating diligence and engendering thrift."

The system of penalties enforced is worthy of notice by persons interested in the reformation of juvenile criminals.

In Transylvania the author visited certain gipsy encampments, and found that for "undiluted filth they cannot be beaten in Hungary." Yet this nomadic people, if amongst the most undesirable inhabitants on account of dirt and constant wandering from place to place, is universally popular on account of its music. Some less-known characteristics of the gipsies are portrayed in the work, and the following historic incident shows how they have been treated:

"In 1782, forty-five of these nomads were beheaded, quartered, or hanged, on a charge of cannibalism. First they were racked until they confessed to the crime of murder, then they were brought to the spot where their victims were said to be buried, and when no bodies appeared they were racked again. 'We ate them,' was their despairing cry, and forthwith the journals teemed with accounts of 'eighty-five persons roasted by gipsy cannibals,' and straightway the 'cannibals' were hurried to the scaffold. The whole incident was so unsatisfactory that Joseph II. sent a Commission down, whose inquiries showed that no one had been murdered save the victims of the false accusation."

Mr. Bovill's chapter on 'Agriculture and Commerce' is of real utility, and his account of the enormous growth of the silkworm industry should arouse the emulative zeal of some of the British Colonies. The paternal government of Hungary has carefully fostered sericulture, also cattle-breeding, poultry farming, honey-making, and fruit cultivation.

Despite much high-flown language, needless digressions, and curious orthographical errors, quaintly but insufficiently apologized for, the work contains a great amount of information valuable to the trader, the traveller, the artist, and the politician. Numerous illustrations and a convenient map enhance its utility.

The Old Man in the Corner. By Baroness Orczy. Illustrated by H. M. Brock. (Greening & Co.)—An attempt to give the continuity of a novel to this book has been made by the author. It does not profess to be a series of short stories, yet that it undoubtedly is, held together by two personalities. One of these is the old man, and the other is Miss Polly Burton, a journalist, who meets the old man at a tea-shop, and hears him solve the criminal mysteries of the day. For the Baroness Orczy's book frankly consists of detective yarns. There is a certain fascination in the figure of the little nervous old man, twisting a piece of string into knots, as he unfolds the secrets of the mysteries he has unravelled. The stories are ingenious, and the dénouement is unexpected and sensational.

War Songs. Selected by Christopher Stone. Introduction by General Sir Ian Hamilton. (Oxford, Clarendon Press.)—The British soldier, as Sir Ian Hamilton clearly shows in a preface of characteristic chivalry, loves a good song of sentiment or patriotism; but there is danger in the music-hall melodies à la militaire, which mistake the soldier and mislead the civilian.

Tyrtæus did wonders for the Spartans; but the editor of this collection of poems is no Tyrtæus, though he has a pedagogic interest (as his notes show) in the subject: "But if patriotic sentiment is wanted, I have patriotic ballads cut and dried." That is near the mark; but this volume will hardly fire the heart of any honest Briton with fervent memory or patriotic zeal.

The arrangement is not sympathetic: the poems follow the chronological order of their composition, which does not interest the ordinary reader. He may resent the incongruity of finding Robert Browning's 'Cavalier Tunes' close after Charles Lever's 'Irish Dragoon,' and Cowper's 'Boadicea' next-door-but-one to 'The Dashing White Sergeant.' It would surely have been better to group the poems about the particular battles or campaigns to which they refer, setting those of more general reference as punctuation-marks of the different periods.

The editing itself strikes us as slovenly. For instance, 'The Bold Dragoon; or, The Plain of Badagos, 1812,' is printed as No. LXII., and the chorus is no more than "Whack, fal de ral, &c."; while 'The Bold Dragoon' himself, with chorus in full, is given as No. LXXX.—the original (it would seem) after the parody, and never a note of a connexion between the two. We do not see why Campbell's 'Hohenlinden' need have a place; and we do not know why some of the better war songs of recent date are not included, even though their writers have the misfortune to be yet alive. Perhaps copyright has interfered. Those who have sung to soldiers would not be ashamed to place some of Mr. Kipling's 'Barrack-Room Ballads,' and Mr. Housman's 'Shropshire Lad,' poems, and certain other friends, in a publication of this kind; for the soldier of to-day is not to be represented, nor to be stimulated, only by the songs of yesterday. The volume leaves the Army and the Empire still without the collection which Sir Ian Hamilton's preface incidentally desiderates—a soldiers' song-book.

These Little Ones. By E. Nesbit. Illustrations by Spencer Pryse. (Allen & Sons.)—In these stories, which deal almost wholly with cases of cruelty to children, and bear a little too visibly the stamp of the Christmas number, Mrs. Bland is some way off her best. We long for a touch of the brightness which makes many of her books such pleasant reading. Sympathy with the sorrows of childhood is at all times an essential and pleasing characteristic of her work, but it is here too often permitted to degenerate into sentimentality and even morbidness. It is true that in both these respects Dickens was equally guilty, but he had the excuse of writing for a public less prone to compassion than that of our own day.

THE fascination of "exploring the unknown and mapping the mysterious," coupled with an invitation from Dr. Daniel Trembly MacDougal, "Director of the Department of Botanical Research of the Carnegie Institution of Washington," to accompany him on a desert trip, led Dr. W. T. Hornaday to visit a region in many respects the reverse of attractive. He describes his wanderings under the title Camp-Fires on Desert and Lava (Werner Laurie). The expedition numbered originally seven persons, four being men of science and sportsmen, the others attendants; the route followed was generally West from Tucson, in Arizona on the South Pacific Railway, viâ Sonoyta, "a lonesome little spot" signifying "The - Place - Where - Corn - Will - Grow," on a river of the same name, to the Pinacate Lava Fields, and mountains which approach within ten to fifteen miles the Gulf of California, and are on the Mexican side of the boundary. Indeed, from Sonoyta westwards the route lay, except for small divergences, in Mexico. Though the land is for the greater part uninviting, being clothed with thorny acacias, mimosas, giant cactus, ocatilla, prickly pear, and similar species, among which are the choya cactus group, yet it has a weird beauty of its own, and animal life is found where it might scarcely be expected. Respecting the spines of the choya, the author warns intending travellers that "the Choya cactus group must be approached with outrageous caution. First, one may well pray to be spared from coming in personal touch with any of its members; and secondly, that in the event of contact, grace may be given to enable you to go on through life without using language."

No pains, he says, are

"as exquisite and nerve-searching as those made by the spines of Bigelow's Accursed Choya. Their entrance is very painful, but their exit is worse; and the aftermath is like rheumatism of the eye..... The ground is littered with them. They lie there like so many innocent-looking silvery chestnut burrs, rather pretty to look at, to be sure; but each one contains all the materials for serious trouble."

The remarks about the mountain sheep of which specimens were procured are of much interest, Dr. Hornaday believing that the animal is identical with the Rocky Mountain big-horn, but smaller because of its environment. He says they represent "the end of the great chain of sheep which stretches almost without a break from the aoudad of the Barbary States of north Africa to its jumping-off place at Pinicate and in Lower California. The series runs in the following order: Aoudad, monflon [mouflon, O. musimon], arcal sheep, burrhel, Tibetan argali, Marco Polo's sheep, Siberian argali, Kamchatkan sheep, white sheep, black sheep, and big-horn."

He thinks (and it is not improbable) that the Altai Mountains are the cradle of the genus Ovis; there or on the Pamirs are found the greatest of all sheep, thus recorded by Marco Polo: "Il hi a grant moutitude de mouton sauvages qe sunt grandisme, car out lee cornes bien six paumes."

The volume is well turned out and amply illustrated, eight of the plates being coloured. The type is good, and there is an Index.

Verbum Sempiternum. By John Taylor.—The date of the first edition of the 'Thumb Bible,' one of the smallest of miniature books, has been usually given as 1616, but Col. Allardyce of Culquoich is the fortunate possessor of a copy dated two years earlier. Inquiry fails to produce another copy, but it would be dangerous to affirm that it is "unique." To commemorate his ownership, Col. Allardyce has reprinted the text, page for page, as a small quarto. The 'Thumb Bible' is a summary in verse of the books of the Bible, and the first two editions were dedicated to the wife and son of James I. Other editions, still miniature, were issued in the last years of the seventeenth century and the early years of the eighteenth, while facsimiles were issued in 1818, 1849, and 1889. The present little book is well printed, and illustrated with two facsimiles showing the exact size of the original, which may be known by the error "Sempiternæ" on the title-page.

Printers' Pie, published at the offices of The Sphere and Tatler, and edited, as formerly, by Mr. W. Hugh Spottiswoode, has reached its seventh year, and a position independent of the reviewer's praise. It is very bright and entertaining, both in its text and pictures.

A LETTER OF JOHNSON.

Blundellsands.

THE letter printed in The Athenæum of last week, the publication of which we owe to Miss Schomberg's inquiries, is of much value to students of Johnson's life. To myself especially it has an interest as confirming a theory which I had formed only a few weeks ago in reference to Johnson's association with the Whitby family.

Nearly twenty-five years ago T. J. M. (Mr. Mazzinghi, of the Salt Library, Stafford) communicated to Notes and Queries (6 S. x. 421-2) the discovery of a letter dated "Stafford, May 10," from the Rev. John Addenbrooke (1713-76), afterwards Dean of Lichfield, to "Thomas Whitby, Esq^r, at Heywood," making arrangements for Mr. Whitby to engage "Mr. Johnson" as tutor to his son. An endorsement on this letter, written by Thomas Whitby's grandson in 1824, attributed it to a period soon after Johnson's leaving Market Bosworth in the summer of 1732; and this conjecture has not been disputed. But on looking into the matter I found that it must almost certainly be incorrect. Addenbrooke asks to know Mr. Whitby's "resolution to-morrow; because I am obliged to go to Sudbury on Monday, where I shall stay all the week." This clearly pointed to the letter having been written on a Saturday; and taking the whole period to which it could possibly be attributed, I found that the 10th of May fell on a Saturday only in 1735 and 1740.

The new letter, written by Johnson to Congreve from Thomas Whitby's house at Great Haywood on June 25th, 1735, leaves small room for doubt that Addenbrooke's letter belongs to the preceding month; and gains interest from the fact that it was written only a fortnight before Johnson's marriage to Mrs. Porter. It seems clear now that Addenbrooke's reference to Johnson's affairs not giving him leave to be with

Mr. Whitby's son so long as half a year forecasts his approaching marriage, and his intention of establishing the private school at Edial, on the lines suggested in the letter to Congreve.

Thomas Whitby was born in 1673, and died in 1747. The son to whom Johnson's tutoring was to be "of more service than a year spent in the usual way at the University" must have been John (born 1716), who on March 19th, 1735/6, matriculated from University College, Oxford; he became a barrister of the Middle Temple in 1742, and died early in 1751 of the smallpox.

Johnson's correspondent must have been Richard Congreve, who matriculated from Christ Church on March 17th, 1732/3, aged eighteen, and took his B.A. in 1736. His elder brother was Johnson's schoolfellow Charles Congreve.

There is one point relating to the date of Addenbrooke's letter which calls for a satisfactory solution. According to Cox's 'Derbyshire Churches,' vol. iii. p. 318, he did not become Rector of Sudbury until August 14th, 1736. For this reason, until I opened last week's Athenæum, I was disposed to attribute the letter to 1740, as there would seem no reason for his going to Sudbury for a week in 1735. It is possible, so far as our knowledge of Johnson's life extends, that he was at Mr. Whitby's in May, 1740, as well as in 1735; but it does not seem very probable. Yet we know that he was in Staffordshire in January, 1740, on a visit of some duration.

Any letter belonging to this obscure period of Johnson's life is especially welcome. This one corroborates the common view that his earlier manhood held so much of failure and humiliation as to seal his lips concerning it when established fame bred biographical curiosity in his admirers.

There seems no possibility of the profile on the seal to the letter being that of Sir Joshua Reynolds, who was only a boy of eleven at the time.

ALEYN LYELL READE.

APPROPRIATING TITLES.

17, Loudonn Road, St. John's Wood.

ANOTHER example of the above malfeasance is shown in your number of April 3rd. 'Within Four Walls' is my title, and was used by me for a successful book which passed in serial form through the columns of The Gentlewoman, and was afterwards published by the proprietor in volume form, and is still to be had.

Some one used my title for a play published in book form last year; but when it comes to another book I feel I must add my protest to the other.

I wrote to you on this subject before, a few weeks ago.

J. E. PANTON.

JOHN MOUNTGOMERYE AND THE LONDON MARCHING WATCH.

13, Brunswick Gardens, W.,
March 4th, 1909.

WHEN editing the 'Survey of London' (i. 103) I was unable to discover more of John Mountgomerye's book on the manner and order of a marching watch in London than that the copy which, Stow says, was presented by the writer to the Lord Mayor, is still preserved in the archives at the Guildhall. Recently, however, I have found the following amongst some notes of Stow's on 'Honour of Citizens,' ap. Harley MS. 540, f. 72:—

"A boke containinge the mannar and order of a watche to be vsed in the cittie of london vpon the even at night of S. John Baptiste and S. peeter, as in tymes hathe bene accustomed, dedicated to sir T. pullison, lord maior and his brithren the aldarmen by John Mountgomerye, 1585, And lykewyse an othar coppie of the same boke was gyven to the company of the armorars of london, pasfilde beinge master."

The reference to the second copy was omitted by Stow in his printed 'Survey of London.' I have made inquiry of the Armorers and Brasiers' Company, and am informed that the book is no longer in the Company's archives, nor does there seem to be any record of its having been there. Pasfield is, however, remembered as the donor of a valuable cup to his Company.

C. L. KINGSFORD.

LIST OF NEW BOOKS.

ENGLISH.

Theology.

- Codex Climaci Rescriptus, 10/6 net. Fragments of sixth-century Palestinian Syriac texts of the Gospels, of the Acts of the Apostles, and of St. Paul's Epistles, also fragments of an early Palestinian Lectionary of the Old Testament, &c. Transcribed and edited by Agnes S. Lewis, with 7 facsimiles.
Horton (R. F.), The Triumph of the Cross, 1/ net. Brief counsels on faith and duty.
Pember (G. H.), The Great Prophecies of the Centuries concerning the Church, 7/6
Stedman (W. Nathan), Antichrist and the Man of Sin.
Unveiled Heart, 1/ net. Private prayers and quotations selected by the late Rev. Walter James, edited by E. Theodore Carrier.

Fine Art and Archaeology.

- Berks, Bucks, and Oxon Archaeological Journal, April, 1/6. Edited by Rev. P. H. Ditchfield.
Bernard (Auguste), Geofroy Tory, Painter and Engraver: First Royal Printer: Reformer of Orthography and Typography under François I. An account of his life and works, translated by G. B. Ives, and produced by the Riverside Press.
Bernete y Moret (A. de), The School of Madrid, 7/6 net. With numerous full-page illustrations.
Billings (R. W.), The Baronial and Ecclesiastical Antiquities of Scotland, Vol. II., 7/6 net.
Browne (Edith A.), Greek Architecture, 3/6 net. Contains 48 full-page illustrations reproduced from photographs.
Macfall (Haldane), Vigée Le Brun, 1/6 net. Illustrated with 8 reproductions. One of the Masterpieces in Colour.
Naville (Édouard), The Temple of Deir el Bahari, Part VI. With architectural description by Somers Clarke, and plates of the Lower Terrace, with additions and plans. For notice of Part I. see Athen. Dec. 7, 1907, p. 725.
Paris Salon, Illustrated Catalogue, 1909, 3/
Weitenkampf (F.), How to Appreciate Prints, 7/6 net. A talk with those who like engravings, etchings, or other prints, and want to know more about them.

Poetry and the Drama.

- Crandall (C. H.), Songs from Sky Meadows, 1 dol. net. Poems of nature and of nature's children.
Northrop (G. N.), In Itinere: Poems, 3/6 net.
Stephens (J.), Insurrections, 1/ net.
Thomson (E. W.), When Lincoln Died, and other Poems, 5/ net.
Wharton (Edith), Artemis to Actæon, and other Verse, 4/6 net.

Bibliography.

- Bibliophile, May, 6d. net. A magazine for the collector, student, and general reader.
Book-Auction Records, Vol. VI., Part 2. Edited by Frank Karslake.
Folkard (H. T.), Catalogue of Books in the Free Public Library of Wigan, Reference Department: Part IX., R.

Philosophy.

- Knowlson (T. Sharper), The Education of the Will, 6/ net. A popular study.

Political Economy.

- Hobson (J. A.), The Industrial System, 7/6 net. An inquiry into earned and unearned income.
Lewis (F. W.), State Insurance a Social and Industrial Need, 5/ net.

History and Biography.

- Andrews (E. L.), Napoleon and America. An outline of the relations of the United States to the career and downfall of Napoleon.
Butler (Lewis), Sir Redvers Buller, 3/6 net. Reprinted, with additions, from 'The King's Royal Rifle Corps Chronicle,' with portraits and facsimile letter.
Crichton (Douglas), The Admirable Crichton: the Real Character, 1/ net. Illustrated.
Dictionary of National Biography: Vol. XV. Owens—Pockrich, 15/ net.
Flanders (W. Howard), Balkania, 2/6 net. A short history of the Balkan States.
Grierson (Major-General J. M.), Records of the Scottish Volunteer Force, 1859-1908, 25/ net. These 'Records' are designed as a contribution to the military annals of Scotland.
Hannay (D.), A Short History of the Royal Navy: Vol. II. 1689-1815, 7/6 net.
Jackson (Holbrook), Bernard Shaw, 1/ net. New Edition.
Macdonald (J. H. A.), Fifty Years of It, 10/6 net. The experiences and struggles of a Volunteer of 1859.
Maude (Col. F. N.), The Jena Campaign, 1806, 5/ net. No. 9 of the Special Campaign Series.
Memorials of Old Lancashire, 2 vols, 25/ net. Edited by Lieut.-Col. Fishwick and the Rev. P. H. Ditchfield, with many illustrations.

Rockefeller (John D.), Random Reminiscences of Men and Events, 6/
Steiner (E. A.), Tolstoy, the Man and his Message, 5/ net. Enlarged Edition, illustrated.

Geography and Travel.

Aberystwyth. Published by the Corporation.
Baedeker (Karl), The United States, 15/ net. With excursions to Mexico, Cuba, Porto Rico, and Alaska. Contains 33 maps and 48 plans. New Edition.
Beadnell (H. J. Llewellyn), An Egyptian Oasis, 10/6 net. An account of the Oasis of Kharga in the Libyan Desert, with special reference to its history, physical geography, and water-supply, with maps and illustrations.
Carter (J.), In the Wake of the Setting Sun, 16/ net. Illustrated impressions of a trip round the world.
Collier (Price), England and the English from an American Point of View, 7/6 net.
Great Eastern Railway Company's Tourist-Guide to the Continent, 6d. Edited by Percy Lindley, with travel-talk in German, French, and English, and illustrations and maps.
Patterson (G.), The Madras Manual of Geography, 2/6. The present volume is intended mainly for use in India, and the Indian Empire is therefore treated with much greater fullness than any other country. There are 92 maps and 85 diagrams and illustrations.
Stevenson (R. L.), Essays of Travel, 2/ net. Fine-Paper Edition. For notice see Athen., June 24, 1905, p. 781.

Sports and Pastimes.

Cricket at the Breakfast Table, by the Author of 'Cricket on the Brain', 1/ net. A book of jokes on cricket in verse and prose, illustrated by "Gil."
Patterson (W. Seeds), Sixty Years of Uppingham Cricket, 6/ net.
Souvenir of the Old Coaching Days and the White Horse Cellar, Piccadilly, 1/ net. With 8 illustrations in colour from old sporting prints of the period.

Education.

Harvard College, 1907-8, Reports of the President and the Treasurer.

Philology.

Roberts (T. R.), The Proverbs of Wales, 1/6 net. A selection of Welsh proverbs with English translations.
Thucydides, Histories, Book IV., 3/6. Edited by T. R. Mills, with a general introduction by H. Stuart Jones.

School-Books.

Barbour (J.), The Bruce, 1/6. Selections for use in schools, edited, with an introduction, a section of early Scots grammar, notes, and a glossary, by W. M. Mackenzie.
Eden (F. S.), School History of the County Palatine of Durham, 1/6 net. With 62 illustrations.
Jackson (C. S.) and Roberts (W. M.), A First Dynamics, 5/. With more than 200 diagrams and numerous examples.
Tacitus, Agricola, 2/6. Attempts to convey in simple form information for the student who first makes acquaintance with Tacitus through the medium of the 'Agricola,' with introduction and notes by Duane R. Stuart.

Science.

Arima (Sumitomo), Judo: Japanese Physical Culture, 12/. A further exposition of Jujitsu and similar arts. Illustrated.
Baron (Harold), Chemical Industry on the Continent, 1/ net. A report to the electors to the Gartside Scholarships.
Boulenger (G. A.), Catalogue of the Freshwater Fishes of Africa in the British Museum (Natural History), Vol. I., 32/6.
Burdett's Hospitals and Charities, 1909, 7/6 net. The year-book of philanthropy and the hospital annual.
Eggeling (O.) and Ehrenberg (F.), The Freshwater Aquarium and its Inhabitants, 8/ net. Illustrated.
Finn (F.), Wild Beasts of the World, Part 14, 1/ net. With illustrations in colour.
Further Advances in Physiology, 15/ net. Edited by Leonard Hill.
Is Death the End? or, Conscious Personality after Death, by a Well-Known Writer, 3/ net. An effort to put into plain language the evidence for conscious personality after death—evidence from psychical investigation, philosophy, science, &c.
James (A. F. Brodie), Nitrate Facts and Figures, 1909, 2/6 net.
Jameson (H. G.), Illustrated Guide to the Trees and Flowers of England and Wales, 2/6 net. Intended to help the ordinary nature-lover, who may have little or no special knowledge of botany, to find out the names of the trees and flowers he meets with.
Joly (J.), Radio-activity and Geology, 7/6 net. An account of the influence of radio-active energy on terrestrial history.
Matthews (J. M.), Laboratory Manual of Dyeing and Textile Chemistry, 15/ net.
National Physical Laboratory, Report for 1908.
Newcomb (S. W.), Outdoor Carpentry, 6d. net. Second Edition, with illustrations, No. I. of The Country House Series.
Orrock (J. W.), Railroad Structures and Estimates, 12/6 net.
Potts' Mining Register and Directory, 1909, 10/ net.
Problem of the Feeble-Minded, 1/ net. An abstract of the Report of the Royal Commission on the Care and Control of the Feeble-Minded, with an introduction by Sir Edward Fry.
Sainsbury (H.), Drugs and the Drug Habit, 7/6 net. Contains 11 illustrations.
Saleeby (Caleb W.), Parenthood and Race Culture, 7/6 net. An attempt to survey and define the whole field of eugenics.
Science Physics Papers, 2/6. The questions set at the Intermediate Science Examination of the University of London, 1885 to 1908.
Scott (Dukinfield H.), Studies in Fossil Botany: Vol. II. Spermatophyta, 10/6 net. Second Edition, containing 212 illustrations.
Steel Construction, 6d. An easy introduction to the science of designing and building in steel, with numerous illustrations. No. 19 of the Carpenter and Builder Technical Series.

Tregarthen (J. C.), The Life Story of an Otter, 6/ net. With illustrations.
Vos (G. H.), Birds and their Nests and Eggs found in and near Great Towns, 3/6. Three series in one volume.
Wright (H. J. and W. P.), Beautiful Flowers and How to Grow Them, Part 13, 1/ net. Contains illustrations in colour.

Year-Book of the Scientific and Learned Societies of Great Britain and Ireland, 7/6. A record of the work done in science, literature, and art during the session 1907-8 by numerous societies and Government institutions. Compiled from official sources.

Juvenile Books.

Adams (J. H.), Harper's Machinery Book for Boys, 6/
Brown (Mabel A.), The Children's Calendar of Song, Game, and Verse, 3/ net. With numerous illustrations.
Gillie (Rev. R. C.), Little Sermons to the Children, 1/
Learnmount (Rev. James), In God's Orchard, 3/6. Talks to young folk on 'The Fruits of the Spirit,' 'The Beatitudes,' 'The Lord's Prayer,' 'Best Things,' and 9 miscellaneous addresses.
Martin (E. Le Breton), The Boys of the Otter Patrol, 2/6. A story of the Boy Scouts.

Fiction.

Adams (F. Upham), The Bottom of the Well, 6/. A story of adventure, with 4 illustrations in colour by Alex. O. Levy.
Buckrose (J. E.), A Little Green World, 6/. A village comedy without a plot and without a problem.
Bullen (Frank T.), Beyond, 6/. An adventurous sea tale.
Clegg (T. B.), Joan of the Hills, 6/. A story of London and life on a remote Australian station.
Darche (Muriel), Coquette, 6/. The tale of a woman's rise from low life to a position in the country.
Deeping (W.), The Red Saint, 6/. The adventures of a saint of the time of Simon de Montfort and Henry III., with a frontispiece by Christopher Clark.
Edge (K. M.), The Shuttles of the Loom, 6/. Deals with the life of a forest officer in Southern India.
Forman (Justus M.), The Quest, 6/. An emotional and romantic drama, with illustrations by W. Hatherell.
Gardiner (F. C.), Divided Houses, 6/. A tale of human desires laid in a mining district.
Helledoren (J.), A Running Fight, 6/. A tale of secret treasure.
Hichens (R.), Barbary Sheep, 6/. The story is laid in Algeria, and is a study of the influence and charm that an Eastern man may exercise over a Western woman.
Inner Shrine, 6/. A tale of to-day, with 9 illustrations. Published anonymously, but said to be by a well-known author.
Jarvis (Scudamore), Private Coles, Philosopher, 1/ net. A series of humorous incidents in a soldier's career.
Lane (Elinor M.), Katrine, 6/
Montague (Margaret P.), In Calvert's Valley, 6/. This story tells how a man's destiny was affected by a tragedy, and how the lives of a woman and various others were mingled with his in a tangled web.
Pratz (Claire de), Elisabeth Davenay, 6/. A story concerned with the "feminist" movement in France.
Rothfeld (Otto), Indian Dust, 3/6 net. Stories of modern Indian life, mostly in the part of the country inhabited by wild forest tribes and ruled by independent Rajput chiefs under what can almost be described as a feudal system.
Stanton (Coralie) and Hosken (Heath), The Tears of Desire, 6/
Tom Genuflex, by Aunt Cherry, 6/. A religious story.
Troubridge (Lady), The First Law, 6/. Deals with the struggle of a Prime Minister against the consequences of a wild past.
Walpole (Hugh), The Wooden Horse, 6/. The story of a feud in the family of Sir Jeremy Trojan and his three children.
White (W. Holt), The Earthquake, 1/ net. A romance of London. New Edition.
Williams (R.), Memoirs of a Buccaneer, 6/. A romance of Blake's time.
Young (Margaret), The Wreathed Dagger, 6/. A tale of the days of Cavalier and Roundhead, with a frontispiece by Fred Leist.

General Literature.

Allen (J. W.), Wheel Magic; or, Revolutions of an Impressionist, 3/6 net. Impressions of a cyclist.
Clough (E. M. O.), The South African Parliamentary Manual, 1909, 15/ net. New Edition.
Edwards (A. D.), Children of the Poor, 1/ net. Descriptions of their life, and possible means of improving the conditions under which they are reared.
Finsbury Library: Wenyon's Four Thousand Miles across Siberia, New Edition, Kelly's The Great Chinese Awakening, John Wesley's Journal, Abridged Edition, Male's Through Two Campaigns, Third Edition, and Wesley's Veterans, 2 vols, 1/ net each.
Gauss (H. C.), The American Government, Organization and Officials, 21/ net. An original summary, including the duties and powers of Federal office-holders, and data from official sources.
Morals in Modern Business: Addresses, 5/ net.
Naval Annual, 1909, 12/6 net. Edited by T. A. Brassey.
Printers' Pie, 1/ net. See p. 586.
Smith (J.), Junius Unveiled, 2/6 net. Suggests that Junius is Gibbon.

Pamphlets.

Bulley (E. A.), George Augustus Selwyn, First Bishop of New Zealand, 2d. net.
Colchester, Report of the Museum and Muniment Committee, 2d.
Holland (H. Scott), George Howard Wilkinson, Bishop of St. Andrews and Primus of the Scottish Episcopal Church, 2d. net.
Horniman Museum and Library, Forest Hill, S.E., Seventh Annual Report, 1d. Issued by the London County Council.
How (F. D.), William Walsham How, First Bishop of Wakefield, 2d. net.

FOREIGN.

Theology.

Süskind (H.), Der Einfluss Schellings auf die Entwicklung v. Schleiermachers System, 7m. 60

Fine Art and Archaeology.

Pointner (A.), Die Werke des florentinischen Bildhauers Agostino d'Antonio di Duccio, 20m.
Rodenwaldt (G.), Die Komposition der pompejanischen Wandgemälde, 9m. With 38 illustrations.

Poetry and Drama.

Kolsen (A.), Giraut de Bornelh, des Trobadors, sämtliche Lieder, mit Übersetzg., Kommentar, u. Glossar, hrsg., Vol. I. Part III., 3m. 60.
Lintilhac (E.), Histoire générale du Théâtre en France: Vol. IV. La Comédie, dix-huitième Siècle, 3frs. 50.
Preitz (M.), Gottfried Kellers dramatische Bestrebungen, 4m. 40.
Verrier (P.), Essai sur les Principes de la Métrique anglaise: Part I. Métrique auditive; Part II. Théorie générale du Rythme. These two volumes, part of a thesis presented for a Doctorate at the University of Paris, will be completed by a third, 'Notes de Métrique expérimentale.'

History and Biography.

Ettlinger (J.), Benjamin Constant: der Roman eines Lebens, 6m.
Revue historique, mai-juin, 6fr.
Soltan (W.), Die Anfänge der römischen Geschichtsschreibung, 6m.

Science.

Ingerslev (E.), Französische Geburtshelfer zur Zeit Louis XIV., 5m.
Landtman (Gunnar), The Primary Causes of Social Inequality. Written in English, but published at Helsingfors, Finland.

Fiction.

Floran (M.), Lequel l'aimait? 3fr. 50.

* * All Books received at the Office up to Wednesday Morning will be included in this List unless previously noted. Publishers are requested to state prices when sending Books.

Literary Gossip.

THERE is, it appears, some misconception abroad as to the nature and scope of Mr. James Douglas's forthcoming monograph on Swinburne. The book was undertaken more than two years ago at the request of Messrs. Methuen, and will be mainly a critical study, with some personal impressions of the poet. It is in no sense a biography. The official biography of the poet, we are able to state, will be written by Mr. Theodore Watts-Dunton, to whom Swinburne bequeathed the entire copyright in his published and unpublished writings and letters. We understand that the family correspondence between the poet and his relatives has also been placed in Mr. Watts-Dunton's hands. We may point out that none of Swinburne's letters can be printed without the permission of Mr. Watts-Dunton, his sole executor. That permission, we believe, will be rigidly withheld.

MESSRS. SMITH & ELDER will publish on the 26th inst. 'A Three-Foot Stool,' by Mr. Peter Wright, which is partly impressions of travel in America and partly fiction, and includes poetry as well as prose.

MR. T. FISHER UNWIN will publish soon a work entitled 'The Function of Religion in Man's Struggle for Existence,' by Prof. G. B. Foster of Chicago University, who is already known to English readers through the 'Finality of the Christian Religion,' issued in 1906. The forthcoming book may be described as a popular embodiment of reconstructive religious thought. It traces the evolution of religion from its past physical and intellectual interpretations to the voluntary and intuitive concepts of modern psychology.

AMONGST the papers in the June issue of Chambers's Journal are 'Looking Back on the Bush,' recollections of life in Australia by Mr. Will. H. Ogilvie; 'A Dog in the Pulpit,' by Mr. Coulson Kernahan; 'Diarists of the Day,' by Mr. T. H. S. Escott; and 'A Visit to Elba,' by Mr. A. F. Steuart.

WE notice with regret the death of Mr. R. Nisbet Bain, Assistant Librarian at the British Museum, which he entered in 1883. Mr. Bain was a specialist in Scandinavian and Slavonic history, on which he wrote frequently in our own columns; and his numerous books and translations were of the more value because there are so few competent students of these subjects in this country. His publications include 'Gustavus III. and his Contemporaries'; 'Charles XII. and the Collapse of the Swedish Empire'; 'The Pupils of Peter the Great, 1697-1740,' and works also on his daughter the Empress Elizabeth and his grandson Peter III.; 'Scandinavia, 1513-1900'; 'The First Romanovs, 1613-1725'; and 'Slavonic Europe, 1469-1796.'

HE also wrote a biography of Hans Andersen, being specially attracted by fairy lore, of which he produced many translations. His best-known rendering of foreign fiction is his version of 'Tales from Jókai.'

SOME time in the present month Mr. Murray will publish the memoir of the late Sir Charles Wilson which has been compiled from his diaries, notebooks, official reports, and letters to Lady Wilson, by Sir Charles Watson, who for well over thirty years was his friend and comrade.

MR. C. R. L. FLETCHER'S 'History of England' is now virtually ready for publication. The importance of the concluding period is so great that Mr. Murray has found it necessary to issue it in separate volumes, nominally divided at 1792, the last portion bringing the reader down to the battle of Waterloo. Detached chapters deal with India, Scotland, and Ireland, and the Industrial Revolution.

MESSRS. PHILLIMORE & Co. will issue in a few days the first part (dealing with Nottinghamshire) of their new serial "County Pedigrees," which differs from other such publications in not being limited to any particular class. Its principal features are the amount of detail supplied and the large number of illustrations to each pedigree.

WE have received the following correction:—

"We note that in your issue of May 8th, in the review of 'The Declaration of Indulgence of 1672,' by Frank Bate, you announce this as published by the Liverpool University Press. We should be much obliged if you would kindly state in your next issue the fact, as set forth on the title-page of the book, that it is published 'for the University Press of Liverpool' by ourselves.

"ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO., LTD."

IN the House of Commons on Wednesday evening Mr. Harold Cox condemned J. S. Mill as an Economist. When Mr. E. P. Bouverie, speaking from the same place, called John Mill "a book-in-breeches," the remark was thought to reveal Whiggish "superiority." When Abraham Hayward, on Mill's death, attacked his memory, it was in regard to matters widely different. Revived interest in "unearned increment" and woman franchise makes the moment suitable for a publication based on Mill's own copies of his letters to correspondents. These are, we are happy to state, in existence, and likely to be given to the world.

MR. HEINEMANN announces for publication shortly a little series which should be welcome. It is entitled "The Laurel-Crowned Letter Series," and consists of the best letters by such writers as Lamb, Shelley, Madame de Sévigné, Chesterfield, Walpole, and Cowper.

SPECIAL attention will be paid in the forthcoming number of The World's Work to the Imperial Press Conference which is to be held in June. The magazine (which will be much larger than its usual size) will contain a range of articles on Imperial topics by the foremost Imperial workers of to-day, and portraits of the most important members of the Conference.

WE regret to notice the death from a motor accident of Mr. A. A. Grainger Stewart, one of the Advocates Depute for Scotland, who was editor of The Scots Law Times, and contributed the introduction and biographical notes to a volume on 'The Portraits in the Hall of Parliament House.'

MISS L. M. LITTLE, who died at Bray, near Dublin, on the 4th inst., was well known in Irish literary circles, and will be regretted by many friends. She published two volumes of verse, 'Persephone' and 'Wild Myrtle,' and was a frequent contributor to the reviews and magazines on subjects connected with Irish literature.

WE are glad to learn that our hearty commendation of Mr. H. W. Lucy's 'Sixty Years in the Wilderness' is being endorsed by the reading public, and that a third edition is in the press. An edition is also to be issued in the United States, and this is dedicated to Mr. Whitelaw Reid, the American Ambassador to England since 1905, himself an author and editor, and proprietor of The New York Tribune.

To the French edition of Capt. R. F. Scott's 'Voyage of the Discovery,' which was published by Messrs. Hachette & Cie., is now to be added a Hungarian edition in a slightly abridged form. The translation will be the work of Prof. D. L. de Loczy, and the volume will be included in the series of descriptions of remarkable modern voyages published by Mr. R. Lampel of Budapest, under the patronage of the Hungarian Geographical Society.

THE recent death, at an asylum at Banstead, of Olive Morgan, a pioneer woman journalist of versatility, ought not to pass unnoticed. Born on April 22nd, 1839, at Elmira, New York, the daughter of an actor, she left her native land at the age of sixteen, and lived for some years in France. Her first book, 'Photographs of Paris Life,' made up of letters which she had written for American and English newspapers, appeared in 1861, and received laudatory notice from Dumas fils in the Figaro. She returned to America in 1864, and was for a while on the stage, which she abandoned for journalism. For some years she was dramatic and musical critic of The New York Herald, and contributed to The New York Tribune. In 1871 she became a regular contributor to the London World. She published several novels, including 'The Mimic World' and 'Get thee behind me, Satan.'

THE death is also announced, at the age of seventy-four, of Mrs. Augusta Jane Evans Wilson, an American novelist, at Mobile, Alabama. There are no fewer than seven different editions of her 'St. Elmo' and 'Vashti' by seven different British publishers. Augusta Jane Evans, born at Columbus, Georgia, on May 8th, 1835, was educated privately; lived at San Antonio, Texas, from 1846 to 1849; and married in 1868 L. M. Wilson of Mobile, who died in 1891. The names of Mrs. Wilson's other books are 'Inez' (1856), 'Beulah' (1859), 'Macaria' (1864), 'Infelice' (1875), 'At the Mercy of Tiberius' (1887), and 'A Speckled Bird' (1902).

AT last week's meeting of the Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres the awards in connexion with several annual prizes were announced. The Prix Brunet (3,000 fr.) has been divided into four parts, the chief of which (1,500 fr.) goes to M. Philippe Renouard for his bibliography of works from the press of Josse Badius; while 500 fr. each are awarded to M. Briquet for his 'Dictionnaire historique' of watermarks on paper; to M. L. Nardin for his monograph on Jacques Foillet, printer and publisher (1554-1619); and to M. H. Stein for his 'Bibliographie générale des Cartulaires français.' The Prix Stanislas-Tulien (1,500 fr.) for the best book relating to China is awarded to Dr. M. A. Stein for his 'Ancien Khotan.'

M. H. LE SOUDIER, whose useful and elaborate 'Bibliographie française, 1900 à 1904,' was noticed in The Athenæum of August 29, 1908, announces that the second volume, which will deal with the books published in France from 1905 to 1909, will appear in the course of next year.

THE programme for the celebration of the 500th anniversary of the founding of the University of Leipsic, which, as previously stated, will take place from July 28th to 30th, has now been published. The proceedings will be opened by a service in the University Church, to be followed by a meeting in the new theatre, when the King of Saxony will address the assembly; and in the evening the Saxon Ministry will give a dinner. On the 30th Prof. Dr. Wundt will speak in the Wandelhalle, and an historical procession of the students will take place. A special performance at the theatre, a concert, and a Festkommers will bring the festivities to a close.

NEXT week we shall pay special attention to Books of Travel and Holiday Literature.

SCIENCE

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

The Judgment of Paris and some other Legends Astronomically Considered. By the Hon. Emmeline M. Plunket. (Murray.)—Miss Plunket is already favourably known through her 'Ancient Calendars and Constellations,' which was noticed in The Athenæum on Nov. 7th, 1903. As we pointed out then, her speculations, though interesting, and founded on much careful study, occupied rather too wide a field. Nor can we admit the extreme antiquity of the zodiacal constellations deduced from a theory that the Accadian calendar originated when the winter solstice, and not the vernal equinox, coincided with the sun's entry into Aries.

The main scope of the present work is to suggest a scientific origin for a large number of ancient Greek myths, according to the view thus set forth in the Preface:—

"Of late years the revelations of archaeology have assured us of the fact that arts and sciences flourished in Egypt and Babylonia at an age heretofore considered as prehistoric. Unless, therefore, we are prepared to deny to the Aryan race participation in the attainments of Semitic and Hamitic races, it is not unreasonable to suppose that Grecian and Roman legends—even though we should assign their origin to a far higher antiquity than that of the Homeric age—were not necessarily based on absolute irrationality, i.e., on the speculations and observations of ignorant and savage men, but that there had been sufficient time and opportunity for them to have been imagined by sages of old, to exemplify scientific truths; and not only so, but that, further, there had been time for the original meaning of those myths to have become already, in the classic age, much obscured, even to the poets and dramatists who have handed them down to us. If this were the case, it is easy to understand how those myths, while they gained in beauty and in their truthful likeness to human nature, not seldom lost beyond recognition their likeness to the scientific truths they had been originally intended to exemplify."

It must be confessed, however, that, if we assume this to be so, attempts to unravel the sources of those myths and legends must be to a large extent speculative, indeed, open sometimes to diverse interpretations. We will content ourselves, as we cannot enter into the many details of Miss Plunket's suggested explanations, by giving a few words respecting the one case from which she has chosen the title for her book.

Paris, she thinks, personified in some way the spring equinox, or the season midway between the winter and summer solstices, and therefore might, according to mythic imagery, have been considered an impartial umpire of the rival claims to the golden apple. This is taken to be at a date when the equinoctial point was situated in the constellation Taurus. Paris (who has much in common with the Persian god Mithras) is often figured in the company of bulls, and is said to have triumphed over his brothers in securing a special bull, after which he was honoured as a prince of the Trojan line. His name is not Grecian, but probably Phrygian. Seeking for an astronomical origin of the story of his carrying off Helen, the author accepts the view that that heroine represents the moon. Now she was the sister of Castor and Pollux, and it is easy to connect this with the moon in Gemini. And if the moon was observed at her first quarter in the first degree of that constellation, the sun was in the first degree of Pisces, making the day the first of the twelfth solar month of the year. The new moon in the same constellation marked the spring equinox; and the point of the explanation is to suggest that, while some races and some schools of astronomy directed special honour to the moon at its first quarter in Gemini as a mark of the winter solstice, occurring in the twelfth month of the year, some other race or other school of astronomers preferred to direct such special honour to the new moon in Gemini as a mark of the spring equinox. Miss Plunket works out this ingenious idea or speculation in much detail, and inclines to the opinion that the legend of Paris and Helen arose at some date later than B.C. 3700, so that, from precessional changes, the moon at new, or rather when first visible after conjunction, not the actual new moon itself as the conjunction is now called, in the constellation Gemini, marked the season of the spring equinox. Helen's return to Menelaus after the death of Paris leads to another astronomical suggestion, as does the story of Herodotus, reproduced in Euripides's 'Helen,' that she never really left her husband, but that Paris carried off only a phantom Helen.

We have probably said enough to indicate the nature of Miss Plunket's interpretations of Grecian myths, which she works out with much wealth of learning, finding covert astronomical allusions in most of them. No classical or astronomical scholar can fail to find the volume interesting.

WE have received the second part of Mr. Stanley Williams's Zenographical Fragments (Taylor & Francis), containing his observations of the motions and changes of the markings on Jupiter from March to August, 1888. The previous part comprised those obtained in the preceding opposition, 1886-7. The present series is considerably larger, which is the more satisfactory because the planet seems to have been unduly neglected in that year by other observers, partly on account of its low altitude in Europe. Mr. Williams remarks that whereas he formerly thought that the white spots were at a lower level than the dark belts, he now thinks it probable that the upper surfaces of both are at nearly the same altitude, and he no longer considers that the white spots extend under the dark belts. Three features of unusual interest appeared in 1888: a number of little blackish spots on three narrow belts in the northern hemisphere, accompanied by faint dusky streaks towards the north; two small but definite dark spots in the southern hemisphere, in a latitude where such are seldom seen; and the remarkable dark spot δ (described and figured in a paper published in the Monthly Notices of the Royal Astronomical Society), which afterwards appeared to have foreshadowed the apparition of the great south temperate disturbance of 1889-92, very similar to that first seen in 1901 in the same south latitude, and still visible, though it has undergone changes. Mr. Williams gives in the thirteenth section an account of the principal great surface currents on the planet, comparing his results with those more recently obtained by many observers up to 1907, including the northern, the north tropical, the equatorial (north and south), the south temperate, and the southern currents.

The Railway Locomotive. By Vaughan Pendered. (Constable & Co.)—While Mr. Pendered hopes that engineers will find in his book something they did not know before, he keeps the ordinary traveller constantly in his mind, and he does not cram his pages with mathematical calculations which "in practice...play but a secondary part...because they do not always fit in with existing conditions." The book tells us all about locomotives—their frames, cylinders, boilers, valves, and other component parts.

"There are very wide differences in externals, but in essentials all locomotives, without exception, are the same....Yet the influence of nationality and climate have [sic] made themselves felt, and various designs may be regarded as indigenous to particular countries."

The main difference, for instance, between British and American engines is that ours are built to last as long as possible, while theirs are designed to "hold together" until something "bigger" is evolved. No doubt there are arguments in favour of both plans, but do not our locomotives carry us at a greater average speed, and with infinitely greater immunity from accident, than those of any other country?

Mr. Pendered is concerned mainly with present-day conditions, but in dealing with the "blast-pipe," in which the waste steam is made use of to increase the draught in the fire-box, he tells us that at first the only object in turning the exhaust steam into the chimney was to get rid of it, and its effect on the furnace was discovered accidentally. He also says that "it is fairly certain that the knowledge that a steam jet would entrain air, and so induce a draught, was possessed by the old Greeks and Egyptians." An interesting application of this principle is described as follows:—

"In 1594 Sir Hugh Platt published an enquiry and a description of 'a round ball of copper or latten (brass) that blowes the fyre verie stronglie by the attenuation of water into ayre.' The ball or balls were to be 'hung in the chimney directly over the fyre to cure smoky chimneys, for being so hung the blast arising from them carries the loitering smoke along with it.'"

We have said enough to show that this book does not consist of mere dry bones of technical terms, but possesses great interest. It is, on the whole, well and clearly written, though the author seems to have forgotten to tell us how the return motion of the paper-cylinder on the indicator is obtained.

The illustrations are plentiful and excellent, but in the text-references to them their pages should be given as well as their numbers, e.g., fig. 39, on p. 83, is referred to frequently throughout the next fifty pages, and the reference to it by number only entails a good deal of hunting. The few "half-tones" should have been worked separately, so that the text need not have been printed on the coated paper which makes the book heavy to hold and irksome to read.

Now that the weather and season make the country more desirable, there is a frequent call for maps. We have before us the Colchester sheet of a new Ordnance map on a small scale issued on behalf of the Ordnance Survey authorities by Mr. Fisher Unwin. We are glad to see that a publisher of enterprise has taken up these official publications, and is issuing them in so attractive a form. In earlier days they were hardly known to the general public, and never sufficiently exhibited for sale. The new large-sheet series on the scales of 1 mile and 2 miles to the inch is admirably clear, and printed, we are glad to find, on material which will stand wear. The Colchester sheet includes Southend in the south, and covers the district from Felixstowe in the north-east to below Brentwood in the south-west.

THE ROYAL SOCIETY'S CONVERSAZIONE.

THE first Conversazione of the season was held at Burlington House on Wednesday evening, and was numerously attended. At one time, indeed, it seemed as if the throng of visitors who were received by Sir Archibald

Geikie would never be able to "circulate," but the demonstrations in the Meeting-Room on the ground floor drew away a fair number, and the exhibits were thus able to receive a proper amount of attention.

In Physics Sir William Ramsay's liquid and solid emanation of radium was, perhaps, the most popular exhibit of the evening, the emanation—which Sir William was careful to insist was an inert gas of the argon group—being compressed by a compact apparatus into a capillary tube, and there subjected to varying pressure. In these circumstances it condenses into a colourless liquid with strong phosphorescence; but when the tube is touched with liquid air, it flashes out with a brilliant light like that of a miniature electric arc, in which state it is, according to the exhibitor, a solid. The density of the liquid is exceedingly high, a cubic millimetre occupying about the same space as a pin's head.

Close by this was a very interesting exhibit by Prof. Norman Collie, who showed that neon—another gas of the argon group—if enclosed at atmospheric pressure in a glass tube with mercury, emits when shaken a vivid orange light. One of the most extraordinary features of this exhibit was a ring-shaped tube filled with the same mixture, one half of which, some time before, had had an electric charge passed through it. On being shaken, the electrified part remained dark, while the unelectrified glowed as brilliantly as before. When a silica tube was substituted for the glass, and the mercury was brought to boiling-point, the vapour rising from it gave out a bright green light. No explanation of these phenomena has yet been offered; but it is suggested that they show neon to be essentially different from the other gases of the group. The Rev. Father Gill, S.J., also exhibited a series of vacuum tubes of bulb form containing in the centre a small strip of platinum or palladium foil, coated in each case with the finely divided metal known as palladium black. Two wires sealed in the glass enabled this to be heated by an electric current, and when the current was switched on, the glowing foil was seen to be surrounded by a dark space, beyond which again was manifest a luminous glow of deep purple. It does not seem that any electric field is set up by the current except in the foil, and the only explanation suggested is that the palladium black contains some gas—probably carbonic oxide—occluded within it, which is set free on heating.

Mr. Alfred W. Porter had an interesting exhibit showing the effect of a single electric spark on a photographic plate backed by a plate electrode, where the experiment takes place in different media—nitrogen, carbon dioxide, coal gas, ammonia vapour, and pentane in turn replacing common air. The "splash" thus produced on the plate, and fixed by subsequent development, varies considerably, the variation being apparently characteristic of the gas employed. Thus, while carbon dioxide, coal gas, and the others show different and peculiar ramifications, common air shows a kind of circular radiation, which is more perfectly regular in the case of nitrogen.

Several new electrometers were exhibited in this section, prominent among which was a string electrometer by Mr. T. H. Laby and Mr. Horace Darwin, which can also be used as an oscillograph, and in that capacity exhibited Prof. Rutherford's method of counting the Alpha particles shot off by uranium; while a quadrant electrometer for alternating currents was exhibited by the National Physical Laboratory.

In Mechanics an engine worked by stretched india-rubber cord was shown by Mr. A. Mallock, the condition of its perfect working being apparently that the cord should be unwound at constant tension, while the unwound part should be free to contract. The exhibitor claimed to have overcome this difficulty in his model, but the hindrance to the maintenance of the requisite conditions caused by changes of temperature was well shown by the neighbouring exhibit of Prof. Silvanus Thompson, displaying a series of varying weights suspended by india-rubber cords, which contracted on the application of heat sufficiently to raise the weights. In the same connexion may be noticed Mr. C. E. S. Phillips's exhibit of the flow of sand through tubes, which demonstrates that the rate of escape of sand through an orifice in the lower end of the tube is independent of the head of sand above the opening. This is ingeniously shown by the interposition of layers of dark sand at regular intervals, which are observed to keep at a uniform distance from each other. It perhaps shows also how excellent an instrument for the accurate measurement of time the sand-clock or hour-glass might be in capable hands. In the same section an apparatus exhibited by Dr. C. V. Drysdale in the Secretaries' Room, for directly measuring speed, frequency, slip, and other periodic phenomena by a stroboscopic method, received much well-deserved attention.

In the Natural Sciences an exhibit by Dr. A. D. Waller showing the "cardiograms," or records of the heart's variations, taken by the string galvanometer invented by Dr. Einthoven, attracted much notice, some part of which was due to the excellent behaviour of a highly trained bulldog, who furnished the standard of comparison between the action of the canine and human hearts respectively. The process, which was described in The Athenæum some five years ago (see Nos. 4010 and 4066), seemed on Wednesday to work perfectly, and it is singular that more has not been heard of it in England in medical practice. Dr. E. F. Bashford's rather gruesome exhibit illustrating recent investigations into the cause of cancer was also most interesting, and seemed to the lay mind to demonstrate his point that the disease cannot be due to any microbe or parasite. The experiments on mice, from which some of his deductions are made, also seem to establish that the change from a superficial and sluggish cancer to a deep-seated and virulent one is largely an affair of growth, and may be prevented by timely operation; but mice are not men, and it does not appear that the experiments, although affording evidence of the advance made in our knowledge of this scourge of the human race, are yet absolutely conclusive.

A microscopic section of the aorta of the heart of King Merenptah—probably the Pharaoh of the Exodus—exhibited by Mr. S. G. Shattock, and showing the calcareous particles in the arterial coat which are said to argue senile degeneration, deserves notice, as do the drawings of extinct animals, such as the huge Diplodocus of Carnegie, the terrible-looking Triceratops of Wyoming, and the sabre-toothed tiger who must have been the contemporary of man during the cave-dwelling period. A spirited reconstruction of a whole family of the precursor of man known as the Pithecanthropus of Java attracted special attention, and is, we believe, the first of the kind which has been shown. All these drawings were the work of Miss Alice Woodward, and were exhibited by Mr. H. R. Knipe.

The demonstrations in the Meeting-Room which were given during the evening comprised a very interesting one by Dr. A. E. H. Tutton to illustrate the progress that has lately been made in our knowledge of the internal structure of crystals. In the course of this a new lantern polariscope was employed which gave all the natural colours of polarization, so to speak, automatically, the crystals used being colourless when seen by ordinary light. The other demonstration was a lecture by Dr. Hans Gadow illustrative of his late travels in Mexico, and formed a valuable and, so far as can be judged, complete guide to the scenery, flora, and anthropology of that still obscure country.

This notice must not close without reference to the excellent photographs of Constantinople exhibited by Sir Benjamin Stone, which have a peculiar interest at the present time, and Mr. Alfred Wright's machine for evaluating and solving algebraical formulas and equations by means of special electrical resistances, a Wheatstone bridge, and slide rules. The latter, if it bears out the promises made on its behalf by its inventor, should render the solution of algebraical formulas in physics so easy as to revive their use in those sciences, in which it has lately fallen rather into the background.

SOCIETIES.

GEOLOGICAL.—April 28.—Prof. W. J. Sollas, President, and afterwards Prof. W. W. Watts, V.P., in the chair.—The following communications were read: 'The Boulders of the Cambridge Drift,' by Messrs. R. Heron Rastall and J. Romanes,—and 'The Nephrite and Magnesite Rocks of the South Island of New Zealand,' by Mr. A. Moncrieff Finlayson.

SOCIETY OF ANTIQUARIES.—April 29.—Dr. C. H. Read, President, in the chair.—The President announced that he had appointed Dr. Arthur John Evans to be a Vice-President of the Society.—The Rev. William Greenwell and Mr. W. Parker Brewis communicated a paper on the 'Development of the Bronze Spearhead in the United Kingdom.'

May 6.—Dr. C. H. Read, President, in the chair.—Mr. W. H. St. John Hope read a paper on the early topography of the town of Ludlow, in which he submitted that the setting-out of its unusually regular plan was very little later than the foundation of the Castle in the last quarter of the eleventh century. The symmetrical arrangement had been subsequently disturbed by the addition of the outer bailey to the Castle at the close of the twelfth century, and by the enclosing of the town with a wall in the succeeding century. Mr. Hope also exhibited, through the kindness of the Rev. T. F. Falkner, photographs of the tower parapet of Burnham Westgate Church, Norfolk. These are decorated with a remarkable series of sculptures, including the Fall, the Annunciation, the Flight into Egypt, the daughter of Herodias tumbling before Herod, the beheading of John Baptist, and the murder of St. Thomas of Canterbury, and sundry figures of saints. Nothing is known of the history of this parapet, which was added to the tower temp. Henry VII.

Mr. A. P. Maudslay exhibited a volume of the Ceremonies of the Order of the Garter written for Henry, Prince of Wales, in 1606, by Sir William Segar, Garter, with illuminations of the arms and styles of the existing Knights Companions. Lord Dillon exhibited the copy of the Statutes of the Order of the Garter written for Sir Henry Lee in 1597. Miss Nina Layard exhibited two broken alabaster statues of seated bishops, from Fornham St. Mary, near Bury St. Edmunds, of Nottingham work of the fifteenth century.

ROYAL ANTHROPOLOGICAL INSTITUTE.—May 4.—Mr. J. Gray, Treasurer, in the chair.—The election was announced of Mr. Ernest Bliss as a Fellow.—Mr. A. L. Lewis read a paper on 'Some Stone Circles in Ireland.' The author described several large circles in the neighbourhood of Lough Gur, co. Limerick. These differ from the British circles, being thick banks of earth faced on each side by large stones, but they are furnished with outlying single stones in a manner similar to that found at many of the circles in England and Scotland; these outlying stones are apparently in the direction of the rising of some star at a very early date. One of the largest circles was "restored" shortly after 1860, and now consists of a wall (150 ft. in diameter, and 5 ft. high) of stones, backed outside by a bank of earth 30 ft. wide, through which there is but one entrance, a passage 3 ft. wide, lined with stones on each side; this entrance is in the direction of the rising sun in May. The author suggested that, assuming the restoration of this circle to be correct, it differed in construction from the others, and possibly also in its purpose; and that it might have been used as a pound for wild animals, driven into it from outside over the sloping bank, and kept inside to be killed as required. There were also circles of stones without earthen banks, remains of cromlechs or dolmens, locally called "giants' graves," and many other interesting ruins belonging to various ages; and there was also the usual melancholy tale of monuments of all sorts destroyed.

In another short note Mr. Lewis drew attention to some concentric circular markings, similar to those found at New Grange and other prehistoric places, faintly incised on a stone on the Rock of Cashel, on which the early kings of Munster are said to have been crowned, and which now serves as a pedestal for a very ancient cross.

Both papers were illustrated by lantern-slides, mostly from photographs taken by the author.

ARISTOTELIAN.—May 3.—Mr. Shadworth H. Hodgson, V.P., in the chair.—A paper was read by Mr. G. R. T. Ross on 'The Satisfaction of Thinking.' The aim of the paper was to examine thought from the psychological point of view, in order to discover if any light was thereby thrown on the nature of reality. (1) Thinking is the synthetic activity of mind, and consists in the introduction of order into the contents of our experience. Thinking must be accounted for biologically by the satisfaction with which it has been attended in the species. This satisfaction must be due to its promoting activity. (2) The apprehension of space and the fixation of temporal relations are the cognitions which primarily promote activity. Hence, they are attended with a high degree of satisfaction. They are essentially an awareness of the continuous, i.e., the act of synthesis is always of the same type. Hence comes an additional facility in such judgments. Other forms of thinking present us with the intelligible in proportion as they approximate to the apprehension of the continuous. (3) To the Idealist assumption that all reality is correlated with thought, we must add that it implies a correlation with feeling and activity also. Incidentally the divergence of this theory from Pragmatism was pointed out, and the doctrine of M. Bergson, viz., that thought cannot apprehend time, was criticized. The paper was followed by a discussion.

MEETINGS NEXT WEEK.

- MON. Institute of British Architects, 8.—'Smoke Abatement,' Sir W. B. Richmond.
- TUES. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Hittites: (1) Monuments of Egypt and Asia Minor,' Prof. J. Garstang.
- Society of Arts, 4.30.—'Canada as a Field for British Investment,' Mr. J. Obed Smith. (Colonial Section.)
- Statistical, 5.—'The Meat Supply of the United Kingdom,' Mr. R. H. Hooker.
- WED. Meteorological, 4.30.—'The Anticyclonic Belt of the Northern Hemisphere,' Col. H. E. Rawson; 'Errors of Estimation in Thermometric Observations,' Mr. Albert Walter.
- Folk-lore, 8.—'Bantu and Arab Elements in Swahili Folk-lore,' Miss A. Werner.
- Microscopical, 8.—'On the Recent and Fossil Foraminifera of the Shoresands of Selsey Bill, Sussex,' Part II., Messrs. E. Heron-Allen and A. Earland; 'A New Illuminator for the Microscope,' Mr. J. W. Gordon.
- Society of Arts, 8.—'Railway Development in China,' Mr. A. J. Barry.
- THURS. Royal Institution, 3.—'Newfoundland,' Lecture II., Mr. J. G. Millais.
- Royal Society, 4.30.
- Historical, 5.—'Later Tudor Ballads,' Prof. C. H. Firth.
- Institution of Electrical Engineers, 8.—Annual Meeting; Paper on 'Some Tests and Uses of Condensers,' Mr. W. M. Morder.
- Chemical, 8.30.—'The Action of Nitric Acid on the Ethers of Aromatic Hydroxyaldehydes,' Mr. A. H. Salway; 'Isolation and Synthesis of p-Hydroxyphenylethylamine, a Water-Soluble Active Principle of Ergot,' Mr. G. Barger; and other Papers.
- FRI. Royal Institution, 3.—'Afforestation,' Hon. J. C. Guest.
- SAT. Royal Institution, 3.—'The Secret Societies of the Banks Islands,' Lecture I., Dr. W. H. R. Rivers.

Science Gossip.

THE volume of the Connaissance des Temps for 1911 has recently been issued. Started by Picard in 1679, this valuable annual has suffered no interruption since; but its scheme has from time to time been enlarged, particularly under the editorship of the late M. Lewy, which began in 1876. Since his death it has been edited by M. Radau, who, born a Prussian and educated at Königsberg, removed in 1858 to Paris, where he was naturalized and became a distinguished member of the Institut. The only change which appears to have been made in the present volume is the addition of a larger number of stars to be occulted by the moon. The data of the planetary and other tables and the general arrangement are as in preceding years. The total eclipse of the sun on April 28th is a very provoking one. Although the duration of totality amounts to nearly five minutes where it crosses the equator in the middle of the Pacific Ocean, the central line will not pass over land anywhere except about sunrise (on the 29th) to the extreme south-east of Australia, failing to reach Central America before sunset. The annular eclipse on October 22nd will be best seen in China and New Guinea. The opposition of Mars in November, 1911, will be very favourable as regards position, though the planet will not be quite so near the earth as at that which will take place next September.

FOUR more small planets have been photographically discovered by Herr Kopff at the Astrophysical Institute, Königstuhl, Heidelberg: two on the 19th ult., and two on the 22nd.

Two fresh variable stars are also announced. One of these, var. 12, 1909, Pegasi, was detected by Madame Ceraski in the course of her examination of the photographs obtained by M. Blazko at the Moscow Observatory; it changes between the tenth and twelfth magnitudes, the period being probably long. The other, var. 13, 1909, Vulpeculæ, was found by Mr. Astbury of Wallingford to be of the Algol type. It is numbered in the Bonn 'Durchmusterung' +22° 3617, and the normal magnitude is 7½.

THE prize of 100,000 marks which the late Prof. Wolfskehl left for the solution of the Fermati proposition, a crux in algebra, has not been awarded, as the Philosophical Faculty of Göttingen, to whom the decision was entrusted by the donor, consider that none of the papers sent in has established the proof. The last number of the Archives of Mathematics and Physics discusses several of the so-called solutions, and exposes their errors. The prize therefore still awaits a winner.

FINE ARTS

The Monuments of Christian Rome from Constantine to the Renaissance. By Arthur L. Frothingham, Ph.D. (New York, the Macmillan Company.)

THIS is the tenth volume of the excellent series of "Handbooks of Archaeology and Antiquities," edited by Dr. Percy Gardner and Mr. Francis W. Kelsey. No better authority could have been chosen to deal with the subject of early and Mediæval Christian art than the former Assistant Director of the American School at Rome, and former Professor of Archaeology at Princeton University, whose many and interesting contributions to the history of art, and discoveries in that field, have won him a prominent place among specialists.

The volume contains two parts: an historical sketch of religious and civil structures from the time of Constantine (312–37 A.D.) to the return of the Papacy from Avignon; and a "classification of monuments" from the point of view of architecture, sculpture, and painting—both being written "en parfaite connaissance de cause," and in a sober, forcible, bright style, the conciseness of which does not interfere in the least with the clearness of the text. The absolute want of references—even in the case of Duchesne's edition of the 'Liber Pontificalis,' on the authority of which the first part is mainly founded—compels the reader to take much on credit; but he can do so without concern, however useful a bibliographical appendix might have proved to him. The following points are of no great importance. We mention them only as showing that we have paid the book the deserved tribute of careful scrutiny.

The author charges Pope Honorius I. (625–40) with the beginning of the destruction of Constantine's Basilica on the Clivus Sacer, by having made use of its "bronze tiling" for St. Peter's. Pope Honorius did make such use, having won the consent of the Emperor Heraclius during his visit to Rome in 629; but the gilt-metal roofing was stripped off the Temple of Venus and Rome, not from the Basilica. Specimens of these tiles were seen and described by Justus Rycq and Giacomo Grimaldi in 1606, when Pope Paul V. destroyed in his turn the roof of old St. Peter's. It is doubtful whether the spoliation of Hadrian's Villa was really begun by Constantine: in fact, there are reasons for a contrary belief. A villa which, in spite of mediæval and Renaissance lime-burners and marble-cutters, and uninterrupted plunder from Tiburtine and Roman builders, has yielded 261 works of art, and is still capable of yielding more, as proved by the finding of the exquisite Dionysus in 1877, cannot have been despoiled by Constantine, or by any of his successors before the pillage of Alaric in 410.

The importance assigned to the Titulus Equitii (SS. Silvestro e Martino ai Monti), as a "structure" of Pope Sylvester is rather exaggerated. Those who have followed the works of exploration carried on near S. Martino between 1880 and 1888, or read the description of them given in the 'Monumenti Antichi,' vol. i. No. 3, 1891, pp. 484–9, know that Pope Sylvester did not build a new edifice "in prædio cuiusdam presbiteri sui qui cognominabatur Equitius," but simply turned into an oratory one or two crypts lighted by means of skylights through the vaulted ceiling. The present church, founded by Pope Symmachus (498–514), stands not above, but near, the original oratory. The studies of Florian Jubaru and Fedele Savio have proved that the Rotunda of Constantina, daughter of the Emperor, and wife, first of Hannibalianus (335–7), later of Gallus Cæsar (351–4), was not a baptistery, but a mausoleum; and that it was never surrounded by a circular portico, as suggested by Prof. Frothingham at pp. 28, 29.

At the time of Constantine, the author says, "the area of the circus Maximus was increased so as to seat nearly three hundred thousand people." The number three hundred thousand is neither the one given by the 'Notitia' (385,000 seats) nor the one suggested by Huelsen (250,000) : at all events, Constantine may have done something for "die letzte Ausschmückung des Circus," as Richter calls it, but he did not increase, and could not possibly have increased, its accommodation.

Another passage open to controversy is to be found on p. 37 :—

"A document of 395 indicates that five hundred square miles of arable land around Rome had become a morass, and that malaria, the new [sic] scourge of the Campagna, had made frightful progress."

This statement is justly contradicted by the author himself, five pages further on, in the following words :—

"It is certain that at any time before the sack of Alaric (410) and Genseric (455) we may think of Rome as surrounded by a wonderful garden of immense extent... extending to the hills and the sea in a bewildering labyrinth of beautiful villas."

In the catalogue of Roman parish churches on pp. 39-40 two or three slight mistakes occur, such as the placing of the Titulus Pudensis in the fifth region, and the Titulus Marcelli in the eighth. No mention is made on p. 43, among the underground churches, of that of Sant' Ermete, although it is the most subterranean of all.

These and other corrections of the same modest importance must not be taken as reducing the value of the volume. Prof. Frothingham is proof against serious criticism.

THE ROYAL ACADEMY.

(Third Notice.)

THE purchase for the Chantrey Collection of Sir Lawrence Alma Tadema's A Favourite Custom (181) reminds us somewhat brusquely that in our analysis of the more vital features of this year's Academy we run the risk of overlooking altogether many of the official centre pieces of the exhibition. The truth is that just now the Academicians as a body are even more than usually inclined to rest on their laurels. The more exacting portion of the public has developed in some respects beyond them, and there are few who endeavour, by the vivacity and conviction with which they present the old point of view, to recall wavering admirers to a style of art somewhat out of fashion. It is perhaps in sympathetic appreciation of such an attempt to stem the advancing tide that his colleagues have selected Sir Lawrence's picture for purchase, and there is this much to be said for their decision; the painter himself appears to have no qualms as to the validity of his method. He is still as exacting as ever in his devotion to meticulous detail—to literal reproduction of classic subjects. After all, to become old-fashioned is the ultimate fate of every one, and there is something fine in fighting to the last in a losing cause.

Unfortunately, this tenacity is not here employed in defence of what was most valuable in the typical Academy picture of the last twenty years. When we contrast these works with such typical newcomers as those noticed last week—works which, while we welcome them we cannot hail as of epoch-making importance—we are reminded that the story-telling picture in its higher developments implied a certain competence of draughtsmanship—the power of articulating a group, and establishing, at any rate, what each personage was looking at, and why. In favourable circumstances, with a simple subject, it even resulted in a design of some cohesion. Pettie's picture in the Diploma Gallery may be taken as an instance of the sort of thing that would be a shrewdly critical neighbour for much of the newer painting, which might by comparison appear vague in intention; and it is conceivable that a rally in favour of the dramatic in picture-making would call attention to the want of dynamic force in the draughtsmanship of the younger men. This has not for many years, however, been a strong point with Sir Lawrence Alma Tadema, who has acquired a habit of compiling accessories for their own sake. His aim is for actuality, and his actuality is less convincing, and above all less luxurious, than that of the younger men, even in a picture which, like this, aims at an impression of luxury. Any impressionist of the second rank might match the illusiveness of his transparent water over nude bodies, and he loses most of the advantage of his smaller and daintier brushwork by reason of his indifference to grace of pose or continuity of line. His forms are broken up, and the interest scattered, to an extent that fatigues curiosity instead of rewarding it.

A similar chopping-up of forms disfigures another picture which marks a rallying effort on the older lines, Mr. Bundy's City Fathers (261), which again displays a certain vitality, resulting nevertheless in a bad picture. Some of the attention it has received might more fittingly be bestowed on Miss Anna Airy's Scandal-Mongers (354) in the next room—a large canvas which has a little of the prosaic directness of approach of Hals (the quality at which Mr. Bundy more laboriously aims), and which is moreover conceived within the limits of a colour-scheme unobjectionable, if not inspired. As an "early work" to develop from it promises very well; and there is a sprinkling of other canvases of less commanding ability which show the existence of another movement among the younger painters, a section of whom set more value on vigorous brushwork than subtleties of colour. Of such realistic work with a restricted palette we may cite examples in Mrs. Nutt's Malay Children, Singapore (277), Mr. T. C. Dugdale's Nocturne (437), Mrs. Fagan's Sleeping Mother and Babe (441), and Mr. J. H. Bentley's Père Galvin (368), in which the painting of the hands is the best passage. These, while refreshingly direct, are but enlarged school-studies, interesting only as exercises; Mr. Harrington Mann's Workroom (709) is similar in character, though opportunity has offered the painter a more elaborately set-up group, while his taste has led him to a more lavish use of colour, not quite to the advantage of his picture. The more sensuous use of colour, again, in Mr. Isaac Cohen's very unfantastic Fantasy (749) makes his picture a link between these painters and the smoother life-study (Incense, 485), of Mr. Solomon whose clean attractiveness and strength rather of colour-pitch than of drawing or brush-work has been cleverly seized in Miss F. Lion's Sylvia, Daughter of Cecil Braithwaite, Esq. (650). Clean, direct figure-painting on a large scale is in Mr. Oswald Moser united with some elementary attempt at invention, and the combination is sufficiently rare to deserve a little attention. And they laughed him to scorn (183) is not without dramatic sense, but is made theatrical by being so overlaid with extravagances of local colour that the connexion between figure and figure is lost. We see a number of gesticulating single figures, not a group animated in varying fashion by the same emotion. The ripple of movement through the picture is strangled by the static use of colour, tending to divide the group into so many self-contained compartments.

This use of colour is well enough in place in such a picture as Mr. Cadogan Cowper's Venetian Ladies listening to the Serenade (65), the clearly defined differences of hue enhancing in this instance the impression of the immobility of the listeners. The masses of warm colour to the left of the composition are handsome and splendid, though the artist seems to have had a difficulty in painting the dog up to the same pitch of brilliance. Much more damaging, however, to the chromatic balance of the design is the garish blue sky, which seems to have been forced out of key at the last moment. Only one of the three heads is studied with a thoroughness proportionate to the elaboration of costume. Finery seems in increasing degree the preoccupation of Mr. Cowper. The other painters of the younger Pre-Raphaelite School are mainly absent this year, so varying are the fates which have sometimes filled the rooms with them. Mr. Denis Eden's Green Felicity (418) is the best of them, refined in drawing, but papery in quality, as his work usually is from his desire to keep his picture pale in key, and his unwillingness at the same time to allow any object to be "mat." Mr. Byam Shaw's Rude Boreas (649) is at once worse pictorially, and better in its revelation of latent power in the artist. Mr. Shaw has a gift for keen visualization in several modes, but seems incurably inclined to jumble them together in a single picture. A similar unrestrained use of colour united with a healthy naturalism is to be found in Mr. G. Harcourt's The Tracing (218), and in milder form in Mr. Edgar Barclay's Wrestling with the Wind (294), in which the girl's head is charmingly painted. Amongst these artists should perhaps be mentioned Mr. Briton Rivière, whose Hark! hark! the lark (88) shows him in fresh guise as a rather naive and charming painter.

Mr. Barclay brings us to the older generation of landscape painters, of whom the oldest is probably Mr. Aumonier. His Castle Valley, Tintagel (77), is a sober, satisfactory picture, very moderately, but successfully, varied in texture throughout, apart from a passage of leaden distance, where the heavy opacity of the pigment forces its way forward. We submit that the distance should be the blending point wherein the paint will neither be so transparent nor so solid as in the more boldly varying foreground. There is the same difficulty in more acute form in the best of Mr. David Murray's pictures (140), in which the sky seems to have been painted and repainted till it is inert and lifeless, contrasting violently with a passage of sea painting of great vivacity. This, the greater part of the picture, reminds us of Mr. McTaggart, though it is not quite so loose as is the too liquid work of that slippery executant. On the other hand, Mr. McTaggart would have blended sea and sky into a single picture as Mr. Murray has not done.

Among the other landscape painters Mr. John Reid (279, 338, 355) should be mentioned as showing work of unusually strong and personal quality; and Mr. Gardner Symons (301, 444) for painting less personal, but genuine and capable. Mr. La Thangue's best picture, Sussex Apples (297), though a figure subject, scores by its landscape quality, and is very crisp and spontaneous; his Ligurian Roses (288) shows the tendency which residence in the South seems to have on many artists, whereby their work ultimately approximates to that of Mr. Henry Woods. Other good landscapes of modest dimensions are shown by Mr. W. Hoggatt (326), M. V. Fisher (83), Mr. James Riddell (220), Mr. B. E. Leader (358), and Mr. A. S.

Hartick (428). Mr. W. D. Adams (90) and Mr. Sydney Lee (471) design more brilliantly than these, and a little more self-consciously, yet must be counted as pre-eminently representative of the direction of the most vital movement among the younger painters. Mrs. Swynnerton in the best picture she has yet shown, Mrs. Fenwick (678), has a similar position among figure painters, displaying considerable powers of decorative invention. Imagination of more modest range is seen in Mr. J. R. K. Duff's original design of sheep and shepherd taking refuge from the tide on a hump-backed timber bridge (385).

OTHER EXHIBITIONS.

At the Goupil Gallery Mr. Antoon van Welie has a number of works, mainly portraits. For this branch of art he seems to be qualified to a certain extent by a prompt sympathy for character, almost too ready, perhaps, to be very sincere. His sitters are of most varied type, and all treated with an exaggerated empressement which in its genial, rather shallow sensationalism recalls the work of Lenbach. The latter artist, however, did one or two closely wrought portraits such as we do not find here. Apart from those one or two exceptional works Mr. van Welie is probably the better artist, more impulsive and a little more sincere.

A much smaller collection of work by Mr. Henry Bishop ('The Colour of Tangier') shows a subtler use of paint in a narrow range of subject, and the entirely successful examples are for the most part confined to subjects wherein the artist exploits certain simple schemes of earth grey and white, counterchanging subtly a very few colours in a way which has a magic of its own. Such are the two largest canvases, Nos. 4 and 12, or the equally beautiful Main Mosque (26). Nos. 1 and 8 suggest a power to handle fuller colour that is not quite borne out in other canvases in the collection. These at their worst, however, are only a little scattered and accidental, never vulgar. Lovers of super-subtle delicacy of colour should not miss a show which expresses well the charm of empty spaces and cool shadow—the ultimate equilibrium of light and shade in which form vanishes.

ARCHÆOLOGICAL NOTES.

THE chronology of the early Babylonian kings has gone through many vicissitudes; and while Assyriologists once thought that they had a well-established starting-point in the inscription wherein Nabonidus or Nabu-nahid, the last king of Babylon, recorded that Naram-Sin, the son of Sargon of Accad, reigned 3,200 years before him, recent researches have caused them to conclude that this date may be 1,000 years too high. M. de Morgan's explorations in Persia have now, however, given us the chance of reconciling this apparent inconsistency. In a stela, described by M. J. E. Gautier in M. Maspero's Recueil de Travaux, which seems from his account to bear much resemblance to the famous "Stela of the Vultures," there appears the likeness of a king with a cartouche in front of him which is clearly to be read Sharru-gi or "Sargon." But this, according to Father Scheil, who has commented on the stela, is a different person from Naram-Sin's father, whose name may be better read Shar-Gani-sharri; and he considers that while the new king was the father of Naram-Sin and the real "Sargon of Accad," the Shar-Gani-sharri whose inscriptions have been found at Sippar, Nippur, and Telloh is a later member of the same dynasty. Mr. L. W. King of the British Museum, however, has put forward the theory that the new Sargon does not belong to the Naram-Sin dynasty at all, but is a still earlier king of Kish, whose exploits are described on an inscription in the Imperial Museum at Constantinople, which, unfortunately, is so mutilated as to contain only the last syllable of his name. As this last king's conquests described (by himself) are very extensive, Mr. King suggests that tradition may have assigned some of them to Naram-Sin's father, and that the traditional "Sargon of Accad" was what he calls "the reflected image of two early kings." His conclusions on this point, which are given in a recent number of the Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology, are ably and fairly stated. But it may be pointed out that, if it be true, as he thinks, that the new Sargon of Kish was, like his later namesake, a Semitic monarch, Nabonidus's date can still be upheld, if we are willing to consider that the Semitic domination of Babylon had endured for a thousand years before the coming of Naram-Sin. This would not, at any rate, be challenged by Dr. Winckler, who puts the first entry of the Semites into Babylonia as "earlier than 3400 B.C."; and if Mr. King has any reasons to disagree with this statement, they are not given in his paper.

M. Étienne Combe's 'Bulletin de la Religion Assyro-Babylonienne' in the current number of the Revue de l'Histoire des Religions, although a little belated, offers a convenient digest of some of the most important memoirs on the subject published during the last two years. Among these, Prof. H. Zimmern's 'Sumerisch-babylonische Tamûz-lieder,' which appeared in the Berichte of the Royal Saxon Scientific Society, is of peculiar interest to classical scholars, inasmuch as Prof. Zimmern, like his predecessors, has no doubt that the Babylonian myth of Thammuz was the origin of the Greek legend of Adonis. While no allusion to the slaying of Thammuz by "the boar's tooth of winter" has yet been found in the cuneiform texts, Prof. Zimmern is convinced that it will one day turn up, and he promises to give us later a new version of the very difficult 'Hymns to Tammuz' published by Dr. Pinches from the tablets at Manchester, together with some similar texts from the Berlin Museum. In the meantime he tells us that the father of Thammuz was evidently the god Ningish-zi-da ("Lord of the pure wood"), whose name is familiar to us from the Gudea tablets; that the legend of the Descent of Ishtar is part of the Thammuz cycle; and that Thammuz's sister Bêlit-sêri was the secretary of Eresh-ki-gal, "lord of hell." There seems to be some mistake about the last statement, either on the part of Prof. Zimmern or his summarizer, for Ereshkigal was certainly a female deity, the wife of Ningal the Babylonian Pluto, and as such identified by the magicians of the early Christian centuries with the Greek Persephone. Other interesting identifications of names may be found in Prof. Hronzy's statement in the Zeitschrift für Assyriologie that the Sumerian name of the storm-god Hadad (the Biblical Rimmon) is Iskur; and in a bold attempt of Prof. A. T. Clay, in the Journal of the American Oriental Society, to equate the god Ninib with En-martu or Bel-amurru, and thus to make him the Amorite god par excellence introduced into Babylonia by the Western Semites.

A singular point has been raised by M. Maspero in a late instalment of his 'Chronique' in the Journal des Débats. He tells us that the mummies of the Ramesside kings now in the Cairo Museum have nearly all been subjected to an operation like trepanning either at the moment of, or shortly after, death, as is shown by the appearance of a large triangular hole in the top of the skull. According to him, this was done for a religious, or, more precisely, a magical reason, as it was considered that death from disease was caused by the intrusion of an evil spirit, who, after killing his victim, remained imprisoned in the top of the skull, and could not escape unless a way were made for him. The practice seems to have been peculiar to sovereigns, as no evidence of it can be found in the mummies of private persons; but, here again, M. Maspero expects some day to find the explanation in some part of the myth of Osiris or Horus now lost. Perhaps the origin of the nonsense that lately appeared in our own daily press about the supernatural attributes of a particular mummy-case in the British Museum may be found in his remarks in the same article on the superstitious terrors of the guardians of the Khasr-en-Nil Museum, who declare that the mummies "walk" at night, and that Rameses VI., whose arm was removed by plunderers in ancient times and has been replaced by that of a woman, is particularly active. The same idea has been introduced more than once into modern "occult" fiction.

Prof. Sayce has found at Segêk in Nubia, which he claims to be the site of the ancient Meroë, a Greek inscription of the fourth or fifth century A.D., from which he gathers that it was the Abyssinian kings of Axum who finally overthrew the kingdom here established on Egyptian lines. This gives him the peg on which to hang a "reconstructed" history of the settlement of the Egyptian priest-kings in Ethiopia, which doubtless contains a great deal of truth, but seems at present to depend more on conjecture than fact. That it was founded by the priesthood of Amen, flying from Thebes after the rise of the Libyan dynasty under Sheshonq (the Biblical Shishak), founder of the Twenty-Second Dynasty, is probably true, as is the fact on which Prof. Sayce dwells that the country was already well known to the Amenhoteps of the Eighteenth Dynasty, and that it was here that Amenhotep III. killed the many lions of the famous scarab. Prof. Sayce makes a gallant attempt to translate the Meroitic inscriptions, and shows with some success how the efforts that the Ethiopian kings made to keep strictly to Egyptian verbal forms gradually slackened, until the kings themselves were finally replaced by what was virtually a negro dynasty speaking the language of their own country. What he does not tell us is why this flight of the Amen worshippers took place. Amen was worshipped by the Bubastite dynasty and their successors as much as by the priest-kings, and the motive cannot, therefore, have been merely religious. Nor did the Libyan mercenaries who placed their leader Sheshonq on the throne alter the civil constitution of the country, so far as may be judged. Was the flight then merely dictated by motives such as led to the removal of the mediæval Papacy to Avignon? It would seem probable, for Diodorus's story of Ergamenes seems to show that the Ethiopian priests possessed a most exaggerated idea of the functions of a State Church. Prof. Sayce's paper will appear in a forthcoming number of the Proceedings of the Society of Biblical Archaeology.

Mr. P. D. Scott-Moncrieff has written for The Journal of Hellenic Studies a criticism of Plutarch's treatise 'De Iside et Osiride,' in which, curiously enough, he makes no mention of the doubts as to its authorship recently raised by German and other authors. He examines at sufficient length the foundation on which the treatise may be said to rest from the Egyptological point of view, and is of opinion that the author entirely failed to enter into the spirit of the Egyptian religion, and interpreted the legends that he has preserved for us exactly as a Platonist might have been expected to do. At the same time, he usefully reminds us that, all through the Ptolemaic period, the native priests stoutly resisted the gradual Hellenization of the country which took place under the influence of intermarriage and other causes, and would have nothing to do with the Greek worship of Isis, even if they were capable of understanding it. He also gives many proofs that Plutarch must have been utterly ignorant of the ancient Egyptian language and the meaning of the hieroglyphs; and he hints that it is possible that when we know more than we do now about the Mycenaean religion, we may find in it a connecting link between the Osiris myth and the Eleusinian worship of Dionysus that at present we can only imagine. Altogether, the article is suggestive and interesting, and should lead to a better appreciation of the work, which is, as the author reminds us, the one relic of antiquity that gives any key to the ideas underlying the cult of the Alexandrian divinities.

Not unconnected with this is, perhaps, the astrology of the later Greeks, materials for the study of which are gradually coming to light. Prof. F. Boll continues to publish the texts of Greek astrological writers preserved in the different libraries of Germany, of which he has succeeded in discovering nearly fifty. In the last instalment of these he gives a treatise on chiromancy by the chartophylax Libadenos of Trebizonde, written in 1336, which should set at rest the controversy started by the assertion of some modern charlatans a few years ago that their so-called "art" rested not on astrology, but on observation. Prof. L. Weigl has also published the Εἰσαγωγή ἀστρονομίας of Johannes Kamateros, which seems in effect to be less "a compendium of Greek astronomy and astrology," as its editor describes it, than a composition in bad verse by a contemporary of the Emperor Manuel Comnenus, dealing with the prediction of political events by the system which the Zadkiels and Raphaels of our own day call "mundane astrology." It is said to be a compilation in which are enshrined the dicta on such matters of writers like Hephæstion of Thebes, Eratosthenes, and the person who wrote (without authority) under the honoured name of Claudius Ptolemy. As the sources of its quotations are not acknowledged, it is of little use to us for the correction of texts, but it seems valuable as giving a record of the Greek language of the period.

The Quarterly Statement of the Palestine Exploration Fund contains the conclusion of Mr. Stewart Macalister's Report on the excavations at Gezer, which are now, we understand, to be abandoned. One of the objects they have yielded is a wooden tablet engraved with what appears to be an ancient calendar or list of months written in Hebrew, and described, not by their official names, but by the agricultural work to be done in them—such as "a month for the flax harvest" and the like. It seems to be ascribed with fair certainty to the sixth century B.C., and would thus be one of the earliest specimens of Hebrew handwriting known. There is great diversity of opinion as to its use, for its discoverer supposes it to have been made by some peasant who had just learnt to write, and hung it up in his hut to impress his neighbours with this exhibition of his learning. Father Ronzevalle, Professor of Oriental Archæology at Beirut, on the other hand, thinks it may be an official copy or extract from "some administrative rescript determining the periodical demands imposed upon the rural population around Gezer for a lengthy work which concerned the whole of the neighbourhood." Dr. Daiches compares it with somewhat similar documents from Babylonia which show, according to him, that the Gezer tablet is "a generally recognized calendar," although its exact connexion with the Babylonian is not clear. The controversy still continues, and promises to be interesting.

SALES.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE sold on the 7th inst. the following pictures, the property of Mr. R. G. Behrens: Constable, Near Dedham, 115*l.* J. Crome, The Trout Stream, 609*l.* Gainsborough, A Young Girl, seated in a landscape, 409*l.*; A Woody River Scene, 141*l.* Hoppner, The Cottage-Girl, 105*l.* Raeburn, Lady Broughton, of Doddington Hall, 1,207*l.*; Master Craig, 126*l.* Reynolds, Head of a Peasant Girl, 131*l.* Romney, George Hawkins, only son of Pennell Hawkins, and nephew of Sir Caesar Hawkins, in blue coat with brass buttons, white vest and stock, 1,050*l.*; Master James Maxtone of Cultoquhey, in white dress with pink sash, 110*l.* W. Shayer, sen., Sand-Diggers, 147*l.*

The following pictures were from various properties: Lawrence, Portrait of a Lady, in white dress with pink ribbons and sash, a lace cap on her head, 1,365*l.*; Portrait of a Gentleman, in brown coat with brass buttons, white stock, 115*l.*; Portrait of a Lady, in black dress, with white scarf and pearl ornaments, in a landscape, 388*l.* J. B. van Loo, Portrait of a Lady, in rich blue dress and pink scarf, holding a piece of music, and resting her arm on a spinet, 315*l.* Sir M. A. Shee, Miss Corbould, in white dress with yellow scarf, seated, holding a book and a crayon, 120*l.* Lucas van Leyden, Portrait of the Artist, in black dress and hat, holding a medallion, 136*l.* C. Janssens, Sir H. Marten, Judge of Admiralty Court, holding a book in his left hand, 120*l.* J. B. Pater, A Fête Champêtre, ladies and gentlemen with three children in a forest glade, 105*l.* J. van Goyen, View of the Town of Rhenen, a ferry-boat and other boats in the foreground, 462*l.* Rembrandt, Portrait of a Young Gentleman, in black dress, with white collar, 304*l.* W. C. Duyster, Soldiers playing Tric-Trac, 178*l.*; Portrait of a Lady, in blue and white dress, seated, 173*l.* Nattier, Mlle. de Châteauroux, in white dress with blue scarf, and spray of flowers, 199*l.* J. van Os, Flowers in a Terra-Cotta Vase, 120*l.* Rembrandt, A Philosopher, in brown dress and red cap, watching the sand run down in an hour-glass, 399*l.* C. van Loo, Music, three children playing musical instruments, 157*l.* N. Maes, a Family Group, 173*l.* Velasquez, Queen Catherine of Braganza, consort of Charles II., 136*l.* Graham Lindsay, Sir Walter Scott, 220*l.* Kneller, The Madonna, in red dress, with blue robe, seated, holding the Infant Saviour; the infant St. John before her, 110*l.* J. Highmore, Portrait of a Lady, holding her infant daughter on her knee, 367*l.* Jan Kick, Three Cavaliers, with musical instruments, at a table, 110*l.* Reynolds, Elizabeth, Countess Winterton, 357*l.* Raeburn, Lieut.-Col. Alexander Stewart, 4th Batt. Royal Scots, in scarlet coat with green collar, 682*l.*

Fine-Art Gossip.

A NOTEWORTHY exhibition of works by Mr. George Clausen, R.A., is to be opened next Thursday at the Leicester Galleries, Leicester Square. It will consist of both paintings and drawings upon which he has been engaged for some time past, and which have not been previously exhibited.

THE CONTINENTAL FINE-ART GALLERY has been opened at 149, New Bond Street, with an exhibition of works by M. Jean Sala.

THE French caricaturist M. Colomb, widely known in France under the name of "Moloch," died suddenly in Paris last week. He had for some years been a vigorous satirist of men and morals, his favourite subjects being ministers in office, politicians, and even reigning sovereigns.

THE two prints by Louis Philibert Debucourt, by realizing 33,000 francs at the Sardou Sale in Paris last week, have far exceeded all previous prices. They are both rare, and in exceptionally fine preservation. Another and better-known pair by the same artist, 'Le Menuet de la Mariée' and 'La Noce au Château,' were secured by Mr. Sabin at 9,900 francs.

THE Académie des Beaux-Arts on Saturday last elected a member in the section of Architecture in place of the late Alfred Normand. In the first and only ballot M. Laloux was easily ahead of the other candidates. The new Academician won the Prix de Rome in 1878, and among his best-known works are the railway station at Tours and that at the Quai d'Orsay.

Six drawings by Rossetti have recently been added to the series of Pre-Raphaelite pictures on loan at the Fitzwilliam Museum, which has been further enriched by the loan of a collection of 93 Italian medals, dating from about 1440 to 1560, from the cabinets of Mr. George Salting, Mr. Max Rosenheim, Mr. Henry Oppenheimer, and Mr. T. Whitcombe Greene.

A COLLECTION of India proofs of wood-engravings by the brothers Dalziel has been this week presented to the Borough of Hampstead by Mr. Gilbert Dalziel. The celebrated engravers resided for many years in various parts of Hampstead. The collection comprises 73 frames, containing 250 India proofs—extending over the period 1853 to 1883—and includes much of the best work of the Dalziels during the "sixties," which is well worth seeing.

THE MEDICI SOCIETY this week begins the publication of its plates for 1909 with 'Bacchus and Ariadne' (Titian) and 'The Countess of Oxford' (Hoppner) from the National Gallery; 'The Pearl Necklace' (Vermeer) and 'The Madonna della Colonna' (Raphael) from Berlin; and 'The Magdalen' (Quentin Matsys) from Antwerp. Before the end of May the Society will also publish 'The Vision of St. Ursula' (Carpaccio) from Venice; 'The Madonna and Child with Cherubim' (Mantegna) from Milan; 'The Concert' (Terborch) from Berlin; 'Lady Hamilton with a Goat' (Romney) from the Cranbury Park Collection; and the portrait of Shakespeare (the supposed original of the "Droeshout" engraving) now in the Memorial Hall, Stratford-on-Avon.

THE RECTOR OF LUDLOW CHURCH writes:

"I do not see The Athenæum, but I understand you have made a statement that I have initiated a movement for the removal of the screen in Ludlow Church. If this is correct, you must please contradict it, and I think you owe me some apology for publishing a falsehood which has considerably inconvenienced me."

We present our sincere apologies to the Rector of Ludlow for our misstatement, which came from a source usually trustworthy.

EXHIBITIONS.

SAT. (May 15).—Hoppner Exhibition, Messrs. Colnaghi's Gallery.
— Little Salon, Seventh Exhibition, Gallery Van Brakel.
— Alexander Mann Memorial Exhibition, Baillie Gallery.
— Paintings, Drawings, and Etchings by Mr. Augustus E. John, and Paintings and Drawings by Mr. W. Nicholson, Mr. W. Orpen, and Mr. J. Pryde, Chenil Gallery.
— Miss Maude Parker's Drawings, Graves Gallery.
— Mr. Theodore Rousset's Paintings, Chenil Gallery.
— M. Jean Sala's 'Grenada and its Gipsies: Paris and its Parisiennes,' Continental Fine-Art Gallery.
— Jan Steen Exhibition, Dowdeswell Galleries.
MON. Mr. D. M. Anderson's Drawings, 'From Northern Shores,' Private View, Modern Gallery.
TUES. Pictures and Drawings by the Hon. Neville Lytton and Mr. C. Geoffroy, Private View, Carfax Gallery.
WED. Pictures by Israëls, M. Maris, Lhermitte, and Harpignies, Private View, French Gallery.

MUSIC

THE WEEK.

CORONET.—Monleone's 'Cavalleria Rusticana.'

A SETTING of Verga's libretto of 'Cavalleria Rusticana' by Domenico Monleone was performed at the Coronet Theatre last Monday by the Castellano company. This work, according to Le Ménestrel of February 23rd, 1907, was produced at Amsterdam, and afterwards performed in Italy. Mascagni and his publisher Sonzogno went to law, but final judgment will only be given this year at the Turin Court of Cassation. Meanwhile permission has been given to Castellano to produce it wherever his company appears. It was certainly bold on the part of Monleone thus to court comparison with Mascagni's work, which has achieved great and prolonged popularity. History, however, tells of similar acts of boldness. After hearing Paer's 'Eleonora, ossia l'Amore conjugale,' which was being performed with great success in Germany, Beethoven wrote his 'Leonore' to virtually the same book. Paer's work is now forgotten, but Beethoven's opera is still regarded as one of the glories of German art. A still more striking instance is that of Rossini resetting the libretto of Paisiello's 'Barbiere,' which for a quarter of a century had enjoyed wonderful favour.

It was interesting to hear the Monleone opera at the Coronet, the rendering of which, however, showed more zeal than discretion on the part of the singers. There are some dramatic moments in the music, but the latter for the most part lacks that individuality which accounts for Mascagni's success. And then there is another drawback: Monleone shows too intimate an acquaintance with Mascagni's setting.

QUEEN'S HALL.—M. Kussewitzky's Orchestral Concert. MM. Ysaye and Pugno's Recital.

ON Tuesday afternoon M. Sergei Kussewitzky gave the first of two orchestral concerts, the programme consisting entirely of Russian works new to London. It was M. Kussewitzky who last year produced the remarkable Kalinnikoff Symphony, so it was hoped that on this occasion he would give us something equally interesting. There was a Symphony in c minor (Op. 26) by Alexander Scriabin, who is specially known as a pianist. The music is clever and interesting, yet, as in many modern compositions, it was the development of the thematic material, rather than the material itself, which engaged attention. And then, as one could see beforehand from the brief analysis in the programme-book, there were many climaxes in the second and fifth movements, and the earlier, of strenuous character, decidedly weakened the effect of the final ones. Then there was a Concerto in E minor for violin and orchestra by Jules Conus, a well-known violinist in Russia. The work, of rhapsodical character, proved only of moderate interest. The rendering of the solo part by Herr Fritz Kreisler was, however, admirable. Finally came six numbers of a charming Suite, delightfully scored, by Georges Conus, brother of Jules. The closing number was entitled 'Comic Song: Variations on a Russian Theme.' There was a chorus (sung by Mr. Stedman's choir of forty children). Whether there was anything comic in the words we cannot say, but certainly there was nothing of the kind in the see-saw tune they sang.

MM. Ysaye and Pugno at their second recital on Wednesday afternoon introduced a novelty, a Sonata for violin and piano by Sylvio Lazzari, an Austrian by birth, who studied for some time at Paris with César Franck, so that his music shows natural traces of that influence. We find earnest thought in the work, and a spirit of freedom, tempered, however, by wise restraint. Of its three sections, the middle one, a Lento, makes, at any rate at first, the strongest appeal. A splendid rendering was given of Bach's Sonata in G for violin and pianoforte by the two artists.

Musical Gossip.

MISS GRACE SUNDERLAND AND MR. FRANK THISTLETON began another interesting series of Old Chamber Music at Bechstein Hall on April 28th. At the second concert next Monday, which will take place at Steinway Hall, the programme will include Couperin's quaint 'L'Apothéose de Lulli,' also Somerset folk-songs arranged by Mr. Cecil Sharp.

A MOST interesting "Mozart Commemoration" was given on Thursday afternoon by the pupils of Miss Mathilde Verne in "Hickford's Great Room," Brewer Street, Golden Square, in which "Miss Mozart and Master Mozart" gave their last concert (May 13th, 1765) before leaving London. The programme consisted for the most part of music composed by the young genius during his two visits to London. Mrs. Harrison gave a brief account of the "Hickford Room" and its association with Mozart and other notable musicians.

MASSENET's new opera 'Bacchus' was to be produced at the Paris Opéra on the 12th inst. with Mlle. Bréval as Ariadne.

RICHARD STRAUSS is said to be engaged on 'Semiramis,' an opera with spoken dialogue, the libretto of which is by Hugo von Hofmannsthal, who wrote the book of 'Elektra.'

IN 'Richard Wagner's Letters to his Dresden Friends,' published in 1888, there are twenty-six to Ferdinand Heine, designer of costumes at the Dresden Court Theatre. The autographs of twenty-five of them were to be sold by auction last Thursday at Munich, and according to Le Ménestrel of the 8th inst. they appeared in the publication mentioned above in a mutilated form.

PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK.

SUN. Concert, 3.30, Royal Albert Hall.
— Sunday Society Concert, 3.30, Queen's Hall.
— Sunday League Concert, 7, Queen's Hall.
MON.-SAT. Royal Opera, Covent Garden.
MON.-SAT. Italian Opera, 8, Coronet Theatre.
(Wed. and Sat. Matinées, 2.30.)
MON. Mr. Thomas Beecham's Orchestral Concert, 3.15, Queen's Hall.
— Miss E. Schulz and Mr. V. D'Arnalle's Violin and Vocal Concert, 8.15, Bechstein Hall.
— London Choral Society, 8, Queen's Hall.
— Misses Grainger-Kerr and J. Purdon's Recital, 8.30, Aeolian Hall.
— Mr. Cyril Scott's Recital, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
— Sunderland-Thistleton Concert, 8.30, Steinway Hall.
TUES. Madame Gerhardt's Vocal Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
— Mr. Ernest Groom's Vocal Recital, 3.15, Aeolian Hall.
— Mr. Macmillan's Concert, 3.15, Queen's Hall.
— Handel Society Concert, 8.30, Queen's Hall.

WED. Madame Clara Butt and Mr. K. Rumford's Concert, 2.45, Royal Albert Hall.
— Messrs. Ysaye and Pugno's Recital, 3, Queen's Hall.
— Sevcik Quartet and Mr. Henschel's Concert, 3.15, Bechstein Hall.
— Cathie String Quartet, 8.15, Broadwood's.
— English String Quartet, 8.15, Bechstein Hall.
THURS. Madame Larkcom's Concert, 3, Steinway Hall.
— Miss Leginska's Pianoforte Recital, 3, Aeolian Hall.
— Comtesse Skarbek's Vocal Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
— Mr. Charles Gilbert's 'Chansons Françaises,' 3.15, Berkeley Square.
— Miss May Mukle's 'Cello Recital,' 3.15, St. James's Hall.
— Misses Satz's Pianoforte Recital, 8, Bechstein Hall.
FRI. Misses Kathleen and Adelaide Rind's Recital, 3, Steinway Hall.
— Madame Alice Verlet's Concert, 3.15, Queen's Hall.
— Miss Eldina Bligh's Orchestral Concert, 8.15, Queen's Hall.
— Lucas String Quartet, 8.30, Bechstein Hall.
SAT. Empire Concert, 3, Royal Albert Hall.
— Miss d'Auvergne Upcher's Vocal Recital, 3, Bechstein Hall.
— M. Sergei Kussewitzky's Recital, 3.15, St. James's Hall.
— M. Pachmann's Chopin Recital, 3.15, Queen's Hall.

DRAMA

THE WEEK.

LYRIC.—Revival (at Matinées) of 'Henry IV., Part I.'

THIRTEEN years have passed since Mr. Tree's Haymarket revival of 'Henry IV.,' and it is not surprising that Mr. Waller should wish to repeat his performance of Hotspur under his own management. He has not found it necessary to make any considerable changes in his reading. The hotblooded, fiery-spoken Percy is just the part for Mr. Waller's energetic temper and resonant diction, and his Hotspur remains as breezy and picturesque a study as heretofore. One improvement Mr. Waller has made on the Haymarket production. Mr. Robert Loraine takes the part of Hotspur's rival with immense advantage to the drama. He may somewhat lack imagination, but he has no lack of natural buoyancy, and at the same time he possesses a personality of a rather masterful kind. As a result, we get at the Lyric just that sharp conflict of character, that duel of wills, which Shakespeare intended. Mr. Louis Calvert is the Falstaff—a delightful Falstaff up to a certain point, best in suggestion of the blustering braggart and the swiller of sack, but not quite unctuous enough in the exposition of the knight's appeals for sympathy and indulgence.

HAYMARKET.—Love Watches: a Comedy in Four Acts. By Robert de Flers and Arman de Caillavet. Adapted by Gladys Unger.

'L'AMOUR VEILLE' here has to be judged by a version which seems to have been specially prepared to suit American tastes. All the lightness and sparkle and wit seem to have gone out of the piece, along with certain audacities of situation; and the result is a play that seems foolish where it should have been gay, and heavily farcical where it should have revealed a characteristically Gallic humour. The plot is thin and based on old material—is, indeed, like that of 'Frou-Frou,' provided, however, with a happy ending. Its heroine is a child-wife who is as unreasonably and tempestuously jealous as she is greedy for kisses. Exasperated by her husband's attentions to a widow, the girl resolves on reprisals, and so goes to the rooms of a priggish poet. But he is the last sort of man to make a pleasing lover, and the moment he attempts caresses she repels him with disgust. So she returns to her husband, who for a while is furious against his unknown rival, but, when he learns his identity, cruelly declares to his wife in the poet's presence, "Then of course you are innocent."

Miss Burke, who bears the chief burden of the play, has piquancy of manner, high spirits, and a sense of humour, though she has also awkwardnesses of gait and pose and speech; and on Tuesday night she danced across the stage and laughed and cried and flirted with unflagging effort. She had, too, the right idea as to the featherbrained type that she was called upon to impersonate. But she could not get the effects she wanted; her voice did not ring true in the emotional passages, her gaiety was artificial; in fact, she is a young actress who distinctly wants training, if her talents are not to run to waste. Mr. Julian L'Estrange played the husband pleasingly, and Mr. Ernest Lawford made something out of the eccentric prig.

SHAKESPEARE AT STRATFORD.

The Athenæum is so highly valued as an accurate record that I am sure you will allow me to correct an error in the number for May 8th, for the benefit of posterity. Your critic of Mr. Benson's performances at Stratford-on-Avon cannot have been present on May 3rd, for he makes two mistakes in the cast. Mr. A. E. George played Henry IV., and very well too. Henry, Prince of Wales, was acted, not by Mr. Benson (whom no one can mistake), but by the handsome young actor, Mr. F. G. Worlock, who played the humble part of Fabian in 'Twelfth Night' in the evening. He did not know his part, but he was very bright and not at all nervous, and he received perhaps the most applause of any of the performers. I may be allowed to add also that had your critic been present he could not have failed to notice the admirable Falstaff of Mr. Louis Calvert.

W. H. HUTTON.

TO CORRESPONDENTS.—L. L. A. C.—F. C. N.—A. M.—F. H. C.—Received. W. H. G. F.—Not suitable for us.

WE cannot undertake to reply to inquiries concerning the appearance of reviews of books.

No notice can be taken of anonymous communications.

WE do not undertake to give the value of books, china, pictures, &c.

INDEX TO ADVERTISERS.

	PAGE
AUTHORS' AGENTS	574
AUTOTYPE COMPANY	574
BELL & SONS	600
BISHOP'S VARALETES	598
BLACKIE & SON	599
CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY PRESS	575
CATALOGUES	598
CLARK	576
CONSTABLE & CO.	599
DUCKWORTH & CO.	597
EDUCATIONAL	573
EXHIBITIONS	573
EYRE & SPOTTISWOODE	598
INSURANCE COMPANIES	575
LECTURES	573
MACMILLAN & CO.	576
MAGAZINES, &c.	574
MISCELLANEOUS	574
MURRAY	596
OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS	576
PAUL & CO.	598
PRINTERS	598
REBMAN	598
SALES BY AUCTION	574
SHIPPING	575
SITUATIONS VACANT	573
SITUATIONS WANTED	574
SOCIETIES	573
SONNENSCHN & CO.	596
TYPE-WRITERS, &c.	574

Swan Sonnenschein & Co., LTD.

SOME NEW AND FORTHCOMING WORKS.

OPINIONS ON MEN, WOMEN, AND THINGS.

By the late HARRY QUILTER. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net. Also an EDITION DE LUXE of 50 Copies on Art Paper, bound in vellum, 3l. 3s.

STUDIES IN ROMAN HISTORY.

Vol. II. By E. G. HARDY, M.A. D.Litt. Crown 8vo, cloth, 6s.

HEGEL'S EDUCATIONAL THEORY AND PRACTICE.

By MILLICENT MACKENZIE, M.A., Professor of Education, University College, Cardiff. With an Introductory Note by Prof. T. S. MACKENZIE, Litt.D. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. net.

VALUATION: its Nature and Laws.

("Library of Philosophy.") By Prof. URBAN. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

TWO NEW VOLUMES OF THE SPECIAL CAMPAIGN SERIES.

THE RUSSO-JAPANESE WAR.

DOWN TO THE BATTLE OF LIAO-YANG. By Capt. F. R. SEDGWICK, R.F.A. With numerous Maps. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net.

THE JENA CAMPAIGN, 1806.

By Col. F. N. MAUDE, C.B. With numerous Maps. Crown 8vo, cloth, 5s. net.

DRAMATIC SCENES FROM GREAT NOVELISTS.

Adapted by ROSE I. PATRY, Author of 'Practical Handbook on Elocution.' Crown 8vo, cloth, 1s. net; paper, 6d. net.

MONOLOGUES FOR RECITATION.

By ELSIE FOGERTY, Editor of 'Standard Plays for Amateur Performance in Girls' Schools,' &c., and AMY NANKIVELL. Crown 8vo, paper, 6d. net.

KANT'S PHILOSOPHY AS RECTIFIED BY SCHOPENHAUER.

By M. KELLY, M.A. M.D., late Major R.A.M.C. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d.

NEW VOLUME OF THE NEW CLASSICAL LIBRARY. THE INSTITUTES OF GAIUS. (Extracts.)

The Digest. Title XLV. Translated by J. GRAHAM TRAPNELL, LL.B. B.A. Crown 8vo, cloth, 3s. 6d. net; leather, 4s. 6d. net.

NEW, REVISED, AND ENLARGED EDITION OF CONTEMPORARY SOCIALISM.

By JOHN RAE, M.A. Demy 8vo, cloth, 5s. net.

HISTORY AND ETHNOGRAPHY OF SOUTH AFRICA.

- Vol. I. THE PORTUGUESE IN AFRICA. [Now ready.]
 Vol. II. FORMATION OF CAPE COLONY BY THE DUTCH. [Shortly.]
 Vol. III. ACCOUNT OF THE DUTCH, PORTUGUESE, HOTTENTOTS, AND BANTU. [In preparation.]

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS YEARBOOK, 1909.

Nineteenth Year of Issue. 3s. 6d. net.

THE SCHOOLMASTERS' YEARBOOK AND DIRECTORY, 1909.

Seventh Annual Issue. 7s. 6d. net.

SWAN SONNENSCHN & CO., LTD.,
25, High Street, Bloomsbury, W.C.

MR. MURRAY'S NEW BOOKS.

MEMOIR OF COLONEL KENYON-SLANEY, P.C. M.P.

Edited by WALTER DURNFORD. Large crown 8vo, with Illustrations, 3s. 6d. net.

NOTES FROM A PAINTER'S LIFE.

Including the Founding of Two Galleries. By C. E. HALLÉ. With Illustrations. Square demy 8vo, 6s. net.

SCENES AND PORTRAITS.

By FREDERIC MANNING, Author of 'The Vigil of Brunhild.' Crown 8vo, 6s.

A volume of real portraits and imaginary scenes, in which the author of 'The Vigil of Brunhild' has aimed at presenting the thought of several different ages in the past by personating it in various characters which, in all the scenes except the first, are historical. The Series has a unity of thought and purpose; all the scenes present various aspects of the same problem.

MUCH ADO ABOUT SOMETHING.

New Novel. By C. E. LAWRENCE, Author of 'Pilgrimage.' 6s.

"A delightful fantasy.... In his loving humour and benign paradox, we distinctly feel the touch that begets brotherhood.....It should be read by all who have been numbed by the contemplation of squalor."—Daily Chronicle.

NEW NOVELS.

THE SHUTTLES OF THE LOOM.

By K. M. EDGE (Mrs. Caulfeild), Author of 'Ahana.' 6s. [Just out.]

ELLEN GLASGOW'S NEW NOVEL.

THE ROMANCE OF A PLAIN MAN.

By the Author of 'The Battle Ground,' 'The Deliverance,' &c. 6s.

THE LIFE STORY OF AN OTTER.

By J. C. TREGARTHEN, Author of 'Wild Life at the Land's End.' With Illustrations. Large crown 8vo. 6s. net.

AN EGYPTIAN OASIS.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE OASIS OF KHARGA IN THE LIBYAN DESERT. By H. J. LLEWELLYN BEADNELL, Late of the Egyptian Survey Dept., &c. With numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION OF THE EARLY HISTORY OF THE CHURCH.

By the ABBÉ L. DUCHESNE. Demy 8vo, 9s. net.

This important History has hitherto only been available in the original. The author is well-known in England for the interest he has shown on the subject of Anglican orders, and his opinion on historical questions is absolutely trustworthy and helpful.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street, W.

DUCKWORTH & CO.'S NEW PUBLICATIONS.

JUST PUBLISHED.

ENGLAND AND THE ENGLISH

From an American Point of View.

By PRICE COLLIER. 434 pages, demy 8vo, cloth extra gilt, 7s. 6d. net.

This illuminating study of the traits of character which have made the Englishman what he is to-day, is of the highest value as well as the greatest interest. The author goes to the very roots of his subject, and while the work is, on the whole, sympathetic, he does not hesitate to criticize. It is thought that it will prove to be the most enlivening as well as the most convincing presentation of the Englishman of to-day that has yet appeared.

H. W. NEVINSON'S NEW BOOK.

ESSAYS IN FREEDOM.

Large crown 8vo, cloth extra gilt, 6s. net.

[Immediately.]

THE LIBRARY OF ART.—NEW VOLUME.

THE SCHOOL OF MADRID.

By Senor BERUETE Y. MORET. 48 Illustrations. Pott 4to, gilt, 7s. 6d. net.

Recently published Volumes in this Series.

BLAKE.

By BASIL DE SELINCOURT. 40 Illustrations. 7s. 6d. net.

GREAT MASTERS OF DUTCH & FLEMISH PAINTING.

By DR. W. BODE. 40 Illustrations. 7s. 6d. net.

MAKERS OF OUR CLOTHES. A Case for Trade Boards.

By Mrs. CARL MEYER and CLEMENTINA BLACK. Demy 8vo, 5s. net.

* * This volume is the result of a year's investigation into the work of women in London in the Tailoring, Dressmaking, and Underclothing Trades. It should be invaluable to politicians and to the large number of persons whose conscience is disturbed by the problems of poverty and underpayment.

THE SCIENTIFIC FEEDING OF ANIMALS.

By O. KELLNER. Translated by W. GOODWIN, B.Sc. Ph.D. 404 pages, crown 8vo, 6s. net.

Prospectus can be had.

THE COUNTRY MONTH BY MONTH.

By J. A. OWEN and Prof. G. S. BOULGER. A New Edition. With Note by the late LORD LILFORD. 20 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 6s. net.

MEMOIRS OF A SURREY LABOURER.

By GEORGE BOURNE. New and Cheaper Edition. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

SOUTH AMERICAN SKETCHES.

By W. H. HUDSON. A Re-Issue. Cloth, crown 8vo, 1s. net.

TO BE PUBLISHED IMMEDIATELY.

JOB AND HIS NEW THEOLOGY.

By the Rev. JOSEPH DAWSON. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

The author approaches the problem of the Book of Job from a new standpoint. It is with the man rather than with his record that the author primarily deals. He arrives at the meaning of the book through the personality of the patriarch. Job is a man whose life is subjected to a strain for which his creed is not adequate, and a spiritual conflict ensues for which Mr. Dawson finds many parallels in the religious life of to-day. The book is not of a purely theological character; it has a strong literary flavour and a human interest.

PLAYS. By John Galsworthy. Strife; Joy; The Silver Box.

In One Volume. 6s.

SECOND EDITION IN PREPARATION.

"A Brilliant New Novel."

THE INFAMOUS JOHN FRIEND.

By Mrs. R. S. GARNETT. Crown 8vo, 6s.

EARLY REVIEWS.

"The author deserves hearty congratulation. The book can hardly fail to make its mark. The story is of the time of Pitt and Nelson and of the dreaded Napoleonic invasion. The social atmosphere is very happily indicated....The idea of turning a spy into a heroic figure has something in it of the charm of an enchantment, but to understand how convincingly it can be done readers must be referred to Mrs. Garnett's pages....There seems, then, something almost miraculous in this achievement of Mrs. Garnett's; those, however, whom it might not strike in quite the same light as it strikes the present reviewer will still do well to look out for a pleasant tale of love and adventure in the time of George III."

Manchester Guardian.

"Its people seem studied from types of the Regency period, and its descriptions of Brighton society, when Mrs. Fitzgerald asserted her refining influence against a rampant degeneracy, are in the nature of vivid reminiscences. So far the year has given us no novel more soundly brilliant."—Dundee Advertiser.

ELIZABETH VISITS AMERICA.

Mrs. Elinor Glyn's new book, in which she reverts to the style of her earlier work, is to be published almost immediately. Crown 8vo, with Illustrations by the Author in the Text, and with a Photogravure Frontispiece, 6s.

DUCKWORTH & CO. 3, Henrietta Street, Covent Garden, London, W.C.

PUBLISHED LAST MONDAY.

In 2 demy 8vo vols. over 1,000 pp., price 21s. net. Descriptive Circular sent post free.

PROGRESSIVE CREATION:

A RECONCILIATION OF RELIGION WITH SCIENCE.

By Rev. HOLDEN E. SAMPSON.

This book is of the deepest interest to many classes of readers and thinkers, and we do not hesitate to pronounce it one of the most remarkable books which have appeared during the past half century. It appeals to so many sections of human society, being a serious contribution to published thought in current scientific research. It is a definite and positive advance of the Evolutionary theory which started from the publication of Darwin's memorable books, 'The Origin of Species' and 'The Descent of Man'; and it guides the scientific mind through the portals of psychology (as, in effect, Darwin himself prophesied would be the case), into the wider regions of the so-called "Supernatural" and the Spiritual planes, breaking down the time-worn barriers which for so many ages have been reared up between the Spiritual and the Material, and between Science and Religion. It affords a theory of the Origin of Life, of Being, of Nature and Forms of Evil, and of the Earth, and Heavenly Bodies, which has never before in the history of modern literature been propounded; a theory of the deepest interest and importance.

PUBLISHED APRIL 21. SECOND IMPRESSION READY THIS DAY.

THE ROMANCE OF A NUN.

By ALIX KING, Author of 'The Little Novice.'

"It is a genuine delight to read such fine work." "This remarkable book....exciting, palpitating with pathos passion, and sympathy."—Vide Press.

London: REBMAN, LTD., 129, Shaftesbury Avenue, W.C.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.THE TRICKSTER.
IN CALVERT'S VALLEY.

G. B. BURGIN.

M. PRESCOTT-MONTAGUE.

THE BOTTOM OF THE WELL.

FREDERICK UP AM ADAMS.

HEARTBREAK HILL. HERMAN K. VIELÉ.STOLEN HONEY. ADA and DUDLEY JAMES.THE FLAME DANCER. F. A. MATHEWS.THE LEVELLER. ALEXANDER MCARTHUR.AN ADVENTURE IN EXILE.

RICHARD DUFFY.

BANZAI!

"PARABELLUM."

THE CITY OF THE GOLDEN GATE.

E. EVERETT-GREEN.

THE DREAM AND THE WOMAN.

TOM GALLON.

THE BROKEN SNARE.

LUDWIG LEWISOHN.

THE WIDOW: To Say Nothing of the Man.

By HELEN ROWLAND. A very humorous book. 1s. net. (Third Edition.)

London: STANLEY PAUL & CO. Clifford's Inn.

JUST PUBLISHED. Demy 8vo, 5s. net.

THE IMPORTANT QUESTION OF THE DAY.BRITISH NATIONAL FINANCE.

By J. W. ROOT, Author of 'The Trade Relations of the British Empire,' &c.

Glasgow Herald.—"Throughout the author maintains on the whole a conservative attitude, and the lucidity of his criticisms and explanations is high testimony to his mastery of the details and intricacies of national finance."

Observer.—"The author lucidly analyzes the various forces which have operated in the building up of our industrial system, and proceeds to focus attention on the relationship between taxation and trade competition."

London:

EYRE & SPOTTISWOODE, LTD., East Harding Street, E.C., and 2, Victoria Street, Westminster, S.W.

Catalogues.MAGGS BROS.,

109, Strand, London, W.C.

DEALERS IN RARE AND VALUABLE BOOKS
PRINTS, AND AUTOGRAPHS.

CATALOGUES sent post free to all parts of the World

Export Orders Solicited.

Telegraphic and Cable Address: "Bibliolite, London."
Telephone: "Gerrard 4664."

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON, Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 16, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

CATALOGUE No. 50—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free. Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

CATALOGUES.—Vale Press Shakespeare, 30 vols. as new, 71. Ruskin's Works, Library Edition, 37 vols. good as new, 301. CLEARANCE CATALOGUE OF BOOKS, History, Science, Sociology, Early Printed Works, and General Literature, post free. Genuine Bargains in First Editions and scarce items. Parcels sent on approval if desired.—Address J. BALDWIN, 14, Osborne Road, Leyton, Essex.

BOOKS AT SPECIAL PRICES.

CATALOGUE No. 304—MAY, 1909—NOW READY.

CONTAINING MANY NEW AND ATTRACTIVE LINES IN PUBLISHERS' REMAINDERS.

WILLIAM GLAISHER, LTD.,

Remainder and Discount Booksellers,

265, HIGH HOLBORN, LONDON (and 14, George Street, Croydon)

The Books are on view at both addresses.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE

BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.—Yellow Book, 13 vols, 21. 10s.; Trigg's Art Garden Design, Italy, 3½ Guineas, for 21s.; E. Fitzgerald's Works, 7 vols, 31. 3s.

Printers.

HAVE YOU A FAMILY PEDIGREE which you would like to have PRINTED? Send it to us and it will be done under Expert Supervision at the lowest rates.—GERRARDS, LTD. (The Westminster Press), Genealogical Printers, 411A, Harrow Road, London, W.

THE GUILDHALL LIBRARY, NEWSPAPER

ROOM, and MUSEUM will be CLOSED from THURSDAY, May 20, to MONDAY, May 31, inclusive, for structural repairs.

HOW URIC ACID UNDERMINES YOUR HEALTH.THE UNSUSPECTED APPROACH OF GOUTY AILMENTS.

Have you ever paused to ask yourself if you are a gouty subject? Have you ever wondered if the fact that you seldom feel really well has anything to do with a gouty tendency? Have you ever realised how much a gouty ancestor may have influenced your health? Probably you have not given the question a thought.

Nine out of ten gouty subjects are not aware of their constitutional weakness until their health has been seriously impaired by the impregnation of the system with uric acid.

When the process of uric acid impregnation begins the victim may feel none the worse. As it continues, however, he begins to experience various symptoms, such as pain and fullness after meals, indigestion, flatulence, and heartburn; little pains, swellings, and inflammation in the joints; "tingling" or stiffness in the muscles; irritation and burning of the skin, with or without redness; and small lumps or chalk-like uratic concretions about the joints, outer rim of the ear, or eyelids.

THE PERIL OF THE GOUTY SUBJECT.

If you have any of these symptoms you have incontestable proof that you are a gouty subject and on the direct road to one of the many painful ailments of a gouty nature.

When acute gout does not supervene as the result of neglecting the early gouty signs, one or other of the following allied maladies occurs:—

Rheumatic gout and gouty rheumatism (pain, inflammation, stiffness, and swellings, chiefly in the joints), gouty eczema (affecting the skin), lumbago (persistent and intense pain in the loins), sciatica (acute pain extending from hips down thigh and knee; often causing lameness), stone and gravel (crystalline uratic deposits causing agonising pains and prostrating illness), neuritis (numbness or tingling in the muscles of the arm, developing into very severe pain), and suppressed gout (general discomfort, lowness of spirits, poor appetite, nervous irritability, and ill-temper).

If you have not passed the first stages of uric acid trouble, do not wait until excruciating gouty pain comes to warn you that you need a uric acid eliminant. Take Bishop's Varalettes now.

THE PERFECT ELIMINANT.

If you have passed the early stages of uric acid impregnation—if you have been seized by gout or any of its allied ills—Bishop's Varalettes are your only need. You cannot doubt this in face of their wonderful efficacy in cases where mistreatment or neglect has allowed the acid to gain a strong hold. You may place implicit reliance on Bishop's Varalettes for affording the greatest possible relief from pain, swellings, and inflammation.

The manufacturers of Bishop's Varalettes have issued a little book of practical information for the gouty subject, telling what to eat, drink, and avoid, describing all the principal forms of gouty ailments, their symptoms, causes, and consequences, and giving full directions for treatment in each case.

A copy of this valuable booklet will be sent you free on receipt of your name and address by Alfred Bishop (Limited), Manufacturing Chemists (established 1857), 48, Spelman Street, London, N.E. Please ask for Booklet V.

Bishop's Varalettes dissolve rapidly, with brisk effervescence, and, being tasteless, may be taken in any liquid. Of all chemists, 1s., 2s., and 5s. (25 days' treatment), or from the sole makers, as above.

Bishop's Varalettes may be had of the leading chemists in every country. Our principal general Agents abroad are:—

AUSTRALIA.—Potter & Birks, 1½, Macquarie Place, Sydney, N.S.W.

INDIA.—Mr. W. Moore, c/o Grindlay Groom & Co., Bombay.

UNITED STATES.—Lehn & Fink, 120, William Street, New York.

SPAIN.—Foye y Gimenez, Calle Gerona, 4 pral, Barcelona.

FRANCE.—Roberts et Cie, 5, Rue de la Paix, Paris.

RUSSIA.—Mr. F. Brempe, Serpoukhovskaya Street, 17, St. Petersburg.

BLACKIE'S LIST.

THE STONE AGES IN NORTH BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

By the Rev. FREDERICK SMITH. With Introduction by Prof. A. H. KEANE, Late Vice-President of the Anthropological Institute. Demy 8vo, 16s. net. [Just published.]

In this work the author claims to have extended the range of Palæolithic Man to North Britain and Ireland. The argument is not speculative, but based upon hundreds of human relics collected by him during nearly forty years' continuous search amid the boulder clays, river drifts, and marine estuaries of Scotland and Ireland. Over five hundred of these relics are represented by illustrations. The work thus opens up a new chapter in the history of early man, a chapter which cannot fail to appeal directly to all interested in the study of human activities from pre- and inter-glacial times.

INTRODUCTION TO THE NATURAL HISTORY OF LANGUAGE.

By T. G. TUCKER, Litt.D. (Camb.), Hon. Litt.D. (Dublin), Professor of Classical Philology in the University of Melbourne.

Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

A new treatise which gathers together the results of the great amount of philological work that the last quarter of a century has produced.

It is intended to fulfil to-day the purpose which was served in its time by Max Müller's 'Science of Language.'

GEOGRAPHY: Structural—Physical—Comparative.

A Text-Book for Senior Students.

By J. W. GREGORY, D.Sc. F.R.S., Professor of Geology in Glasgow University.

With Series of specially constructed Coloured Maps and Sketch Maps and Plans in Black and White.
Large 8vo, 6s. net.

The main purpose of this book is to put before the student the most important facts concerning the Structural Geography of the Earth, and the evolution of our present continents from older lands. It marks a new departure both in aims and in method. It furnishes the student with such knowledge of the entire surface of the Earth as will ensure his acquisition of geographical perspective.

THE MYTHOLOGY OF THE BRITISH ISLANDS.

An Introduction to Celtic Myth, Legend, Poetry, and Romance.

By CHARLES SQUIRE. 12s. 6d. net.

This book will appeal to all who are in any way interested in Celtic mythology and poetry, or in the mythology and poetry of early peoples in general, and to all lovers of English literature. It is based on the works of scholars deeply learned in Old Gaelic and Old Welsh, and as all the chief authorities are duly stated, those who wish to pursue the subject further may readily do so.

THE CALL OF THE HOMELAND.

A Collection of English Verse.

Selected and Arranged by R. P. SCOTT, LL.D., and K. T. WALLAS.

Price 4s. 6d. net.

"It is a pleasure to turn to such a volume as 'The Call of the Homeland,' which is by far and away the best anthology of patriotic verse which we have yet seen."—Academy.

"A collection very much above the average. The compilers display breadth of sympathy and a wide range of literary acquaintance."—Guardian.

"A handy collection of English patriotic verse, selected and arranged with much taste and diligence."—Pall Mall Gazette.

OUR TEETH. How Built up, How Destroyed, How Preserved.

Described and Illustrated by R. DENISON PEDLEY, F.R.C.S.Ed. L.D.S.Eng.,

Dental Surgeon to the Evelina Hospital for Sick Children, Southwark, and

FRANK HARRISON, M.R.C.S.Eng. L.D.S.Eng.,

Dental Surgeon, Sheffield Royal Hospital, and Lecturer on Dental Surgery and Pathology, Sheffield University. With many Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 5s. net.

BLACKIE & SON, LTD., 50, Old Bailey, E.C.

IMPORTANT BOOKS.

CHAPTERS ON SPANISH LITERATURE.

By J. FITZMAURICE KELLY. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

"A delightful volume, full of sympathy, learning, and judgment."—Observer.

"We have no hesitation in saying that this volume forms the most valuable English contribution to Spanish letters since the same author gave us his history of Spanish literature."—Athenæum.

"I have never met with such an illuminating work on Spanish literature."—Mr. R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM in the Nation.

AN HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION TO THE

MARPRELATE TRACTS. A Chapter on the Evolution of Religious and Civil Liberty in England.

By WILLIAM PIERCE. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

"The unsolved problem of Martin's personality lends perennial interest to the drama in which he played so conspicuous and influential a part. This book, which is admirably printed, is the first worthy discussion of a great controversy. We heartily congratulate Mr. Pierce on a notable success, and we urge all our readers who are interested in our history to add this book to their libraries."

The Rev. C. SILVESTER HORNE in the British Weekly.

ÆNEAS SILVIUS (Enea Silvio de Piccolomini—Pius II.), Orator, Man of Letters, Statesman, and Pope. By WILLIAM BOULTING. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

"A welcome attempt by a writer of taste and judgment to supply an English biography of the great mediæval scholar (1405-1464) whose Papacy is memorable for his efforts to form an armed confederation of Christian princes to resist the Turk."—Times.

ECONOMIC HERESIES. An Unorthodox

Attempt to Appreciate the Economic Problems Presented by 'Things as They Are.' By Sir NATHANIEL NATHAN. 10s. 6d. net.

"The author's general attitude may be gathered from his frank recognition that the authority of the professional economists has completely broken down, and that the orthodox teaching requires reconstruction."

Pall Mall Gazette.

FAMOUS WOMEN OF FLORENCE.

By EDGUMBE STALEY. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

The careers and characters of some of the famous ladies of Florence whose stories illustrate the Renaissance period.

HUMAN NATURE IN POLITICS.

By GRAHAM WALLAS. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"It is the first serious and dispassionate endeavour to assess carefully the various and conflicting parts played by impulse, instinct, and the different human emotions in furnishing power and direction to political activities."

Manchester Guardian.

"It can be read with great acceptance by the politician at all stages and of all creeds."—Observer.

UNIVERSITY ADMINISTRATION.

By CHARLES W. ELIOT, President of Harvard. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

"In this book the American university system is outlined with authority, without pedantry, and with a comprehensiveness which provides many points of interest and stimulation for the British educationist."—Glasgow Herald.

THE VALLEY OF SHADOWS.

By FRANCIS GRIERSON, Author of 'Modern Mysticism,' and 'The Celtic Temperament.' Demy 8vo, 6s. net.

"A genuine document of much historical interest and artistic force."—Nation.

"A highly significant volume. A picture of the spiritual and intellectual atmosphere of America in the days immediately preceding the Civil War."—Daily Telegraph.

THE BIOGRAPHY OF A SILVER FOX.

By ERNEST THOMPSON SETON. With numerous Illustrations by the Author. Demy 8vo, 5s. net.

"A romance of the realist kind and the fascinating lore of the woods is accompanied by the most delightful picture of foxes great and small. It makes better reading than many novels of human affairs."—Observer.

THE NEWEST AND BEST NOVELS.

PRISCILLA AND CHARYBDIS.

By F. FRANKFORT MOORE, Author of 'The Jessamy Bride.'

"This most entertaining social comedy."—Times.

"For good, festive, but not facetious novels, it would be hard to beat him."—Observer.

THE STORY OF THYRZA.

By ALICE BROWN, Author of 'Rose Macleod.'

"A strengthening tale builded of charity, human kindness, and the humour which has tears behind it."

Daily Chronicle.

THE PERJURER.

By W. E. NORRIS, Author of 'The Square Peg.'

Mr. Norris has never written a more delightful story.

PATRICIA BARING.

By WINIFRED JAMES, Author of 'Bachelor Betty.'

"If I had been a young man on the spot, I should certainly have been at her feet with the rest of them."—Punch.

A. CONSTABLE & CO. LTD.
10 Orange Street London W.C.

MESSRS. BELL'S NEW BOOKS.

READY MAY 26, crown 4to, 15s. net.

MODERN HOMES.

Selected Examples of Dwelling-Houses Described and Illustrated:

By T. RAFFLES DAVISON, Hon.A.R.I.B.A.

With a Foreword by Sir ASTON WEBB, R.A., and nearly 300 Illustrations, chiefly from Pen-Drawings by the Author.

A book of typical specimens of modern country-house architecture, which should appeal to all who are interested in modern architecture, or who are contemplating building.

Vol. I. READY SHORTLY, 8vo.

THE HANOVERIAN QUEENS OF ENGLAND.

By ALICE GREENWOOD. With 2 Photogravure Plates.

This work is a continuation of Strickland's 'Queens,' which ends with Queen Anne. The first volume deals with Sophia Dorothea (wife of George I.) and Caroline of Anspach (Queen of George II.). Vol. II., Charlotte (Queen of George III.), Caroline of Brunswick (Queen of George IV.), and Adelaide (Queen of William IV.), will, it is hoped, be ready in the autumn.

JUST PUBLISHED, crown 8vo, 6s. net.

HISTORY OF THE LATIN AND TEUTONIC NATIONS, 1494-1514.

By LEOPOLD VON RANKE.

A Revised Translation by G. R. DENNIS, B.A.Lond.

With an Introduction by EDWARD ARMSTRONG, M.A., Fellow of Queen's College, Oxford.

JUST PUBLISHED, Vol. IV., containing Parts VII. and VIII. Small 4to, with 3 Maps and 2 Plans, 12s. net.

THE ITINERARY OF JOHN LELAND.

Newly Edited from the MSS. by LUCY TOULMIN SMITH.

This Edition will be completed in Five Volumes, of which Vol. I. (containing Parts I.-III.) price 18s. net. Vol. II. (Parts IV. and V.), price 12s. net, and Vol. III. ('The Itinerary in Wales'), price 10s. 6d. net, are also published. Vol. V., completing the Edition, is in active preparation.

JUST PUBLISHED, demy 8vo, 8s. 6d. net.

LIFE OF DEAN COLET,

Founder of St. Paul's School.

By the Rev. J. H. LUPTON, M.A., late Surmaster of St. Paul's School, and formerly Fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge.

With an Appendix of some of his English Writings, and a Facsimile Portrait taken from the Engraving in Holland's 'Heroologia.' New and Revised Edition.

FIFTH EDITION NOW READY, royal 16mo, cloth, 1s. net.

THYSIA: an Elegy in Forty-Five Sonnets.

"Sonnets which I hold to be of exquisite quality. . . They have that pathos inscribed on marble in the best Greek epitaphs."—Mr. FREDERIC HARRISON in the Nineteenth Century, November, 1908.

JUST PUBLISHED, fcap. 8vo, 1s. 6d. net.

THE WAY OF LIGHT, and other Verses.

By the Rev. THOMAS J. HARDY, Author of 'The Gospel of Pain.'

NOW READY, crown 8vo, 5s. net.

ATHLETIC GAMES IN THE EDUCATION OF WOMEN.

By GERTRUDE DUDLEY, Director of the Women's Department of Physical Education, Chicago University, and FRANCIS A. KELLOR.

JUST PUBLISHED, fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

LONDON'S LURE.

An Anthology of Prose and Verse Passages bearing on London.

By HELEN and LEWIS MELVILLE. With Title-Page, Binding, and End-Papers designed by M. V. WHEELHOUSE.

In this volume Mr. and Mrs. Melville have gathered together passages from the works of the great writers who have written of the peculiar charm and fascination of London. The selection is wide and catholic, ranging as it does from Lamb, Herrick, Dickens, Thackeray, Hazlitt, Goldsmith, and Wordsworth, to Calverley, J. M. Barrie, Robert Hichens, and Joseph Conrad.

JUST PUBLISHED, crown 8vo, with 4 Coloured Plates and 24 other Illustrations, 7s. 6d.

FISH STORIES.

Alleged and Experienced, with a Little History, Natural and Unnatural.

By CHARLES FREDERICK HOLDER and DAVID STARR JORDAN.

Post 8vo, with 48 Illustrations and a Map, 7s. 6d. net.

ALASKA, THE GREAT COUNTRY.

By ELLA HIGGINSON.

In this volume Miss Higginson, whose writings are well known in America, tells the story of the growth of Alaska, for which at present little-known country she predicts a great future. The numerous illustrations are a special feature of the book.

MASTERS OF LITERATURE.

A Series of Volumes containing the choicest and most representative passages from the works of the Great Writers, with full Biographical and Critical Introduction and Notes.

Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net each.

FIRST VOLUMES READY SHORTLY.

SCOTT. By Prof. Grant.

FIELDING. By Prof. Saintsbury.

READY NEXT WEDNESDAY, demy 8vo, with numerous Illustrations.

WHEN RAILROADS WERE NEW.

The Story of Early Railway Enterprise in the United States.

By CHARLES F. CARTER.

THE QUEEN'S TREASURE SERIES.

Crown 8vo, each with 8 Coloured Plates and Decorated Title-Page, Covers, and End-Papers, 2s. 6d. net each.

NEW VOLUMES.

JAN OF THE WINDMILL.

By Mrs. EWING. Illustrated by M. V. WHEELHOUSE. [Now ready.]

MRS. OVERTHEWAY'S REMEMBRANCES.

By Mrs. EWING. Illustrated by M. V. WHEELHOUSE. [Ready immediately.]

BELL'S MINIATURE SERIES OF GREAT WRITERS.

NEW VOLUME. Illustrated. Pott 8vo, cloth, 1s. net.

GOLDSMITH. By E. S. Lang Buckland.

Full List sent on application.

AN IMPORTANT NEW NOVEL BY THE AUTHOR OF 'THE TRAMPING METHODIST.'

STARBRACE.

By SHEILA KAYE SMITH, Author of 'The Tramping Methodist.' Cloth, 6s. [Ready May 26.]

THE WORLD'S AUTHORITY. WEBSTER'S INTERNATIONAL DICTIONARY.

(Twentieth-Century Edition.)

REVISED AND ENLARGED, WITH AN APPENDIX OF 25,000 WORDS, PHRASES, AND DEFINITIONS.

2,348 Pages.

5,000 Illustrations.

Bound in sheepskin, 2l. net.

WEBSTER is the Standard Authority in the Postal Telegraph Department of the United Kingdom, of the Australian Commonwealth, New Zealand, and the South African Colonies.

WEBSTER is constantly used for reference in the Royal Courts of Justice.

WEBSTER is used in the Offices of more than 1,200 English Journals.

Write for Detailed Prospectus, with Specimen Pages, Hundreds of Opinions of Eminent Men, and Prices in various Styles of Binding.

London: GEORGE BELL & SONS, York House, Portugal Street, Kingsway, W.C.

Editorial Communications should be addressed to "THE EDITOR"—Advertisements and Business Letters to "THE PUBLISHERS"—at the Office, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C. Published Weekly by JOHN C. FRANCIS and J. EDWARD FRANCIS at Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C., and Printed by J. EDWARD FRANCIS, Athenæum Press, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C. Agents for Scotland, Messrs. BELL & BRADFUTE and Mr. JOHN MENZIES, Edinburgh.—Saturday, May 15, 1909.

THE ATHENÆUM

Journal of English and Foreign Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, Music and the Drama.

No. 4256.

SATURDAY, MAY 22, 1909.

PRICE
THREEPENCE.
REGISTERED AS A NEWSPAPER.

Lectures.

THE BRITISH ACADEMY.

THE SCHWEICH LECTURES ON BIBLICAL ARCHEOLOGY.
The Rev. R. H. KENNETT, B.D., Regius Professor of Hebrew in the University of Cambridge, Fellow of Queens' College, Canon of Ely, will deliver THREE PUBLIC LECTURES on FRIDAYS, May 28, June 4, and 11, at 5 o'clock, in THE THEATRE, BURLINGTON HOUSE, BURLINGTON GARDENS, W. (Vigo Street), on 'The Composition of the Book of Isaiah in the Light of Archaeology and History.'
The Lectures are open to the Public free, and without invitation.

Societies.

LINNEAN SOCIETY OF LONDON.—
NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That the ANNIVERSARY MEETING will be held at BURLINGTON HOUSE, on MONDAY, May 24, 1909, at 3 P.M.
B. DAYDON JACKSON, General Secretary.

Exhibitions.

FRENCH GALLERY, 120, Pall Mall, S.W.
The 96th Exhibition of Pictures now open.
SELECTED WORKS BY

M. MARIS. H. HARPIGNIES.
J. ISRAELS. L. LHERMITTE.

JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS.—An EXHIBITION of 268 Collector's Impressions of rare Japanese Colour Prints is NOW OPEN at the FINE ART SOCIETY, 148, New Bond Street. Catalogue, with Preface and Notes by Mr. A. MORRISON, and 70 Illustrations, 5s.

G. F. WATTS, R.A., F. SHORT, A.R.A.—
The FINE ART SOCIETY beg to call attention to their New Colour Reproductions of the Works of G. F. WATTS, R.A., just issued from the Watts Gallery; also a Collection of Mezzotints and Etchings by FRANK SHORT, A.R.A., NOW ON VIEW at 148, New Bond Street.

EXHIBITION OF PICTURES by JOHN HOPNER, R.A., in aid of King Edward's Hospital Fund.—
MESSRS. PAUL & DOMINIC COLNAGHI & CO. have the honour to announce that they have NOW ON VIEW a SELECTION OF PICTURES by JOHN HOPNER, R.A.—Admission, including Catalogue, One Shilling.—13 and 14, Pall Mall East, S.W.

EARLY BRITISH SCHOOL.—SHEPHERD'S
SPRING EXHIBITION OF PORTRAITS and LANDSCAPES by EARLY BRITISH and FOREIGN MASTERS is NOW OPEN.
SHEPHERD'S GALLERY, 27, King Street, St. James's.

Probident Institutions.

NEWSVENDORS' BENEVOLENT AND PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1839.

Funds exceed £2,400l.

Office: 15 and 16, Farringdon Street, London, E.C.

Patron:
The Right Hon. THE EARL OF ROSEBURY, K.G. K.T.

President:
Col. The Hon. HARRY L. W. LAWSON, M.A. J.P.

Treasurer:

THE LONDON AND WESTMINSTER BANK, LIMITED.

OBJECTS.—This Institution was established in 1839 in the City of London, under the Presidency of the late Alderman Harmer, for granting Pensions and Temporary Assistance to principals and assistants engaged as vendors of Newspapers.

MEMBERSHIP.—Every Man or Woman throughout the United Kingdom, whether Publisher, Wholesaler, Retailer, Employer, or Employed, is entitled to become a Member of this Institution, and enjoy its benefits, upon payment of Five Shillings annually, or Three Guineas for life, provided that he or she is engaged in the sale of Newspapers, and such Members who thus contribute secure priority of consideration in the event of their needing aid from the Institution.

PENSIONS.—The Annuitants now number Thirty-six, the Men receiving 25l. and the Women 20l. per annum each.
The "Royal Victoria Pension Fund," commemorating the great advantages the News Trade enjoyed under the rule of Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, provides 20l. a year each for Six Widows of News-vendors.

The "Francis Fund" provides Pensions for One Man, 25l., and One Woman, 20l., and was specially subscribed in memory of the late John Francis, who died on April 6, 1882, and was for more than fifty years Publisher of the Athenæum. He took an active and leading part throughout the whole period of the agitation for the repeal of the various then existing "Taxes on Knowledge," and was for very many years a staunch supporter of this Institution.

The "Horace Marshall Pension Fund" is the gift of the late Mr. Horace Brooks Marshall. The employees of that firm have primary right of election to its benefits.

The "Herbert Lloyd Pension Fund" provides 25l. per annum for one man, in perpetual and grateful memory of Mr. Herbert Lloyd, who died May 12, 1899.

The principal features of the Rules governing election to all Pensions are, that each Candidate shall have been (1) a Member of the Institution for not less than ten years preceding application; (2) not less than fifty-five years of age; (3) engaged in the sale of Newspapers for at least ten years.

RELIEF.—Temporary relief is given in cases of distress, not only to Members of the Institution, but to News-vendors or their servants who may be recommended for assistance by Members of the Institution. Inquiry is made in such cases by Visiting Committees, and relief is awarded in accordance with the merits and requirements of each case.
W. WILKIE JONES, Secretary.

THE BOOKSELLERS' PROVIDENT INSTITUTION.

Founded 1837.

Patron—HER MAJESTY QUEEN ALEXANDRA.

Invested Capital, 30,000l.

A UNIQUE INVESTMENT

Offered to London Booksellers and their Assistants.

A young man or woman of twenty-five can invest the sum of Twenty Guineas (or its equivalent by instalments), and obtain the right to participate in the following advantages:—

FIRST. Freedom from want in time of Adversity as long as need exists.

SECOND. Permanent Relief in Old Age.

THIRD. Medical Advice by eminent Physicians and Surgeons.

FOURTH. A Cottage in the Country (Abbots Langley, Hertfordshire) for aged Members, with garden produce, coal, and medical attendance free, in addition to an annuity.

FIFTH. A furnished house in the same Retreat at Abbots Langley for the use of Members and their families for holidays or during convalescence.

SIXTH. A contribution towards Funeral expenses when it is needed.

SEVENTH. All these are available not for Members only, but also for their wives or widows and young children.

EIGHTH. The payment of the subscriptions confers an absolute right to these benefits in all cases of need.

For further information apply to the Secretary, Mr. GEORGE LARNER, 28, Paternoster Row, E.C.

Educational.

WESTMINSTER SCHOOL.—An EXAMINATION will be held on JUNE 23, 24, and 25 to FILL UP NOT LESS THAN SEVEN RESIDENTIAL and TWO NON-RESIDENTIAL SCHOLARSHIPS and also some EXHIBITIONS. For particulars apply by letter to THE BURSAR, Little Dean's Yard, S.W.

UNIVERSITY OF DURHAM.

The EXAMINATION for SCHOLARSHIPS in CLASSICS, MATHEMATICS, and THEOLOGY COMMENCES at 9 A.M. on WEDNESDAY, June 16. For particulars apply to THE SECRETARY OF EXAMINATIONS, University Offices, Durham.

THE DOWNS SCHOOL, SEAFORD, SUSSEX.

Head Mistress—Miss LUCY ROBINSON, M.A. (late Second Mistress, St. Felix School, Southwold). References: The Principal of Bedford College, London; The Master of Peterhouse, Cambridge.

CHRIST'S COLLEGE, BLACKHEATH, S.E.

F. W. AVELING, M.A. B.Sc.
Preparation for Universities and Professions.
Stress on Modern Languages and Science.

EDUCATION (choice of Schools and Tutors

Gratis). Prospectuses of English and Continental Schools, and of successful Army, Civil Service, and University Tutors, sent (free of charge) on receipt of requirements by GRIFFITHS, SMITH, POWELL & SMITH, School Agents (established 1833), 34, Bedford Street, Strand, W.C.

EDUCATION.

Parents or Guardians desiring accurate information relative to the CHOICE OF SCHOOLS for BOYS or GIRLS or TUTOR in England or Abroad

are invited to call upon or send fully detailed particulars to MESSRS. GABBITAS, THRING & CO., who for more than thirty years have been closely in touch with the leading Educational Establishments.

Advice, free of charge, is given by Mr. THRING, Nephew of the late Head Master of Uppingham, 36, Sackville Street, London, W.

Situations Vacant.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON.

GOLDSMITHS COLLEGE TRAINING DEPARTMENT.

LECTURER IN ENGLISH.

A LECTURER (Man) in ENGLISH LANGUAGE and LITERATURE will be needed in the above Department in SEPTEMBER, 1909. Initial Salary between 180l. and 250l., according to attainments and experience.

Applications should be received by JUNE 9.—Full particulars can be obtained from THE WARDEN, Goldsmiths College, New Cross.

BEDFORD COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

(University of London),

YORK PLACE, LONDON, W.

The COUNCIL are about to appoint a LECTURER in FRENCH, who will be Head of the Department. The appointment is open to Men and Women equally, and will take effect at the beginning of the Michaelmas Term.

Applications, with thirty copies of Testimonials, should be sent not later than JUNE 19, to the Secretary, from whom further particulars may be obtained. ETHEL T. McKNIGHT, Secretary.

BEDFORD COLLEGE FOR WOMEN

(University of London),

YORK PLACE, LONDON, W.

The COUNCIL are about to appoint a LECTURER in LATIN who will be Head of the Department. The appointment is open to Men and Women equally, and will take effect at the beginning of the Michaelmas Term.

Applications, with thirty copies of Testimonials, should be sent not later than JUNE 19 to the Secretary, from whom further particulars may be obtained. ETHEL T. McKNIGHT, Secretary.

Yearly Subscription, free by post, Inland, 15s. 3d.; Foreign, 18s. Entered at the New York Post Office as Second Class matter.

THE ATHENÆUM is published on FRIDAY AFTERNOON at 2 o'clock.

GERMAN LECTURER REQUIRED in OCTOBER NEXT at UNIVERSITY COLLEGE, NOTTINGHAM. Twelve Hours Weekly teaching. Salary 150l.—Particulars and form of application from THE REGISTRAR.

THE UNIVERSITY OF SHEFFIELD.

APPOINTMENT OF ASSISTANT LECTURER IN HISTORY.

The COUNCIL are about to appoint an ASSISTANT LECTURER in HISTORY.

Applications must be sent in by May 29. Further particulars may be obtained from W. M. GIBBONS, Registrar.

KATHARINE LADY BERKELEY'S GRAMMAR SCHOOL, Wotton-under-Edge, Glos.

The HEAD-MASTERSHIP of this recognized SECONDARY MIXED SCHOOL is VACANT. The GOVERNORS will proceed in JULY to appoint a HEAD MASTER, who must be a University Graduate, and who will take up his duties in SEPTEMBER. Applications to be sent in before JULY 1.—For Forms and particulars apply to the Clerk, H. GOLDINGHAM, Solicitor, Wotton-under-Edge.

COUNTY BOROUGH OF CROYDON.

EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

The COMMITTEE invite applications for the post of PRINCIPAL of the POLYTECHNICS at a Salary of 300l. per annum, rising by two biennial increments of 25l. to 350l. subject to percentage deduction under the Corporation Superannuation Scheme.

The Candidate appointed will be required to devote the whole of his time to the duties of his office, and will be responsible for the development and organization, the discipline, and the educational efficiency of the instruction given in the Polytechnics.

The instruction at the Polytechnics is for the most part given in the Evening, and there are Classes in Science, Art, Trade, Commercial, Building, and Domestic Subjects, and in Mechanical and Electrical Engineering.

The Principal will also be required to take part in superintending any other Evening Classes established by the Committee, and to advise and assist the Committee in the co-ordination of all Evening Classes.

Candidates must not be over 45 years of age, and must hold University or other professional qualifications.

A List of Classes held in the Polytechnics, together with a form of application and statement of duties, may be obtained from the undersigned, to whom applications, accompanied by copies of not more than three Testimonials of recent date, must be sent not later than the 26th JUNE, 1909.

JAMES SMYTH, Clerk to the Committee.

Education Office, Katharine Street, Croydon.
May 17, 1909.

CITY OF LIVERPOOL.

EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

LIVERPOOL COLLEGIATE SCHOOL, SHAW STREET.

The COMMITTEE invite applications for the post of SENIOR MATHEMATICAL MASTER at the above SCHOOL.

High Academic qualifications and experience in teaching are essential, and preference will be given to Candidates who are qualified to undertake the Mathematical Work in connexion with applied Mechanical Science.

Salary to be at the rate of 250l. per annum.

For further particulars and Forms of Application apply to JAMES G. LEGGE, Director of Education, 14, Sir Thomas Street, Liverpool, with whom applications must be lodged not later than WEDNESDAY, May 26, 1909.

EDWARD R. PICKMERE,

May 7, 1909. Clerk to the Local Education Authority.

CAMBRIDGESHIRE EDUCATION COMMITTEE.

CAMBRIDGE AND COUNTY SCHOOL FOR BOYS.

TWO MASTERS will be REQUIRED on the STAFF of the above SCHOOL in SEPTEMBER NEXT.

(a) For Senior Latin, Junior French, and General Form Work.

(b) For Junior Latin, and General Form Work.

Applications, stating Salary required, should be sent on or before JUNE 1, to the Education, County Offices, Cambridge.

AUSTIN KEEN, Education Secretary.

COUNTY OF LONDON.

The LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL invites applications for the post of JUNIOR FORM MISTRESS, with good French, English, and Geography, at the COUNTY SECONDARY SCHOOL, BERMONDSEY, to commence work in SEPTEMBER NEXT. Ability to help in the organization of Games essential. Salary 120l. a year, rising by annual increments of 10l. subject to satisfactory service, to 220l.

Applications should be made on Form H.40, to be obtained, together with particulars of the appointment, from THE EDUCATION OFFICER, London County Council, Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C., to whom they must be returned not later than 11 A.M. on MONDAY, June 7, 1909, accompanied by copies of three Testimonials of recent date. All communications on the subject must be endorsed "H.4." and must be accompanied by a stamped addressed foolscap envelope. Canvassing, either directly or indirectly will be held to be a disqualification for employment.

G. L. GOMME, Clerk of the London County Council.

Education Offices, Victoria Embankment, W.C.
May 20, 1909.

RADNORSHIRE EDUCATION COMMITTEE.LLANDRINDOD WELLS INTERMEDIATE SCHOOL.

A MISTRESS, with experience in teaching Mathematics and History, is REQUIRED for the above Secondary School after the Summer Holidays. A Degree or its equivalent is essential. Salary 120l. per annum, non-resident.
Applications, with copies of Testimonials and References, to be sent to THE HEAD MASTER.

ATHENÆUM, LIVERPOOL.

Applications are invited for the position of SUB-LIBRARIAN. Salary 90l. per annum. Candidates must be unmarried Men, not exceeding 25 years of age. Previous experience in Library work essential, and preference will be given to those who have passed some of the Examinations of the Library Association, particularly the Examination in Cataloguing.—Applications (endorsed Sub-Librarian) should be addressed to THE PRESIDENT OF THE ATHENÆUM, Liverpool, not later than SATURDAY, June 5.

ASSISTANT SECRETARY.—A PERMANENCY OPEN for a capable YOUNG FELLOW in the OFFICE of a small but rapidly expanding PUBLISHING BUSINESS. Applicant must have thorough knowledge of Accounts and be able to take complete charge of Books and Counting House side. Some knowledge of Printing or Publishing desirable, and if of Literary tastes so much the better. Practical acquaintance with Modern Office Time-Saving Methods would be an advantage. Preference to one who can influence capital from 500l. to 750l., required for immediate developments. To one who can throw himself heart and soul into the business and keep in its growth there will be good prospects. Commencing Salary 150l. Those who fear work and responsibility, or who lack initiative, will waste time by applying.—Write Box 515, Reynell's Advertisement Offices, 44, Chancery Lane, W.C.

Miscellaneous.

RESEARCH WORK in the British Museum or elsewhere undertaken. Also Translations. Experienced.—Miss KENNEDY, 54, Grove End Road, London, N.W.

HISTORICAL AND GENEALOGICAL RESEARCH WORK undertaken. Moderate Terms. Excellent References.—Apply Box 1594, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

ACCURATE RESEARCH and GENEALOGICAL WORK undertaken by R. M. GLENCROSS, M.A. LL.B. Advice also supplied to Persons drawing up their own Pedigree. Excellent Testimonials.—3, Chalonier Street, West Kensington.

LITERARY RESEARCH undertaken at the British Museum and elsewhere on moderate terms. Excellent Testimonials.—A. B., Box 1062, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

BOOKS AND PRINTS.—Principal London Auction Sales attended by an EXPERIENCED BUYER. Special items sought for and reported. Inclusive fee to Private Clients ONE GUINEA QUARTERLY. References on application.—EXPERT, Box 1595, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, E.C.

RUSKIN'S MODERN PAINTERS, imperial 8vo, 1951-1860, uncut, in 5 vols. with Illustrations by Author, FOR SALE.—H. N. POORE, 52, Queen Victoria Street, E.C.

PRIVATE SOCIAL TOURS FOR GENTLE-WOMEN.—AUSTRIA, JUNE 17. Including Vienna, Budapest, the Danube, and beautiful Salzkammergut District. Succeeding Tours—Switzerland, Holland, Italy. References exchanged. Programmes from Miss BISHOP, 27, St. George's Road, Kilburn, London.

THE DAUGHTER of a well-known Literary Man is desirous of meeting with a LADY and GENTLEMAN to SHARE her HOUSE; or would take boarders. Rooms Furnished or Unfurnished. The House is situated on South Norwood Hill, five minutes from Norwood Junction Station, close to the Stanley Halls (where Concerts, Lectures, &c., are continually given), near the Public Library, and within a walk of the Crystal Palace, or One Station from it. Norwood is regarded as one of the healthiest places round London, and was at one time a well-known health resort. A good train service to London Bridge and Victoria.—Address C. M., Box 1562, Athenæum Press, 13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Type-Writers, &c.

TYPE-WRITING.—All kinds of TYPE-WRITING, SHORTHAND, and DUPLICATING WORK UNDERTAKEN. Sermons and Meetings Reported. Authors' MSS. from 10d. per 1,000 words. Special Terms for Contracts and large quantities.—Miss MORGAN, Bush Lane House, Cannon Street, London, E.C. Telephone: 12137 Central.

TYPE-WRITER.
KINDLY NOTE CHANGE OF ADDRESS.
MISS E. M. TIGAR,
10, MAITLAND PARK VILLAS, Haverstock Hill, N.W.

AUTHORS' MSS., NOVELS, STORIES, PLAYS, ESSAYS TYPE-WRITTEN with complete accuracy, 9d. per 1,000 words. Clear Carbon Copies guaranteed. References to well-known Writers.—M. STUART, Allendale, Kymberley Road, Harrow.

TYPE-WRITING 9d. per 1,000 words; Carbons 3d. French and German Type-writing 1s. per 1,000. Translations. Duplicating 3s. 100 Copies (quarto) 15s. per 1,000. Best work, accuracy, and promptitude.—G. WALKER, 14, Park Road, New Cross, S.E.

TYPE-WRITING, 9d. per 1,000 words. All kinds of MSS. accurately typed. Clear Carbon Copies, 3d. per 1,000. References to well-known Authors. Oxford Higher Local. Tel. 1272, Richmond P.O.—M. KING, 24, Forest Road, Kew Gardens, S.W.

TYPE-WRITING undertaken by highly educated Women (Classical Tripos; Cambridge Higher Local; Modern Languages). Research, Revision, Translation, Shorthand, Dictation Room.—THE CAMBRIDGE TYPE-WRITING AGENCY, 10, Duke Street Adelphi, W.C.

Catalogues.

CATALOGUE No. 50—Drawings by Turner, Prout, Ruskin, &c.—Turner's Liber Studiorum and other Engravings—Proofs touched by Turner—Constable's English Landscape—Etchings by Whistler—Japanese Colour Prints—Illustrated Books. Post free, Sixpence.—WM. WARD, 2, Church Terrace, Richmond, Surrey.

CATALOGUES.—Vale Press Shakespeare, 39 vols. as new, 7l. Ruskin's Works, Library Edition, 37 vols. good as new, 30l. CLEARANCE CATALOGUE OF BOOKS, History, Science, Sociology, Early Printed Works, and General Literature, post free. Genuine Bargains in First Editions and scarce items. Parcels sent on approval if desired.—Address J. BALDWIN, 14, Osborne Road, Leyton, Essex.

FIRST EDITIONS OF MODERN AUTHORS, including Dickens, Thackeray, Lever, Ainsworth; Books illustrated by G. and R. Cruikshank, Phiz, Rowlandson, Leech, &c. The largest and choicest Collection offered for Sale in the World. CATALOGUES issued and sent post free on application. Books Bought.—WALTER T. SPENCER, 27, New Oxford Street, London, W.C.

BOOKS.—ALL OUT-OF-PRINT and RARE BOOKS on any subject SUPPLIED. The most expert Bookfinder extant. Please state wants and ask for CATALOGUE. I make a special feature of exchanging any Saleable Books for others selected from my various Lists. Special List of 2,000 Books I particularly want post free.—EDW. BAKER'S Great Bookshop, 14-16, John Bright Street, Birmingham.—Yellow Book, 13 vols, 2l. 10s.; Trigg's Art Garden Design, Italy, 3l. Guineas, for 21s.; E. Fitzgerald's Works, 7 vols. 3l. 3s.

ANCIENT and MODERN COINS.—Collectors and Antiquarians are invited to apply to SPINK & SON, Limited, for Specimen Copy (gratis) of their NUMISMATIC CIRCULAR. The finest Greek, Roman, and English Coins on View and for Sale at Moderate Prices.—SPINK & SON, Limited, Experts, Valuers, and Cataloguers, 18, 17, and 18, Piccadilly, London, W. Established upwards of a Century.

Authors' Agents.

THE AUTHOR'S AGENCY.—Established 1879. The interests of Authors capably represented. Agreements for Publishing arranged. MSS. placed with Publishers.—Terms and Testimonials on application to Mr. A. M. BURGHESE, 24, Paternoster Row.

MR. GEORGE LARNER, Accountant and Licensed Valuer to the Bookselling, Publishing, Newspaper, Printing, and Stationery Trades. Partnerships Arranged. Balance Sheets and Trading Accounts Prepared and Audited. All Business carried out under Mr. Larner's personal supervision.—23, 22, and 30, Paternoster Row, E.C., Secretary to the Booksellers' Provident Institution.

Printers.

THE HISTORY OF YOUR LANDED ESTATES should be put into permanent form. We undertake this Work in its entirety. Searches made; material arranged and printed under Expert Supervision.—GERRARDS, Ltd., Genealogical Printers, 411A, Harrow Road, London, W.

ATHENÆUM PRESS.—JOHN EDWARD FRANCIS, Printer of the Athenæum, Notes and Queries, &c., is prepared to SUBMIT ESTIMATES for all kinds of BOOK, NEWS, and PERIODICAL PRINTING.—13, Bream's Buildings, Chancery Lane, E.C.

Sales by Auction.Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. PUTTICK & SIMPSON will SELL by AUCTION at their Galleries, 47, Leicester Square, W.C., on THURSDAY, June 10, and Following Day, at ten minutes past 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including several SMALL LIBRARIES removed from the country, comprising Standard Works in all Branches of Literature—valuable First Editions—Books with Coloured Plates, &c.
Catalogue in preparation.

Valuable and Choice Books from the Library of the late Sir MAURICE HOLZMANN, K.C.B. K.C.V.O., removed from St. James's Palace, S.W. (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 26, at 1 o'clock, VALUABLE BOOKS from the LIBRARY of the late Sir MAURICE HOLZMANN, K.C.B. K.C.V.O., formerly Keeper of the Records of the Duchy of Cornwall (removed from St. James's Palace, and sold by order of the Executors under the will of the late Owner), comprising a remarkable and comprehensive COLLECTION of ALPINE and MOUNTAIN CLIMBING BOOKS, including a Set of the Alpine Journal, 24 vols., 1864-1909—The Writings of Eminent British Climbers in the Alps, the Himalayas, and other parts of the World—The Original Folio Editions of Lory's Voyage Pittoresque de l'Oberland Bernois, Large Paper, and Souvenirs de la Suisse, with Coloured Plates—Early and Scarce Books relating to Switzerland—Jahrbuch des Schweizer Club, 44 vols., 1864-1908—L'Etude des Glaciers, par Dollfus-Ausset, 10 vols., and many other Works on the Alps and Switzerland, in German and French—Scarce Pamphlets, &c.—and a few BOOKS on ART, including the First Edition of Crowe and Cavalcaselle's History of Painting, 5 vols., the whole in excellent condition, and many in Bindings by Rivière—also a Collection of Reproductions from the Old Masters, Framed and Glazed.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

ELEVENTH EDITION NOW READY, price Two Shillings net.

CELESTIAL MOTIONS:A Handy Book of Astronomy.

Eleventh Edition. With 5 Plates.

By W. T. LYNN, B.A. F.R.A.S., Member of the British Astronomical Association, formerly of the Royal Observatory, Greenwich,
Author of 'Remarkable Comets,' 'Remarkable Eclipses,' 'Astronomy for the Young,' &c.
London: SAMUEL BAGSTER & SONS, LIMITED, 15, Paternoster Row.

The Valuable Modern Library of the late J. H. RADFORD, Esq. (by order of the Executors).

MESSRS. HODGSON & CO. will SELL by AUCTION, at their Rooms, 115, Chancery Lane, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 27, at 1 o'clock, the VALUABLE LIBRARY of MODERN BOOKS of the late J. H. RADFORD, Esq., removed from Uppaton, Buckland Monachorum, near Yelverton, S. Devon (by order of the Executors), comprising a Set of the Edinburgh Stevenson, with the Life and Letters, 33 vols.—Modern Poetry and Belles-Lettres—First Editions of George Eliot, Meredith, Hardy, Morris, Swinburne, Oscar Wilde, and others—Books illustrated by Aubrey Beardsley—Art Monographs—a Set of the Studio, and other Fine-Art Periodicals—the Kelmescott Press Golden Legend, 3 vols.—Claude's Liber Veritatis, 3 vols.—Books with Woodcuts by Bewick—a few Engravings by Cousins after Lawrence and Reynolds.

To be viewed and Catalogues had.

Books and Manuscripts.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, May 24, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, BOOKS and MANUSCRIPTS, including the Property of a Military Officer, the Property of a well-known Collector, and other Properties, comprising First Editions of the Works of J. H. Jesse, Lord Tennyson, Charles Dickens, W. M. Thackeray, R. L. Stevenson, R. B. Surtees, Algernon Charles Swinburne, Dr. S. Johnson, &c. Books illustrated by George Cruikshank, John Leech, R. Doyle, "Phiz," T. Rowlandson, Westall, and others—Sporting Books—French illustrated Works—Biography and History—Poetry, Horsemanship, Americana, French Revolution—Fine-Art Catalogues and Publications—Tracts, Playbills, &c.—Pyne's Royal Residences—Malton's View of Dublin—Ackermann's Microcosm of London; ENGRAVINGS, and a valuable Collection of ENGLISH, FOREIGN, and COLONIAL POSTAGE STAMPS.

May be viewed. Catalogues may be had.

The Library of the late Rev. NATHANIEL DIMOCK, M.A. ("An English Presbyter") formerly Vicar of St. Paul's, Maidstone.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION (by order of the Executors), at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, May 26, at 1 o'clock precisely, the THEOLOGICAL LIBRARY of the late Rev. NATHANIEL DIMOCK, M.A. ("An English Presbyter"), formerly Vicar of St. Paul's, Maidstone, including Collections of the Writings of the Fathers, Books on the Liturgy and the Eucharist, Publications of the Wiclif, and other learned Societies, Creighton's Papacy, and other standard Works on Church History, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Works of Art.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on THURSDAY, May 27, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, WORKS OF ART, comprising Oriental, Continental, and English Porcelain and Pottery—Old English Cut Glass—Needlework of the Stuart Period—Oriental Bronzes and Ivories—Miniatures—and Bronze and other Antiquities.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

Engravings, the Property of the late Mr. URBAN M. NOSEDA, of King Street, St. James's, S.W.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION (by order of the Executors), at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 2, and Two Following Days, the STOCK of ENGRAVINGS of the late Mr. URBAN M. NOSEDA, of King Street, St. James's, S.W. May be viewed on SATURDAY, May 29 (10 to 1 p.m.), also on TUESDAY, June 1. Catalogues may be had.

Autograph Letters and Historical Documents.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION, at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on WEDNESDAY, June 9, and Following Day, at 1 o'clock precisely, AUTOGRAPH LETTERS and HISTORICAL DOCUMENTS, including Burns, Keats, Lord Byron, Sir W. Scott, Dr. Johnson, C. Dickens, Edmund Keen, David Garrick, and others—numerous Letters and Documents relating to the French Revolution and the Napoleonic Wars—a fine Series of Letters from Lord Nelson and Lady Hamilton to Wm. Haslewood, his Executor—Correspondence of the Right Hon. W. Windham and of John Robinson, Secretary of State to George III.—an interesting Collection relative to Mirabeau, the Orator of the French Revolution—important Documents with the Great Seals, &c.

May be viewed two days prior. Catalogues may be had.

The valuable Collection of Japanese Colour Prints the Property of JOHN STEWART HAPPER, Esq., of New York City, U.S.A.

SECOND AND FINAL PORTION.

MESSRS. SOTHEBY, WILKINSON & HODGE will SELL by AUCTION at their House, No. 13, Wellington Street, Strand, W.C., on MONDAY, June 14, and Four Following Days at 1 o'clock precisely, the valuable COLLECTION of JAPANESE COLOUR PRINTS the Property of JOHN STEWART HAPPER, Esq., of New York City, U.S.A.

May be viewed on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday, June 10, 11, and 12. Catalogues may be had; illustrated Copies, 5s. each.

MESSRS. CHRISTIE MANSON & WOODS respectfully give notice that they will hold the following SALES by AUCTION, at their Great Rooms, King Street, St. James's Square, the Sales commencing at 1 o'clock precisely:—

On MONDAY, May 24, MODERN PICTURES and DRAWINGS.

On TUESDAY, May 25, ENGRAVINGS of the EARLY ENGLISH SCHOOL.

On TUESDAY, May 25, and WEDNESDAY, May 26, OLD CHINESE PORCELAIN, of the late Miss AUSTEN, and from Various Sources; OLD ENGLISH and other FURNITURE, of the late Capt. J. NORTON and others.

On THURSDAY, May 27, PICTURES by OLD MASTERS, the Property of the Right Hon. the EARL OF DERBY and others.

Old Furniture, Pictures, China and Books.
HINTLESHAM HALL, SUFFOLK, five miles from Ipswich.

GARROD, TURNER & SON will SELL by AUCTION, on WEDNESDAY, June 16, and Three Following Days, at 11 o'clock each day (by direction of Col. ANSTRUTHER, who has sold the Estate), the CONTENTS of the MANSION, including Antique Furniture of the Seventeenth and Eighteenth Centuries—Two old Lacquer Japanese Cabinets—Pair of finely carved Chippendale Candle Stands—Mirrors—Antique Iron Chest—Two Panels of Mortlake Tapestry—fine old Oriental Porcelain in Jars and Beakers—a Collection of Oil Paintings, principally Portraits by Van Dyck, Kneller, Thos. Hudson, Lely, Gainsborough, and other Masters—a Library of 2,000 volumes of Books, comprising Scarce
Works, in various Branches of Literature—Early Printed Works—
MS. on vellum.

Complete Catalogues when published 1s. each. Catalogue of the Books free from the Auctioneers, Ipswich.

Magazines, &c.

THE BUILDER (founded 1842), 4, Catherine
Street, London, W.C., MAY 22, contains:—

THE BUDGET AND THE BUILDING TRADE.

THE LONDON COUNTY COUNCIL SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

SMOKE ABATEMENT (Institute of Architects).

THE LEGAL POSITION OF QUANTITY SURVEYORS (Surveyors' Institution).

THE IRON AND STEEL INSTITUTE.

ASSOCIATION OF MUNICIPAL AND COUNTY ENGI-NEERS.

SOUTHWARK BRIDGE.

ILLUSTRATIONS:

OFFICES FOR THE GOVERNMENT OF VICTORIA;

BUCKFAST ABBEY CHURCH: EXTERIOR AND IN-TERIOR VIEWS;

FACTORY AND OFFICES, LIMEHOUSE;

RECKITT CONVALESCENT HOME, CLACTON-ON-SEA;

CONINGSBY'S HOSPITAL, HEREFORD.

From Offices as above (4d., by post 4½d.), at Railway Bookstalls, Bookshops, and of all Newsagents.

THE BRITISH EMPIRE:

Its Past, its Present, and its Future.

Edited by A. F. POLLARD, M.A.

Pp. 896, 5s. net.

Fifteen Special Contributors, and over a Hundred Authorities in all parts of the Empire have collaborated in production.

LEAGUE OF THE EMPIRE,

Caxton Hall, Westminster; and all Booksellers.

JUST PUBLISHED, 3s. 6d. net.

THE WEAVER

AND THE

WAY OF LIFE

A Book of Allegories on the Poetry of Life

BY

JOHN W. DEKAY

The Weaver said:—"Out yonder in the great city, which to us is only a murmur brought by the west wind, men give their lives in getting what they do not want and keeping what they never need. Even the noblest among them who do not seek to get or keep the treasures of the world prize more than all else the judgment of the world and seek through all their lives, as you have sought, to have immortality at the hands of the world. More than all else they want to be remembered by the world. But I, here at the loom, have learned from my lilies, which are beautiful, and my tangled ends of threads, which, to me, are not beautiful, that it does not matter that the world said nothing about us before we were born, and that it does not matter what the world says about us after we are dead; and if it says nothing about us, that too does not matter. All that is beautiful is beautiful, whether it is praised or blamed."

A. L. HUMPHREYS,

187, Piccadilly, London, W.

BOOKS OF THE SEASON

THE LOVE LETTERS OF THOMAS CARLYLE AND JANE WELSH.

Edited by ALEXANDER CARLYLE. Uniform with 'New Letters and Memorials of Jane Welsh Carlyle.'
2 vols. 25s. net.

Daily News.—"The literature of letters will be searched in vain for a parallel to these volumes. Even the love-letters of the Brownings suffer by comparison."

THE LOVE AFFAIRS OF NAPOLEON

By JOSEPH TURQUAN. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

Observer.—"Full of sparkling interest.... M. Turquan's volume is a very amusing and interesting companion."

WHEEL MAGIC

By J. W. ALLEN. With a Dedication to Thomas
Secombe. Being Revolutions of an Impressionist,
Fcap. 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

A SISTER OF PRINCE RUPERT:

Elizabeth Princess Palatine, Abbess of Herford

By ELIZABETH GODFREY. With numerous Illustrations reproduced from Contemporary Portraits, Prints, &c. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

Morning Post.—"No historical biography published during the last few years surpasses this one in the minute-ness of its research and the width of the field it has covered."

THE JOURNAL OF JOHN MAYNE

During a Tour on the Continent upon its Reopening after the Fall of Napoleon, 1814

Edited by his Grandson, JOHN MAYNE COLLES.

With numerous Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

Morning Post.—"Very readable, and obviously, trustworthy and sincere."

LADIES FAIR AND FRAIL

Sketches of the Demi-Monde

During the Eighteenth Century

By HORACE BLEACKLEY. With numerous Portraits reproduced from contemporary sources. 12s. 6d. net.

Tatler.—"An interesting and most fascinating chronicle of the lighter side of the eighteenth century."

THE PHILOSOPHY OF LONG LIFE

By JEAN FINOT. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

BETWEEN-TIME POEMS

By OLIVER DAVIES. 3s. 6d.

[Ready May 28.]

SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

JOAN OF THE HILLS

T. B. CLEGG

Author of 'The Lone Child.'

The present story opens in London, but Mr. Clegg is soon back in Australia, describing the life on a remote Australian station, with its refreshing bush atmosphere.

CHIP

F. E. MILLS YOUNG

Author of 'A Mistaken Marriage.'

Liverpool Post.—"A really delightful book."

THAIS

ANATOLE FRANCE

Daily Telegraph.—"A very triumph in its imaginative-ness."

SOMEONE PAYS

NOEL BARWELL

Academy.—"Mr. Barwell has carried his task through excellently."

THE PRINCE'S PRANKS

CHARLES LOWE

Observer.—"Thoroughly entertaining, told with raciness and spontaneous humour."

THE MEASURE OF OUR YOUTH

ALICE HERBERT

Evening Standard.—"A fine and real novel, executed with finish and distinction. Quick, unforced humour.
Passionate sincerity and feeling. Exceedingly clever. A notable novel. It will stand."

MRS. GRAMERCY-PARK

A. GORING-THOMAS

[Just out.]

JOHN LANE, THE BODLEY HEAD.

GAY & HANCOCK'S LIST.

Size 8½ in. by 5½ in., 427 pp., cloth gilt extra,
12s. 6d. net.

SUN AND SHADOW IN SPAIN.

By MAUD HOWE,

AUTHOR OF 'ROMA BEATA.'

With 4 Plates in Colour and 41 Illustrations from Photographs.

Maud Howe has been for many months a wanderer in Spain, filling her note-book with comment, and storing up a treasure-house of impressions and memories of things Spanish. With an open mind and a facile pen this talented daughter of Julia Ward Howe has presented the results of her observations in a book altogether charming and valuable.

Appreciation and sympathy have been the "open sesame" to the real Spain and her people, and her sprightly wit lends life and colour to the word pictures she has painted of this fascinating country and its customs.

A special word must be said of the Illustrations, for through the associations of the Author's husband, Mr. John Elliott, with Jose di Villegas, the Court Painter to the King and the Director of the Prado, she has been able to obtain unusually beautiful and valuable Photographs, some of which have never before been published.

TWO REMARKABLE NOVELS.

[JUST PUBLISHED 6s.]

THE WEIGHT OF THE NAME.

By PAUL BOURGET.

Translated by GEORGE BURNHAM IVES.

Scotsman.—"A work in every way worthy of the high reputation enjoyed by its author as one of the most prominent among living French novelists.... It is a fine story." Globe.—"The novel will be a delight to readers, for its literary art is unquestionable."

A NEW NOVEL OF EXCEPTIONAL MERIT

BARRY GORDON.

By W. FARQUHAR PAYSON.

Manchester Courier.—"It is but rarely that one reads a novel nowadays that enchants with the fascination to be found in 'Barry Gordon.' It is excellently written. No one will put the book down till it is finished, and we prophesy that there are many passages that will be read more than once."

Scotsman.—"Is very much above average fiction, and its varied scenes and dashing adventure have the peculiar quality of fascinating young as well as maturer readers."

World.—"Natural, original, and consistent throughout.
It is a remarkable piece of work."

The best book you could give a boy.

Attractively bound, 3s. 6d. post free.

IN EMPIRE'S CAUSE.

IN EMPIRE'S CAUSE.

BY ERNEST PROTHERO.

IN EMPIRE'S CAUSE.

SECOND EDITION.

11 Illustrations by R. CATON-WOODVILLE, STANLEY
WOOD, and others.

Bookman.—"The building of our empire, and the pluck, genius, and patience which have gone to the task, are very vividly brought before us in Mr. Prothero's volume. The author wins our cordial admiration by his clever feats of concentration, by his grasping of salient facts and his wise rejection of the irrelevant. Army and Navy, foreign lands and home country, all come into his striking picture of the empire's evolution. As a book for boys it is splendid, inspiring, teaching, assuring them that what has been done before may be done again, and showing them how gloriously such deeds have helped to mould their present empire."

Daily Telegraph.—"Teeming with spirited accounts of daring deeds."

London: GAY & HANCOCK, LTD.,
12 and 13, Henrietta Street, Strand.

CASSELL LATEST BOOKS

At all Libraries and Booksellers'.

NOW READY.

Mrs. Humphry Ward's

NEW NOVEL.

DAPHNE: or "Marriage à la Mode."

WITH 4 ILLUSTRATIONS IN COLOUR, 6 Pen Drawings, and Coloured End-Plates. 6s.

The recent visit of Mrs. Humphry Ward to the United States has resulted in a book that promises to be the outstanding success of the season. As a study in character its abundant merit would alone justify the high position which it is sure to secure, but it possesses a special worth in the brilliant incisiveness with which the author deals with the most pressing American problem of the day.

THE RED SAINT.

By Warwick Deeping.

FRONTISPIECE IN COLOURS. 6s.

"It is on the picture of his saint, her beauty, her humility, her saintly influence, amid all that one understands by the turbulence and colour of the Middle Ages, that the reader's attention is concentrated.... A genuine romance."

Morning Leader.

THE WREATHED DAGGER.

By Margaret Young.

FRONTISPIECE IN COLOURS. 6s.

"A pleasing and spirited romance of Civil War days.... receives powerful dramatic expression in a series of scenes in which there is plenty both of action and of passion."—Scotsman.

PARENTHOOD AND RACE CULTURE.

By Dr. C. W. Saleeby. 7s. 6d. net.

Dr. Saleeby agrees with Ruskin there is no wealth but life, and he declares that the culture of the racial life is the vital industry of any people.

"Dr. Saleeby's pen is always lucid and persuasive; but he has seldom had a subject so near to his heart as in this book, which may well be the text-book of the new science so full of hope for the world."—Observer.

THE NATURE BOOK.

PROFUSELY ILLUSTRATED from PHOTOGRAPHS and a SERIES of COLOURED PLATES. Vols. I. and II. Now Ready. 12s. net each.

"Will form a veritable treasure to all who love wild nature and would read of her ways." Westminster Gazette.

FAMILIAR SWISS FLOWERS.

By F. E. Hulme, F.L.S. F.S.A.

WITH 24 COLOURED PLATES. SERIES I. 1s. net.

"Every one will be glad to find a book which teaches so much about Alpine and other plants." Ladies' Field.

New complete Catalogue free on application.

CASSELL & CO., LTD.,
La Belle Sauvage, London, E.C.

MR. MURRAY'S NEW BOOKS.

ESSAYS OF POETS AND POETRY.

Ancient and Modern.

By T. HERBERT WARREN, Vice-Chancellor of Oxford and President of Magdalen.

Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

"This is a delightful book, and will, we predict, give an immense deal of pleasure wherever sound learning and true literature are loved and flourish... We cannot leave Mr. Warren's book without expressing once more our delight in work so sound, so sane, and so vigorous. What a comfort to find a critic who is interested not in himself but in the men he writes about, who wants not to show off his own cleverness, but to exhibit the beauties of the poets of whom he writes, who does not pose and posture in front of some noble masterpiece, but with courtesy and good breeding shows cause why this or that rule should be made absolute in the High Court of Letters."—Spectator.

THE ANNALS OF TACITUS.

Book XI.-XVI. An English Translation with Introduction, Notes, and Maps. By GEORGE G. RAMSAY, Litt.D. LL.D. Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

This volume is a continuation of that published in 1904 containing a translation of the first six books.

The aim of the writer has been to present a version of Tacitus which shall satisfy scholars by strict fidelity to the original, and at the same time enable the English reader to dismiss from his mind the idea that he is reading a translation.

SCENES AND PORTRAITS.

By FREDERIC MANNING, Author of 'The Vigil of Brunhild.' Crown 8vo, 6s.

A volume of real portraits and imaginary scenes, in which the author of 'The Vigil of Brunhild' has aimed at presenting the thought of several different ages in the past by personating it in various characters which, in all the scenes except the first, are historical. The Series has a unity of thought and purpose; all the scenes present various aspects of the same problem.

SECOND IMPRESSION NOW READY.

THE BANCROFTS.

Recollections of Sixty Years.

By Sir SQUIRE and LADY BANCROFT. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

"Not only an invaluable document for the student of stage-history, but an amusing and charming companion for a leisure hour or two... a book that gives, once and for all, the story of a very remarkable period in the history of the English stage."—Times.

NOTES FROM A PAINTER'S LIFE.

Including the Founding of Two Galleries. By C. E. HALLÉ. With Illustrations. Square demy 8vo, 6s. net.

THE LIFE STORY OF AN OTTER.

By J. C. TREGARTHEN, Author of 'Wild Life at the Land's End.' With Illustrations. Large crown 8vo, 6s. net.

ROMANCE OF THE EAST SERIES.

Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net each.

In this Series the great storehouses of Oriental Romance will be opened for the first time to the public. Tales from the Sanscrit, from the Chinese, from every language of the East possessing a great literature will appear in due course. From these vivid narratives of old-world romance it will be possible for the reader to glean much information concerning the lives and manners and customs of vanished races, and the greatness of Empires that have passed away.

THE GOLDEN TOWN.

By L. D. BARNETT, LL.D.

THREE NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

MUCH ADO ABOUT SOMETHING.

By C. E. LAWRENCE, Author of 'Pilgrimage.'

"A beguiling fantasy, told with much grace and gaiety."—Times.

"There are scenes which will remind the reader irresistibly of Hans Andersen; there is always something charming happening or about to happen, and the scenes of pure fairyland are delicious. We shall be surprised if this book does not gain a great success. It certainly deserves it."—Daily Mail.

THE SHUTTLES OF THE LOOM.

By K. M. EDGE (Mrs. Caulfeild), Author of 'Ahana.'

SIX OXFORD THINKERS:

GIBBON, NEWMAN, FROUDE, CHURCH, MORLEY, PATER.

By ALGERNON CECIL, M.A. (Oxon), of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-Law.

Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

This book is an attempt to trace, something in the manner recommended by the late Lord Acton, the origin and development of certain ideas of history, bearing upon the Christian religion, by means of studies of representative men who acted towards them as foster-parents.

GIUSEPPE BARETTI.

With an Account of his Literary Friendships and Feuds in Italy and in England in the Days of Dr. Johnson.

By LACY COLLISON-MORLEY.

With an Introduction by the late
F. MARION CRAWFORD.

With Photogravure Portrait. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

THE LIFE OF

Major-General Sir JOHN ARDAGH.

By his Wife, SUSAN COUNTESS OF MALMESBURY (LADY ARDAGH). With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 15s. net.

"Such a book as this is a valuable contribution to nineteenth-century history, and it is more than that—it is a profoundly impressive object-lesson in the triumph of character."—Daily Mail.

"An engaging portrait of a very remarkable personality.... Lady Malmesbury has made it impossible for any one to doubt that Sir John Ardagh was one of the most devoted and accomplished public servants of his time."—Times.

MEMOIR OF COLONEL KENYON-SLANEY, P.C. M.P.

Edited by WALTER DURNFORD. With Illustrations. Large crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

AN EGYPTIAN OASIS.

An Account of the Oasis of Kharga in the Libyan Desert. By H. J. LLEWELLYN BEADNELL, late of the Egyptian Survey Department, &c. With Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

AN ENGLISH TRANSLATION OF THE EARLY HISTORY OF THE CHURCH.

By the MONSIGNOR LOUIS DUCHESNE.

Demy 8vo, 9s. net.

This important history has hitherto only been available in the original. The Author is well known in England for the interest he has shown on the subject of Anglican orders, and his opinion on historical questions is absolutely trustworthy and helpful.

JOHN MURRAY, Albemarle Street, W.

MESSRS. METHUEN'S NEW BOOKS

BARBARY SHEEP. By ROBERT HICHENS. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. A new novel of the Sahara, where cultivation merges into the vast desolation which fascinates the European. Here the woman meets the desert man who would lead her farther. How far she goes is the theme of the story. The demand for this book, by the author of 'The Garden of Allah,' is very great.

SET IN SILVER. By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON. With 4 Illustrations in Colour and others from Photographs. Crown 8vo, 6s. This is a most entrancing story of motoring in England, in which topography and love are delightfully blended.

On May 27th will be ready, crown 8vo, 6s., a book of the highest interest and importance—THE CONDITION OF ENGLAND, by C. F. G. MASTERMAN, M.P.

On the same day will be published THE TURKISH PEOPLE, by LUCY GARNETT. Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. A description of the life and customs of the Turks.

ENCHANTERS OF MEN. By ETHEL COLBURN MAYNE. 10s. 6d. net. Contains vivid studies of twenty-three beautiful, witty, and fascinating women. The book is finely illustrated.

THE BRETONS AT HOME, by FRANCES M. GOSLING, 10s. 6d. net, is a charming book, descriptive of Breton peasant life, with its rich harvest of legend and history. It is profusely illustrated in colour and from photographs.

GENERAL LITERATURE

THE BEST BOOK ON GEORGE MEREDITH IS BY M. STURGE HENDERSON, ENTITLED

GEORGE MEREDITH: Novelist, Poet, Reformer. With a Portrait. Crown 8vo (viii-325 pp.), 6s.

"A fine and stimulating book for those who love the great man."—Manchester Guardian.

NAPOLEON'S MARSHALS. By R. P. DUNN-PATTISON. With 20 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

"Written with admirable balance of narrative and appreciation. The whole band stand dramatically defined—a marvellous galaxy of military talent."—Pall Mall Gazette.

THE BLUE BIRD: a Fairy Play in Five Acts. By MAURICE MAETERLINCK. Translated by ALEXANDER TEIXEIRA DE MATOS. Fcap. 8vo, deckle edges, 3s. 6d. net. [Second Edition.]

"We remain spellbound by the charm of the play. It will haunt its readers for many a day."—Times.

A SUMMER IN TOURNAINE. By FREDERIC LEES. With 12 Illustrations in Colour by MAXWELL ARMFIELD, and 87 from Photographs. Also a Map. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

This magnificently illustrated book is a complete and absorbing description of France's most delightful province.

"An extremely agreeable book, and sufficiently comprehensive as an introduction to Tournaine."—Daily Mail.

"The author's descriptions are a happy combination of the technical and the historical, and the human interest is never absent."—Outlook.

MY MEMOIRS. By ALEXANDRE DUMAS. In 6 vols. crown 8vo, 6s. each.

Volume VI. This volume completes the translation of this great book.

IN A GERMAN COLONY. By B. PULLEN-BURRY. With 8 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

A full account of life and manners in New Britain, recently colonized by Germans.

THE NATURAL HISTORY OF IGNEOUS ROCKS. By ALFRED HARKER, M.A. F.R.S., Fellow of St. John's College, and Lecturer in Petrology in the University of Cambridge. With 112 Diagrams and 2 Plates. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

WALKS IN PARIS. By GEORGES CAIN. Translated by A. R. ALLINSON. With 118 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

This is a delightful medley of description, gossip, and antiquarian lore.

"These chapters are stored with delightful things."—Daily Chronicle.

"This remarkable book reads like a fascinating novel."—Daily Mail.

DRUGS AND THE DRUG HABIT. By H. SAINSBURY, M.D. F.R.C.P. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

The object of this book is to define the position of the drug, to show its use and its abuse, and to discuss the broad lines upon which prevention and cure of disease should proceed.

DANTE IN ENGLISH LITERATURE. By PAGET TOYNBEE, M.A. D.Litt. 2 vols. demy 8vo, 21s. net.

An account of the connexion of Dante with English literature, quoting all the references to the great poet from Chaucer to the death of Cary in 1844.

CRIMINAL TYPES IN SHAKESPEARE. By AUGUST GOLL. Translated by Mrs. CHARLES WEEKES. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

This book reviews the great criminals of the plays, and shows how Shakespeare, by his genius, was fully up to the modern standard of criminal psychology.

A HOLIDAY IN CONNEMARA. By STEPHEN GWYNN, M.P. With many Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

"A sunny human book, full of pretty word pictures, and studded with natural stories. Everywhere the book is touched with sympathy and insight."—Daily Telegraph.

GEORGE SELWYN AND THE WITS. By S. PARNELL KERR. With 16 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

"Mr. Kerr's book is written with quite unusual style and vivacity."—Observer.

A SHORT HISTORY OF THE ROYAL NAVY. By DAVID HANNAY. Vol. II. 1689-1815. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

This is the second and completing volume of Mr. Hannay's well-known history of the Royal Navy. It commences with the year 1689, and carries the history down to the year 1815.

THE FOUNDATIONS OF THE ENGLISH CHURCH. By J. H. MAUDE, M.A., Rector of Hilgay. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. [Handbooks of English Church History.]

THE SAXON CHURCH AND THE NORMAN CONQUEST.

By C. T. CRUTTWELL, M.A., Rector of Ewelme and Canon of Peterborough. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. [Handbooks of English Church History.]

RAMBLES IN SUSSEX. By F. G. BRABANT. With many Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.

The rambles are real walks and rides, arranged so as to include the whole of the county, their main objects being (1) to observe and describe the characteristic features of the scenery, adding simple explanations of their causes, not expressed in technical language; (2) to give a short account of every old building, and an adequate description of all important ones; (3) to relate clearly and accurately the very interesting historical and literary associations of the county. The illustrations will include reproductions of six of Turner's Sussex views, recently sold at Christie's.

A HISTORY OF ENGLISH LAW. By W. S. HOLDSWORTH, D.C.L. With a Plan. In 4 vols. demy 8vo, each 10s. 6d. net. Vols. II. and III.

The first volume of this History dealt with the beginnings of Equity, Admiralty, Commercial, and Ecclesiastical Law—which make up the Common Law of the present day. In these two volumes the detailed history of these branches of law is traced.

"Mr. Holdsworth covers an extent of ground that no preceding writer has covered. It is a valuable history of English law, and is bound to receive a place among the authoritative works on legal history."—Scotsman.

MONMOUTHSHIRE. By G. W. WADE, D.D., and J. H. WADE, M.A., Authors of 'Somerset.' With 32 Illustrations and 2 Maps. Small pott 8vo, gilt top, 2s. 6d. net; leather, 3s. 6d. net. [Little Guides.]

FICTION

SET IN SILVER. By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON, Authors of 'The Lightning Conductor.' With a Frontispiece in Colour by ARTHUR H. BUCKLAND, and other Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"It is a thoroughgoing Williamson book."—Daily Chronicle.

"These delightful authors are here found at their best."—Scotsman.

"The book abounds in the happiest descriptive touches."—Daily Graphic.

BARBARY SHEEP. By ROBERT HICHENS, Author of 'The Garden of Allah.' Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d.

"The characters are drawn with the finest strength and naturalness."—Morning Leader.

"Instinct with drama from the first page to the last."—Daily Mail.

THE OXFORD YEAR. By OONA H. BALL, Author of 'Barbara Goes to Oxford.' With 16 Illustrations. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Descriptive, topical, antiquarian, and romantic interests are blended in a charmingly ingenious manner."—Glasgow Herald.

THE LOVE-STORY OF ST. BEL. By BERNARD CAPES. Crown 8vo, 6s. [Second Edition.]

"A fine piece of craftsmanship, full of colour and thrilling."—Sketch.

"A romance of romances. Not for one moment does the interest flag; the story is told with the most fascinating skill."—Bystander.

"An original work, romantic and moving. Mystery, passion, romance, the book is full of them all."—Times.

"Mr. Capes is at his best in this rich and powerful book."—Morning Leader.

KATHERINE THE ARROGANT. By B. M. CROKER, Author of 'Peggy of the Bartons.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Fourth Edition.]

"Mrs. Croker is always amusing; her theme is made fresh and vivid, and Katherine herself is delightful."—Standard.

"The charm is the tenderness of the human touch."—Liverpool Post.

MY LADY OF SHADOWS. By JOHN OXENHAM, Author of 'The Gate of the Desert.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Third Edition.]

"Wholesome and invigorating from first to last."—Scotsman.

"An intensely interesting story, whose characters are charmingly drawn."—Liverpool Post.

"The work of a master story-teller, and full of charm."—Sheffield Independent.

TO BE PUBLISHED SHORTLY.

THE LIGHTNING CONDUCTOR. By C. N. and A. M. WILLIAMSON. Cheap Edition. Crown 8vo, 1s. net. [Ready May 27.]

GALATEA OF THE WHEATFIELD. By M. E. FRANCIS (Mrs. Blundell), Author of 'Hardy-on-the-Hill.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Ready May 27.]

AN HONEST MAN. By R. H. BRETHERTON, Author of 'The Mill.' Crown 8vo, 6s. [Ready June 3.]

THE BISHOP AND THE LADY. By MARTIN LUTRELL SWAYNE. Crown 8vo, 6s. [Ready June 10.]

WATCHERS BY THE SHORE. By J. E. PATTERSON. Crown 8vo, 6s. [Ready June 24.]

SMITH, ELDER & CO.'S LIST.

The Great Tariff Reformer.

Large post 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

LIFE OF FRIEDRICH LIST

And Selections from His Writings, including the Outlines of American Political Economy.

By MARGARET HIRST,

Late Scholar of Newnham College, Cambridge.

With an Introduction by F. W. HIRST, Editor of the Economist.

Times.—"Fruitful of ideas for both sides in the fiscal controversy; and a study of them will be encouraged by this account of a strenuous and romantic career."

Small demy 8vo, 9s. net.

THE ENGLISH WOMAN.

Studies in Her Psychic Evolution.

By DAVID STAARS.

Translated from the French and Abridged by J. M. E. BROWNLOW.

Englishwoman.—"A patient, accurate, fearless, and well-balanced inquisition into the mental and spiritual development of woman in England. M. David Staars has the penetration and wit to state quite fairly and plainly those situations which often remain incomprehensible to men, but to which most women hold the key."

READY MAY 26.

Large post 8vo, 6s. net.

A THREE-FOOT STOOL.

By PETER WRIGHT.

Experiences of ranching, with stories told over the fire, and some verses.

A VOLUME OF POEMS.

Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net.

A MINSTREL IN THE SOUTH.

By MILLICENT WEDMORE.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

PRISCILLA OF THE "GOOD INTENT."

By HALLIWELL SUTCLIFFE.

Second Impression.

Westminster Gazette.—"The heroine is as fresh and charming as her name.....A novel of exceptional charm."

DAVINA.

By FRANCES M. BURMESTER.

Scotsman.—"The author has handled a difficult subject skilfully."

THE WOODEN HORSE.

By HUGH WALPOLE.

Scotsman.—"The story is gracefully written. It should not fail to please."

London: SMITH, ELDER & CO.
15, Waterloo Place, S.W.

Books of Note

DEDICATED BY GRACIOUS PERMISSION TO HIS MAJESTY THE KING.

THE STORY OF THE HOUSE- HOLD CAVALRY, 1661-1902.

By Capt. Sir GEORGE ARTHUR, Bart., late Second Life Guards. With Photogravure Portraits and other Illustrations including 6 Coloured Plates. 2 vols. super-royal 8vo. Édition de Luxe, limited to 40 copies, 10l. 10s. net. Ordinary Edition, 3l. 13s. 6d. net.

[On Monday next.

With the exception of brief records issued in 1834 no history of the Life Guards and Royal Horse Guards has hitherto been written.

RADIOACTIVITY AND GEOLOGY.

An Account of the Influence of Radioactive Energy on Terrestrial History. By J. JOLY, M.A. Sc.D. F.R.S., Professor of Geology and Mineralogy in the University of Dublin. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

CHAPTERS ON SPANISH LITERATURE.

By J. FITZMAURICE KELLY. Demy 8vo, 7s. 6d. net.

"A delightful volume, full of sympathy, learning, and judgment."—Observer.

"We have no hesitation in saying that this volume forms the most valuable English contribution to Spanish letters since the same author gave us his history of Spanish literature."—Athenæum.

"I have never met with such an illuminating work on Spanish literature."—Mr. R. B. CUNNINGHAME GRAHAM in the Nation.

ENGLISH HERALDIC BOOK STAMPS.

Figured and Described by CYRIL DAVENPORT, F.S.A. About 300 Illustrations. Super-royal 8vo, 25s. net.

This is the first English book on the subject. A detailed Prospectus can be had from the Publishers.

ECONOMIC HERESIES.

An Unorthodox Attempt to Appreciate the Economic Problems presented by "Things as They Are." By Sir NATHANIEL NATHAN. 10s. 6d. net.

"The author's general attitude may be gathered from his frank recognition that the authority of the professional economists has completely broken down, and that the orthodox teaching requires reconstruction."—Pall Mall Gazette.

ANNALS OF ARCHÆOLOGY AND ANTHROPOLOGY.

Edited by J. L. MYRES. Vol. II. No. 1. Price 2s. 6d. net.

Contents.

CATALOGUE OF A TEACHING COLLECTION OF REPRESENTATIVE ENGLISH COINS, from 1066, at the Institute of Archaeology in the University of Liverpool, 1909. By F. P. Barnard.

A PRE-HISTORIC VASE IN THE MUSEUM OF SPALATO. By A. M. Woodward.

DISEASE AND HISTORY. By W. H. S. Jones.

SUGGESTIONS FOR A SCHEME OF CLASSIFICATION OF THE MEGALITHIC AND ANALOGOUS PRE-HISTORIC REMAINS OF GREAT BRITAIN AND IRELAND. By George Clinch.

THIS PART CONTAINS SEVERAL PLATES.

ANNUAL SUBSCRIPTION, 10s. POST FREE.

THE NEWEST NOVELS. PRISCILLA AND CHARYBDIS

By F. FRANKFORT MOORE, Author of 'The Jessamy Bride.'

"This most entertaining social comedy."—Times.

"For good, festive, but not facetious novels, it would be hard to beat him."—Observer.

THE STORY OF THYRZA.

By ALICE BROWN, Author of 'Rose Macleod.'

"A strengthening tale builded of charity, human kindness, and the humour which has tears behind it."—Daily Chronicle.

THE PERJURER.

By W. E. NORRIS, Author of 'The Square Peg.'

Mr. Norris has never written a more delightful story.

PATRICIA BARING.

By WINIFRED JAMES, Author of 'Bachelor Betty.'

"If I had been a young man on the spot, I should certainly have been at her feet with the rest of them."—Punch.

ARCHIBALD CONSTABLE & CO. LTD.
10 Orange Street London W.C.

MR. HEINEMANN'S NEW BOOKS.

THE EXILE OF ST. HELENA.

The Last Phase in Fact and Fiction.

By PHILIPPE GONNARD.

Illustrated. Demy 8vo, 10s. net. [Next week.

 This work should prove of exceptional interest to all students of the Napoleonic Period. It deals with what has come to be known as the Napoleonic Legend, and disposes, once for all, of the numerous fantastic fables which have grown up round the name of Bonaparte.

With an Introductory Chapter by
KING PETER OF SERBIA.

SERVIA

BY THE SERVIANS.

Compiled and Edited by ALFRED STEAD,
Editor of 'Japan by the Japanese.'

Demy 8vo, 12s. 6d. net.

"Mr. Stead's contributors are authoritative. What they do not know about Serbia can hardly be worth knowing."—Standard.

RANDOM REMINISCENCES OF MEN AND EVENTS.

By JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER. Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s.

"Fathers of sons now starting upon a commercial career may be well advised to include a copy of this stimulating book in the trunk of the young adventurer."—Daily Telegraph.

DAYS IN HELLAS.

By MABEL MOORE,

Author of 'Carthage of the Phœnicians.'

Illustrated. Crown 8vo, 6s. net.

"Observant, sympathetic, and humorous, she gives a most readable account of the modern Greeks, their life and habits, and of her own travel adventures."—Times.

RECOLLECTIONS OF

BARON DE FRÉNILLY, PEER OF FRANCE (1768-1828).

With a Portrait. Demy 8vo, 10s. net.

"He is a forceful critic of personal character, and has a very considerable knack of portraiture. His memoirs constantly help the imagination to seize upon the realities of a momentous time."—Pall Mall Gazette.

A NEW VOLUME OF "LITERATURES OF THE WORLD."

GERMAN LITERATURE.

By CALVIN THOMAS, LL.D. Large crown 8vo, 6s.

"Lucid and well proportioned, the work makes a survey of the whole development of German literature. It noticeably enhances the value of the series."—Scotsman.

FOR NATURE LOVERS.

WILD FLOWERS OF THE BRITISH ISLES.

Illustrated and Written by H. ISABEL ADAMS, F.L.S.
With 75 Coloured Plates. 1 vol. 30s. net.

"She has pictured her examples with delicacy and grace, also with due regard to detail. The plates show not only the flower but also the leaf and stem, and often the root."—Athenæum.

NEW SIX-SHILLING NOVELS.

SIR GUY AND LADY RANNARD.

By H. N. DICKINSON, Author of 'Keddy,' &c.

PETER HOMUNCULUS.

By GILBERT CANNAN.

"One of the most remarkable first novels of recent years—a book whose vitality stamps its author as a writer of outstanding talents."—Daily Telegraph.

AN INCOMPLEAT ETONIAN.

By FRANK DANBY,

Author of 'Pigs in Clover' and 'The Heart of a Child.'

"Admirably written. It has pathos, humour, truth to life, and a kindly outlook upon humanity."—Bookman.

TREASURE TROVE.

By Mrs. DAWSON SCOTT,

Author of 'The Story of Anna Beames.'

"A strong, human, remarkably original story, which will hold its own among the very best books of the year. The intrinsic interest of the tale will hold even the most experienced reader in thrall from cover to cover."—Daily Telegraph.

F R A T E R N I T Y.

By JOHN GALSWORTHY, [2nd Imp.

Author of 'The Man of Property' and 'The Country House.' "There are many things in this book that are unforgettable; there are whole chapters that are masterpieces of delicate and restrained workmanship."—Standard.

WM. HEINEMANN, 21, Bedford Street, W.C.

BLACKIE & SON'S LIST.

THE STONE AGES IN NORTH BRITAIN AND IRELAND.

By the Rev. FREDERICK SMITH. With Introduction by Prof. A. H. KEANE, Late Vice-President of the Anthropological Institute.

With over 500 Illustrations. Demy 8vo, 16s. net.

In this work the author claims to have extended the range of Palæolithic Man to North Britain and Ireland. The argument is not speculative, but based upon hundreds of human relics collected by him during nearly forty years' continuous search amid the boulder clays, river drifts, and marine estuaries of Scotland and Ireland. Over five hundred of these relics are represented by illustrations. The work thus opens up a new chapter in the history of early man, a chapter which cannot fail to appeal directly to all interested in the study of human activities from pre- and inter-glacial times. [Just published.]

INTRODUCTION TO THE NATURAL HISTORY OF LANGUAGE.

By T. G. TUCKER, Litt.D. (Camb.), Hon. Litt.D. (Dublin), Professor of Classical Philology in the University of Melbourne.

Demy 8vo, cloth, 10s. 6d. net.

A new treatise which gathers together the results of the great amount of philological work that the last quarter of a century has produced. It is intended to fulfil to-day the purpose which was served in its time by Max Müller's 'Science of Language.'

GEOGRAPHY: Structural—Physical—Comparative.

A Text-Book for Senior Students.

By J. W. GREGORY, D.Sc. F.R.S., Professor of Geology in Glasgow University.

With Series of specially constructed Coloured Maps and Sketch Maps and Plans in Black and White.

Large 8vo, 6s. net.

The main purpose of this book is to put before the student the most important facts concerning the Structural Geography of the Earth, and the evolution of our present continents from older lands. It marks a new departure both in aims and in method. It furnishes the student with such knowledge of the entire surface of the Earth as will ensure his acquisition of geographical perspective.

THE MYTHOLOGY OF THE BRITISH ISLANDS.

An Introduction to Celtic Myth, Legend, Poetry, and Romance.

By CHARLES SQUIRE. 12s. 6d. net.

This book will appeal to all who are in any way interested in Celtic mythology and poetry, or in the mythology and poetry of early peoples in general, and to all lovers of English literature. It is based on the works of scholars deeply learned in Old Gaelic and Old Welsh, and as all the chief authorities are duly stated, those who wish to pursue the subject further may readily do so.

THE LITERATURE OF THE CELTS.

By MAGNUS MACLEAN, M.A. D.Sc. 7s. 6d. net.

This volume stencils the salient points in the history and romance of the subject from the earliest times down to the present day.

The Times says:—"We are convinced that the book fully comes up to the mark set by the author, and that it will be found both handy and useful."

THE RED LETTER LIBRARY.

LATEST ADDITIONS.

A BOOK OF PARODIES.

Introduction by ARTHUR SYMONS.

SIR THOMAS MORE'S UTOPIA.

Introduction by H. G. WELLS.

1s. 6d. net, cloth, gilt top; 2s. 6d. net, leather, gilt top.

POEMS BY RUSSELL LOWELL.

Introduction by HILAIRE BELLOC.

POEMS BY JEAN INGELow.

Introduction by ALICE MEYNELL.

The Morning Post says:—"Messrs. Blackie & Son may be congratulated on their 'Red Letter Library.'"

The Daily News says:—"A beautiful little edition."

The Scotsman says:—"The books will be prized almost as much for their pretty looks as for the poetry they contain."

Full List of over 50 Volumes post free on application.

BLACKIE & SON, LTD., 50, Old Bailey, E.C.

THE DOVES PRESS

No. 1 THE TERRACE HAMMERSMITH

NOTICE

MR. COBDEN-SANDERSON GIVES NOTICE that in June The Doves Press will be REMOVED by him to

No. 15 THE UPPER MALL HAMMERSMITH

the premises of THE DOVES BINDERY, which thereupon, except for the production of The Doves Press Publications, he will close.

The Last Publication of the Press at the old address will be, as announced,

THE TRAGICALL HISTORIE OF HAMLET, Prince of Denmarke. Small 4to. Printed verbatim and literatim, in black and red, from the Second Quarto, with additions from the First Folio of parts not found in the Quarto. Initial capital flourished in green by Edward Johnston.

¶250 copies on paper, bound in limp vellum at The Doves Bindery, or in boards, paper sides, at 2l. 2s.; or in morocco or sealskin at 4l. 4s.; and 15 on vellum, bound in limp vellum, or in boards, paper sides, at 10l. 10s.; or in morocco or sealskin, at 12l. 12s.

To be published towards the end of June. In the Autumn, a Tercentenary Edition of SHAKE-SPEARES SONNETS, first imprinted in 1609, will be published by The Doves Press at The Upper Mall. And in the spring of 1910 will be published as already announced

FAUST, Zweiter Theil, to be printed from the 1899 Weimar text, specially revised for this edition by the editor of the Weimar text, Dr. Erich Schmidt. The First Part of Faust was published by The Doves Press in 1906. ¶Particulars of the above and of all recent publications of the Press may be had on application to Mr. Cobden-Sanderson at THE DOVES PRESS, No. 15 THE UPPER MALL, HAMMERSMITH.

Recent Publications:

CREDO: PLENI SUNT COELI ET TERRA GLORIA TUA. By T. J. Cobden-Sanderson. Small 8vo, pp. 1-6. 250 copies on paper at 1l. 1s., bound in leather and lettered in gold at The Doves Bindery; and 12 copies on vellum at 3l. 3s., bound in leather and lettered and tooled in gold.

MEN AND WOMEN. By ROBERT BROWNING. Two volumes. Small 4to. Printed in red and black, from the first edition, 1855. Pen-flourishings in blue and green by Edward Johnstone. 250 copies on paper, at two guineas a volume, bound in limp vellum by The Doves Bindery; or at four guineas a volume, bound in morocco or sealskin. ¶12 copies on vellum at ten guineas a volume, bound in limp vellum; or, at twelve guineas a volume, bound in morocco or sealskin.

NOTE ON THE DOVES PRESS and Catalogue Raisonné. By T. J. Cobden-Sanderson. Small 4to. Paper. 5s. Bound in boards by The Doves Bindery.

THE DOVES PRESS,

No. 15 THE UPPER MALL HAMMERSMITH

MACMILLAN'S NEW BOOKS.

Oxford Lectures on Poetry.

By A. C. BRADLEY, LL.D. Litt.D., formerly Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford. 8vo, 10s. net.

FIRST AND SECOND SERIES. Complete in 1 vol.

The Golden Treasury of the Best Songs and Lyrical Poems in the English Language.

Selected and Arranged by F. T. PALGRAVE. The First and Second Series. Complete in 1 vol. Crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net. [Wednesday.]

Artemis to Actæon, and other Verse.

By EDITH WHARTON, Author of 'The House of Mirth,' &c. Extra crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net.

The Poems and Sonnets of Louise Chandler Moulton.

Comprising 'Swallow Flights,' 'In the Garden of Dreams,' 'At the Wind's Will,' &c. Crown 8vo, 7s. 6d.

1909 ISSUE READY MAY 28.

The Statesman's Year-Book.

Statistical and Historical Annual of the States of the World for the Year 1909. Edited by J. SCOTT KELTIE, LL.D. Crown 8vo, 10s. 6d. net.

NEW 6/- NOVELS.

THE WHITE SISTER

A Story of Rome.

By the late F. MARION CRAWFORD.

GERVASE.

By MABEL DEARMER,

Author of 'The Alien Sisters,' &c.

Times.—"There is in this novel enough cleverness, and, what is so much more valuable in a novelist, enough human sympathy and sense of humour, to have furnished forth three such books as 'Gervase.'"

Scotsman.—"Probably this year has so far given us no finer piece of fiction from a lady's pen."

Academy.—"We recommend this novel heartily to all our readers who value good work."

Queen.—"A really powerful novel, the work of an educated writer, who bestows much care and thought on her work. There is sympathy and humour, and the characters are very evenly balanced; indeed, it is a story with a fascination about it impossible to resist."

World.—"An extremely interesting and cleverly worked-out story, which at the outset may be pronounced to be the very best Mrs. Deamer has ever written."

The Novels of Henry James.

Édition de Luxe, in 24 vols. 8vo, 8s. 6d. net each.

Vol. XVII. The Altar of the Dead, The Beast in the Jungle, The Birthplace and other Tales.

NEW BOOK BY THE WRITER OF 'CONFESSIO MEDICI.'

Faith and Works of Christian Science.

Extra crown 8vo, 3s. 6d. net.

The Psychology of Thinking.

By IRVING ELGAR MILLER, Ph.D. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

The Playhouse and the Play,

AND OTHER ADDRESSES CONCERNING THE THEATRE AND DEMOCRACY IN AMERICA. By PERCY MACKAYE. Crown 8vo, 5s. net.

The Frog: An Introduction to Anatomy, Histology, and Embryology.

By the late A. MILNES MARSHALL, M.D. D.Sc. M.A. F.R.S., &c. Edited by F. W. GAMBLE, D.Sc. Tenth Edition. Crown 8vo, 5s.

JUNE NUMBER READY ON TUESDAY.

THE CENTURY MAGAZINE.

Illustrated. Price 1s. 4d. Annual Subscription, 16s.

THE DARWIN CENTENARY. By Benjamin E. Smith. A NEW EGYPTIAN DISCOVERY: The Tomb of Horemheb. By Arthur E. P. Weigall.

WITH THE COIN OF HER LIFE: A Story of Thirteen at Table. The first of three Stories with the same motive, by one of the following writers: Margaret Deland, S. Weir Mitchell, Owen Wister.

And numerous other Stories and Articles of general interest. Also Vol. LXXVII, November, 1908 to April, 1909, 10s. 6d.

MACMILLAN & CO., LTD., London.

Messrs. Longmans & Co.'s LIST.

* * Vols. I., II., III., IV., V., VII., IX., X., XI., and XII. are now ready, 7s. 6d. net each.

Political History of England

Vol. IX. From the Accession of Anne to the Death of George II. (1702-1760).

By I. S. LEADAM, M.A.

With 8 Maps. 7s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

IRELAND UNDER THE STUARTS AND DURING THE INTERREGNUM.

By RICHARD BAGWELL, M.A., Author of 'Ireland under the Tudors.' In 3 vols. Vols. I. and II.: 1603 to 1660. With 2 Maps. 8vo, 28s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"Mr. Bagwell is a delightful maker of history, writing with a running pen that will deceive even an average reader into reading page after page of his fine, serious narrative."—Daily News.

THE ARCHITECTS' LIBRARY.

A HISTORY OF ARCHITECTURAL DEVELOPMENT. (In 3 vols.) Vol. II.

MEDIAEVAL. By F. M. SIMPSON, Professor of Architecture, University of London. With 257 Illustrations. Medium 8vo, 21s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"We commend this volume to all serious students of architecture. It is clear, logical, and, above all, accurate, and far better value for the money than many low-priced and carelessly compiled books on architectural history."—Architect.

MEMOIR OF GEORGE HOWARD

WILKINSON, Bishop of St. Andrews. By ARTHUR JAMES MASON, D.D. With Illustrations. 2 vols. 8vo, 28s. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"It only remains to thank Dr. Mason very heartily for the book he has given us."—Guardian.

"This is a deeply interesting record of a remarkable life."—St. Andrews Citizen.

THE SPRINGS OF HELICON: a Study

in the Progress of English Poetry from Chaucer to Milton. By J. W. MACKAIL, M.A. LL.D., Professor of Poetry in the University of Oxford. Crown 8vo, 4s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"Very charming, full of knowledge and of feeling."—Daily Chronicle.

THE ANNUAL REGISTER: a Review of Public Events at Home and Abroad for the Year 1908. 8vo, 18s. (Inland postage 5d.)

* * Volumes of the 'Annual Register' for the Years 1863-1907 can still be had, price 18s. each.

THE MYSTERY OF EXISTENCE IN THE LIGHT OF AN OPTIMISTIC PHILO-

SOPHY. By CHARLES WICKSTEED ARMSTRONG, Associate of the Society for Psychical Research, London. Crown 8vo, 2s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

NEW AND CHEAPER EDITION.

INDUSTRIAL EFFICIENCY: a Comparative Study of Industrial Life in England, Germany, and America. By ARTHUR SHADWELL, M.A. M.D. Crown 8vo, 6s. net. (Inland postage 5d.)

"This is, perhaps, the most valuable and suggestive contribution to the burning question of international competition in industry that has yet been written."—Chamber of Commerce Journal.

THE HUMAN SPECIES: Considered

from the Standpoints of Comparative Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, and Bacteriology. By LUDWIG HOPF. With Illustrations in the Text. 8vo, 10s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 6d.)

"Since the appearance of Huxley's 'Man's Place in Nature,' no book has given such a clear and systematic account of the bodily peculiarities of man, nor a more balanced estimate of his position in the animal kingdom."—Glasgow Herald.

THE MINNESINGERS. By JETHRO BITHELL,

M.A. Vol. I. TRANSLATIONS. Royal 8vo, 5s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"The book would please any devoted reader of love-poetry, and its notes, packed with concise and well-digested erudition, give it a peculiar value for English students of German literature."—Scotsman.

POEMS. By W. J. CAMERON. Fcap. 8vo,

3s. 6d. net. (Inland postage 3d.)

"The book will delight lovers of good verse."—Dundee Advertiser.

THE CURIOUS CASE OF LADY PUR-

BECK: a Scandal of the XVIIth Century. By the Author of 'The Life of Sir Kenelm Digby,' &c. 8vo, 6s. net. (Inland postage 4d.)

"A racy account of the scandal and trial of the daughter of Sir Edward Coke, who married Sir John Villiers, created Lord Purbeck."—Times.

"This fascinating volume."—Saturday Review.

"Attractive as romance and fascinating as history."—Daily Telegraph.

LONGMANS, GREEN & CO.
39, PATERNOSTER ROW, LONDON, E.C.

NOW READY.

THE FIRST VOLUME OF THE COUNTY COASTS SERIES.

THE NORFOLK AND SUFFOLK COAST.

By W. A. DUTT. With about 40 Illustrations. Large crown 8vo, cloth, 6s. net.

In 'The Norfolk and Suffolk Coast,' the author deals with the history and romance of coast life, telling true tales of famous shipwrecks, deeds of life-saving, smuggling adventures, and landings and defeats of foreign foes. Making a peregrination of the coast from Landguard Fort to the border of Lincolnshire, he describes the towns and villages, the life and means of livelihood of the fisherfolk, the changes the coast has undergone in consequence of the gaining or retreating of the sea, the striking natural features of the coastline, and the wild life of the creeks, bays, estuaries, cliffs, beaches, and salt marshes. Places and objects of archaeological interest, such as prehistoric and Roman camps, castles, monasteries, and noteworthy churches and old houses, are also described, and literary and other associations are not neglected. Decayed or vanished towns or seaports, such as Orford, Dunwich, Cley, and Blakeney, are specially noticed, and something is said about the lives and adventures of Cavendish, Shovel, Vancouver, and other famous Norfolk and Suffolk admirals and navigators.

THE PLACE OF ANIMALS IN HUMAN THOUGHT.

By Countess MARTINENGO-CESARESCO. With Photogravure Frontispiece with 32 other Illustrations. 12s. 6d. net.

The book, while it is the outcome of years of study and research, will appeal not only to folk-loreists and students of religion, but to the general reader, particularly if he be a lover of animals.

THE BURIED CITY OF KENFIG.

By THOMAS GRAY. With a Map and Illustrations. 10s. 6d. net.

There is a fascination about a lost town. This work is an attempt to snatch from the past something about the town of Kenfig in South Wales, long since covered up by the sand-fiend.

NO REFUGE BUT IN TRUTH.

By GOLDWIN SMITH. Crown 8vo, cloth, 2s. 6d. net.

In these papers on religious and ethical problems Prof. Goldwin Smith writes not as a teacher, but an inquirer, seeking for truth and open to conviction. The papers deal in an unusually stimulating way with such questions as 'New Faith linked with Old,' 'The Limits of Evolution,' 'The Immortality of the Soul,' 'Is there to be a Revolution in Ethics?' and 'The Religious Situation.'

THE BOOK OF THE HOUR.

TURKEY IN REVOLUTION.

By CHARLES RODEN BUXTON. With a Map and 33 Illustrations. 7s. 6d. net.

"Mr. Buxton had an opportunity of seeing and hearing things in the best quarter for information, and the result, whether or not it be history as time will finally write, is a very vivid, picturesque account of the transformation of Turkey."—Daily Chronicle.

OLIVE IN ITALY.

"Mr. Fisher Unwin has introduced many new writers of good fiction in his 'First Novel' series. We venture to think that Moray Dalton will take high rank in the list. 'Olive in Italy' is vivid and picturesque, and the writer has a rare sense of the inevitable nature of all real tragedy. The name 'Moray Dalton' on the cover of a second book should ensure an instant welcome."—Pall Mall Gazette.

OLIVE IN ITALY.

By MORAY DALTON. 6s. A New Volume in the "First Novel" Library.

THE WISE TRAVELLER USES BAEDEKER'S GUIDES.

NOW PUBLISHED BY Mr. T. FISHER UNWIN.

THE "CHATS" SERIES.—NEW VOLUME. CHATS ON ENGLISH EARTHENWARE.

By ARTHUR HAYDEN, Author of 'Chats on English China,' &c. With a Coloured Frontispiece and 80 Full-Page Plates. 5s. net.

A companion volume to 'Chats on English China.' This practical guide deals with the rise and progress of earthenware in England.

ALPHONSE COURLANDER'S NEW NOVEL.

HENRY IN SEARCH OF A WIFE.

6s.

T. FISHER UNWIN, 1, Adelphi Terrace, London.

SATURDAY, MAY 22, 1909.

CONTENTS.

	PAGE
SIR H. MAXWELL LYTE'S HISTORY OF DUNSTER ..	609
SAMUEL PEPPYS, ADMINISTRATOR, OBSERVER, GOSSIP ..	610
HENRY STUART, CARDINAL OF YORK	611
NEW NOVELS (Priscilla of the Good Intent; One Never Knows; Mr. Opp; Much Ado about Something; The Mystery of Frances Farrington; Peter Homunculus)	612
TRAVEL AND TOURING	612
OUR LIBRARY TABLE (The Commonwealth of Australia; The Naval Annual; England from an American Point of View; Envious Eliza; Children of the Gutter; The Love Tale of a Misanthrope; Baptist Historical Society; In and About Nottinghamshire; Side-Tracks and Bridle-Paths; Adventures in Contentment; Roman Life and Manners under the Early Empire; A History of Hoddesdon; Historische Neuenglische Grammatik; Trois Monologues)	614-617
GEORGE MEREDITH; 'NOTES FROM SOTHEBY'S'; 'PARADISE LOST'	617
LIST OF NEW BOOKS	618
LITERARY GOSSIP	619
SCIENCE—NATIVE LIFE IN EAST AFRICA; ANTHROPOLOGICAL NOTES; SOCIETIES; MEETINGS NEXT WEEK; GOSSIP	620-622
FINE ARTS—HIND'S AND AUSTIN'S HISTORIES OF ENGRAVING; THE ENGRAVED WORK OF TURNER; PICTURES BY JAN STEEN; PICTURES BY HOPPNER; THE WORK OF THE LATE ALEXANDER MANN; PICTURES BY MR. THEODORE ROUSSEL; THE SIR JOHN DAY SALE; GOSSIP; EXHIBITIONS	623-625
MUSIC—ARMIDE; RIGOLETTO; SAMSON ET DALILA; HERR REGER'S CONCERTS; PHILHARMONIC CONCERT; IMPRESSIONS OF STRAUSS'S 'ELECTRA' AT BERLIN; GOSSIP; PERFORMANCES NEXT WEEK	625-627
DRAMA—LIGHT O' LOVE; GOSSIP	627-628
INDEX TO ADVERTISERS	628

LITERATURE

A History of Dunster and of the Families of Mohun and Luttrell. By Sir H. C. Maxwell Lyte. Illustrated. 2 parts. (St. Catherine Press.)

IN 1880-81 Sir H. C. Maxwell Lyte contributed a series of papers to The Archaeological Journal on 'Dunster and its Lords,' which were afterwards reprinted for private circulation. Since that date a large amount of fresh material has been discovered, and the result of his further researches and much local observation is shown in the production of two handsome, well-illustrated volumes of upwards of 600 pages, which are fully entitled to bear the name of 'A History of Dunster.'

The successive owners of Dunster Castle have always been so dominant in this highly interesting and most picturesque town of West Somerset, that there is abundant justification for making the general history of the place centre in the Mohuns and Luttrells, although the fabrics of the Castle and the fine cruciform church receive the special treatment they deserve, and the general topography of the town is examined in detail. The manors of Avill, Stainton, and Alcombe, and the reputed manor of Foremarsh, are each awarded independent attention. The story also of the Benedictine priory of Dunster, a cell of Bath Abbey, is intertwined with that of the church, and set forth with much care and clearness.

Eight chapters, comprising almost the whole of the first volume, are devoted to the families of Mohun and Luttrell and their connexion with Dunster; whilst accounts of different branches of the same families, of no small genealogical value, are contained in considerable appendixes which form the conclusion of the second volume. William de Mohun, the progenitor of the noble house which held Dunster for nearly three and a half centuries, took his name from Moyon, near St. Lo in Normandy. He was a person of no small importance in the reign of the Conqueror, and to him were assigned a vast number of estates in the West of England from which the English owners had been ejected; he held fifty-six separate manors in Somerset, and thirteen in adjacent counties. The castle built by William de Mohun on the isolated Tor, which gave its name to Dunstor or Dunster, became the head of an important honour or barony, comprising forty knights' fees in the time of Henry I. The first William de Mohun was succeeded in direct descent by three successive Williams, as to all of whom the industry of the Deputy Keeper of the Records has gleaned various particulars. Reynold de Mohun inherited Dunster Castle in 1204; he played a prominent part during the reign of King John. His son of the same name accompanied Henry III. on his military expeditions into France and Wales in 1230-31; but he was of greater note in peace than in war. He was successively appointed by the Crown a Justice of the Common Pleas, Chief Justice of the forests south of the Trent, and Keeper of all the forests of the same great district, with a salary of a hundred marks. His grandson, John de Mohun, did homage to Henry III. in 1269; and two other Mohuns of the like name held Dunster, after intervening years of royal wardship during their minorities. In 1374 the last Sir John de Mohun of Dunster and Lady de Mohun, having no expectation of male issue, sold the reversion of the castle and manor of Dunster, together with the manors of Minehead and Kilton and the hundred of Carhampton, for 5,000 marks, to Lady Elizabeth Luttrell. In the following year Sir John died, and the senior male line of the Mohuns came to an end. Lady Joan de Mohun received the purchase money in 1376, but her hold on Dunster was long maintained, for her death did not occur until 1404. An elaborate monument, with her effigy, still remains in the crypt of the cathedral church of Canterbury.

Lady Elizabeth Luttrell did not live to obtain actual possession of Dunster, for she died in 1395; but Sir Hugh Luttrell, son of Sir Andrew and Lady Elizabeth, who was at that time one of the knights of the shire for Somerset, came into the property towards the close of 1404.

From the time when the Luttrells obtained the rule of Dunster Castle, which they have maintained in unbroken descent for over five centuries down to the present day, the original material for a history of Dunster and its lords is abundant, as there is a vast store of muniments from the beginning of the fifteenth century still preserved at the Castle, consisting of charters, conveyances, court rolls, estate accounts, and other minor documents. William Prynne, the celebrated controversialist and antiquary, did excellent work during the eight months of his imprisonment in Dunster Castle, in 1649-50, by arranging and cataloguing the Luttrell muniments in thirty-eight boxes, mainly according to locality—an arrangement which is still maintained.

Sir Hugh Luttrell saw little of his newly acquired and important Somerset property for several years, as he served the king for a considerable period in the French wars, was Lieutenant of Harfleur, had authority to treat with different Norman towns which were willing to capitulate to the English, and was afterwards appointed Seneschal of Normandy. He returned to England in 1422, and died in 1428. His wife died in 1435, and a monument to their memory, with alabaster effigies (now much mutilated), was erected in Dunster church. These effigies, until Sir H. C. Maxwell Lyte investigated the matter some years ago, had always been erroneously assigned to Sir John and Lady de Mohun. The extracts supplied from the household accounts and other expenses of Sir Hugh Luttrell and his son and successor Sir John Luttrell, in the first half of the fifteenth century, are of much value as illustrating the social and economic history of those times. It is of interest, for instance, to note that the great folk of the Castle were occasionally content to support local trade. Among the expenses of Lady Margaret Luttrell for the year ending September, 1431, occurs the following:—

"In five yards of fustyan bought in the market place of Dunsterre for a double gown of my lady 2s. 11d. And in a quarter of a yard of tarterys bought for the said gown, 10d. In two yards of linen cloth called Braban bought for James, my lady's son, 14d. And in a yard & a half of russet cloth bought of William Stone for the said James, 9d."

Sir Hugh Luttrell of Dunster was created a Knight of the Bath at the coronation of Elizabeth of York, wife of Henry VII., in November, 1487; he died in 1521, having filled various positions of credit and responsibility during the reigns of Henry VII. and Henry VIII. Sir John, his grandson, occupied important military commands during the petty warfare waged against the Scots in the days of Edward VI. In 1550 the Scots succeeded in a desperate attack on Broughty Craig, when the English were routed and the majority put to the sword. Sir John Luttrell was one of the few prisoners taken; though defeated, he was not considered disgraced, and on his release was assigned lands to the value of 100 marks a year "in consideration of the notable good service he hath doone unto the Kinges Majistie during all his warres." A panel picture which is preserved at Dunster Castle commemorates Sir John's rectitude and courage in adversity: it is of a singular and allegorical character, dated 1550, and bearing the monogram of the artist, Lucas d'Heere. A photographic reproduction of this picture forms the frontispiece to the first volume.

Thomas Luttrell, who was Sheriff of Somerset in 1631, took prominent action on the side of the Parliament at the very outbreak of the Civil War. Dunster Castle was successfully held against the Royalist troops, under the Marquis of Hertford, in August, 1642; but in the following year its owner, who shortly afterwards died, was persuaded to yield it to the King.

In May, 1645, Charles I. gave orders that the Prince of Wales was to take up his residence for a while at Dunster Castle "to encourage the new levies." It was not known at Court, however, that the plague which had driven the Prince from Bristol was raging just as hot in Dunster, as Clarendon states. The parish registers afford proof of this, for the burials of no fewer than eighty persons are entered in that very month. The death-rate for 1645 in the adjoining town of Minehead was about five times that of a normal year. The young prince, then aged fifteen, occupied a small room at the south-western end of the Gallery, but he left for Barnstaple in about a fortnight. After the later reversals of that year, Dunster Castle remained the only place that held out for the King in Somerset. After a prolonged siege, the Castle was eventually delivered up to the Parliamentary forces, under Col. Blake, in April, 1646. A garrison was maintained there for some four years, but in August, 1650, it was decided by the Council of State, on the score of expense, to withdraw the garrison to Taunton, and that "the Castle be soe farre slighted as that it may not be made suddainely teneable by an enemy." Thereupon the walls were demolished, and much damage done to the substantial parts of the extensive fabric. The Government became so well satisfied concerning George Luttrell's loyalty to the Commonwealth as to appoint him Sheriff of Somerset in 1652.

The later accounts of the Luttrells are naturally of less interest, but there are some extraordinary and entertaining descriptions of the wholesale bribery connected with the return of two members of Parliament for the little borough of Minehead in the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries.

There was in the eighteenth century a valuable collection of nearly a hundred mediæval documents in Dunster church, concerning the rights of the burgesses and the endowments of the local chantries. These documents have since been almost entirely purloined, the old ideas as to the sacredness attached to evidences stored in churches having disappeared to no small extent with the Reformation. The court rolls at the Castle afford, however, abundant interesting material relative to the borough and manor of Dunster; and there are in addition certain charters extant of the thirteenth and fourteenth centuries from the lords of Dunster, granting market and fair and other rights to the burgesses. A clause that must have been much appreciated in a charter c. 1250 provided that "if they shall find a rabbit hurtful to them, they shall kill it & bring the skin to the Castle, & so be quit thereof."

Local notices of the association of the town of Dunster with the cloth industry extend over fully five centuries. In 1467 an order was made by the borough court

"that nobody shall henceforth make linen cloth of flockys, & if it be proved by anyone, that then the cloth so made shall be forfeited to the lord."

At a court held in April, 1491, it was ordained

"that no fuller shall henceforth allow his mills to make cloth from the time of evensong on Saturday until after vespers on Sunday, under pain of 6s. 8d. wherof 40d. to the lord & 40d. to the church."

By other ordinances the keeping of greyhounds within the borough was forbidden to all except those who could spend 40s. of yearly income; no man was to shoot with his bow and arrows in the churchyard under pain of 40d.; and all playing at dice or cards, or allowing such play in houses, was prohibited under pain of 6s. 8d., except during twelve days at Christmas.

The detailed description of the fabric of the Castle, made clear by a variety of special plans, is admirable, and will serve to dispel a variety of legends still retailed to visitors—such as that of Charles I. playing on the bowling-green, whereas it was not until early in the eighteenth century that the site of the ancient Norman keep was levelled and converted into a bowling-green. The illustrations to this part of the work are delightful, especially that of the fine carved Great Staircase, of the time of Charles II., and those of the corami, or pictures on leather, that adorn the Gallery.

The story of Dunster church and priory is also set forth with much care, and several misapprehensions of Mr. Hancock, their previous historian, are corrected. The topographical account of the town and its surroundings will give great pleasure to those who know this fascinating district. The blunders and misapprehensions of guide-book makers and popular writers on English travel are here put right in an authoritative style. The truth is told as to the Luttrell Arms Hotel (formerly the Ship), which occupies the site of more than one mediæval historic house; as to the most picturesque market-house that England yet possesses; as to the High House, absurdly miscalled the Old Nunnery; as to the sixteenth-century timbered cottage belonging to the monks, which was known in old days as the "Stone-headed House," but which G. E. Street covered with tiles; and as to the highly interesting ancient house now known as Lower Marsh, near the railway station, and close to the old haven of Dunster, long since silted up.

There is, however, just one distinct disappointment in the work. Sir H. C. Maxwell Lyte ought certainly to have given a picture and adequate description of the thirteenth-century pigeon-house of the priory. It is among the most valuable examples of these now left in England.

Samuel Pepys, Administrator, Observer, Gossip. By E. Hallam Moorhouse. (Chapman & Hall.)

THE title of this book is good, in that it shows the healthy growth of public opinion in respect of the realization of the fundamental earnestness of Samuel Pepys's life. Not so very long ago the word "gossip" would have come first, and "administrator" last. The point requires consideration, because the writer of the Diary, as one who was talking to himself alone, opened his heart without the least reserve, and hence his readers are apt, while revelling in the delight of his pages, to treat the giver of the pleasure with some contempt.

Miss Moorhouse's book may be treated under the three sides of Pepys she has enumerated in the title of her book. Thus we consider him first as an "Administrator." Pepys had little official experience before he was so fortunate as to obtain the Clerkship of the Acts in 1660 through the influence of his kinsman Lord Sandwich, and he was totally ignorant of naval affairs. He did not long remain ignorant, but set to work to learn his business at once. So apt a scholar was he that seven years after he entered the office, when the Commissioners of the Navy were called to the bar of the House of Commons to answer for alleged neglect of their duties, he was the spokesman of the Board. He was, too, so skilful in his defence that, in face of much discontent, he managed to make out his case. He was extremely proud of the praises he received on all sides respecting the merits of his great speech. Unfortunately, there is no record of this speech in the Journals of the House of Commons, and Pepys's name is not even mentioned in the note that reports the appearance of the Commissioners at the bar of the House.

Although Pepys was successful in defending the office, he was by no means satisfied with the work of his colleagues, and in the following year induced the Duke of York to call them all to account. He supplied the Duke with the materials of complaint which came back to the office as 'An Inquisition by H.R.H. the Duke of York, when Lord High Admiral of England, into the Management of the Navy,' 1668. This official inquiry did much good, but his colleagues were naturally very suspicious of Pepys. We mention this, although it is well known to readers of the Diary, because it shows how thoroughly he had mastered not only his own duties, but also those of all his colleagues.

Only four years after the closing of the Diary Pepys was appointed Secretary of the Admiralty. At this time he was without a rival in knowledge and administrative capabilities, and probably he took into his own hands some of the more important work of the Navy Office and transferred it to the Admiralty. As he was succeeded by his clerk Thomas Hayter and his brother John Pepys, who held the office of Clerk of the Acts jointly, it was the easier to do this. In 1679 he went out of office for five years, coming in again in 1684, when the Secretaryship of the Admiralty was reconstituted by letters patent, and Pepys was created "first Secretary therein." He continued in this office till early in 1689, when William III. had no further need of his services.

We do not know very much of Pepys's movements during his five years of inaction, except that he was not forgotten by Charles II.; but we do know that his successors were not equal to the task set them, and that the condition of affairs, when he returned to office was most alarming. Miss Moorhouse has an excellent chapter on the 'Naval Reformation,' largely founded on Pepys's well-reasoned statement of his case which he published in his retirement, and entitled 'Memoirs of the Navy.' This little book has lately been republished by Dr. J. R. Tanner, whose invaluable Catalogue of the Naval Manuscripts in the Pepysian Library at Cambridge, published by the Navy Records Society, has made it possible to tell the complete story of the reconstruction of the Navy in the latter half of the seventeenth century.

"Observer" is a correct description as far as it goes, but Pepys was something more than an observer. His observation led to action, and his record in his Diary of what he saw has helped historians to tell the story of the reign of Charles II. with a fullness to which they could not otherwise have attained. We may recall Macaulay's terrifying dream that the Diary had been proved to be a forgery, and his horror at the blanks in his 'History' if the information from a tainted source had to be expunged.

Although Miss Moorhouse calls Pepys an observer, she is inclined to condemn the methods which he adopted. She writes:—

"He confesses in the Diary that when with a divine he would talk Church matters, with a painter talk art, or with a soldier strategy, though knowing little of any of the subjects."

Is not this the fine art of obtaining knowledge by going direct to the fountain head? We should be inclined to substitute "collector" for "observer," which would include that and much more. Pepys naturally followed the fashion of his age, but he was in some ways in advance of it, and, guided by an artistic sense, collected books, MSS., prints, and other works of art with a taste which time has justified.

"Gossip" he was in his Diary, written to assist his own memory; but the gossip he recorded was obtained by a ceaseless activity and interest in the ordinary affairs of life. All good writers of reminiscences may be called gossips in writing, but they are not often gossips in daily life, coming far behind the all-embracing vitality of Pepys.

In the chapter entitled 'The Man of Letters' Pepys's apparently foolish estimation of some of Shakespeare's plays is referred to, and it is difficult to make any valid excuse for his want of appreciation of these masterpieces. We must, however, remember that scarcely any of these plays were acted without violent changes from the originals, and the man who saw the travesty of 'The Tempest' by Davenant and Dryden must be forgiven for missing the "matured philosophy" among the rubbish foisted into these perversions.

Although we have expressed doubt respecting Miss Moorhouse's estimation of some of Pepys's characteristics, we can congratulate her on having produced an excellent picture of the complete man as exhibited not only in the Diary, but also in his life's work.

Henry Stuart, Cardinal of York, and his Times. By Alice Shield. (Longmans & Co.)

THIS volume comes as a welcome sequel to 'The King over the Water,' of which Miss Shield was joint-author with Mr. Andrew Lang. She is responsible for the whole of the text of this new volume, Mr. Lang supplying merely five pages of introduction. Those who have read the earlier volume will know what to expect here—a masterly study in what may be described as "desultory" history in the best sense. There is nothing desultory in the method, and there is abundant evidence of the keenest research; but the result is desultory in its preoccupation with the detail of what was at the same time a romantic and a quiet life.

The life-story of this last of the Stuarts, the son of the "Old Pretender," and brother of the "Young Pretender," or, as Jacobites preferred to call them, James III. and Charles III., has a special charm in the whimsical element which finally combined in his person the "legitimate" king of England and a Roman cardinal. There is perhaps some lack of realization in the author's presentation of his character, but an inevitable impression is conveyed of a sweet and equable disposition, with a strong strain of common sense which was lacking in his brother, and to some extent in his father. One feels that the writer has more sympathy with and understanding of the more romantic and ambitious James or Charles, and that the former, whose character she did much to rehabilitate in her earlier volume, is her ideal hero.

To a great extent, indeed, this new biography resolves itself into a history of the Stuart family in the later years of its exile. In the earlier part of the volume, at least, the elder brother is given as much prominence as the alleged hero. The vivid picture of the life and environment of "James III." and his family in their exile at Rome was necessary to an understanding of the childhood of Henry. One sees them the familiars of Popes and cardinals, living in palaces lent by the former, treated with special deference even by English tourists, and spied upon by English spies. But there is a certain want of proportion in the detailed accounts of Jacobite plots in England in the days when Jacobitism was still a force to be reckoned with—so much so that there was hope of the defection of so sane a character as Walpole in the days when he lay under a cloud. The story of Charles's expedition of 1745, with its wonderful success and heartbreaking failure, forms fascinating reading, but should surely have been treated more allusively in view of the very minor, and, as Charles himself unjustly thought, unworthy part played by the younger brother. We make this criticism with the more conviction, because there is so little attempt in the book at history in the broader sense. The charm of the volume lies in its abundant and intimate detail, and for the most part happy characterization—in the graphic story of the hopes of the Stuart cause and their gradual flickering out, full of the pathos and romance of history. One seems to breathe the very atmosphere of Rome in the eighteenth century, with its tolerant and genial Popes like Benedict XIV.; its magnificence, which the Stuarts shared in spite of their poverty; its cosmopolitanism, perennial, but taking the stamp of the period. Many will be interested in the glimpses of the women who cast in their lot with the Stuarts. Clementina Sobieski, the wife of James, fretful and difficult to live with, but reputed as "sainted" after her death; Miss Walkinshaw, the mistress of Charles; and her charming and virtuous daughter, the "Duchess of Albany," who comforted his last years when he was deserted by his lawful wife, who had become the mistress of the poet Alfieri. The anticlimax to the hopefulness of the beginning of the book is reached towards the end, when this "Queen" of Charles III. visits England after his death and is presented at Court as Princess of Stolberg.

The Duchess of Albany died in 1789. Eight years later The Gentleman's Magazine, copied by all the newspapers of the day, reported the death of the "Dowager" Duchess of Albany at the impossibly advanced age of seventy-one years. The absurdity of the statement was pointed out by a correspondent in the same magazine a month later; but the possibility of such inaccuracy and vagueness shows how the Stuarts were fast falling into oblivion.

The shrewd, scholarly character of this volume comes amply into evidence in other corrections, such as of that curious slip by which Horace Walpole in June, 1782, wrote that the "Cardinal of York" made the speech on the King's birthday at the head of the Sacred College—a statement explained by the fact that the writer,

"immensely interested at the time in Sir Horace Mann's gossip from Italy about the Cardinal of York, had, of course, in a fit of mental aberration, written the title of the Stuart Prince for that of the Protestant Archbishop of York, and the Sacred College for the Bench of Bishops.

Concerning the Duchess of Albany's death we note a slight slip when the writer speaks of the Cardinal staying at the "monastery" of St. Dominic at Bologna. It would have been more correct to describe a Dominican convent as a "priory."

NEW NOVELS.

Priscilla of the Good Intent. By Halliwell Sutcliffe. (Smith, Elder & Co.)

THIS "romance of the grey fells" attracts us by its strong human interest and pleasant rural atmosphere. The girl named in the title is a farmer's daughter, who has two suitors—one a blacksmith too dog-like in his devotion for success, the other a farmer. The weakness of the story lies in the unconvincing transformation of the second suitor (an idle, faithless man, whose transitory good feelings do harm to women by making him attractive) into a model of courageous manliness. His half-brother, an inspired fool, appears to have been introduced into the story with tragic intention, despite the humorous tricks of speech and thought which ingratiate him with the reader; nothing, however, comes of the fool's hatred of his relative, who, in the end, is affianced to the girl whom the former idolizes. The best thing in the book is the sombre and touching episode which grows out of a "fey" girl's gala-day.

One Never Knows. By F. C. Philips. (Eveleigh Nash.)

CONJUGAL infidelity and the sordid side of theatrical life loom large in Mr. Philips's story. A duke's younger son, a selfish and invertebrate spendthrift, in a moment of better impulse marries a "star" of burlesque—whose breeding is distinctly above her surroundings—to the scandal of the ducal family and the pardonable chagrin of a noble and scheming cousin to whom he was already betrothed. The pair are banished to the Cape, where the wife is presently compelled, through the dissipations of her husband, to return to the stage as "principal boy" in a pantomime; while the salary thus earned is squandered by him upon a mistress. The characterization throughout savours much of melodrama; but in his sketch of the jilted cousin whose machinations are inadvertently responsible for the "happy ending" the author has produced a clever and convincing study of feminine malevolence.

Mr. Opp. By Alice H. Rice. (Hodder & Stoughton.)

IN her latest hero, Mr. Opp, the author adds one more to her gallery of portraits, half comic, half pathetic, which are all drawn with an essentially American humour. This blatant, self-confident young man, who is, however, possessed of a tender heart, abandoning all his ambitious projects, returns to his native town to shoulder the burden of a half-witted sister. Undaunted by limitations, he becomes the proprietor and editor of The Opp Eagle, and embarks upon magnificent schemes for the benefit of the town, and also upon a love-affair of his own. He is foiled in all these enterprises as much by his innate honesty as by misdirected energy, and we leave Mr. Opp, a tragic and lovable figure, cutting out doll's clothes to amuse the afflicted girl of twenty-six. The story is told with the sympathy and picturesqueness of touch that we have learnt to expect from the author.

Much Ado about Something. By C. E. Lawrence. (John Murray.)

MR. LAWRENCE'S book is a pretty dream in which London is redeemed for fairyland. It opens in the Violet Valley where Oberon and Titania have their court, and whence a fairy, June by name, and a gnome, Bim, escape to undertake the conquest of the great city that is not under Oberon's rule. June and Bim see terrible sights in the metropolis, and set about improving things, which is easily accomplished, as it only needs a touch of June's crown, or the drift of her fingers over people's heads. However, it is interesting to watch the conversion in progress, even if we cannot believe in the fairies so thoroughly as 'Peter Pan' audiences. Of course, Mr. Lawrence has an underlying serious purpose, which some people like sugar-coated.

The Mystery of Frances Farrington. By Elizabeth Banks. (Hutchinson & Co.)

MISS BANKS contrives in this entertaining novel to make an unfamiliar use of the familiar device of a dual personality. Margaret Allison, having fascinated New York with her humorous stories, yearns to captivate it with more serious works, but, a slave to her own popularity, can find no market for them. She succeeds, under the name of Frances Farrington, in winning more fame than she has acquired in her own. She decides eventually to bring the existence of her powerful rival to an end, and the main situation of the book—to which all the incidents are skilfully made to lead—is her protracted trial on a charge of murdering her alter ego. The trial scene is a clever and effective piece of work, though Miss Banks is scarcely successful in her desire to prove that all circumstantial evidence is untrustworthy. It is, in spite of certain faults of construction and style, an ingenious and vigorously written story.

Peter Homunculus. By Gilbert Cannan. (Heinemann.)

MR. CANNAN'S hero is introduced to us as a small boy applying for work at a bookshop in Shaftesbury Avenue. His employer at the bookshop, X. Cooper—an old man who dies early in the story, but whose influence haunts its pages—is a unique and remarkable creation, for whose sake alone the book is worth reading. The other characters do not suggest much reality. The upward career of the hero—a vainglorious, affected youth who never becomes a gentleman—is described with much elaboration of detail. We do not, however, understand why two women should have loved him: a schoolgirl who, as a lady, must eventually discard him; and a famous actress who in the end marries an older admirer. The book is an interesting effort, of which the first part is successful, but the conclusion feeble.

TRAVEL AND TOURING.

MRS. RODOLPH STAWELL'S Motor Tours in Yorkshire (Hodder & Stoughton) is a companion volume to her 'Motor Tours in Wales.' It is pleasantly written, beautifully illustrated by photographs, and gives much more antiquarian lore than the normal travel-book. Occasionally the spirit of the motorist gets the better of the writer's art or her sense of humour, and then the reader learns that "after leaving Clapham we cross a wide heath, with the throttle open"—a similar sentence, in a less forgivable connexion, disfigures p. 166; but, as a rule, Mrs. Stawell wisely leaves the engine in the background, and is content to enjoy one of the finest counties in England. She seems to have just missed a visit to Withens and Haworth and its austere windy moors, whereon, as Charlotte Brontë said, Imagination, if she "can find rest for the sole of her foot," "must be a solitude-loving raven—no gentle dove"; and the connexion between St. Robert's Cave at Knaresborough and Eugene Aram is not mentioned. We do not quite understand why the Premonstratensian canons are dubbed a "rather confusing order"; and it is little short of a libel on the fresh-faced lads and lasses and ancient mariners of Staithes to say that they are "as decorative as a peasant in the chorus of an operetta." The motor-car appears to have visited Whitby at fair-time, when cars of other calibre make their rare appearance. We have lived in Whitby at various times in various years, and can assure Mrs. Stawell that, as a rule, "the raucous cries of steam merry-go-rounds" do not disturb "the ghost of Cædmon," nor "grinning Aunt Sallies" desecrate the Abbey Cross. The moors between Whitby and Scarborough have inspired Mrs. Stawell to one of the prettiest bits of descriptive writing in her interesting book. Had she taken the moorland track from Gainsborough to Whitby, instead of making straight for the coast, she would have passed over higher and much wilder moorland.

Mr. C. G. Harper has added another pleasantly written volume to his long series of chatty books on English roads and scenery, The Somerset Coast (Chapman & Hall). Those who are content to abstain from looking closely or critically into his writings will find these pages, well illustrated by the author, full of interesting information. The sixty miles of coast that bound the southern side of the Bristol Channel are remarkably diversified; each section attracts an ever-increasing number of visitors, and the descriptions here supplied will add to their intelligent appreciation. Those, however, who are well acquainted with the north of Somerset will find a variety of minor points wherein inaccuracies or blunders can be detected, especially when the delightful district from Watchet to Glenthorne is reached. Thus at Selworthy the ancient tithe barn is certainly not "monastic," but rectorial; and the old church chest has no connexion with "Peter's Pence." "Hurlstone" Point is a modern guide-book misnomer for Hurstone or Hurdstone Point; and the eastern flank of Dunkery is not "Robinow," but is occasionally nowadays styled Robinhow, though this is a modern invention of a late rector of Luccombe, the true name being Luccombe Barrows.

As to Porlock and Porlock Weir, Mr. Harper's visits must have been very hasty or inobservant. The account of the parish church omits or slurs over important points, such as the fragment of a pre-Norman cross, and the little sacristy or small chapel to the east of the chancel. Nor is there anything as to the remnants of the mediæval chapel of Porlock Weir, now unhappily incorporated with a modern villa. As to Porlock Weir itself, Mr. Harper descants upon the unattractiveness of the Anchor Hotel, "obviously built about 1885." Two large wings have been added to the Anchor during recent years, but the central part and chief entrance of the inn are at least a century older than Mr. Harper's conjectural date, whilst other portions of the back of the building are earlier still. There is documentary evidence of a hostelry termed the Anchor even in Elizabethan days. All those who know and love this charming corner of Porlock Bay will resent Mr. Harper's remarks on the fishing folk and boatmen of the Weir. He describes the seafaring men of this little ancient port as sitting listlessly upon a bench all day long with their backs against a wall: "Vacuity of mind is set upon their countenances, and expresses itself in their very attitudes, hands dropping listlessly on their knees, heads sunk," &c., in a variety of contemptuous phraseology. The fisher-folk of Porlock Weir are a singularly well-informed and civil set of men, and they are full of lore for those who understand them.

Nor is Mr. Harper at all happy in his long passages descriptive of the steep retired combe of Culbone, where the little church lies hidden. Noteworthy features of the building are ignored, such as the remarkable Saxon work on the north side of the chancel, and the good oak traceried window-frame on the north side of the nave. We find details as to the life of the Irish Columban, to whom Mr. Harper, following other careless writers, supposes this church to have been dedicated.

The Lost Land of King Arthur. By J. Cuming Walters. Illustrated. (Chapman & Hall.)—This is a charming little book which every student of the Arthur story and every visitor to Cornwall will wish to have, if only for its pictures of Tintagel and its neighbourhood, and of Glastonbury. The author seems to have read most of what has been written about King Arthur except the stories themselves, for which he appears to rely on Malory's abridgment. The lightness of style in which the book is written covers a good deal of learning and sound sense, mingled, it is true, with some irresponsible obiter dicta. We commend it, with these reservations, to all classes of readers, from those who know the subject to those whose idea of Arthur is derived from newspaper references to Tennyson.

If Mr. J. H. Yoxall, M.P., the author of The Wander Years (Smith & Elder), would chasten his style and refine his exuberancy, he might become an agreeable essayist. He possesses certain good qualities of which there is painfully little evidence in the light literature produced in England to-day. He has knowledge of the subjects he treats—a rare phenomenon; he can reproduce with sympathetic touch the atmosphere of the scenes which he describes, notably when he goes to France; he has that artistic perception which is more often found in French writing than in English—he often admires the right thing, and knows why he ought to admire it. Yet side by side with admirable passages—such as some of his descriptions of Savoy—we find page after page of journalism of a style which sometimes descends to vulgarity and bad taste. In the Preface he defends his use of "exotic" words, by which he means his practice of dropping into French. With this, when not carried to excess, we do not find fault, as his French is good (though "Rousseaux" is an impossible plural form) and usually apt. His faults of taste are generally expressed in the crudest vernacular of his native land. Neither "bosh" nor "cad" (applied to Jean Jacques) is a literary term, though as free from the exotic taint as "an eighteenth-century Uriah," or "roarophone records of the bookstall," or "Madame Gamp in her garden of Eden." Mr. Yoxall's weakness is to try to imitate certain great authors whose style can be parodied, but not copied. The influence of Thackeray is responsible for many of his worst passages; but unhappy reminiscences of Carlyle, Lamb, and Borrow are likewise scattered up and down his pages. The worst essay in the collection, 'To Mr. and Mrs. Bull,' contains echoes not only of those immortal writers, but also of the author of "Mrs. Caudle."

Mr. Yoxall is more accurate in his facts than descriptive writers usually are; but he has got wrong about his dates in a passage suggested by a visit to Brive, where Wellington rested on his way north in 1814. He speaks of the "administering work which Wellington did down there" (the South-West of France) "between the last battle of the Peninsular War and the abdication at Fontainebleau"; but those two events took place within the same twenty-four hours. The battle of Toulouse was fought needlessly on April 10th, a week after the fall of the Empire, and Napoleon abdicated on the 11th at Fontainebleau. We may note that Wellington, in an imaginary soliloquy at Brive, is made to talk somewhat in the character attributed by Mr. Yoxall to Jean Jacques Rousseau. In the case of a writer whose excuse for his exuberancy is that his poetic nature is irrepressible ("the pen grows lyrical," he exclaims), it is sad to note that the most prosaic method of surveying rural France has been adopted. The modest traveller who acquired his sympathetic love for French waysides and country towns by sauntering on foot through the land, has joined the mob of cosmopolitan plutocrats who make the high roads odious for the simple wayfarer, with what he calls "their honking and tootling motor-cars." In his best "lyrical" style he confesses his shame: "The automobile snorts... the chafing monster, great-eyed, high coloured, a Japanese dragon of a beast, is let go; we are jockeys to a fiend, we ride on dynamite"; and from Orleans, "after a forty minutes' run to Mers, we enter the stately Touraine." This means that he rushed along the "sinuous Loire bank" at the rate of a kilometre a minute. No wonder he had no time to learn how to spell the name of the little riverside town of Mer. On another page Mr. Yoxall describes with austere realism (not in his "lyrical" style) the grim surroundings of his youth in an English manufacturing town. This powerful picture is almost too intimate to be delivered to the public; but reading it one can understand how such a bringing-up helped him to appreciate the joyous contrast of provincial life in France. Had he begun his experiences by rushing through the pleasant land in the aggressive opulence of a motor-car, he could never have written the best pages in this volume.

In the Land of Mosques and Minarets. By Francis Miltoun. Illustrations by Blanche

McManus. (Pitman & Sons.)—Mr. Miltoun, having published "Rambles" in various parts of France, has now "rambled" in Algeria and Tunisia, and carried so much French with him that he appears to have a great dislike to the English language. Natives become indigènes, a track is a piste, a quay must be spelt quai, and every obstacle is thrown in the way of cheerful perusal by those ignorant colis vivants expédiés par Cook, who apparently "throng" Algeria, although it is asserted with equal confidence that "in Algeria one doesn't find trippers." It seems that the only books worthy the name treating of the French possessions and protectorate in North Africa are written in French. When, however, these "strange lands" have been "limned by Anglo-Saxon writers," these barbarians "have mostly praised them in an ignorant, sentimental fashion, or reviled them because they had left their own damp sheets and stogy [sic] food behind." Therefore when we are "confidently offered" this book "as the result of much absorption of first-hand experiences and observations, coupled with authenticated facts of history and romance," we are bound to be thankful, even while we are curious about the authentication of the "facts of romance," and are disturbed by the decidedly "Anglo-Saxon" name of the author and the Transatlantic flavour of his style—a term which the "narrowness of our mother-tongue," as Swift says, compels us to use for lack of a word more expressive of Mr. Miltoun's variety of English. The book is mainly composed of jerky paragraphs, and the sequence of ideas is difficult to trace. The volume is not detailed or orderly enough for a guide-book; and it is not strictly a book of travels, for there are few personal incidents or accounts of journeys. The author's passion for French leads him to make havoc of Latin. He says that Sallust wrote of "the Lybians and Gétules"; and speaks of "Fronton, the preceptor of Marcus Aurelius," and "the Emperor Macrin." Is it not going a little far to quote 'Kennst du das Land?' in French as by "the author of 'Mignon' "? Arabic, again, is not Mr. Miltoun's strong point. "La illah Allah, Mohammed Rassone Allah," if it means anything, signifies that Allah is not a god and Mohammed has something to do with a halter. "Abd-el-Kader-el-Djilali," "Menorah," "Okba ibn Maffi," "tashabud," "Iba Touloum," &c., may be misprints, but are scarcely reassuring to readers. That the successors of Mohammed were "the first four Kalifs—those of Bagdad, Cairo, Constantinople, and Fez," is one of those amazing "facts of history" which our author has neglected to "authenticate." "Omar's great mosque at Jerusalem" was built by 'Abd-El-Melik, and not "under the influence" of Omar, who probably erected a small wooden structure; nor was "Hmrou's" at Fustat "the first mosque of magnificent proportions," for it was doubtless considerably smaller than the present much-restored building.

The one redeeming feature of the book is in the illustrations, which are sometimes remarkably good, especially the figures and portraits; but some of the diagrams, with their ugly flourishes, are useless.

Cannes and its Surroundings. Described and illustrated by Amy M. Benecke. (Allen & Sons.)—Miss Benecke's pretty water-colour sketches of Cannes and its neighbourhood are mounted upon brown paper; these, mixed with some reproductions of photographs, and interspersed with bald guide-book notes concerning drives and tea-shops, make a nondescript volume, which will, however, serve as a pleasing reminder for those who enjoy the Riviera season. The pictures vary much in merit. We should have been grateful if Miss Bonecke had given us a portfolio of such sketches as that of Cannes from the Isola Bella road, and had omitted the text altogether.

In Viking Land. By W. S. Monroe. Illustrated. (Bell & Sons.)—Norway seems just now to be attracting much attention from the makers of books. Within eighteen months four volumes have appeared, describing not the incidents of travel or mountaineering, but the country and people, their arts and crafts, trade and commerce, literature and institutions. The work under notice is a painstaking compilation by an intelligent American, whose information is mainly derived from books. The "select annotated bibliography" in the Appendix shows that his authorities are recent publications in English, and that he has no knowledge of Norwegian. He supplies three chapters on Norwegian history, which are simply an abstract of Du Chaillu and of Prof. Boyesen's well-known work. Whether these were worth writing may be doubtful, but in the Preface the reader is requested to skip them if he objects to "history in tabloid form." We presume that the book, though published in London, is intended chiefly for our transatlantic cousins, for money values are invariably given in dollars and cents. There are also words and phrases which sound strange to English ears—as that Haakon VII. was "coronated at Trondhjem the 1st of January, 1906"—which, by the way, is incorrect, for the date was June 22nd. In the chapter on the posting system the statement that "two kinds of wagons are used, the carriage and the stolkje," will be startling to those who have used these vehicles, and is far from being exhaustive. Mr. Monroe does not relate his own experiences; but his theme is the country as a whole, with its inhabitants and industries. His own acquaintance with it has been confined to two holiday trips; and there are signs that many of the descriptions, both of scenery and people, are at second hand. In no Norwegian map are the splendid Jotunheim mountains included in the Dovre (often here spelt "Dover") fjeld; and the high plateau in Southern Norway is not called the Langfjeld, but the Hardanger Vidde. A little more travel would probably convince Mr. Monroe that the Nord Fjord is not "grander" than the Sogne, and that "wild" as the Nærødal and the Norangsdal undoubtedly are, there are other valleys frequently visited, as the Flaamdalen and the Vettigjæl (both in Sogn), which are wilder still. By a curious oversight the features of the Geiranger are partly transferred to Hellesylt, which is not on that fjord; and it is plain from the description that the female costumes of Sætersdal and Telemarken have been transposed. There are also errors which a little care might have prevented—e.g., in the same sentence the rainfall at Lærdalsøren is given as 50 inches and 16 inches, and the extent of the Jostedal snow-field is given in square miles on p. 5 as 580 and on p. 198 as 350—the former figure, though in excess, being more nearly correct. Narvik, the terminus of the Lapland railway, is not "near the North Cape," but almost three degrees south of it; and the new line from Bergen to Gulsvik is 235 miles in length, and not 100 as stated on p. 157.

It is only fair to add that the volume is eminently readable, and contains much information useful to the English traveller. Though inferior to Mr. Willson's 'Norway at Home' in its survey of Norse institutions and social life, it gives a better account than that book of the arts and the natural features of the country. We note a fair map and over fifty good photographs, while the index is admirably complete.

Wheel Magic, by J. W. Allen (John Lane), bears the alternative title 'Revolutions of an Impressionist,' and the author has set out to explain the joys which the man of cultivation can get out of the use of the cycle. He includes a capital ghost story and some measure of incident, but is chiefly concerned with esoteric thoughts and moods induced by the country and the open air. Having protested more than once against the common conclusion that the cyclist must be a Philistine, we congratulate Mr. Allen on his pleasant proof to the contrary in these pages. There is a touch of obvious affectation here and there, as was perhaps inevitable, but the style as a whole is good and attractive.

A Canyon Voyage. By Frederick S. Dellenbaugh. (Putnam's Sons.)—Mr. Dellenbaugh's narrative is somewhat belated. It is an account of the official survey of the Colorado River undertaken by Major Powell's party in the years 1871 and 1872. In that expedition Mr. Dellenbaugh was artist and assistant topographer; and his excuse for this book is that no full account of the exploration has ever before appeared. At the time it was undertaken certain communications were made to the press; and Major Powell, as leader, embodied the results of his labours in a Government pamphlet. Mr. Dellenbaugh has had the imprimatur of both Major Powell and other leading members of the expedition; so that his story may be regarded as officially authentic. The only pity is that it has come so long after the events recorded. These seem now like the faint ghosts of forgotten vicissitudes. To look on the maps supplied is to blot out a generation forthwith. The expedition started at Green River on May 22nd, 1871, and after various adventures descended the Colorado canyons as far as the Kanab. This occupied the better part of two years, as the party went into winter quarters at Kanab. In the second summer the Grand Canyon was successfully run. After that the river was abandoned, owing to the great danger attending the passage of the lower rapids. Some further months were spent in field surveys, and the expedition returned early in 1873 with its work accomplished. The hitherto unknown country of the Colorado had been mapped and registered. Of the value of this work it is not easy to speak at this time, when no mystery enshrouds the Colorado. But it was no light task that Major Powell undertook, and it was carried through with fortitude and discretion.

Mr. Dellenbaugh has not the advantage of a graphic style, nor is he an artist in writing. His narrative is plain, and often heavy; but it is necessarily interesting on account of its subject. He leaves us to make out our own list of the company engaged in the expedition, giving us some half-hearted assistance with names; but we never feel that we are really at home with the party as we should like to be. On the other hand, the photographs and drawings are frequently very effective and striking; witness Mr. Dellenbaugh's sketch of "running the Sockdologer" in the Grand Canyon. Many of the incidents en route are stirring enough to arrest even a schoolboy; and the whole achievement was a spirited and virile performance. We miss a modern map of the region.

The way in which We Two in West Africa, by Decima Moore and Major F. G. Guggisberg (Heinemann), came into existence is thus explained by the Major in his Preface:—

"My wife wanted to write an account of her travels—I wanted to write an account of mine. My wife was a new-comer and saw the novelty of things—I was a fairly old inhabitant.... My wife kept notes—I did not."

The result of this collaboration, which "may either be described as experience looking on things through new glasses, or as a fresh receptive mind regarding the coast with the eyes of experience," happily combines the freshness of first impressions with the insight acquired by long residence. Mrs. Guggisberg's chronicle of life at Accra and journeys to Tarkwa and Kumasi is decidedly amusing, and her descriptions are bright and graphic, whether the subject be an interview with a native chief, astronomical observations in the Bush, the Tarkwa gold-mines and their workers, or the difficulties of housekeeping in the tropics and the perennial servant-question. On the last point she is by no means pessimistic; in fact, the authors were fortunate in their native followers (like all who deserve to be so). The climate of Accra is so damp that, in Christiansborg Castle,

"it was quite a simple matter to wring the water out of the curtains in the windows.... It was positively heart-breaking for clothes. Leather had to be rubbed with saddle-soap or vaseline daily; if left for forty-eight hours, boots and shoes were covered with green mould and never afterwards lost the rank, pungent smell of the 'Coast.'"

Fortunately this drawback is not universal, and at Abetife the heat, if intense at mid-day, was at any rate dry. We had marked various entertaining passages for quotation, but the difficulty of giving the preference induces us to forbear. We only suggest, in conclusion, that by the "lion-ant" (p. 267) is probably meant the ant-lion (Myrmoleon, which is not an ant at all); and that the game referred to on p. 226 exists virtually all over Africa, being played in holes scooped in the ground where boards are unknown, and, whether introduced by the Arabs or not, is certainly not of European origin.

OUR LIBRARY TABLE.

THE HON. B. R. WISE, who, after practising in London as a barrister, has returned to New South Wales, publishes through Sir Isaac Pitman & Sons The Commonwealth of Australia, a volume which will be found useful by those interested in Commonwealth politics and problems of Australian defence. For the maps representing the Empire in 1800 and at the present time Mr. Wise is, perhaps, not responsible; but we may point out that the change involved in the colouring of all the Arctic regions lying between Hudson Bay and the North Pole does not represent any substantial growth of the Empire in the nineteenth century. If we are to colour the North Pole, to which Denmark might also put in a claim, we should have still better reason to tint the Antarctic continent as a result of Lieut. Shackleton's exploit, although the 10,000 ft. tableland is not likely to support a vigorous population. Mr. Wise was the author of the New South Wales plan of dealing with labour disputes, often named along with Mr. Reeves's New Zealand legislation as constituting pioneer work. He had pointed out in advance difficulties in recent Commonwealth legislation, as regards which his opinion has now been supported by the Courts. His account of Wages Boards is not prejudiced, as it might at first sight seem; and his position is not hostile to Wages Boards as proposed in this country, experimentally, for sweated trades. The Wages Boards to which he is opposed are those created in Australia for great organized trades—excluded from the proposals before our Parliament.

THE 1909 volume of The Naval Annual, published by Messrs. J. Griffin & Co., is again edited by Mr. T. A. Brassey, who has the usual contribution from the pen of his father, Lord Brassey, the former editor. The feature of the new volume is a severe condemnation of the waste of our money upon submarines, combined with the suggestion that it is not necessary to have a stronger force of destroyers than have our supposed future enemies. The wish to spend our resources mainly upon battleships is, we think, sounder than the attitude of the general public, who desire to spend it upon everything. Admiral W. H. Henderson contributes a chapter on 'Dockyard Administration,' as valuable as would be expected by all who know the part played by that Superintendent and his brother—also an Admiral-Superintendent—in the reorganization of repairs and attainment of financial economy.

Many will turn to this authoritative volume for information upon a topic just now engaging the mind of members of the House of Commons and "naval experts" in newspapers. Some seem to think that we possess no docks capable of taking Dreadnoughts, and that the Germans have "nine" or "twelve." Whether the delay of Rosyth by the late Government and the present Government was wise or foolish, it is impossible to maintain that docks in the Baltic should be counted for Germany, and docks in the Thames and the Channel not counted for us. Moreover, if German docks promised for the future are to be counted for Germany, similar docks must be counted for ourselves. It is clear from the known facts that both the British and the German Admiralty agree in being less excited on the subject than our public. The attack that is made upon our Board of Admiralty might clearly be made in Germany on their Naval administration. How far the three docks at Wilhelmshaven, which are counted as existing, or as nearing completion, by the less wild of critics, have proceeded in their early life is not shown in the pages of 'The Naval Annual,' which avowedly preserves reticence upon the point, while suggesting that the writer knows the facts. There is no obvious reason why we should not be told how such matters stand in Germany, but it is easy to imagine that the writer in 'The Naval Annual' has access to confidential information existing in this country, and is unable to transgress a rule the effect of which, however, in the present case is unfortunate. To judge from engineering papers generally well-informed, the progress made in the German docks on the North Sea is slower than most men believe. The geographical inferiority of situation, as regards the North Sea, of our Channel docks is not considerable, and our Admiralty evidently still count on being able to use in war such docks as those at Portsmouth and even Devonport. The Thames is at least equal in position to Rosyth, and as bases both are needed. If our Admiralty are able to keep floating explosives out of the run of the Channel tide, dockyards are not needed on the East coast. All turns on "mines"—if, indeed, that word describes a light floating article of which ten thousand can be hidden in a lugger.

AMERICAN books on England are published here with increasing frequency; and many are the opportunities thus given us of discovering what we look like from outside. In England and the English from an American Point of View (Duckworth & Co.) Mr. Price Collier presents us with a picture of ourselves in part flattering, and in part, perhaps, too accurate to please. In his chapter on Society he reminds us of a well-known member of the House of Lords who, when in the Commons, rebuked a brother Liberal for assuming that Queen Victoria, the acknowledged head of Society, was "in" that body: "I beg your pardon, the Queen was never in Society." The author's proof that Brummell was in Society, coupled with an explanation as to what that hero was, leads to a generalization in which there is much truth. "The Frenchman, the American, and the German" are left regarding the Briton "with a bewildering sense that he is either mad or blind." Yet it is difficult to pronounce Mr. Collier wrong at any point. He notes the admiration of the English for Americans like Franklin, Bayard, Lowell, and Mr. Choate, and he explains that "there are Dukes and Dukes . . . Earls and Earls . . . no more all alike, or all of the same social position, or importance, than are the same number of butchers or bakers." The contrast drawn between the English and the French is open to individual exceptions. M. Delcassé, for example, would have to be placed upon the English side of the line in the author's contrast between the statesmen of the two countries. Mr. Collier is a good observer, and able to describe pleasantly the things he sees. His House of Commons may attract:—

"One wonders, as one sits and listens to this hodge-podge of questions and answers about everything under this British sun that never sets, how anything is ever done."

Mr. Haldane is picked out:—

"No wonder there is conciliation, even to the point of flabbiness . . . The Minister of War, with a rotund person and the face of a cherub, answers attacks, not in the voice of Mars, but in the falsetto and piping tones of peace."

It is not the case, as the author would find if he read many diaries of the days of his hero Franklin, that "candlestick-makers," or to use our phrase "elderly soap-boilers," more than in the eighteenth century, "are eager to enter Parliament, to attend to other people's business." An examination of the personality of the peers created at the earlier time would show that there has been little change in this respect—except, indeed, in that continual increase of ability which Gladstone noted of the Parliaments in which he sat. Repeating a well-known observation that the English are the least popular of nations, Mr. Collier explains why the Englishman is "the most generally disliked of men. The German and the Irish hate him; the French ridicule and distrust him; the average American takes his awkwardness, or what Carlyle once called 'his pot-bellied equanimity,' for patronage, giving him little credit for what is often mere shyness, and is forever irritated by him, now that he is too big to be bothered by him as a bully. His power, his stability, his honesty, have won him allies . . . but he has no friends."

PRESSURE on our space often prevents our noticing many books to which we should otherwise like to refer. We may briefly draw attention to a few which provide entertaining holiday reading. Envious Eliza, by E. Maria Albanesi (Eveleigh Nash), furnishes an interesting character-sketch of a woman whose unfulfilled ambition is to write a novel which shall become a classic. An almost overpowering envy possesses her regarding a far less intellectual relative who accomplishes what she cannot herself attain. How she conquers her evil thoughts, and preserves her helpful kindness to those around her in spite of her disappointment, is well told.

Children of the Gutter, by Arthur Applin (Grant Richards), is mostly concerned with a woman who is raised by a kindly disposed man from the lowest ranks of life only to find that he has awakened the deepest affection in her, which unfortunately he is unable to reciprocate. The tale is written in a minor key, but should be read for its sympathetic revelation of the tragedies and hopes of the submerged.

The Love Tale of a Misanthrope, by Ethel M. Forbes (Elliot Stock), on the other hand, may be read without the slightest fear of its being too affecting to accord with leisurely comfort. In fact, it had better be finished during the holidays, lest doubts may arise as to whether the idyllic young lady who converts the misanthrope would really make a good wife.

THE second number of the Transactions of the Baptist Historical Society is as full of promise as the first. Of interest to bibliophiles is an article by Mr. John Charles Foster on an unrecorded first edition of Bunyan. It appears that he has acquired a copy of the first edition of 'The Barren Fig-Tree' which is hitherto unrecorded. "From the earliest time the date has been written down as that of 1682. The first known edition is that of 1688. My newly discovered copy bears the date of 1673, printed for Jonathan Robinson at the Golden Lion in St. Paul's Church-yard." A facsimile of the title-page is given. There are some letters to Dr. Rippon from New York, 1800-1, which give glimpses of the American book-trade of that period. The writer, a former member of Rippon's church, was selling the English edition of Rippon's hymn- and tune-book when he was informed by Mr. Ustick that he had "just printed two thousand of your selection of hymns," and he offered "to send me two or three dozen and charge me ten for every dozen I sold." "Thus you see the English labour, and the Americans enjoy the sweets of their labour with little trouble; it is so with every new Publication that is likely to sell that comes over." A letter of William Carey's from Calcutta to his son at Amboyna shows his interest in natural history; he requests him "to pay the minutest attention to productions of the islands and regularly to send me all you can. Fishes and large animals must be excepted, but these you must describe. You know how to send birds and insects. Send as many birds of every description alive as you possibly can, and also such quadrupeds, monkeys, &c.; and always send a new supply by every ship." Shells, corals, stones of every description, vegetable productions, bulbous roots, common plants and trees, "of these I hope you will not think any one too insignificant." These were sent by Carey to the Botanic Garden at Calcutta.

In and about Nottinghamshire. By Robert Mellors. (Nottingham, J. & H. Bell.)—Mr. Mellors, an alderman of the Nottingham County Council, who presents his photograph as a frontispiece to this book of 550 pages, tells us in his Preface that he has had "only a village-school education," and we take this as an excuse for various slips and shortcomings. A great deal of information has been laboriously brought together here, but not a little of it is untrustworthy, whilst much of the remainder is spoilt by the introduction of the author's own views and prejudices. He would probably have done better if he had subjected his volume to severe revision and compression before publishing it.

Mr. Lionel James has given us proof of his quality as a keen observer and a graphic narrator on previous occasions. We first made his acquaintance "on the heels of De Wet," and are glad to renew it. In Side-Tracks and Bridle-Paths (Blackwood & Sons) he has collected a number of stories and sketches illustrative of his experiences in many lands. A section is devoted to Persia, and this is peculiarly interesting at the present moment, when the places and people he mentions are in every daily paper. He has also three tales referring to India, one to Russia, two impressionistic sketches dealing with South Africa in wartime, one paper on the German manoeuvres, one on Turkey, and finally two pieces dealing with England. There is just one difficulty we have, which is to determine the fact from the fiction. How much, for example, of the vivid sketches in Tabriz is true? Is the tale of Rhubaba the courtesan, delicately reminiscent of Rahab in the troubled city of Jericho, to be taken as part of what has passed under Mr. James's eyes, or is it merely, let us say, typical? At any rate, it is excellent material, and simply and arrestingly handled. If Hassan Ali Khan is not a real man, he ought to be, and he is a credit to Mr. James's invention. Some of this book is undoubtedly journalism, but it is good journalism, and discloses a talent for fiction of no mean kind.

Adventures in Contentment. By David Grayson. (Melrose.)—This is an interesting document if it is what it purports to be, the true story of Mr. Grayson's life as a farmer. The author states that he was pursuing a strenuous career in business in New York with his eyes fixed on one thing, success, when one day he was pulled up suddenly, apparently by illness. This compelled him to abandon city life and take to the country. He rented a farm, and began to live on new lines. Then he bought the farm; and this book contains his experiences. There is very little incident in it. Mr. Grayson seems to be a contemplative, even rather a dreamy, farmer. But his title is amply justified by the contents of his pleasantly written book.

Mr. Grayson, living with his sister, within his own territory, began to realize at once the joy of keeping touch with the earth and nature. The legend of Antæus remains true for us to-day, and contact with the earth renews and creates strength of mind and spirit and body. This is surely Mr. Grayson's experience. He thoroughly relishes life, whether it be his mild encounters with Horace, or his exchanges with the Professor, or his adventure with a book-hawker or a millionaire. Making an axe-helve occupies a whole chapter and causes a philosophic disquisition. Once convinced of the rightness of his choice, Mr. Grayson is prepared to fight for it:—

"Bring out your social remedies! They will fail, they will fail, every one, until each man has his feet somewhere upon the soil!"

He argues with the cunning of Socrates with John Starkweather, the millionaire, but he does not convince him. Nevertheless his ramblings will please any reader with a heart to be touched by the simple elemental things. Nothing happens, but the world merely wags on, and David Grayson is content. He confesses in his final chapter that he has "perhaps too forcibly" emphasized the pleasant features of his life. He has experienced discouragement and loss and loneliness. But he is content. Contentment, after all, is not quite happiness; at least it is negative happiness, such as the animals that live on the soil feel. Mr. Grayson has aimed at joining that brotherhood, and has nearly succeeded in attaining their contentment. Not quite:—

"Sometimes I say to myself, 'I have grasped happiness! Here it is; I have it.' And yet it always seems at that moment of complete fulfilment as though my hand trembled, that I might not take it."

Roman Life and Manners under the Early Empire. By Ludwig Friedländer. Translated by Leonard A. Magnus. (Routledge & Sons.)—It is seldom that we have to complain of the last edition of a German work being chosen for translation into English; but in the present case it is distinctly a misfortune. For reasons unknown to us—possibly because the publisher thought that every scholar in Germany already possessed the book, and wished to appeal to a more hurried and less educated class—the seventh edition omits all the foot-notes (even references to authorities) and appendixes which are among the most instructive and valuable parts of the original book. Without these an intelligent reader is at a loss to know what weight of authority even Dr. Friedländer has for many curious facts which occur on almost every page. Thus when he tells us that the rooms in Sejanus's palace were gorgeous, lofty, and huge, we should like to know the evidence for this departure from Græco-Roman habits, which were certainly in the direction of small rooms, even in palaces. This kind of question arises so often that it tends to produce a sort of irritation at the suppression of the notes. Yet there can be no doubt that a translation of this masterpiece was long a desideratum for those many scholars who have not mastered German, though we think it would have been far more valuable before Prof. Dill gave us his two excellent studies on the Roman society of the first and the fourth centuries. His eloquent pages are far pleasanter reading than the translation of a work which, even in the original, boasts few graces of style. The English version is well done, though we protest against the term "little-Asia" as a rendering of "Kleinasien." Surely Asia Minor is well enough established to require no change in this matter, and the rest of Europe is with us in that denomination.

On the whole, we think the picture drawn from such sources as we have is likely to be darker than the reality. What are attacked by satirists and preachers are human vices: the honest and respectable people, who make no fuss, pass unnoticed. Legislation mentions and punishes crimes; it does not reward virtuous actions, save in very rare cases. Thus it comes to pass that if "bene qui latuit vixit" be true, it is also true—"bene qui vixit latuit." The age of the Antonines was, indeed, as Gibbon long since painted it, a time of great happiness for the civilized world. Even the existence of slavery, which is commonly called the plague spot of that society, was not at all so bad for human happiness as the existence of an unemployed and hopeless proletariat. So great a number of the imported slaves, especially from the East, attained importance in Italy that they founded families far more prolific than their masters, and, as O. Seeck has pointed out in his famous book, not a little of the dark type in the present Italy, and not a few of its characteristics, are derived from the "Syrian Orontes that flowed into the Tiber." Even the rising Christianity was very slow to preach any such doctrine as the wholesale manumission of slaves, or the doctrine that slavery in itself was immoral.

The chapter on the travels of tourists, and the means of passing from country to country, shows us that after the establishment of the Roman Empire, and for three or four centuries from that time, travelling was fully as easy as it was in the nineteenth century up to the discovery of steam as a motive power. The old sailing ships, indeed, had rowers on board, and means of prosecuting their voyage even in a calm. As for roads, vast tracts of Europe—Spain, Italy, Greece, Macedonia—not to speak of Hither Asia, and Africa from Algiers to the Red Sea, were supplied with roads and posts in a manner vastly superior to those of the present day. The collapse of the great Babylonian and Persian organization of Eastern travel, and of the Roman in the West, was one of the most tremendous factors in producing, or in intensifying, that shameful decadence of Græco-Roman civilization which is commonly known as the Dark Ages.

Such are the lessons taught us by this great study of Græco-Roman life. When we reflect how its splendour was unable to save it from decay, we cannot but ask whether our vaunted twentieth century is absolutely secure, and whether a new invasion of strange races from the East may not repeat the tragedy of another age. For who knows whether the Yellow races, which are now so diligently copying Western civilization, would care to maintain it, if once they had overpowered its boastful possessors? Who knows whether conquerors with a new point of view would not despise and destroy most of what we prize, and consign to the dust-heap most of our material treasures? Plato thought that even the Ideal State which he described in his 'Republic' would have one human imperfection common to all that we can create: it must have in it the seeds of old age and decay, and could not endure for ever. Is this theory less reasonable than that of the modern perfectionist, who believes in the inevitable progress of the race in spite of the vices and follies of mankind, with their constant recrudescence?

A History of Hoddesdon in the County of Hertfordshire. By J. A. Tregelles. (Hertford, S. Austin & Sons.)—This history of Hoddesdon has for its foundation a collection of MSS. and notes made by the late Alexander McKenzie, for many years churchwarden, and latterly vestry-clerk, of the parish. He was keenly interested in all matters bearing upon local records and customs, and hoped to produce a volume such as this. He died in 1901, and his collections were handed to Mr. Tregelles to prepare for publication. The delay in issuing the book has been caused by the bringing together of much new material from the Public Record Office, especially from the old Manor-Court Rolls and accounts at Hatfield House.

